Summer of 1988 gone, not forgotten

United Press International

Remember the Summer of '88? It was the year black bears rummaged through back yards in the Carolinas, a shark got loose in the Houston ship Channel, bugs and fires gnawed away at the nation's timber supply and barges ran aground on the not-so-mighty Mississippi.

Crops wilted in the Farm Belt's rainless heat. Oyster beds in Maryland were ruined by salt water. Sunfish nipped at swimmers in Massachusetts. Farmers moved their herds in search of greener pastures.

People died. The Summer of '88 passes into history at 2:25 p.m. today but for years to come it likely will be a conversation starter.

There will be much to talk about:

Forecasters at the National Weather Service said more than 200 cities reported record high temperatures between June 1 and Aug. 31. Scores of cities averaged 5 degrees or more above normal for the period.

Hundreds of people died of heat-related illnesses from Texas to Missouri to Illinois and Massachusetts in what forecasters said generally was the hottest summer since 1936.

Some researchers said the actual number probably surpassed 2,000, though the vast majority were undiagnosed or simply not reported. The elderly and the very young were hardest hit.

Crops withered and died in the fields across the nation's Farm Belt, burned by relentless heat and dried up by drought. Huge rainfall deficits plagued the area. Produce prices skyrocketed at the supermarket. Farmers sold off livestock they no longer could feed.

Montana ranchers ran out of green pastures and had to move their livestock to other states where rainfall was more plentiful. The transportation costs and related expenses helped drive up the price of beef, officials said.

In the Carolinas, black

Program geared toward city unity

Gajet McNeil feels that Carbondale residents are under many social and economic pressures which are pulling the communities apart.

Instead of accepting the situation, though, he is doing something about it.

McNeil, Coordinated Youth Program director of the Attacks Community Service Board, hopes that a "day of human kindness," sponsored by the board, will rekindle the desire for closer and more caring communities.

"Southern Illinois is currently depressed economically. Some people are out of work, while others have to take on two jobs just to survive," he said. "This leaves matters like helping and caring behind."

"Students sometimes don't realize the impact they have on a community."

—Gajet McNeil

The event is geared toward bringing friends and neighbors from all parts of Carbondale together to raise concern for individuals and their community. McNeil said that SIU-C students should be concerned about community needs because they will also be part of it for the next four years.

"Students sometimes don't realize the impact they have on a community," he said. "They come in and take over many jobs. The people who live here year-round can't compete with them."

McNeil also pointed to a need for an open dialogue between the students and the community. "This is a cultural haven for learning about the world," he said. "Students from all over the world are here with new ideas and ways. We just have to be receptive to them, that's the way we grow as a society."

Participation in the "day of human kindness" is the first step toward involvement, McNeil said.

The event will be held from 10 a.m. to 10:30 p.m., Saturday, Sept. 24, at Attacks Park on North Wall Street.

Museum's story told by exhibit

By Phyllis Coon
Staff Writer

There is no better way to learn about the history of the University Museum than to go see it, the museum's curator of history said.

The exhibition "History of the University Museum" opened Sept. 20.

"The exhibit gives people an opportunity to see different artifacts acquired by the museum that are now kept in storage," Jo Nast said.

One work featured is a Works Project Administration model, Nast said. The WPA helped people find work during the depression era of the 1930s, she said.

"The people hired by the WPA took a historical subject and made it for the model," Nast said.

The model includes a chair and a smoke house, Nast said.

The Museum has collected over 26,000 objects during its 114 year history, Nast said.

"This exhibit includes only 50 to 60 pieces including historical photographs," she said.

The exhibit has four sections that cover important eras of the Museum, Nast said.

The first section spans the first 58 years of the Museum. The exhibits focus on the natural sciences. This section also features original photographs of the museum, Nast said.

Council weighs postponing couple vote

By Richard Goldstein
Staff Writer

Councilman Keith Tuxhorn proposed postponing for at least eight months the long-awaited Sept. 27 vote by the City Council on the east-west couple proposal.

In a meeting Tuesday night, lasting from 7 p.m. until nearly midnight, the council conducted what Mayor Neil Dillard called the "semifinals" of a vote on the Illinois Department of Transportation's $1 million east-west couple proposal.

The council also decided the boundaries for a zoning moratorium that will be imposed with or without a couple to prevent business speculation in the area proposed for a couple.

Tuxhorn proposed that the council pass a resolution Sept. 27 that would postpone a decision on the east-west couple for eight or more months, instruct city staff to investigate money sources for a proposed northern connector or bypass, and formulate a long-term citywide transportation plan.

"We need to stop working on this plan (the couple) that is dividing this town and begin working on" a northern connector, Tuxhorn said.

"Every group has said we need this connector," he said.

Tuxhorn listed the Carbondale Chamber of Commerce, City Council members, citizen groups, and a newspaper editorial as supporting the northern bypass. The Chamber of Commerce and the editorial also support the construction of the couple.

City Manager William C. Dixon read a letter from H. W.

Turmoil, mutiny increase in Haitian military forces

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (UPI) — An eighth mutiny by troops was reported Wednesday in a sign of increasing turmoil in the armed forces since a coup toppled Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy as the leader of Haiti. On Tuesday, about 300 soldiers at a garrison in the Carrefour section of the capital handcuffed their commander, Lt. Col. Jean Robert Gabriel, and delivered him to army headquarters, said a unit spokesman, who refused to identify himself. Gabriel was seized "because of harsh behavior to the soldiers," the spokesman said.

