House votes to ban legislative tuition waivers

By Lori D. Clark and Donita Polly
Daily Egyptian Reporters

The Illinois House voted to abolish the practice of granting legislative tuition waivers to college students because legislators abuse the power, a local representative says.

Eighty-five representatives voted Friday to eliminate the practice of allowing legislators to give tuition waivers to students within their districts. The House passed a similar bill last year, but the Illinois Senate chose not to follow suit.

Mike Bost, R-Murphysboro, said he voted against the 91-year-old practice because many legislators give the tuition waivers to students for political reasons.

He said some legislators give the waivers to campaign workers without any regard for the students' financial or academic background.

It would be better to do away with the practice than to let the abuses continue, Bost said.

The tuition-waiver policy allows each of the 177 Illinois legislators to waive two four-year public university tuitions each year. Requirements of the policy are that the recipients of the tuition waiver must be from the legislators' district, and one recipient must attend the University of Illinois. The other recipient must attend any other state university.

Bost said Illinois is one of three states that still offers legislative tuition waivers. Although he said it would be in the state's best interest to eliminate the practice, he said he does not know what the Senate's position will be this year.

Sen. Dave Luechtefeld, R-Okawville, said he is not sure how he will vote on the tuition waiver bill. He said the popular vote would be to abolish the waivers because of the abuses made by other legislators.

"I can have it either way," he said. "If done right, they can be something good for a lot of people."

He said he is not sure how the rest of the Senate will vote on the tuition waiver bill, because he has not talked to many senators about the issue.

SIUC officials could not be reached for comment Sunday.

Severe weekend storms damage local businesses

By Kendra Helmer
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Sightings of funnel clouds were reported during severe thunderstorms that brought damaging winds across the Southern Illinois area Friday night.

Damage was reported in Jackson, Perry, Franklin, Randolph and Hamilton counties. Although there was minimal damage in Carbondale, several Murphysboro businesses were damaged, Bill Crawshaw, Murphysboro Emergency Services Coordinator said.

"There was a lot of roof damage in Murphysboro," he said. "Businesses at the shopping center at Jackson Square received the most damage. Some people at Jackson Square reported seeing a funnel cloud in the air."

Crawshaw said a damage estimate is not available yet.

Illinois State Police Master Sgt. Adin Mitchell said the National Weather Service picked up tornadoes on radar, but there were not official reports of tornadoes actually touching down in the area. He said there were no reported injuries.

Mitchell said Old Du Quoin, which is approximately 20 miles north of Carbondale, received severe damage from the storms.

"There was one overturned semi trailer, the end was blown out of a large barn, and there were two reports of overturned mobile homes east of Du Quoin," Mitchell said.

Several large trees were broken like match sticks in a path from Old Du Quoin to Coello, which is a few miles east.

"An old abandoned grain elevator was damaged when part of the metal blew out across the railroad track," he said.

Mitchell said one home in Old Du Quoin, which had been vacant for years until the owner began remodeling recently, was damaged by the storm.

Could peace break out in Ireland?

Former U.S. senator predicts the end of conflict despite recent setbacks

By Brian T. Sutton
Daily Egyptian Reporter

There could be peace in Ireland, despite recent setbacks between the country and Britain, a former U.S. senator involved in peace negotiations with Irish and British representatives says.

Former U.S. Sen. George J. Mitchell, chairman of the International Commission on Disarmament in Northern Ireland, spoke to 130 people Friday at SIUC's Student Center regarding peace negotiations between Northern Ireland and Britain.

Mitchell said he believes the majority of Irish people want peace, and peace will come about when the people no longer live in the past.

"There is a danger when you have too much knowledge of the past," he said. "Being steeped in and living in the past can impede the peace process. Living in the past does not permit openness and flexibility to the future."

Northern Ireland has been under British rule since 1972, and many members of both the Protestant and Catholic populations disagree — to the point of violence — about British occupation. The Protestants, who are in the majority, wish to remain a part of Britain.

The Irish Republican Army wants the end of British rule, and the group often uses bombings to make that point. The IRA ended a 17-month cease fire by setting off a bomb in London on February 9.

Mitchell said after negotiations and conversations with the Irish, he believes the two regions can overcome the violence and bring about peace.

Irish-American novelist explains the historical basis for his stories

"My optimism is based on their (Northern Irish natives') overwhelming desire for peace," he said. "These are an intelligent people who do not want violence but want stability and security."

Mitchell said there have been atrocities committed against both Catholics and Protestants in the region. Reliving these tragedies keeps the hate alive, he said.

"You can tell a story about an innocent little boy who was killed on the way to school for one side," he said. "Change the name and you have a victim for the other side of the conflict. Both have had their share of pain."

CANADIAN SCANDAL WIDENS TO TOP OFFICIALS—
TORONTO—What began as a tragic but seemingly isolated incident of brutality by Canadian soldiers on peacekeeping duty in Somalia three years ago has gradually spiraled into a national scandal that now threatens the careers of Canada's two top defense leaders, Gen. Jean Boule, military chief of staff, and Defense Minister David M. Collette. At issue is whether high-ranking officers, including Boule, sought to impede public inquiry into events in Somalia by altering or destroying official documents and computer files. Boyle has denied the accusation.

