USO, GSC plan attack on tuition hikes, loan cuts

By Lyndal Caldwell

Staff Writer

In response to rising tuition and fee costs and proposed cuts in student financial aid programs, the Undergraduate Student Organization and Graduate Student Council are sponsoring an "Education for Everyone Campaign." The purpose of the campaign is to circulate a message against drastic cuts proposed in several federal student loan and grant programs combined with substantial tuition and fee increases which will have a real and negative impact on access to higher education," stated a newsletter from Todd Hogan, USO president.

"The 'Education for Everyone Campaign' is promoting access to higher education - the poor and middle class as well as the wealthy," the newsletter stated.

In order to inform and mobilize supporters, the USO and GSC plan to hold public hearings, circulate a petition, start a letter writing campaign, and a voter registration drive among SIUC students, and have an "Education for Everyone Rally" tomorrow in which U.S. Rep. Paul Simon, D-Ill., District, will speak.

In addition to the letter, a campaign will include testimony from students, alumni, and organizations as well as individual students who will be affected negatively by drastic federal cutbacks, Rogers said.

"We're ready to work with the people of Southern Illinois as well as other universities in the region to promote higher education," Rogers said.

The USO and GSC will have a press conference to explain the philosophy behind the campaign and what the USO and GSC plan to do.

If you are interested in participating, the press conference will be at 1:30 Wednesday in the Student Center Washba Room.

Take that, bicycle thieves;
new, tougher bike racks bought

By Red Farlow

Staff Writer

Some students who park their bicycles on campus may have fewer worries over whether their bikes will be stolen, thanks to new "tougher" bike racks recently purchased by the Parking Division.

The 20 new racks are different and more modern than the racks already on campus, Merrilyn Hogan, campus parking manager, said.

"We decided to get the different types of racks because people are hesitant to use them," said Hogan. "It makes the new ones offer better security." Hogan said.

The new racks, which each hold two bikes, have three slotted sections on two arms that enclose the two wheels and the bicycle frame. The bike is placed between the two arms, the arms are closed and the rider's lock is used to secure the connection. Hogan said that some of the new racks won't have to use cables to connect their bikes and making it more difficult for people to steal.

Hogan said she hopes the new racks will provide an alternative to bikers who overlooked the existing racks or illegally took their bikes.

The rack near the Student Center was one that was most overloaded, she said. "It's better to use the new racks and hope the crooks will come," she said.

Hogan said the cost of the new racks was $2,200, and that the money came from the revenue created by fines and decal revenues. She said the type of rack that was bought on campus, with its 16 bike slots, could be purchased for $300.

"When you consider the security, these are the best I could do for them," Hogan said. "They are better designed for 16 bikes than the existing racks."

"I'd like to put some more around the campus in the future," she said.

Gus says putting bolt-bucket bikes in a rack like this would be like putting a $500 saddle on a $20 bike.

Popular foam insulation banned because of cancer-causing risk

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government Monday banned further installation of a popular foam insulation already used in a half million American homes on grounds it poses the risk of cancer and other dangers to health.

The order to halt installation of urea-formaldehyde foam insulation will take effect 150 days after publication of a legal notice in the Federal Register, probably within a few weeks. The Consumer Product Safety Commission's final prohibition on the product proposed last year, which crippled a CPSC staff investigation stretching back to the 1970s.

The vote came after the commission staff repeated its recommendation to halt installation of the material, which emits formaldehyde gas that can create skin irritation and breathing problems and are a possible cause of cancer.

Commissioner Stuart M. Stalter cast the only negative vote. Stalter did not deny the insulation posed some hazard — he said he would not put it in his own home — but he maintained it was possible to set governmental standards that would protect consumers.

The new commissioners argued specifically against that.

Saturday’s events will include an exhibit of foreign artifacts from 6 to 9 p.m. in Ballrooms A, B and C. An International Dance will be held in the Big Muddy Room from 9 to 12 noon. A student reception featuring international coffees will be outside the ballrooms starting at 7:30 p.m. Saturday.