Coup leader acts as prime minister in Burma

RANGOON, Burma (UPI) — Coup leader Gen. Saw Maung took office as prime minister Wednesday as his troops tightened their grip on the capital, searching house to house for weapons and fighting sporadic battles with demonstrators. But diplomats said the army faced stubborn resistance in Mandalay, the country's second largest city, where heavy casualties have been reported in fierce battles between troops and anti-government groups.

Soviet commission to probe organized crime

MOSCOW (UPI) — A commission is being set up to investigate mafia-style activities such as drug dealing and racketeering in the Soviet Union, which for decades boasted of being virtually crime free, it was announced Wednesday. The Moscow News said one mandate of the commission is to determine if organized crime is a direct result of Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev's easing of social controls and liberalization of the economy or if it can be traced back to the corrupt era of the late Leonid Brezhnev.

Son of emperor to take over in father's illness

TOKYO (UPI) — Emperor Hirohito, whose health suddenly deteriorated this week, showed signs of improvement Wednesday, but Japan pressed ahead with plans to usher in a new era by handing over the monarch's duties to Crown Prince Akihito. Hirohito, 87, the world's longest reigning monarch who has seen Japan enter World War II and emerge from the ashes to become an economic superpower, was advised of the decision to appoint his oldest son, Akihito, to assume largely ceremonial responsibilities.

U.S.: Modest expectations for Soviet meeting

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States has modest expectations for the two days of talks between Secretary of State George Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze. Assistant Secretary of State Rozanne Ridgway told reporters the theme of the 28th in the series of meetings between the two men is "continuity," noting that superpower relations continue despite the approaching shift in U.S. administrations.

Mine workers laud passage of motor fuels bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — United Mine Workers President Richard Trunka said Wednesday Senate approval of fuels legislation is a crucial first step in building a national energy policy that gives the use of coal an opportunity to grow. The Alternative Motor Fuels Act, authored by Sen. Jay Rockefeller, D-W.Va., gives auto makers incentives to build cars that operate on alternative fuels made from coal and natural gas.

Study: Fish oil helps keep blood vessels open

BOSTON (UPI) — Fish oil, which has shown promise of preventing heart attacks, now appears to be the first effective way to keep heart disease patients' blood vessels open after doctors unclog them, researchers said Wednesday. A study involving 82 men who underwent coronary angioplasty found those who took fish oil extract before, during and after the procedure were less than half as likely to have the vessels close again, a problem known as restenosis.

Study: Hospital care rates save state $376 million

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — The state has saved millions of dollars in Medicaid payments to hospitals as the result of a program of negotiating hospital care rates for the poor, according to a study released Wednesday. The study by Peat Marwick said the program saved the state $146.3 million in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1987, and has saved the state $376 million since its inception in 1984.

3rd Cardboard Cup race scheduled at DuQuoin

More than 100 boats from Illinois and four other states will compete on Saturday, Sept. 24 in the Third Annual America's International Cardboard Cup Challenge at the DuQuoin State Fairgrounds.

Local crews will try to master the challenge of designing, building, and racing boats made of corrugated cardboard.

Since the SIU Alumni Association obtained a copyright on the Great Cardboard Boat Regatta in 1986, many cities and towns have organized regattas to support local charitable causes. The winners from the circuit are invited to compete at the national finals.

"This year's circuit of regattas was the biggest one yet," said Richard Archer, SIU design professor who originated the idea of racing cardboard boats.

Boats will compete in three classes. Class I is for boats propelled by oars and paddles. Class II include all other forms of propulsion, such as paddlewheels, sails, propellers, and other ingenious and sometimes mysterious means.

Often the most fun for spectators and participants, however, are the Class III crafts, the "Instant Boats." Interested boat builders will each have a kit of materials and tools and the same amount of time to build a cardboard craft on site.

Registration for the event begins at 10 a.m. and the races start at noon.

Boat registration is $10 and there is no admission fee for spectators.

Jazz pianist, ragtime band to play Shryock Auditorium

Shryock Auditorium will present an evening of classic ragtime and swinging jazz on Oct. 1 when jazz pianist Butch Thompson joins the New Orleans Ragtime Orchestra.

The group will play vintage ragtime and jazz in a fresh, contemporary style.

Thompson has toured in the United States, Europe and Australia, doing solo and trio appearances, tours with orchestras and recording projects.

He has gained recognition as the house pianist on the public radio program, "A Prairie Home Companion," which featured a variety of musical acts.

Thompson has been playing with the New Orleans Ragtime Orchestra from time to time since it formulated in the late 1960s.

