OPEC members to reduce oil output

VIENNA (UPI) — OPEC oil ministers resolved a dispute with Saudi Arabia Monday and signed an oil production quota agreement aimed at boosting prices to $18 a barrel by slashing output and returning Iraq to the cartel's fold.

"We should see the prices moving up after March or April," OPEC President

Rilwanu Lukman said. "We want it to go up to $18 as soon as possible."

News of the signing of the accord pushed world oil prices sharply higher. West Texas Intermediate — the U.S. benchmark crude — shot up $1.42 to $15.38 a barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange. In London, the price of Britain's benchmark Northsea Brent crude rose by 40 cents to close at $14.55.

Analysts said U.S. consumers could expect to see little immediate increase in pump prices but they noted prices for both gasoline and home-heating oil could climb by 3 to 5 cents over the next three months if OPEC members cut their output to agreed-on levels.

The 13 members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries pledged unanimously to reduce their overall production to a ceiling of 18.5 million barrels a day from a current level of around 22.5 million barrels a day.

On the eighth and last day of the one of OPEC's most grueling ministerial meetings ever, powerful Saudi Arabia in a humiliating reversal bowed to pressure from a majority of cartel members and withdrew a last-minute proposal to introduce a $15-a-barrel price floor.

Fitzwater new press secretary

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Marlin Fitzwater, the rosy-cheeked Kansan who has been Ronald Reagan's spokesman for nearly two years, will be the new White House press secretary, President-elect George Bush announced Monday.

"He's the best," Bush told reporters in the White House briefing room, where the 46-year-old Fitzwater has presided since January 1987, when he left Bush's vice presidential staff to replace Larry Speakes as President Reagan's chief spokesman.

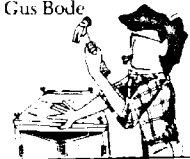

In the new administration, Fitzwater will officially become press secretary. Up to now, he has been a deputy to James Brady, who continued to hold the formal title although the severe head wound he suffered in the 1981 attempt on Reagan's life left him unable to run the White House media operation.

"I am very, very pleased that he's agreed to stay on to undertake this very, very important assignment," Bush said in revealing the decision to recover the services of Fitzwater, who was his spokesman from 1985 to 1987. "I think he's the best. ... This is continuity in the best sense."

"He represents the old and the new," the vice president added.

Business travelers pay their own way

University travel advances considered

By Kathleen DeBo
Staff Writer

Employees traveling on University business will have to use their own money for travel expenses until they get reimbursed unless the Legislative Audit Commission lets the University continue to give travel advances.

Most state employees spend their own money on travel expenses and then are paid back by the state. Travel advances are funds given ahead of time for employees to use when traveling on University business.

The state auditor general has said the University has no legislative authority to issue travel advances, but the University contends the authority is in the Charter of the Board of Trustees and its implied powers, Don Wilson, vice chancellor for financial affairs, said.

Wilson said, "We're trying not to penalize employees for traveling on University business."

Charles Hindersman, vice president for financial affairs, said, "University and state government offices operate differently but the auditor doesn't see that."

University employees travel all over the world whereas government employees travel primarily within the state, he said.

Wilson said, "To my knowledge, universities are the only state-funded activities that do provide for travel advances."

Travel advances tie up University money that might otherwise be invested and earning interest, Wilson said. The 1987 audit found $100,000 outstanding, he said.

A bill that would require individual employees to be paid for their travel expenses by reimbursement only was introduced to the general assembly last session but was held up in committee, Hindersman said.

Wilson said, "We're working to reach some kind of medium because right now, a measure

Art prof cleared of 8 criminal charges

By Richard Goldstein
Staff Writer

Though eight of 12 charges of criminal sex charges against University art professor Dan Wood were dropped in Jackson County Court, States' Attorney John R. Clemons said the dismissal will be a temporary setback for the state's case.

Wood, 45, who still teaches at the University, was left with four charges of criminal sexual assault and criminal sexual abuse. Wood was charged for crimes against a 12-year-old boy July 1.

Two weeks later other youths came forward alleging

Wood had sexually abused them.

Clemons said the charges were dismissed on technicalities, because Watt didn't agree with the wording of the indictments.

A trial date has not been set and Clemons said it wouldn't begin until the spring of 1989.

"We lose absolutely nothing," from Judge David Watt Jr.'s decision to grant defense attorney Richard White's motions, Clemons said. White asked Watt to dismiss charges because they alleged crimes committed beyond the three year statute of limitations.

Halloween cost, crime reduced from last year

By Richard Goldstein
Staff Writer

Halloween weekend cost the city $17,892, a 6 percent reduction from last year, according to a report by city staff.

The report, to be reviewed by the City Council today, attributes the cost reduction to a smaller police staff and less construction costs for the Grand Avenue Stage.

The report also includes a crime by crime breakdown of arrests. Most arrests, 120, were classified as underage alcohol violations. But the total of alleged criminal violations was 195 compared to 248 from 1987 and 251 from 1986.

However, Police Chief Ed Hogan's report concluded that the arrests were lower because several officers were off duty because of injuries.

He also commented that the crowd was "more dangerous" than in past years: "(Police) were struck by beer cans, and (there were) three incidents (where) officers (were) battered or kicked. Fortunately, no (police) injuries were considered to be serious. Officers encountered a rougher, drunker and more

Arab envoys to demand debate move to Geneva

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — Arab envoys met Monday and agreed they would demand that the General Assembly debate on Palestine be moved from U.N. headquarters to Geneva to allow PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat to address the world organization. Arafat, who was barred by the United States from addressing the U.N. General Assembly in New York, assailed the U.S. decision as "a clear violation of international law and the U.N. charter."

Iran rejects Carter plea for help on hostages

MANAMA, Bahrain (UPI) — A senior Iranian official, in a letter to former President Jimmy Carter released by the official Iranian news agency, rejected an alleged plea by Carter to help free American hostages in Lebanon. Iranian Parliament Speaker and acting military commander Ali Akbar Hasbemi Rafsanjani said in the letter U.S. military actions against Iran in the Persian Gulf were still too vivid, the Islamic Republic News Agency reported.

Judge extradites alleged Nazi war criminal

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (UPI) — An Argentine judge Monday ordered the extradition to West Germany of alleged Nazi war criminal Josef Schwammberger, who is accused of murdering and torturing hundreds of prisoners in occupied Poland. Two court officials who asked not to be identified said the legal order approving an extradition request from a West German court was signed by Judge Vicente Brelat of La Plata.

Carradine died Sunday at Fatebenefratelli Hospital in Milan, officials said. The cause of death was not announced. His son David was at his bedside.

Analysts see 3 to 5 cent gain in gas prices

United Press International
Pump prices are likely to rise 3 to 5 cents a gallon over the next few months if OPEC's production-cutting agreement holds, but U.S. motorists still are paying less for gasoline than they were before the 1986 oil price crash, analysts said Monday. The accord signed by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries' 13 member nations would cut the cartel's production to a ceiling of 18.5 million barrels.

Prime interest rates raised to 10.5 percent

NEW YORK (UPI) — The nation's major banks Monday raised their prime rates to 10.5 percent from 10 percent, the fifth increase in the key rate this year, and the latest sign that the cost of borrowing funds was moving upward. Chase Manhattan Bank led the move to the higher prime rate and was quickly followed by Citibank, the nation's largest bank.

SIU-C alumnus shares Hollywood experience

By Wayne Wallace
Staff Writer

From Carbondale bounce to Hollywood producer, SIU-C alumnus Robert K. Weiss has come a long way since his days as a radio and television major in the early '70s.

Weiss, producer of Dan Ackroyd films including "The Blues Brothers," "Doctor Detroit" and "Dragnet," returned to Carbondale during Thanksgiving break for a special sneak preview of his latest release, "The Naked Gun," a theatrical version of ABC's short-lived sitcom, "Police Squad."

Nearly 250 students and faculty jammed into the Varsity Theater to see the latest comedy from the creators of "Airplane!"