Events on Sunday will include an international art exhibit in the Gallery Lounge from 10:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., an international buffet from 10:45 a.m. to 2 p.m. in the Recreation Room and a Cultural Talent Show from 3 to 5 p.m. in Ballroom D.

Student is raped near Lawson Hall

An 18-year-old student was raped early Monday morning at the east side of Lawson Hall. A fellow student reported the rape to SU-U police at about 3 a.m. Monday. Police said the victim refused treatment at Memorial Hospital.

News Roundup

Walesa accused of subversion

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The army newspaper, in a sharp attack Monday on the suspended labor union Solidarity, accused Lech Walesa of joining other Solidarity leaders in calling for the lynching of Communist party officials.

The official press has generally avoided criticizing Walesa by name, reflecting the martial law government's stand that Walesa was out-maneuvered by redcoats and lost control of the labor movement.

But the newspaper Zlolskni Weekend claimed Walesa went along with other leaders in a December meeting that called for hanging some Communist Party officials.

Appeals court dismisses spying case

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Court of Military Appeals refused Monday the dismissal of the espionage case against 2nd Lt. Christopher Cooke on ground the Air Force improperly extended his "confession" about conveying secrets to the U.S. to Cooke.

-Cooke was released, hours later, from the stockade at nearby Fort Meade, Md., an Army post. Defense attorney F. Lee Bailey said via telephone from Florida that his client promptly "signed his resignation" from the Air Force, then headed home in Richmond, Va.

High court rejects newspaper appeal

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court on Monday rejected a newspaper challenge to a California court's exclusion of the press and public from jury selection in a murder case.

The action, one of the dissent of three justices, came in the latest battle waged by the news media over courtroom access during criminal proceedings.

The high court already has said it will decide in a Massachusetts case whether the public and press can be excluded from some criminal trials while young victims of sex crimes are testifying.

Bowen Developmental Center closing irks SIU-C profs

Three SIU-C professors will be among persons speaking at a public hearing Tuesday at Harrisburg on Gov. James Thompson's decision to close the Bowen Developmental Center for handicapped children.

Patrick Schloss, a faculty member in special education, said he and David A. Sabatino, chairman of the special education department, and Robert A. Sedlak, another faculty member, plan to offer testimony on programs they conduct at Bowen to the House Democratic Task Force on Community Needs, which called the hearing.

Rep. Jim Rea, D-Champaign, will chair the hearing, scheduled for 2 to 7 p.m. in the Harrisburg Junior High School auditorium.

Sedlak described SIU-C's Special Education Department as "the third cog" in the education program carried on by Bowen and the Wabash Valley Special Education Cooperative. He said the SIU-C department provided "the educational contract" for its work there and expressed doubt that it could be carried on if the children at Bowen are moved to the Anna Mental Health Center.

Bowen director quits under fire

HARRISBURG (AP) — The executive director of the A.L. Bowen Developmental Center, which has been targeted for closure by Gov. James R. Thompson, resigned last Monday.

Wayne Rottemeyer, as he is known to friends, said he was told by Dr. Ron Bittle, regional superintendent, that he would be offered a job in the transition if he publicly supported the closing at a public hearing Tuesday in Harrisburg.

Rottemeyer said little informed him "that staff from the governor's office had told him not to offer a position to me in the transition process since they felt I was trying to block the closure. If I publicly supported the closure of Bowen, Dr. Bittle would keep me on."
All parts of community have place on the IAAC

HAVING A variety of ideas and opinions is necessary for informed decision-making. This is true in university administration as in politics or science. Those who want to make the right decisions must be exposed to the views of people who sometimes disagree with them. However, sometimes students do not see the importance of being the "party school" of student organizations.

Or at least that's what the students attending other universities in Illinois would like to think.