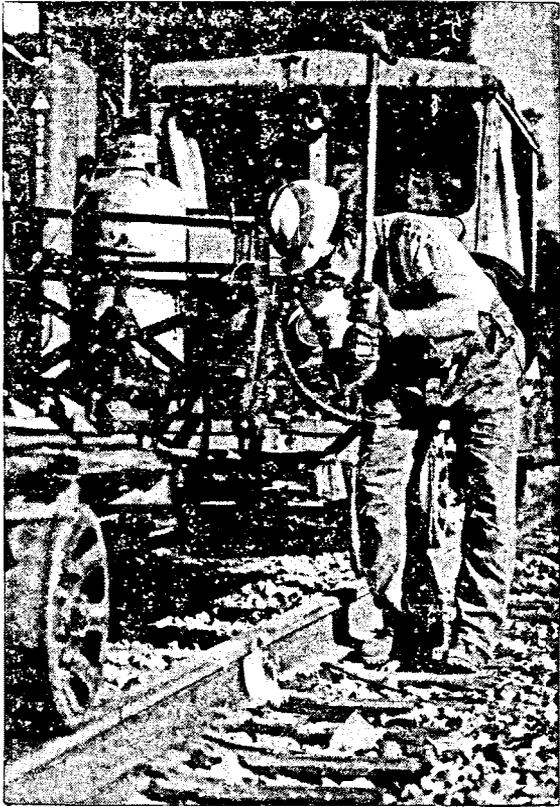

He said he last accompanied the group last spring in New Orleans and wants to continue touring with the group. They sound "as good as ever," he said.

The orchestra consists of conductor Lars Edegran, trumpeter Lionel Ferbos, drummer John Robichaux, trombonist Paul Crawford, clarinetist Orange Kellin, bassist Walter Payton, Jr., and violinist William Russell, a noted New Orleans jazz scholar.

The band has recorded six albums and has acquired film credits from their role in "A Tribute to Louis Armstrong."

They received an Academy Award nomination for the sound track of Louis Malles's film, "Pretty Baby."

Tickets for the 8 p.m. performance are on sale for $9.50 and $11.50.

Battleground tactics won't save Shawnee

EARTH FIRST is the last thing needed in Southern Illinois. Long associated with guerilla attacks on logging operations in the western states, Earth First has now issued a veiled threat to a Missouri firm under contract to clear-cut parts of Cave Valley in the Shawnee National Forest north of Pomona.

Until Earth First entered the fray, the subject of clear-cutting had been discussed intelligently. The Forest Service has put clear-cutting operations on hold until it can assess claims made by both sides of the clear-cutting issue.

BEFORE THE STUDY promised by the Forest Service has been completed, the logging company has been warned to "Stay out of Cave Valley."

Whether some were using the Earth First name in hopes that the group's reputation will scare off the loggers doesn't matter. Scare tactics are wrong, they are cowardly and no one should have to stand for such abuse.

To some, there might be a Robin Hood sort of appeal to the radical environmental group. It apparently likes to portray itself as conservationists of last resort; able to bring a large logging firm to its knees by driving spikes into trees, vandalizing equipment and chaining its members to gates and trees.

LOGGERS SHOULD be afforded the same rights as any corporation. Opponents of clear-cutting should be afforded the right to speak out and present evidence against clear-cutting as the Forest Service makes its decision.

The Earth First message is different, though. Earth First has made up its mind that no matter what, it wants loggers to stay out of Cave Valley. That's kind of like administering the death penalty before a fair trial.

Imagine the position Earth First has put the loggers in. There are not a lot of jobs to be found in Southern Illinois and Southeast Missouri, but Earth First would have these men give up their jobs or risk their lives. Yes, cutting into a spiked tree with a chain saw can be a fatal venture.

LIKE BRIAN UNNERSTALL, a forester with the logging company that received the threat, we would like the author of the letter to step forward and join the debate. The more people speaking against clear-cutting and the more evidence presented that clear-cutting adversely affects the environment, the better the chances that the Forest Service will rule out clear-cutting.

Those who advocate striking out against the little man — the employees who are wedged between the choice of risking death at the hands of Earth First or standing in the employment line — have no place in an intelligent discussion.

So far no blood has been spilled and the Shawnee has not been turned into a battleground. There is still time for those behind the anonymous letter to act like adults.

Until that happens, Earth First — or whoever you are, you are last in our standing.

Opinions from elsewhere

Safe dumps necessary

Scripps Howard News Service

While garbage disposal is essentially a local problem, it has enough ramifications to justify a federal role.

With disposal sites getting scarcer, garbage often makes long treks across state lines. Some of it also is polluting the environment far beyond the places where it is deposited.

The result is that the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, acting under authority of laws enacted by Congress, has proposed minimum standards for the operation of landfills, most of which are managed by municipalities.

The EPA regulations would require state and local governments to pass laws by 1991 complying with or exceeding the EPA standards. The federal government could step in and enforce its rules if states declined to act.

Under the EPA regulations, inspection programs would have to be devised to prevent dumping of hazardous wastes in landfills, which are supposed to take such materials. Discharge of harmful wastes into surface waters would be prohibited.

Groundwater would have to be checked at least semi-annually to insure its safety. Explosive gases generated during waste decomposition would have to be monitored and removed. Wastes would have to be covered adequately each day to control rodents, insects, fires and odors.

It is expected that the new rules eventually will add nearly $1 billion to the current $4 billion to $5 billion cost of disposing of the nation's household wastes.

That's a substantial increase and it will pain those who have to pay it. But the alternative is to continue poisoning the environment, and that is indefensible and unacceptable.

Letters

Money reason why Forest Service is best friend of lumber companies

This is in response to Brian Unnerstall's letter. Mr. Unnerstall failed to mention that he works for East Perry Lumber Company in Missouri, one of the largest veneer log companies in the four-state area. This is the company that is planning to clear-cut Cave Valley, the last known breeding area in Illinois of the Swainson's warbler. (Two pairs were recorded this year).

