Baker reveals unlikely rise to White House

RONDA YEAGER - DAILY EGYPTIAN

Former Secretary of State James Baker spoke to a crowd of about 300 people Tuesday night.

Former Secretary of State pounds in importance of preparation in life

MATT BRENNAN
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Prior preparation prevents poor performance — that was the most important advice that former Secretary of State Jim Baker received from his father.

Those words of wisdom allowed Baker to compete with people who were perhaps more intellectual and talented than him.

"It's a simple adage, but it worked and it gave me confidence," he said.

Baker spoke to a crowd of about 300 people at Shryock Auditorium on Tuesday night as part of the Morton-Kenney Lecture Series. The event was co-sponsored by the Public Policy Institute and the Political Science Department.

Baker shared humorous anecdotes that had the audience laughing before revealing the main points that he wanted to make to the audience. He warned the audience not to believe everything that their parents and grandparents told them.

Baker laughed as he reflected on his grandfather's advice of how to become a successful lawyer, which was hard work, meticulous studying and staying out of politics.

But politics became a way of life for Baker. His political activities began when he led campaigns for Presidents Gerald Ford, Ronald Reagan and George Bush in five consecutive terms.

Baker became Ford's secretary of commerce in 1975. He then worked under Reagan as White House chief of staff from 1981 to 1985 and as secretary of the treasury from 1985 to 1988. Baker organized the first comprehensive Middle East peace conference in 1991. He has served in various other government positions aside from being the nation's 61st secretary of state under Bush.

Baker received many awards for distinguished public service while serving in presidential politics, including the Presidential Medal of Freedom in 1991.

Currently, Baker is a senior partner in the law firm of Baker and Botts and is honorary chairman of the James A. Baker III Institute for Public Policy at Rice University in Houston.

Earlier in the day, Baker fielded questions about issues that the new Bush administration is facing. He spoke at length about the election turmoil in Florida, and what corrections can be made to prevent repetition of the trouble.

"I think the real lesson with Florida is that our system worked," he said.

He offered such suggestions as modifying the punch card ballots, media coverage and coordinating the poll closing times.

"I do think we ought to look at the possibility of a poll closing time that in presidential elections might be coextensive across the United States," he said.

Charlie Howe, of the Shawnee Greens, stood outside Shryock Auditorium with a sign in protest of the University's guest. His sign stated "Who really elected GEO W. BUSH The lawyers (you, Mr. Baker) and the Supreme Court, NOT THE PEOPLE!"

"We're reminding people that it's a free country. People's votes should be counted and it should not be left up to lawyers and the Supreme Court," Howe said. "We're just here because the Democratic Party is not; apparently they have given up."

Baker himself was a Democrat until 1970 when George Bush asked him to help run for a senate race. Baker told Bush that he did not know about politics and that he was a Democrat.

Bush responded by saying "We can take care of the latter problem."

And that helped set in motion what developed into a long and accomplished career in politics, where a basic philosophy served Baker well.

"Leadership is knowing what to do and then doing it," Baker said.

First of three chancellor candidates to mingle with campus at forum

ANNE MARIE TAVELLA
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Denise M. Trauth will be the first of three candidates to meet the campus community, as she angles to snare SIUC's top administrative post.

Trauth will be introduced to the campus community Thursday in an effort to garner input from students, faculty and staff on who should be the next chancellor.

Trauth, provost and vice chancellor for Academic Affairs at the University North Carolina at Charlotte, will be the first candidate to meet the campus during two open forums, both Thursday in the Hiram H. Lesar Law School Building Auditorium. The first is scheduled for 8:30 to 9:30 a.m. and the second at 9:45 to 10:45 a.m.

A third forum will also be on Thursday at 4 p.m. in the South

Auditorium at the School of Medicine.

Trauth arrived on campus with her husband at about noon on Tuesday and spent the afternoon touring the campus and the area.

"I got the big-picture view of the town and the area," she said.

She said she is looking forward to Thursday's forum.

"We are very excited to be here and to meet people," Trauth said.

Trauth is one of three finalists for SIUC's new chancellor announced Thursday by SIU President James Walker. The Chancellor Search Advisory Committee selected five candidates last Tuesday and Walker choose the final three from that list.

Walker said he and the committee think that any of the three candidates would make a suitable chancellor.

"We are very hopeful and optimistic that from these three we will choose a chancellor," Walker said.

He said it is important for people to attend the forums so they can participate in the selection.

"It's a chance for them to have input into the process," Walker said.

The two other candidates are John D. Haeger, provost and vice president for Academic and Student Affairs, Northern Arizona University at Flagstaff; and Walter V. Wendler, vice chancellor for Planning and System Integration, Texas A&M University System in College Station.

Trauth has been at UNC-Charlotte since 1993, where she has served as the dean of the graduate school and associate vice chancellor for Graduate Programs until she moved into her current position in April 1997. As provost, she headed the university's endeavor to be reclassified as a Carnegie

USG Presidential Election USG does about-face on Perry ratification

CHRISTIAN HALE
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Undergraduate Student Government ratified the election of Michael Perry as president Tuesday, only to nullify the vote less than an hour later.

The special senate meeting, chaired by USG President Bill Archer, was called with the intent of ratifying last week's election and approve the funding allocations to student groups.

Marty Obst, USG Election Commissioner, addressed the senate concerning 10 grievances that were filed by Archer and Senators Adam Joseph and Rob Taylor before debate began concerning the ratification.

Nine senators spoke concerning the complaints that had been filed, expressing their support or rejection of the grievances. Despite the complaints, the senate moved to vote on the ratification and it passed with 15 senators supporting the results and nine senators rejecting them.

Following the vote, Perry said he was relieved his victory had been made official.

"It's just nice to know that I can finally step up to the plate and start the learning curve on how to do my job," Perry said. "It's exciting. Even though I got elected, it was nice to know that I was holding back a little hope for this."

But things would take a turn about a half hour following the vote. As some members of the senate continued to question the definition of the constitution concerning the Doctoral/Research-Intensive University. Trauth spent 16 years as a faculty member and administrator at Bowling Green State University, before moving to UNC-Charlotte.

Trauth said her first priorities would be to develop a strong relationship with the faculty and head a collaborative effort, which would include input from all the constituency groups, to create a strategic plan for the University.

Jill Adams, chair of the committee, said the candidates will spend a few minutes introducing themselves and then field questions.

Each candidate will spend about three days on campus meeting various faculty, administrators and students. The forums will be only opportunity for the campus at large to speak with the candidates.

ratification, Taylor approached Archer to discuss the confusion.

When he attempted to explain to Archer his perspective, Taylor said Archer noticed the constitution clearly states that ratification and affirmation of the new president must happen at the last meeting of the semester.

