Adamczyk, Bell win by wide margins

By Elizabeth Boscia
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Praising his organization for its work, Dennis Adamczyk, student body president-elect, said Thursday "considering the vote margin, a real mandate exists regarding our concerns."

Adamczyk, a member of the Environmental Action Party (EAP), which swept the Student Government elections, tallied 1,102 votes, about 500 more than his closest opponent.

In Wednesday's elections, 3,350 students voted compared to 2,345 in the spring 1976 election. Although Jon Denn, election commissioner, had hoped for a turnout of 8,000, he said he was very pleased with the results.

"All along we had gone on the assumption that it was going to be a close election," Adamczyk said. "I was really surprised."

E. Frank Marchlewski was a distant second with 609 votes. Sam Dunning followed with 527. Don Wheeler with 505, Garrick-Clinton Matthews, 412 and Peter Allison, 98.

Sue Bell, another Environmental Action Party candidate, was elected student body vice president with 1,192 votes, a 400-vote plurality. Cindy Michaelson trailed Bell with 780 votes.

Dennis Adamczyk

Chris McMullen followed with 660 and Jeff Mills, with 262.

In Student Senate elections, the Environmental Action Party also took overwhelming majorities. On the East Side, EAP candidates won all five seats.

The senate winners there were Dan Cosindine, 400 votes; David Adamczyk, Dennis' brother, 545; Mike Hampton,

Susan Bell

451; Laura Jean Ducey, 439; and Mike Curtiss, 383 votes.

Paul Edstrom followed with 243 votes; Jim Winkler, 239; Connie Ilescu, 234; Debbie Thornburgh, 231; Leo Cummings, 180; Sandra Greenberg, 170; Bob Ouellette, 167; Tom Kennedy, 157; Phil Klaffer, 140; and Peter Alexander, 83 votes.

On the West Side for seven seats, three EAP candidates, Tim Goodman, with 564 votes; Kathy Verner, 563; and Cindy Myrdek, 536, won posts. The other four seats were taken by Action Party candidates: D. Craig Turner, with 420 votes; Chris Guse, 453; Kirk E. Davis, 390; and Kevin Wright, 397.

Eugene Francowski followed with 376 votes, Rob White, 364; Bob L. Saal, 336; John Ovitiz, 331; Hamid Shams, 251; and Gary Figgins, 215.

At Thompson Point, where one and one-half senate seats were open, EAP candidate Susan Cairns won a full-term post with 178 votes. The half-term position was deadlocked between Kelly Hughes and Irma Villarreal, who both earned 119 votes. Kelly Carls was close behind with 115 votes.

According to Denn, if both candidates want to pursue the post, a run-off election to decide the deadlocked seat will be conducted at Thompson Point.

Although no candidates were on the ballot from both University Park and Brush Towers, write-in candidate W. Raggio from Brush Towers and write-in J. Wade of University Park each took senate seats.

No official results from the student voter referendum or the IPIRG Board elections have been released.

First woman student trustee elected

Byrnes pledges effort to obtain official board vote

By Mark Edgar
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Betsy Byrnes, who easily defeated four challengers to become the first woman student trustee, paid tribute to her campaign workers Thursday and said she will lobby for legislation to give her an official vote on the SIU Board of Trustees.

Byrnes, a second-year law student, said she "appreciated" the campuswide support for her campaign, adding, "I'm not sure why I won."

Wednesday's results showed that it was Byrnes with 849 as compared to 596 for her closest rival, incumbent Robb Seely. Robert Jenkins, a graduate student in sociology, received 591 votes; Craig Shanklin, a junior in psychology, 454; and Tom McEllen, a junior in political science, 424.

Byrnes drew most of her support from the polling areas at Thompson Point, where many law students live, and the Health Service, located near the School of Law.

Because a student trustee's vote on the board is only advisory, Byrnes said she will "do as much as I can" in support of legislation introduced in the Illinois

General Assembly to change that vote to an official one.

She said earlier that if the student trustee had voting power, board members would be less discriminatory. "They can't treat students as lesser members," she said.

Seely said that he was "relieved" that he wouldn't have to go through another term as student trustee. But he said that it was a "worthwhile experience."

Seely said that he "anticipates helping" Byrnes in her transition by offering her a "good orientation."

"By the time she takes over, I hope she knows more than I do right now," Seely said Thursday.

A conflict between one opponent, Jenkins, and the Student Government election commissioner, which allowed an extension in the deadline for filing petitions, prompted Byrnes to enter the race, she said.

"It seemed that people weren't taking it seriously," she said.

Jenkins, who will complete his second semester at SIU in May, blamed his loss on the dispute over his filing petition, which was challenged because of the amount of time that he has been enrolled at the University.

Jonathan Denn, election commissioner, removed Jenkins' name from the ballot, citing a Student Government constitutional by-law which requires candidates for student trustee to attend SIU as a full-time student two consecutive semesters prior to an election.

Because Jenkins was the only official candidate for student trustee before his petition was challenged, Denn extended the filing deadline for one week, allowing the four other candidates to run in Wednesday's election.

Jenkins appealed the action to the Trustee Judicial Board, which ruled that he and the other candidates should be listed on the ballot.

"That mess cost me the election," Jenkins said. "I would have been the only one on the ballot had it not been for the new deadline."

Jenkins added that he would not file a complaint with Student Government on the outcome, saying he "did not hold any hard feelings."

"I'm sure Betsy will do a good job and I plan to stay involved with Student Government," he said.

Number of tuition waivers received by undergraduates cut 60 per cent

By Ann Schottman
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The number of tuition waivers for SIU undergraduates for the 1977-78 academic year will be cut almost 60 per cent from the number given this year in accordance with an Illinois Bureau of Higher Education (IBHE) directive.

Sue Ann Pace, associate vice president for academic affairs and research in charge of services, said the IBHE decided that it would reimburse state institutions for tuition waivers for only 2 per cent of each undergraduate student body. Because the decision went into effect for the 1976-77 school year, SIU was not reimbursed for the number of tuition waivers it awarded which exceeded two per cent of the undergraduate population. The money to pay for those tuition waivers for which SIU was not reimbursed came from the internal operating budget, which is composed of state funds.

Each school or college is allocated funds to award tuition waivers. Waivers are awarded according to SIU Board of Trustees guidelines which state that students who receive tuition waivers should have attained high levels of academic achievement, and need financial assistance.

A uniform minimum grade point average will not need to be maintained for a tuition waiver, as it has in the past.

About 675 SIU students, excluding athletes, received tuition waivers this year. Next fall 285 tuition waivers, excluding athletic tuition waivers, will be awarded.

Athletic tuition waivers will also be decreased at some time in the future, Pace said, but she is not sure when that will be. The athletic department is making an effort to receive funding for tuition waivers and other services from other sources such as contributions, Pace said.

Harvey Welch, dean of student life, added that the athletic department is trying to become "totally self-supporting" through gifts and fundraising.

The IBHE directive to decrease tuition waivers to 2 per cent of the undergraduate student body will not affect Law School students, who are considered professional students, or graduate students. It will not affect SIU Civil Service employe tuition waivers either, Pace said. Tuition waivers for these three groups will continue at the same rate.

The IBHE directive will not affect those students attending school this summer, because SIU will honor all commitments for tuition waivers that have already been made by academic deans. However, Pace added, the deans probably have not awarded as many tuition waivers as in-past summers.

"All of the deans would like more tuition waivers, Pace said. "All of

Gilbert officially named to IBHE by Thompson

John G. Gilbert, a Carbondale attorney, was one of two men appointed to the Illinois Board of Higher Education (IBHE) Thursday by Gov. James Thompson.

Gilbert, 65, a Republican state senator from 1960-1973, was originally named to the board Feb. 23 by Thompson during a speech before the Greater Carbondale Area Chamber of Commerce banquet.

Gilbert, citing his background in the legislature, said that he "hoped to have insight into the problems of higher education."

A cosponsor of the bill that created the IBHE in 1961, Gilbert also spent 12 years on the senate's higher education committee.

Gilbert has said he favors a moderate hike in tuition if the costs of education go up. However, this must be matched by increases in scholarship funding, he said.

He also said that students in advanced educational areas such as law, medicine and architecture should bear a greater part of the cost of their education.

The Associated Press also reported that Thompson announced his selection of Rey W. Brune, 53, of Rock Island, an employe of Deere & Co. of Moline, to the board.

Brune replaced Edward Lindsay of Decatur, who retired when his term ended earlier this year, while Gilbert was named to take over the seat held by Robert Ziebarth, whose term also expired this year.

Dr. Diego Redondo, 40, of Deerfield and James M. Unland, 55, Pekin, were reappointed to the board.

The board oversees operations at the state universities and community colleges.

The governor also announced he has appointed Albert D. McCoy, 50, who retired this week as mayor of Aurora after 12 years in office, as chairman of the Illinois Liquor Control Commission. The post pays $9,000 a year.

News Roundup

World leaders gather for talks on west

LONDON (AP) — More than 100 of the world's most influential people, including former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, have been invited to gather privately at the 25th Bilderberg conference this weekend to discuss the course of the West.

But the founder of the series, disgraced Prince Bernhard of The Netherlands, will not be present when the session opens Friday at the sumptuous seaside Imperial Hotel at Torquay, about 140 miles southwest of London on the Devon coast.

The plush hotel where the meeting will be held has barred all journalists from its grounds during the session. Although other guests will be staying there, Bilderberg participants will be cloistered in a special area where they will eat, sleep and meet surrounded by tight security, van der Beugel said.

U.S. forms South West Africa transition fund

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration has decided to set up a $100-million contingency fund to ease the transition to an independent Namibia once the territory is set free by South Africa, informed sources said Thursday night.

South Africa's retention of the predominantly black territory is opposed by most members of the United Nations, and the administration supports the transition to a majority rule. The fund is designed to assist white landowners who sell to blacks as well as give economic support to a black-run Namibian government once it is formed.

Carter, Soares discuss Portugal's economy

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter met with Portuguese Prime Minister Mario Soares on Thursday to discuss joint strategy for gaining international financial support for Portugal's faltering economy.

The Carter administration has taken the lead in encouraging large-scale international financial support for Portugal, which has been plagued recently by worker rebellion, a 30-per-cent inflation rate, high unemployment, lagging production and political agitation from both extremes. The administration has asked Congress for a $300-million balance-of-payments allocation for Portugal as part of a proposed $1.5-billion package to which other nations are being asked to contribute.

Supplemental, Social Security benefits hiked

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nearly 35.5 million Americans who receive Social Security or Supplemental Security Income will get a 5.9-per-cent increase in benefits July 1.

The size of the automatic increase, announced Thursday by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, reflects the rise in the cost of living during the 12 months that ended March 31.

Larger checks will be going to 33.4 million Social Security recipients and 4.3 million aged and disabled recipients of federal Supplemental Security Income payments. About 2.5 million persons receive checks under both programs.

Senate okays business tax breaks

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate voted Thursday to give businesses tax breaks totaling $4.1 billion in a tax-cut bill designed to stimulate the economy.

President Carter had recommended deleting the business tax breaks along with the $50 tax rebates or payments to some 200 million Americans. The Senate still must act on a Republican proposal for permanent tax cuts for individuals. Carter said he will veto a tax bill containing these.

Carter's energy goals high, coal industry says

By Raymond M. Clark
Associated Press Writer

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — America's coal industry believes it can produce 1 billion tons of coal annually by 1985, as proposed by President Carter, but it warns that strict environmental standards may prevent consumers from using the coal.

"The productive capacity is there," Rex Chaney, a spokesman for the National Coal Association, said Thursday. "We made a survey less than a year ago that indicates that the industry is planning about 500 million tons of new capacity over the next 10 years, so the plans are on the drawing board to achieve this objective."

"A whole lot depends on what the Congress does in response to the administration line and how vigorously the administration pushes some of the more restrictive environmental proposals," he said.

During a speech before a joint session of Congress on Wednesday, Carter said that one of the goals of his national energy policy "will be conversion from scarce fuels to coal whenever possible," and called for an annual production increase of 400 million tons. About 665 million tons of coal were produced last year.

The industry currently faces a two-fold obstacle to increased production: proposed federal surface mine legislation that would dictate mining practices and reclamation, and clean air standards governing the use of coal by industry and utilities.

The Clean Air Act of 1970 set restrictions on the amount of sulfur emissions produced from burning coal. However, an industry spokesman said utilities used about 200 million tons of coal last year that were technically in violation of the clean air standards.

Other factors to be considered are the availability of capital to finance expansion of coal operations, availability of rail transportation to move the product, and long-standing labor-management struggles, the spokesman said.

U.S. Steel Corp. President David Roderick estimated that utilities will need a whopping $70 billion to convert to coal-fired plants

Hester optimistic on bargaining vote

By Steve Lambert
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Lee Hester, chairman of the Civil Service Committee for Collective Bargaining, said Wednesday he is optimistic the SIU Board of Trustees will call for an election next month to determine if range employees want collective bargaining.

A board decision to place a range employee resolution requesting such an election on the May meeting agenda is a "good sign" that the board has become sympathetic to range employees' desires, Hester, who is also chairman of the Civil Service Employees Council, said.

At last Thursday's meeting, Hester asked the board to consider a resolution asking that the Illinois Labor Relations Board be allowed to conduct an election to determine whether range employees want bargaining.

