Meese's role in Iran affair under examination

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Special prosecutor Lawrence Walsh is examining whether Attorney General Edwin Meese helped doctor a chronology to protect President Reagan in the Iran affair and if he misled Congress on when the secret arms sales were approved.

The Wall Street Journal reported Monday that Walsh, the court-appointed independent counsel investigating the scandal, is said to be pursuing obstruction of justice charges against some administration officials.

The report came as a special review board, the Tower commission, prepared to issue its report Thursday on NSC operations. The report is expected to be highly critical and name officials believed involved in a White House effort to cover up Reagan's role in the plan to sell weapons to Iran.

Meese testified before the commission once, a spokesman said, but it could not be learned if he would be criticized in the report.

The Journal indicated its investigation of Meese's knowledge or participation in the secret operation has expanded. The special prosecutor had already taken over a probe by the Justice Department's internal inspector, who was trying to determine why Meese did not conduct a criminal investigation sooner and possibly prevent some key evidence from being destroyed.

Garment workers asked to consider contract changes

By Catherine Edman
Staff Writer

Union members at Institutions-Interstyles Inc., a garment manufacturing firm in Carbondale, have been asked to renegotiate their contracts in an attempt to save the business, owner Marshall Kurian said.

Production workers at the factory in the Carbondale Industrial Park on U.S. Route 51 are considering some “economic changes” in pay changes, proposed by Kurian. Details are being worked out until the negotiations are final, said Frank Peirce, a union representative.

Peirce said a negotiating committee of workers has met with the owner and returned to talk about the proposals with other union members. He said he does not know when the two sides will reach an agreement, but said any decisions will be left up to the workers.

Union representatives are concerned about the future of the workers' jobs, but they also are concerned about their benefits and working conditions, said Peirce, who manages the Missouri Valley district council for the International Ladies Garment Workers Union.

The notification of “alleged financial problems” came relatively soon after the new owner took over, Peirce said.

But Kurian said bids to buy companies are made with an understanding that many risks are involved.

Kurian purchased the business, which employs about 150 people, last fall. Earlier this year he told workers that the business was having some financial difficulties.

He said Intuitions is being torn apart by trade policies and competition from companies that import products at lower cost. He would not disclose his proposals, but said he is determined to make the business succeed. He said he explained the situation to the workers first and asked for their support.

Kurian said he is determined to save the company and has "put every dime they've ever made to continue the domestic selling operation."

Meese closer to White House bid

By David Sheets

"It looks very good that Senator Simon would run if Senator Bumpers does not," said David Carle, Simon's press secretary, in a telephone interview from his Washington, D.C., office.

But Matt James, a spokesman for Bumpers, said the senator has not said whether he will run for the 1988 Democratic nomination for president. Carle added.

"Senator Simon believes the announcement will come soon," James said. "Senator Bumpers has set no clear timetable concerning an announcement."

Speculation surrounding Simon's presidential plans escalated after New York Gov. Mario Cuomo announced Thursday during a New York radio interview that he would not seek the Democratic presidential nomination.

Demonstrators demand measures against Sikhs

NEW DELHI (UPI) — Chanting "Rajiv Gandhi act or quit," thousands of demonstrators led by a right-wing Hindu party marched through New Delhi Monday demanding stern measures against Sikh militants and illegal immigrants in northern border regions. It was the latest protest against the policies of Prime Minister Gandhi's government since he took office in 1984. Most business closed during the march, and New Delhi commodities markets halted trading in response to a citywide strike called by Hindu nationalists.

New Contra leader pledges 'real unity'

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (UPI) — Pedro Joaquin Chamorro Barrios, newly elected to the three-man leadership of the U.S.-backed Nicaraguan rebels, said Monday his main goal was to forge "a real unity" among the insurgents. Late Sunday, the United Nicaraguan Opposition, or UNO, elected Chamorro Barrios to replace rebel leader Adolfo Calero, who resigned from the rebels' political umbrella group last Monday in Miami.

Terrorist storms out of court as trial starts

PARIS (UPI) — A Lebanese militant, his voice quaking with anger, shouted, "Down with Yankee imperialism," and stormed out of a courtroom in handcuffs Monday to protest U.S. representation at his trial on charges of complicity in two political assassinations. The trial of Georges Ibrahim Abdallah, 35, accused leader of a leftist terror group called the Lebanese Armed Revolutionary Faction, opened under extraordinarily tight security at the Justice Ministry near the Seine river.

Greenpeace, military prepare for cruise test

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (UPI) — Greenpeace and military officials readied themselves Monday for the start of a 1,500-mile test of a U.S. cruise missile over the frozen expanse of northwest Canada. "Things look good for Tuesday's test," Strategic Air Command spokesman Maj. Fred Harper said from Canadian Forces Base Cold Lake, about 150 miles northeast of Edmonton. The test missile will be launched from a U.S. Air Force B-52 at 10 a.m. EST Tuesday.