"The results of the election are supposed to be introduced at the meeting following the election, which was tonight," Taylor said. "Then, they are supposed to be voted on at the last meeting of the year. The constitution states this specifically."

Archer said that Taylor did not show him this part of the constitution, but that he discovered it himself.

"I'm going to veto the ratification," Archer said. "When Rob came up to me and

The committee conducted an open forum on February 22 to provide the campus with the opportunity to voice its opinions of what characteristics a chancellor should have. That forum was attended by a meager amount of faculty, staff and students.

Adams said she expects the turnout to improve at Thursday's forum.

"I certainly think that people should express a great degree of interest in who the next chancellor will be," Adams said.

The forums for the two other candidates will begin next week.

Haeger's open forums will be at 8:30 to 9:30 and 9:45 to 10:45 a.m. Tuesday in Shryock Auditorium. He will be at the School of Medicine at 4 p.m. that day in the South Auditorium.

Wendler will meet the campus on May 4. His open forums are scheduled for 8:30 to 9:30 a.m. and 9:45 to 10:45 a.m. in the Student Center Auditorium and 4 p.m. in the South Auditorium at the School of Medicine.

showed me the constitution, I told him I was going to veto the ratification anyway."

Archer said that Perry could not be affirmed tonight, stating the discovered rule.

"What I don't want is a [lousy] election," Archer said. "That's what we got."

Shortly following the ratification, senator Darrin Ray, chair of the Internal Affairs committee, announced the IAC had met and determined the ratification was illegal and was immediately nullified.

Perry seemed disappointed after the announcement, but was not discouraged.

"I should have expected this," Perry said. "I knew there would be a lot of speed bumps on the road, but I never saw this coming. I'm going to make it to the top one way or another."

Had the senate not nullified the ratification vote, Archer's veto would have forced the senate to have a two-thirds vote to counter his veto, as opposed to the simple majority originally required.

Perry sets sights on new horizon

New USG president holds many hopes of ending downward spiral

CHRISTIAN HALE
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Michael Perry is flying high, emerging from obscurity as the newly elected president of Undergraduate Student Government.

Last week, Perry won the spring election, soaring past incumbent USG President Bill Archer by a margin of 133 votes.

Flying high is something Perry is quite familiar with. After graduating high school in 1998, Perry signed up with the U.S. Air Force. After spending one year in active duty, he transferred to the Air Force National Guard and found his way to SIUC in fall 2000, while still remaining active in the reserves.

Perry continues his interest in avionics, his focus during his military experience, as a fourth semester student in aviation flight/aviation technologies.

Perry is a member of the SIUC Aviation Flight team, which is participating in the national competition the week after final exams.

"I will come back from that ready to work," Perry said. "My possible chief of staff will be enrolled this summer, as well as my vice president, so I think the three of us working together during the summer shouldn't be a problem."

One issue that Perry will focus on in the upcoming year is a tenant union for students renting off-campus.

"I have friends that are involved with student government at Illinois State University and they have a very good working model of a tenants union," Perry said.

He said consolidating tenant unions like those in other Illinois universities, especially those in small towns like Eastern Illinois University or Western Illinois University, should not be hard to organize.

"We've actually been getting quite a bit of support from the property managers about this," Perry said. "They probably know how inefficient USG is right now and don't expect it to work or they are the property managers that are doing a good job and would benefit from a tenants union."

He said student participation should not be a problem because students with gripes who want a place to voice their complaints will be glad to have an outlet.

Jeni Collier, a senior in aviation from Harvard, has known Perry for almost two years. She has been his supervisor at the weather station of the Southern Illinois Airport.

"Michael is basically a good kid," Collier said. "He's a good worker, shows up on time and puts in the extra effort. He's really smart, a sharp guy and very motivated."

Collier said once Perry gets into something, he takes it full force and runs with it.

"It's great to see that kind of enthusiasm," Collier said. "When he told me he was running for USG President, I thought it was great."

Collier says Perry's experience in the Air National Guard could be a key to understanding his motivation. She said Perry is a very goal-oriented person, which makes him a refreshing individual.

"We give tours at the airport and get anyone from 2-year-olds to handicapped adults to potential students that come in," Collier said.

She said he has never had a problem handling small groups or large groups, no matter

Census meeting inconclusive

Undercount resolution to be 'long, drawn-out affair,' according to city officials

MARK LAMBIRD
DAILY EGYPTIAN

The Census Bureau's visit to Carbondale Tuesday left many Southern Illinois government officials unsatisfied and looking for more answers.

At the request of U.S. Rep. Jerry Costello, D-Bellefonte, the Census Bureau came to Carbondale to address the concerns of several communities in Southern Illinois about undercounts in their communities. Seven communities were represented at the meeting by mayors, city managers and board members.

The 2000 Census reported that the city of Carbondale lost more than 6,000 residents in the last 10 years. The majority of the drop was on the SIUC campus, the population of the census tract that includes the campus dropped from 6,729 residents in 1990 to 487 in 2000.

Carbondale Assistant City Manager Don Monty said he was hopeful that more answers would come out of the meeting.

"Looks like it is going to be a long, drawn-out affair," Monty said.

Monty asked the census officials to address the problem with Carbondale's shrinking numbers, but the answers provided by officials left the status of the solution unclear.

Scott Deuel, a geographic expert with the Census Bureau, said further inquiry into the problems faced by many communities will not be looked into until Summary File 1 is released in May. Summary File 1 is a more in-depth report that will allow census officials to look through addresses to determine if people who were counted ended up in the appropriate places.

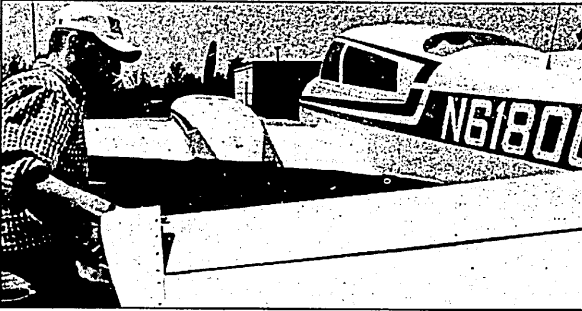

The problem for Carbondale and other communities is if these numbers are not corrected, they will lose out on state and federal money that is apportioned by the population of a municipality. Carbondale will lose nearly $800,000 if the problem is not corrected before the numbers are submitted to state and federal government officials.

Marilyn Stephens, with the Census Bureau, said even if the numbers are corrected it will not appear on the American Fact Finder until next summer. The American Fact Finder is on the Census Bureau's website and allows people to access census data.

Deuel said there are problems with the way group quarters have been counted in other areas of the state. Group quarters are buildings such as prisons, apartments, residence halls and nursing homes where several people live at one address.

Deuel cited a problem in Champaign County where the initial report said 1,400 individuals were living in the middle of a corn field. He said it seems clear these people were most likely students from the University of Illinois because of the diversity of the population.