Before showing Paramount's new detective spoof, Weiss screened one of his lesser known productions, a three-minute short shot on campus in 1972.

This crude directoral exercise, which he made for a Super-8 cinema production class, starred Weiss as a comic bully who chases a young student around campus, trying to provoke a fight.

Later, in "The Naked Gun," Weiss popped up on screen again in a cameo appearance as the bearded hot dog vendor. He appears in the love scene where Leslie Nielson and Priscilla Presley squirt each other with mustard and ketchup. Guess who gets squirted next?

In a question and answer session following the film, Weiss explained that he was just visiting the set one day when the hot dog extra dropped out of the film, giving director David Zucker short notice.

Weiss volunteered to don the vendor costume and play the role himself, thereby saving his company the time and money it would have taken to locate an available actor.

Weiss offered several anecdotes about the film's production. He related how Dodger Stadium was dressed up to look like Anaheim Stadium, home of the California Angels, during the baseball sequence.

Other revelations included Libya's Omar Khadafy being portrayed by a cello player and how sock footage and matte paintings made 300 extras look like a stadium of 30,000 baseball fans.

About the film's title, Weiss joked, "It was the most lurid title we could think of that had nothing to do with the movie."

Weiss recalled how he and the "Airplane!" writers worked out potential gags for "The Naked Gun" on individual index cards before tightening them and incorporating them into a script.

Weiss and his writers went through nine different rough drafts of the script before submitting it to Paramount.

Even though Paramount pressured Weiss to rewrite expensive scenes for budget restrictions, the finished film cost $14.5 million, "including lunches," Weiss said.

The producer also elaborated on the difference between his job and the role of the director.

Weiss described himself as a strategist for the film's production, gathering financial and technical resources to produce the movie.

While the director is generally acknowledged as the main creative force behind a film, Weiss pointed out that he contributes a great amount of creative output in his job as producer.

"I'm not just a businessman," he said. "Writing checks and spending money is a bad way to earn your living."

National Engineering Exam pinpoints students' potential

Downstate high school students considering engineering careers can get a line on their potential through an aptitude test to be given this winter at the University.

The National Engineering Aptitude Search test, set for Saturday, Feb. 18, pinpoints student strengths and weaknesses in mathematics understanding, science reading and problem-solving skills.

The test is open to all high school students, and advisers emphasize the benefits of taking it as early as possible.

Freshmen and sophomores who discover weaknesses in their intellectual arsenals can then take remedial steps to strengthen them for college-level work.

Students must preregister to take the test. Information and registration forms are available from high school guidance counselors or by calling the SIU-C College of Engineering and Technology at 453-4321. The form and a non-refundable $15 fee must reach the American College Testing Program by Jan. 13.

Deficit weighs heavy on educational funds

NOW THAT George Bush has been elected our next president, there are many nagging questions for him to ponder. And he is taking his time in answering them. We don't blame Bush for talking. He faces some tough issues that require hard thinking, and then rethinking.

THE MOST difficult problem Bush faces is tackling the budget deficit. With his campaign promise of "no new taxes" hovering over him, Bush may find himself either eating his words and raising taxes, thereby having lied to the American public or face cutting government spending.

All indications suggest Bush will tighten the purse strings on government spending. At stake are such domestic programs as welfare, Medicare, social security, aid for the impoverished and homeless and, hitting closer to home, education.

STUDENTS WOULD do well to prepare for problems in educational funding now before the next fall semester begins. If the Bush administration cuts funds for education, students undoubtedly will face higher tuition costs next year, while the availability of loans, grants and scholarships decrease.

MOST FINANCIAL aid is distributed on a first-come, first-serve basis. ACT forms for the 1988-89 school year will be accepted starting Jan. 1. We suggest students submit their forms as early as possible.

Workers at Student Work and Financial Aid in Woody Hall are available to help students with financial aid questions. They are able to inform students about the requirements, eligibility and availability of various types of financial aid.

THE NATIONAL Commission on Student Financial Assistance has reported that billions of dollars in scholarships go unclaimed each year because students are not aware of their existence. The Commission also reported $15 billion in privately funded scholarships are available to most students.

Publications listing potential scholarships, fellowships, grants and loans are available to students. One of the most thorough publications is printed by the National Scholarship Research Service, Box 2516, San Rafael, Calif. 94912.

Obtaining financial aid for the next school year most likely will prove to be a mad scramble for dollars. Those who put off the task for later may find the financial aid pot empty come August.

Daily Egyptian fueling SIU party school image

I am aware that Southern Illinois University is classified as a "party school." I know that a lot of people would hope that the reputation would change but I just don't think that it will if the DE prints comments like the one on Friday, October 28.

Yeah, the one with the smiley face clock on page one. It says: "Sunday marks the end of Daylight Savings Time. You can get an extra hour of sleep or party an hour longer by setting your clock back an hour Saturday night or early Sunday morning." Yes, this is informative, but is the extra line about partying necessary?

I know that this paper does not only go to students and faculty here, but parents, other schools, etc. all over the country. If you guys keep on printing these comments, this school will never have a reputation but "party school."

Also, this reputation just makes people like me for two years, get a 3.4216 or higher and switch to University of Illinois. A lot of people didn't get into the school of their choice, U of I, Indiana, Wisconsin and are just going because it should be easy to get a high GPA and have fun partying while doing that.

So, why don't you guys either favor just a school and cut the comments or keep the reputation as a party school?—David Zoberman, freshman, pre-law.

Halloween street party a misnomer, an incipient riot is the correct term

THE TIME has come to put an end to the Carbondale Halloween Street Party. No, party is a misnomer. The event that occurred on a recent Saturday evening on South Illinois Avenue was not a party. It was an incipient riot. There is no possible way to construe that evening as anything other than an unmitigated disaster. It is bad for the reputation of the city, it is bad for the reputation of the University, and it has real potential for serious injury. Let us not wait for some tragic event before we do something about Halloween.

There have been attempts to manage Halloween. First efforts moved in the direction of lack of staff on the part of Carbondale and SIU-C police to handle 15-20,000 people. Enhancing safety and sanitation does not address what has changed from a party to a mean spirited, dangerous fiasco.

John
Guyon
SIU-C President

The Halloween celebration is bad for the reputation of the City, it is bad for the reputation of the University, and it has real potential for serious injury.

When you stand on South Illinois Avenue and see people passed out in the streets, see a young woman holding a bandage over her face as she is taken to the Emergency room, see full beer cans arched out over a densely populated street, see urination on public thoroughfares, and see individuals behaving with no respect for each other or public property, you know it is time for a change. Safety demands a change. Reputation demands a change. Common sense demands a change. Let us begin now to bring change about.

THE HALLOWEEN celebration in Carbondale is not sponsored by the City of Carbondale. It is not sponsored by the University. It is simply a happening, and, as such, it is out of control. Statistics show an improvement, but the danger remains. Public consumption of alcohol, underage drinking, throwing of objects, disorderly conduct, and assault are all common occurrences. It is time to bring the debauchery to a close or, at minimum, to bring it under control so we do not have to fear for the safety of the people involved.

The first step is to remove Halloween from the Carbondale Fair Days Ordinance, thus making public consumption of alcoholic beverages illegal. The enforcement of this regulation as it relates both to consumers and sellers and of that related to underage drinking will go a long way toward alleviating the problem.

Safety demands a change. Reputation demands a change. Common sense demands a change. Let us begin to bring change about.

SECONDLY, IT has been estimated that only 40 percent of the "revealers" are from Carbondale. Only 40 of the 190 arrests at the 1988 event were SIU-C students. But regardless of the precise figures, we must develop a widespread publicity campaign, letting people know that the party is over. Laws will be strictly enforced, and penalties will be stiff.

Finally, representatives from the City and the University on Halloween Core Committee should be instructed to focus on these steps, and move to end this affair as rapidly as possible.