College students fast to protest Contra aid

MEDFORD, Mass. (UPI) — A group of Tufts University students, sporting red arm bands staged a 24-hour fast Monday to protest United States aid to Nicaraguan rebels while three other Boston-area colleges planned similar demonstrations. The 53 Tufts students began the symbolic fast at midnight Sunday and were to end the hunger strike by midnight Monday.

U.S. plans broader reading of missile treaty

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The administration is expected to implement a broader interpretation of the 1972 ABM Treaty within the next few weeks to permit space testing of a "Star Wars" defense system, officials said Monday. At the direction of the White House, the Pentagon is analyzing the expense of testing the Strategic Defense Initiative, or "Star Wars," under a broader interpretation of the treaty.

State employee group calls pension pay recall heartless

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — The State Universities Retirement System should stop its efforts to collect long-term overpayments it made to pensioners, a state employees group said Monday. Joe Pisano, president of the Illinois State Employees Association, said requiring retirees to cover long-term overpayment errors made by the university system is "heartless and cruel."

Washington, Byrne set for mayoral showdown

CHICAGO (UPI) — Mayor Harold Washington and Democratic challenger Jane Byrne, seeking to get back her old job from the man who beat her in 1983, rallied Chicago Monday. The challenges approach did not affect the voting of the primary. Today's primary is expected to draw close to 1.5 million voters casting ballots under the watchful eyes of thousands of pollwatchers seeking to prevent fraud. Missouri Rep throws hat into presidential race

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri became the first Democrat to formally announce as a 1988 presidential candidate Monday, launching his campaign by denouncing the Reagan administration's Iran-Contra scandal.

Without mentioning the president by name, Gephardt also said the current administration has been lax in enforcing civil rights laws and sent "lawyers searching for loopholes" in agreements to prohibit weapons in space.

"And if Congress outlaws military aid to the Contras (as it did), the duty of the executive branch is to carry out the law, not to figure out how to bend and break it covertly," Gephardt said.

"In foreign policy, we are adrift and things seem increasingly out of control. The leaders say one thing, and do another. They talk tough, and then make bad deals for Americans behind closed doors. In foreign policy, we have no policy," Gephardt said.

Gephardt, 46, announced his candidacy at a rally in the renovated Union Station, only blocks from where his father ran a milk route in south St. Louis.

"Today, surrounded by my family and friends, and not far from where I grew up and on the site where Harry Truman accepted victory, I am announcing my candidacy for presidency of the United States," Gephardt said.

"I am the first Democrat to declare. And one year, eight months and eight days from now, when America elects the next president, I intend with your help to finish first."

Although Gephardt is the first Democrat to announce, several others are ready to join him in pursuit of the party's 1988 presidential nomination. They include former Sen. Gary Hart, the front-runner, Sen. Joe-Mah BoRen, D-Mass., Jesse Jackson: former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt; and possibly Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis.

Gephardt, who describes himself as a moderate Democrat, acknowledged he must overcome his lack of name recognition nationally, but said he welcomes the challenge.

"Some campaigns focus primarily on problems. In this campaign and in the presidency itself, you and I will speak for the vast untapped potential and possibilities of America."

"There are some who say we are already too late in this campaign and for our country. But today, this lesson, I learned from my folks, from my life, from our long history as a people."

Gephardt was joined for the announcement by about 20 House colleagues, his wife, Jane, their three children, his mother, Loreen, and his older brother Donald.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court upheld Illinois' mandatory seat belt law Monday, refusing to become involved in claims it violates the right to privacy.

The justices, citing lack of a "challenging case or controversy," question, affirmed an Illinois Supreme Court ruling in a case was brought by Elizabeth Kohrig, who was fined for failing to wear her seat belt.

"Hopefully this law will lay to rest the issue of individual rights versus the government's right to legislate in vital issues of public safety," said Los Rossinion, of the Illinois Coalition for Safety Belt Use. "As each state passes a (seat belt) law, thousands more lives will be saved and fewer injuries will be averted."

At issue was a 1985 law requiring all front seat occupants to wear seatbelts. The law provided for a limited number of exceptions for medical reasons or for older cars not equipped with belts.

"The law carries a fine not to exceed $25," Kohrig said. Kohrig was issued a traffic citation in Marion County. II for violating the law, but challenged it on the grounds it violated her right to privacy and exceeded police powers of the state.

A state circuit court judge agreed in October 1985, but the state Supreme Court reversed the decision a year later. Seeking high court review, attorneys for Kohrig argued the law violates the right to privacy.

"Seat belt legislation, or the type being urged upon the states by the Department of Transportation, touches upon individual fundamental protected rights, and gives rise to the conflict between those rights and claims of furthering the public health, welfare and safety," they argued.