The problems are believed to be caused by the geo-coding errors made by the Census Bureau in entering data or through mistakes made in the coding to begin with. Geo-coding is the method the Census Bureau used to place people in the correct states, counties and cities.

Henne calls upon prior experience

New president understands student government, Student Affairs relationship

CHRISTIAN HALE
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Finding a way to bring together both student government bodies with the administration can prove difficult, but T. Scott Henne brings that kind of experience with him as president-elect of Graduate and Professional Student Council.

Since August, Henne has been the graduate assistant at WIDB, the student-run radio station within the Student Center. He said it is a great experience.

"I've learned a lot just from looking into things, trying to help the students up there do what they need to do," Henne said.

When he is not helping students at the station, Henne studies education administration, particularly the college student personnel program.

This is not surprising as a copy of a textbook concerned with student affairs administration is on top of a stack of books at the edge of his desk.

After spending three years within undergraduate student government at Grand Valley State University, one year of which he was the student government president, Henne invested his time in raising funds to construct a student center building on the Grand Valley campus.

Henne said Grand Valley, which is situated about 20 minutes from Grand Rapids, Mich., was a newer campus and has just become residential with 7,000 students on campus. Henne said every university campus needs a student union and this became his goal during his time in student government.

"The senate mulled around and I said, 'Forget this,' and asked for a meeting with the president of the university," Henne said. "I was able to get that and the first year was spent in discussions."

EULALIE FRYE - DAILY EGYPTIAN

Scott Henne, the president-elect of Graduate and Professional Student Council, will bring a lot of undergraduate political experience to the position. Henne also serves as the graduate assistant for WIDB.

Henne said the second year seemed better as the idea of a student center was moved to a committee, but Henne was not happy with the process.

"I didn't like what came out of that committee because it seemed very faculty and administration dominated," Henne said. "I didn't like that and told the university's president exactly that."

Henne said the president allowed him to form a committee the following year with the previous committee, only this time he was allowed to bring students into the discussion.

"We came up with a plan and started at zero dollars," Henne said. "We mulled around the under-$3 million range, advanced to the $6 million mark the second year and by the time I left, we were at $9.7 million."

Growing up near Saginaw, Mich., Henne was influenced by his father who was in radio broadcasting.

"My father has been in radio for 28 years," Henne said. "In radio, you have to be a broadcaster and salesman. You just don't do one thing."

Henne said that when he was young, he would receive negative conduct marks for talking too much in class.

"I never really got in serious trouble, but I was always one of those the teacher looked at and said, 'Scott, come on now.'"

Steve Landgraf, general manager of WIDB, has worked closely with Henne since August.

"Scott is able to state his opinion without

Meet the chancellor candidates

Interim is a word that has for too long been attached to some of the most important positions in the SIU administration. Soon, the longest serving "interim," interim Chancellor John Jackson, will retire as the nationwide search for a permanent replacement has come down to three final candidates. Beginning tomorrow, each of those candidates will be on campus to address students and answer their questions. For those who complain that students are never considered when important decisions are made, here is a chance.

However, this is not the first opportunity students have had to voice their opinions regarding the issue. In February, the Chancellor Search Advisory Committee had an open forum specifically looking for student input on what they would like to see in a new chancellor. Sadly, about 25 people attended the event. This indicates either a real lack of student interest in who the next chancellor will be, or a true belief that what they say will not be considered.

If students aren't interested, they should be. SIUC is heading toward a time of great change. A new president, several new members on the Board of Trustees and now a new chancellor will together have the responsibility of guiding SIUC through this exciting period. From the ambitious land-use plan to a comprehensive fund-raising campaign, these new administrators inherit a university on the cusp of leaving behind the old "party school" image and becoming known as a premier institution. The continued improvement of SIUC's reputation will depend largely on the next chancellor's ability to work effectively with the administration while keeping the students' interests firmly in the foreground of any debate.

The next chancellor should not just be a conduit between students and administration, either. Faculty members also must be able to trust and support any person in that position. In addition, whereas SIUC has often been recognized as being a diverse campus in terms of the student body, the new chancellor should be committed to creating that same level of diversity within the faculty ranks. And it would be great if our new leader possessed the capacity to connect with people of SIUC's last permanent chancellor, Jo Ann Argersinger.

This opportunity for the next chancellor to build on SIUC's progress is due in no small part to the efforts of interim Chancellor John Jackson. He was able to help bring the land-use plan, a new multi-purpose stadium and the Transportation Education Center into development while at the same time dealing with Halloween, the changing face of the SIU administration, and other myriad problems as a testament to his dedication.

But soon it will be time for Jackson to go. We hope that students will take part in the forums to find his replacement, and not let another opportunity to weigh in on the chancellor search go by.

This Friday at 2 p.m. in Lawson 221 will be the gathering of "true" multicultural scholars that are seeking to create a critical awareness of ethnic diversity on SIUC's campus. The conference "Emerging Voices of Multicultural Psychology" is being sponsored by the Black Student Caucus and the Black Undergraduate Psychology Society under the advisement of Dr. Kevin Cokley, an Afrocentric Psychologist, whose research in the area of African student phenomenon contributes not only to academic diversity, but ethnic minority empowerment. Profundity would fall short of describing the understanding and acumen of these professors.

This symposium moves beyond the traditional and enclosed walls of the academy and seeks to actually empower marginalized voices. Ethnic minority students, especially Africans, should be receptive to the scholars that genuinely reflect their interests and make the "ethnic minority" experience the locus of thought and evaluation, instead of a tangential interest based on the experience of European peoples as the standard of "normality."

The scholars at the conference will include three African males: Dr. Rudy Jackson, Dr. Leon Caldwell, and Dr. Shawn Usey; two African women: Dr. Alfiere Breland and Dr. LaYerne A. Berkel as well as two Asian American female scholars: Dr. Christine Yeh and Dr. Vivian Ota Wang. Their impact on this campus moves beyond the rhetoric and lip service this university pays under-represented ethnic minorities and creates a space of true diversity that is based on the evaluation of ethnic experience and the psychology of that experience. It is the evaluation of Africans, Asians, and other ethnicities in the center of scholarship. Something that we cannot say for institutions at large or even most departments here at SIUC.

The responsibility of the African student and other ethnic students is to participate in this event and gain from the insight of these role models. Our time to create and define our reality as we want to see it comes from the knowledge of the people before us. While we may not want to work or be in the university all of our lives, it is ABSOLUTELY necessary that we all understand the "language" of the scholars whom are making the decisions about our identity and political empowerment. Universities only perpetuate the political structures of our societies, so education will be to teach individuals how to be "supporting" citizens to the structures and realities of America. These scholars challenge this. They are the academic warriors for our peoples and peoples' of color experiences. We cannot define our realities at this university as we see fit, unless we garner the academic and political support to do so, and the professors at this conference provide us with some insight in achieving this goal. They are not only role models but politicians. Their scholarship is fighting the ideology of a system. They are talking about the impact of racism, the unheard voices of internationally marginalized people and the need of disciplines of study, such as psychology, being accountable for the racism and suffering they have caused for African peoples and other "ethnic peoples."