DOLE ANSWERS CAMPAIGN QUESTIONS ON PBS —
WASHINGTON—Life in the Senate may be difficult for Majority Leader Robert J. Dole, Kan., but life on the campaign trail is not always much better. The presumptive Republican presidential nominee sat down for an interview last week with PBS's Jim Lehrer, who asked Dole a basic question about the coming campaign: What are the major differences between him and Clinton? "I think, you know, as I've said on the stump—he (Clinton) may think it's not quite accurate, but I think, my view is that we trust the people and he trusts the government. That's the shorthand." Dole went on to mention Clinton's 1993 tax increase, made a reference to returning power to the states, "the so-called Tenth Amendment to the Constitution approach," he called it, and the Family Leave Act. But he did not offer a simple, declarative sentence explaining his differences with the president.

NRA SEEKS TO CAST CLINTON AS SOFT ON CRIME—
DALLAS—National Rifle Association officials this weekend cast President Clinton as soft on crime and said the NRA would work to oust him in November and to persuade more states to enact laws allowing people to carry concealed weapons to protect themselves. In often shrill language, the NRA, celebrating its 125th anniversary at its annual convention here, depicted Clinton as the greatest single threat to the Second Amendment right to bear arms, citing his repeated commitment to veto any repeal of the two-year-old ban on assault weapons. At the same time, the NRA, as expected, touted presumptive Republican presidential nominee Robert J. Dole, R-Kan., as a challenger who "wears two Purple Hearts and the Bronze Star with an oak leaf cluster" and supports the right to bear arms.

DAY CARE STUDY POSITIVE FOR MATERNAL BOND—
PROVIDENCE, R.I.—The largest, longest and most comprehensive study yet of the effects of child care on infants' development has shown no significant correlation between nonmaternal care and the emotional attachment infants feel for their mothers. However, the study sponsored by the National Institute of Child Health and Development cautioned Saturday that low-quality child care, more than 10 hours per week in care and multiple-care arrangements do adversely affect infant attachment when combined with maternal insensitivity.

Pulitzer-winning author speaks to crowd of 500

By Melissa Jakubowski
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Shaping the lives of fictional characters around actual historical events gives substance to a novel, Pulitzer Prize-winning author William Kennedy told a crowd of 500 people Thursday night in the Student Center.

"A lot of writers don't want to do a historical check while they are working on a story," he said. "But you need that background to authenticate your work."

Kennedy, director of the New York State Writers Institute, read two chapters from his latest novel, "The Flaming Corsage."

His reading was part of the American Conference for Irish Studies at SIUC this weekend.

Kennedy's novels center on his home city of Albany, N.Y. He has published six novels centering on the lives of Irish Americans in Albany during the 19th and 20th centuries.

"The Flaming Corsage" tells the story of the troubled marriage of playwright Edward Dehority and his aristocratic wife, Katrina, at the turn of the 19th century.

Kennedy said while he is researching for a novel, a certain moment of history will grab his attention and will become the background time for his novel.

He said Grover Cleveland's election to the offices of governor of New York and president of the United States during 1881-1885 serve as one of the historical backdrops to his novel.

Seminar gives law students rare look at jury selection

By Tammy Taylor
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Jury selection is a topic that is not focused on in most trial law classes, but members of the legal community and SIUC law students received instructions on effective jury selection at a trial advocacy seminar Friday, an SIUC law student says.

Daniel Kay, president of the SIUC chapter of the Association of Trial Lawyers of America, said jury selection was a topic discussed by attorneys Cynthia Fobian Willham and Terence Quinn at the Success in Trial Advocacy Seminar in the Lesar Law School Auditorium.

Kay said jury selection is a subject in which most trial lawyers receive no formal instruction, and in many pre-trial and trial classes, the topic is covered in a very vague manner, he said.

"When trial attorneys are shown effective methods in selecting a jury, they are able to rely on a little more than their gut feelings during the process," he said.

Kay said the purpose of the seminar was to expose the legal community of Southern Illinois to national-caliber attorneys. He said that in the past, a lawyer would have to go to places such as New York, Chicago or Los Angeles to see the types of speakers that were featured at SIUC's seminar.

Willham, a litigation consultant and adjunct professor from the University of Iowa, said jury selection is a crucial part of the trial process. She said one of the goals of

Alumnus spends 20 days in peace camp as observer

By Lisa M. Pangburn
Daily Egyptian Reporter

A slide show portraying images of poverty, hunger, military, and revolution in Mexico was presented Thursday at the Student Center by an SIUC graduate who served as an international observer in the country.

Steve Christianson, a 1995 alumnus of SIUC, showed slides from his trip to Mexico last September as a neutral observer of the fight for democracy in the town of Chiapas.

The Zapatistas, a group fighting for democracy in Chiapas, Mexico, began a revolution 12 years ago. Their principal demand is to end the current Mexican political system and to make a transition to a democracy in which people's 16 basic human rights and needs are respected.

Some of the 16 basic human rights the Zapatistas are demanding include: food, shelter, justice, freedom from corruption and education.

Christianson said he stayed for 20 days in a peace camp as a neutral international observer of the Zapatistas and the Mexican military. He said he decided to become a voluntary observer of the situation after hearing about the unrest in Mexico. He said he funded his trip to Mexico with graduation money.