The latent in a series of "revealing" articles about the party image of this University, a series that started with an article in Chicago magazine, recently appeared in the Daily Northwestern, the Northwestern University newspaper. The paper is staffed by students enrolled in one of the top journalism schools in the country, or so its reputation would have us believe.

The article's numerous factual errors show a flagrant disregard for the truth, a journalistic sin as deadly as out-and-out libel. Writer Alan Maas' only justification for writing the article, entitled "Bad Karma in Carbondale: You Wonder How the Other Half Lives? Don't," seems to be to pull out a gapping news hole to fill.

TO GIVE HIM credit, Maas has a slight variation of the standard complaint: SIU-C parties as bell out affairs from the high school years with lots more baw.

He says that "mature, responsible high school graduates have been known to leave Chicago for Carbondale and return four years later, burnt out hunks of human beings, suffering from severe alcohol, smoking and drug problems.

"It is impossible to even imagine that the high school parties bear a resemblance to the sitings of clowns residing safely by "slumdogs," as long as the walls don't crash in on someone.

I've never been to Northwestern, but I can stereotype it as described by Maas described SIU-C. After all, like Maas, I have to live in this space somewhere.

Northwestern is a private university, which means students pay exorbitantly high tuitions — a freshman paid a minimum of $16,000 last fall quarter. The higher tuition and the quality of education this tuition brings theoretically attract a much better student to the university than SIU-C attracts.

In other words, the "boredom of SIU-C is the "preppiness of Northwestern." For the benefit of the uninstructed, a preppie is a strange sort of human usually found in Illinois or Iowa, or in places like Maas would know.

Now, come one, folks. Surely a preppie in the first place, not because of the quality of education they can get there, but because of the status symbols such universities confer. After all, mentioning a degree from Northwestern or Indiana can bring into the best parties of adult prepp life.

Preppies go to college just to prepare for that high society life, with families, money and status usually following the whole learning experience. It seems that everyone is left to worry much about grades or the prospects of future occupations. In fact, one of their major preoccupations is trying to devise a better strategy for getting kicked out of school.

Do WHILE SIU-C students worry about the effect of fees, SIU-C in the education budget, preppies wonder how often their Grand Tour of Europe will be after graduation. While SIU-C students express concern for the survival of the poor, preppies think nepotism is the name of the newest flavor of Jelly Bellies.

Preppies, as a rule, do not need to feed themselves, tend to concentrate in fraternization and sororities sometimes better known as the matchmakers of the rich. From here they can engage in everything from intramural lacrosse and field hockey.

But the major advantage of Greek life is the preppy parties. Instead of drinking in such proletarian places as bars, preppies reserve this function for the infamous frats and sororities. In these parties, preppies drink and socialize, but never get too drunk or maybe, well, did you know that they have keggers of the finest lager? From the sound of it, all the parties are the same thing — college students.

SOUND familiar? Preppie parties bear a marked resemblance to those parties found at SIU-C. Likewise, preppies and sororities are not quite the best that ends of the spectrum, as popular students are often considered good and would like to think.

Saturday-Feb 13, '82

I am a student at Northwestern in Evanston, Ill. I have recently read an article in this newspaper referring to SIU in the fall. I had a little fun with this one, as a campaign week, and while I was there, I picked up a copy of the Daily Ilian. It was the size of a Sears catalog.

I also noticed that this was the second time in two weeks that I had read a story that beat us to the punch. In the date Wednesday, February 11, 1982. Now come on, folks. Surely a preppie can't be that stupid.

Can Carbondale provide tranquility or 'ouw ada?

My mother always says 'ouw ada' (in the language). It means that something is in an environment. This natural phenomenon is something that I have in my home. In fact, it is absolutely silence everywhere. No sound; no noise; the trees are silent. In fact, the environment emanates tranquility. I mean, this phenomenon has already been recognized, personally, I have a feeling that the nature is present or passing through tranquility or some strange things usually mark the end of the ouw ada that comes with tranquility and goes unnoticed, just like the wind.