Congressmen jump the gun on draft

SIX YEARS AGO, Pentagon officials and other advocates of a strong national defense were declaring the all-volunteer Army a monumental flop. Enlistment rates were at an all-time low, the quality of many of those who did volunteer was questionable and morale was scraping bottom. Many were calling for a return to conscription.

That was before Ronald Reagan took office and breathed new life into patriotism and pumped billions of dollars more than his predecessors and the defense. Now, after a surge of pay raises and increased educational benefits, the Army’s ranks are swollen to such a point that recruiters can be selective about whom they take.

Indeed, outgoing Navy Secretary John Lehman has bragged that the quality of today’s armed forces personnel is “the finest we’ve ever had since we began keeping records 211 years ago.” But that doesn’t seem to satisfy some in Congress. Many are calling for a return to the draft or for the institution of some other form of “national service.” In doing so, however, the congressmen may be unwittingly sabotaging the armed forces. Most Pentagon officials recognize the fact that soldiers who volunteer are much more eager to do well as those who are drafted against their will. Most of them oppose a return to the draft. Congress would do well to heed their wishes.

MANY OF THE MOST VOCAL supporters of conscription are potential presidential candidates for 1988. Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, calls a return to the draft “a principal issue in the 1988 Congress.” Former Colorado Sen. Gary Hart calls it “the biggest issue of the 80s.” It is doubtful, however, whether a return to the draft is forthcoming. Senators Hart and Nunn, while popular among nerves, are unpopular with most voters. So don’t be surprised if Nunn and Hart hedge on the issue when campaign time rolls around.

Taking an opposite approach to the issue, the Democratic Leadership Council is proposing that a program of mandatory national service be examined. The plan would require young people to serve up to two years in the armed forces or on civilian welfare projects. One must ask why the Democrats, the traditional doves in Congress, are flouting to see the reinstated. Could it be that they are more concerned about en- deavouring themselves to what they perceive as a new conservative majority than they are about bolstering America’s defense?

Whatever the case, the congressmen proposing a return to the draft clearly are acting prematurely. The United States already has a draft registration program. At the time of its enactment, lawmakers assumed that the public was concerned about the possibility of its evolving into a full-fledged military draft that registration and that registration and that the public was concerned about the possibility of its evolving into a full-fledged military draft that registration and draft would go hand in hand. They should continue to make good on those assurances.

States flout labor law

Chicago Sun-Times

The issue of states’ rights and federal power has arisen anew because of a ruling by a three-judge panel in Washington. The court said that state failure to provide adequate safety and sanitary needs of migrant farm workers made it imperative that the federal government act.

Labor Secretary Bill Brock last week had said the federal government expects the state labor law to be tough on safety and health standards. The state of Illinois has taken steps to provide toilets and washing facilities for field hands. About half a million workers remained uncovered, however, mostly in Western states. The response to Brock’s efforts was wholly inadequate. Opposition to providing restrooms for field workers from disease and the effect of pesticides remains strong in some areas.

Exciting (yawn) Soviet television programs for kool komrades only

By Punch Shaw

Editor’s note: Punch Shaw is an assistant professor in radio- television at SIUC.

LAST WEEK, while most “Americans” were enjoying ABC’s “América,” I was tuned into “The Discovery Channel,” where the Glorious Soviet People’s yawn television lit up my video screen.

To call Soviet television boring would be a flattering understatement. It moves at the pace of a Siberian glacier and with the production quality of a first-year Radio-TV class.

Since the Soviet Union has long been a center of culture its detractors have dazzled audiences the world over: I pondered why Soviet television in general was almost as boring as the America’s Cup. To get an answer I met a good friend, Boris Signov, a top Soviet television official, received the following reply:

“DEAR CAPITALIST WAR- Mongering Colleague,

It is good to know you are recently from enjoying Glorious Soviet Socialist Peoples television programming. It is also enjoyed by tens of people over here. And, am happy to announce launch of new of five-year plan to make even better. Here is sample of new, original Soviet programming designed to further cause of revolution and keep delinquents from streets.

NEWS—

“Amazing Stories” — Similar program in your country is called nightly news “Democratic in the Soviet Union” (documentary) — is good program. Viewing compulsory.

“Inside the KGB”—Good program. Viewing absolutely prohibited.

To call Soviet television boring would be flattering understatement. It moves at the pace of a Siberian glacier and with the production quality of a first-year radio-TV class.

DRAMA—

“Commissary Trek”—Each week, GSP Commissaryiboldly goes where nocomrade has gone before—church. McDonald, topless bar, etc. is arrested. Boldly goes to salt mine in Siberia.

“Moscow Vice”—Two wild and crazy Moscow cops—Sergey Crockett and Ivan Tubovich—pursue dangerous peoples criminals who sell toilet paper on black market while displaying latest in Soviet fashion—pastel snow boots, pastel earmuffs, pastel longjohns—and cruising in pastel Limousines. Hot tuna by Phil Collins. Is strictly for koolkomadres.