Christianson said he listened to Cecilia Rodriguez, a Zapatistas spokeswoman, talk about the fighting in Mexico, and that is what got him interested in going to a peace camp.

"There was a call put out to come and observe the human rights violation and try to fix the problem," he said. "We tried to keep the Mexican military honest and keep an eye on the Zapatistas as well."

The slide show featured pictures of people living in huts or small houses. Christianson said as many as eight people could live in the small houses.

Holocaust portrayed in different light

By James Lyon
DE Features Editor

Ken Segan gave a lecture on his artwork called "Under The Wings of G-d" to explain some of his views on the Holocaust in front of a full University Museum Auditorium Thursday.

Segan, a 1977 SIUC alumnus with a degree in art, portrays victims of the Holocaust in a slightly different light by presenting them with large angel-like wings.

He said his art consists of looking at old photographs, drawing them in pen and ink and then sketching in the wings coming out of the backs and shoulders of the people.

Segan said the wings are drawn in to represent the strength the victims of the Holocaust had to face during one of the most horrible times in human history.

"If you see some of the artwork that represents the Holocaust, you can see the type of horror these people faced," he said. "I wanted to do something to restore their dignity, and to show that these were real people and not just some faceless memory."

"People have always been fascinated with flight, and I began to draw wings on people to show them as a symbol of beauty even though they faced unspeakable terror."

Segan said he studied in Poland from 1984 to 1985, and described it as a vast Jewish graveyard. He said he first had the idea to draw wings on people when he saw a photograph of a three people in a trolley and imagined them being taken to the afterlife.

He said the title "Under the Wings of G-d" represents a way of writing God without blaspheming the name, which is a common practice in Hebrew writings.

Segan's lecture also consisted of the artwork of the late Israel Bernbaum, who was born and raised in Warsaw.

Segan said he and Bernbaum worked together on occasion. Segan showed the drawings from Bernbaum's children's book "My Brother's Keeper," which won an award in Germany for best children's book in 1990.

Betsy Leverett, the director of the Hillel Foundation for Jewish Campus Life, which was one of the sponsors of the lecture, said she had seen Segan's work in one of the alumni magazines and decided to bring him back for a lecture series.

She said his works are a reminder of what happened to these people, and it gives them a little more dignity because of the way they are presented. Leverett also said it makes people more aware of how easy it was for an event like the Holocaust to occur, and we should be careful not to let it happen again.

Segan said his work is different when compared to other Holocaust lectures because it encompasses a wide range of ages and addresses problems directly.

Let Roy Cameron — The Daily Egyptian

Ken Segan stands with one of the drawings from his series "Under the Wings of G-d" at the University Museum Auditorium Thursday evening.

"My views are not just there to tell a story but to put the events in today's terms as well," he said. "If we are going to address world situations and address the problems in our own community, it is important to speak out against some of the politics that keep some cultures down."

"Some people will just talk about the Holocaust and leave it at that. That can lead to a mentality that deals with nothing but isolation and killing. I try to deal with the people that were involved and show them as real people and not just faces. I wanted to do something like this so I could reach children as well as adults and let them become more informed of what happened so they can make choices and not let it happen again."

EDITORIAL

USG needs to use referendums more wisely in the future

IT'S HARD TO SAY BAD THINGS ABOUT referendums. Especially at SIUC where it's difficult to gauge student opinion and even more difficult to make that opinion known to the University hierarchy. Referendums work great in both these respects. Students express opinions on a well-written "yes or no" question that clearly defines the issue at hand, and the results are tabulated and then presented to the body making a decision on the issue, in most cases the SIUC Board of Trustees.

Of course, this is how a referendum is supposed to work in theory. In practice, a lot of things can go wrong. The two referendums SIUC's Undergraduate Student Government placed on Wednesday's USG election ballot illustrate how the referendum process should not be carried out.

Let's look at the referendum on student fees first. Plans for the referendum were detailed in the Daily Egyptian weeks before the election. The idea was to show students a breakdown of fee amounts and increases. Then, in light of the fact that SIUC is increasing fees at a rate higher than the Illinois Board of Higher Education guideline of 3 percent, students were asked if the increases at SIUC should be reduced to follow this guideline.

DESPITE MAKING THE COMPLEX FEE ISSUE too simple, the referendum could have accomplished two things: Many students could have seen the individual fee amounts and increases for the first time and they could let the Board of Trustees know how fast they are willing to let fees increase.

But copies of the referendum did not make it to polling stations until about noon Wednesday — five hours after the stations opened. This alone silenced 800 student voices on the issue.

UNFORTUNATELY, THIS WAS NOT THE ONLY mishap with the fee referendum. The copies that finally made it to the polling stations did not include the breakdown in student fees. As a result, students who participated in the referendum had almost no background on the issue they were voting on.