The board voted unanimously to take into consideration Hester's request and place it on the May agenda if Hester provides the board with more information on exactly how the Labor Relations Board conducts the election.

Hester said he has since provided the board with that information. However, he is still unsure as to whether he will be allowed to speak at the May meeting.

Hester said he is not discouraged that the board would not act on the resolution immediately. "At least we got on last month's agenda," he said.

Hester's request to the board was an appeal of SIU President Warren Brandt's refusal to allow such an election to be conducted. "We've tried all administrative channels, so its time to go to the board," Hester said last week.

Cosponsors of bills see chance for bargaining OK

By Steve Lambert
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Cosponsors of two faculty collective bargaining bills introduced into both houses of the Illinois General Assembly say chances are "better than ever" that the legislature will approve such a bill this year.

Rep. Rolland Tipword, D-Taylorville, and Sen. Robert Lane, D-Chicago Heights, said Thursday that less upstate opposition and a campaign promise by Gov. James Thompson suggest that the legislature is becoming more responsive to teacher unionization.

"There's a new mood in the senate," Lane said.

In mid-March, Tipword and Rep. Larry Stuffle, D-Charleston, introduced to the House a collective bargaining bill which would cover nearly 200,000 employees in all public education institutions in Illinois, including higher education.

The bill would not only give unionization rights to those Illinois faculty members not allowed to bargain collectively, but would also regulate collective bargaining standards for the 70 per cent of the state's public teachers who are unionized. The bill is being lobbied for most heavily by the Illinois Educational Association (IEA).

Earlier in April, Lane and Sen. Vince Demuzio, D-Carlisle, introduced a similar bill in the senate. This bill is also being lobbied for by the IEA.

Several other collective bargaining bills awaiting legislative discussion deal for the most part with bargaining rights for all state employees.

Similar bills were introduced into the house and passed during each of the last three years. Upon reaching the senate, each of those bills were either blocked in committee or rejected by the full senate.

Lane, the first Cook County senator ever to introduce a faculty collective bargaining bill, said that although he has not been pressured in the past by Chicago area senators, Chicago opposition has been the main roadblock to passage of a bargaining bill.

He said, though, that the overall relationship between Chicago and the rest of the state is improving, and that that opposition will not be as intense as in the past.

"If it still is a major roadblock, there's nothing that says we can't exclude Chicago and Chicago teachers from any bargaining agreement," Lane said. "However, I'm pretty sure we won't have to resort to that."

Lane added that he doesn't expect the death of Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley, a long time opponent of statewide faculty collective bargaining, to have much of a positive impact on the possibility of a teacher unionization bill being passed.

Daley's opposition to faculty collective bargaining may not have been as influential in the legislature as some legislators have claimed, Lane said.

Tipword said he is not sure exactly how much impact Daley's death will have. "We'll just have to wait and see."

Tipword said that although the senate has been relatively unsympathetic to faculty unionization in the past, he expects his bargaining bill to pass.

"I wouldn't have sponsored it if I didn't think it would pass," he said.

Last Thursday, the SIU Board of Trustees voted to hold off acting on collective bargaining until the state legislature approves a bargaining measure.

Senate okays controversial grant program

SPRINGFIELD (AP) — A bill that would have abolished the controversial General Assembly scholarship program was defeated Thursday by the Illinois Senate.

The scholarships have come under fire because lawmakers can give them to students without regard to financial need or scholastic ability.

The program allows each legislator to give two scholarships to students to attend a state university or college, and costs taxpayers an estimated $750,000 a year.

The bill to abolish the program was defeated on a 19-33 vote.

An Associated Press investigation in 1974 showed that some legislators were giving scholarships to their own children and to sons and daughters of cronies and campaign contributors.

"I do not believe public office-holders should determine who shall receive a scholarship and who shall not," said Sen. Dawn Clark Netsch, D-Chicago, sponsor of the bill to repeal the program.

Most recently, the scholarship program drew fire after the University of Illinois refused to disclose the names of recipients of more than $600,000 in scholarships awarded by General Assembly members.

Democrat Sen. Richard M. Daley, son of the late Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley, opposed the bill to abolish the program.

"If a senator doesn't want to give a scholarship, you don't have to, and maybe you can save the state $750,000," he said during floor debate.

But some of those voting against the measure said they give the awards to worthy middle-income students who can't qualify for other scholarships but still need financial help.

Tuition waivers to be cut 60 per cent

us wish that we would be reimbursed for more tuition waivers, and we regret that this action is necessary. Nobody is happy."

There has been some "concern and confusion" among students about the change in the number of tuition waivers awarded, Pace said. "We've just recently come to a determination of the number of tuition waivers that will go to each college and the procedure" for funding the waivers.

Since a total of 80 tuition waivers has been allocated for the offices of Admissions and Records and International Education, each school or college will only be able to award tuition waivers to one per cent of its undergraduate enrollment.

Gordon White, director of the Student Work and Financial Assistance Office, said students who have had their tuition waivers cut may come to the office for help in finding other forms of financial aid.

Welch said there are other forms of financial aid for eligible students. "And there is always work."

Pace said the offices of both White and Welch work closely with students and will "respond to special student problems created by this reduction."

STS program funds spent, no more appeals accepted

The Student to Student Grant program (STS), which awarded more than $98,500 to about 600 students this semester, will accept no more appeals, Robert Eggertsen, student work and financial assistance counselor, said Friday.

Eggertsen, who this week has been reviewing grievances filed by students who did not receive an STS grant, said

The offices will try to cooperate very closely so that they can maximize resources, Welch said. There has been an over-all cooperative effort that started in September, to try to find a way to improve over-all services to students, Welch said.

the program has exhausted its funds.

"The amount of money set aside for appeals has been spent," he said, adding that the University paid out nearly $14,000 after appeals.

The STS program receives student contributions in the form of a refundable fee collected at registration and state matching funds.

Opinion & Commentary

EDITORIAL POLICY—The general policy of the Daily Egyptian is to provide an open forum for discussion of issues and ideas. Opinions expressed on the editorial pages do not necessarily reflect those of the administration or any department of the University. Signed editorials represent the opinions of the authors only. Unsigned editorials represent a consensus of the Daily Egyptian Editorial Committee, which is composed of the student editor-in-chief, the editorial page editor, a member elected by the student news staff, the managing editor and an editorial writing instructor.

LETTERS POLICY—Letters to the editor are invited and writers may submit them by mail or in person to Editorial Page Editor, Daily Egyptian, Room 1240, Communications Building. Letters should be typewritten and should not exceed 250 words. Letters which the editors consider libelous or in poor taste will not be published. All letters must be signed by the authors. Students must identify themselves by classification and major, faculty members by department and rank, non-academic staff members by department and position. Writers submitting letters by mail should include addresses and telephone numbers for verification of authorship. Letters for which verification cannot be made will not be published.

Editorial Brandt's tenure?

The Board of Trustees' recent decision to annually evaluate the presidents of both SIU campuses will neglect those persons whose University lives are most directly affected by a president's decision—namely, students and faculty members.

The decision came April 14 when the board voted to annually evaluate the presidents. Under the plan, students and faculty members would be allowed to participate in the evaluations only once in every five years.

When one considers that SIU-C President Warren Brandt collects an annual salary of over $50,000 and pays no rent on the million-dollar University House he lives in, evaluations are a must. At SIU-C, only one such evaluation has occurred since 1973.

However, board members, unpaid public appointees who meet with presidents maybe 10 to 12 times a year, are obviously not the ones who should make the annual evaluations.

Students and faculty members are directly affected by the dictates of campus presidents. Those presidents are, among other things, student and faculty representatives to the Board of Trustees.

Faculty members are evaluated annually by the persons who are most directly affected by faculty activities—the students. Strangely enough, administrators, who do not have as much daily contact with faculty members as students do, wind up evaluating faculty only every three or four years, through the tenure and promotion process.

Surely, students and faculty should take part in presidential evaluations.

However, the board, in setting its policy, neglected students and faculty members, and indeed displayed little confidence in the opinions of both constituencies.

IRS needs computerized system

By James J. Kilpatrick

It doesn't happen often in the column-writing business, but it happens sometimes: You start into a controversial subject, and you come down on the wrong side. Today finds me in bed with the Internal Revenue Service. Zounds! I have seldom been so embarrassed.

The controversy involves an effort by the IRS to develop and to install a brand-new, marvelously efficient system of computerized data retrieval. This marvel would be known as the Tax Administration System, or TAS. It would cost upwards of $750 million over the next several years. Once geared up, the system could produce five years of a taxpayer's records in a matter of seconds.

When the IRS outlined its plan to the House Ways and Means Committee last year, Chairman Al Ullman had some prudent reservations. He wondered if TAS could become "a system of harassment, surveillance, and political manipulation." He was concerned that individual privacy might not be sufficiently protected. He asked the congressional Office of Technology Assessment to look into the matter.

In February the OTA released a report that tended, in general, to confirm Mr. Ullman's apprehensions. The OTA raised several hundred questions about the proposed system—how it would operate, what risks it entailed, what safeguards would be installed. Because I am suspicious of machinery I do not understand, and because I feel passionate about protecting a citizen's privacy, I launched into the OTA report with a confident conclusion in view: Damn the computers, and full speed ahead!

Now I dunno. The arguments advanced by the IRS in favor of this system strikes me as rational, reasoned and persuasive. The OTA's thinly veiled arguments against it strike me as conjectural, hazy and just possibly paranoid. If the IRS can prove that future benefits would recapture the heavy starting-up costs, I'd go for a green light.

The IRS now operates under a computerized system designed in 1958. Since then, the state of the art has advanced unbelievably. The proposed new system would operate through 10 interconnected regional centers. All of a taxpayer's records, which now tend to get scattered about, would be assembled and encoded. The system would function at twice the speed of the present system. In theory, inquiries that now take four or five weeks could be processed in two.

Yes, the TAS contains some worrisome risks. An estimated 40,000 IRS employees would have access to the data. The system would lend itself to interconnection with other governmental and military data retrieval systems. It is conceivable that unscrupulous IRS officials, working in conspiracy with political figures or even in conspiracy with the press, could leak data calculated to damage or to destroy a particular individual target.

The IRS responds to these inchoate apprehensions by pointing to an impressive array of safeguards.

rates, greater accuracy and speed in the dispatch of mail to the address is not in the public interest.

If the public wants lower postal rates, accuracy and speed in the dispatch and delivery to the address then it appears the public must write to their Congressmen to get results.

Return the book, maintain status

To Whom It May Concern:
Among the items you stole from my car last Tuesday was a book entitled "Transcendental Magic." It was acquired through the Inter-Library Loan System and does not belong to S.I.U. It must be returned to Bryn Mawr College to maintain our good status in this system. Please return it to Morris Library, as the book itself has very little retail value.

Get experience from available facts

In reply to Don Petros' letter in the April 12 Daily Egyptian, I would like to remind him that virtually all the things that he reads in his college textbooks are "second-hand opinions." If he is to be consistent in his way of determining truth he would be as doubtful about the theories of homo sapiens' evolution and such things as the very existence of Bombay, India as he would be about Jesus' resurrection. The point I am trying to make is that by his experiential-oriented way of determining what is fact he is not able to know anything unless he actually experiences it himself. This viewpoint therefore completely eliminates any history from being reliable.

The resurrection is history I'd like Mr. Petros to consider this: If Jesus was the Son of God, and if He rose from the dead, then couldn't we conclude that He is alive today?

And if this is true, doesn't that make Him relevant and worthy of our investigation into how we can experience Him in our daily lives? Now here is where experience should come in: we each should examine the evidence for ourselves and be honest and open to God and want to experience what is true.

The world is full of thousands of ideas to be experienced. But let's draw on our experience from the facts that are available. I'm reminded of Paul's words: "If Christ did not rise from the dead, your faith is in vain."

Editor's note: This is the final part of a series examining U.S. involvement in Vietnam. Part One, which dealt with the question of American M.I.A.'s and Ho Chi Minh, appeared in Thursday's paper.

America gradually became more deeply entrapped in the quicksand of Southeast Asia from which there would be no escape and no peace with honor. By the fall of Dienbienphu in May 1954, the U.S. was providing the French with almost all the military aid needed to fight the war, according to Pentagon records.

The formal peace treaty ending the French Indochina War was signed in Geneva two months later. It partitioned Vietnam at the 17th parallel. According to the terms of the treaty, the partition was to come to an end in July 1956 when general elections, supervised by the International Commission, would create a single government for the entire country.

The Eisenhower administration blocked free elections in 1956 because there was little doubt that the majority of the Vietnamese people would have selected Ho Chi Minh as their leader. Instead Eisenhower (through Sec. of State John Foster Dulles who ran American foreign policy during the 1950s) propped up the corrupt Ngo Dinh Diem in Saigon.

As the guerrilla war intensified in the South, the Kennedy Administration increased the number of advisors and the extent of military aid. It was Lyndon Johnson who expanded the war and compounded the tragedy which would tear America apart and claim 50,000 of its best and brightest young men. He sent the first American combat troops and ordered the first American air strikes of the war.

Johnson and Nixon's bombing campaigns (which they felt would shorten the war and bring the illusive "light at the end of the tunnel" within grasp) slaughtered thousands of civilians and left countless others homeless.