“Stalingrad”—Ewingovs and Harenskys fight for control of potato-growing region of upper Volga.

Passion, power and potatoes (but mostly potatoes).

COMEDY—

“I love Lakki!”—This week, Zany Soviet housewife made madcap misadventure while helping Ukrainian farmers move their goats, without husband Rikki finding out. Next week, Lakki takes job on assembly line at nuclear weapons factory. Is big fun.

“Mikhail Knows Best”—Is warm Soviet family sit-com. Bald guy with map of Afghanistan tattooed on head is always right.

GAME SHOWS—

“Jeopardy”—Party officials give comrade contestants answers. If comrade contestants respond with the right answer, they get most of what program title means.

“Rock and Misfortune”—Disadventures spin wheel, buy letters from lovely comrades Anna Whitekites. First dissident to unscramble Russian Proverbs gets sentence reduced to life.

“The State is Right”—Come on down, come on down! Guess correct price of borscht-style soup and win one week vacation in Leningrad. Second price, two weeks in Leningrad.

“The Bolshoi Ballet Live from Carnegie Hall”—Performance of GSP ballet in decadent western imperialist capital. Leg irons are somewhat, easy, but we remember last tour—left with 20 dancers, came home with 20 pairs of ballet shoes.

“Is going to be glorious situation. Enough of those competitive types.”

Yours in Socialism, Boris.

Addictiveness not limited to abuse of drugs, alcohol

By Barb Fijolek Wellness Center

The term "addiction" usually conjures up visions of junkies snorting heroin or cocaine. Alcohol is certainly addictive. But what about prescription drugs, caffeine, sugar, nicotine, laxatives, cold remedies, or aspirin? They, too, are also potentially addictive.

Behaviors like compulsive eating, gambling, sexual relationships and even spending habits may be considered potential addictions, not merely tendencies or bad habits.

In trying to understand alcohol and other addictions, researchers at the Chemical Dependency Center at Iowa Methodist Medical Center in Des Moines theorize that people with addictions have brains that secrete a "feel good" chemical at certain times.

The researchers believe that these natural chemicals, called "endorphins"—opioid-like substances produced by the body—"produce" highs triggered by alcohol, cocaine or eating. According to this theory, all addictions are created equal, since they are started, maintained and healed in similar ways.

An important factor common to all chemical dependencies is the "rebound principle." Very simply, it says that what goes up must come down. This principle holds true whether the substance is coffee, cocaine, alcohol or sugar.

Like a roller coaster ride, the higher a person goes up, the longer it takes to get to the bottom. So once down from a high, the person addicted to drugs is even lower than when the ride began. Taking drugs to normalize can begin a vicious cycle of intense highs and lows.

How can you tell if you are abusing substances? Ask yourself:

Do you think about and use drugs often? Do you tend to not restrict the settings for use? Are you having difficulties with school, work or relationships? Do you have a reputation as a user?

Yes answers to any of these questions may indicate a first step toward making healthier choices.

Marion water plan called impractical

By Tim McCarthy
Student Writer

Drawing surplus water from Devil's Lake and the crater lake at the Crab Orchard Wildlife Refuge would not be a good plan, Wallace said.

Wallace, who spoke at Thursday night's meeting of the Show Me Club, said Marion Mayor Robert Butler's proposal to draw water from Devil's Lake and the crater lake would be impractical because the crater lake is not a spring and the water table there is too low. He said he was satisfied with the soil management program that is being carried out.

"I think the soil management program might work on a small scale, but it would not work on a large scale," Wallace said.

Butler's proposal would have drawn water from Devil's Lake, which is the source of much of the Crab Orchard Wildlife Refuge's water supply, and from the crater lake, which is a spring that feeds the refuge's water supply. Butler's plan would have required the construction of a new dam and the installation of a new pipeline to transport the water to Marion.

Wallace said that the soil management program is the best way to solve the water problem in the area. He said the program is being carried out by the Marion County Soil Conservation District and is designed to improve the soil quality and water supply in the area.

Bewitching dilemmas set 'Gigstreet' members

By Debra Keen-Cooper

Improvational theater has come of age in Carbondale.

"The trouble with a little girl," according to the Student Theater Guild at SIUC, is that allowing audience members to name their locations, play a restaurant, and name their occupations, like a lawyer and a flame-eater, might take the direction and make a two- to three-minute scene until the marcher of the audience.

In addition to the improvisational games, "Gigstreet" now includes a "hunchwork," which consists of pre-determined topics, such as the parking situation at SIUC, as fillers between games. They also include comedians and improvisational musicians between sets.

Wilson and Green both agree that audience participation is a major factor in the success of improvisational theater.

"We don't set the games up," Green said. "We get suggestions from the audience."

"We're really big on audience participation," Wilson said.