African students are only accountable to themselves, but I ask my brothers and sisters, if we do not make the effort to understand the discourse of the people defining us then how do we participate in the destruction of the "Nambou-ian" imperial project? If we do not move beyond merely participating in the conversations of issues that concern our peoples, into a fluency of the ideas and terminology, then we disempower the revolution. We stop the ideology and consciousness of our legacy, and we become the "master's tool" in continuing the imprisonment of the African mind.

These scholars are warriors in a war that has been going on since 4500 B.C.E., it is not time we hear their stories and gain insight from their strategies? The ancestors give us opportunities to further our understanding but it is up to us to "understand" how we should "understand" the world and frame our reality. We cannot shape our reality if we do not know the terms that describe it or the dangers of the environment that surrounds us.

Stop playing the 'race card' for everything

DEAR EDITOR:

It is sad to see that the news of Southern Illinois has to revolve around students, faculty and staff of SIUC worrying about who is playing the race card. There is no doubt that there is a problem. However does it really help a person's situation to hold up a race card every time something happens to them? This is indeed disturbing. What is even more disturbing to me is that Patrick Gant, who is a senior in elementary education and has two prior battery convictions, thinks that his place is teaching our children. What kind of things, ideas and attitudes is he going to teach our children when he finally gets out of SIUC and enters the real world?

'Outrageous claims' hurt, not help serious issues

DEAR EDITOR:

I am not here to claim that the Carbondale Police do or do not punish African-American students more harshly than whites. I'm just tired of people making outrageous claims regarding the issue. The letter by Kevin Cokley in Tuesday's DAILY EGYPTIAN is a perfect example. He wrote, "Why are black students, who are playing their music too loud, maced and attacked while the behavior of white students who party on the Strip and expose body parts is sanctioned by the complicity of the police?" I have several problems with this sentence alone, the most important being that the students were not maced just for playing their music too loudly. The police came to the party just to write a noise citation. That is the only punishment that was intended. However, Patrick Gant, for whatever reason, yanked his ID from the officer's hand. One thing led to another, and somewhere in there, the macing occurred. I'm not sure specifically why either, but it is slightly extreme to claim that the party-goers were maced for playing loud music. Also, am I the only one who recalls white students being maced on the Strip during Halloween weekend? In addition, students exposing body parts are only degrading themselves. They're not being violent like it is rumored that Patrick Gant was.

Today I went to class, and we were talking about this, and one of my teachers told me that some of her students who were present at the party were threatening to start trouble (become violent) in response to this alleged police discrimination. I can understand standing up for what is right, but my teacher made a good point — it would be much more hurtful to the community (and for that matter, much easier to get what they want) for the students offended by this event to say they'll be taking their money elsewhere. I know from hearing people talk today that there are enough enraged students to take away a substantial amount of money from this community.

Let's all stop making extreme claims and think of better ways to react to racism than through further violence.

End police 'harassment'

DEAR EDITOR:

I am writing in regard to this weekend's disgrace committed by the Carbondale Police Department. The macing of Mr. Gant was ridiculous and not to be tolerated. The fact that the police entered Mr. Gant's room and proceeded to mace him is just another testament to the fact that police constantly harass black students ANYTIME we try to have a social gathering, whether there is a problem or not. This whole incident took place while predominantly white students were performing their usual custom of "taking the Strip." When black students tried to join these people the police immediately blocked them. Now, where is the fairness in that?

The black student body is tired of being harassed by those who are supposed to be here for the safety of both black and white students!

Mr. Gant is a model graduate student who serves his community and teaches children who look up to him. Everyone who knows him understands what really happened that night. The police were looking for trouble, and when they didn't find it, they caused their own trouble. White students constantly have parties on West Cherry, College and countless other streets without such harassment from "Carbondale's Finest." We students, both black and white, have made Carbondale what it is today, and are deserving of equal treatment.

The police have shown an obvious knack for specifically targeting black students. It is quite clear that incidents such as these will continue to occur if the students do not join together and show that such behavior is unacceptable. And with the police chief's arrogant and unsympathetic attitude, we will have to look to each other and places other than Carbondale authorities for support. If the Carbondale Police Department will not do their job properly and fairly, and do not face consequences for their conduct, how far will it go next time? Will we have a repeat of Cincinnati's tragedy?

Student activism 'overdue'

DEAR EDITOR:

The purpose of this letter is two-fold. First, I would like to congratulate those students who protested the actions of the Carbondale Police by peacefully marching to City Hall to formally file complaints against them. It was certainly a demonstration of "overdue" activism.

Second, if the Carbondale Police exerted as much energy in finding the killer(s) of Marcus Thomas, as they did converging on the party at 204 E. College Street, the perpetrator(s) would have been apprehended expeditiously.

(Above) Runners exchange a baton at an interchange near interstate 57 on the River to River Run's route. Many exchanges like this would take place during the 1,900 person run.

The early morning light has just begun to peak through the trees near McGee Hill in Wolf Lake Saturday as the Screaming Monkey Boys, Angry Beavers and Psycho Geezers lace up shoes, strap on watches and stretch sleepy muscles in preparation for what has become one of Southern Illinois' most heralded traditions.

The River to River Relay, the Holy Grail of cross-country running, takes participants on an 80-mile journey from the mighty Mississippi in Union County to the Ohio River in Golconda. The race, now 14 years young, pumps more than $300,000 into the local economy each year, but its spirit and camaraderie are what bring about 2,000 people from nearly every corner of the country together.

"It's really hard to pin down exactly what makes this race so popular," Race Director Keith McQuarrie said. "I think everyone wants to come to beautiful Southern Illinois in the spring and see people they haven't seen in a year."

The relay began in 1987 as the brainchild of retired SIUC psychology professor Gordon Pitz, who modeled it after Oregon's famous Hood to Coast Relay, which stretches 180 miles to the Pacific coast. McQuarrie still remembers Pitz trying to pitch the idea to his running club's board of directors.

"We all told him he was crazy, and that no one would want to do it," McQuarrie said.

Undeterred, Pitz set about organizing the race, figuring he would attract 15 teams if he was lucky.

He got 60.

Fourteen years later, McQuarrie posted the relay's application online only to have to remove it four days later because the 240-team limit had been exceeded.

