SUPREMACY: World Church of the Creator members believe in the exclusive expansion and survival of the white race.

'Superior above all'

MARC CHASE
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

"Remember that the inferior colored races are our deadly enemies, and the most dangerous of all is the Jewish race. It is our immediate objective to relentlessly expand the white race and keep shrinking our enemies."

This is the third of 16 commandments contained in the White Man's Bible, a book that the leader of a worldwide white supremacist group says his church uses as a guide for its religion.

Matthew Hale, the high priest of the World Church of the Creator and a second-year SIU law student, says commandments like this are a driving force behind the goals of his group: "the survival, expansion and advancement of our white race exclusively."

"Creators put a high value in logic, science and common sense," Hale said. "We feel that these three elements point to the white race as superior above all others."

And the church, which has between 2,000 and 3,000 members worldwide, has gained the attention of many people on SIUC's campus with a recent advertisement it placed in the Daily Egyptian. The ad called for white people to "unite."

The church, formerly known as the Church of the Creator, also has gained notoriety among legal authorities in several cases.

One of these cases involved an incident in 1993, before Hale was the church's leader. A report from the Office of International Criminal Justice in Chicago states that some of the church's members were implicated in two plots to firebomb Jewish and black institutions and assassinate prominent Jews and African Americans in Los Angeles.

While Hale says his church promotes the white race in a non-violent fashion, the leader of the campus Jewish ministry says groups like the church do nothing but preach hatred and incite anger.

Elizabeth Leverett, a staff adviser for the SIUC Hillel Foundation, says the existence of such a group on campus is a reminder that hate toward Jews and other racial groups still is very much alive in society.

She says such groups threaten the possibility of peaceful existence between people of diverse heritage.

And she said groups like the church are irrational in their teachings.

"Such groups feel paranoid, jealous, threatened and afraid," Leverett said. "That is why they hate us."

Racial Reasoning

But Hale said his group and all white people have reason to be concerned about the future of their race.

He said the church, which is against the ideals of Christianity, believes in a natural law that whites are superior to other races both intellectually and biologically. And he said the integration of whites with blacks and other minorities in society is destroying the white race.

Jonathan Viktor, a reverend of the church who works closely with Hale, agrees.

"When a white person associates with a black, the black gains everything, and the white person gains nothing," said Viktor, an SIUC junior in history. "The black gains a higher status because they have white friends. The white person gets a lower reputation."

"And I only call them blacks to be polite," Viktor said. The White Man's Bible points to all "colored" races, but particularly blacks and Jews, as enemies of the white race.

One chapter in the bible titled, "Who Needs Niggers? or, Elimination of the Black Plague," compares the integration of blacks with whites to a plague in the Middle Ages that killed half the population of Europe.

The bible and other publications of the group also credit the Jews with bringing the majority of African slaves to America.

Hale said Jews have taken advantage of and have angered several races throughout history and are particularly dangerous to the white race.

"Throughout recorded history, Jews have been basically

Gridlock broken for grid

FINALLY FUNDING: Senate leaders agree on borrowing plan to pay for power grid repairs.

JASON K. FREUND
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Gov. Jim Edgar and General Assembly leaders agreed Thursday on the state borrowing plan that will provide funding for statewide projects, including repairs for the SIUC power grid, legislators say.

The borrowing plan, which consists of a bond authorization bill and spending bill, comes after two years of partisan gridlock in the House of Representatives, said state Sen. Dave Luechtefeld, R-Okawville.

Luechtefeld said a supplemental appropriations bill that includes $3.4 million for repairs to SIUC's failing power grid also was agreed upon by House and Senate leaders.

"It's good news for Southern Illinois, especially the University, Pinckneyville and the surrounding area," Luechtefeld said.

The Senate passed the bond authorization bill, the accompanying spending bill and a supplemental appropriations bill on Feb. 6.

The bond authorization bill would allow the state to sell $610 million in bonds to raise funds for the state projects specified in the spending bill, including $73 million for the Pinckneyville prison.

From the spending bill, SIUC would receive $4.83 million for capital renewal, $1.26 million for Engineering Building site improvements and $574,000 for improvements on Altgeld Hall.

Luechtefeld said he is confident the bills will pass the House.

State Rep. Mike Bost, R-Murphysboro, could not be reached for comment.

The bills are expected to go before the House on Tuesday, and Garret Deakin, SIUC legislative liaison, said he is optimistic about the bills' chances now that an agreement has been reached.

"We'll find out how serious their commitment is at noon on Tuesday," Deakin said.

Although the bills are scheduled to go before the house at noon Tuesday, Deakin said the vote actually may take place later this week.

Deb Smitley, Illinois Board of Higher Education spokeswoman, said the bond authorization bill would allow $120 million for 28 projects in higher education.

Students could miss graduation for finals

CONFLICT: New commencement date creates problems for some graduate students.

DAVE ARMSTRONG
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Some SIUC graduate students may not be able to attend their own commencement because of conflicts with their finals, some students say.

In addition to the problems with finals, the commencement move from May 11 to May 9 this semester also brings the problems for some families having to take time off work or school to attend.

Matt Baughman, a graduate student in business from Carbondale, said the move to May 9 creates problems for him and his family.

"I may not be able to go to my own commencement (because I will be taking a final)," Baughman said. "My parents are going to have to take time off work to attend. My brothers will be in the middle of classes at the

Neal trial set in county

DENIED: Judge rules not to change venue for summer murder trial.

TRAVIS DeNEAL
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

A Carbondale teenager accused of murder will not be given a change of venue because there is no significant evidence of potential juror bias, Jackson County Circuit Judge William G. Schwartz said Friday.

Schwartz said there likely will be a large number of potential jurors who will be impartial toward the case, and therefore Labron C. Neal will be tried in Jackson County.

There is still a possibility of a change of venue if no impartial jurors are found, Schwartz said.

Neal is accused of shooting two Carbondale teens Aug. 11 outside a party at Carbondale Mobile Home Park, located north of town on U.S. Route 51.

Neal's attorney, Paul Christenson, told Schwartz that the quantity and quality of press coverage of the double murder has biased potential jurors in Jackson County. He recommended moving the trial to a county north of Interstate 64.

Christenson said there have been about 50 newspapers articles pertaining to the Neal case, as well as several television and radio stories.

The quality of the stories reduces Neal's chances for a fair trial in Jackson County, Christenson said, because the stories already have convicted Neal.

Disabled immigrants have chance at citizenship

After years of delay, federal authorities are putting the final touches on new guidelines that could allow thousands of physically and mentally disabled immigrants to become citizens without passing now-mandatory examinations in English and U.S. civics.

Disabled rights groups and immigrant advocates have been pressing the Clinton administration to issue the new regulations in time for many to become citizens — and thus retain public benefits — before an impending August cutoff mandated by the sweeping welfare overhaul passed by Congress last year.

Astronauts prepare walk to fix Hubble Scope

NASA managers Sunday ordered the Discovery astronauts to mount a fifth, unplanned spacewalk Monday to shore up cracked and peeling insulation on the Hubble Space Telescope.

The observatory, one of the premier instruments of 20th-century science, is not in any immediate danger of overheating or suffering any other ill effects from the surprisingly tattered insulation.

But with Discovery's crew already on hand for a $350 million overhaul, managers decided to order additional repairs to help keep the observatory cool and healthy until the next shuttle servicing mission in 1999.