Unnerstall and I studied Forestry at SIU-C at the same time and had the same classes, but after reading his description of clear-cutting, I think he needs a refresher course.

In his letter, he described selective cutting. This is the type of cutting the pioneers and our grandfathers did. These men were not foresters, but had the seat-of-the-pants smarts to know that you only take a tree here or there and leave the rest. Then the woods can be used for other things.

Now, when your company clear-cuts, every tree is removed from two inches on up, in an area from fifteen to seventy acres. When East Perry gets done clear-cutting Cave Valley, 65 percent of the available hardwood will be removed in just 16 years. We are finding that this percentage is not an exception, so don't try to sell the public a bag of goods.

The tax payers will foot the bill for all road and bridge construction, so your company can get the logs out. It will cost us more than $100,000, while your company will pay only $63,000 for the timber. No wonder you say the Forest Service is doing such a fine job! But for who? The rest of the public that didn't get a dime for the sale, won't be able to do any type of hunting, hiking, picnicking, backpacking, camping, birding, or anything else in these areas for 20 to 30 years. Then, half the time, the trees come back as poplar and maple, instead of oak and hickory. This is a great multiple-use management plan, now, isn't it?

The present value of tourism in an 11 county area is more than $70,000,000 annually, forestry in the area is valued at $7,000,000 per year.

Shawnee Forest is a small national forest interspersed by private land and has high public use by local residents and visitors. This will definitely increase in the future. Selective cutting is the only way to satisfy multiple-use in our forests, and it will allow the public to use these areas after the timber company has gone.

In forestry, the future is now.

A decision today lasts long into the future. Selective cutting will also allow our smaller Illinois mills to be more competitive.

Mr. Unnerstall, go back to Missouri and clear-cut. We don't need or want it here. — David Nadolski, Carbondale.

Foresters should ban clear-cutting

I am one person who has given a lot of time lately to the movement for protection of our Shawnee National Forest lands. Make no mistake about this: If you are a songbird, a rare plant, an old oak tree, a solitary hunter or in some way using a beautiful area on United States of America lands in Southern Illinois that doesn't have a sign for protection, then kiss your place goodbye.

Within 30 short years some 150,000 acres that should be protected from the onslaught of our great American machines will again be torn asunder with little consideration or forethought.

There are more than 4.5 million acres of forested land in Illinois to provide for wood products, and we can't get it together to reserve even 10 percent.

How desperate are we? Will we be better off to cut and build roads into our regenerating remote areas.

If we're on an average-age rotation, then why are there no trees in the Alcorn Creek, Caney Creek, or Quarrel Creek clear-cuts 120 years old? Aren't these areas at least as valuable as a Rembrandt?

These lands should not be exploited by a few at the loss of the whole nation. If we don't defend our natural heritage, no one else will. If we stand up for it, others will value it also. Speak out now; it is too late after the trees are gone. — Randall Thomas, ACE member, Route 1, Brookport.

SIU-C had friend in Long

Many of us lost a great friend when Howard Long, the first journalism department chairman at SIU-C, died.

He was an inspiration to many — including my colleague, Senator Paul Simon, and I.

When Paul and I owned 12 Illinois newspapers together in the 1930s, Howard went out of his way to give us sound advice. Neither of us will ever forget that. —Sen. Alan J. Dixon, D-Illinois.

Doherty, 35, is assistant to the city manager and has been acting city manager several times in the past, Mayor Neil Dillard said.

Tuxhorn responded, "What could we possibly lose by waiting" to see if the legislature raises taxes that would support road construction.

Councilman Richard Morris said, "We have a situation where we need to make a decision."

Tuxhorn said the council has let IDOT bully it into making a decision in favor of the couple.

"We let IDOT tell us what to do. Why can't we tell them what we want to happen," Tuxhorn said.

The couple would make Main Street one-way west-bound and Walnut Street one-way eastbound. To complete the couple a street from the Brook Lane-Main Street intersection to the Walnut Street-Oakland Avenue intersection would be built.

bears ambled down from the mountains in search of juicier berries. Supplies dried up at higher elevations.

At Buffalo, N.Y., Lake Erie's temperature reached a record 80 degrees. Normal summertime lake temperatures are in the low to mid-70s.

Rivers and creeks almost everywhere were reduced to a trickle. Salt water threatened New Orleans' water supply. Barges ran aground on the Mississippi River.

Salt water also crept through the Chesapeake Bay, spreading a deadly parasite called MSX that killed off half the oyster supply, costing watermen millions of dollars, and forcing some to give up the business altogether.

Swimmers at Whitman Pond in Weymouth, Mass., complained they were bitten by sunfish; the city's Park and Recreation Department canceled swimming lessons for youngsters in early August. Joseph Bergin, an aquatic biologist for the state, said he believed the fish were acting up because of the heat.

In Houston, marine biologists said a shark and a dolphin followed rising salt water levels up the ship Channel and into a reservoir miles from their normal habitat. Jellyfish harassed swimmers.

In the West, millions of acres of lush timberland were reduced to ash by forest fires, some caused by nature and some by man, including 1.5 million acres burned in Yellowstone National Park. And U.S. Forest Service officials said the hot, dry weather created ideal breeding conditions for several species of timber-feeding beetles. In California, alone, officials estimated 2 billion board feet of timber would be killed off by beetles before the year is out.