Effects of clear-cutting still debated

Environmentalists, foresters clash over clear-cutting

By Loria Roberson
Staff Writer

Even after years of discussion, meetings and site studies, the practice of clear-cutting in our nation's forests is still in hot debate.

Some environmentalists attribute the pollution of streams and rivers and the disruption of migratory birds and forest interior species to clear-cutting, while some foresters say clear-cutting creates a wider diversity of wildlife and allows the full regeneration of oak and hickory trees.

"In this country, the No. 1 pollution of streams and rivers is soil erosion," Ann Phillippi, University assistant professor in zoology, said.

"Clear-cutting practices remove all the vegetation in an area, even trees that are not to be used in the sale. The roots are no longer there to hold the soil. This contributes to terrestrial erosion as well as water pollution."

Individual tree selection is under the silvicultural uneven-aged management system where trees of various sizes are individually selected for cutting. This creates small openings in the forest for the growth of shade-intolerant species like oak and hickory.

—Ann Phillippi

Clear-cutting is listed in a booklet published by the U.S. Department of Agriculture as one of three cutting practices under the even-aged management silvicultural system.

Tom Neal, assistant range at the Jonesboro Ranger District at the Shawnee National Forest, said clear-cutting involves the removal of timber in an area in one cut, and—depending on what kind of tree grows naturally in the area and what kind of tree is desired to be regenerated—the area is prepared either for natural or artificial regeneration.

In the Shawnee National Forest, the timber stands are prepared for the natural regeneration of oak and hickory.

"To put it simply, clear-cutting is cutting everything in the forest that is commercial," Neal said.

It is this characteristic of clear-cutting that Phillippi said leads to the disruption of migratory birds and forest interior species.

"The problem we conservation biologists are concerned about is not every individual clear-cut, but the alarmingly high total acreage that has been clear-cut," she said.

"Clear-cut isolates the forest into tiny blocks which we call 'forest fragmentation' and we now get a forest that is fragmented and no longer desirable and inhabitable by forest interior species which need big unfragmented forests. I'm not talking about rare animals, but common ones."

On the other side, Neal said, "People complain that 'You've run the wildlife out of there.' In fact, that is untrue on a broad base. Clear-cutting can temporarily displace the squirrels who need the larger trees for living, but you

Forest Ranger Tom Neal of the Jonesboro District of the Shawnee National Forest walks through a stand of timber that was cut 16 years ago. Neal says clear-cutting creates a larger diversity of wildlife, while Ann Phillippi, assistant professor of zoology at SIU-C, says it disrupts migratory birds and forest interior species.

create room for more species to live in. It creates a larger diversity of wildlife."

Neal said clear-cuts not only regenerate oaks to produce enough acorns for squirrels, but it benefits wildlife in other ways. He said during the first 10 years, clear cuts are thick with tree seedlings, saplings, grasses, briars, vines and tree tops and becomes a "virtual paradise" for many species.

Deer eat the young growth in the clear-cut, he said, which is more nutritious than vegetation in the surrounding mature forest, and some deer also use the cuts as an escape cover during the hunting season.

Also the increased growth of grasses, seeds and berries result in an increased rodent population that is part of the food chain for predators like the weasel, fox, snake, bobcat, hawk and owl, Neal said.

But Jim Bensman, representative of the Sierra Club's Great Lakes Chapter, said that a couple of months ago the U.S. Forest Service was asked to come up with any wildlife species that could not receive the same benefits from another type of cutting practice as they did from clear-cutting.

"They couldn't come up with a single species," Bensman said.

The purpose of clear-cutting in the Shawnee National Forest is for shade intolerance, Neal said. "You have to open areas up to full sunlight to get the full regeneration of the oak-hickory component."

"Clear-cutting can temporarily displace the squirrels who need the larger trees for living, but you create room for more species to live in."

—Tom Neal

Neal said the oak-hickory component is one stage in the natural succession of a forest and if left alone, it will reach the last stage which is the beech-maple component. The beech-maple component would be considered undesirable in the Shawnee National Forest because too many wildlife species are dependent on the oak-hickory component, he said.

The Forest Service has tried other cutting practices, Neal said.

"During the pre-mid 60s, the Forest Service was doing individual tree selection for cutting, but found they were not getting enough oak-hickory components."

Bensman agreed with Neal that the individual tree selection does not regenerate the oak and hickory, but said he does not feel clear-cutting is the best way either.

Bensman cited the results of a study conducted by Purdue University in December 1987 that "shot down the Forest Service."

The year-long study carried out in Indiana was titled "The regeneration response of clear-cutting on the U.S. Forest Service Hoosier National Forests."

"They went out and looked at 76 clear-cut sites and took scientific measurements to see what was coming back," Bensman said. "The Forest Service has always said you have to clear-cut to get oak and hickory, but out of the 76 sites, only four were turning into oak-hickory. The other 72 were going back to mixed hardwoods."

The study was funded by the Forest Service, Bensman said, and they accept the findings.

Bensman said he used the study to help win the appeal by local environmental groups to the 15-year management plan of the Shawnee National Forest. The Hoosier National Forest is similar in composition to the Shawnee National Forest, he said.

The groups won the appeal, which was signed in August to change the harvesting method used by the Forest Service from the even-aged clear-cutting to uneven-aged group selection. That allows younger trees to be left to grow for the next cut.

Neal said he feels the change in harvesting methods will hurt the Forest Service economically and that a lot of people feel group selection will not accomplish the oak-hickory regeneration.

But he added that he was not aware of any site projects with similar sites to see whether or not selective cuts let in enough sunlight.

Phillippi said she feels the Forest Service is not wrong on all of their practices concerning forest management, but she is in avid opposition to clear-cutting.

"All this discussion about clear-cutting in the Shawnee is absurd," she said. "They need to manage the forest in a way in which it is economically beneficial, which means selective harvesting where you only take the trees that you use."

"And it is absurd that you have to clear-cut to get the oak-hickory component. Oak-hickory existed before clear-cutting. It is a total distortion of what we know about forest succession to say that humans have to clear-cut to create oak-hickory forests. We've created a breed of foresters to think that without them, forests would be extinct."

"Foresters are educated to be foresters," she said. "Their curriculum is not as broad based as it needs to be. They need to study other things besides how to sell and harvest timber because their job is very important to maintaining good forests," she said.

"Because their education is in-bred, it is very difficult to get foresters to see the negative environmental and economic aspects of clear-cutting. They need more wildlife biologists and bird and mammal experts to make alternative points," she said.

Neal summed up the position of the Forest Service in a few sentences.

"It's a helluva job the Forest Service has in front of them. We're trying to do the most good for the most people. You can never make people 100 percent happy and everybody has to work together to make it all mesh together. We don't have all the answers."

Assertion healthy way to communicate

By Kim Hayes
Wellness Center

Assertiveness is behavior that allows people to communicate thoughts and feelings openly and honestly.

It can be used to express needs, to help communicate ideas and opinions, and to aid in the resolution of conflict. Healthy assertion is neither passive nor aggressive but lies somewhere in the middle.

BUT PEOPLE without assertiveness skills run the risk of being what author Mitch Messner describes as "a pleaser." A pleaser dooms himself to a life of trying to please others and never takes time for himself.

A PLEASER cannot say no because it might displease someone. Pleasers misdirect their energy being responsible for others and trying very hard to please but then feel victimized when others don't show their appreciation.

PLEASERS DO not feel free to express anger because it might offend someone. This results in pleasers suffering in silence until they finally blow up in anger, only to feel guilty afterwards—all in all, not a very satisfying existence.

While some non-assertive people are "pleasers," others become "demanders."

DEMANDERS DO not know how to balance their needs with the needs of others. Demanders confuse asking for something with demanding something. They use hostile and aggressive words or tone of voice in order to get their messages across.

DEMANDERS ARE generally unsuccessful in getting their needs met because they engender hostility or fear in others rather than cooperation.