They've had great audiences who are very enthusiastic about improv. So when we ask for suggestions, they come up with great stuff.

"In staged theater, there's an invisible wall between the audience and the performers," Green said. "It's not there in improv."

"There's that constant relating," Green said. "The audience is right there in front of you. Nine out of ten times they're right there going, 'I hope it works for you.'

Wilson said that everyone who is involved in "Gigstreet" is a creative force behind the performances. They meet once a week to brainstorm for new material and meet a few hours before performances to discuss problems and warm up.

Green said that he wants to see the group grow further in the direction they are going.

They have plans to be included in a 20-minute video about the hazards of smokeless tobacco and would like to perform at "Hump-day Cafe," the Lab Theater and maybe do soft "Guadilla" performances on campus.

Local deli serves comedy specials

For a change of pace, how about a little comedy?

Beginning its second week, BG's Old Tyme Deli will be sponsoring a professional comedian every Thursday night at 8 p.m. Tuesdays. Featured each night will be two professional comedians and a local comedian emcee, with different comediennes that appear each week.

The comedians will appear booked through The Funny Bone, a comedy club in St. Louis. A BG's Old Tyme Deli representative booked the comedy night.

BG's Old Tyme Deli will host the comedy night, seeing performances at The Funny Bone as "a change of pace." From the average Carbondale entertainment offerings, cover charge for the performances is $3.

Army cadets meet Ranger Challenge

By Sharon Waldo
Staff Writer

"Dump it out! You've got 10 minutes to put these weapons together or you die," shouted Sgt. Sean Kirby. "You die—we die. I don't want to die."

Assembling an M-16 rifle and an M-60 machine gun from a trash can of parts in 10 minutes with these unnerving remarks coming from all sides is not easy. But it can be done.

SIU-C cadet James Booth, a junior in finance, did it in 3 minutes, 58 seconds. "You've just got to feel confident," he said calmly.

SIU-C cadet Jerry Baird, who put the weapons together in 6 minutes, 9 seconds, said it's best to "pretend like you're a machine." Baird, a freshman in finance, said that with all of the screaming going on, "it's just got to get it done." "I usually do it in 4 minutes, but I was nervous," he said.

Kirby, a senior in international marketing, graded about 43 cadets on their weapons assembly skills, which was part of the SIU Invitational Ranger Competition held this weekend near University Farms.

Cadets from three other universities-Eastern Illinois, Illinois State and Illinois-Chicago-voluntarily tested their skills in an Army physical fitness test of grenade tossing, M-16 marksmanship, orienteering, crossing a one-rope bridge and combat patrol.

A 10-point map outlined the competition Sunday morning. Cadets jokingly talked about the 25-pound sacks and weapons they each were required to carry during the march and called it a "troll around the lake."

About 27 student ranger detachments from Illinois and Missouri were invited to compete in the event, but predictions of bad weather conditions during the week kept many away.

The competition was like a "pop test." Now the cadets know what they need to work on to prepare for the first Illinois Invitational Ranger Challenge to be held March 27-29 in Joliet.

Illinois State's nine-member team, which won the physical fitness, M-16 marksmanship and grenade throwing events, took the lead with 115 total points.

Eastern Illinois' team placed second with 96, skimming the top off one of Chicago's teams that earned 95 points.

Although SIU-C's cadet team led in the orienteering and the 10-km march and placed second in weapons assembly, it came

Maj. Bill Arkhul of SIU-C said the cadets have a few weeks before the Joliet competition to concentrate on the team's weaknesses: combat patrol, grenade tossing and the one-rope bridge.

"We've got three weeks," he said. "We'll try to do something every day, except Saturdays."

Cadet Steve Grage, a member of Chicago's No. 1 team who scored the highest in the M-16 marksmanship test, said it takes hours of practice, not luck, to win.

In the marksmanship test, cadets were given three tries to zero in on the target and make adjustments before the final round. Grage, a junior in mechanical engineering, hit the bull's-eye all three times, gathering nine points.

"I didn't think it was luck," he said. "It took two times to zero in and that was it. I didn't take the third."

He may have summed up this weekend's event best: "When it comes down to it—win, lose or draw—we came here to see what we are doing wrong. It's good practice."

Cuomo was considered by many political analysts as a potential Democratic presidential contender, ranked second behind undeclared Democratic front-runner Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado. Hart sought and lost the dubious Democratic presidential nomination.

Carle said the Makanda Democrat on Tuesday made a decision that would have changed the course of his political career, such as himself, to win the Democratic support.

"Senator Simon would not even consider entering the contest unless he fell he could win," Carle added.

Referring to the "broad base of national support," Simon would need for a presidential run, Carle said: "Therefore, Carle was out of commission in the Cabinet Room. Aides said he was "very cool".

Nevertheless. It is no secret in Washington that first lady Nancy Reagan wants to force out North and has added its investigators, she helped the fired NSC aide shredded documents just before the tribunal.