Both Presidents promised postwar economic aid to the Vietnamese. In a letter to Dong in 1973, Richard Nixon promised $3.25 billion in reconstruction aid. Vietnamese Vice Foreign Minister Ngo Dien recently referred to the Nixon letter but added, "This is not a question of what amount of money. It is a question of responsibility, honor and conscience, and it does not relate to Nixon — it relates to the United States."

After World War II the United States helped rebuild Europe. It gave needed economic aid to Japan and Germany as well. It helped rebuild the very cities which American bombs had destroyed. Today both countries are among the most stable and trusted friends the U.S. has.

Perhaps the Carter Administration cannot be held accountable for Nixon's promises, but neither can it turn its back on the destruction left by the long years of senseless war.

According to Time correspondent Strobe Talbott, who accompanied the Woodcock delegation, the Vietnamese are hard at work reconstructing the damage done by U.S. bombs. A bombed-out wing of Bach Mai hospital has been left in ruins as a memorial to the victims of the 1972 Christmas bombing. But there are few such deliberate reminders of the war, either in the landscape or in conversation. Posters celebrating the accuracy of roof-top anti-aircraft gunners have been replaced by ones exhorting greater industrial and agricultural production.

There were war crimes and criminals enough on both sides. I can still close my eyes and picture mangled bodies of women and children slaughtered in a ditch at My Lai. I see a weeping father curse Richard Nixon and his B52's for killing his entire family in a bombing raid (from the documentary movie "Hearts and Minds").

Wilfred Owen was a World War I poet, he was killed by a burst of machine gun fire one week before the armistice was signed. In his poem "Strange Meeting," he escapes from battle only to realize he's been killed. Another man speaks to him from the void they now share:

"I am the enemy you killed, my friend,
I knew you in this dark; for so you frowned
Yesterday through me as you jabbed and killed.
I parried; but my hands were loath and cold.
Let us sleep now ..."

The remains of 11 American airmen recently returned to the United States had rested in a Hanoi cemetery next to a mass grave for Vietnamese killed in the bombing. The dead on both sides have found peace. It is to the living that the American people have a moral obligation. We must extend to the Vietnamese people the same hand of friendship and reconciliation we gave the Japanese and Germans three decades ago. We must help rebuild what has been destroyed. The mistakes, hatred and mistrust of the past must be buried along with the dead.

President Lyndon B. Johnson escalated the United States involvement in the Vietnam conflict.

How city discourages business

By Bonnie Gambler
Associate Editor

They say the Lord works in mysterious ways. So does the Carbondale Liquor Commission. A strange thing happened at Monday's commission meeting. A proposed restaurant-bar was denied a Class A liquor license because of the inadequacy of parking in the downtown area of Carbondale.

Well, it's the commission's prerogative to deny a petition for a liquor license. Only in this case, with a 3-2 vote to deny the request, it did it for the wrong reasons.

The request came from Edgar Enterprises, Inc. of Carbondale, which proposed a restaurant and lounge for the lot directly behind Dairy Queen, running from Hospital Drive to Cherry Street. Two existing residential structures were to be removed.

According to city planning codes, businesses in the Business-Primary zoned area of the city are not under obligation to provide off-street parking for their establishments. It is the city's job (or problem) to provide parking.

In this case, Edgar Enterprises had met all the specifications required by the city staff—site planning, fire, police, urban renewal, public works, community development and so on. Gary Lotz, president of the corporation, said he had received approvals for the proposed business at each step in the city hierarchy. Even the Carbondale Liquor Advisory Board, which checks out license requests before they go to the commission, gave the request for a Class A license (which includes liquor, beer and wine) unanimous approval.

The final step in the process is commission approval. And it probably would have been granted if the First National Bank of Carbondale hadn't exerted its considerable political pressure, which helped convince three commission members that adding another business to the downtown area would considerably worsen the existing parking problem.

George Twomey, a Carbondale attorney representing the First National Bank, told the council that the bank was concerned about the business's possible effect on the bank's large, restricted parking lot, which is located directly south of the proposed site. The bank's private lot is often used by people frequenting the downtown area.

It's natural for the bank to be concerned about its property, but several points should be made here. First, even without a liquor license, Edgar Enterprises could go ahead with its plans to open a restaurant on the site. All the necessary approvals had been given. The parking problem would not get worse simply because of the absence of liquor on the premises.

Second, as Robert Schulhof, attorney for Edgar Enterprises pointed out to the commission, the parking problem is something which should be worked out on the restaurant's site plan and not before the liquor commission. Mayor Neal Eckert and Councilman Joe Dakin agreed with that argument and voted in favor of granting the license. The corporation has already received approval from the city Planning Commission for the proposed business.

Third, another valid point made by Schulhof at the council meeting was that if businessmen have to spend an additional $50,000 or more on another parking lot, it will be a definite discouraging influence on downtown redevelopment.

Commissioner Hans Fischer, who opposed the granting of the license along with commission members Archie Jones and Helen Westberg, expressed concern over the corporation's ability to renovate the structure to the point where it would comply with city codes.

"An old wooden building shouldn't be in the downtown area," Fischer said Wednesday.

Schulhof pointed out to Fischer at the commission meeting that if fire safety restrictions were not met, the business would not be issued an occupancy permit.

In a candidate forum for City Council candidates on April 5, Fischer said growth and development in the city could be improved by expanding businesses and industry. "The downtown redevelopment is a great area for joint cooperation (between businesses and city groups)," Fischer said.

Fischer's son, Richard, is manager of Das Fass, a bar on South Illinois Avenue, which is a renovated, wooden building.

Dakin said Wednesday that he was sorry the license had not been granted. As for Fischer's concerns about fire safety, Dakin said he thought the city fire commission does a "darn good job. They would have inspected it to make certain it met the codes," he added.

Dakin said it appeared to him that the parking problem was the reason for the denial of the license. "In my estimation, it should not have entered into it," he said. "I didn't think it was a legitimate reason (for denying the license)," although Dakin said he could sympathize with the bank's concerns.

Upgrading the downtown area is the city's responsibility, Dakin said and added that he thought the liquor license petition was a "legitimate request from responsible people."

Although Dakin agreed that pressure from the bank probably influenced the commission's decision, Fischer said he didn't think it did.

At the same meeting in which the request by Edgar Enterprises was denied, the commission unanimously approved an expansion request from Pizza King, a bar on South Illinois Avenue, two blocks away from the proposed site of the restaurant and lounge.

Fischer said he thought the two blocks made a considerable difference in the granting of the two requests. "There's a lot more parking up there in terms of need," he said.

So it seems the commission has created its own "Catch-22" for the downtown area. It won't grant a liquor license to people who are interested in spending over $100,000 to upgrade a portion of the downtown area unless some agreement can be reached concerning the parking problem. But if businesses are to be penalized for a problem that is the city's to deal with, will it also keep other merchants from spending money to bring business into the downtown area? If the city officials are really concerned with developing the downtown area, one would assume they would be happy that someone is willing to spend the time, money and effort involved in beginning a new establishment.

It would seem that the commission had nothing to lose by granting the license. After all, even if the business failed after it opened, extensive redevelopment would have already taken place in an area that needs it.

Obviously there were other factors which influenced the decisions of those who voted against the petition.

Outstanding journalism teacher picked

By Andria Strammanis
Student Writer

Wendell Crow, a 34-year-old SIU journalism instructor, has been chosen the outstanding teacher in the School of Journalism for the current academic year.

He was picked for the award by representatives of four journalism and advertising student groups and the editor-in-chief of the Daily Egyptian.

"I'm flattered and very appreciative," said Crow, who also had been voted outstanding journalism teacher in 1972.

"It's being rewarded for something I love to do," he said. He added, however, "It is hard to compare teaching styles."

Crow is teaching his last semester at SIU because he has been denied tenure. He has been an instructor here since 1969.

Though he was denied tenure, Crow said he does not feel that was the reason he received the award.

"I don't really take it as an expression of sympathy," he said. "I would hope that the people who made the selection did so within the rules of the competition."

Crow, who specializes in graphics and newspaper layout and design, said he is "in the process of accepting a position" at California State University (CSU) at Fullerton. His teaching responsibilities would be "similar to what I'm doing now."

Located about 40 miles from Los Angeles, a major publishing center, CSU would offer Crow and his students increased opportunities for field trips and interaction with professionals. Speaking of Southern Illinois he said, "One of the biggest problems I've had is with the limitations of the area."

The job at CSU would also mean a change for his family.

"We camp a lot," Crow said. "We'll be looking forward to the opportunities."

He said he thinks he received the award because, "I make an effort to do good teaching. I enjoy working with students."

Homemakers unit to be organized

A Homemakers Extension Association Unit will be organized in Carbondale at 7 p.m. Tuesday in Room 133 of the Home Economics Building.

The association is an educational organization is open to all women. Each month meetings will be held either in member's home or in a community room where lessons will be presented.

These lessons vary with the members' interests, according to Kathy Harrison, extension adviser of home economics, but usually deal with foods, clothing, design or health.

Twenty-six units are in Jackson County with a total enrollment of about 500 members.

The association is part of the Home Economics Cooperative Extension Service of the University of Illinois.

Journalism Day features Pulitzer Prize winner

One of the 1976 Pulitzer Prize winners for local investigations, William Gaines, of the Chicago Tribune, is one of the featured speakers on the annual Journalism Day program Friday at the Student Center.

Gaines, a member of the Tribune's investigative "task force" since 1974, shared the Pulitzer prize in 1976 for his undercover work as a janitor in a Chicago hospital. He documented unsafe conditions and unnecessary billing of Medicare. The hospital was closed by the Chicago Board of Health.

Gaines will discuss this story and some of his other work at 11 a.m. in the Ohio room at Student Center.

Keynote speaker for the day's activities, sponsored by the School of Journalism, is Forrest Kilmer, editor of the Quad-City Times, Davenport, Iowa. Kilmer will discuss "Press Responsibility."

Kilmer's address is the featured event for the Journalism Day

Award's Dinner, scheduled to start at 6:30 p.m. in the Student Center Renaissance Room.

Kilmer is a member of the national Editor-In-Residence program, sponsored by the American Society of Newspaper Editors and the Newspaper Fund.

Kilmer gained national recognition as one of the founders of the new Iowa Freedom of Information Council. He is listed in Who's Who in America.

He is a member of the Continuing Education in Journalism committee for the American Society of Newspaper Editors. Acting in that capacity, he has become an international speaker.

Kilmer was an army paratrooper during World War II. After the war he joined the Davenport Daily Times as a reporter. He later became managing editor of the Times before it merged into what is now the Quad-City Times. Kilmer became editor of this paper in 1970.

Richard Cox, a 1966 graduate of the SIU-C School of Journalism, and now associate editor of Reader's Digest magazine, will be honored as the alumnus of the year at the awards banquet. Cox will also talk on "Magazine Editing" at 9:10 a.m. in Ballroom A. This will be a joint meeting with the Southern Illinois Editorial Association (SIEA).

Master of Ceremonies for the evening will be Harry Stonecipher, deputy director of the school of journalism. George Brown, the school's director, has an emergency meeting out of town and will not be able to attend the

William Gaines

Bloomington, Ill.; Christine Gronkiewicz, display advertising at Macoupin County Enquirer; and David Butler, metro editor of the Southern Illinoisian.

David Martimer, advertising account executive with the Leo Burnett, U.S.A. advertising agency, will talk on the subject, "Strategy for the R.C. Cola Account" at 2 p.m. in Ballroom A.

"The Role of the Newspaper Columnist" will be discussed by Doug Thompson, columnist for the Alton Telegraph, at 3 p.m. in the Ohio Room.

Awards to be presented at the evening banquet include eight scholarships to be presented by Rube Yelvington, president of SIEA, and Evan Smith, journalism faculty. The awards are SIEA awards to Carl Mann and Nguyen T. Duong; the Bill Lyons award to Lynn Woller; the Paisley Family award to Nancy Slovacsek; Copley newspapers award to Mark Edgar; Gannett Newspapers award to Linda Rae Thompson; two Hearst Newspapers awards to Jean Ness and Anh Nguyen; and the Golden Quill award to Debbie Sethen-Short.

Golden Era awards, presented to outstanding editors of the Southern Illinois area, will go to Allen Yount, editor of the Olney Daily Mail (retired); Roy P. Conrad, editor of Columbia Star and Monroe County Clarion; and John Sheley, editor of the Pinckneyville Democrat.

Richard Cox

Reader's Digest associate editor to receive award

Richard Cox, an associate editor of the Reader's Digest, will speak about magazine editing at 9:10 a.m. Friday as part of Journalism Day activities.

Cox, recipient of the Alumnus-of-the-Year Award given by SIU journalism faculty, will accept the award at the 6:30 p.m. Journalism Day Banquet in the Student Center Renaissance Room.

Cox, 33, graduated with honors from SIU in June, 1966, with a B.S. degree in journalism news-editorial sequence. He then attended graduate school at Columbia University, graduating with high honors and an M.S. degree. Within a week after his graduation, Cox was hired by Reader's Digest, where he was appointed editor of a national magazine for college students.

The publication folded a month later and he was assigned to work on the Digest's copy desk. In 1967, he was drafted into the Army. After a nine-month tour of duty in Korea, he returned to the Digest to work on the reading and cutting staff, where material to be reprinted in the magazine is researched and condensed.