Why do people fall into the trap of non-assertive behavior? One common reason is that people often fail to distinguish healthy assertive behavior from aggressive interactions by opening communication lines before people feel angry and out of control.

ANOTHER REASON people fail to be assertive involves sex-role socialization. Women in this culture are at increased risk of engaging in non-assertive behavior because the traditional feminine sex-role promotes care-taking and nurturance of others.

IF THIS is done to the "exclusion" of taking care of oneself, it can result in feeling overresponsible for others,

Healthy assertion provides a way for people to own and express their true feelings in a respectful way.

angry and resentful.

People sometimes slip into non-assertive behavior because they confuse assertiveness with selfishness.

Healthy assertion does not "take advantage" of others. Healthy assertion is honest communication. It provides a way for people to own and express their true feelings in a respectful way.

HEALTHY ASSERTION in a relationship indicates that, "I trust you enough to be honest with you and with myself," and so it feels very satisfying.

Sometimes people slip into non-assertive behavior because they lack communication skills. Learning effective assertion skills can help people communicate their needs and understand how other people feel.

ASSERTIVENESS TRAINING can help people achieve their most important goals by learning effective presentations, employing a sense of timing, prioritizing their needs, and developing a tactful communication style. Each of these skills will help set the stage for cooperation from others.

THERE ARE many books on assertive communication that can help people develop these skills. For more information see the following: "Mastering Assertiveness Skills" by Elaine Zaker or "Your Perfect Right" by Robert Alberti.

Council seeks mass transit funding from state

By Brad Bushue
Staff Writer

The Carbondale City Council will consider authorizing the city manager to request state funding for a mass transit feasibility study tonight.

Before the Illinois Department of Transportation can allocate a grant of $32,000, the approximate cost of a feasibility study conducted by a consultant firm, it must receive a formal request from the city manager for the funding under IDOT rules.

Task force seeks to make changes at Northwestern

EVANSTON (UPI) — A Northwestern University task force has recommended sweeping changes in the Big Ten school's setup, including switching from quarters to semesters.

The recommendations, prepared by the Task Force on the Undergraduate Experience, stemmed from interviews with more than 1,000 students and 254 faculty members and were under study Monday by university President Arnold Weber and Provost Robert Duncan.

History Professor Bill Heyck, who headed the task force, said it could take as long as 10 years to implement the changes.

Before IDOT can allocate a grant of $32,000 it must receive a formal request from the city manager.

Interim City Manager Jeff Dougherty said.

The council also will vote to "express the willingness to work with SIU in the event that IDOT's grant would not cover the entire cost of the study," Dougherty said.

The scope of questions the study will confront, which will be submitted after IDOT authorizes the study, could increase the price of the study, leaving the University and the city to pay the difference, he said.

The scope must include the needs of Carbondale citizens as well as those of the students to meet IDOT requirements for giving Technical Assistant Funding, the source of the grant.

President John C. Guyon, Undergraduate Student Government President Bill Hall and Graduate and Professional Student Council President Trudy Hale have expressed their support for council action in favor of IDOT funding.

Members of the USG mass transit committee will attend the meeting to urge the city to authorize the financial request and its willingness to help pay for any extra cost the study could have, Lisa Rivera, the committee's GPSC representative, said.

Rivera said the committee will "refuse to accept anything less (from the council) than direct participation and decision making."

In a letter to Dougherty, Guyon said the University is "extremely interested and willing to cooperate" with the city and the mass transit system project.

Illegal numbers games costing Illinois millions

CHICAGO (UPI) — The Illinois State Lottery is losing about $200 million a year to illegal lotteries, mostly in the Chicago and Gary, Ind., areas, officials said Monday.

Sharon Sharp, director of the Illinois lottery, estimates the state loses $200 million a year — after figuring in payments to lottery sales agents — to illegal imitators. Sharp said that's 15 percent of the $1.33 billion bet on the Illinois lottery in the year ending June 30.

"It comes out to a loss to all Illinois citizens," Sharp said. "As recently as last fall, law enforcement agents arrested two small operators in Chicago doing $10 million in business and one large operator doing $300 million a year."

The success of the state lottery in 1973 has spawned scores of illegal imitators, which authorities say have siphoned away hundreds of millions of dollars that otherwise might be spent on state lottery tickets.

Indiana does not have a state lottery but authorities say northwest Indiana has dozens of illegal ones. All follow the Illinois lottery, operating with the same winning numbers as Illinois lottery games.

Because the illegal lotteries use the same winning number-as the legal lottery, players can easily find out the winning numbers.

Police in Chicago and Gary say illegal lotteries are nothing more than the old numbers or policy games. Like numbers games, many illegal lotteries accept bets as small as a quarter.

Pretrial proceedings slated for drowned infant's mother

By Mark Barnett
Staff Writer

A former University student charged with the murder of the female infant she delivered in April will appear Feb. 19, 1969 for pretrial proceedings in Jackson County Circuit Court.

Veronica April, 23, of Joliet faces three counts of murder in connection with the death of the infant she delivered on April 7. April is accused of letting the infant drown in a toilet bowl at 304 E. Hester, where she lived as a University student majoring in computer science.

Judge David Watt Jr. found there was probable cause to continue proceedings and April's lawyers entered pleas of not guilty.

Detective Randy Corey, of the Carbondale Police, conducted interviews with April in June and August. He testified Nov. 21 that she had told him the baby was born dead. In a subsequent interview she said she saw the baby's eyes open with its legs kicking. Corey testified.

Corey testified that April told him in an interview in Joliet that she delivered the baby while sitting on a toilet, stood up, turned around, watched the baby, and let the infant remain in the water for 30 minutes until she saw no movement from the baby.

"She stated she realized it was dying. She said she didn't know why, but she let it die," Corey testified.

Two autopsies were performed on the infant. One revealed that the infant died from asphyxiation, and Corey testified that another doctor "could not positively say whether the baby was born alive."

The baby was found in a purse in a dumpster near Hester and Freeman streets May 15 by women looking for trash that students left behind, Officer Steve Michaels, of the Carbondale Police, said.

Corey testified that April told him she put the baby in a purse and into a box that she put under her bed. April said when friends helped her move May 14, a man took the box to the dumpster, but did not know what the box contained, Corey testified.

Officials linked to investment firm

CHICAGO (UPI) — A company whose officers included State Sen. William Marovitz, D-Chicago, and Cook County GOP Chairman James Dvorak has given up an effort to raise $6 million for reported investment at least in part, in office buildings with long-term state leases.

Arkansas regulators thwarted the fundraising, saying Continental Capital Corp.

appeared to misrepresent its finances.

Both Marovitz and Dvorak say they had no knowledge of the proposed fundraising effort, which involved the sale of bonds.

Dvorak, the top aide to Cook County Sheriff James O'Grady, said he joined the company about 90 days ago. He said he resigned Nov. 3 after learning the company planned to lend $1.25 million to a Continental stockholder who had state contracts.

Marovitz, the firm's president, said he knew the company was considering a plan to raise cash to buy an interest in the office building on Chicago's South Side. However, he said he told other company stockholders he could not be involved with the financial planning.

Weiss noted several changes in Carbondale that have taken place in the 16 years since he was enrolled in cinema classes here.

He thanked the University, "for allowing me to make up my incompletes."

"The one thing I would have done different while at SIU is pay more attention to stories and how to develop characters," Weiss stated, in advising student filmmakers.

Weiss recommended scripting and analysis classes in the cinema department as the best training he had while at SIU-C.

Weiss also advised students not to set false deadlines for themselves and to keep plugging away at different jobs in the film industry until the right one comes along.

"Don't let the F-stop stop you," Weiss told one student.

Concerning "The Naked Gun," one of the more absurd questions posed to Weiss was whether the TV show in question was "Police Squad."

Weiss showed good humor in replying, "Yes. And this class meets three times a week."

'Scrooged' brings comedy to Dickens' Christmas story

By Kathleen DeBo
Staff Writer

Bill Murray shines again in "Scrooged" as Frank Cross, a network television executive, but he is not the only attraction.