North helped run the Iran arms sales operation and Meese has said he was the architect of the subsequent scheme to send profits from the sales to the Nicaraguan Contras. North was fired Nov. 25, the day Meese made the Contra connection public and said North had acted without the president's knowledge or authority.

The attorney general's role or testimony, however, was not included in the final report released by the Senate Intelligence Committee.

Evidence that some key events were considered and prepared over the weekend, Lt. Col. Oliver North's secretary has added that the investigators she helped the fired NSC aide shredded documents just before Meese's initial review.

Meese's initial review.

Former national security adviser Robert McFarlane, however, told the panel Reagan gave his approval in August 1985 for the first shipment of U.S. arms to Iran from Israeli stockpiles.

It was not until almost five months later that Reagan signed the secret Jan. 14, 1986, "finding" authorizing the sales.

"He disavows finger-to-the-wind politics," meaning that bumpers, like Simon, "does not support the defendants' policies" of the Reagan administration, Carle said. He added that both men place a premium on supporting education.

James verified Carle's reference to the letters, but neither spokesman would elaborate on who wrote the letters.

James said that bumpers was not one of the letter-writers, but bumpers has been in close consultation with Simon since October. He declined to say if the one-on-one meetings pertained directly to either candidates' possible presidential aspirations.

Since the letter-writing campaign, the state Democratic parties from two states have voiced their support for a Simon run, Carle added. He declined to identify the two states but said Illinois wasn't one of them.

Bumpers, a second-term senator who was re-elected in 1986, is Simon's favorite choice for the Democratic nomination because "he has the gut commitment to traditional Democratic values," Carle said.

Journals: ‘internal mirror’ used for problem solving

By Laura Milbrath

They lie with their dusty locks and yellowed pages in boxes under layers of crumpled clippings. Many are filled with words that record the events of a single life. Many of them are saved by their sentimental owners who hope to keep alive the secret senses and feelings of the past.

But a journal can be more than just a record of the past—a person can help people deal with the problems of today, says Pat Fabiano, a coordinator of the Health Advocate Program at the Wellness Center.

WHEN ONE BEGINS to write in a journal, "you are sending a very powerful message to yourself. You are saying, 'I am valuable,'" she said.

Fabiano spoke during the first part of the "Journal Writing. Getting to Know Me" program sponsored by the Wellness Center. The second part of the program will be held Thursday from 4 to 5:30 p.m. in the Student Center's Illinoian Room.

She said she considers journal writing an art. "We can play in a journal; we can expand in a journal. The very act of sitting down with a journal signifies readiness to commune with the self."

JOURNALS CAN BE used to record dreams and insights to become "an internal mirror," Fabiano said. "We can begin to deal with our anger, our grieving and our frustrations by first understanding what the feelings are about.

"There are no rules for writing a journal, but writers must not lie to themselves about their feelings or beliefs," she said.

"Progress is the goal, not perfection. Don't try to match yourself to some image. Be who you are. If you lie or write to some audience in your journal, you don't know what's honest."

FABIANO CALLED the journal "an internal ralve" that pulls up raw material and feelings for people to look at and learn from each day. But many people are afraid to write their feelings, she said.

"People are afraid that writing a feeling carves that feeling in stone. Getting to know ourselves is a slow day-to-day process."

"People often feel pressured to write daily in a journal but that the number of journal entries is unimportant," she said. "Daily dates imply an obligation and sometimes our silences speak as eloquently as our words."

SHE SAID she believes that many people become overly concerned about such things as grades, titles and incomes, which she called "external validators."

"We get addicted to judging our self-worth based on the external things in our culture. We think the journal encourages us to look at the internal rewards," she said.

The fear of how to begin work on a journal may cause some people to panic, but such options as a self-portrait or statement of a goal or purpose are ways to start, Fabiano explained.

EVENTS SUCH AS starting college or ending a relationship pose potential journal-starting entries. Sometimes you literally grow into that purpose," she said.

Another way to begin is to start with the moment at hand and the feelings being experienced. Fabiano said such questions as "Whom do I care about?" or "What is changing in my life?" are good beginnings.

WRITING A LETTER that will never be mailed, making lists, or stepping into someone else's mind and writing how you think they may feel are other ways to start writing, Fabiano said.

Journals permit people to release emotions that can help analyze feelings and keep them from becoming destructive forces in their lives, Fabiano said.

Portraits drawn of other people also can reveal writers' feelings about themselves. "You mirror your feelings as you describe other people."

Health linked to generosity, according to psychologists

NEW YORK (UPI) — People who help others may be helping themselves in the long run, according to studies released Monday that indicate generous people have fewer health problems.

One study at Boston University indicated that even a film of Mother Teresa helping the sick and dying in Calcutta was sufficient to temporarily boost the immune systems of students who watched it.