Douglas McCarty is a member of one local team that managed to slip in before the deadline. His Saturday began at 3:30 a.m. when he and the rest of the SIU Law & Associates trekked to the race's starting line for their 7:45 departure. McCarty, a second-year law student and two-year relay veteran, began running 12 years ago, but the River to River is the only structured race in which he has competed.

With 1,900 people in the race, there was a lot of preparation that had to be done by the race organizers. Predictably, there were still long lines at the facilities.

"I just heard about it and thought it sounded a lot more fun than a normal race because it's an all-day and team event," he said. McCarty logged 11 miles of the hilly and demanding course, but said everyone is laid-back attitude made for a fun day.

"People are so friendly about it, and it's a fun atmosphere, not hyper-competitive," McCarty said. "You pass people on the course, and they're cheering you on."

The race's popularity has been documented in publications like the Road Runner Club of America, which ranked it as one of the nation's best. Similar races have sprung up in recent years, modeling themselves after the River to River Relay, but McQuarrie and others don't mind.

"Imitation is the sincerest form of flattery," he said simply. "Part of the popularity is that someone comes down and then goes home and tells everyone what fun it is."

Even people not affiliated with the race often stop to lend a helping hand. On Saturday, a local resident walked to his friend's house to borrow a chain to help extricate a lodged van. Meanwhile, a stranger lent his van to a group of runners stranded at a hotel.

McQuarrie credits people like this and the more than 200 volunteers for keeping the spirit of the race alive.

"They come back year after year to help even though they're not actual runners. They give up their time to make this thing happen," he said.

While words like camaraderie and teamwork are often tossed around lightly, McQuarrie knows those are the main qualities that set the River to River Relay apart from its contemporaries.

"If you see the people all come in together at the finish line in Golconda and finish as a team, then that's what it's about," McQuarrie said. "It's just a hoot."

Internet 2 demonstration today

JENNIFER WIG
DAILY EGYPTIAN

SIUC researchers and educators can use television-quality video, discuss theories of molecules in real-time with other university professors and construct a three-dimensional map of the human brain—all at high speeds for the low cost of $20,000 a year.

Internet 2 was created about four years ago by the government and universities to provide researchers with a faster Internet connection. SIUC became part of the network in December, one of the last of 180 universities to join.

Organizers say there are no disadvantages to the new network, which will be demonstrated from 9:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. today in the Student Center Mississippi Room.

Geoffrey Nathan, an associate professor in linguistics, has organized Internet 2 Day. He became part of the effort when asked to write a grant to the National Science Foundation to help pay for the project. Nathan said the high speed connection is worth the cost for any research institution.

"The commodity Internet has gotten so crowded because many people are using it," Nathan said. "For people who want to do serious research and teaching, stuff takes too long."

It works by forming a skeleton connection through few cities across the country. To become part of the network, SIUC must connect to the line in Chicago.

Right now, the University has a grant through the National Science Foundation to pay for the connection, through the state-supported Illinois Connection Network. The grant will last for another year before SIUC must pay about $21,000 for the connection. The University will not be connected to the Illinois line until May or June while Ameritech sets up the link.

During today's demonstration, two speakers will explain the network. The speakers are Doug Van Houweling, president and CEO of Internet 2, and Steve Corbato, director of Backbone Network Infrastructure and of the actual high-speed network, also known as Abilene.

Corbato will present through videoconferencing from Ann Arbor, Mich. Van Houweling will explain what can be done with the tools and Corbato will illustrate how the network runs.

Don Olson, director of Information Technology, said this will help recruit faculty and improve education at SIUC.

"It fosters cooperation with research. Researchers can be working together and have access to the same files," Olson said.

Students showcase clothing lines at Clothing and Textiles Fashion Show

LIZ GUARD
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Maria Bartolo has been sewing day and night and suffering insomnia in preparation for the debut of her creative line of clothing.

Bartolo, one of the two seniors in clothing and textiles this year, is putting the final touches on her denim clothing line to be presented Thursday at the 2001 Clothing and Textiles Program Student Showcase and Fashion Show.

The show is a final project for seniors in the major to show the skills they have learned and what they can creatively add to it.

"It's almost like their graduation," said Laura Kidd, an assistant professor in workforce education and clothing and textiles.

This year's show will feature clothing collections created by Bartolo and Barb Summers, a senior in clothing and textiles from DeSoto. There will also be stationary model exhibits of some fashions designed by juniors in the program.

But this year's show will be different from those in the past. Spring fashions from local retailers such as The Buckle, Dillard's, The Fashion Bug, Lady Footlocker, Sears and Wilson's Leather will be presented at the show. Students in the Clothing and Textiles program assisted in producing the fashion show. The students were in charge of calling the retailers, finding models, picking a line of clothing that shared a similar theme and choosing music to match the theme.

"It's a real learning experience for them," Kidd said. "This is what they are going to be doing someday."

But the show's main focus is the seniors' work. Bartolo's line of clothing is "Denim by Day." She went to thrift shops and bought old pairs of jeans to start creating. She cut up all the jeans, added some other fabrics and dyed them to make tops, dresses and other outfits to accommodate the styles of youth.

Summers went with a different approach for her line. Her collection is named "A Complete Fabrication" and focuses on women who have reached the age of 40. Summers is a non-traditional student, and said she wanted to show the fashions of a somewhat older generation. All of the models in Summers' showcase are older than 40.

To create her line, Summers mainly used silk. She hand dyed about 95 percent of it and added embellishments, including hand beading and quilting. Summers believes the showcase is an incredible experience for students in the Clothing and Textiles program.

"This is as close to being a fashion designer as you can get," she said. "Actually, it's even more work because we have to do all our own sewing."

"The show brings everything together and shows what we do."

DRESS FOR SUCCESS

The 2001 Clothing and Textiles Program Student Showcase and Fashion Show will take place at 6:30 p.m. Thursday in Student Center Ballroom D. For more information contact the Clothing and Textiles Program at 453-1987.

Walkers light the path of life

Community members will walk to raise money to battle cancer

ANDREA DONALDSON
 DAILY EGYPTIAN

Beverly Lambert may not be a track star, but she will be lighting up McAndrew Stadium this weekend to celebrate her life and the lives of others who have been affected by cancer.

Lambert, a 15-year survivor of breast cancer, will join about 400 students and community members walking around the track to raise money for Relay For Life, an event sponsored by the American Cancer Society.

The 15-hour event will begin at 6 p.m. Friday and run through Saturday morning, with 43 teams of 10-12 people registered to participate. The event will open with survivors, like Lambert, taking the first lap around the track.

"The survivor lap reinforces what the research by the American Cancer Society is able to do," Lambert said.

The event, which began in 1985 in Tacoma, Wash., with Gordon Klatt, a practicing surgeon, running and walking solo around a track to raise $27,000, has grown tremendously in the past 16 years. It now has more than 1.5 million people participating across the country and is expected to raise $190 million this year to fight cancer.