In 1972, he was promoted to associate editor, his present position.

Before his job at the Reader's Digest, Cox worked as a Time-Life News Service stringer, doing research and interviews. During summers, he worked on several papers including the Ironton (Mo.) Mountain Echo, the Rockford Register-Republic and the Illinois State Register in Springfield.

A native of Fairfield, Cox also was a staff member of the Daily Egyptian for three years.

Ladies await queen selection

A champagne dinner is just one of a flurry of events going on in preparation for this weekend's Kappa Karnival. While chairmans and members of the Kappa Alpha Psi fraternity busily get ready, fifteen nervous girls await Saturday night and the 11:30 p.m. coronation of the Kappa Karnival Queen.

The coronation is just a highlight in a weekend of activities that includes a Saturday morning parade, jazz workshop and concert by Kool and the Gang. The queen chosen will reign over the annual event.

"We're looking for someone who has an interest in being affiliated with Kappa Psi, a girl who's shown that after she's crowned queen that won't be the end of it," said Douglas Evan, chairman of this year's Karnival.

The queen is chosen by the members of the fraternity on the basis of, as one candidate put it, "selling a minimum number of advertising, good rapport with the brothers and participation in most of the activities put together for the ladies."

Candidates for queen are: Rita Dennis, freshman in radio and tv; Guionia Adams, junior in mortuary science; Lynn Menzie, freshman in English; Jean Hampton sophomore in nursing; Cheryl Davis, freshman in special and elementary education; Pamela McEwen, freshman in political science; Michele Barnes, sophomore in speech pathology; Janet Day, junior in biological science; Patricia Westbrook, freshman in radio and tv; Karla Scott, freshman in radio and tv; Sharon Gordon, sophomore in journalism; Wanda Malden, freshman in social welfare; Diana Mitchell, freshman in fashion merchandising and applied design; and Cynthia Parker, junior in political science.

Rocky: University 1, 2:00, 6:45, 8:50 p.m.—As Rocky Balboa, Sylvester Stallone has a tailor-made role in this upbeat drama about a shambling boxer with a touch of the primitive poet about him? Talia Shire also shines under John G. Avildsen's sensitive, Oscar-winning direction. The Academy's choice as the year's best picture.

Up! University 2, 2:00, 7:00, 8:45 p.m.—Another of Russ Meyer's "booby epics"—this one a self-proclaimed "robust American fun movie." The star(?) is Margo Winchester.

Wizards: Fox Eastgate, 7:15, 9:00 p.m.—Ralph Bakshi's animated fantasy is a mysterious, violent and often frightening peek into the future, where the forces of magic and technology battle for supremacy.

Late Show: Saturday 1—Robert Benton's critically acclaimed comedy-mystery is an offbeat ode to the detective thrillers of the 1940s. Art Carney is the paunchy, aging detective, and Lily Tomlin is the spaced-out Margo in this cutting look at modern-day L.A. Produced by Robert Altman.

Black Sunday: Saturday 2, 5:00, 7:30, 10:00 p.m.—The Goodyear bimp steals the show in this taut, highly polished espionage thriller about an Israeli terrorist organization's devious plans for the Super Bowl. Robert Shaw, Bruce Dern and Marthe Keller are the stars. As the psychopathic pilot, Dern is especially impressive, as is John Frankenheimer's direction.

Silver Streak: University 1, 5:30, 7:45, 9:55 p.m.—The Gene Wilder-Jill Clayburgh-Richard Pryor suspense comedy about love and larceny on a Chicago-bound train is back. The antics of Wilder and Pryor are often inspired, and definitely worth a second look.

Thieves: University 2, 6:15, 8:00, 9:45 p.m.—Herb Gardner's adaptation of his hit Broadway comedy stars Marlo Thomas and Charles Grodin as a married couple trying to hang in there in big, bad New York City.

The Littlest Horse Thieves: University 3, 5:30, 9:00 p.m.—A Walt Disney adventure film about a group of daring, determined youngsters, this is on the bill with a "special added treat"—"The Many Adventures of Winnie-the-Pooh," which is shown at 7:30.

Slap Shot: University 4, 5:45, 8:00, 10:15 p.m.—The world of professional hockey takes a beating in George Roy Hill's energetic red, white and blue film—the blood is very red, the ice is white and the dialogue is extremely blue. Paul Newman is outstanding as the aging coach.

And Now for Something Completely Different: University 1 Late Show, Friday-Saturday, 11:00 p.m.—The first full-length feature by Monty Python and his zany troupe is an indescribably nutty melange that more than lives up to its title.

Luis Bunuel's early film, a twenty-minute collaboration with Salvador Dali. A surrealist nightmare which effectively defies description. A virtual compendium of the Dalian's favorite surrealist clichés from ants in your palm to razors cutting eyeballs. 1929. 24:19:10.

LAND WITHOUT BREAD

Another simple National Geographic-type documentary, a particularly impassioned region in the Spanish provinces. Luis Bunuel, for in his 1932 feature film, a reporter and the kind expert of human suffering and degradation, perceived by a culture that will not recognize disease and depravity. An ethnographic attack on humanity and civilization. 1932.

LAGED OR

The first of the great Luis Bunuel films, the Spanish film "Laged or" (1929) is a masterpiece. Bunuel, the most original and daring of filmmakers, has here, in a single film, a perfect example of his style. He has successfully combined the art of the cinema with the art of the writer. The film is a masterpiece of the art of the cinema. 1929.

Vonnegut's new book, 'Slapstick,' termed different, autobiographical

By David J. Parks
Student Writer

SLAPSTICK by Kurt Vonnegut.
Doleacorte Press, 1978. 243 pp. $7.95.

This novel by Vonnegut, although skillfully written as fiction, can best be read as an autobiography. The author explains this in the first sentence of the prologue:

In a strangely grotesque manner, the author departs from the text and character of his preceding novels and deals with the motivations involved in his tumultuous career as a novelist.

Although Vonnegut has authored eight novels, numerous short stories and a book of essays, in this novel he reveals that he is sick of writing. Later, however, he admits that he hates writing the way a blacksmith hates his anvil.

This type of honesty persists through the 19-page prologue of the book. It sets the scenario for the fictional action by unveiling the circumstances under which the author composed the plot. He speaks freely of the love he had for his sister and the continual recurrence of insanity in his family line.

The reality of the prologue fades into a fantasy as he and his scientist brother journey to the funeral of his Uncle Alex, who cofounded the Indianapolis chapter of Alcoholics Anonymous.

The tale he spins deals with the life of two freakishly abnormal children, Wilbur and Eliza Swain. They are born to two perfectly normal parents but the major complication arises when they grow to be seven feet tall and look like Neanderthals. At first the family puts them away at the suggestion of their doctor thinking that they are idiots, but are soon very much surprised to find them to be child prodigies.

A child psychiatrist rules that they should be kept apart and Eliza eventually moves to Mars where she is killed in a landslide. Wilbur, heartbroken by being separated from his sister, becomes a pediatrician and writes a famous baby rearing book called, "So You Went and Had a Baby."

A Review

He becomes so famous that he is elected president of the United States on the "Lonesome no more!!" ticket. He carries out his plan of giving everyone in the United States a new last name and creating huge extended families for them.

All is lost, however, when the gravity of the earth becomes unstable, the "Albanian Flu" strikes and the country finds a new religion. The followers of "The Church of Jesus Christ the Kidnapped" spend their time looking for Jesus Christ who they believe has been captured by the forces of evil.

Needless to say, the country is thrown into chaos. The government falls and the people revert to feudalism. Wilbur Swain loses the governing power of the presidency.

The story leads the reader to the ruins of Manhattan where Wilbur is writing his memoirs. The climax occurs when, as acting president of the United States, Wilbur is forced to sell the original Louisiana Purchase to the King of Michigan for a dollar that he never receives.

Vonnegut, in this work, has concentrated less on the details of what he is writing and has delved into the why of his writing. The parallels between his fantasy and reality becomes apparent through the careful reading of his family history in the prologue. The book is basically about a very old man writing his memoirs. Fictionally, it is Swain. Realistically, it is Vonnegut.

The intricacies of the plot are as interwoven as a spider's web, but the work still manages to fall short of Vonnegut's earlier work in craftsmanship. The reader can easily get the feeling that the story is being told rather than shown by words. The skill of the storyteller, however, cannot be denied.

Chinese artist will lecture on art, revolution in China

A prominent Chinese artist and writer who left the People's Republic of China in the early 1970s will give a lecture and slide show at 8 p.m. Saturday in Morris Library Auditorium.

Jack Chen, a visiting professor currently residing at Cornell University, will speak about Chinese art and the Chinese revolution. Chen is known for his water color paintings and drawings.

A collection of his work is scheduled for several showings in the country. Chen's visit to SU is sponsored by the Asian Studies Committee and the Center for Soviet and Eastern European Studies.

The lecture is open to the public, and a short question and answer session with refreshments will immediately follow said Ester Maring, assistant professor in anthropology.

Chen attended the University College School in London and the Polygraphic Institute in Moscow where he was graduated in 1930.

His most recent work, "A Year in Upper Felicity," depicts peasant life in the Chinese communes. Chen was in DCNIA during part of the Cultural revolution and he treats the subject matter from a participant observer viewpoint, Maring said.

Chen also will speak to several classes on Friday.

SIU students form karate school so they could have place to work out

By Lee Montello
Student Writer

For the owners of the Southern Illinois School of Tae Kwon Do, at 312 S. Illinois Ave., practice, not money was the reason for going into business.

The school, which has about 60 regular students, is owned and operated by three SIU students: Kyu Young Chai, a Ph.D. candidate in political science; Dan Dubrava, a senior in marketing; and Glen "Skip" Rogers, a junior with a special major in technical training.

Tae Kwon Do (TKD) is a Korean form of karate stressing offensive and defensive fighting techniques. Chai, a third degree black belt, said the school, which has been open for almost a year, came about because "We wanted a place of our own to work out."

Rogers, a first degree black belt, said money was not the reason for the school's conception. "If the school was my only source of income, I'd be dying," he said.

Dubrava, a second degree black belt, explained that for him "TKD is an ideal form of physical stimulation. I tried getting into other things, even tried rugby once, it was too crazy. Once it gets into your blood, well, to me it's the most ideal form of exercise."

After what Dubrava described as a chance meeting at the Jackson County YMCA, Dubrava and Rogers began assisting in the instruction of a self-defense class that Chai had started.

According to Chai, the opening of the school became inevitable. "Whenever you start teaching, you'll eventually have to expand."

At that time, the three were holding classes at the "Y" and at the Carbondale Community High School. Rogers said this meant lugging his 90-pound punching bag back and forth from his home to wherever class was to be held.

"We could only get into the high school a couple times a week. Training twice a week was nowhere." Rogers said it was at this time that the three decided they "had to start a school."

Dubrava said that after a six month search, they received an offer from Dennis Helm, a third degree black belt in judo. Helm offered to share his judo school with the three.

Today, the two schools train side by side in the same building.

Dubrava described the partnership as a working one. "Between the three of us, we made the school what it is."

The conflict of being full-time students by day and teaching TKD as night has created some problems.

"It's nice to be able to come home and study. We pick up the slack (at the TKD school) for each other," Rogers said.

For Chai, who has been training for 23 years, TKD has always taken a back seat to his education. "The method is not the end, my education has always been of prime importance."

Chai He said he has improved his concentration, attained a high level of self-confidence and achieved good physical conditioning through TKD. Chai said, "Since I have learned, I have no fear."

Dubrava described TKD as a much needed facet of his day. "It's a necessity for me, I need the physical release I get from working out."

The school has classes from 6:30

Alumni association assistant appointed

Robert Saltzman, a 1975 Cornell University graduate and an SIU graduate student, has been named assistant director in charge of student relations of SIU's alumni association.

Saltzman, 24, is working on a master's degree in higher education, and has worked in the Student Work and Financial Assistance Office, Admissions and Records, Student Life and University Housing.

p.m. to 8:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. A special "clinic" is held at 10:30 a.m. on Saturdays.

The school is affiliated with the International TKD Federation as a branch school of the EUN Institute of TKD at Rockford.

Works of 19th century 'freethinker' now showing at Morris Library

By Camille Osterberg
Student Writer

A popular nineteenth century lecturer who lived much of his life in Illinois became famous for his blasphemous opinions of society's "sacred cows" and religious beliefs.

"He had done much to rid the world of the superstitions, shams, humbugs, traditions and pretenses that used to pass current as orthodox truth," was said about Robert Green Ingersoll, who was known as a "great freethinker."

This statement, from a 1915 magazine article written by socialist Eugene V. Debs, was made by clergyman who had published a book of sermons to stop Ingersoll's conquering crusade.

Manuscripts, books, photographs and personal papers of Ingersoll, whose work was both highly regarded and highly condemned during his lifetime, are being displayed in SIU's Morris Library through May. The exhibit is with the library's special collections on the second floor.

Gordon Stein, a physiologist who collected these books and materials about Ingersoll, presented his collection to SIU in 1971 to be preserved in the library.

Correspondence with a friend, Ralph McCoy, retired dean of University libraries, led to Stein's presenting his collection to SIU when he learned that the school was very interested in collected works of Ingersoll.