The movie has enough walk-on appearances to fill any couch potato's heart. John Forsythe, Lee Majors, Robert Goulet, Mary Lou Retton (as Tiny Tim, no less), the Solid Gold Dancers and John Houseman all put in appearances.

The audience may be surprised by a more serious tone than expected. This may be comedy but it is also Dickens.

The story follows the traditional plot but adds modern twists. It definitely amuses and entertains, but also depicts children in straightjackets and homeless people on Christmas Eve.

One of the refreshing aspects of the updated version of Dickens is that not even the kind characters are sappy sweet. When Cross fires an employee on Christmas Eve, the employee, played by Bob Goldthwait, goes after Cross with a shotgun.

The scene where Cross sees his own casket is not as effective as the traditional version. For some reason, seeing the casket cremated does not terrify him the same way that seeing Scrooge fall into an endless pit does.

The dead in this film are rotting and grotesque. One ghost's stomach is filled with slimy monsters. But overall, the film is not much more horrifying than the traditional Dickens "A Christmas Carol," only more graphic.

The film picks up speed at the end, although a monologue by Murray sounds more like a bad television preacher than a comedian. An exuberant last song makes up for that, though. This is one case where it is almost worth sitting through the credits just to hear the song.

This is not a film for young children, but adults and older children will probably find it a refreshing break from most of the animated children's films released for Christmas.

Three win in sticker contest

Technology school to use combination of several designs

By Daniel Wallenberg
Staff Writer

Three students received a total of $40 from the Department of Technology after participating in a sticker design contest for the department.

The contest was held to design a sticker that promotes the Department of Technology and can be used as a tool to recruit new students. Bob Bohac, president of the student chapter of Associated General Contractors, said.

The design had to include the SIUC emblem, the words "Department of Technology," and the use of "creative graphics and slogans."

A $25 first place prize was awarded to Tom Trimmingham, junior in design, for strong design. A $10 second place prize was awarded to Scott Drake, senior in engineering technology, for best workmanship and a $5 third-place prize was awarded to Vince Rosenthal, senior in industrial technology, for best motto.

Initially the contest was designed for a single winner but the judges decided to combine three entries into one sticker.

Initially the contest was for a single winner of $25 but the judges did not like one single entry and decided to use parts of three entries and combine them into a single sticker. Angela Nicholson, student in civil engineering technology and one of the judges, said.

Bill Eichfeld, assistant professor of technology, said that the final sticker design will be decided upon sometime next semester.

Other judges were Joseph Barbay, chairman of the technology department, Linda Helstern, public information specialist and Eichfeld.

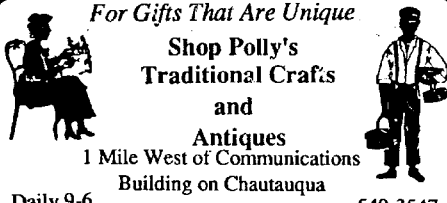

In judging the contest Helstern said she looked for "graphic quality, design and production capability and the legibility of the finished product."

Lighten your load this semester by carrying an extra bit.

Even if you're up to your eyebrows in homework, you needn't carry the world on your shoulders.

Not with a Macintosh* computer on your desk.

Think of an assignment that weighs heavily on your mind right now—say, a term paper. With Macintosh, you can bring instant order to the jumble of notes, scribbles, quotes, and excerpts that'll go into your paper. You can quickly draft an outline, change the order of topics, and jot down related ideas at will.

Then you start to write. You don't like the way you phrased a paragraph? No problem—try something new, without erasing or retyping a word. Want to move the second page of your first draft to the tail end of your last draft? It only takes a few seconds.

With Macintosh, you can also have your paper proofread in a minute or two. And you can illustrate it with professional looking drawings and graphs, even if you don't know a T-square from a T-bird.

And here's the clincher: You can learn to do all of these things—all of them—in less time than you might spend studying for a Monday morning quiz. Starting Sunday.

False fire alarms waste valuable time and money

By Joyce Bergman
Student Writer

It's 20 degrees outside at 2 a.m. and people are standing outside their dorm shivering. Some were rudely awakened from a deep sleep while others just finished studying and want to go to bed.

But they can't right now. False fire alarms in residence halls result in many sleepy, complaining residents pouring into the chilly night air, waiting for the signal to come back inside.

Fire alarms go off five or six times per semester in the larger dorms such as Brush Towers, but most of these are false alarms, Steve Kirk, assistant director of housing, said.

Within a one-year period, the Carbondale Fire Department answered 118 false alarms on campus, including dorms and classrooms.

Within the one-year period ending April 1988, the Carbondale Fire Department answered 118 false alarms on campus, including dorms and classrooms, Chief Everett Rushing of the Carbondale Fire Department, said. He said each call costs the city about $280.

But the cost is not the only problem, because every call is presumed an emergency, Rushing said.

"Kids don't think of the consequences of maliciously pulling an alarm," he said. "The lives of civilians and the firemen are in jeopardy when we are traveling in at high speeds to get to a fire."

He also said that the handicapped can have problems getting out of the building, and some people can panic, leading to pushing and shoving. Kirk said when people are evacuating buildings half asleep, accidents are bound to happen.

Kirk said there are ways to catch the culprits who pull false alarms, but often these methods are not needed. "Usually, the person who did it can't resist opening his mouth to someone on his floor, so we find out about it," Kirk said.

Pulling a false alarm is a felony, with a fine ranging from $50 to $1,000, and a year in jail, according to Chief Rushing.

The coordinator of student discipline authorizes how the pulling of a false alarm is handled, whether informally or before the campus judicial board for discipline.

"Every misconduct is different so we have no way to handle each individual case,"

Richard Hayes, Coordinator of Student Discipline, said.

"The scary thing about false alarms is when there are a lot of them, people begin to be complacent and don't evacuate the building when the alarm goes off," Kirk said. "Then if there was really a fire, the staff would be the ones hurt because they have to check each floor for people still in their rooms."

Chief Rushing recalled a tragic incident about 10 years ago.

"While we were at the false alarm, another call came in for a house fire," he said. "Before we could get there from the false alarm call, the house and all of a family's possessions were destroyed."

1988 Fall Semester Final Exam Schedule

The examination schedule attempts to avoid examination conflicts by providing separate examination periods for Tuesday-Thursday lecture classes. Other information about final examinations is listed below:

1. The class final exam period is scheduled based on the meeting time and days configuration listed on the first line of the class entry in the Schedule of Classes book (which should be the same as the first printed line for the section on the registered student's schedule print-out). For example, a class section is listed in the Schedule book on two lines in the manner:

08:00	T	Th
09:00-10:50

The listed starting time for the first line of entry is "8:00." The meeting days of that first line are "T TH," and therefore are in the category "Only T or TH or T TH." The Exam Date and Period is by the attached Fall '88 Final Examination Schedule to be Monday, Dec 12 at 7:50 - 9:50 a.m.

2. Classes should plan to hold their final examination in their regularly scheduled class rooms. The space scheduling section of the Office of Admissions and Records will forward to departments information relative to the location for examinations for those classes that cannot hold their examinations in their regularly scheduled rooms because of a space conflict. This will be done sufficiently in advance of the final examination on days to provide sufficient notice for all.

Classes that meet less than the entire semester should hold their exams during the last regularly scheduled class session prior to final examinations.

3. Students who find they have more than three examinations on one day may petition, and students who have two examinations scheduled at one time should petition their academic dean for approval to take an examination during the make-up examination period on the last day. Provision for such a make-up examination period does not mean that students may decide to miss the scheduled examination time and expect to make it up during this make-up period. This period is to be used only for students whose petitions have been approved by their dean.

Bush, Bob Dole make peace, agree to cut deficit together

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President-elect George Bush, conceding Monday he may face difficulties dealing with Congress, held a peace-making session with Senate Republican leader Robert Dole where the political rivals agreed to try to cut the deficit without new taxes.