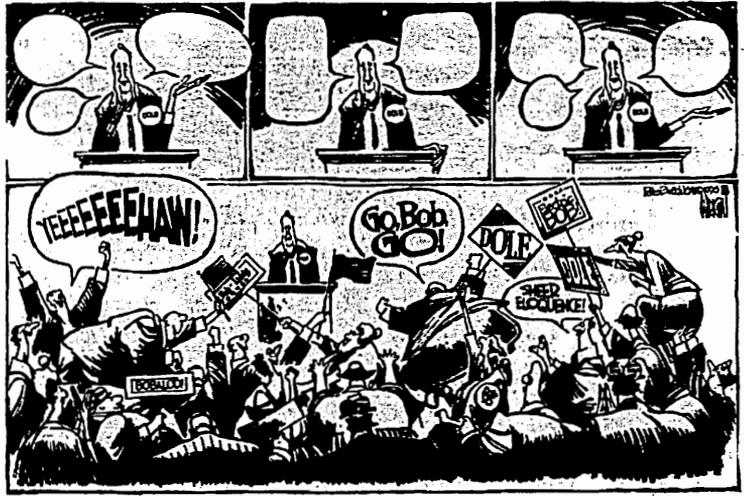

Another referendum on Wednesday's ballot was equally flawed. The little-publicized and confusing referendum basically told students that there were proposed changes to the USG constitution that would improve the document and asked if the changes should be implemented. No specifics were given, and any student that was not already quite familiar with the constitution would have difficulty knowing what the referendum was really seeking input on.

We, probably like much of the voting student body, were left scratching our heads when we saw the referendum.

THIS BRINGS UP A COUPLE OF QUESTIONS: Why have a referendum on a topic that many people know nothing about, and what do the results of such a referendum mean?

Although only USG officials can answer the former question, we believe we have the answer to the latter: The results mean nothing. About the only thing introducing the referendum accomplished was to give USG members a chance to say "Hey, we made sure that students agreed that the constitution needed changes before any changes were adopted." Having a referendum for this reason is nothing short of patronizing the students who took time to vote Wednesday.

Referendums are an important tool that can help USG represent the student body. When they are carried out as they were Wednesday, they only give students another reason to wonder what USG is really doing for them.

Letters to the Editor

Publication of Isma'il piece was insensitive

I am writing in response to the April 17 publication of Mr. Kyle Jamal Isma'il's Perspective. I would like to share some student reactions to your editorial choices. "Insensitive" is the most often-used adjective describing your attitude you reveal by printing such a crowd during Holocaust Remembrance Week. It would be similar to a discussion of the Inquisition during Christmas or Muslim terrorists during Ramadan. You have committed an act of journalistic disrespect of that magnitude. "Lack of prudence" and even "sensationalism" were mentioned by other students as motives for publishing at this time, such fecal outpourings of anti-Semitism (that label applies to haters of any Jews, of any ethnicity, including Black Jews from Ethiopia). The charge of "yellow journalism" also was leveled, as well as the hypothesis that the editor contemplates a long career of supplying that which "encouraging minds want to know."

As for Mr. Isma'il, he is entitled to his opinion and to have that opinion made public, despite its glaring biographic and philosophic shortcomings. His own name implies a claim to be a child of Abraham (PBUH), and to all such I would say: "You must learn to share in your birthright." To point that at one moment in history or another and say that whoever possessed this piece of land at that time is the rightful owner of all of it forever is to ignore or be in denial of the dynamic process that human history is.

And when Isma'il speaks of international human rights violations in Palestine (a fine name of a geographic or historical area and perhaps, with human understanding and God's grace, a political reality again in the near future), does he include Hezbollah firing rockets at civilian targets, as well as Israeli artillery and air attacks on civilians?

The Israeli military forces kill innocent people in the name of the security of the State of Israel. Hezbollah kills innocent people (sometimes committing suicide in the process) in the name of God. Whether you find those two actions morally equivalent may depend on how seriously you take God's proscription of killing the innocent. If the Holy Land is not shared, it will be destroyed, or at least made a lot less holy by the desecrations of those who inhabit it. Finally Mr. Isma'il says: "Let ignorance, weak thinking, and wrong ideas not prevail among the masses." From your lips to God's ear. Peace.

Unions have a stranglehold on University

How many electricians does it take to change a light bulb? In many circles this question would be a lead-in to a tacky joke. Here at SIUC it is a legitimate question.

Physical Plant unions have the University in a stranglehold. As a member of the University Housing staff, I witness the extent of this stranglehold on a daily basis.

Only certified union electricians are allowed to change light bulbs. Apparently, University students, faculty and maintenance workers are far too incompetent to attempt such a daunting task. The idea of a faculty member rearranging his or her own office is even more unthinkable. If a window is broken on University property, one Physical Plant worker is called to replace the window while another worker must clean up the broken glass.

I understand that unions provide protection against inferior workmanship and by untrained individuals, but the unionism at this institution is excessive.

I am writing this letter in response to an article in the April 18 Daily Egyptian. The University is currently faced with a golden opportunity. Not only has someone stepped forward and offered to donate the herbicide needed to begin the restoration of Thompson Woods, but another charitable individual has offered to apply the herbicide for only $1. Once again, however, unions threaten to stand in the way. Apparently, Mr. Jung's application of the herbicide may violate the University's contract with the unions. If so, then if Mr. Jung applied the herbicide, the University might have to pay the union for the work he did.

I think it is time for the University to stand up to the unions. Perhaps it is even time to reevaluate the current collective bargaining agreement. When the University is forced to decline donated material and labor for a much needed project, it is beyond pathetic. Unions were formed to protect individuals from exploitation by corporations. Now it is the unions that are doing the exploiting.