Even gasoline prices were affected for a time by the summer's unusual weather. Analysts said speculation that refineries on the Mississippi might have to close because of rising salt water levels caused an early July spurt in prices on the New York Mercantile Exchange. The refineries — which never did close — are water-cooled and there were fears they would be damaged by corrosive salt water.

Chicago guitarist to give concert

Byassee Keyboard Co., 521 W. Main St., Marion, is the setting for a performance Monday by Chicago guitarist Tony Smith.

Sessions will be held at 5 and 7 p.m. and will include guitar tips as well as entertainment.

Smith's concert includes rock, jazz, bluegrass and country solos, and works by Bach.

He was one of ten guitarists selected to play at the nationally competitive Chet Atkins Guitar Festival when he was just 17 years old. He has appeared with Buck Owens and the Buckeroos, Ray Price and Waylon Jennings.

All interested music lovers and guitarists are invited to attend the free sessions. If planning to attend, call 993-8562 so that adequate seating will be provided.

The performance is sponsored by Byassee Keyboard Co. and Takamine Guitars.

Folk guitarist to play again on Saturday

By Wayne Wallace
Staff Writer

Making the world a better place with music is an important career goal for Jim Edfors.

A return engagement at 8 p.m. Saturday at the Newman Center is just one of the many irons this 26-year-old wandering minstrel has in the fire. Aside from concert tours, Edfors also is anticipating the release of his second folk-rock album, recorded live last February at the Red Herring Coffeehouse in Champaign.

In October he will take his acoustic guitar and a collection of his most inspiring songs to Operation Snowball, a weekend retreat for troubled adolescents. Edfors will serve as a counselor as well as an entertainer at the retreat, and will attempt to instill "a sense of cooperation, communication, and understanding."

Another avenue of his musical career that will allow Edfors to help others is a soon-to-be-released single entitled "Funny, It Don't Feel Like Christmas Eve." According to Edfors, the song "is about being homeless during the holidays."

Edfors says 100 percent of the profits from the record's sales will go to support homeless shelters in Chicago. He says the single may be released by Thanksgiving.

A True Confession

I don't know how it happened...at first, I was going to SIU, living at Thompson Point, and doing what SIU students normally do on the weekends: going up town to the strip and standing around with the rest of the people pretending to have fun. Then, one time I went to FRED'S. I couldn't believe it! Everybody was dancing, well maybe 75%, but when was the last time you've seen more than 10% of the crowd dancing up town? Even my friends who said they didn't like country music were dancing up a storm. You know, all those other places say they are "THE place to party", well they don't even know the meaning of the word. Well anyway, now I'm hooked on FRED'S. I confess-FRED'S has really spoiled me! Diana Davidson

Scientists develop a potential AIDS treatment

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — AIDS researchers Wednesday announced they have created a powerful virus-seeking protein that acts like a guided missile, homing in and killing cells actively producing the deadly AIDS virus.

The innovative weapon scientists call CD4-Pseudomonas exotoxin is the product of new research aimed at developing substances that can search out and destroy only those cells infected with the AIDS virus.

"In test tube experiments this distinguishes quite well between infected cells and uninfected cells," said Dr. Ira Pastan, who led the research at the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases in Bethesda, Md.

"Now we have to do tests in animals and people to see if it will really work."

Pastan calls the development an improvement over earlier genetically engineered CD4 proteins because he and his colleagues have hooked an AIDS-killing bacterial toxin to it.

CD4 treatments without the toxin began in AIDS patients last month. The object of those trials is to see if the manmade protein can block the Human Immunodeficiency Virus, which causes acquired immune deficiency syndrome, from entering healthy cells.

But the new work reported this week by Pastan and his colleagues in the British journal Nature reports the CD4-exotoxin combination can destroy human cells already infected with the AIDS virus, while sparing healthy cells that do not contain the virus.

"This is really a gorgeous piece of a molecular biology and biochemistry," commented biologist Stephen Kent of the California Institute of Technology.

Kent and his team have been studying the chemistry of the CD4 molecule and ways of using the genetically engineered proteins as decoys, tricking the virus into binding to the manmade substance.

Kent believes Pastan's work "is extremely promising as another potential approach to a possible AIDS therapy."

Neither method, he said, is the definitive approach to an AIDS cure.

Herpes test protects infants

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A new test that detects past genital herpes infections may help protect babies born to women unaware they have the disease, a researcher said Wednesday.

The test could prove to be a blessing for the estimated 1 in 5,000 American babies born each year infected with the sexually transmitted type of herpes.

Studies show 93 percent of the women bearing such children show no signs of the disease and did not know they had ever been infected.

The method, not yet commercially available, can for the first time identify anyone who has been stricken with herpes simplex type 2, commonly called genital herpes, said Dr. Ann Arvin, associate professor of pediatrics at Stanford University School of Medicine.

Without prompt, proper treatment, infected infants can suffer severe brain damage or even die, said Arvin, who will present her findings Thursday at the International Symposium on Medical Virology.

The test can distinguish between past infection by the genital herpes virus and herpes virus simplex 1 (facial herpes), a vital distinction, Arvin said.

Researchers in Seattle and Atlanta are working with similar tests, she said.

Herpes diagnosis can be made during the course of infection, but "until now there was no good way to check someone's blood and find out whether he had a past infection with type 1 or type 2 or both because there is such similarity between the two viruses," Arvin said in an interview.