"I think it is important for people to really get involved in something they think is important and beneficial for other people," Lambert said.

I think the whole event is symbolic, in that you are working for a cause. I am working for those who have gone before me and for those who will follow me.

Beverly Lambert
 cancer survivor

Being a survivor of cancer, Lambert said she knows first hand how important cancer research is.

"I want to know that people are working constantly for cures and treatments," she said.

According to the American Cancer Society website, it was estimated that more than one million new cases would arise in 2000 and more than half a million Americans would die of cancer. Nearly five million lives have been lost to cancer since 1990.

Since beginning its research,

Relay the message

Relay For Life will kick off at 6 p.m. Friday with a cancer survivor lap. Luminarias will be lit up at 9:30 p.m. in memory of victims and to honor survivors.

The American Cancer Society has committed more than $2.2 billion to the study of cancer. In 1998, it spent more than $100 million for research.

Marianne Lawrence, chair of Jackson County's Relay For Life committee, said the event raised $65,000 last year and has a goal of reaching $76,000 in 2001. Regionally, Southern Illinois is expected to raise $1,060,500 this year through fund-raising events.

"Setting a goal is something to look forward to and always an accomplishment to meet," said Pamela Adomite, regional Relay For Life business manager.

Relay teams consist of between eight and 15 people, who camp out all night, taking turns walking. Prior to the event, team members are asked to raise a minimum of $100. Lawrence said the goal is to have at least one representative from each team on the track throughout the event.

"It is just symbolic to walk through the whole event," she said.

EULALIE FRYE - DAILY EGYPTIAN

The R.B. Bush Contracting firm works on renovations of Woodlawn Cemetery on Route 13 Tuesday afternoon. They are planning on completing the project by Memorial Day.

Cemetery to resurrect aesthetics

MARK LAMBIRO
DAILY EGYPTIAN

After nearly two years of talk and planning, Woodlawn Cemetery, the final resting place of more than 350 people, is getting a facelift.

Gary Belles, a Carbondale city engineer, said the work on Woodlawn began April 9 and the majority of the work is slated to be finished by Memorial Day. The project was approved by the Carbondale City Council last month, after first being brought to the council in 1999 by Councilman Brad Cole.

The renovations include new fencing around the periphery of the 2.6 acre cemetery, sidewalk repair, a new parking lot and historical signs marking the significance of the cemetery. The cost of the project is more than $189,000.

Woodlawn was first operated by the Carbondale Cemetery Association, which was formed in 1856. The city eventually took control of the cemetery and continues to maintain it.

Woodlawn is one of three cemeteries in the nation that claims to be the site of the first Memorial Day celebration in the country. In 1866, the first Memorial Day Service in Illinois was at the cemetery to honor the 65 veterans of the Civil War that are buried there.

More than 4,000 residents and veterans gathered at Woodlawn in 1866 to honor fallen comrades, family and friends. In 1868, John A. Logan, Civil War general, commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic and Carbondale resident, proclaimed Memorial Day as a national holiday to commemorate those who had fallen during the Civil War.

In his order, Logan said May 30 should be set aside for the purpose of strewing flowers or otherwise decorating the graves of soldiers who had died in the defense of their country. In the past century the celebration has come to include all veterans that have died in the defense of their country or who have served in the armed forces.

part of the event is the Luminaria Ceremony. Luminaria bags can be purchased for $5 in memory of cancer victims or in honor of survivors until 8:30 p.m. Friday. At 9:30 p.m. the bags will be lit and the names will be read, after which, team members will take a silent lap around the track to see the luminarias. Last year, 1,600 bags lined the track, letting off an array of light.

"Almost everybody that you know has been affected by friends and family who have had cancer," said Lambert, who is on the luminaria committee. "It is a very, very moving time but it is also a time we can celebrate too."

Lambert said the event is an important symbol of hope for participants and survivors — hope that someday there might be a cure for cancer. Today, more than eight million Americans are living testimonies that cancer can be beaten.

"I think the whole event is symbolic, in that you are working for a cause," she said. "I am working for those who have gone before me and for those who will follow me.

"When we have the lap and you talk to people who have survived five, 10, even 15 years, that is hope."

who they are or what they are about. "He's a great guy with a lot of charisma," Collier said. These qualities should come in handy for Perry as he takes the reigns of a student government, consisting of a plethora of personalities, cultures and interests.

Perry said two key factors in making USG more effective is finding a good executive assistant, as well as a good chief of staff. He said one thing that prepared him for his upcoming presidency was his experience as a student leader during technical school training in the military.

"By the time fall rolls around, I want to have the office be the picture of efficiency," Perry said. "I want information coming in and out of the USG office like you wouldn't believe."

One thing Perry said needs to be remedied early is the lack of communication between student government and the community, particularly the students.

Some ideas Perry said are entertaining include continual press releases of things that are important to the legislative function of the senate, as well as decisions that will impact the students directly.

Other options being considered are the creation of a newsletter, a more informative website and column space in local newspapers.

"We have a rather limited budget for this next year," Perry said. "We are looking for some of the things we have to do to be done on a volunteer basis."

getting argumentative," Landgraf said. "I think that is one of his main strengths. He is very easy to talk to in that respect. He doesn't seem very critical and is very easy to get along with."

Landgraf said he agrees with Henne's self-description of his organization, stating that Henne definitely "has his stuff together."

But the relationship between Henne and Landgraf originally had some tension. Landgraf said the only reason this occurred was because he was the general manager of the station and Henne's role as graduate assistant was not well defined.

"If there were ever any toes to step on, they were mine," Landgraf said. "That's usually where we had conflict."

Landgraf said he thinks Henne's new role as president of GPSC will allow him to utilize what Landgraf thinks is Henne's expertise: understanding student government and its relationship with Student Affairs.

"I think he did well as our graduate assistant but I think he was very limited," Landgraf said. "I remember seeing his resume and it appeared his name could be seen synonymous with student government, which is something he is very interested in."

SALUKI SPORTS NOTES

Sims signs with Colts

Former Saluki linebacker Teddy Sims signed with the NFL's Indianapolis Colts Monday as a rookie free agent. Sims, a native of Belle Glade, Fla., only played one season for SIU after transferring from Southeastern Conference powerhouse, the University of Florida. He finished the season with 83 tackles, 15 of which were for a loss, four sacks and one interception. Sims was named the Gateway Conference Newcomer of the Year as well as being named to the All-Gateway second team. Sims was also invited to the All-Florida All-Star team after the 2000 season.