150 walk for March of Dimes

By Mary Beth Arimond
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Warm weather and sunny skies brought children, parents and SIUC students together to help raise money for the March of Dimes Walk America at Evergreen Terrace Sunday.

Tina Williams, a volunteer for March of Dimes, said more than 150 people came out to participate in the five-mile walk that began at 1 p.m. She said the walkers crossed Pleasant Hill Road, proceeded down Douglas Drive and continued around campus. Williams said the walk ended in Evergreen Park, taking about two hours to complete.

Iva Dell Clay, community director for March of Dimes Southern Illinois division, said the group is a national voluntary health organization whose mission is to improve the health of babies by preventing birth defects and infant mortality.

She said through corporate sponsorship and individual walkers, the March of Dimes Southern Illinois Division hopes to raise $6,500 this year.

Clay said the individual walkers from approximately 34 teams raised money by asking for donations from their friends, relatives and co-workers.

She said the main focus of Walk America this year is a Think Ahead Campaign, which focuses on people planning their pregnancies before conception.

"We're stressing that people should take folic acid, which is a B vitamin," she said.

"Taking folic acid before and during pregnancy can reduce the risk of neurotube defects by up to 70 percent. It's an easy way to help reduce the chances of birth defects."

Roger Klam, honorary chairman and an obstetrician/gynecologist, said he led hundreds of Carbondale-area residents as they walked during Walk America.

He said he wanted people to know that March of Dimes research, education and community programs could bring healthy babies into the world.

"I hope to motivate people to help eliminate the cause of less-than-perfect babies," he said.

"This event will enable the pre-born to live in a much healthier environment within the uterus."

He said he was very pleased to see a large turnout and a diverse group of people walking.

"The children walked because they're our future," he said. "Those people at child-bearing age worked to decrease their risk because they know they are the ones at risk.

Carbondale residents Joe Kolis, his wife, Krista, and their daughter Kayla, age 3, participated in the March of Dimes Walk America on a sunny Sunday afternoon.

The post-child-bearing age group walked because they haven't forgotten the risks."

Williams said her daughter, Kayce Marie Williams, was the 1996 ambassador for the Carbondale-area Walk America. She said her daughter was the ambassador because she turned out to be a healthy baby.

She said if mothers follow the pre-natal guidelines of the March of Dimes, they will have a healthy baby.

"If a couple is planning a pregnancy before conception, they need to contact the March of Dimes for information that would help parents have a healthier baby," she said.

Daniel Prather, a graduate student in public administration from Brandon, Miss., and team captain of the Public Administration Student Organization, said PASO likes to do something good for the community, and it is the only way to help raise money for the March of Dimes.

He said he likes to see people of all ages take advantage of the warm weather and participate.

"It's a beautiful day for everyone to get some exercise and to help out a worthy cause," he said.

Chris Popjoy, a freshman in business finance from Buffalo Grove and a volunteer for the March of Dimes, said he and his fraternity, Delta Sigma Phi, wanted to help make this event a success by contributing their time and money.

"Our fraternity had a collection of over $100 for the event," he said. "We thought that community involvement would be the center of success for the March of Dimes Walk America."

Ireland

Mitchell said there has been a correlation between the violence and unemployment in Ireland.

Most people realize that peace can mean economic growth for the country as well as the end of the violence, he said.

"When unemployment is up, the violence is up," he said.

"The violence has stopped trade and economic growth within the country."

Mitchell said that the people in Northern Ireland are ready to make steps to bring change and progress to the country.

"They want what anyone in L.A. or Chicago wants: an opportunity to work and provide for their families," he said.

Mitchell said he thinks peace still is possible between the two sides despite the most recent bombing in England.

He said he is confident that a new set of talks scheduled for June 10 will help to bring peace.

Mitchell said that in an election scheduled for May 30 in Northern Ireland, voters will choose 110 representatives from all Irish political parties for the peace negotiations.

"I believe that real dialogue will occur," he said. "I believe there will be a genuine effort to produce a result that all can pledge allegiance to."

He said he believes the peace negotiations should attempt to silence the guns and change mindsets of everyone involved.

Mitchell's speech was part of a four-day meeting of the American Conference for Irish Studies at SIUC.

the jury selection process is to identify the prospective jurors' attitudes and dispositions.

"By learning about the jurors' backgrounds and experiences, an attorney will be able to find out who will be closed to the arguments they will present," Willham said.

Through questioning the panel, an attorney may find out that the jurors are rational and will not be swayed by emotional arguments, she said.

"This information is important because the attorney will be able to tailor the arguments based on this," she said.

"The more you understand about jurors, the more you can tailor your case to be understood by the jury."

Ken Beljanski, secretary for SIUC's chapter of the Association of Trial Lawyers of America, said he learned that the use of technical language can make jury panels feel uneasy.

He said using less technical terms helps the potential jurors feel more comfortable.

Willham said a lawyer can never know what a potential juror

"The more you understand about jurors, the more you can tailor your case to be understood by the jury."

Cynthia Fobian Willham Litigation consultant

may say.

She told the seminar's audience a story that demonstrated how vital it is for attorneys to expect the unexpected during jury selection.

She said an attorney she knows was near the end of the jury selection process, and an innocent-looking, "grandmother-type" woman had not said very much during the questioning.