A strange coincidence in connection with SIU was that the principal of Southern Illinois College of Carbondale in the 1800's Rev. Clark Braden, was Ingersoll's main critic among Protestants, according to Stein.

Born in New York in 1833, Ingersoll became a lawyer in Southern Illinois. With his brother, he set up a law office in Peoria, where they both achieved outstanding reputations as attorneys.

Ingersoll, who became attorney general of Illinois, was once offered the Republican nomination for governor on the condition that he would have to keep his religious opinions to himself. Being an agnostic, Ingersoll daringly attacked the Christian religion through some of his lectures. He lost the nomination, because he refused to censor his ideas.

However, in the 1876 Republican Convention, Ingersoll established his national reputation as an orator through his nominating speech for James G. Blaine for the presidency.

The subject matter of his lectures included topics that Ingersoll could talk safely about, such as Shakespeare and Abraham Lincoln, and more controversial topics, such as his attacks on Christian beliefs. He believed that the world was being corrupted by the practices of religion.

"Because of his liberal use of wit, his great oratorical style and his daring in attacking some of society's 'sacred cows,' thousands would attend Ingersoll's well-known lectures. According to one book in the display, 'Ingersoll the Man' by Clarence S. Brown, he was always attacking what he believed to be unjust or wrong, whether in the forum, the court, or on the platform."

An advertisement displayed in the exhibit announced a lecture, defending Ingersoll's life and work, that would be an answer to the malicious and unfair attacks on the character or teachings of "this great infidel." It would also reveal his literary works that were banned from libraries by religious influences. The ad was "in defense of the Great Freethinker, whose name is familiar, but of whose work various and conflicting ideas are entertained."

In Debs' magazine article about Ingersoll, he was described as "a man who uproots superstition, unshackles the immortal mind, sets the imprisoned soul at liberty, and wrests from bigotry its worse than murderous weapons." The article said Ingersoll's ideas showed that the defenses against superstition, bigotry, ignorance and intolerance were tumbling down, as do walls and buildings when in the grasp of an earthquake.

Cartoons depicting the opinions that Ingersoll held and photographs of him with his family are also included in the collection.

Two versions of affidavits concerning events before Ingersoll's death in 1899, published by "The Truth Seeker" in the early 1900's, are on display. These affidavits were to disprove claims that Ingersoll had sent for a Catholic priest as he was dying. Both affirmed that, to the best of the signers' knowledge, Ingersoll was an agnostic to his death.

An advertisement for a book about Ingersoll, by Ernest B. Lydick, "Where Is The Soul of Ingersoll?" said the book contained "...proven statements of exalted spirits and clairvoyant visionists who have seen the spirit of Col. Robert G. Ingersoll in glory on the higher plains."

Even after his death, Ingersoll's influence still was widely felt by the society he left behind. "What he advocated then was often called 'blasphemy,' but the same ideas are now accepted by most Christians without a second thought," Stein said. "Yesterday's heresy is today's truth."

Foreign student enrollment has decreased since 1969

By Kathy Jo Neach
Student Writer

About 480 foreign students with nonimmigration status are enrolled at SIU, a general decrease since the peak year of 1969, says R. Thomas of Admissions and Records.

That figure includes only those students enrolled in programs leading to a degree and currently earning credit hours. Many other students are permanent residents in the United States or are studying only at the Center for English as a Second Language (CESL).

About 500 foreign students were at SIU in 1969. Since then, there has been "a gradual leveling off," Thompson said. Traditionally, the countries with the greatest number of students at SIU have been Iran, Hong Kong and Taiwan. More than 50 students from Iran are now here. Hong Kong and Taiwan each has more than 40 students at SIU.

There has been a definite increase in students from Arab countries such as Saudi Arabia and Kuwait. Thompson, who was in Kuwait last year, said some Arab countries have more money now from oil production but have limited facilities for education. Students are often sent to the United States on government scholarships so they can return home to help build up programs there.

Thompson said that in the future, there could be an increase in students from Venezuela due to a government scholarship program begun there two or three years ago. He believes that future trends could include more students here for graduate programs and specialized training.

Swimming locations and rules announced for area lakes

Swimmers using area lakes could be in for a stiff fine if they do not obey the rules.

Steve Frick, refuge manager of Crab Orchard Wildlife Refuge, said swimming is allowed in any area not marked by "no swimming" signs in both Crab Orchard and Little Grass lakes. These areas are mainly near the spillway and around boat docking and landing areas.

No swimming of any kind is allowed in Devil's Kitchen Lake. Frick said "Devil's Kitchen has too many underwater hazards such as rocks and stumps." He added that the clean-up and maintenance of the lake would be impossible for his agency to handle.

A fine of $50 can be assessed of Club honors seven students

The Plant and Soil Science Club recently honored seven students for academic excellence and involvement in club affairs.

Linda Simonton of Okawville, Ill. was named outstanding senior. Howard Brown of Westville, Ill. was named outstanding junior. Brown will be the club president next year.

Karen Stoelzie, senior, Carbondale, was named "Outstanding Woman in Horticulture" by the Carbondale Council of Garden Clubs.

Camille Hawkins, sophomore, Carbondale, was given an "Excellence in Horticulture" scholarship award by the District Seven Garden Clubs of Illinois.

Runners-up for the "Outstanding Senior" award were Mary Carlson, James Pearson and Mike Dobrotka.

Developed areas of Lake Kinkaid, also run by the Forestry Service, have similar rules to those of Cedar Creek. However, Williams said, "If somebody wants to go skinny-dipping in a secluded area we won't bother him."

Swimming at Lake-on-the-Campus is allowed only at the beach between 10 a.m. and 6 p.m. Food, beverages and pets are not allowed and a life guard must be on duty.

Nixon's lawyer says privacy rights 'trampled' by federal seizure of tapes

By Harry F. Rosenthal
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP)—Richard Nixon's lawyer told the Supreme Court on Wednesday that Nixon's constitutional right to privacy clearly is trampled by government seizure of the former president's tapes and papers and the prospect of archivists rummaging through them.

"What we are talking about is a man's life, five and one-half years as president," Herbert J. Miller told the court. "We are talking about a gross violation of the Fourth Amendment."

And, he warned, if a 1974 law directing the seizure is allowed to stand, not even the justices' own documents would be safe if Congress should choose to take them.

The possession and control of 42 million pages of documents and 5,000 hours of tapes generated by the Nixon administration have been fought over in the courts since Nixon resigned on Aug. 9, 1974.

The Supreme Court must decide whether Congress had the constitutional right to pass the law which, for the first time in the 200 years of nationhood, deprived a president of his papers.

The law, enacted in during the era of Nixon's Watergate-induced resignation and signed by Gerald Ford, was designed to protect the materials and "to provide the public with the full truth... of the abuses of power" during the Nixon years.

Congress decided Nixon was an unreliable custodian because of such incidents as the 18 1/2-minute gap in one tape recording and numerous errors and omissions in transcriptions of tapes turned over to Congress.

The Nixon appeal to the Supreme Court is from a decision by a three-judge district court that the law is constitutional.

Wade H. McCree, the solicitor general arguing for the government, told the court: "I believe these are public papers belonging to the government... there was apprehension they would be destroyed." It was McCree's first appearance before the court as solicitor general since he was confirmed by the Senate on March 4.

FDA employe happy with attack on own agency

CHICAGO (AP)—Criticism of the U.S. Food and Drug Administration in a new federal report was welcomed Wednesday by a former FDA inspector who says the agency harassed her.

"I'm happy that someone finally seems to be recognizing what has gone on in the FDA," Alice Ling said.

The report by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, released Wednesday in Washington, focused on cases involving several FDA scientists who had problems with the agency. It did not specifically mention Ms. Ling.

She was fired after a dispute with a supervisor. She said the incident climaxed a campaign of harassment that began after she testified before a Senate committee about what she described as FDA interference in one of her investigations.

Ms. Ling, a research chemist, was assigned by the FDA to a team verifying data on the drug Flengyl in the laboratories of G.D. Searle & Co., a Skokie drug manufacturer.

She said that when she reported discrepancies to her supervisors she was urged to disregard her findings and, when she persisted, was harassed and intimidated.

Ms. Ling said she continues to press two lawsuits against the FDA as well as an appeal of her firing before the U.S. Civil Service Commission.

Cities spend big money to answer residents' stray animal complaints

By Lee Mitgang

AP Urban Affairs Writer

Cities are beginning to pay attention to what, surprisingly, is their residents' No. 1 complaint—the stray dogs and cats that are increasingly in control of streets and alleyways.

There are about 25 million stray dogs and cats roaming the nation's cities, estimates Friends of Animals, Inc., a nationwide volunteer agency. Between four million and six million of them are destroyed each year.

Americans have about 23 million pet dogs and 27 million pet cats, the agency said, but unwanted pets can become strays. Or the pet might have a litter of puppies or kittens for which owners can't be found, so the young animals are left to their own devices.

Streetwise strays often collect in the packs of five or six that are familiar sights in rundown urban areas, as well in some rural areas where they are blamed for killing livestock and wildlife.

Friends of Animals has just finished a survey of how 41 cities handle stray animals. The group said Wednesday that these cities spent a total of $13.9 million last year to round up and kill strays. Chicago, for instance, spends $1 million a year for animal control. The problem has become so severe in some places that Pittsburgh residents, for example, say that fear of being bitten by a pack of dogs is as much a reason for staying away from certain sections of town as fear of being robbed.

An earlier survey of 1,031 city mayors and councilmen, conducted by the National League of Cities, showed that city residents complain about the stray animal problem more than any other. Sixty-one percent of the mayors responding said it was the biggest gripe in their city, far ahead of the second biggest source of complaint, traffic control, which 40.7 per cent cited as a major problem.

According to the American Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, the average per capita expenditure for animal control in cities with populations over one million is 78 cents.

Dade County Miami, Fla., with an estimated stray animal population of 130,000, spends $738,000 and destroys about 20,000 animals a year.

Most cities run their own animal control programs. Others allot tax money to local humane societies, or finance joint city and private humane society programs.

New York City, usually among the biggest spenders for other programs, is the only large city that doesn't spend anything on animal control. The ASPCA has been left on its own to deal with New York's estimated 400,000 stray population

School of Medicine

School "doing its job" despite budget cuts

By Deb Taylor
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Editor's note: This is the tenth in a series of articles on the 12 colleges and schools of the University.

SIU's School of Medicine was established to provide more manpower for Southern and Central Illinois health care needs. The school's programs are aimed not only at the prospective physician, but also at the practicing physician for continuing education.

Although the school is suffering somewhat from budget cutbacks, it is able to do the job it is expected to do. Tom Williams, assistant associate to the dean, said.

The budget for the school has been cut this year. Williams said, "We could probably use additional money." The biggest cut was in the area of new and expanding programs.

Charles E. Richardson, Ed.D., associate dean for Carbondale, said the major effects of the budget cutbacks are in space, particularly in Carbondale where the first year of medical school is taught, and in being able to add faculty in specialty areas.

"We have not been able to progress and develop at the rate we have anticipated, but we have been able to keep up the quality of our programs," Richardson said.

He said next year would be a very critical one for the school, because "we will probably not meet our accelerating cost needs." He said not meeting increased costs causes the school to stand still instead of move forward.

Both the first year curriculum at Carbondale and the remaining clinical instruction at Springfield include community physicians who serve as volunteer faculty.

Richardson said these physicians, called clinical associates, give their time to assist on delivery of programs. In the Carbondale area, Richardson said, there are 36 listed clinical associates. "We strive for a true integration between the medical community and the medical education curriculum."

Richardson said the clinical associates primarily enhance the program and help make up for some budget deficits.

Richardson said budget cutbacks could affect increasing enrollments. About 1,200 students applied in 1975 and 72 are currently enrolled. Richardson said. The school's goal is to accept an entering class of 96 students, but that will depend on appropriations, budget and facilities.

"The School of Medicine in our opinion has been well treated and well supported by the medical community as well as the legislature. We have made excellent progress toward our goals. We hope to receive continued state support for this purpose. If we receive severe cuts in program funds it will have a negative impact on our progress. We will do the best we can with the resources we have," Richardson said.

One of the school's resources, the Regional Health Education Centers (RHEC), are used to aid continuing medical education in Illinois.

The RHEC's usually encompass several counties and are headed by a group of physicians who get together to plan continuing medical education programs for other physicians in the area, Williams said.

The physicians can be part of the faculty from the School of Medicine or they can be regional physicians.

The RHEC programs are directed toward physicians, nurses, paramedics and others in health-related fields. The programs help keep these people up to date in current medical practices, Williams said.

The physicians and others who take RHEC programs pay tuition and receive credit. "We try to make continuing education programs self-sustaining," Williams said.

One of the RHEC programs is funded through an assistance grant from the Veteran's Administration. The grant lasts for a seven year period, Williams said.

Williams said funds included in the grant are appropriated for instructional materials. These materials are usually in the form of video-tape, slide-tape, or audio-tape, Williams said.

The materials are catalogued and can be sent to physicians upon request along with lending equipment. Most of the materials are purchased from commercial businesses which specialize in making instructional material packages for continuing medical education.

These types of programs give rural physicians the opportunity to interact with their colleagues and keep up with current medical information, Williams said.