Several psychologists, reporting in the magazine Psychology Today, said there is "mounting evidence" that how people behave to their fellow man is linked to how often they suffer from sickness and disease.

This link between generosity and health probably developed through evolution as a means of survival, the doctors theorized. They said people who helped others were more valuable to society as a whole, and needed to survive longer.

The psychologists also said almost every society in the world has emphasized the same virtues—generosity and caring for others.

Syrian army patrols scour city for Moslem militiamen

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) - Syrian army patrols, searching for Moslem militiamen who refused to lay down their arms, pushed through streets crowded with shoppers Monday as the capital came to life after a week of bloody battle.

The 7,000 man peacekeeping force, backed by Soviet-made tanks and artillery, fanned out through the Moslem western section of the city to root out rival gunmen whose street war marked the worst violence in Beirut in three years.

Several outbreaks marred the first full day of the Syrian occupation, which began Sunday afternoon at the request of Lebanon's Moslem leaders.

A firefight broke out between rival Druze and Shi'ite militiamen who remained on the streets despite Syrian army orders to return to their homes. The clash touched off a spate of kidnapings in the Mar Elias neighborhood, and some of the militiamen built new checkpoints, security sources said.

Also Monday, witnesses said a Syrian patrol out to arrest a militia commander mistook for a gunman a man waving his hat and opened fire with machine guns. The man later died of his wounds.

Oil prices plummet as talks stall

By United Press International

Oil prices plunged by as much as 56 cents a barrel Monday, following reports that the Gulf Cooperation Council failed to take concrete action at a weekend meeting to help OPEC salvage its pricing and production system.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, West Texas intermediate, the benchmark U.S. crude for April delivery, tumbled $1.82 to $12.91 a barrel, the lowest level since it closed at $16.91 a barrel on Dec. 23. The crude traded as high as $18.87 on Jan. 22. Unleaded gasoline for immediate delivery nosedived by 1.57 cents to 45.16 cents a gallon, and home-heating oil fell by 1.62 cents to 49.60 cents.

West Texas intermediate dropped by 20 cents to $17.40 a barrel on the U.S. Gulf Coast spot market, where oil is sold to the highest bidder.

On the European spot market, Britain's North Sea Brent crude slipped by 25 cents to $17.63 a barrel. In Kuwait, Oil Minister Sheikh Ali Khalifa al Sabah said international oil companies will face "severe and collective measures" from the GCC if they try to derail OPEC's Dec. 20 agreement to cut production by 7.2 percent and raise oil prices to an $8-a-barrel average.

Industry observers said the unwillingness of some major oil companies to enter longer-term contracts to buy OPEC crude was the new official prices has intensified pressure on weak cartel members.

Men netters topple Irish at Notre Dame Invite

By Wendell Young
Staff Writer

SU-C men's tennis coach Dick LeFevre said he is "delighted to break into the win column" after his team improved its overall record to 4-2 with two wins at the Notre Dame Invitational in Elkhart, Ind., last weekend.

Iowa won the tournament, which featured Toledo, Notre Dame, and SU-C. Iowa got untracked by downing the Salukis 7-2 in the opening match. SU-C's Fabiano Ramos won the No. 3 singles match over Hawkeye Rudy Forster. Both teams had paired up with Jairo Aldana to defeat Iowa's Dave Novak and Scott Gannon 6-3, 6-1. A doubles competition, giving SU-C their only two wins of the match.

Mickey Maule

LeFevre said he doesn't really favor the eight-game match scoring method that was used in the tournament. "If one of his youthful players gets behind 4-0 in any match, they can consider themselves to be out of it." By the time my players figure out what's going on, it's over before you know it," he explained. In this scoring method, whoever wins eight games and has a two-game spread is the winner.

The Dogs rebounded later to ease by Toledo 7-2 on Saturday afternoon. Saluki Mickey Maule topped Todd Dominick 6-1 in No. 4 singles play. Dr. Martinez downed Brian Draxl 8-1 in No. 4 singles, Oliquio cruised past Charles Ile 8-2 in No. 5 singles, and George Hime slipped by Craig Kober 8-4 in No. 6 singles.

Doubles play was swept by the Dogs as (No. 1 team) Maule and Ramos slid by Toledo's Dominick and Minnis 8-6, (No. 2) Martinez and Hime slid out an 8-6 win over Draxl and Matt Kelly, and (No. 3) Oliquio teamed with Jairo Aldana to get by Trent Paul and Jamie McIntosh 8-6. SU-C's Aldana was defeated by Minnis in No. 1 doubles 8-6, and Kelly beat Ramos by the identical score, giving the Dogs their only two blemishes of the match.

Hawser calls it quits after comeback try

FORT MYERS, Fla. (UPI) - Dick Hawser, unable to cope with the strain of baseball following two brain surgeries in five months, resigned Monday as Kansas City's baseball manager, it was said he will remain with the club.