The attorney asked the woman if she had anything to comment on, and the woman responded, "I think you should know that I am not of this planet, and my responses are controlled by a higher being."

Willham said the lawyer, without missing a beat, asked the woman, "Does the higher being have anything to add?"

Quinn, a trial attorney from South Dakota, said when conducting a jury selection, a lawyer should be short and concise.

"Sit down and talk to the jurors about their fears, concerns and prejudices," he said.

Quinn conducted a mock jury selection to demonstrate some effective methods lawyers can use when questioning the jury panel.

Beljanski said Quinn's style of presentation was different than he had imagined it would be.

He said he has learned that many attorneys use jury selection as their first opportunity to plead their case.

Beljanski said the mock case involved an auto accident, and Quinn first opened up a dialogue between himself and the panel by asking them if they had ever been in an auto accident.

He said Quinn used this method to put the panel at ease, and he only mentioned the specifics of the case when it was necessary.

"Instead of being talked at, the potential jurors were being spoken to, and they were doing a majority of the speaking," Beljanski said.

Storms

"They just started fixing up the house, and the wind knocked down the new garage," he said. "There's an old garage behind the demolished new garage. The old garage is still standing."

Linzee Insurance Agency of Du Quoin insures several homes in Old Du Quoin.

"One home had a 28 feet by 30 feet barn blow away into a lake," Raymond Linzee III, vice president of the agency, said. "Another home had three huge trees that were two feet in diameter that fell. One hit the house."

Linzee said the occupant of the house was in the basement when the storm struck and was not injured.

News stations across the region broadcast warnings and advised people living in the path of the storm to take shelter in a basement or in an inner room with no windows.

Tony Earls, coordinator of residence life for Thompson Point, an SIUC campus housing facility, said the principal concern he has for students during a severe storm is the possibility of imploding glass.

The slide show also featured some military action and slides of the military bases.

Christianson said that after being in the peace camp, it made him appreciate what he had.

"Being in a peace camp made me realize how much we, as Americans, have as opposed to other countries," he said.

"It was a whole new culture, going to that peace camp."

Christianson spoke of people protesting in the streets for democracy.

He told of a pregnant woman who was very near labor, but she was still protesting her cause.

Christianson said that Americans could learn something from the Zapatistas.

"We should come together instead of polarizing on our issues," he said. "That is something we need to learn from the people in Mexico."

Recruits

about learning and trying to improve."

Shaneyfelt said the recruits' exposure to experienced professional golfers give them an advantage over most young golfers.

Shaneyfelt said Phillips has been trained by Randy Phillips, a profound golf instructor who has taught all the top junior players in the Southern Illinois area.

Hudek has received lessons from Hank Haney, a professional golfer in Texas.

"I already have one kid (Todd Eaker) on my golf team who goes to see Haney, so it's a good situation that I've got two kids seeing the same professional in Texas working on their golf swings," Shaneyfelt said. "Not only do I help them, but I teach along the same lines as Haney."

Shaneyfelt said the recruits perform well, and are very receptive to various golf swinging methods.

"All of these kids have had good high school careers, and they've all been around experienced teachers, so to take lessons and improve and work on their golf swing comes natural to them," Shaneyfelt said.

"It's not going to scare them because they've always done it a certain way."

Shaneyfelt said taking lessons from professionals has taught the recruits how to focus on their swing without their minds wandering.

"You've got to be able to turn the brain off and learn how to play," he said.

"These kids have obviously done that through taking lessons. They've got the brain on, but when the gun goes off to play you can't control it, you have to just swing the club and allow what's going to happen, happen. These kids know how to turn the switch on and off."

Shaneyfelt said he is not expecting a lot out of them coming in as freshman here.

"I won't be expecting a tremendous amount from them but I will be expecting a little bit out of them," he said.

"I'm building for two years and three years down the road. When those kids are sophomores and juniors, I'm expecting a lot then."

Shaneyfelt said he plans to sign three additional golfers for the next season.

Sycamore

"By the time the kids get to be seniors, they really should be the backbone of the team, and they certainly are."

One big event winner for the Salukis was the 400-meter dash, as Daniels won the event with a time of 55.18, pacing junior teammates Sheila Hollins (56.67) and Leslie Batson (57.23) for first, second, and third consecutively.

The 400-meter low hurdle duo of Pierce and sophomore Jaspreet Bajwa crossed the finish line in second and third place with times of 1:00.82 and 1:03.6 consecutively.

Perhaps another high point for the SIUC women's track and field team was winning the last race of the day — the 4x400-meter relay. Pierce, Daniels, Hollins, and sophomore Traci Mitchell brought in a time of 3:44.93.

Although Denoon said the distance field is still the "soft" part of the team, consisting mainly of freshmen and sophomores, sophomore distance runner Kelly French was able to end the meet on a high note.

"I thought Kelly French had a good performance," DeNoon said. "She saw that she was seeded fourth or fifth going into the race (the 5,000-meter run), and she came out in second."

French, displaying a time of 18:03.51, was able to edge out third place runner Megan Freney of Ohio State by just over a second.

Williamson continued to perform at or near the top of her events as she won the long jump with a leap of 19-09 3/4, and place second in the triple jump, clearing 40-03 1/4.