More extensive repairs likely will be carried out then.

Zairian fighting shows weaknesses on both sides

The startling four-month offensive by African fighters who have swept across eastern Zaire has slowed in recent days, underscoring what analysts here say is weakness and disorganization on both sides of a murky, chaotic war.

By early this month, Zairian rebels — reportedly joined by troops from neighboring Rwanda and Uganda — had transformed their local rebellion into a serious threat to Zaire's government and perhaps to its existence as a state. They had seized an area the size of the U.S. eastern seaboard from New York to Atlanta — often advancing the more than 700 miles unopposed across the forested plateau.

The war has displaced "maybe 30 percent" of the 3 million to 4 million Zairians in the combat zone, said Hubert Edongo, the chief Central Africa representative of the U.N. refugee agency.

Terrorism urgings fail to impress Europeans

Secretary of State Madeleine Albright on Sunday waded into the transatlantic dispute over how to deal with nations supporting terrorism, but her no-nonsense style had little apparent impact in the meetings she had with European leaders.

Albright chastised Italian leaders for backing Europe's strategy of maintaining trade and political links with Iran and Libya.

Italy — which receives nearly half of its oil from the two countries — and other European Union member countries argue that such contacts might soften these radical regimes.

The U.S. has urged to isolate Iran because of its support for terrorism and its efforts to gain nuclear capability.

GOOD LOVING: Presentation teaches couples how to deal with relationships.

Although most people are familiar with the 10 commandments in the Holy Bible, one Black History Month lecturer shared her "10 Commandments of Love" on Saturday.

While the topic of relationships is often discussed between single, middle-age people, Audrey B. Chapman, a well-known author and therapist who has appeared on nationally syndicated talk shows, said it is a topic to be discussed as early in life as possible.

"It is important to talk to people about relationships as early as they can understand," Chapman said. "And by the time they get to college it's kind of late, but better late than never." The Black Togetherness Organization sponsored Chapman's lecture/workshop based on her book, "Good Loving," Saturday to an audience of 13 couples and seven singles.

Opponents' positions on condom policy laughable

Normally I accept a little idiocy as part of my job description here in the editorial office. Everyone is entitled to his or her own opinion, even if it is stupid.

However, mounting controversy concerning a local discount store's decision to lock up its contraceptives late at night has brought out a level of ignorance heretofore unparalleled in Daily Egyptian history.

Apparently some of us passed high-school business without ever grasping the concept of profit.

Profit occurs when a business sells an item at a higher price than it paid for that item. If someone steals the item, the business does not make any profit. Instead, it loses money.

Charitable organizations are set up to offer people goods and services for free.

Businesses are set up to make a profit.

Carbondale's favorite discount emporium is a business. While the company spends a lot of time and money "giving back" to the communities in which its stores locate (despite what some obnoxious picketers would have you believe), it is not a charitable organization.

However, some individuals seem to think that this company is hell-bent on seeing every woman in America barefoot and pregnant because it is trying to protect its profits by keeping condoms locked up when no one is around to keep an eye on them.

If the corporation is losing money because of condom theft, it would be moronic for the company execs to stand idly by and let the larceny continue just because it's "better than unwanted pregnancy."

Since when is it the responsibility of a for-profit business to provide free condoms to every red-faced, parent-fearing adolescent who doesn't have the foresight to plan ahead (after all, prophylactics still are easily accessible during the day) or the gumption to ask for help?

While I can appreciate their humiliation, I think some people have a slightly overblown opinion of themselves.

We're talking about a big store here. Its employees see literally thousands of people pass through the checkout lanes every day.

Why would a manager who helps several hundred people during a shift remember or care who bought the last box of stud-sized Heidi's Little Helpers two weeks ago?

The argument has been made that some people would rather endure the consequences of unprotected sex than be caught buying condoms.

Um... let's see if I've got this logic right: If I buy a box of condoms in front of a store clerk, that person will assume I'm having sex.

But if I don't buy the condoms, and I end up waddling around with my abdomen expanded to roughly the size of Epcot Center for nine months as a result, everyone who sees me will automatically assume my condition is the result of immaculate conception.

Not.

The whole argument is ridiculous anyway, because it implies that the store in question has a monopoly on late-night condom sales. It does not.

After implementing the lock-and-key policy, this store may face stiff competition from gas stations that leave more expensive latex out for customers to shoplift at their convenience 24 hours a day.

If people are too irresponsible to buy their contraceptives in advance or too ashamed to buy them in front of a tired stranger who couldn't care less what they buy, perhaps they aren't mature enough to handle the responsibility of having sex.

I don't particularly enjoy shopping for feminine hygiene products, but I can't very well cram an econo-pack of Stayfrees into my coat every month to avoid taking them through the checkout lane. I've had to grow up, face the fact that this minor violation of my privacy is a necessary evil, and get over it.

If some sexually active couples in town had exercised similar levels of maturity, perhaps the condom controversy never would have arisen.

It's time for people to grow up. Just like the couples buying condoms, this store is getting screwed, and all it wants is a little protection.

Vacant USG slots illustrate students' apathetic attitudes

UNDERGRADUATE STUDENT GOVERNMENT Senate's four vacant seats illustrates how apathetic students have become on this campus. Not only do we fail to vote in local, state and national elections, but we do not care enough about our campus to step in as potential leaders of a silent interest group — students.

As students, it is our duty to have our voices heard on and off campus. How can USG try to voice our opinions when it is missing students in key roles?

THROUGHOUT LAST SEMESTER, USG HAD some turbulent times when 11 elected senators failed to take their seats and were eventually replaced or their seats left vacant for several reasons: Either the senator was promoted or they failed to uphold their positions because of scheduling and school problems. That number of seats dwindled down to four after some recruitment by executive members.

While it is difficult to switch positions half-way or three-fourths of the way through the academic year, it is more difficult to fill a vacant senate seat.

IDEALLY, USG IS THE ADVISORY AND legislative body on campus where students can voice their concerns. Realistically, USG has the potential to be a great voice but has not utilized its strength in city, administration and other important issues that affect students.

Currently, USG's power is in the purse.

The only tangible power it now has is distribution of thousands of dollars of student fees to Registered Student Organizations.

USG COULD BECOME SO MUCH MORE WITH the students in the those vacant senate seats. It is disappointing when the students are so apathetic that their student government senate seats cannot be filled.

Students can make USG what they want it to be. If students want a strong voice in this city and on campus, then those seats, among other things, will be filled and there finally will be some action. If they do not want a strong voice, then they do not have any reason to complain about increasing fees or how they are treated by the city or community.

The choice is there.

Dear Editor:

The eyes of Carbondale are watching us closely, SIUC. The City Council primary elections are approaching. And as they draw nearer, once again the elected officials in this city are holding their collective breath hoping that student voter turnout is even more pathetic than it was two years ago. They're sweating bullets because they know the power that we, the sleeping giant, have at the polls. Let's disappoint them!

This year is the best opportunity in as many years, that many can remember, to get a student elected to the city council for one very important reason. There are more registered student voters on and off campus to completely shatter the record of votes than any Carbondale City Council candidate has ever gotten in any primary election.

Think about it. Whether you plan to live in this city for the next two, four or eight years, or for the rest of life, what kinds of questions should you be asking yourself about the current candidates? What are your concerns about the SIUC and Carbondale relationship? Do you want to see this city grow and thrive?