Hawser, 50, who was told last summer he has a malignant brain tumor, announced his decision after a 16-day spring training workout. He cited as reasons the Florida heat and fatigue.

"As you know I have been pushing and pushing since the first operation in Kansas City and the second operation in LA, I said I have probably worked a little too hard, but that is all right to get in uniform and try to be able and do it," Hawser said.

"Well, I found out yesterday I couldn't do it."

Billy Gardner, 59, who was hired in October as third-base coach, was named to replace Hawser, becoming the club's eighth full-time manager.

Joe Martinez, who has been with the Royals eight years as a first-base coach, will shift to third base, and Joe Jones, who has been coordinator of instruction in the Royals minor league system, was named first-base coach.

Hawser said he was unable to keep up with the intense demands of the position, preventing him from receiving sufficient rest.

"The doctors feel very strongly he needs a lot of rest, including naps during the day, to maintain his health," said Jeff Cox, a Royals spokesman. "He was not able to do it. The weather has been unusually hot and humid, even for Fort Myers. It was hard for him to deal with."

General Manager John Schuerholz said Hawser will remain with the club in a front-office position but specific duties were not announced.

Hawser, who has lost 15 pounds as a result of his battle with brain cancer, missed part of the club's workout Sunday because of fatigue. He was on the field for about an hour but left before practice ended.

AN INVITATION TO UNDERGRADUATES

SIUC's President and Faculty Senate have charged the undergraduate Education Oversight Committee with undertaking a thorough review of undergraduate education.

We will be having informal open meetings with undergraduates to convey our progress. Come and share your thoughts: What are your impressions of your education here? Have you developed intellectually and creatively? Formed new interests? Some students have discovered they have been burned out, others have been disappointed and sensitive to your needs? These are just some of the questions that interest us.

Our first meeting will be on Wednesday, February 25, from 3-4:00 p.m. in the Mississippi Room of the Student Center. Refreshments provided.

Memphis State scandal widens

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UP)—Memphis State University’s president said Mason he doesn’t think new allegations about payments made to a former basketball star will cause further trouble with the NCAA.

In conversation, the university had already investigated an allegation that former athletic director Bob Patterson gave Kirk $12,000 in 1981 to sign Lee in 1981, and the school felt it was untrue.

That Kirk would give Lee money after he was recruited doesn’t make sense, Carpenter said.

Blown away
Tulsa dashes Saluki hopes for MVC tourney home bid

By Steve Merritt
Staff Writer

The Tulsa Golden Hurricane blew away any slim hopes of an SIU-C home game in the Missouri Valley Conference tournament with an 85-74 win Monday night in Tulsa.

Tracy Moore and David Moss, in the MBC’s, combined for 50 points while teammate Brian Rahilly scored 16 as the Salukis clinched no worse than a regular-season tie for first place in the conference and finally secured the No. 1 seed in the MVC playoffs.

Despite falling to an early 12-point deficit, the Salukis battled back by outscoring Tulsa 21-9 in the final nine minutes to trail 43-40 at halftime.

SIU-C kept it close and lingered behind by no more than six, but the Salukis could pull no closer than two at 47-45 early in the second half.

With Tulsa in front at the eight-minute mark, the Salukis hit a four-minute offensive slump. Tulsa scored 15 in that span to race to a 79-46 lead with 4:06 remaining.

A bucket and free throw by Steve Middleton at the 1:30 mark pulled the Salukis to an 81-74 score. Various Tulsa players missed six free throws in the final minute to give SIU-C chances to cut into the lead, but the Hurricane held on for the 85-74 final margin.

With the loss, SIU-C drops to 4-6 in Valley play and 10-15 overall. The Salukis can finish no better than fourth in the league.

Gerritson, however, said the Salukis cannot lose in any game because both the Bulldogs and the Bluejays were eliminated from the Valley tournament according to Valley procedures.

Saluki coach Rich Herrin said a key factor in the loss was Tulsa’s ability to rebound and Moore’s hot hand.

"Moore just ran wild out there," Herrin said. "It just wasn’t a good job on defense and we didn’t block out very well on the boards."

Steve Middleton led SIU-C with 24 points. Doug Norsek chipped in 16 while Billy Ross scored 14 points.

The Salukis close out the regular season today with a home game against the Associated Press poll; Missouri Valley tourney home bid.

AUBURN (2-3), the team that knocked SIU-C out of the Associated Press poll last season, will be the opponent for the Salukis in the final Missouri Valley Conference game of the season Thursday.

Auburn is 6-15 this season and 1-8 in the Valley while SIU-C is 7-17 overall and 5-8 in the Valley.

The Salukis have dropped 15 straight Valley games and 12 in a row overall.

"The only thing that can go right for us is if we can win," SIU-C coach Billiken said. "I hope we can win. The only thing that can go right for us is if we can win."