2001 Saluki Softball Day Camps

Two separate softball camps will be offered over the summer for interested athletes. The first focuses of hitting and defense and will be on June 12 to 13 from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. The second camp will focus on pitching and is from June 19-21 from 1 p.m. to 3:30 p.m. The cost of registration is $70 per camp or $130 for both. The cost includes instruction, materials, a T-shirt and limited accident/injury camper medical benefits. Staff members for the camp include Saluki head coach Kerri Blaylock and assistant coaches Buddy Foster and Mark Cosgrove. For more information or to register, contact the Division of Continuing Education at SIUC at (618) 536-7751 or visit its website at www.dce.siu.edu.

2001 Saluki Baseball Camp

A commuter-only baseball camp to improve hitting, fielding and pitching skills for young players from the ages of seven to 13, will take place from June 11 to 14 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. The camp is led by Saluki baseball coaches Dan Callahan and Ken Henderson. The remainder of the staff consists of Saluki players and both high school and college coaches. The players in the camp will be separated by ability and/or age group to allow for more individual instruction. The cost for registration before June 1 is $170 which includes lunch and a camp T-shirt and cap. For more information or to register, call the Division of Continuing Education at SIUC at (618) 536-7751 or visit its website at www.dce.siu.edu.

2001 Nike Junior Resident Golf Camp

Nike will be having a golf camp from June 10-15 for players between the ages of 10-18 to improve their skills and get the opportunity to work with professionals in the golf industry. The campers are to report to SIU Sunday June 10 for orientation. Following the orientation, the golfers go to Crab Orchard Golf Club where they will play practice rounds all week long. Nike Camp Golf Director, Sarah M. Haas, is involved with the United States Golf Association and is director of competitions at Crab Orchard Golf Club and the Southern Illinois Golf Association. The lead instructors include Crab Orchard Golf Club Director of Golf and former PGA "Teacher of the Year" Steve Heckel, Crab Orchard Golf Club Assistant Professional Scott Roe and SIU golf coach Leroy Newton. They wouldn't have it any other way. The twins share a dorm room and never thought about living with anyone else. "How can you not live with your twin?" asked Adie. "I don't understand how [other twins] don't get along as well." Sure, they get along, but which one is the good twin and which is the bad twin, you ask? "We'll leave that to their coach. "I tease them all the time, I always say that Adie is the angel, and Haley's got a little streak of meanness in her," said Blaylock, who first noticed the twins as high school freshmen when recruiting Marta her senior year. "Yeah, I'm the mean twin," joked Haley. "A lot of people say that, I guess because I'm louder and I'll say more stuff than Adie does, not really that much, but that's why I'm mean twin. I'll be like, 'Ooh, and I'll say something mean, just joking around.' But Adie's just more quiet and nicer than [me and Marta]." "Angelish," Marta jumped in. However, Haley claims that it is all just a cover. "She's very devilish in disguise," Haley said. "She has people fooled. But I know her." They always say watch out for the quiet ones. Both twins also easily fool their coach and teammates with their identical looks and mannerisms. "You'll get going so fast sometimes that you'll look at Adie and say 'Haley come here,' and she'll just come and then it clicks in your head and she'll just start laughing," Blaylock said. They're used to it. They've also had some weird looks from opposing teams, especially when Adie doesn't have her catcher's mask on. "I think they notice it when we play second [base] and shortstop," Adie said. "Then Marta's out in center, so it's like a V - a Viefhauus." While everyone else is adjusting to the twins, Marta adjusted to the role of 'mom' this season. "I always try to look over them, I'm kind of the boss because I want them to be safe and get their stuff done," Marta said. "They probably get annoyed with me." "She is sometimes mommish, but I know she just wants the best for us," Haley said. "We don't take it as mommish, because sometimes we'll yell 'Mom, or boss,' at her just joking around." There's no joking around when mentioning the Viefhauus sisters athleticism, though. All three are versatile in the field, as Adie can play every position but pitch. While the twins possess the solid glove in the infield and a better knowledge of the game, Marta utilizes her size and speed to reach balls other outfielders couldn't run down and as a terror on the basepaths. Marta is 17-for-17 in stolen bases this season and tied a school record this past weekend for career stolen bases with 63. All have struggled with the bat this season, as none of them are hitting above .200. Obviously, none of them are pleased with their offensive performances, but it hasn't affected their glove work, especially Haley. She made the move from her natural position of third base to shortstop this season, not too easy of a task to ask a freshman at the Division I level. The twins, who both noted playing more than they expected this season, have made some spectacular plays already in their young SIU careers and Marta is one of the best center fielders in the MVC. Blaylock said she would rate the play of the twins as "outstanding because of their effort all the time." "Marta's special just because she's been here for four years through all of it and she's just a good player," Blaylock said. As the trio's time on the field together is dwindling into the final weeks, the fond memories will last forever. "Not very many people have the chance to play with their sisters or any siblings, so it's been fun," Marta said. But at the same time, they don't want it to end. They are hopeful of making a deep run into the MVC Tournament with the possibility of an NCAA appearance in the back of their mind. "For us, we want our season to last as long as it can and not be shortened at all," Haley said. But as far as the Viefhauus/SIU softball tradition goes, it doesn't end after Haley and Adie graduate. There's one more, a fourth sister, Maggie, 13. Although she is just in the seventh grade, the thought of 4-for-4 has already crossed Blaylock's mind. And the eldest Viefhauus said she's well worth the wait. "She'll be better than all of us," Marta said.

On a ball bender

Senior from Iowa has kept his bat going since late March

Dodge the draft.

That's what Saluki designated hitter Roman Schooley did a week before his batting average jumped from .208 to .313 in late March.

But he wasn't avoiding military duty.

The senior from Bloomfield, Iowa, had been struggling with the bat until he stopped drinking beer. But one series changed it all.

"I just started seeing the ball better," Schooley said. "I'm not an alcoholic by any means, but for fun I would go out after a weekend series and have a few beers with the boys. I just said one night, 'I'm going to quit drinking and see what happens with my hitting.'"

The next weekend Schooley helped take three-of-four games from the University of Northern Iowa, his father's alma mater. Schooley went 9-for-10 at the plate in the three wins with three home runs and two doubles.

"It was great," said Schooley, who was firing of questions from those around him about when he would find his stroke. "It relieved a lot of pressure."

Ken Henderson, SIU hitting coach, has worked closely with Schooley and thinks his past hitting troubles have little to do with drinking.

"Him and I have discussed this for a year and a half," Henderson said. "Roman's a tremendous hitter when he tries to hit the ball where it's pitched. Early in the year he was trying to pull a lot of pitches that he couldn't pull."

Henderson said Schooley hits home runs because of his bat speed.

"He was trying to hit home runs and he's not that kind of hitter," Henderson said. "He doesn't want to admit that to me. We have a great relationship and have had some interesting conversations about that."

"When he plays from right-center to left field, he's one of the best hitters in the league, but when he tries to pull stuff, he's not even one of the best hitters on our club."