Don't be fooled by mere promises to lower the bar entry age. Find out what else the various candidates stand for. Search for the truth. Which, if any, candidate has a hidden agenda for his or her own personal gain? Which candidate, if any, is keeping silent about his or her close association with some of the rip-off slum-lords in this city? What will the three winners in April do for you, a resident of Carbondale, and this University?

It's time to get fired up about Carbondale's City Council elections. Just think of the change that we can bring to this city. Let's show the leaders of Carbondale that we are more ready than ever to work together with them to improve the image of SIUC and its relationship with this city. This very well could be our last chance to get a student elected to the council for years to come! Let's pull together, send a student to city hall and send a message this Feb. 25 that the sleeping giant has awakened!

Guilt cause of embarrassment

Dear Editor:

This is in response to all the comments that appeared in the Daily Egyptian last week on Wal-Mart's condom sales policy.

Exactly how is Wal-Mart's policy on protecting their assets an ethical question? What do you mean by abstinence not being practical? How can purchasing something cause you embarrassment or make you feel like you are being judged? You obviously are confused!

The issue is not about ethics but about immorality. If you did not have a guilty conscience about what you were doing, you would not be embarrassed or feel as if you were being judged.

You are bothered by what you are doing and now the whole county knows, too. So guess what?

Nothing remains hidden or covered that will not be known. (Matthew 10:26 and Luke 12:2).

Feline's eccentric behavior reflection of training and instinct, not stupidity

Dear Editor:

I have to say that after reading Josh Robison's article in Wednesday's paper ("America's favorite pet should bark, not purr,"), I was disappointed to find that Josh has not found the role of Mojo's caretaker to be enlightening. I have owned many cats and dogs in my life and I now own a 12-week-old kitten who I wouldn't trade for the world:

There is one fatal mistake that you have made and that is you have referred to a cat's behavior with human characteristics. Even the most brilliant behavioral scientists can't be sure what is going through the mind of a cat at any given moment. Let me give you a few ideas as to why your cat behaves the way she does.

First, I want to say that it isn't healthy for a cat to eat human food. Human food is higher in salt and fat than cat food and is difficult for a cat to digest.

I would like to offer you a reasonable explanation for why Mojo would approach food offered to her, taste it and then "run and hide."

This behavior probably is a result of having been taught, hopefully through skillful discipline, that she should not eat human food; and therefore she is afraid of getting into trouble. Besides, if Mojo had decided she didn't like the pickles, she more than likely would not have approached it again.

Unless of course she was starving or had begun to lose her sense of smell (these are only two explanations):

As far as a cat's intelligence, all I have to say is that it sounds like Mojo has gotten your roommates trained to give her food when she asks for it.

Lastly, I would like to say that there is no comparison between dogs and cats. Cats are stubborn, independent and imaginative. Dogs are playful and attentive. Both are exceptional examples of intelligence.

If you can't take pleasure in the raising of Mojo, maybe someone else should take care of her. (By the way, dogs will eat anything, even their own feces.)

parasitic," Hale said. "Jews have been expelled from countries they have inhabited. There is a reason for this.

"I used to think, 'Why are people against Jews?' Then I turned to the writings of those against Jews, and they explained it. They (Jews) are parasites who have a basic lock on the media. They are actively engaged in a scheme to control the world."

Both Hale and Viktor said Adolph Hitler had reason to place Jews in Nazi concentration camps during World War II.

"Hitler was justified in having Germany for the Germans," Hale said. "Jews were a security risk, just like the Japanese were in the United States," Hale said, referring to Japanese-American citizens who were placed in American camps during the war.

But Viktor said Hitler was not admirable in all respects.

"Hitler wasn't all good," Viktor said. "He used the Japanese to fight for him. So that wasn't good."

And Hale said that Jews have lied about the atrocities that took place in the Nazi camps. He said Jews claimed that 6 million of their people were killed in the camps, but Hale contends that only 4 million Jews were in Germany to begin with.

"The atrocities the Jews claim are blown way out of proportion," Hale said. "The Jews deliberately lied about Hitler."

Josh Kitterman, student president of the Hillel Foundation, said he is sickened by claims that Jews were not persecuted and murdered during Hitler's reign.

"This really digs saying Jews are the biggest enemies when there is such a small number of us in the first place," Kitterman said. "And I'd like to see how he (Hale) can explain the brands (referring to the tattooed numbers on concentration-camp prisoners).

"How does he explain all that away — that the Jews didn't suffer?"

Hale explains the holocaust as a twisting of the facts by Jews and Hollywood. He said the negative image of white supremacists also has been fabricated in part by a "Jewish-controlled" media industry.

In a newsletter that Hale said will be circulated worldwide, Hale cites the Walt Disney Company's CEO Michael Eisner as one of the Jews who have a "lock" on the media.

"Bad Apples"

But Hale does admit that there are some people involved in white supremacist organizations who have given such groups a bad name.

Several church members, including some of the church's past leaders, have been implicated and convicted for violent crimes, Office of International Criminal Justice records state.

According to OICJ records, the church's former headquarters were located on a 17-acre compound in North Carolina, equipped with small-arms firing ranges and paramilitary barracks.

Ben Klassen, the church's founder, sold the compound to a former officer of the original American Nazi Party in 1992. Klassen, author of the White Man's Bible, founded the church and named himself pontifex maximus, or high priest in 1973.

Also in 1992, Klassen announced that he was stepping down from his position as pontifex maximus. He said his successor was going to be church member Charles Altwater, OICJ records state.

That same year, Altwater was indicted in Baltimore on 16 criminal counts after bombing a state police car and placing a bomb on a police officer's porch. Altwater was convicted and is serving 18 years in prison.

Klassen named a different successor after Altwater's imprisonment. Klassen then committed suicide in 1993.

Another crime linked to church members took place within the same year that Klassen died.

In this incident, some Church of the Creator followers were implicated in a bombing plot in Los Angeles.

According to OICJ records, the plot was to firebomb Jewish and black institutions in hopes of igniting a race war.

And again in 1993, OICJ records state that Mark Kowaalski, who was the church's Washington state director, was arrested in connection with a bombing of the NAACP office in Tacoma, Wash. Kowaalski also was arrested in connection with a plot to assassinate black rappers and bomb government institutions.

"We are very legal," Hale said. "To those who wish to commit crimes, we caution them not to. Committing crimes just fuels the fire of our enemies."

The White Cause

But Hale admits that he is no stranger to legal trouble himself. Before becoming active with the church, he was convicted of obstruction of justice in 1992. The conviction later was thrown out by an appeals court because police did not read Hale his Miranda rights.