"The only thing we could tell for certain was when a person had never had herpes," a group comprising only some 10 percent to 20 percent of the population.

Heartworm drug for dogs helps people

BOSTON (UPI) — A drug long used to protect dogs from heartworms appears highly effective for protecting humans against a disease caused by a parasitic worm common in Africa, government researchers reported Wednesday.

In a new study, the drug diethylcarbamazine protected every Peace Corps volunteer who took it from Loaasis, a disease also known as eyeworm because tiny worms crawl across the eye.

"It's quite effective," said Dr. Thomas Nutman of the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases.

Inflation up moderately in August

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Consumer prices rose a modest 0.4 percent while housing starts dipped 3.3 percent in August, the government said Wednesday, signaling that an overheated economy is subsiding along with fears of rapid inflation. The drought pushed up food costs a steep 0.6 percent while energy prices — due to gasoline price increases — soared 0.9 percent, the Labor Department said. Excluding food and energy, prices rose only 0.2 percent in August. "That's the most significant number," said David Wyss, an economist with Data Resources Inc. in Lexington, Mass. The improvement reflects a 1.6 percent plunge in apparel prices as retailers held larger-than-usual end-of-season sales of women's clothing, Wyss said. Apparel prices have declined 2.6 percent in three months.

Citizens substitute for police

SUTHERLIN, Ore. (UPI) — Each night Ralph and Irene Morris, two senior citizens, climb into their green Chevette and cruise the streets acting as police in a town gone broke.

Since August, the town of 4,000 people 160 miles south of Portland has been without its normal seven-man police force or its fire department, and City Hall is open for just two hours a day because city voters defeated a budget request in June for $539,422.

The dilemma will continue until at least Nov. 8, when voters will be asked to approve a reduced budget request for $418,716.

"The first night, youths drove through town on the main street at 50 mph shouting, 'The town belongs to us now,'" Irene Morris said.

But things have quieted down since a neighborhood watch group organized by the Morrises made it clear lawlessness would not be tolerated.

"When they see us coming, they scatter," she said.

Ralph, 68, and Irene, 70, patrol the city from 10 p.m. to 4 a.m. nightly in their car, equipped with radio and a spotlight. If they spot trouble, they call 911 and the Douglas County sheriff or State Police send squad cars.

"I worry about them, but there is not a lot we can do about it," said acting Mayor Dwayne Linton.

Police Chief Richard Schwartz, who has been unemployed since the layoffs, warned the couple they were taking on a dangerous assignment. But Ralph Morris said he served as a paratrooper in World War II and that he and his wife were not afraid.

The couple makes the nightly rounds of churches, schools and alleys behind businesses. Anything out of the ordinary is reported to the sheriff's office.

"We keep the doors locked and we don't get out of the car," said Irene. "They have told us not to have any direct contact with people."

But she said local teenagers often play cat and mouse with them, yelling obscenities and occasionally trying to send them on wild goose chases by making false calls for help on the CB radio band that the couple monitors.

"But we know what they are up to," Irene said. "We ignore them."

"The trouble is the kids have nothing to do in this town. There isn't even a theater anymore. They just sit in their cars and drive up and down ... at 50 miles an hour," she said.

Morris said she and her husband became interested in the neighborhood watch and began doing their own patrols about three years ago when a teenage girl was raped and murdered near Sutherlin.

DuQuoin football player excels despite handicap

DUQUOIN, Ill. (UPI) — "I may not have the best hands," said DuQuoin High School football star Shane Boyett, "but I think I've got good hand-eye coordination."

Not a particularly revealing quote for an all-conference receiver, except that Shane Boyett has only one hand — his right. What he calls his "stub" is where his left hand should be — a blunt fact of his life since birth.

He said he couldn't tie his shoes until he was 10.

"That was kind of embarrassing," said Boyett, the leading receiver on his team, which is unbeaten and ranks third in class 3A in this week's UPI Illinois coaches' poll.

He still can't go to his left on the basketball court, where he started some as a junior last season.

"If you can't dribble left handed, you're in trouble. And I cannot dribble left handed," he said, punctuating the sentence with a self-conscious laugh.

A few years ago he took typing, got up to 30 words per minute using the one-handed method and got an "A."

Shane Boyett doesn't dwell on what he can't do.

He can bench-press over 200 pounds — using an artificial hand — and can do as many push ups as anybody on the football team — using his stub.

"You know," said Don Calvert, a counselor at the school and a former football coach at nearby Pinckneyville High School. "He's about as normal as you can get, just about as well adjusted as you can be as a teenager."

"He made a one-handed catch in the playoffs last year you wouldn't believe. I'd venture to say some of the kids he plays against don't even notice that he has only one hand," Calvert said.

Ditto the referees.

"My first year, when I was a sophomore, I had one game with Waterloo," Boyett said. "I got called for holding three times left handed. I guess they said I was wrapping my stub around ... — it was a bunch of bull."

He was all-conference in football last season on both offense and defense, played basketball and made the state track meet in the discus. He's caught 36 passes.

USA women's basketball rolls past Yugoslavia

SEOUL, South Korea (UPI) — Teresa Edwards scored 23 points and Bridgette Gordon added 20, pacing the United States past Yugoslavia 101-74 Thursday in women's basketball at the Summer Olympics.