Cornury: finishing ration combines corn and manure to fatten cattle

By Bob Allen
Student Writer

School of Agriculture research may give farmers a way to dispose of animal waste while recycling some of the nutrients present in the waste through the feeding of cornury.

Dixon Lee, assistant dean for research, described cornury as the "fermentation process" of a mixture of 25 per cent cow manure and 75 per cent dry-shelled corn. The mixture is stored in an air-tight silo for at least three weeks.

Cornury is used as a finishing ration. It is fed to the cattle just before slaughter to fatten them up. Lee said the idea of feeding manure is not new, but in the past, raw manure has been mixed with the feed. He said cornury is safer than raw manure because the fermentation process kills some of the disease-carrying organisms that might be present in the manure.

Animals seem to like cornury better than raw manure, Lee said, and it will keep indefinitely. "We've had some in the silo for a year."

Lee thinks the use of cornury is feasible because of its lower cost compared to regular finishing rations. Corn has about nine per cent protein. Farmers like to kick up the protein level to 12 or 13 per cent. Soy bean meal which is used to mix with the corn costs about $380 a ton, according to Lee. "Farmers are going to have to find something else to beef up their ration.

In two year's research, Lee found that the average daily gain of cornury fed cattle is 3.3 pounds. Cattle fed an ordinary finishing ration gain 1.5 pounds per day. Lee says this difference is not significant. What is significant, however, is the 16 cents per pound of gain cost of cornury, compared to 22 cents for the soybean ration.

Lee said the savings are not large enough for a farmer to be able to build a silo, but farmers who already own a silo could profit from cornury. Lee said he thinks, "We'll see more and more feeding of animal waste."

Lee said cornury can ease the pollution problem caused by animal waste and at the same time utilize B vitamins, protein, and energy present in the manure. It speeds up the recycling of waste materials, Lee said.

Tests of the meat reveal no difference in odor, cooking loss, or taste between cornury-fed beef and beef fed a traditional finishing ration. Taste panels, consisting of members both familiar with the cornury process, and those who knew nothing more than they were eating free steaks, could not tell the difference between the steaks.

Lee said one of the main problems with cornury is the public might balk at the thought of eating manure-fed beef. Because the Food and Drug Administration has not approved of cornury, the sale of it is not legal.

Lee's research has dealt mainly with cattle. Cornury may not be suitable for swine, sheep, or poultry, because of their low-roughage finishing rations that might cause poisoning from antibiotic or mineral build-up.

Lee hopes that this fall he can start using corn straight from the field instead of dried shelled corn in the process to bring the cost down even more. Lee said that even though the acceptance of cornury might take a "good sell-job to the public," the low cost and utilization of waste materials could make it very popular in the near future.

Money, manpower shortage 'obstacles for Cablevision 7

By John Rungren
Student Writer

Who needs money and manpower to run a successful business? Everybody, right? Well... sorta.

Cablevision 7 of Carbondale is one business that is in operation with a minimum amount of capital and work force.

Three months ago, the three-year-old station's license was renewed by the Federal Communications Commission (FCC). That allowed Channel 7 to continue broadcasting for an additional three years.

"We have an extremely small work force, but it's all that we can afford right now," said Bill Zeh, production manager at Channel 7. "In fact one man may work as production manager at Channel 7. In fact one man may work as many as seven jobs."

Jobs include editors, cameraman, technician, floor manager and announcer. "We could use one or two more cameras, additional studio equipment, such as hook-ups, another tape recorder, and I could go on and on," Zeh said. To be a really top flight cablevision station," Zeh said, "we'd have to spend hundreds of thousands of dollars."

The money Cable 7 does receive comes from subscribers, advertisers and local contributors.

Despite operating with a limited amount of funds, Cablevision 7 does have the basic equipment needed to serve its purpose.

Outside the studio, antennas are aimed directly at various broadcast systems. The antennas are 500 feet high and enable Cablevision 7 to pick up signals from area stations.

Once a signal is obtained, it is fed from the antenna to a trunk line. The line sends the signal into a block house. From the block house the signal is carried to modulators which contain certain testing procedures. The signal is then sent underground where it is amplified every 200 to 300 feet.

At the studio various types of equipment are used. A Sony 3400 camera is used for news broadcasts. It is a portable model that broadcasts in black and white. A Sony 3050 editing desk is another important piece of equipment used by Cable 7. Its best point is mobility. A Sony porta-pack that includes automatic cutout is used in one-on-one interviews.

The station also uses an IVC model 90 camera that shoots color film. It is a video type camera that has the advantage of playback.

"It all sounds like an enormous amount of equipment, but we could be so much more mobile if we just had the money," Zeh said.

The programming at Cablevision 7 consists of news and movies. The news is coverage of the Carbondale area.

The movies are shown following the news broadcasts. The station rotates 18 movies on a weekly basis. Cablevision 7 formerly rotated movies on a daily basis with different time schedules per movie during each day. That schedule failed, because the station competes against the networks for viewers. Carbondale viewers preferred the network programming over watching the same movies day in and day out on Channel 7.

The week of programming at Cablevision 7, which includes the news and movies, consists of a forty-hour week. However, the station is on the air 24 hours a day.

A message wheel is rotated when the news and movies are not being broadcast. The wheel is made up of slides that are advertisements. The wheel stops at 8:30 p.m. when the station's programming signs on.

Cablevision 7 may lose its movie package in the near future because of a lack of funds. Without the movies the station will probably turn to additional local programming.

"There is an increasing number of students that will volunteer their time to help us out," Zeh said. "They gain valuable experience and we gain manpower."

The big selling point of cable TV, Zeh said, is that it is more stable than normal TV operations. The station runs on a local origination basis. This is advantageous in that people's preferences are currently changing to local programming.

"We'll just have to wait and see what happens as far as the future is concerned," Zeh said. "I don't want to make any wild guesses as to how we'll turn out."

"We've lasted three years without any money or big staff, now we'll see if we can go three more."

780 units of blood donated so far in Red Cross drive

Students and Carbondale residents have already donated 780 units of blood to the Red Cross Blood Drive after only three days of the five-day program. Bill Frazier, a spokesman for the blood drive, said Thursday.

The drive will continue through Friday in the Student Center Ballroom D. Hours are 10 a.m. until 4 p.m.

The drive began on Monday, with a Red Cross van located outside the First Methodist Church. On that day, 188 units of blood were collected.

On Tuesday and Wednesday, the blood drive moved into the Student Center Ballroom D, where 280 and 301 units of blood were collected respectively.

A unit of blood is roughly equivalent to one pint, Frazier said.

"The response has been very good," Frazier said. He added that local volunteers should be applauded for their cooperation in the blood drive.

Over the first three days, there was an average of about 86 community and student volunteers and an average of five volunteer nurses.

Automobile 'impersonator' began natural talent at age 3

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Steve Weisberg started doing impersonations of cars at age 3.

"My mother was always afraid my face would freeze in the shape of a Hudson," says Weisberg, now 25.

"As a kid I noticed cars had facial expressions," he said in an interview. "You know, the Studebakers, the Packards, the Nashes."

"I still like to do the old cars best, the ones from the '40s and '50s. Each was different. Now, they've lost their personalities. They're more beasts of burden."

Weisberg says the hardest car to imitate is a 1952 Henry J. The easiest is the 1955 Chevrolet.

"Every muscle in your face hurts after the Henry J.," he said. "It's all in the upper lip and it's hard to hold."

President's Carter's toothy smile reminds him of the grill of a 1965 Chevrolet, he said.

Professor working on determining if laser can guide chemical reaction

By Stephen Tuck
Staff Writer

Separating molecules of gas with a laser, much like breaking glass with a high-frequency sound, is the basis for research being performed at SIU by Robert Zitter, professor of physics, and David Koster, associate professor of chemistry.

Laser, which stands for light amplification by stimulated emission of radiation, is a high-energy beam of parallel light waves having the same frequency and wavelength. Current results show that the laser speeds up chemical reactions and researchers are trying to find if the speeding up is due to the heat from the laser or due to the frequency of light emitted from the laser. "The goal of our research is to find if the laser can be a useful tool for guiding chemical reactions," Zitter said.

Two theoretical applications of the research's results could be reducing pollution from coal-burning power plants and separating usable uranium fuel for nuclear power plants. The use of lasers might reduce power plant pollution to very low levels and would greatly reduce the cost of extracting the uranium-235 needed to power nuclear reactors, Zitter said.

Current methods of removing harmful gases and particles from coal-burning power plants include the use of scrubbers such as the one at the SIU Physical Plant and other antipollution devices which are very expensive to buy and operate. If the laser could be used to remove this pollution, the only cost after buying the laser would be the electricity to run it.

The laser would separate molecules of pollution, such as sulfur dioxide and carbon monoxide, into their individual atoms of sulfur, carbon and oxygen. This would occur in a chamber located between the area where the coal is burned and the smokestack for releasing it. In the chamber would be another gas which would join the separated atoms and form a harmless gas which could then be emitted.

Another use of the laser could be the separation of uranium-235 from uranium-238. When uranium is mined, the uranium-235 makes up only about one per cent of the uranium found. However, to run a nuclear reactor the uranium-235 must be at least five to seven per cent of the fuel.

"Present uranium separation plants are very expensive and take several years to build," Zitter said. "If the laser could be used in the separation, the cost would decrease 100 to 1,000 times."

Zitter said if the United States wanted to become 70 to 80 per cent nuclear power dependent by the year 2000, at least one of the uranium separation plants would have to be built each year to meet the need for uranium-235.

Zitter and Koster began preliminary experiments over two years ago. The experimental results proved promising enough that they received a National Science Foundation grant which runs until June 1978.

"When the time comes, we will have to decide whether to pursue an extension of the grant or to change the direction of our research," Zitter said.

Junior robbed on campus by man with gun

About $100 in cash was reported taken from a 20-year-old SIU junior near the Physical Plant by a man armed with a pistol, SIU police said Thursday.

Karl D. Conley, a junior in industrial technology, reported he was robbed at 11:28 p.m. Wednesday, police said. He was in his auto at the Physical Plant when the men approached him, and demanded money.

The man was armed with a small-caliber automatic pistol, police said. After the robbery, the man fled east.

No description of the man was available. An investigation is continuing.

Hitchcock movie reported missing

The movie "North by Northwest", valued at $700, was reported missing about one month after it was shown to a cinema class, SIU police said Thursday.

Peter J. Bukalski, chairman of the Cinema Department, told police the movie, directed by Alfred Hitchcock and starring Cary Grant, was shown to a class after it was received March 11.

The film was returned to campus mail March 18 for shipment to Film, Inc. of Wilmette, the company that rented the film. According to that firm, the film never arrived, police said. Also, no insurance slip was received by the cinema department.

Police said they are investigating the disappearance.

Juvenile arrested in burglary case

A 16-year-old youth was arrested by Carbondale police on a burglary warrant issued by Jackson County States Atty. Howard Hood, police said.

The youth allegedly burglarized a Carbondale home April 18. A starting gun, a coin collection and a magnum pistol were taken in the burglary.

The youth was turned over to Jackson County authorities after his arrest Wednesday at Crazy Horse Billiards, 608 S. Illinois Ave., police said.

Rural program created to prevent delinquency

By John Jenkins
Student Writer

The Rural Creative Workshop is a program designed to prevent juvenile delinquency in rural Jackson County by giving the area youth something useful to do with their spare time.

The workshop operates on the idea that boredom leads to mischief which leads to crime. Dan Meyer, community worker in Makanda and a senior in social welfare, said

The idea for the workshop came from its director, Barb Trent, a former youth worker for the youth service bureau. Trent saw a need for some kind of activities for the youth in the rural areas.

The workshop is open to any youth in the area and presently has projects in Makanda, Ava, Grand Tower, Pamona and Murphysboro.

The workshop has activities all year in those towns. Some of the things that are going on now are drawing classes, girls' basketball and rap sessions in Makanda. The project in Grand Tower is presently finishing a log cabin, while the Murphysboro project has just completed a town clean-up. "Our programs are constantly changing," Trent said. Some of the other activities include swimming, roller skating parties, rap sessions and camping trips.

The workshop is also having an all-community picnic April 30 at Lake Murphysboro State Park.

The workshop is funded through a $1,300 grant from the state Department of Child and Family Services, town councils and private donations.

The staff is made up of volunteers, many of whom are SIU students doing their field placement.

"We need people who have a special skill that they would like to share," said Meyer. "This has been a valuable experience for me, because the program is not really formal yet and the opportunity to experiment with some new ideas is encouraged."

"We also do some counseling," Meyer said. "Because we're in the community, the people trust us and come to us when they have a problem."

Anyone interested in donating some time to the workshop should call Barb Trent at 549-0460 or the workshop office at 549-0937.

Geology group to meet here next week

By Linda Harris
Student Writer

The SIU Student Center will be the setting of the 11th annual meeting of the North-Central Section of the Geological Society of America next Thursday and Friday. The meeting is being sponsored by the Department of Geology in cooperation with the Division of Continuing Education.

More than 500 scientists are expected to attend the meeting, including scientists from Brazil, Japan, England, France and Germany.

The meeting is held annually for the purpose of exchanging research information in the related geological fields of study.

SIU became the selection site for this year's meeting in 1974 at a meeting in Columbia, Mo. at the suggestion of Russell Dutcher, chairman of the Geology Department. It was confirmed a year later when the North-Central election for officers took place. John Utgaard and Dale Ritter, professors in the Geology Department, were elected as chairman and vice-chairman respectively.