The Sixteen Commandments

1. It is the avowed duty and holy responsibility of each generation to assure and secure for all time the existence of the White Race upon the face of this planet.
2. Be fruitful and multiply. Do your part in helping to populate this world with your own kind. It is our sacred goal to populate the lands of this earth with White people exclusively.
3. Remember that the inferior colored races are our deadly enemies, and the most dangerous of all is the Jewish race. It is our immediate objective to relentlessly expand the White Race, and keep shrinking our enemies.
4. The guiding principle of all your actions shall be: What is best for the White Race?
5. You shall keep your race pure. Pollution of the White Race is a heinous crime against Nature and against your own race.
6. Your first loyalty belongs to the White Race.
7. Show preferential treatment in business dealings with members of your own race. Please out all dealings with Jews as soon as possible. Do not employ niggers or other coloreds. Have social contacts only with members of your own racial family.
8. Destroy and banish all Jewish thought and influence from society. Work hard to bring about a White world as soon as possible.
9. Work and Creativity are our genius. We regard work as a noble pursuit and our willingness to work a blessing to our race.
10. Decide in early youth that during your lifetime you will make at least one major lasting contribution to the White Race.
11. Uphold the honor of your race at all times.
12. It is our duty and our privilege to further Nature's plan by striving towards the advancement and improvement of future generations.
13. You shall honor, protect and venerate the sanctity family unit, and hold it sacred. It is the present link in the long golden chain of the White Race.
14. Throughout your life you shall faithfully uphold our spiritual creed of Blood, Soil, and Honor. Practice it diligently, for it is the heart of our faith.
15. As a proud member of the White Race, think and act positively, be courageous, confident and aggressive. Utilize constructively your creative ability.
16. We, the racial comrades of the White Race, are determined to regain complete and unconditional control of our own destiny.

But Hale, who was named pontifex maximus on July 27, 1996, by a delegation of the church's leaders in Montana, said every organization has members that sometimes taint the reputation of a group.

"Every group has bad apples," Hale said. "He (Altwater and some other church members) got into some activities that were highly unproductive. Some people in other organizations do things that are incorrect as well."

Despite the violent past of some church members, a criminology expert at Indiana State University said: the church has changed some supremacists from violent activists into people who try to communicate their positions through words and ideas.

"Klassen's message did pick a hole in the skinhead movement," said Mark Hamm, an Indiana State professor who did a two-year, nationwide field study of skinheads.

Hamm, who primarily studied white supremacist street violence, said while doing his study, some skinheads joined the church. He said those skinheads began to put aside violence as the main way to further their cause.

"Typically, my experience shows that those involved in the Church of the Creator are more verbal," Hamm said. "They are better read and are more steeped in religious writings."

"It (the church) takes them into a world of ideas and away from a world of violent street action."

But Hamm said he is aware that the church has been connected to bombings and other violence, and he said the group's ideologies are extreme in comparison to other white supremacist groups.

"The Church of the Creator is so far out there with their ideologies that the (Ku Klux) Klan and other white nationalists groups can seem moderate in comparison," Hamm said.

Within the White Man's Bible, one passage states: "The issue we must resolve is this: If our survival is at stake, is so-called 'illegal' terrorism justified? And the answer overwhelmingly is — hell yes!"

However, Hale said, people should be careful that passages like this and that the church's slogan, Rahowa, or Racial Holy War, are not taken out of context.

He said the church does not advocate violence or crime because such actions are not productive.

The former conviction was issued in connection with an incident involving Hale and his brother, David Hale, in their hometown of East Peoria. Media reports state that the Hales were demonstrating on a sidewalk, chanting white supremacist slogans, when they were approached by a group of black men.

Reports state that David Hale brandished a handgun, and the black men left the scene. Police said Matthew Hale later lied to them when questioned about the incident.

Shortly after this incident, Hale also found his way into the Peoria Journal Star newspaper when he became involved in an altercation with a Jewish woman in the Peoria area.

In this incident, Hale was soliciting signatures for a petition to get David Duke, a former grand wizard of the Ku Klux Klan, on the Illinois presidential primary ballot.

According to police, Paula Erlichman, a Jewish woman of Morton, claimed Hale had threatened to hit her with a clip-ard; Erlichman then kicked Hale in the groin, and an altercation ensued. Hale denied having threatened Erlichman.

The Tazewell County state's attorney did not file charges against Erlichman or Hale because blame could not be proven.

And, while on probation for the former felony conviction, Hale was involved in another altercation, this time with a mall security guard in the Peoria area.

Hale said he was with a friend who was passing out white supremacist fliers in the mall. He said he and his friend were approached by the guard who told them they could not pass their fliers out in the mall.

"I was with a friend who was passing out fliers," Hale said. "We had words with the security guard and he hauled off and slugged me."

But media reports state that police accused Hale of trying to punch the security guard and poking the guard in the chin. Hale was found by the court to be in violation of probation, but his initial conviction was thrown out shortly after the mall incident.

Hale said though he does not believe he was wrong or at fault for the incidents, he said he has learned to be more cautious with how he promotes his white cause.

"These things happened at a time when I was a little more reckless," Hale said. "But I am convinced now more than ever that what I did was right. These things can happen if a person wants to get involved in a struggle for the future of his people."

In a more recent incident, Carbondale Police arrested Viktor in September 1995 for alleged disorderly conduct.

Viktor

A city police report states that Viktor, Hale and another male had been eating at the Corner Diner, 600 S. Illinois Ave.

When the men prepared to pay their bill, the report states that they became involved in a conversation initiated by the cashier, Ian Bachtel.

Bachtel, who is a Native-American SIUC student, said he began the conversation with Hale concerning a letter to the editor Hale had published in the Daily Egyptian.

"He wrote a letter that said whites conquered Native Americans because of their superior intellect," said Bachtel, a member of the American Indian Movement. "I told him that his people did not conquer my people with superior intellect."

Police reports state that an argument ensued and that Bachtel claimed he was threatened by Viktor. Bachtel alleged that Viktor said he had a gun.

According to the police report, a search of Viktor's apartment failed to locate a gun. But the report states that Viktor was in possession of a lock-blade knife.

The Jackson County state's attorney chose not to prosecute Viktor on the grounds that Bachtel had initiated the dispute and no gun was found, reports state.

Bachtel said he was angered when he learned that Viktor was not prosecuted.

"I wish I could say that it doesn't make me mad to the point where I boil with anger," Bachtel said. "But it makes me that mad."

"If they (church members) have the audacity to go out in public, preaching those things like they do, they must be a few bubbles off. I am very concerned with what they are doing."

Reason for Concern?

And as a representative of Jewish people on campus, Leverett said she also is concerned about the presence of groups like the World Church of the Creator.

"I feel like it's not worth much of my time to worry about it, but yeah it bothers me," Leverett said. "I think they reveal a monumental ignorance."

"Hate groups and white supremacist groups do not think rationally. It is important for all diverse people to be aware they are here and are not interested in living peacefully in diversity."

But Eugene Basanta, associate dean of the SIU School of Law, said Hale has a first amendment right to articulate the ideas of his church, as "bizarre" as they may seem.

"Certainly any notion of racial or ethnic superiority is inconsistent with our institutional views," Basanta said. "But in an institution of more than 20,000 students, you ought not be concerned that the ideas of some students are divergent."

"We cannot tell other people what to think."

Basanta said as long as students do not become violent or interfere with the rights of other students, they have a right to voice their opinions and practice religious of their own choosing.

Hale said his church is not looking for physical confrontation.

"I would be more than willing to have an open discussion or a debate," Hale said. "I believe in free speech and open dialogue."

"It won't get ugly from our end; We're actually pretty mellow individuals."

schools and cannot miss classes because it is so close to final week."

The Graduate School commencement, which traditionally has been slated for Mother's Day, May 11, was moved to May 9 earlier this semester because many students had expressed their concerns with having commencement on Mother's Day.

Steve Foster, interim director of Admissions and Records and a member of the commencement date committee, said one idea behind the change to May 9 was to allow doctoral students to be fully graduated before their college's commencement.

Baughman said there are many possible solutions to the problems graduate students face because of the new commencement date.