A contemporary educated interpretation could be very interesting, i.e. the frequency wavelength of some far off planet coming down to earth, and has the ability in the right kind of environment. In that case, the high energy radiation could equally be the superstitious 'ouw ada' mentioned in the traditional explanation.

The application of ouw ada to human beings was voided; proizers have used this period to learn successfully the secrets on their potential targets. It is believed some kind of healing cannot be possible at this particular period. Some people think that the output is a sign of the evil of any mating within the specific period. We all know that some people have a feeling of taking care of problems of that period in that society. However, it is not always fully explored.

In Carbondale capable of providing a tranquil environment - Chukwu Okpala-Oka, Graduate Student, Student Planning and Design

Evolution is unproven theory; it's as 'factual' as creationism

I'M WRITING in response to Christopher Kade's column about 'creationism' (Daily Egyptian, Feb. 12). Chris, before you write your next column you should at least try to learn something about the topic you are covering. It was painfully obvious that you wrote out of complete ignorance on the subject of creationism.

Creationism does not start out with the Bible and search for facts to support it, and it is not guilty of cultural chauvinism. Creationism is simply this: taking all the facts concerning fossil records (including the facts evolutionists themselves admit are against them) and then seeing which models best correspond to these facts.

The evolution model is the theory that all living things have arisen by a materialistic evolutionary process from a single source which itself arose by a single process from a dead inert object. Creationism is one of the theories that argue that creationism is a more likely model, that society is a result of creation and not evolution. Evolution is a philosophy and it is this philosophy that is misleading the public.

Neither evolution nor creation can be proven scientifically; yet, evolution is taught as fact. The fact that evolution is widely accepted by the scientific community doesn't bring it any closer to being right or proven. It is used to be widely accepted that the earth was flat.

Evolutionists have hidden the facts that can't be explained in their scheme of things. People desire to know all the facts and make a decision for themselves as to which of the models they believe.

Bike keeps owner from capitalist ride

Her name is Columbia. I did not know that I would have to marry her up till last fall. The reason being, I was working for a period that was not operable today. She is a supernatural creator, not the God of Bible fame, just a supernatural creator. I personally believe that the God of the Bible is that supernatural creator as I suppose creationists do, but that personal belief is not included in the creation model.

You called creationism a myth, not a science. I feel creationism is more of a science than evolution. Evolution is a philosophy and it is not a science.

Don't keep birth control secret

The column entitled "Plan risks more than marriage emancipation" by Vicki Olgetra was distressing for its almost total lack of understanding that parents and not some agency of the government should decide if their 16-year-old girls should receive birth control assistance or information.

What kind of people are so uninformed that they believe they have a right to give someone else's children birth control? As a parent, they are not in the child's best interest, or the parents' expense and not informed that there is a real problem.

Olgetra states that "no politician...can or should try to make up for the inability of parents and children to communicate..." What a shock! In most cases, parents and children have communicated, but some children do not agree with their parents. That does not mean that some politician should step in and allow strangers to give birth control pills to children if the parents do not want this done for their children, unless the parents are not at the very least informed. There is one sentence in the column that I agree with: "Grandparents, parents have a right to know the actions of their children..." - one statement that really says it all.

I agree with the author that this discussion is taking place in the wrong place. I have previously known that their children had birth control assistance without their consent and even a grade at a tax payer's expense.

Let those who want to give birth control assistance to directees have their own children and give it to them, but please keep those people away from other people's children.

Father James A. Gehring, St. Francis Xavier Church, Carbondale.

New economy will destroy jobs

The Reagan administration's plan that dismantling the federal government will cure the economic ills of the United States. There seems to be little recognition of the primary decisions performed by the federal government, except the ones that aren't targeted for phasing out or reducing. The states are cure in finding across the board in order to keep up with their budgets, which will nevertheless have a record deficit.

States are not in a minority, because a large percentage of the population is being hurt by 'Telegonomics'. It is a strange democracy that has a negative bias in favor of many of the people. A vague assurance that eventually there will be a better time is the help of the money the tax collectors don't help those who can't afford additional or health necessities. People who will find it harder to thrive in the new economy will become even lesser active members of society. The sudden decline in production will eliminate jobs rather than create them.