Although the Sycamore Invitational women's title remained in the hands of SIUC, DeNoon offered his team a word of caution and insight as to what the road to the conference championship might be like.

As DeNoon spoke to his athletes after the meet, he stressed now is not the time to get over-confident in their victory. He also reminded them that the MVC championship meet was still almost a month away, and that anyone of the Salukis' rival teams could pull out a conference championship May 18.

"We just can't say that Illinois State and Indiana State are going to be easily beaten or beaten at all in the conference setting," DeNoon said. "It's a totally different meet — athletes are used in different ways."

"Looking at Ohio State, that's the best I think they could do (at the Sycamore Invitational)," he said. "I don't think that's the best Illinois State and Indiana State could do."

Heart failure claims life of Jimmy 'the Greek' Snyder

The Los Angeles Times

Jimmy "the Greek" Snyder, the blustery oddsmaker and sports commentator whose career came to an end because of controversial comments he made about black athletes, died Sunday in Las Vegas. He was 77.

Snyder, who had been in poor health for some time, died of heart failure after being hospitalized for the last month and a half in Las Vegas, according to a long-time friend, Tommy Manakides.

He was the most famous oddsmaker in the betting world, much of that notoriety coming from his uncanny knack at self-promotion. And that reputation was enhanced in the mid-'70s when he became a regular on CBS' "NFL Today" pregame show.

All that ended, however, after an off-hand television interview in 1988, given while he was eating lunch in Washington.

Snyder said black athletes were superior to whites because of breeding and that the only thing whites continue to control are coaching jobs.

The comments ignited a major protest from black leaders, and Snyder was fired from his CBS job the next day.

Part of the problem was the timing of the remark, coming as it did only a short time after Dodger executive Al Campanis said blacks lacked the "necessities" to be major league managers and front-office executives.

inning to finalize the scoring, 8-5. SIUC junior pitcher Toby Hatten, who has been struggling lately, suffered the defeat, and dropped his record to 2-4 on the season.

The Salukis, who have surpassed their conference win total of eight from last season in just over half the MVC schedule, had many opportunities to turn the three losses into victories.

The Shockers' bats and arms proved to be too powerful down the stretch.

"We either led or tied mid-way through all four games, so is a small fact that shows us we are headed in the right direction," SIUC baseball coach Dan Callahan said.

Callahan said the after the game Friday that the Salukis' victory was important for the club.

But Sunday, he said he was disappointed Southern could not gain a series split with the opportunities it had in the three defeats.

"Not only was this a big win for us in the conference, but it's also very exciting to beat one of the top teams in the country," he said Friday.

"McConnell did a great job holding down this team. Once again, we fought back hard, which is something we've done all year.

"I'm disappointed we couldn't pull off another win to split the series, as our guys fought back to tie things up and gave us a chance to win it."

"The longball really hurt us today (Sunday) as five of Wichita's eight runs came via the home run."

The Salukis' next game is Tuesday, as the Dawgs take to the road to battle Southeast Missouri State.

The first pitch is scheduled for 1 p.m.

Sweep

innings of work in the loss, but redeemed herself in the second game.

Shutteck, who was doubtful for the trip due to an injury, hit an RBI single in the bottom of the 12th inning which allowed the Salukis to sneak by UNI 4-3.

Despite the Salukis' late inning spark against the Panthers, Knotts said SIUC did not play with the enthusiasm it should have.

"We knew both teams were going to be tough, but we didn't play with the enthusiasm that we have been recently," Knotts said.

"We played some really strong defense, but didn't get our bats going."

SIUC returns to the road Tuesday when it battles Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville in a non-conference showdown.

Women whittle foes at Sycamore Invite

By Jared Driskill
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Neither a strong crosswind, nor the heat of the day could stop the SIUC women's track and field team from winning the 1996 Sycamore Invitational for the second year in a row Saturday.

Southern won the meet with 114 points, while Ohio State placed second, scoring 99 points, and host Indiana State scored 96.5 points to follow in third place.

Southwest Missouri State, Marquette University, Illinois State, Eastern Illinois, and Butler University rounded out competition Saturday.

According to SIUC women's track and field coach Don DeNoon, all lights were green in this meet for his athletes.

"We didn't hold anybody back," DeNoon said. "We ran some of the kids pretty hard. We weren't healthy enough to do those kinds of things before."

"I think the kids, in my estimation, need to find out what they're capable of doing," he said.

Perhaps the continuing success of the SIUC women's track and field team — which has not lost a single contest during the outdoor season thus far — can be attributed to its unequalled depth on both the field and the track.

One belief DeNoon has about track and field is that a team cannot have too much depth.

According to DeNoon, although his field athletes generally produce big numbers, it was the leadership of his senior class that shone through the passing clouds Saturday.

DeNoon said seniors such as Joy Williamson, Elissa Pierce, Stephanie Smith, and Katrina Daniels are the ones who should come to the forefront just as they did Saturday.

"Close to half the points were scored by our seniors," DeNoon said.

Weekend sweep by Drake drops SIUC to 4th place

By Michael DeFord
DE Assistant Sports Editor

With a weekend sweep of SIUC, the Drake University softball team can now lay claim to Missouri Valley Conference bragging rights.