"One solution to the problem is to not have it on Friday," Baughman said.

"I really don't want them to change the whole day, though, I just want graduate students to have their pick of walking with the Graduate School on Friday or their college on Saturday."

GRADUATION

•May commencement will be May 9 and 10.

•Graduate students were allowed to walk with their colleges until three years ago when a separate commencement was created.

Joe Pineau, director of the MBA program, said one of the main problems with the new commencement date is that some graduate students in the MBA program will be taking finals at the same time as their commencement.

"There are about 16 students who can't go to commencement because they'll be in a final at the same time," Pineau said.

"So far, the University has been pretty receptive to the problem, but they haven't come up with any solutions. There are a lot of unhappy students, and the University needs to address that."

Paul LeBlanc, vice president of Graduate School Affairs and a

Picking a workday for commencement is not very considerate of student needs.

DEBBIE QUAMEN
GRADUATE STUDENT FROM CARBONDALE

Graduate and Professional Student Council representative, said the problem may not be solved this semester, but GPSC is looking into it.

"It is my perception that the commencement date is a done deal," LeBlanc said.

"I think there needs to be an honest assessment of student concerns. I have asked the representatives to ask their constituents about the problem. If we receive a significant student response, we will try for a solution.

"The only solutions are either having all the commencements on Saturday or letting graduate students walk with their college instead of the Graduate School."

Although the date change originally was made to appease student concerns about Mother's Day, Debbie Quamen, a graduate student in the MBA program from Carbondale, said it only creates more problems for her.

Quamen said she believes SIUC is not being attentive to student needs.

"Picking a workday for commencement is not very considerate of student needs," Quamen said.

"I think it is unfortunate because I have family who cannot attend because it is a workday. I've put in 5 1/2 years to get the degree, and now they can't share it with me. I'm very disappointed."

Couple wins trip to Las Vegas

HONEYMOON IN VEGAS: Radio station gives pair trip to Nevada to get married.

TRAVIS AKIN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

A little more than a week ago Myles Epperson and Heidi Fuerbringer were not planning to get married for at least a year, but with a little help from a radio station, they are honeymooning in Las Vegas.

"They started the contest in January for couples who were interested in getting a chance to win a trip to Las Vegas to get married," Epperson, an attorney with the Brown and James law firm in St. Louis, said. "I bounced the idea for the contest off her, and she liked it. So I faxed in an entry."

Fuerbringer, a third-year law student from Appleton, Wis., said she and Epperson met at an SIU Law School party in 1994. Eventually the conversation led to two years of dating and a wedding planned for May of 1998, but money was the big problem.

"The main reason we were waiting to get married is he just graduated in May and does not have much money," she said. "Since everything is free, we decided to go ahead with it. My dad is happy because he doesn't have to pay for anything."

Epperson and Fuerbringer won a Valentine's Day trip to Las Vegas from the St. Louis radio station Y98 FM. The couple planned to have a simple, white-chapel wedding on Friday morning.

The trip includes a marriage license, a tuxedo, hotel accommodations, a dinner party and a breakfast reception. A total package worth about $1,200.

The radio station drew the names of two couples randomly each business day for four weeks and had them compete in a radio version of the "Newlywed Game."

"We had to be at two separate phones, and so they asked me to take the call at my office," Epperson said. "They asked her five questions about our relationship, and they asked me the same questions. We got three out of five right."

He said one question they got wrong was when they started dating.

"I said we started dating at the beginning of September, but it was really the end of August," he said.

"I was wrong, and I got in a little trouble for that."

Fuerbringer said one question they both agreed on was what non-living thing they would save if the house was on fire.

"We both said we would save the TV," she said.

"They (the radio announcers) gave us a hard time about that."

Epperson said he was worried that only getting three of the five questions correct would mean they would lose the contest.

Epperson said the prospect of getting married made him a little nervous, but at did not stop him from presenting her with the engagement ring Wednesday during dinner.

"The first day, I was really excited," he said. "The next day, I started panicking and after that I snapped out of and I felt real good about it. I guess it's because of pre-wedding jitters."

"Most people have a year and half. We only have a week."

themselves and how they relate and react to things around them.

"There are lots of ways to understand relationships, and the better you understand them, the better you understand yourself," she said.

"You have to know your emotional history, or it will repeat itself. And that is why so many people have bad relationships."

In the workshop, Chapman gave the audience exercises requiring them to act out fantasies, go back in time and participate in team work.

Tiffany Walker, a senior in food and nutrition from Chicago, participated in one of the exercises.

Walker had to do a trust fall and was lifted into the air by members of the audience.

She said she thought the exercise was a good idea, but a certain aspect of her personality did not allow her to enjoy the exercise or feel safe while doing it.

"I don't trust anybody but my husband, and the exercise reaffirmed something I already knew," she said. "It's something for me to work on everyday."

To drive her point further home, Chapman presented her "10 Commandments Of Love."

Salim Kenyatta, a senior in history from Chicago, said he learned valuable lessons from the workshop that he will apply to his everyday life.

"It taught me a valuable lesson that when entering a relationship, one has to maintain a well-balanced security of self in order to receive a reciprocal understanding with your significant other," he said.

Kenyatta said future visits from lecturers like Chapman are important for the black community.

"This helps the students realize we are the avant-garde of the black community, and our positive and negative relationships with others trickles down throughout the community," Kenyatta said.

Chapman's Ten Commandments of Love

- Love thyself
- Get your house in order
- Respect love's power
- Thou shalt not indulge in negativity
- Thou shalt ask and you will receive
- Thou shalt love unconditionally
- Neither a follower or a leader be not the impact of the new additions will match the impact of the existing program.

He said about half of the 4,000 families in single-unit dwellings that now have recycling bins recycle materials at least once per month.

However, about 1 percent of the tenants at the three apartment complexes that received bins last semester recycle at least once per month, Wheelles said.

He said he does not know why there has been almost no participation in the recycling program at student-dominated apartment complexes.

"I would have expected more out of Lewis Park," Wheelles said.

Aaron Gallagher, a junior in architecture from Springfield who lives at Lewis Park, said he does not use the city program.

"We recycle aluminum cans, but I take them in myself to get a little money," he said. "We never have too much glass or anything."

Jeremy Mikus, a junior in psychology from Springfield who lives at Lewis Park, said he and his roommates use their city recycling bin.

"We throw plenty of glass and cans in there," he said. "There are four of us, so we go through quite a bit."

Kevin Gillespie, Jackson County recycling coordinator, said about 11 percent of the county's garbage was recycled in 1995.

He said last year, the county adopted its recycling plan, and the county should be recycling 15 percent of its garbage within three years to fulfill state law. Within five years, the county should recycle 25 percent of its garbage, he said.

A county-wide mandatory recycling ordinance, passed last September, will take effect on July 1, Gillespie said.

He said Carbondale's recycling program places the city ahead of the rest of the county.

"Carbondale has been recycling for a couple of years now, and we've been supportive of their efforts to continue to develop the program," he said.

Wheelles said Carbondale is expanding its voluntary recycling program because the state is encouraging cities to include multi-family units in their recycling programs.

Recycling bins soon will be delivered to Meadowridge Apartments, 600 E. Campus Drive; Town and Country Trailer Court, 6271 S. Hwy. 51; Malibu Village Mobile Home Park, 2441 S. Illinois Ave.; Roxanne Mobile Home Park, 2301 S. Illinois Ave.; Cedar Lane Trailer Court, Rural Route 6; Campus Square Apartments, 609 E. Campus Drive; and Breckenridge Courts, 2350 S. Illinois Ave.