Following an hour-long lunch in the vice president's office, Bush said Dole — who warned this year over the GOP presidential nomination — emerged to proclaim they are strong allies whose first battle is to cut the deficit.

"We're going to have a cooperative relationship," Bush said. "We're going to address this budget deficit problem early on."

"The election is over and we both have obligations," said the senator from Kansas. "Certainly mine is to help him become a great president and I intend to do that."

"That's what it's all about. The things that have happened in the past — we've both been in politics quite a while — we understand that when the election is over it's over. So we're going to go to work."

Praising Dole's abilities, Bush said the senator had made suggestions on the timing of how to deal with Congress on the budget and. "After this luncheon, I think I feel more convinced than ever that we can proceed."

The lunch conversation, Bush said, was "about how we will proceed. We both agreed that working toward getting this deficit down is priority. The timing of what actions I take is largely shaped by a lot of input from Capitol Hill."

Praising Dole's abilities, Bush said the senator had made suggestions on the timing of how to deal with Congress on the budget.

Along those lines, Bush agreed to travel to the Capitol Tuesday for a morning meeting with the Republican leadership and new GOP senators. He said he also would meet with the Democrats who lead the House and Senate.

Bush already has met with House Speaker Jim Wright, D-

Texas, and the two men pledged to work together when the 101st Congress convenes in January.

Despite Bush's upbeat words, he conceded Monday he is sure he would run into some difficulties with Congress. "But we're going to work fine."

"There will probably be some times when we differ with the majority party up there," he added after the lunch. "But I'm confident that this president-elect, when he becomes president, will be able to work most cooperatively with our leadership in the Senate and certainly in the House."

The fact that the budget is a priority for Bush as he succeeds President Reagan Jan. 20 was evident in that the only other person attending the Bush-Dole lunch was Richard Darman, Bush's choice as budget director.

Bush has insisted repeatedly that he will fight any effort to raise taxes and believes the budget can eventually be balanced through a "flexible freeze" — in which government spending would be held to the rate of inflation.

(the bill) to stop this practice entirely would probably pass."

The University hopes to reach a compromise with the Legislative Audit Commission so similar bills will not be passed in the future, Wilson said.

If the Legislative Audit Commission decides the University has the power to issue travel advances, the auditor general will have to drop the issue, he said.

"They (critics) say we're loaning people money out of state resources. There is some merit to that position. We don't go back and examine whether they paid in cash or credit card. We're giving money for which they haven't yet incurred an expense," Wilson said.

That is contrary to the way the rest of the state works, he said.

After their trips, the employees may owe the University for travel advances not used up but in most cases the University still owes the employees money, Wilson said.

"We don't want employees making us a temporary loan. We don't feel that's right," he said.

He said there is a certain amount of extra paperwork involved because all employees who travel on University business, including those who received advances, have to fill out vouchers stating how much money was spent.

The University is trying to compromise by using direct billings for large expenses such as airline travel and credit cards for other expenses. Otherwise, such expenses would require either a large initial out-of-pocket expense for University employees or a travel advance, Wilson said.

Meals and ground transportation are expenses for which the University still uses travel advances, he said.

Without travel advances, the employees would have to pay for their expenses and be reimbursed later.

The University is working to limit the travel advances to occasions such as foreign travel or domestic travel for a limited number of days, Wilson said.

Group travel also would be a special circumstance. Many coaches, for instance, cannot afford to pay travel expenses for athletes for several days, Wilson said.

The auditor general made the statement in a 1987 audit finding, which is a repeat of a 1985 finding. Wilson said the auditor general probably will make the same finding in 1989.

Fitzwater, who had been planning to leave government when Reagan leaves office Jan. 20, was obviously overwhelmed by the vote of confidence from the president-elect. When asked about Bush's promise for "fresh faces" in the administration, the less-than-telegenic Fitzwater quipped: "I'm willing to take a new face. I'll take Tom Selleck."

After making the announcement, arranged on short notice, Bush left the stage to Fitzwater, who professionally dodged questions about regular news conferences in the future — his advice on such matters is privileged, he said. But he said he expects reporters would be seeing Bush on "a daily basis."

beligerent crowd this year."

Hogan's assessment of this year's Halloween festival as more violent than in years past joins a host of police officials and Halloween Core Committee members. Sam McVay, director of the Health Service and chairman of the Halloween Core Committee, has been quoted as saying, "I'm worried (Halloween) is a drunken bash — a drunken brawl." The core committee's theme was "(Be) part of the team for a safe Halloween."

The most recent voice added to the chorus of boos for the festival is President John C. Guyon. Calling Saturday's celebration an "unmitigated disaster" Guyon recommends that the city do away with the public consumption of alcohol during the Halloween Fair Days.

The city council has yet to discuss the future of Halloween since the conclusion of this year's celebration.

Swim team beats Kansas, Illinois

By John Walblay
Staff Writer

While University students escaped for the Thanksgiving break, the Saluki swimming and diving teams battled Illinois and Kansas at the Recreation Center pool.

The men's team beat Illinois 65-42 and Kansas 61-51 while the women's teams were defeated by Illinois 57-56 and Kansas 67-42.

"We knew the Kansas women would be tough, they beat Nebraska," swimming coach Doug Ingram said.

Nebraska beat the Saluki teams in the first dual meet of the season.

"As much effort and as much dedication there was I was real pleased with (the women's performance)," Ingram said.

The only individual first-place winner for the women's team was Debbie Gutteridge who won the 200-yard breaststroke with a time of 2:34.12. Gutteridge outdistanced the nearest swimmer by two seconds.

The only other victory for the women swimmers came in the 400-yard freestyle relay. Nancy Schmidtkoer, Kathi Wire, Melissa Steinbach and Cindy Owens won the event with a time of 3:36.39. Illinois placed second with a 3:40.75.

For the women divers, freshman Laire Owen led the Salukis by winning the 1-meter springboard competition and placing third in the 3-meter event.

The men's winning performances were highlighted with swims by Eric Bradac who won the 200-, 500- and 1,650-yard freestyle events. Bradac won the 200 in 1:42.38 followed by another Saluki swimmer, Todd Edison, who finished second in 1:43.11.

Team captain Scott Roberts defeated Kansas' nationally ranked Glen Trammel in the 200-yard backstroke with a time of 1:52.63. Trammel finished second at 1:53.09.

Roberts also played a key role as anchor in the 400-yard medley and freestyle relays which the Salukis placed first and second respectively.

"Beating a Big Eight and Big Ten is always a good feeling. It helps for recruiting too," Ingram said.

The Salukis next meet will be Dec. 2-4 at the National Invitational Tournament in Tuscaloosa, Ala.

mile mark we were running 9:20. After that I just didn't feel right."

Dennis said he had not trained well since the Missouri Valley Championships, when he said he thought his season peaked.

He ran a time of 24:19.5 at the MVC meet, the fourth fastest time in SIU-C cross country history.

"Jon (Dennis) said his legs were still weak from being sick," Cornell said, referring to food poisoning Dennis had suffered days before the race. "Jon said he put on a kick at the end of the race, but people were still passing him."

Dennis was within 1:13 of the winner, Indiana freshman Bob Kennedy, who won with a time of 29:20.

Dennis had faced Kennedy earlier in the year at the Kentucky Invitational where he beat Kennedy in a 5-mile (8,000-meter) race by 42 seconds.

"You really can't compare the two races," Dennis said. "September is early in the year and a lot can change by November."

Dennis said although he didn't finish where he would have liked to, he will build on this race for the future.

"This race will help me in the future," Dennis said. "I will be better prepared for the next national race. An experience like this can do nothing but help."

In all, the Salukis had eight players rush for over 100 yards during the season.

Freshman kicker John Bookout led the Salukis in scoring with 47 points. Bookout nailed 23 of 25 point after touchdowns and eight of 12 field goals.