Lately, Schooley has had little trouble hitting the ball. His .331 batting average is a tie for the lead average on the team. For the season he has seven home runs, 43 hits, seven doubles and 26 RBIs.

Whatever the real reason for his improved hitting, it isn't the first time Schooley has made a change for the better.

In high school, Schooley was overweight. He was into baseball then, but remembers hitting .107 his sophomore season. He also remembers playing center on the football team.

"My dad had a talk with me [after that season]," Schooley said. "I was a big kid. I had the tools but I was so heavy and slow. I made it my goal to lose weight for next year. That was the day I decided I was going to be a baseball player."

Within a year, Schooley had lost 50 pounds doing sit-ups and cutting down on the cheeseburgers. By his senior year, he was no longer a stocky football center, but he was now playing outside linebacker and wide receiver.

Schooley said that despite SIU's 15-27 record, he's still having a good time being a part of Saluki baseball.

"It's been fun," Schooley said. "Obviously, it's a lot more fun when you're winning."

Schooley, a general agriculture production major, said he's not sure what he'll be doing when he graduates next year. His major is closely related to his father's occupation. Ron Schooley owns a livestock market.

"I've been around it my whole life," the younger Schooley said. "I don't know what I want to do."

Schooley is toying with the idea of playing minor league baseball upon graduation. The Springfield Capitals, an independent team in the Frontier League, have expressed interest in him.

"I don't know yet," Schooley said. "It might be worth it."

Bears looking for the right porridge

In search of a new summer training camp, Chicago Bears officials ended their 13-university tour at SIU Tuesday

JAVIER SERNA
 DAILY EGYPTIAN

You might have seen them scooting around campus in golf carts that had the "Bad to the Bone" foam bones attached to the hood. Members of the Chicago Bears front office were chauffeured around SIUC's campus by Athletic Director Paul Kowalczyk Tuesday afternoon.

The Bears, who were scheduled to tour SIU-Edwardsville's campus Tuesday afternoon, were wrapping up a 13-campus tour in search for a new summer training camp site. The group of Bear officials were unable to fly down for their originally scheduled tour when their flight was canceled on April 11.

The Bears had training camp at the University of Wisconsin-Platteville for 16 years, but plan on moving the camp in-state.

Kowalczyk gave the officials a thorough tour of the Carbondale campus with stops at McAndrew Stadium, training fields, training facilities, locker rooms, the Recreation Center, Lenz Hall dining facility and the Thompson Point residence halls.

"It's very nice," said Bill McGrane. "It's great. Beautiful campus. Just gorgeous."

Sources close to the Bears have said schools like Olivet Nazarene in Kankakee are front-runners because of their short distance from Chicago. But McGrane told the Daily Egyptian in March that the "best" facility would win out.

"It's a terrific facility," McGrane said of SIU. "I don't know how it stacks up [with the rest of the schools]. That will be for us to go back and start evaluating everything together. We'll go from there."

With summer training camp on the July horizon, McGrane said a decision should be made by the end of June.

SALUKI SPORTS NOTE

Women's golf takes fifth

Despite the SIU women's golf team's best round of 324 and a superb final round score of 75 from senior Lizzie Uthoff, the Salukis finished fifth at the Missouri Valley Conference Championships in Ashland, Neb., which concluded Tuesday.

Southwest Missouri State University came back from fourth place to shoot a final round of 313 for an overall score of 986 to win the tournament.

The Salukis, who were defending MVC champions, finished day one sitting in third place, behind solid play from junior Allison Hiller, who finished tied for fourth individually with an 80.

The Salukis fell to fifth place after the second round, scoring a 346. SIU finished the tournament with an overall score of 1,002, 16 strokes behind first-place finisher SMS.

Illinois State finished second with a score of 987, while Bradley University finished third with an overall score of 998.

JUSTIN JONES - DAILY EGYPTIAN

(From Left) Adie, Marta and Haley Viefhaus have family traditions when it comes to the positions on the Saluki softball team. Although they say no sibling rivalry accompanies them on the field, the twins will have serious roles to fill if they want to exceed to the level of their senior sister, Marta, who currently holds the SIU all time career home run leader for Saluki softball.

Viefhaus sisters enjoying final run of softball careers together

All it took was the troubled look on her face.

Before you could shout the word 'sister,' Marta Viefhaus rushed out of the dugout, while Haley darted from her post at short-stop to attend to their other sister, Adie, who had just twisted her left knee while chasing down a wild pitch in a recent road contest at the University of Evansville.

While Adie grasped her knee in agony after straining a ligament, it was Marta and Haley that hovered above her crying. At the time, the injury locked much more serious.

"I just ran out there because I knew as soon as I saw her face that she was hurt," said Marta, a senior center fielder for the Saluki softball team. "I beat the trainers out there because I got scared."

Adie's twin sister, Haley, worried that because it was nearing the end of Marta's senior year, the injury could mean that this was the last time all three would play together.

"All three of those girls, they were real upset, because it is a sister thing," said senior teammate Erin Stremsterfer. "Yeah, we were upset too, but I can understand why they were upset because [Adie] was scared she wasn't going to get to play with Marta anymore."

Fortunately, the injury doesn't appear to be season-ending, as Adie is hopeful of returning by the Missouri Valley Conference Tournament, May 10-12.

The freshman twins turned down offers from other solid programs such as Ole Miss and SMS to join big sister, this season for one final hurrah as teammates. For the Viefhaus girls, softball has always been an enormous element in their lives, and nothing beats playing it together.

The three Pacific, Mo., natives began playing wiffle ball in their backyard with their father, Randy, a former major leaguer, when the twins were a mere three years of age and Marta was six. And they haven't stopped playing since — just grown up a little bit and obviously moved past that wiffle ball stage.

But all three still recall some of the backyard battles (and blunders), they endured growing up, while some may not 'fess up to them.

"Marta always pitched balls through windows," Adie said.

"No I did not," Marta replied.

"Yes you did," responded Adie.

The twins also remember what happened when they hit the ball as far as Marta, who has 21 career home runs for SIU (32-14, 15-6).

"She got mad," Haley said.

Marta was batting left-handed however, as her father attempted to change her from her natural right side, which had a little to do with it.

The twins also enjoyed poking fun at their older sister's bright-blonde locks, calling her a "dumb blonde."

But when looking back, it was all in good fun. And even now, it remains the same.

The twins are nearly inseparable and Marta is usually right there. If one of the twins is sitting on a bucket at practice, the other twin will pull up the other bucket and sit right next to her, planting her arm around her sister.

"[The twins are] always hugging each other, if we're at a hotel and they see each other for the first time in the morning, a lot of times at breakfast I'll notice they'll go up and give each other a hug," said Saluki head coach Kerri Blaylock. "I think that's pretty cool. You know that you're still sisters and you can be that close to each other."