Carbondale has been recycling for a couple of years now, and we've been supportive of their efforts to continue to develop the program.

COORDINATOR

Wheelles said the city bought the new bins with a grant of about $4,000 received in October from the Illinois Department of Commerce and Community Affairs.

Newsprint, tin and aluminum cans, and green, brown and clear glass will be collected from each apartment or trailer every week on the same day the city collects trash, he said.

Wheelles said he does not know what percentage of Carbondale's trash is recycled through the program.

He said the bins are city property and should be left with apartments or trailers when tenants move out.

"The extensive coverage has my client painted as a killer," Christenson said. "That kind of prejudice is irreparably harmful to the defendant."

Jackson County State's Attorney Mike Wepsiec said the amount of press coverage of the case would not influence most potential jurors.

"We are talking about 12 fair and impartial jurors," Wepsiec said. "We are not talking about 12 ignorant jurors. Most people forget about things that don't immediately impact them."

Schwartz set the trial date for the week beginning July 14, so tape recordings that might contain Neal's phone conversations shortly after the murders could be returned to the court by the FBI, and so the defense can hire an expert to analyze ballistics data compiled by the Jackson County Sheriff's Department.

Neal is charged with six counts of first-degree murder for allegedly shooting Terrance Mitchell, 16, of Carbondale, and James Austin Campbell, 15, of Murphysboro, in the head with a handgun.

On Aug. 14, he was formally charged and extradited to Carbondale from Sacramento, Calif. On Nov. 1, a grand jury issued an indictment on all six counts. Neal is being held at Jackson County Jail in lieu of $500,000 cash.

Celestial rocks may down fall to Earth

FALLING ROCKS:
Serious research put toward the efforts to track asteroids.

WASHINGTON POST

Killer rocks from outer space are finally getting some respect. People laughed a few years back when Edward Teller, the father of the hydrogen bomb, suggested the need for an international arsenal of missiles powerful enough to fend off a doomsday asteroid. Now, suddenly, the public imagination seems crowded with visions of celestial "incoming." The scenario is proliferating in books, movies, magazine articles, television documentaries and the occasional miniseries, like one that begins tonight. Asteroid trackers are being hounded for interviews. Is this mere millennial madness? Actually, experts say the threat is real enough to merit more serious study than it's getting, but not imminent enough to mobilize the nukes. At least not yet. They hope. "In a sense, Chicken Little was right," said planetary scientist Eleanor Helin of NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, Calif. "The sky is falling." And sooner or later, "we could become the dinosaurs."

It would take an object at least a mile in diameter to cause global ecological damage and disrupt civilization. Scientists estimate that there are some 2,000 asteroids and comets larger than a kilometer in diameter (0.6 mile) in orbits that could someday intersect with Earth's. But so far, only about a tenth that number has been located. "We need to know where the other 90 percent is," said Helin, who pioneered an early tracking effort 25 years ago and now is leader of the NEAT (Near-Earth Asteroid Tracking) system science team. NEAT uses an electronic camera installed at a 39-inch telescope operated by the U.S. Air Force Space Command atop Maui's Haleakala volcano. It is one of just two tiny search groups in the world scanning a total of just 2 percent of the sky each month in search of doomsday rocks. The Earth is no stranger to encounters with space rocks. But happily for humanity, the big chunks of space rock are far outnumbered by smaller ones that swarm around Earth's path. And those large enough to make it through the atmosphere tend to land in the vast oceans or in uninhabited lands. In fact, every hour a ton of micrometeorite dust hits the Earth. Every few hours a baseball-sized lump survives intact all the way to Earth's surface.

Some objects hit the upper atmosphere and bounce back out into space. Some tumble into view with unnerving suddenness — like the object at least 1,000 feet in diameter that appeared suddenly last May and took five days to cross the sky not much farther away than the moon's orbit. About once a month, recently declassified data from military satellites indicate, some extraterrestrial object detonates at high altitude with the force of a kiloton or more of TNT. Based on what scientists know now, the odds that an object at least a mile in diameter will smash into Earth in the next century are slightly less than 1 in 1,000.

SIUC departments report to different administrators

CHANGING CHIEFS:
Administrator says units change will allow for better management and communications.

TRAVIS DeNEAL
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

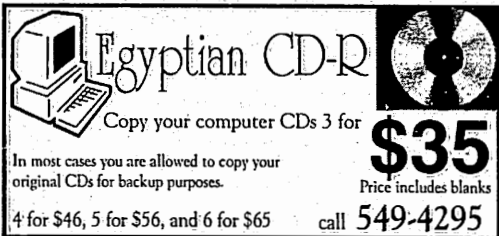

Three SIUC units that used to report to the chancellor's office now report to different administrative offices, SIUC Chancellor Donald Beggs says. Beggs said Information Technology and Touch of Nature will report to the vice chancellor of administration, while Institutional Research will report to the vice chancellor of Academic Affairs. "These units will no longer report to the chancellor's office, and instead will report to an office that is more relevant," he said. The vice chancellor of administration oversees SIUC departments and units that provide services to students, including the Physical Plant, Beggs said. Information Technology and Touch of Nature also provide services and should be managed by the administration office, Beggs said.

William Capie, associate vice chancellor of administration, said last month's decision to reorganize means Information Technology and Touch of Nature will be managed more efficiently. "The changes make some of our administrative functions and reporting lines clearer," Capie said. "It will make it easier to resolve problems." Capie said the reorganization

"The key is, the transition will be transparent to the rest of the University," he said. "There will be no built-in delays or confusion from a breakdown in communication." Albert Allen, Information Technology director, said the change will improve his department's service because fewer people will be included in the decision-making process. "This will streamline our operations by shortening the chain of command," Allen said. Beggs also assigned Institutional Research to report to John Jackson, vice chancellor of Academic Affairs and provost. Because Institutional Research's work already is sent to Jackson's office, involving the chancellor's office is unnecessary, he said.

In addition to departmental changes, C. Michael Williams was named executive director of budgeting. Williams, who was formerly executive director of budgeting and information resources, will focus on the planning involved in the University's change to its new budgeting process. Beggs said more changes likely will be made, but he said he could not name other units that will be changed.

The changes make some of our administrative functions and reporting lines clearer. It will make it easier to resolve problems.”
WILLIAM CAPIE
VICE CHANCELLOR OF ADMINISTRATION will not be noticed by students because the quality of the services will not be affected.

Loss to Lady Jays raises playoff doubts

AMY STRAUSS/Daily Egyptian

BALL BATTLE: Saluki women's basketball center Theia Hudson, a junior, gets hold of a rebound while Holly Sivesind, a player for Creighton, tries to stop her. The Salukis lost to Creighton 73-66 Saturday at the SIU Arena.

SLIPPING AWAY: Salukis must win 2 of next 4 games to make playoff.

DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

A 72-68 loss to Creighton University Saturday has SIUC women's basketball coach Cindy Scott searching for answers concerning the Salukis' post-season fate.

"I really don't have a whole lot of answers," she said. "I told my kids that. I think they are at the point when they have to make some decisions as a team."

The Salukis must decide whether a berth to the Missouri Valley Conference tournament March 6-8 in Springfield, Mo., where only eight of the 10 Valley teams advance, is in their reach.