The Geological Society of America (GSA) is a national organization of professional geologists in the United States and Canada. Home base for the society is Boulder, Colo.

The North-Central Section is one of six regions of the GSA in the country. This section includes Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Nebraska, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Ohio and Wisconsin. Parts of Ontario, Canada also are represented in this section.

Utgaard said two days of meetings are planned. He also said student authors will be competing for a prize of $50 for the best paper.

Seven field trips will also be sponsored. These field trips will look at various areas in Southern Illinois. Most of these field trips will take place on Saturday.

Warren Brandt, president of SIU, will welcome the group at its annual banquet at Ramada Inn on Thursday. Brandt and his wife will also have a reception at University House on Thursday for the officials of the section and the national organization itself. This reception will precede the banquet.

Those interested in attending the meeting or field trips can obtain registration forms from Jeanne Bortz, Division of Continuing Education.

Alumni services board seeks input, names two student representatives

By Steve Lambert
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Attempting to build a more stable relationship with the student body, alumni services has named a graduate student and an undergraduate to serve on its Board of Directors.

Debra Moriarty, a graduate student in higher education, and Donald Wheeler, a junior in speech and political science, will become the first graduate and undergraduate constituency representatives to serve on the alumni board.

"We want to provide for more student input into the alumni board," Robert Saltzman, assistant director of alumni services, said Thursday.

Saltzman is himself a graduate student in higher education appointed to his post in alumni services six weeks ago.

The appointment of two students to serve as constituency representatives on the board will help unite the board with organizations like the Student Government Activities Council (SGAC) and the Graduate Student Council (GSC), Saltzman said.

As the University has grown, he said, there has been a growing student lack of interest in the school's history and alumni.

Saltzman said he hopes student representation on the board will bridge that gap.

Wheeler and Moriarty will serve on various alumni board committees, Saltzman said, including the newly created Student Alumni Board.

Wheeler, student body vice president who lost his bid to become student body president for next year, said Thursday that his position will be similar to that of any other representative on the nonprofit alumni board.

"We'll basically work together to establish policies for alumni services," Wheeler said, adding that he will be working on two committees dealing with public relations and legislative activity which may be of interest to the alumni council.

Moriarty could not be reached for comment Thursday.

Saltzman, who has served internships with student activities, student life and the Alumni Office, was appointed in early March.

Student Senate puffs cigars, votes funds to creative clubs

By Kenda-Lee Heins
Student Writer

The annual tradition of passing out cigars after the Student Government elections again took place at Wednesday's student senate meeting.

Also at the meeting, $716.50 was allocated to the Black Theater Workshop to fund part of the performance "Baptismal in Black Art." The performance and two scheduled workshops will deal with how African music relates to music today and a demonstration of 150 original African instruments.

The performances will be on April 29 and 30 at the Eurna Hayes center and Shyrock Auditorium. Admission will be free.

The senate allocated $1,040 to the Oral Interpretation Club to support five productions and four reading hours at the Calipre Stage. The performances will be held in the fall but money was allotted now because the club neglected to submit their yearly budget.

Unanimous consent was reached on a resolution that signifies the senate's support of owo bills presently on the floor of the State House of Representatives. One bill would place a voting student representative on the Illinois State Scholarship Commission and another would give all membership privileges to student representatives on the governing boards of public colleges and universities.

The senate will send a letter supporting the bills to Gov. James Thompson, Rep. Bruce Richmond, Rep. Ralph Dunn and Rep. Vincent A. Birchler.

The senate also voted to recognize the Political Science Club as a student organization.

Professor claims breast cancer risk higher from contraceptive injections

By Cathy M. Baehler
Student Writer

A new contraceptive developed in the form of a yearly arm injection, runs a higher risk than common oral contraceptives of producing breast cancer, according to George Gass, SIU professor of physiology.

The higher risk of cancer, Gass stated, comes from the continuous release and build-up of the hormone norgestrel contained in the new form of birth control.

Gopi N. Gupta, from The Population Council at Rockefeller University in New York told the Chicago Tribune his form of birth control, a small pellet "about the size of a grain of rice" is cheaper, easier and has none of the same side effects of the pill.

The side effects of the pellet are not the same as the pill because the

PLATO system demonstration scheduled at SIU

Paul Tenczar, a senior systems programmer for the computer-based education research laboratory at the University of Illinois, will be a guest speaker at the Association of Computing Machinery (ACM) meetings.

Tenczar will demonstrate PLATO, a world-wide computer network incorporating satellite communications and thousands of remote terminals, at the meeting scheduled Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in Technology Building A, room 111.

He is also expected to demonstrate some recent developments at the University of Illinois research laboratory, including a voice synthesizer which allows verbal communication with the computer and a music box which provides for composing and generating music by using the computer.

The meeting is sponsored by the student chapter of ACM and is free and open to the public.

daily dosage of female hormones is higher in the oral contraceptive than in the pellet.

Commonly used oral contraceptives contain the female hormones progesterin and estrogen. Gupta's form contains only the hormone norgestrel, a synthetic compound of progesterin, according to the Tribune report.

The pellet is encased in a tiny silicone tube when injected underneath the skin. It contains the synthetic norgestrel combined with pure cholesterol. The cholesterol binds the hormones together, allowing for a slow, continuous release of the hormone into the body, the Tribune reported.

Gass saw the danger in the continuous release of the carcinogenic hormone because it is always present in the body, rather than being administered in cycles of 28 days like the pill.

"We know these substances will cause cancer. We also know from paper studied here that the hormone given in cycles will be less cancer-causing than those given continuously, such as in the diet or in this case, under the skin," Gass said.

For the past 18 years, Gass has conducted research at SIU in the development of breast cancer in mice caused by estrogen given in the food both continuously and in cycles.

"The progesterin and estrogen are both steroid (sex) hormones. The progesterin are causing cancer of the cervix and vagina in experimental work. Our animals only got cancer of the breast because of the type of animal we were using. If we wanted to test progesterin we would switch to mice that would be susceptible to cancer of the cervix and uterus," Gass said.

The mice Gass used in his experiments were classified as C3H mice. "The C3H mouse is a special breed," he said. It is susceptible to breast cancer. This would be true of the females and in the males but only if you give the female sex hormone to the male. They have a virus growing in them and for some reason this virus, combined with the hormone, causes cancer. We don't know what happens. All we know is that the hormone and virus must be present. That is one of the mysteries we are trying to solve now."

When testing the mice, Gass fed them hormones in all the food they were given, with the same dosages each day. His findings concluded the mice developed breast cancer spontaneously.

According to Gass' research, breast cancer was lower in the male mice when the estrogen was given in their diet in periods of two, seven, 14 or 28 days than when an equal dosage was given everyday.

Dosages for the cyclic schedules were twice those of the continuous schedule. Therefore, the total amount of hormones each animal received was the same.

The same hormones that are used in the mice experiments can be used on humans, Gass stated. The hormone would be designed differently depending on how long it was to last.

The pellet can be removed from the skin by making a small incision in the skin when it loses its effectiveness after one to three years, or when the user wishes to become fertile again, according to Gass.

The pellet contraceptive is not on the market now. Testing for both men and women will begin soon in Los Angeles, Chicago or New York after it is approved by the Federal Drug Administration, the Tribune reported.

Equal rights supporters get boost; bill approved by House committee

By Ship Wolinberg
Associated Press Writer

SPRINGFIELD (AP) — Supporters of the proposed federal Equal Rights Amendment got a boost from a House committee Thursday in their effort to secure Illinois' approval of the federal Equal Rights Amendment.

The House Judiciary Committee voted 15 to 5 to recommend approval of the ERA, the controversial proposal to prohibit sex discrimination.

The action sends the ERA to the full House for debate. If the House passes it, the ERA would then go to the Senate.

Illinois has repeatedly rejected efforts since 1972 to ratify the ERA, which would prohibit discrimination on the basis of sex.

Thirty-five states have approved it. Thirty-eight states must ratify the resolution by March 1979 if it is to become part of the federal constitution.

Opponents of the ERA say they anticipated the committee action. "I think we have a very good chance to win in the House," said ERA opponent Phyllis Schlafly of Alton.

The effort to get Illinois to ratify the ERA is sponsored this year by four men.

Rep. Alan Greiman, D-Skokie, one of the sponsors, said he believes he had the votes to get the measure out of the House and to the Senate this year.

Six opponents and three supporters testified during a one-hour hearing before the vote was taken. No new arguments were raised either for or against the measure.

Opponents said enactment of the ERA would make women eligible for the military draft and combat, damage the family unit and force women onto an already overburdened job market.

Proponents said the ERA would enhance the dignity of the housewife and give men and women greater freedom of choice. Among those testifying in support of the measure was Secretary of State Alan Dixon.

Rep. Elroy Sandquist, R-Chicago, a co-sponsor of the resolution, said Illinois "sticks out like a sore thumb" on maps which show which states have ratified the ERA.

Rep. Donald Deuster, R-Mundelein, said the federal constitution already provides guarantees against discrimination and that the ERA would be harmful.

One legislator who supported the ERA two years ago voted against it this time.

Rep. Ronald Greishniemer, R-Waukegan, said he changed his mind on the issue because his constituents changed their minds on it, as reflected in a poll he took.

"The American people are fed up to the ears with this issue," he said.

He also said he had "never been threatened by any group of individuals as he was by the proponents of ERA" after he announced in his district that he had changed his position on ERA.

Former journalism director to autograph new book

By Debbie Sneathen-Short
Daily Egyptian, Staff Writer

Howard Rusk Long, former director of the School of Journalism, will be autographing copies of his recently published book, "Main Street Militants," during Journalism Day Friday.

Long, who served as director from 1953 to 1972, compiled articles from Grassroots Editor that illustrate the experiences of 28 investigative journalists. Long founded Grassroots Editor, a Magazine of the International Society of Weekly Newspaper Editors.

These articles reveal the hardships that these journalists faced when publishing their weekly newspapers. Some of these hardships were prison sentences, threats against their lives, having their offices burned down, bodily injury and loss of financial resources.

While some journalists were able to stay in business, others were forced to sell their newspapers or leave town.

The only reward many of these journalists have received is the Elijah Parish Lovejoy Award. Lovejoy was assassinated in 1837 at Alton for defending his printing press. The Lovejoy Award is made every fall by the School of Journalism One Lovejoy winner, Hazel Brannon Smith, received a Pulitzer Prize.

After being awarded the Pulitzer Prize, Smith wrote "All we have done here is try to meet honestly the issues as they arose. . . . As an individual and editor, I cannot fit into the pattern of absolute conformity demanded by the Citizens Councils.

I could not call myself an editor if I had gone along with the Citizens Councils—feeling about them the way I do. My interest has been to print the truth and protect and defend the freedom of all Mississippians."

Long wrote, "More than anything else, events of the last decade should have reminded us that in a country with no licensing of journalists, the public interest frequently is best served by those least qualified by wealth, education or professional status."

Women set for golf tourney

By Bill Mims
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

The Saluki women's golfers play in Huntington, W. Va. Friday and Saturday in their second 36-hole tournament of the spring season.

Marshall University is hosting the 12-team tournament, which was won last year by Georgia. SIU Coach Sandy Blaha said Georgia and Penn State are the team favorites. Kentucky, which won an invitational that SIU played in last fall, is another team favorite.

Western Illinois and Illinois State are the only state schools entered in the meet, and the Saluki women have beaten both teams consistently. Other teams entered are Cincinnati, Central Michigan, Western Kentucky, Austin Peay

State, and Bowling Green State.

"The course is hilly with a lot of trees. It's tighter than most courses our team is used to playing," Blaha said.

One disadvantage SIU will have to overcome is the fact that none of the players have toured the course, despite the fact SIU competed last year.

But this year, SIU plays a inexperienced lineup of five freshmen and a junior who didn't see much action last year.

One player who should feel at home is freshman Sandy Lemon, from Covington, Va. Lemon said her parents and relatives are making the four-hour drive from her home to see her compete. Lemon also should have an advantage since she's played on hillier courses all her career.

Other Saluki competitors will be freshmen Judy Dohrman, Jo Anne Idoux, Penny Porter and Lori Sackman, and junior Marilyn Hollier.

"I don't know how we'll do, it really depends on our team's consistency," Blaha said.

Blaha cited Lemon, Dohrman and Hollier for improved play in recent weeks. Part of that improvement showed last week as SIU set low team scores for 18 and 36 holes.

The Saluki women shot 329 for 18 holes and 669 for 36 holes, but still placed ninth in last week's 12 Illinois Invitational. After the Marshall tournament, SIU finishes its spring season with a May 7 home dual match against Illinois State.

House plays football, baseball—at same time

By George Coslak
Student Writer

Kevin House is probably in better shape than any athlete at SIU. He should be, he works out four hours a day, plays for the Saluki baseball team and is also getting in shape for the coming football season at spring practice.

When?

He also attends two-hour football meetings, three nights a week. The freshman from St. Louis isn't worried about his grades, though.

"The workouts don't really affect my studying time," the business administration major said. "I'm carrying 14 hours right now and it hasn't been too tough."

House was the second leading receiver on the Salukis last season and he plays the outfield for the baseball team. He's not seeing as much action in baseball as he did in football.