Our president has taken a definite course of action, which has been lacking in the past. We should strongly follow any leadership, or should we keep our eyes and minds open to an administration that is steering us into the future? - Martin Lolic, Sealer. Design

She was the person who wanted to own a car, thus keeping me away from my lover, Columbia. This was because she was jealous of me and my feelings are deeper. I woke up in the morning and thought that something might have happened to Columbia. I decided to try to find out if she was still alive and went down to check if Columbia was from.

I had to work Jan. 13, and it was a cold ride for a bicycle rider. Hills resident. No, Columbia needs me isn't it a shame or better to leave her alone just because it is too cold? We love each other and we should continue to live. I tried to think of looking for her, but she was not able to do all at the same time. I tried to solve my problem. My wife did not want to take the Volkswagen and leave me alone with my proletarian love. The love I have for Columbia is the purest love. All this closed in between the holidays when my spiritual father was not around to talk to, save me from my love, Starving me for advice, I told him the story. He was absolutely correct. Love does not have an ideology in this materialistic and sophisticated world of wealth and rational power.

Black church given tributes, called foundation of progress

By Randy Rosefield
Staff Writer

Black people need to know their history and the role their churches have played in it, else they will be "like a ship without a rudder," the Rev. Walter Bowie Jr. said.

"The black church is a "vaporizer of Africanisms that have survived in the West," said Harriet Wilson, coordinator of minority student enrollment for SIUC.

The black church is the foundation of the black community, said DeLois Porter, Miss Eboness of 1982.

They were among speakers Sunday at a "Tribute to the Black Church," sponsored by the Black Affairs Council as part of Black History Month. About 500 people attended the program, which also featured gospel music by Carbondale church choirs, in the Student Center here.

WCIL to air ‘Black Profiles’
By Charles Victor
Staff Writer

Students of the Black American Studies program, BAS 320, have prepared a new radio series on prominent black American leaders of the past called “Black Profiles.”

The series, part of the celebration of Black History Month, will be aired daily thru Saturday between 8:40 and 9:00 a.m. on WCIL in Carbondale. It is being produced under the supervision of Locksley Edmonson, a faculty member in Social and Community Services, in cooperation with the Carbondale NAACP branch.

Black Profiles will highlight the achievements and impact of historical black American leaders like Harriet Tubman, W.E.B. DuBois, Marcus Garvey, Malcolm X and Martin Luther King.

The BAS department is involved in many other activities. It is currently developing and enhancing its research activities, publishing and community outreach programs. It’s projects also include a drama and writers’ workshop at the Menard Correctional Center, developing high school programs and lectures and presenting Brown Bag Series, a lecture given over lunch, on affirmative action.

Jack Nicholson is back. And he's in fine form.

After audience performances in "The Shining" (1st best, a boring film) and "The Postman Always Rings Twice," he made a startling comeback as Eugene O'Neill in "The Border." Now he's done himself once again, bringing his intense personality to the role of Charlie Smith in "The Border." "The Border" is not a great film. It is, however, a very good one, and mainly because of Nicholson's performance, it succeeds.

In the beginning the way it was originally intended, though, it doesn't quite make it. Director Tony Richardson has attempted to depict the miserable lifestyle of Mexican workers just over the border from El Paso, Texas, and their desperate struggle to enter the United States. In an effort to make a few quick bucks and sneak back, only to return the next day. It shows them living in clapboard shacks, drinking in sleazy dives, complete with hookers, go-go dancers and practically every disease known to man. And they're being herded into panel trucks, vans and small boats to try to make it across the border.

For the most part, Richardson manages in depicting a truly hopeless situation. However, the flow of the film is continually disrupted by Robert Lambert's uneven editing, leading the viewer on a visual trip through confusion.