SIUC, 10-12 overall and 6-8 in the MVC, is tied for fifth place with five other teams, but there are only two teams in the conference with worse records than the Salukis.

The loss was the second straight for the Salukis, who suffered a 62-61 last-second loss to Drake University at SIU Arena Thursday.

SIUC only shot 37 percent from the floor and a dismal 11 percent from the three-point range Saturday. The Salukis also were crushed by three Lady Jays who scored in double figures.

Creighton's Carrie Welle, Kristi McCullough and Holly Sivesind combined for 65 of the Lady Jays' 73 total points.

Scott said Creighton's effort outshined the Salukis' dismal performance. "I think Creighton played harder than we did," she said. "They appeared to want the game more than we wanted it. I thought we gave a very lackluster performance."

The Salukis contained Welle, the Valley's leading scorer, to just seven

"We laid down today. We can lay down the rest of the year and find ourselves out of the conference tournament."

points in the first half, but did not have an answer in the second half, when she scored 19 of her game-high 26 points.

Senior guard Kasia McClendon said the Salukis simply were outplayed by Welle and the Lady Jays.

"I think in the first half we played decent, but in the second half we didn't play as well," she said. "I think they out hustled us, and we didn't respond to their hustle."

Scott said Saturday's game with Creighton (7-15, 6-8) was crucial for the Salukis post-season chances. "I think it was a major game because we were in the position to put ourselves two games ahead of Creighton in the conference standings," she said. "If we could have gotten this game, I felt we were at least in a position to get ourselves into the tournament."

"It is in question now." Creighton coach Connie Yori was enthusiastic about how her team performed against SIUC.

"I think our players gave a very good effort," she said. "Effort has not been our problem; execution has been our problem."

"I thought we played well for 38 minutes, and that is what we needed to do."

The Salukis saw a team-high 18 points from McClendon, but Scott said she still had nothing positive to say about Saturday's loss.

"There is nothing uplifting about anything that happened today," she said. "We are not very good when we are not playing on all cylinders, and for some reason we are not playing on all cylinders."

Even though a tournament berth is within grasp, Scott said this week could be a turning point when the Salukis go on the road Thursday to take on Wichita State University.

"We laid down today (Saturday)," she said. "We can lay down the rest of the year and find ourselves out of the conference tournament."

"We are not in a very enviable position at this point. We have to win two of the next four games to get in."

The Salukis take on Wichita State at 7 p.m. Thursday in Wichita, Kan.

Olympic options considered

LOS ANGELES TIMES

PHILADELPHIA — The United States Olympic Committee wrapped up its semiannual meeting here Sunday by opting to vote by mail — with the vote to be announced in late June — as to whether it will seek the 2008 Games.

Interested cities have until May 1 to respond with a letter of intent to bid, along with a $100,000 bidding fee.

Alfredo La Mont, the USOC's director of international relations, spoke about the hurdles, one of them being a possible reluctance by the International Olympic Committee to return to the United States before going to other regions first.

One IOC requirement, an indemnification guarantee by the host city and the host city's state, has caused at least one interested city, Chicago, to think about withdrawing from the selection process.

But USOC executive director Richard Schultz said, "It is my personal feeling is that's all highly negotiable."

factor in the Salukis' loss.

"Daisy is a very good basketball player. There's no doubt about it," Hawkins said. "He's got the complete package. Since he's played the whole year, he's probably the front-runner for the Valley Player of the Year, and who can argue with that?"

The Salukis placed four players in double figures Saturday night. Junior forward Rashad Tucker led the team with 23 points, while junior guard Troy Hudson added 22 points. Sophomore forward Monte Jenkins scored 12 points, and Hawkins added in 11 points.

But Daisy and Northern Iowa opened the second half much like they ended the first half. The Panthers jumped out to a 67-51 lead with nine minutes remaining and took an 85-70 lead with 2:10 left and seemed to have the game under control.

The Salukis made several runs at Northern Iowa down the stretch, but they could get no closer than eight points as the Panthers held on for the 11-point victory.

Saluki forward James Jackson, who scored four points and grabbed five rebounds, said the Salukis' defensive effort cost them down the stretch.

"We didn't get enough shot-checks on them, and Daisy just got going and didn't stop," Jackson said. "They just had our number. Our press was ineffective, and they were able to break it easily."

Saturday's game marks the third straight game the Salukis have allowed the opposing team's best player to beat them. Bradley University's Anthony Parker scored 18 points and hit a game-winning three-pointer to give the Braves a 55-53 win over SIUC Feb. 10, while Illinois State University's Rico Hill scored 32 points in an 82-77 win over the Salukis Thursday.

SIUC wraps up the regular season at seventh-place Wichita State University tonight and at Evansville University Saturday before being visited by Southwest Missouri State University Feb. 24. The Salukis jumped out to a big lead and held on to beat the Shockers 60-56 at SIU Arena Feb. 5.

Jenkins said the Salukis must take their game to the next level in the team's final three games.

"We've just got to finish out the year playing hard, and do everything we need to do to win," Jenkins said.

Herrin said the Salukis must regroup quickly to play well against Wichita State.

"We're disappointed, but we're not surprised because Northern Iowa is a very good basketball team," Herrin said. "The big thing is we can't get our heads down because we've got another tough ballgame at Wichita."

SIUC runners finish strong

NEXT STOP - MVC:
Salukis perform well in last meet before championships.

RYAN KEITH
DAILY EGYPTIAN-REPORTER

With the Missouri Valley Conference championship looming around the corner, members of the SIUC men's and women's track and field teams used the Saturday Saluki/USA Open as a final opportunity to hone their skills.

The meet, which took place at the Recreation Center, featured athletes competing individually instead of as a team. The women finished the meet with 11 top three finishes, while the men finished with nine. "The meet was different than most," senior Heather Greeling of Jerseyville said. "We concentrated more on the individual events because the meet was not a team competition."

Women's coach Don DeNoon said he was pleased with the performances of his distance runners, especially that of senior Lesley Baston of Mississauga, Ontario.

Baston finished first in the 55 meter with a time of 0:6.99.

"I think Lesley is a little more confident now," he said. "All of the girls are much more confident now and believe they can go out and peak this Saturday at the Missouri Valley Conference championships."

In addition to SIUC, 17 other schools competed at the Saluki/USA Open, but the Salukis received tougher competition than they expected; Greeling said.

"I was surprised," she said. "There were some really great performances by other individuals at the meet."

DeNoon said that Saturday's meet had many bright spots overall, and he thought his team ran well.

"Some of the women were put in different events," he said. "I think because of the different setting, it's going to make us a stronger team come championship time."

Of the teams at the competition, Indiana State University was the only other MVC team at the meet.

Greeling could not evaluate whether or not Saturday's meet had an impact toward the MVC championships.

"We're going to practice this week and hopefully we can go out with the intensity we've had all year," she said.

Men's track and field coach Bill Cornell said the team performed pretty well and did what was needed to do.

"We sharpened our skills Saturday," he said. "Our focus is still on the Valley championship Saturday."

Sophomore Jeremy Parks, of Eldorado, said Saturday's meet is going to give the team more confidence as the season moves on.

"Being at home and having everyone cheering for us gives us a little more intensity at our meets," he said.

Parks, who won the mile with a time of 4:18.38, said it was hard to evaluate Indiana State's performance because most of their athletes were running shorter distances.