The Americans' speed was too much for Yugoslavia, which had been considered the U.S. team's top competition in Pool B and perhaps the entire eight-team field.

Instead, the Americans won going away for their second victory. Yugoslavia is 1-1. Each team has a game remaining in preliminary play — the U.S. team meets China and Yugoslavia plays C-

Williams said many people in the community had indicated they would donate money if he became fundraiser.

Associate Athletics Director Charlotte West is anticipating Williams' initiation into the athletics system at SIU-C.

"I know there are a lot of people that have wanted Wayne in our department in some capacity," she said. "I will be eager to view the additional support he'll give to Saluki athletics."

Field hockey looks to end losing streak

By Troy Taylor
Staff Writer

In searching for ways to halt the field hockey team's five-game losing streak, Coach Julie Illner said the first step is the elimination of mental errors.

"We can't be making silly little mental errors," Illner said. "Skill errors are going to happen, but we've been playing frantic at times."

"We have to play with speed — yes—but it has to be under control."

The Salukis are at Toledo, Ohio for two games this weekend, playing Toledo at 9 a.m. Friday and Ohio at 8 a.m. Saturday.

The team, which has allowed opponents to score an average of 2.3 per game, has a 2-5 record this season.

"We have given up so many penalty corners," Illner said. "We are fouling too much within the 25-yard line and the other team is scoring off follow-up plays to penalty corners."

Opponents have 48 penalty corner attempts to the Salukis' 38 this season.

Though SIU-C has had a 157 shots on goal, 26 more than their opponents, Illner said shot selection needs improvement.

"We're not aiming at the goal," she said. "We have to make the defense play the ball."

Cynthia Cooper scored 17 points, 9 on three 3-pointers, and Vickie Bullett added 10. Cooper's shot in the last second put the U.S. team over 100.

The United States blew open the game in the first half with runs of 11-0, 12-2 and 16-7.

Yugoslavia, playing a zone that thwarted Edwards' penetration, had an early 16-8 lead. The U.S. team couldn't get inside and was missing the 15-foot jumper from the corners.

U.S. Coach Kay Yow then inserted Gordon to help with the outside shooting. She and Edwards combined for six points in an 11-0 run that gave the U.S. team a 19-16 lead.

At that point, Yugoslavia's tallest player, 6-foot-7 Razija Mujanovic, hurt her right knee in a scramble under the U.S. goal and left the game on a stretcher. She later returned to the bench but played only a couple of minutes in the second half. The Yugoslavs' last lead was 22-21 with 8:35 left in the first half.

Bullett scored six points in a 12-2 run that put the Americans up 33-24.

Yugoslavia drew to within 39-33, then Cooper sank a 3-pointer to ignite a 16-7 run.

Rhoades downplays rivalry with ISU

By David Gallanetti
Staff Writer

The football team will take an 0-1 Gateway Conference record into Normal at 6:30 p.m. Saturday as they prepare to square off with league opponent Illinois State.

Head coach Rick Rhoades said the Salukis' rivalry with the Redbirds is something new to him, and he isn't worrying about it.

"I don't know as much about it as I should," he said. "I am concerned with this team and its development."

The fact that Illinois State enters the game at 0-3 leaves room for the Salukis to underestimate their opponent, Rhoades said.

"I think there is a tendency to do that, but we would be very foolish if we did."

Rhoades said the Salukis, 1-1 overall, must continue to improve in several areas to be successful.

"We have to do a much better job defensively. We can't give up 400 yards in a game and expect to win. We have to tackle more surely and we can't have any offensive turnovers."

Murray State outdid the Salukis in total yards Saturday 441 to 428, despite not getting the ball past the 24-yard line in the first quarter. The Pacers failed to make a first down until early in the second quarter.

Pacer quarterback Michael Proctor threw for 351 yards, a career high. Saluki quarterback Fred Gibson threw for 173 yards while freshman Scott Gabbert tallied 30 and half-back Antonio Moore 5.

"I thought we moved the ball much better, but we became inconsistent late in the game. We stopped ourselves at least five times on drives," Rhoades said.

Illinois State coach Jim Heacock said it will be an uphill battle for his Redbirds.

"SIU on film appears to be as good as any team in the Gateway," Heacock said. "I'm really impressed with their defensive talent."

"They do a good job combining the wishbone and the run and shoot offense, and what is interesting to me is they still throw extremely well" he said.

Softball faces test with two starters out

By Troy Taylor
Staff Writer

The women's softball team will be without two starters when it plays host to three other schools for the Saluki invitational this weekend.

Junior second baseman Shelly Gibbs and sophomore catcher Michele Davidovich are both sidelined with injuries.

Gibbs underwent arthroscopic surgery on her knee this week to observe the damage sustained while playing this summer. Davidovich is scheduled for surgery next week to determine the extent of a shoulder injury.

Coach Kay Brechtelsbauer said the team, which has an 1-1 fall exhibition record after splitting with Eastern Illinois last Thursday, must demonstrate it can perform even without those players in the lineup.

"We can't count on one person too much," Brechtelsbauer said. "We depended on Shelly too much last spring."

The Salukis' lineup will have sophomore Shannon Taylor filling in at second, while Karen Major and Jan Agnich share time as catcher. The rest of the infield remains the same, with Mary Jo Furbach at third, Cheryl Venorsky at shortstop and Angie LeMonnier at first.