Southern (19-14, 7-5) dropped a pair of games against Drake (27-8-1, 11-2-1) Saturday in Des Moines, which allowed the Bulldogs to take over the leagues No. 1 spot, while SIUC falls to No. 4.

Southern suffered a heart-breaking 3-2 defeat in the first game, then was shutout 4-0 in its second bid against the Bulldogs.

Drake's pitching staff limited the Salukis' to just seven hits on the afternoon, which proved to be the decisive factor in the series.

"We needed a couple of wins, but we just couldn't score any runs," Saluki softball coach Kay Brechtelsbauer said. "Drake has a very good team and a strong lineup with some good pitchers. We just didn't play as well as we needed to in order to win."

"But we're certainly not out of the conference race."

Overall, sophomore catcher Amy Thompson proved to be the big stick for the Bulldogs. Thompson went four-for-six in the series, including a home run, and four RBIs.

In the first game, Saluki junior hurler Jamie Schutteck took a one-run lead into the bottom of the seventh inning before giving up a one-out, two-run homer to Drake's Jenny Ehler.

"We needed a couple of wins, but we just couldn't score any runs."

Ehler's two-run blast proved to be a hard pill for the Salukis to swallow. "We had Drake in the first game," Brechtelsbauer said. "It was a hard loss for us to take. They are disappointed because that was a tough loss."

Southern fared no better in the second game as Drake's hitters jumped on freshman pitcher Kim Fields. Fields gave up seven hits in seven innings of work in the 4-0 loss.

Drake jumped out to an early 2-0 lead in the top of the second with a two-run homer off the bat of Thompson and never looked back. Freshman Sarah Haak threw the complete game, four-hit shutout for the Bulldogs.

The two losses to Drake simply added to Southern's weekend's struggle on the road.

Friday, the Salukis split a pair of games against the University of Northern Iowa.

Southern lost the first game of its doubleheader against the Panthers 7-2. Schutteck gave up 12 hits in 6.1

Shockers zap Dawgs, capture three of four

By Chad Anderson
DE Sports Editor

In a test of its ability to become a dominate club in the Missouri Valley Conference, and make a run for the Valley's top spot, the SIUC baseball team dropped three of its four games over the weekend against Wichita State, which is ranked third in the nation.

The Salukis (21-19, 11-9) won the series opener Friday night, behind a collective pitching effort in which junior pitcher Mike McConnell picked up his second save of the season, and senior Greg Harrier (4-1) grabbed the victory.

SIUC came from behind to win 10-9, but then dropped three straight games to the Shockers (32-6, 12-3)

Saturday and Sunday. Saturday's double-header handed Saluki sophomore hurler David Piazza (4-1) his first defeat of the season in the first half of the twin-bill, 7-2, and fellow sophomore pitcher Chris Schullian (2-3) his third defeat of the season, 6-4, in the night-cap.

Sunday's series finale was a scoring trade-off between the two clubs until Wichita State's Randy Young put the game out of reach with a seventh inning solo-homer to put the Shockers up by three runs, 6-3.

The Salukis did counter-attack in the eighth, though, by scoring two runs, but WSU again put space between the two by scoring two runs of its own the bottom half of the

Newest golf recruits raising expectations, looking to lower Salukis' future scores

By William C. Phillips III
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The SIUC men's golf team may be struggling, but coach Gene Shaneyfelt said his team is in a rebuilding process with three new golfers he has signed for next season.

Among the recruits are Carbondale native Scott Tate, who participated in all the Gateway junior PGA events, and was state qualifier for the last two years; Michael Hudek, of Frankfort, one of the top-picked Chicago area golfers; and Josh Phillips of Belleville-state qualifier for the past two years, and top Gateway section participant.

Shaneyfelt said Phillips was one of 197 golfers that competed in last year's Taylor Made Tournament at Crab Orchard Golf Course. "That was the first time he'd ever seen a golf course—he shot 72-70 and finished third," Shaneyfelt said.

Shaneyfelt said the Salukis' golfing history and attitude on and off the course compelled him to sign the new recruit.

"Scott, I've seen him grow up over the last few years at our junior program at Crab Orchard Golf Course," Shaneyfelt said. "He's very energetic about playing, and open-minded

Between the Lines

SIUC men's tennis team was defeated in a non-conference match against Oklahoma State University 6-1 Saturday.

The Salukis lost five of the six single matches and all three doubles. Mick Smyth, playing in the No. 1 spot, had Southern's lone victory by default over Tom Janda.

The Salukis are 3-13 for the season. Southern will compete in the Missouri Valley Conference Championships in Des Moines, Iowa April 26-29.

DePaul University sophomore basketball standout Jermalne Watts has been charged with possession of pound of marijuana, Chicago police said Friday.

Watts was arrested and charged Thursday, then released on $20,000 bond on Friday. The marijuana was allegedly mailed to Watts' dorm room.

A pair of former University of Illinois football stars were selected in the number two and three positions in the first round of the NFL draft Saturday afternoon.

Defensive end Kevin Hardy was selected no. 2 by the Jacksonville Jaguars, while teammate, linebacker Simeon Rice, was selected right after, him by the Arizona Cardinals.

The St. Louis Rams selected Nebraska quarterback Lawrence Phillips with the 6th pick in the first round.

Phillips led the Nebraska Cornhuskers to a National Championship last season.