It is Nicholson, however, who saves the film. His portrayal of Smith, the new guy in the Border Patrol who refuses to get in on a money-making scam perpetuated by his next-door neighbor and fellow guard, Cat (Harvey Keitel), is both gruff and sensitive.

In the beginning of the film, Nicholson and his wife, Marcy (Valerie Perrine), move into their El Paso "dreamhouse," a sleazy duplex in a typical suburban setting. Complete with backyard and imitation brick facing. Richardson tries to make comparisons between the two, but the film, unfortunately, is handled poorly.

In the end, it is Nicholson's performance, it truly outdone himself once again, bringing his intense personality to the role of Charlie Smith in "The Border."

Equestrian team ends drought

By Steve Metack
Sports Editor

It took some time — five years to be exact — but the SIU-C equestrian team finally won a high-point championship.

But once was not enough for the trophy-hungry team, so it went on a second day to take victory No. 2.

SIU-C scored 21 points Saturday and 38 points Sunday at Middle Tennessee State to capture its two first-place finishes. The team outdrew Middle Tennessee, Western Kentucky, Tennessee-Knoxville, Murray State and Winona on its way to victory.

Jolene Odum won the high-point individual title, scoring 12 points over the two days of competition. According to Coach Myke Ramsey, Odum was a "ride-off" Sunday against three other 12-point earners to take first.

Ramsey explained how the 35-member club operates and the procedures used at horse shows entered by the club.

"When we arrive at a show, I don't pick the riders whose totals will count toward the team's until about five minutes before the start. It adds a little suspense," she said.

The individual scores of SIU-C riders Odum, Sarah Ranta, Tamara Smith, Tana Willreidt and Sarah Ranta were tallied for the team tally Saturday. Ranta was replaced by Wendy McIntosh Sunday. Those riders whose scores aren't added for the team score still compete for individual honors.

SIU-C won the high-point hunt seat honors over the weekend. "Hunt seat" is the term used to describe the English style of riding — complete with high black boots, red coats and fancy jumping.

The English style is split into walk-trot, walk-trot-canter, walk-trot-canter, on-the-bit and over-fences events, which are in turn split into divisions related to the rider's experience.

The team also competed in the Western stock seat division, which is split into beginner, intermediate and advanced divisions.

Seven points are awarded for a first-place finish, five for a second, and so on. Judging is based on how well a rider looks on a horse.

Ramsey, who works for University Housing, is in her third year as volunteer coach.

She said the SIU-C victory is impressive because they didn't use their own horses.

"At a show on the road, we have to use horses supplied by our host," she said.

Hurricane blows out Salukis

By Bob Mensard
Staff Writer

The Tulsa Golden Hurricane recorded its 31st consecutive victory at home Monday night by thrashing the Salukis 85-47 in a Missouri Valley Conference matchup with the Tulsa Assembly Center. The loss dropped SIU-C's MVC record to 6-9 while the Golden Hurricane, in hot pursuit of MVC leader 11-1 Bradley, pushed its Valley record to 13-3.

The Salukis, at a disadvantage with guard James Copeland on the bench nursing a thigh injury, started Dennis Goins at the point-guard spot. Scott Russ, for the first time this season, started at the other guard position. According to Saluki Coach Allen Van Winkle, SIU-C missed the 6-4 Copeland, although Goins filled the spot respectfully.

"I think it hurts us that James was not able to play but I compliment Goins for filling in for James because the Tulsa defense was all over him on the floor," Van Winkle said.

The Hurricane offense exploded in the second half to pull away from the Salukis. Tulsa led 42-36 at halftime.

Led by 6-4 sophomore forward Bruce Vanaley, who scored a career high 23 points, Tulsa led the SIU-C offense in the second half and left the Salukis panting while the Golden Hurricane extended its lead to 73-56 with 8:22 left to play. The Tulsa defense was just as merciless as they trapped and pressed the SIU-C guards all night, forcing numerous turnovers.