Senior split end Joe Cook, who was named Gateway Offensive Player of the Week after the Northern Iowa game, led SIU-C in receiving with 388 yards on 27 receptions. Cook was one of six Salukis to gain over 100 yards during the year.

Defensively, the Salukis were paced by Kevin Kiggallon's 155 tackles. The sophomore linebacker tallied 83 unassisted tackles and 72 assisted.

Rhoades said he hopes to see some changes before the Salukis take the field in 1989, both physically and mentally.

NCAA Division I features 41 new head coaches

By Garry Dulac
Scrapps Howard News Service

John Calipari spent two seasons as an assistant coach and chief recruiter at Kansas. Then he spent three seasons as an assistant at Pitt. Now he is the head coach at the University of Massachusetts.

Calipari is one of 41 coaches who is taking over an NCAA Division I basketball program this year.

With the position comes the responsibility of putting respectability back into the program. Also, there is a responsibility to put the program back into the NCAA tournament, where the opportunity to make money for the university's athletic budget has intensified.

"The athletic director told me he's behind me, win or tie," Calipari said.

Calipari was joking ... for now. The reality of the situation in college basketball is that with so much revenue being generated from television appearances and the NCAA tournament, the demands on coaches have grown.

"Ten years ago, 20 years ago, you didn't get $1 million if you went to the Final Four," Duquesne coach Jim Satalin said. "In 1977 (at St. Bonaventure) we got $25,000 for winning the NIT (National Invitation Tournament) championship. Now there are going to be 64 teams who get a minimum of $150,000 for being in the NCAA tournament."

Satalin should not feel the pressure, at least for two years. He was given a one-year extension of his contract by university President John E.

Murray at a time when other schools were not so charitable.

In the past three years there have been 184 coaching changes among the 289 Division I schools that compete in basketball, a percentage which is indicative of the tolerance of university presidents and athletic directors.

The turnover rate — 42 percent for two years, better than 50 percent for three years — is a concern to coaches.

"Most schools have unrealistic expectations," said Tom Penders, who is beginning his first season at Texas. "Coaches at some of these schools get dismissed because they don't make the NCAAAs, but the schools are not equipped to compete. Those types of situations are prevalent more than at any other time."

"Any time you are in the public eye there is a great deal of pressure," North Carolina State coach Jim Valvano said.

Unlike football, where many players are needed for a successful program, basketball can be turned around with the addition of one or two players. Coaches refer to this solution as a "quick fix."

But getting the player is not as easy as it sounds, especially for less-glamorous schools.

"In our case, we're trying to get a player who is above us to take us to the level," Calipari said. "The problem is the Big East (schools) wants those players, too."

Last year 67 schools had new head coaches. This year the number is 41.

Of those, only two positions opened because of attrition — Kansas, where Larry Brown moved to the San Antonio Spurs of the NBA, and Pepperdine, where Jim Harrick left to take over UCLA.

The rest were done with the hope of rebuilding the program.

"I don't see many people wanting to go to the NCAA tournament any less," said Connecticut coach Jim Calhoun. "Financially, it's a tremendous opportunity."

For some, such as former Rutgers coach Craig Littlepage, it is more of a nightmare.

Littlepage, 23-63 in three seasons, was fired after last season.

New lineup doesn't foil Redbirds

By Troy Taylor
Staff Writer

NORMAL — Women's volleyball coach Debbie Hunter turned the look of her team inside-out, taking a step toward the future during the semifinal round of the Gateway Conference tournament.

The Salukis (12-14 overall, 6-3 Gateway) lost to Illinois State 15-4, 15-9, 15-11. But before falling to the eventual conference champs, the Salukis played a desperate, defiant style of ball that denied the Redbirds match point on seven straight service opportunities.

Paramount to a resurgence on the Salukis' part was the lineup Hunter had settled on during the intermission period following Game 2.

Terri Schulteheinrich, a 5-6 freshman setter, was inserted for senior captain Sue Sinclair. Freshman Debbie Briscoe (6 blocks) and Stephanie Newman joined their classmate on the floor alongside sophomore Lori Simpson and junior Nina Brackins. Outside hitter Teri Noble was the only senior.

"I think it was something new and different," Hunter said. "It helped to initiate some Illinois State errors."

Hunter said that the decision to bench Sinclair, a second-team all-conference selection and the school's No. 2 all-time setter, was not part of the prematch planning. It was a decision she reached during the brief break in the action prior to Game 3.

"When we hadn't accomplished anything in five consecutive games against them, I decided I wanted to see something else," said Hunter, whose Salukis had dropped a three-game decision to Illinois State only a week before.

In the short time Schulteheinrich took over the setting duties, she totaled 13 assists.

"I kept telling the kids to hit angles, to get the good shots," Hunter said. "Schulteheinrich brought us back into a service mode. Terri's been coming around for some time. She's a great setter in this conference's future. She's as competitive an athlete as you'll find."

Sinclair, who entered the match later, finished with 22 assists. The Salukis were led by two honorable mention all-conference selections, Brackins (12 kills) and Noble (16 digs).

"I thought (Hunter) used her personnel well," Illinois State coach Julie Morgan said. "She did everything to change things up."

Illinois State's Chris Rehore, a 5-6 outside hitter who was edged out for MVP honors only by Southwest Missouri's Mindy Struckhoff, repeatedly kept Illinois State in command of the lead. She led Illinois State with 23 kills and 15 digs.

Rehore's three aces came off a string of jump serves in the first game. In the third game alone she had 10 kills and made a defensive save that brought the crowd to its feet.

"Chris always was there to make those clutch plays," said Morgan, whose 25-8 Redbirds beat Southwest Missouri 15-7, 13-15, 15-8, 15-1 in the championship match.

Against the Salukis, Morgan said she never felt comfortable, even though her team

Volleyball coach Holzzapfel resigns at Indiana State

Indiana State announced that volleyball coach Deb Holzzapfel resigned her position after the Sycamores finished the 1988 season with a 6-23 overall record and 0-9 Gateway Conference mark.

Holzzapfel has been Indiana State's coach the last six seasons, compiling a career mark of 64-125. Her best season came in 1987, when the Sycamores were 14-14 overall and sixth in the Gateway.

Indiana State Athletics Director Brian Faison said a search for a new coach would begin immediately.

"I want to thank Debbie for the time and effort she has put into the volleyball program at Indiana State," Faison said.

AN INVITATION TO MEMBERS OF THE UNIVERSITY COMMUNITY

During the past year, a committee within Student Affairs known as the Campus Environment Team (CET), initiated a project to "map" our campus by identifying university activities, programs, events which provide opportunities for students to mature within selected developmental dimensions. Student growth dimensions to be studied were selected after careful review of the literature and include development of creativity skills; cognition; psychological/emotional stability; leadership and organizational skills; appreciation of cultural, ethnic, and individual differences; and exploration of career, lifestyle, and leisure identities.

The next step is to establish subcommittees which will "map the environment" to determine campus opportunities which provide avenues for students to develop along each dimension. Results of this campus environment self assessment will be made available to students as a guide to experiences which will assist them in specific areas of their development. Further, a comprehensive report resulting from this project will be utilized in future strategic planning within Student Affairs and the university at large.

Your involvement in developing and defining the dimensions to be studied as well as in conducting the assessment is critical.

he was named Player of the Week.

"I'm kind of impressed because I know I can do it now," McSwain said. "I am the most satisfied with my play right now. If I keep up the effort I have now, I know I will have a great season."

McSwain said the Salukis were hurting after the loss to South Carolina Sunday.

"We are terribly disappointed with the loss but the victory over Villanova is still within us," McSwain said. "We played as hard as we could and with the hustle we put forth it all turned out for the good in the end."

"The tournament was an exciting experience and well worth the trip. Our motivation now is very high and we have shown we can do it. Now we need help from the fans and the students."

Rick Shipley added 21 for the Salukis Saturday night. SIUC hit 37 of 42 free throws in the first major upset of the young college season.

Joining McSwain on the all-tournament team was Randy House of the Salukis.