Kim Johannsen, Kim Tummins and either Billie Ramsey or Major will start in the outfield.

The pitching staff will have Traci Furlow, recently recovered from bronchitis, junior transfer Jennifer Brown and freshman Dede Darnell.

"Our goal is to get into the championship game, to get timely hits and to play good defense," Brechtelsbauer said.

The Salukis open the tournament at noon Friday against John A. Logan. The Salukis take on Bradley at 2 p.m.

"Logan made a tremendous showing last year," Brechtelsbauer said. "They gave everyone a run for their money. They are not to be taken lightly."

The Salukis complete the round robin portion of the tournament at 10 a.m. Saturday against Southeast Missouri.

The tournament semifinals will be held at noon Saturday. The championship will be at 2 p.m. at the North IAW Field.

Wayne Williams fields questions during a press conference Wednesday morning in the Illinois Room of the Student Center. Williams, former assistant athletics director at Illinois, was named SIU-C's Director of Athletic Fundraising.

Williams prepared to tap local funds

By Lisa Werns
Staff Writer

Wayne R. Williams, the new SIU Foundation director of athletic development, was officially hired at a press conference Wednesday and begins his duties on Oct. 1.

"Wayne Williams fits the puzzle," SIU Foundation President Rex Ball said. "He has experience and expertise."

A former Salukis football and baseball standout, Williams said he is glad to be back in the Southern Illinois area. "I've come home," he said. "I'm ready to go back to work."

Williams again insisted that the reason he took the job at SIU-C was not because of the scandal caused by the resignation of Neale Stoner as University of Illinois athletics director. The opportunity to work with SIU-C's Athletic Director Jim Hart had prompted him to apply, he said.

"This was the only place I considered," Williams said.

"We've worked together before and it's good to see alumni from down the street come back to SIU," Hart said.

Williams discussed his new job description.

"Everybody wants a fundraiser," he said. "It's a strange occupation because

"You have to convince people to give you money, just as a recruiter has to convince you to come to their school. It is not a behind-the-desk job."

you have to be fired up. At 8 o'clock in the morning, you have to want to do this."

He added that fund-raising is similar to college recruiting. "You have to convince people to give you money, just as a recruiter has to convince you to come to their school. It is not a behind-the-desk job."

When asked if fund-raising would be difficult Williams said: "At Illinois, the people would call us to give money but when the teams weren't doing well the momentum was lost. People can come up with any excuse not to give."

"To use Jim Hart's name is good, but a name can die if the team dies," Williams said. "It's a big business, but it should be fun."

All eyes on Olympic track showdown

Once the competition starts, it will continue at a frantic pace, with an Olympic-record 42 gold medals to be decided. East Germany, the Soviet Union and the United States should collect the majority of medals.

SEOUL, South Korea (UPI) — The Olympic competition the world has waited 12 years to see begins Friday when track and field opens its nine-day gala session.

East and West superpowers collide in Olympic track and field for the first time since 1976 and the anticipation has American star Carl Lewis anxious to compete.

"Let's get it going," said Lewis, who won four gold medals in 1984 at a boycotted event and should meet Canadian Ben Johnson Saturday in the highlight event of the entire Games, the 100 meters.

Once the competition starts, it will continue at a frantic pace, with an Olympic-record 42 gold medals to be decided. East Germany, the Soviet Union and the United States should collect the majority of medals.

At last summer's World Championships, the East Germans won 31 medals; the Soviets 25 and the Americans

19. The U.S. squad, however, appears stronger this year.

"This is a better team than we had in Rome and we'll have a better focus on things," U.S. men's coach Stan Huntsman said. "I think it's the strongest U.S. team ever, the best collection of American athletes we've ever had."

The three powers are all strong in their traditional events. The Americans, led by Lewis, should dominate the men's sprints. East German women will be strong in the sprints and field events, but the emergence of Florence Griffith Joyner should help the United States close the gap in the sprints. The Soviets will score well in the field events and in women's middle- and long-distance races.

This competition will be loaded with blockbuster showdowns, but the Lewis-Johnson battle will top them all. Since Johnson defeated Lewis in world-record time at Rome last year, the buildup to this meeting has been extraordinary. When Lewis defeated Johnson last month in Zurich, Switzerland, it only heightened the hype.

Each must advance through three rounds to reach the final and, at 1:30 p.m. Saturday (10:30 p.m. CDT Friday), the Olympic spotlight will almost certainly focus on the world's two fastest men.

"This is the biggest meet of our careers," Lewis said. "LA (1984 Olympics) was big, but this is even bigger."

The result of the 100 will determine whether Lewis has a shot at repeating his 1984 four gold-medal performance. He'll also compete in the 200, the long jump and the 4 x 100-meter relay. No man has ever successfully defended titles in any of the individual events in which Lewis is competing.

Another Olympian who could attempt a Herculean feat at these Games is Moroccan middle-distance runner Said Aouita. He says he is considering running the 800, 1,500 and 5,000 meters. If he does, he would have to run 10 races in nine days.

The women's Olympics star should come from this group: Florence Griffith Joyner, who will compete in the 100, 200 and 4 x 100-meter relay; Jackie Joyner-Kersey, the world record-holder in the heptathlon and former record-holder in the long jump; East German Heike Drechsler, who will long jump and run the 100 and 200; and Mary Decker Slaney, who will be in the 1,500.