Indiana State finished ahead of SIUC at the Indiana Invitational Feb. 1 and will compete against the Salukis once again at the MVC.

Cornell said Saturday's meet was just another stepping stone in the Salukis' progress heading into Saturday's championships.

"If we stay healthy and can continue to run like we have, then we should move up to another level Saturday," he said.

Parks said he and his teammates will rest, along with easing up on the training, so they will be prepared for Saturday.

"I think if all the guys put their heads together and do the things we're capable of, then I think we can do it," he said.

The Salukis close out the home portion of their indoor season with the Missouri Valley Conference Indoor Track and Field Championship at the Recreation Center. Friday's events start at noon, and Saturday's starts at 11 a.m.

Gordon wins at Daytona

LOS ANGELES TIMES

In what turned out to be one of the most competitive Daytona 500s in more than a decade, Jeff Gordon escaped six accidents and a flat tire to become the youngest winner of America's premier stock car race Sunday as an estimated 175,000 watched.

A 12-car accident three laps from the finish of the 200-lap race caused Gordon's Chevrolet to take the checkered flag under a yellow caution flag, with teammates Terry Labonte and Ricky Craven second and third, giving ailing car owner Rick Hendrick a 1-2-3 finish.

Hendrick watched the race from his home in Lake Norman, N.C., where he is undergoing treatment for leukemia.

for seven runs on six hits and three walks in one inning of work.

ASU's Jeff Cermak got the win. Despite the 16-point margin of victory, Callahan said the season-opening series in Tempe was a good test for SIUC.

Callahan, whose Salukis open a three game series against nationally ranked Texas Tech University Friday in Lubbock, Texas, said SIUC showed good fortitude in coming back against ASU.

"Offensively we will be just fine," Callahan said. "We will get our pitching going."

Friday's game in Lubbock begins at 3 p.m.

Anderson still questionable

Kentucky star guard Derek Anderson, thought to be out the rest of the season because of reconstructive knee surgery performed last month, was back on the court Saturday, taking part in warm-up drills before an 85-56 home win over Florida. However, there is no indication when he will return to game action.

Anderson was injured in a game against Auburn on Jan. 18 and underwent surgery four days later to repair a completely torn anterior cruciate ligament in his right knee.

NFL

Raiders welcome George

Jeff George hopes he's found a home with the Oakland Raiders. The Raiders, known for taking in veteran players with bad reputations, officially have announced the signing of the once-promising quarterback. Terms have yet to be disclosed, but it's believed George will get $26 million over five years. Oakland Coach Joe Bugel says he believes George can make the big plays needed to get the Raiders to the Super Bowl. Oakland is George's third NFL team after wearing out his welcome in Indianapolis and Atlanta.

BOXING

Duran fails to reach 100

Legendary boxer Roberto Duran will have to find someone else to be his 100th victim, as he fell by unanimous decision to former WBA middleweight champion Jorge Castro in Mar Del Plata, Argentina, Saturday. Castro controlled much of the bout and was ahead 100-94, 99-98 and 99-96 on the judges' cards. The 29-year-old Castro, who is from Argentina, boosted his record to 102-5-2. He had claimed the WBA title by beating Reggie Johnson in August 1994, but lost it via a decision in his fifth title defense when Shinji Takehara beat him in 12 rounds in December 1995. Duran, the 45-year-old former lightweight, welterweight, super welterweight and middleweight champion, has indicated he will retire once he reaches 100 wins. The loss put him at 99-13 with 69 knockouts.

MLB

Dykstra questionable, Daulton may return

The Phillies admitted that outfielder Len Dykstra, a three-time All-Star, is not likely to play this season because of back surgery. The 34-year-old Dykstra, who had back surgery on July 15, is expected to report to camp with the position players next week. He will undergo an hour of physical therapy each day but will not take part in workouts. Dykstra played in only 40 games last season and hit .261 with three homers, 13 RBIs and three stolen bases.

The Phillies announced Sunday that Darren Daulton, who was limited to just five games last season after having surgery 16 months ago, will work solely at first base this spring. Originally, the Phillies had hoped that Daulton would be able to be used at catcher. Daulton underwent surgery 16 months ago to repair a torn anterior cruciate ligament. He tried to return last season by playing left field, but ended up with just 12 at-bats before being disabled. He suffered a torn ligament in his left knee 10 years ago. The 35-year-old Daulton is a three-time All-Star who led the National League with 109 RBIs in 1992. He has caught 965 games, the third most in Phillies history.

Daisy drives the Panthers to dominating win over SIUC.

RYAN KEITH
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The Saluki men's basketball team could not overcome a sluggish defensive effort or the University of Northern Iowa's Jason Daisy as SIUC fell to the Panthers 92-81 at SIUC Arena Saturday night.

Daisy, a 6-foot-3-inch senior guard, scored 19 of his game-high 34 points in the first half as the Panthers battled back from an early Saluki lead and held off several SIUC runs late in the second half for the 11-point victory.

With the win, Northern Iowa solidified its hold on second place in the Missouri Valley Conference and improved to 14-9 overall and 10-5 in conference play. The Salukis dropped their third straight game and fell to 13-13 overall and 6-9 in conference play.

Saluki coach Rich Herrin said SIUC did not play with the same intensity it showed in its last two games.

"We're disappointed, but Northern Iowa is a good basketball team," Herrin said. "We scored enough points, but our defense wasn't what it has been. I think it all comes down to our intensity level."

Both teams took advantage of a fast-paced tempo to shoot more than 50 percent from the field for the game. Northern Iowa shot 56 percent from the field for the game, while SIUC shot 53 percent.

Both teams opened Saturday's game with a consistent offensive effort. Northern Iowa jumped out to a 16-6 lead before the Salukis rebounded to take a 26-24 lead with seven minutes remaining. But Daisy sparked a 20-9 Panther run to end the first half as Northern Iowa took a 44-35 lead into the locker room.

Saluki guard Shane Hawkins said Daisy's play in the first half was a critical

The baseball Salukis held Arizona State University to a one-run game for six innings before falling 25-9 in the game's closing innings Sunday in Tempe, Arizona.

After cruising to a 9-0 win Friday and a 10-4 win Saturday, the No. 7 Sun Devils (9-5) exhibited premier baseball Sunday afternoon, exploding for seven runs in the bottom of the seventh inning to display the talents that have afforded them national recognition.

Following Friday's shutout, where ASU fanned 17 Saluki batters, SIUC battled the Sun Devils for six innings before being jolted by two four-run innings Saturday.

Third-year Saluki coach Dan Callahan said overall he was pleased with his team's showing in Tempe, adding that SIUC will continue to improve as the season progresses.

SIUC had 14 hits Sunday, while the Sun Devils nearly doubled that with 24.

Overall Callahan said he was pleased with SIUC's offensive efforts.

"Offensively, I think we showed improvement in each game," Callahan, whose Salukis are 0-3, said. "Sunday was the best example because we hit the ball at them in that game."

ASU jumped out early with a 9-1 lead, before SIUC battled back to make it a 9-8 game. However, from the sixth inning on, it was all Sun Devils, who added five more runs in the bottom of the eighth to put the game out of reach.

Yet ASU coach Pat Murphy said Sunday's victory was far from lopsided.

"Even though a 25-9 loss looks like a huge mismatch, I think, as a coach, the most