Gymnastics team 3rd at Lincoln, Neb. meet

By Megan Hauck

The men's gymnastics squad placed third at the six-team Big Eight Invitational in Lincoln, Neb., compiling a 256.65 effort.

Arizona State placed second with a 262.30, 10 points behind host Nebraska, Division I national champion in 1987.

"Scores went down (from last year's Invite) because (the Federation of International Gymnasts) made it much more difficult," Bill Meade, men's gymnastics coach, said. But Meade said the squad improved over last year and would have scored higher under last year's scoring.

The Federation increases the standards of participation for gymnasts world-wide every four years to increase the overall calibre of gymnasts.

"They do it to cut down on the number of 10s and to make it easier to differentiate between the good, the great and the best gymnasts," Meade said.

Junior Scott Belanger scored highest overall with a 51.98.

Senior Brent Reed scored second highest with a 51.45.

"Brent had a terrible week, but that's just a part of it," Meade said.

Reed underwent surgery on his left elbow during Thanksgiving break to alleviate a pinched nerve, but Meade said it shouldn't be too much of a hindrance.

"He'll probably have the same operation on his other arm at the end of the season," he said.

Brent's younger sister, Barbara Reed, underwent the same type of surgery while performing at Ball State.

Meade said although his squad performed above average, the rookie gymnasts had a tough time handling the competition.

Alex Zimmerman and Ricky Armstrong, a first-year competitor from Memphis, struggled through the meet. Zimmerman competing in only two of the six events and Armstrong in four.

"I'd say they choked," Meade said. "It's tough competing against national champions in the first meet."

The Salukis' next meet is January 20 to 21 in Chicago.

Salukis off to a roaring start

By David Gallianetti
Staff Writer

Rich Herrin said before the Salukis departed for San Juan, Puerto Rico, and the Sunshine Shootout, he would have been satisfied with two victories. He had no idea that one would have been so big.

SIU-C, who fell to South Carolina State in the championship Sunday night 90-88, entered the title tilt after a stunning upset of No. 11 Villanova 102-81 Saturday.

McSwain named tournament MVP

"We are a bit disappointed but we wouldn't trade that victory over Villanova," Coach Rich Herrin said. "It has to be one of the premier wins (at SIU-C)."

Herrin said the loss to the Bulldogs may have been partly an emotional letdown from the previous night's game.

"This happens in athletics whenever you have a big high because there is often a let-down," Herrin said. "We were probably a little bit like Villanova on Sunday because we were favored and ran up against a good basketball team."

Darrell Gilmore sank a layup with six seconds remaining Sunday giving South Carolina State the tournament championship over SIU-C, 2-1. Gilmore hit two free throws to give the Bulldogs an 88-86 lead with 1:25 remaining. After his layup, he intercepted a pass to seal the victory.

For Herrin, the win over Rollie Massimino's Wildcats was a double celebration, as it marked the 650th victory in his 29-year coaching career.

"The numbers really don't play that much of a factor, but this is probably my biggest win as a coach," Herrin said. "It was that much bigger because it was such a stunning victory by a decisive margin over a national power.

"When you are 2-0 it would be great to come home 3-0, but we are pretty happy. I feel good because the players played their hearts out despite the conditions."

Herrin said it was very humid in the gym and the floor was often slick. There was no operating scoreboard

Scott's team drops 7th straight opener

By Robert Baxter

The Saluki women's basketball team was hoping to roll a seven in its regular season opener against a Murray State team they had beaten six straight times.

What prevailed, however, was the seventh straight season-opening loss for the Saluki women as they saw a 10 point second-half lead disappear and ultimately end up as a 68-64 victory for the Racers Friday night at the Arena.

"The team played a much better game than the first game (against the French National team)," Coach Cindy Scott said. "But we had one glaring weakness — defensive rebounding."

The Salukis were out-rebounded for the game 42-33 as the Racers pulled down 17 rebounds on the offensive end.

"If we control the boards we win the game," Scott said. "We had them on the ropes but we didn't put them away."

Scott, whose team holds a 16-3 series advantage over Murray State, said this Racer team was possibly the best to come out of that school in quite a while.

"I think they will definitely contend for the OVC (Ohio Valley Conference) crown," Scott said.

The Salukis were up by two at the half 34-32, and built a 10 point lead with a little over 12 minutes to go.

But from there the Racers slowly came back to tie the game with 5:08 left at 58 largely due to the efforts of the games two leading scorers — Karen Johnson with 32 points and Sheila Smith with 18 points.

The Racers did not take the lead until a 12-foot baseline jumper by Johnson put the Racers up 66-64 with 39 seconds left.

"We have to play mentally stronger and mentally more efficient (toward the end of the game)," Scott said. "We have to be tremendously efficient in our ball positions."

"I think if we do that, along with using a tenacious defense, we can play with anybody."

The Salukis were led by senior Dana Fitzpatrick with 15 points and four rebounds.

"I think Fitz showed us a game of key baskets," Scott said. "She showed us the leadership role we need from

Freshman runner finishes in top third of NCAA pack

By Robert Baxter

Although freshman Jon Dennis did not finish in the top 25 runners in the nation at the NCAA Nationals as he had hoped, men's cross country coach Bill Cornell did not think Dennis had set his goals too high.

"I told him you have to set your goals high," Cornell said. "Even though he didn't make All-American, he still needed to set a goal for himself to reach for."

Dennis was competing in the national cross country championships on Nov. 21 at Des Moines, Iowa, where 184 of the nation's best runners were competing.

"I was a bit disappointed."

"As it turned out, if I had, I would have been in the top 25."

Dennis ended his bid by finishing 55th at the meet. He ran a time of 30:33 over the 6.2 mile (10,000-meter) course, six seconds faster than he ran in the District 5 meet when he placed seventh.

"The race went out really fast," Dennis said. "At the 2-

Rhoades doesn't like mark; stressing winter workouts

By David Gallianetti
Staff Writer

For head football coach Rick Rhoades, phase two of his first year at SIU-C has begun. He is hoping it goes better than phase one.

The Salukis' 24-21 loss to Northern Iowa on Nov. 19 dropped SIU-C to 4-7, a record Rhoades isn't overly pleased with.

"I'm not happy with it, but there is nothing we can do about it now," Rhoades said. "We have to build on our mistakes and look ahead, move ahead."

The Salukis finished 2-4 in the Gateway race, tied for fifth place with Eastern Illinois.

Rhoades said the winter training program began Monday at 7 a.m. and will continue on a three-day per week schedule through December. In January, the schedule, which includes weight lifting, running and quickness drills, will move up to four days a week.

"Cutting down on injuries has got to be a major thing, and this is the No. 1 way to combat those," Rhoades said. "We need to be stronger and have more endurance."

Although the 1988 season did not go according to his plans, Rhoades said a foundation for the 1989 year has been set, and only time will tell if it is a good one.

"If we improve greatly like I know we can, then 1988 was a good foundation," Rhoades said. "If we don't move forward, then it wasn't much of a year. We will obviously be better off going into next year than going into 1988 at any point. We know so much more."

With the end of the season also comes the beginning of the push for recruits. Although Rhoades said the Salukis are not looking to fill any particular holes, an additional quarterback is on the list.

"We are going to try and recruit one because we need more speed there," Rhoades said. "We aren't trying to replace anyone, but complement what we have."

"We have got to learn how to start out fast," said Rhoades, who watched his team get quartered 78-47 in the first quarter by its opponents. "We have got some ideas we want to try and implement to get ourselves rolling."

Sophomore Fred Gibson was SIU-C's top quarterback, before falling to a knee injury on Oct. 22 against Northern Illinois. Freshman Scott Gabbert filled in for Gibson the remainder of the season.

Gibson completed 63 of 105 passes in seven games for 742 yards. Gabbert hit 58 of 100 attempts for 707 yards in seven games.

Leading the Salukis in rushing for the season was fullback Chuck Harmke, who racked up 795 yards on