"I'm playing behind George Vukovich, so I don't really get too much playing time (Vukovich is one of the leading Saluki hitters). This year has been mainly a learning one for me as far as baseball is concerned. Football was a little different."

The 5-11, 160 pound House filled in for injured wide receiver Lawrence Love early in the season and finished second in receiving on a run-oriented SIU offense. He caught 11 passes for 150 yards, an average of 13.6 per catch. House is also an excellent special teams performer. Last season, he topped SIU kick returners with 303 yards and an 18.9 average.

Now his mind is on baseball. "I have only missed two road trips because of football practice," he said. "Both coaches (Itchy Jones and Rey Dempsey) said it was all right and we worked things out. I practice baseball for an hour each day, and at 2:30 I go to football practices. That usually lasts until 5:30."

The 19-year-old House said he has only missed the Indiana and Kentucky road trips because of the Saturday scrimmages.

His training for football is mostly durability drills. "I'm a wide receiver so I do a lot of running in practice. I don't work with weights during the baseball season, but I do isometrics. In baseball, I do a lot of running too. We mostly work on baserunning. Itchy has really helped me a lot."

House was a standout in both baseball and football his senior year at University City High School. In baseball he played center field for four years and in his senior year, he hit .300.

House also stole 20 bases in 24 games that year. He is used primarily as a designated runner this season. He's one-for-four in the stolen base department. "I don't mind being designated runner. I like to go out there. It's much better than riding the bench."

House, here on a football scholarship, said he likes both sports and said "whichever one offers the best in the future is the one I'll take up."

House expects to have a good shot at a job in the outfield next season. "Vukovich has a chance to be drafted this year, but I'm going to play summer baseball in a collegiate league that Itchy got me into. I don't know exactly where I'll be yet."

Spring practices in football end April 30 and House says he will spend most of his time sharpening his skills on the diamond. "After practices are over, I'm going to concentrate on strictly baseball."

IM managers meeting set

Intramural volleyball playoffs, canoe race registration and a managers meeting for the 16-inch softball playoff teams have been scheduled for next week.

Volleyball teams with 500 records or better qualify for the playoffs. The single elimination tournament begins Monday night in the Arena.

All those interested in competing in the two-man or two-person canoe races should register in the Office of Recreation and Intramurals starting Monday.

A managers meeting for 16-inch softball teams which compiled a .500 record or better has been scheduled for 4 p.m. Wednesday in the Morris Library Auditorium.

Yankees win

NEW YORK (AP)—Chris Chambliss, dropped from fourth to eighth in New York's potluck batting order, drove in five runs with a pair of doubles and a towering three-run homer as the Yankees defeated the Toronto Blue Jays 8-5 Thursday for their first two-game winning streak of the season.

Trackmen go separate ways

By Rick Karch
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer
Fresh off a big win over Illinois, the SIU track team will split up this weekend as members go two ways to two different meets.

Coach Lew Hartzog will take the top members of the team to Lawrence, Kan. for the 52nd running of the Kansas Relays Friday and Saturday. Bill Webb, assistant track coach, will take the rest of the team to Champaign to compete in the Illini Classic, where the Salukis will face the Illini again, along with 24 other teams.

Competing for SIU at Kansas will be Tim Johnson and Clay DeMatti in the pole vault. Bob Roggy in the javelin, Rick Rock in the long jump, Ken Lorraway in the long and triple jump. Mike Kee will also defend his championship in the 100-meter dash. In addition to the 440 and mile relays, SIU will also compete in the sprint medley relay.

In the sprint medley, which SIU placed third last year, Kee will run the first leg, Scott Dorsey will then run 440 yards, and finally Mike Bisase will run the last 880 yards.

Last year's sprint medley team covered the mile in 3:21.1 but Hartzog said "it was not in the condition that this year's team is." Only Bigelow and Bisase ran the sprint medley last year at Kansas.

The Saluki mile relay team was fifth last year, but again will have a new group running this year.

Hartzog expects the most competition in the relays to be supplied by teams from Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas. Those three teams are also running the 440-yard relay in just over 39.0. SIU's best time is 40.5, set last week.

"If we go and think about these relays," Hartzog said, "then we stand a chance of winning any one of them."

Some of the best teams in the Midwest will compete in the Kansas Relays, but Hartzog remarked that the Illini Classic, which is run the same weekend, "is liable to take away much of the luster of the Kansas Relays."

"Our relationship to both Kansas and Illinois is rather unique," Hartzog said, referring to the fact that SIU schedules dual meets with both schools every year. "We have a close association with both schools, so we support both meets."

Neither meet is a scoring meet as only individual championships will be counted.

The Illinois dual meet last Saturday concluded the dual meet season for SIU. The Salukis haven't lost a team meet (not counting relays or championship meets) in four years, and 1977 was no exception.

For the rest of the season, the Saluki slate reads: Drake Relays, Illinois Intercollegiate, the Valley Championships, the Central Collegiate and finally, the NCAA Championships.

Softball team scheduled for three-game weekend

The women's softball team is scheduled for a busy weekend with three games in Terre Haute, Ind. Friday evening the squad will face Indiana State, probably the toughest of the three opponents.

Last season the Sycamores defeated SIU 7-1. The year before SIU went into extra innings to win, so this season coach Kay Brechtelsbauer is expecting a tough contest. She said she will start Helen Hines on the mound and will probably go with basically the same lineup she's used all season.

Brechtelsbauer said Karen King will pitch one of the games on Saturday and Mayer the other. The morning game is with Indiana University-Purdue University at Indianapolis. The coach said she never heard of the team, let alone know anything about them. The afternoon contest is with the Indiana State junior varsity team. The Salukis were originally slated to play SIU-Edwardsville, but the Cougars couldn't make it.

SIU is sporting a 6-3 record. Pam Rendine leads the club with a hot .440 batting average. Bev Zintak has only nine at bats, but has a .333 average. Meyer and third baseman Pat Matreci are each hitting .272. Lisa Dennis and Robin Deterding are both hitting .258.

Meyer leads the club with eight runs batted in. Deterding has seven RBI's and Rendine has six.

Seattle Slew Derby pick

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — With just two weeks remaining before the Kentucky Derby, it appears that Seattle Slew will do little more than show up at Churchill Downs to claim the first jewel in thoroughbred racing's Triple Crown.

While the heavily favored Slew has spent the last month preparing for Saturday's Wood Memorial, his potential challengers have been falling like flies.

The latest casualty is Clev Er Tell, the Arkansas Derby winner who broke down Wednesday during a workout at Belmont Park.

Clev Er Tell was scheduled to start in the Wood, but was considered at best only an outside challenger to Seattle Slew, the strapping 3-year-old son of Bold Reasoning who is unbeaten in five career starts.

Others out of the picture for the 163rd Derby on May 7 include Cormorant, who won seven straight including the Gotham Stakes before being felled by a fever, and Banquet Table, victim of a chipped knee.

With Clev Er Tell and Cormorant on the sidelines, it appears Seattle Slew's top Derby challenger is Run Dusty Run, who received considerable backing for the 2-year-old of the year award that went to Slew.

But Run Dusty Run lost his last two starts, finishing second to Clev Er Tell in the Louisiana Derby and second by a nose to Giboulee in Tuesday's Calumet Purse at Keeneland. By comparison, Seattle Slew drubbed Giboulee in the Flamingo Stakes last month.

Two matches slated as netters open home season

By Jim Mianan
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

The Saluki tennis team opens its home outdoor dual season with matches Friday against SIU—Edwardsville and Saturday versus Eastern Kentucky and one can bet that Coach Dick LeFevre is praying for sunny skies.

That's because SIU's team, 8-9, has played their best tennis this year, according to LeFevre, while playing 11 matches outdoor. Indoors, SIU has not played as well. LeFevre has said, because his team has trouble adjusting to the varying conditions in different indoor places.

The matches Friday and Saturday are scheduled to start at 2 p.m. at the University tennis courts, but LeFevre knows that if it rains the matches will be moved indoors. SIU would play the teams at the Southern Illinois Racquet Club, located behind the University Mall on Old Route 13, if rain forces the meet indoors.

SIU played Indiana in a home indoor meet Feb. 19, but since that time the team has played its entire schedule on the road.

"We don't schedule our home meets very early in the year," LeFevre said. "There's usually too much wind, and rain in the area in March and early April so we stay on the road. But we make up for it, for most of our schedule the rest of the year is at home."

Besides the weekend matches, five more dual matches are scheduled to be played at SIU.

Senior Mel Ampon, 11-6, four sophomores—Neville Conlin, Neville Kennerley, Jeff Lubner and Sam Dean, and freshman Boaz Nikritin are SIU's six players slated to play.

"SIU-Edwardsville has beaten us in the past, they're a strong team," LeFevre said. "Eastern Kentucky we should be able to beat, but they're tough too."

SIU-E placed fifth in Division II tennis championships last year and return top players in Juan Farrow, a nationally ranked junior player from St. Louis, and Arjun Fernando, a Davis Cup player from Sri Lanka (formerly Ceylon).

LeFevre said Mel Ampon's match with Farrow and the Lubner-Fernando match would be competitive. He added that the rest of the matches should be close, too. SIU-E beat SIU, 9-0, but lost the rematch, 6-3.

LeFevre said Eastern Kentucky is one of the Ohio Valley's top tennis schools and return Joe Shaheen as its No. 1 player. SIU beat Eastern Kentucky the last time they played, LeFevre said.

The matches are vital, LeFevre said, so that the team can prepare for the Valley Conference tournament, scheduled May 16-18 in Wichita, which is the most important meet left on the schedule.

Saluki batters making lots of noise

By Dave Heun
Daily Egyptian Sports Editor

The Saluki baseball fans who cruise out to Abe Martin Field Friday for the 1:30 p.m. doubleheader with Kentucky State will probably end up agreeing that the Salukis have finally busted out of their batting slump.

The 22-7 Salukis have been getting some strong performances out of the pitchers lately (six complete games in the last nine wins), but that wasn't the problem. The problem was with the Saluki bats.

Batting slumps are as unpredictable as the weather. If that's the case, the Salukis are sizzling at a high temperature.

Going into Wednesday's doubleheader with Evansville the Salukis had six batters over .300 and three more on the verge of breaking that mark.

After the Salukis mopped up Evansville for their eighth and ninth straight wins, the batters were still turning in some healthy averages.

Leading the charge is Craig Robinson, who has been playing the role of the SIU designated hitter. Robinson is hitting .300, while leading the team in RBI's with 34.

Rightfielder Bruce Hanson, who can also relieve as a catcher, has a .384 batting mark. Hanson has batted only 26 times however, getting 10 hits.

George Vukovich is rapping the ball at a .365 pace and Rick Murray has moved over the .300 mark at .302 after a slow start. Jim Reeves has really been on a tear. Last week, the senior leftfielder from Murphysboro went 11 for 25 including a homer, two triples, two doubles and eight RBI's. That raised his average from .237 to .298. Wednesday, Reeves added three more hits in five at bats to move his average up to .328.

So the fans will have to agree that the Saluki bats are no longer silent. And that usually means that visiting teams will not enjoy their afternoons at Abe Martin Field.

Media should ignore early season baseball slump

Do you want to read a column about the last-place Cincinnati Reds, or the last-place New York Yankees? Or would you rather really get a laugh and read about the first place White Sox?

Well forget it. It's too darn early in the season to write about, let alone analyze, the troubles of some of the powerhouses of pro baseball or the surprise start of some of the weaklings.

In fact, a baseball writer that chooses to stick the knife in a trouble team this early is only asking for a hard time the rest of the season.

The situation that has unfolded in New York is a classic example. The New York writers are already after manager Billy Martin's scalp. The Yankees are 4-8, have a million or so games left, will eventually win the American League pennant, and could possibly win the World Series.

So why the big deal over a slow start? Martin is so upset with the goings-on that he won't let the newsmen in or near the dugout 25 minutes before a game. He claims that he went out of his way to be nice to them, and they turned around and drummed up all kinds of reasons for the early season blahs.

Rappin' Sports

By Dave Heun
Sports Editor

Now, he says, the reporters will have to play by his rules.

Now, if the Yankees, Reds or Angels (all preseason sure bets to win division titles) go into the All-Star game with records like 30-57, or 23-64, it would be time to lash out and blast or listen to all kinds of excuses. But not until. One must remember that many pennant races are won with stretch drives that boggle the mind. Need you Cub fans be reminded of the summer of '69. In other words, if you are going to lose, do it in the first few weeks of the season. Save the winning for those hot summer days in August and early September.

This is the very reason that you did not see an article blasting the baseball Salukis for an early season slump. It would have been a foolish thing, even though many fans were asking what was wrong with the team.

SIU Coach Itchy Jones talks about baseball teams thrive on getting the three cycles of baseball—hitting, pitching and defense—all working at a high level at the same time.

This takes some time. Baseball is like any other sport in that it is hard to predict when a team is going to hit a hot streak or a cold one.

One thing is certain. Managers don't rejoice over early season slumps, but they sure don't lose any hair over them. Ask Leo Durocher about who lost hair in that 1969 season. He won't say it was Gil Hodges (the Mets manager that season).

So you just read a baseball column about why baseball columns shouldn't be written so early in the season. And that makes about as much sense as ripping apart the baseball Salukis for a slow start would have made.