"I don't think we were tired physically in the second half," Van Winkle said. "But when players with the great talents that they have to continue to pull away from you so quickly it gets disappointing mentally."

Saluki 6-3 forward Ken Byrd, who was ejected from the game with 2:37 left following a scuffle with Tulsa's Ty Nickel, led SIU-C with 15 points. In Camp, a Saluki sparkplug in the first half with nine points, finished the game with 14 points. Goins added 11.

The quickness of the Tulsa defense was exemplified in the first half when Hurricane guard Paul Pressure took an "alley-oop" pass from teammate Mike Anderson and converted it into a two-point slam dunk. Pressure ended the night with 10 points while Anderson chipped in 16. Center Greg Stewart added 17 points.

Although she has led SIU-C in scoring seven times, sophomore gymnast Pam Turner feels there is room for improvement.

By Steve Metz
Sports Editor

Herb Vogel is lucky young Pam Turner found swimming boring. If she hadn't, the Salukis' women's gymnastics team might have found its team missing one of the better all-arounders among college gymnasts.

"I was a swimmer when I was younger," said Turner. "I became bored with swimming back and forth all day. So I got into diving, which led to gymnastics when I was 8 years old."

This season is proof that she made a wise decision.

The sophomore has led SIU-C in all-around in seven of the team's 11 settings. She has won the all-around competition five times. She has broken the 35-point barrier in eight of her last nine outings. In other words, to quote her consistent is an enormous understatement.

"Pam has provided the leadership the team needed," Vogel said. "I think it's a result of the manner in which she trains. She wants to get into the gym train and get out. That's the attitude I like to see."

Turner said she likes to push herself in practice.

"For me, routines are always easier to perform in a meet than in practice," she said.

"The man is a leader to success in gymnastics. Before she enrolled at SIU-C, the California, Con, native competed for the prestigious Muriel Blackman Swimming Center School of Gymnastics.

As Muriel Blackman said, "I'm not the only gymnastics coach recruiting Turner. Kentucky and Indiana were interested in signing her, but she chose SIU-C because she liked it better and our school is bigger."

Turner completed high school ahead of schedule, attending summer school and graduating in August of 1989. She started classes at SIU-C just a few weeks later.

"I never got it all together the first year," said Turner in reference to her rookie season. "I didn't have a success in any section - I worked more on tricks and not enough on routines.

Vogel said Turner's first year was a time of "adjustment" for her.

She was just 17 years old, and had to get in shape again after taking a year off from gymnastics.

The year wasn't a total loss for Turner, Page 15

Tracksters set 3 marks

The women's track team broke three school records at the Illinois track meet Saturday — and were not able to pull away from the competition at any of the record-setting events.

In fact, the Salukis barely avoided a shutout, managing only four points and finishing sixth overall for the meet — with 17 points behind Illinois. Wisconsin, as women's track Coach Claudia Blackman had predicted earlier this season. With the meet, ranking up 126 points to second-place Illinois, said.

"I never broke the Saluki records, but experience scored the Saluki team. Not like the previous Illinois and 98. Illinois State took third with 90 points.

Sophomore Debra Davis broke the 500-meter dash mark with a time of 4:16.8. Tuskegee's best time in the 1500-meter run was 4:44 seconds off the old record; and the four by 200-meter relay team of Davis, sophomore Jennifer Bartley, and freshmen Shantae Adams and Sonya Mayes out-run the old record by 3.62 seconds.

Senior Patty Flynn broke two points for the Salukis, placing fifth in the both the 5,000- and 3,000-meter runs. The distance specialist's time of 4:47 was a personal best and a new event which is not her specialty, according to Blackman.

"I have an outstanding performance in the 1,500," the senior said Saturday. "It was exceptional because she really isn't a fast person," Blackman said, putting all of her effort into the 1,500, which may have affected her performance in the 5,000.

Blackman said Flyer-Houseworth, who finished the 1,500 with a time of 2:32.12, led into the last eight laps of the event, but "didn't have enough to hang on."
