Those wanting to ensure their visibility of the eclipse have char-tered planes to take them above the clouds But those who want to see the partial eclipse in Southern Illinois Monday need only travel to MicAndrew Stadium, where there will be telescopes set up, between the hours of 9.30 am and iora. Astronomers will also be on hand to answer any questions about the partial eclipse.

An eclipse occurs when the moon An eclipse occurs when the moun is positioned between the earth and the sun At that point on earth where the moon is directly in the sun's path, a total eclipse is observed.

Assuming the weather is favorable. Southern Illinoisans should be able to see a 75 percent ecipse at about 10 Ju am. Monday I'rank Sanders, associate everyse at about 10 30 a.m. montay Frank Sanders, associate professor of physics, said that the last good eclipse visible in the continental United States was in 1970 and it was viewed as a 40 percent eclipse in Southern Illinois One of the reasons Monday's evices his charter attronomary one of the reasons monday is eclipse has captured astronomers' attention is because it is the last total eclipse which will be observed in the continential United States this century, Sanders said

eventually moves away from the sun. "It's a complicated interaction involving a transfer of energy. Since these turbulent gases eventually penetrate the earth's atmosphere, we'd like to know what's going on The gases may ultimately affect our climate." Sanders sand But eclipses aren't that rare. Sanders said that every six months there is an eclipse of some kind visible from the earth. Sanders described a tota eclipse as a once in a lifetime, awe-inst "ring event During a total eclipse, the sky

During a total eclipse, the sky darkens, animals are disturbed and there is a rapid drop in temperature "It's quite an eerie feeling," Sanders said

Although partial eclipses aren't as pectacular as those observed in stality. Sanders said the sun won't totaint. Sanders said the sun wont to seem quite as bright as usual, and as the eclipse reaches its maximum phase, there will be a significant drop in temperature. But those who user the sun from one of the available telescopes will a shear or a neural abovement be able to see a natural phenomena other than the eclipse.

"Right now the sun is particularly active and there is a lot of sunspot activity that will be visible," San-ders said.

The telescopes will have screens o provide adequate protection for yes. Some of them will be set up for to provide ac rojection to enable several people o view the sun at the same time, anders explained.

People who view the eclipse should be aware of the possible dangers of viewing it without protection for an extended period of time. Protection which has been used in the past includes the use of arc welders' glasses or several sheets of black and white photographic film.

Bit Sanders suggested a simpler and safer way of devising a projection by making an ab-breviated pin-hole camera which would project the image of the eclipse on the inside of a cardboard box.

If the weather is questionable Monday, Sanders said the astronomers will set up anyway and hope for some clear sp units

Those who have questions about the nature of eclipses can view the short film which will run con-tinuously in the Student Center from 10 a.m. to noon Monday

The viewing day is being spon-sored by the University Museum and Art Galleries and the astronomy department.

This photo of a solvr corona was taken during a total eclipse of the sun in 1973. Observers in Southern Illinois will be able to see a 75 percent eclipse at about 10:50 a.m. Monday

Small farm survival discussed Eddie Albert: Topsoil erosion price for prosperity

By Paula Donner

Actor Eddie Albert's interest in the "simple survival" of American farm land does not stem from his television role as Oliver Douglas in "Green Acres." but rather from a concern over the "potential disaster" which may incure as a result of eroding topsoil, pesticide use and the decline of the small-town farm.

By Terri Tangney Staff Writer In a clearing sits a log house, long abandoned and decayed. In what was once a front yard sits an ancient brass kettle. A fire beneath the kettle keeps its contents bubbling evenly. A tall, bearded young man watches the fire to make sure it doesn't die down. He picks up the wet. fallen wood from the sugar maples that circle the house. The young man is Jerry Culen and he is watching the final stage of making maple syrup. It is the only delicate step in boiling sap dow: and he has to make sure he doesn't overboil and burn the syrup.

The builders of these first farm homes also planted trees that could provide more than shade, Culen said. He said the center is dotted with groups of blick walnut, plum, apple, and many sugar maple trees. The homesteaders planted the maples closest to their home, he said. For many, maple sugar was their only secure of sugar, and each family would collect sap each spring. Culen's syrup-making methods are as old as the log house the brass kettle sits baside. Although sap is collected in the spring, the process can begin in the auturn i.

By Phyllin Mattera Staff Writer "It's great therapy. Sometimes I work all day doing it." Stephen Ward, gymnasium and facilities supervisor at the Arena, says.

supervisor at the Arena, says. What he's talking about is minature modeling. Ward has put together more than 300 models, ranging from military tanks to Biloo Baggins, the famous character from J.R.R. Tolkien's books "I've been putting together models ever since my father bought me my first kit when I was 4 years old.

old. "I still remember my first kit. It was a guided missile cruiser of the USS. Boston ship. My father put most of it together," Ward said. Ward specialized in putting World War II military tanks together but, about a year ago, started building other kinds of models because of the limited selection of model tanks available, he said. Ward has built French, German, British and American tanks and has researched the exact techniques used to color each one. "I have more than 50 honks on

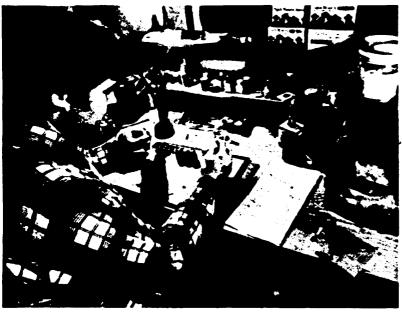

"I have more than 50 books on tanks," Ward said. "There is so much to know. Depending on how you want it, you can make the tank look weathered, muddy, brand new,

on fire or hit by shells. "The color has to be correct or it could ruin the whole thing," Ward said

Could runn the wnote tunng, waru said. Ward also subscribes to two magazines, Military Modeler and Mihitary Modeling Ward said he works on his models at home or at work. "The best way is if I leave the models on my desk and then start working on them when I get in the model." He said. Ward, 27, is married and lives in Carbondale. Ward has a room in his bouse where he works on his models and has them displayed. Ward has about $100 worth of paint for his models "the botter to huy, the best brushes and acoust $50 worth or paim for his models "It is better to buy the best equipment in the long run." he said Last August, Ward "ntered a model contest held by Wa -Mart and model contest held by Wa -Mart and won first prize "I was really happy I worked on that tank eight heurs a day for a month." He added, "I worked on models all through grade school and high school. But when I came to SIU I didn i thave anywhere to work on my models so I stopped for awhile." He started working on models again three years later when his wife bought him a kit for Christmas.

After working two months on a model of an army howitzer, Ward puts the finishing touches on his latest work.
