Faculty and clinical programs are priorities of new law dean

By Andrew Zinner
Staff Writer

Hiring more faculty for the additional students attending the expanded Law School in fall 1983, making plans to recruit quality student body, and expanding the clinical aspects of law education will be among the priorities of the new SIU-C Law School dean.

Dan Hopson, who took over as SIU-C's Law School dean July 1, said that the current enrollment of 90 will be increased to 125 upon the opening of the new Law School building. He emphasized the importance of balancing both the clinical and classroom aspects of education.

"We want to build upon the existing solid base of the curriculum," Hopson explained. "We hope to expand clinical education both in variety and the number of people served under existing programs."

Currently, there are three types of clinical programs offered here. Hopson pointed out. They are: the Prison Legal Service, in which students provide assistance to inmates at Menard; assistance to the elderly, and the Externe Program, which places law students in public attorneys' offices, such as the states' attorney office.

Hopson quickly added, though, that clinical education is complementary to not more important than, classroom education. "Classroom is the heart of legal education. It provides for the development of young men and women to understand the nature of the legal process, as well as to better perform service to their clients," he maintained.

The 49-year-old dean said that SIU-C's location provides a unique opportunity to develop legal ways to deal with rural, Midwestern problems, as well as being concerned with resource allocation and to expect a decline in the future.

He added that since the Law School is relatively new (seven years old), it hasn't developed the long tradition of top-quality education that a school like Stanford enjoys. "Over time, that reputation will come," Hopson said optimistically. He expressed concern over the low faculty salary being appropriated by the state legislature, saying compensation from good law firms would make quality faculty recruitment more difficult.

"I was disappointed that the increase was not higher," he said. "Inflation makes it difficult to recruit top-notch teachers. Law firm salaries have kept pace with inflation, but not faculty salaries."

Hopson, who taught at the University of Kansas for 11 years, said he came here because of the unique opportunity to shape and form the development of the expanded law school.

"The growth here affords a great opportunity, whereas a long-established school provides less opportunity for new programs," he said. "Also, I was pleased with the people I met here. The support form the University and the American Bar Association is very strong."

The future calls for the expansion of the faculty from its current 18 full-time members to 26 over a three-year period, Hopson pointed out. He said construction of the new building is "ahead of schedule, and we expect to move in the summer of 1984."

Ignoring the 'little guy' may cost Saluki sports

By Jacqui Kozaczak
Staff Writer

For too long, Saluki athletics has ignored the "little guy" in favor of the big contributors, a fact that has crippled the athletic department and helped deplete community interest in SIU-C athletics, according to participants at a public brainstorming session Tuesday evening.

The evening meeting at the Carbondale Savings and Loan Association was held by the Intercollegiate Athletics Committee, the athletics program's advisory arm, to solicit suggestions for ways to improve fund-raising and increase interest in SIU-C sports events.

The seven participants generally agreed the program has a "public relations problem" that has pushed community interest toward local high school sports events despite the growing of a comprehensive college program.

James Medlin, a Carbondale attorney, kicked off the discussion when he complained that his efforts and those of friends "to form a nucleus of 30 or more small contributors, were rebuffed by Men's Athletics Director Gale Seely."

"We got together on this fundraising idea and decided we'd all pledge some money give to Saluki athletics," Medlin told the group and the four IAC members attending. "But we were just flatly turned down."

Environmental problems such as coal mining and farmland

Hopson, who taught at Indiana University for the past 13 years, said the smaller size of SIU-C's Law School (a projected maximum of 450 students) will make for a high degree of faculty-student interaction.

"As for the quality of past and current law students here, Hopson defended SIU-C's students.

"Before coming here, I did research on that, and found that statistics here compare favorably to the general group of quality law schools around the nation," he said. "I found a very high level here, and there is no reason to expect a decline in the future."

The committee conducted two public meetings Tuesday with the hopes of channeling suggestions to the University. Medlin, aSIU-C "take the PR problem to the Big Three-Mace, Hilton and Hopson, and suggest that the vice president for university communications and the men's athletics assistant director and director, respectively. GOP candidate for Congress says he has Simon 'on the run'

By Charity Gould

Staff Writer

"After more than 20 years of living off of the taxpayers, people have finally awakened to the fact that Paul Simon is a professional politician," Anderson said in his Marion office Tuesday.

"He (Simon) has done so little to help this district. He's out for himself. He has his eyes on bigger things," said conservative Anderson.

Anderson says he is "a career businessman" and not a professional politician, who only comes back to his district "to gear up for votes before the election."

Anderson, 56, who owns a public relations and management consultant firm in Marion, said he is for a strong management consultant firm in

Anderson believes the Iranian government taking over hand in federal controls on business is a "very unfortunate" situation.

On the international scene, Anderson believes the Iranian situation is "very unfortunate" and feels it could have been prevented.

"The president had a chance to get the Americans out, but he didn't," Anderson said. "We must have people who can take care of international politics."

Anderson said the letter written by President Carter "to divert national defense funds to get big city unemployment off the streets."

"There are people from the large metropolitan cities who are unemployed and President Carter feels he must do something with them. So he puts them in the army," he said. Although he opposes registration, Anderson says, "It's a national problem and something must register."

Anderson said if he were in Congress, he would try to prevent the United States from being pulled into another war like in Vietnam.

Anderson also opposes any federal gun control regulation, "I belong to the National Rifle Association. I can't see the government taking over hand in hand in the Second Amendment."

After attending the Republican convention last week with his wife, Betty, Anderson said he was very pleased with the Ronald Reagan-George Bush ticket. "I've always supported Bush," he said. "And I'm extremely pleased with Reagan. I helped organize Reagan's 1968 campaign in downstate Illinois. I'm glad to see he's finally made it."

About himself, Anderson said he believes he will be the next congressman because "I can do a better job helping the people here."

"I fear unless Republicans are elected, the inflation rate will rise to 25 percent by March, and we'll be in one of the biggest inflationary depressions this country's seen."

Ban on winter utility shut-offs subject of ICC public hearing

By Mary Harmon

Staff Writer

An opportunity to air opinions on winter shut-offs by utility companies will be provided in an on-campus public hearing to be held this Thursday, July 24, in Student Center Ballroom C, at 2 p.m.

The hearing, which is open to the public, will be held Thursday, July 24, in Student Center Ballroom C, at 2 p.m.

The hearing will focus on the ICC's decision on permanent implementation of last year's temporary winter shut-offs by utility companies.

Last year's trial ban prohibited utility companies to shut-offs between Dec. 1 and March 1 when temperatures fell below 32 degrees for a 24 hour period, and provided the customer has entered into and maintained a deferred payment plan.

The provision requires that the deferred payment plan be based on the customer's ability to pay, and also provided the suspension of all minimum payment requirements for deposits.

USO sends 9 students to Washington

The Undergraduate Student Organization will be sending nine students to the America's Action Congress, an event in Washington this Friday through Tuesday.

The delegates will take part in programs discussing topics from foreign policy to lobbying techniques.

The USO paid the registration for the nine and also will pay for the delegates' housing and transportation.

The nine people represent the Illinois State University, the Fuller Egyptian, the USO, Black Affairs Council and the American Student Association.

The ASA is a national lobbying organization for student needs. Former undergraduate president Pete Alexander is a member of the ASA board of directors.

Last weekend was pretty rough on some bicycle owners in Carbondale.

In the 48 hours from 6 p.m. Friday to 6 p.m. Sunday, seven bicycles worth more than $1,500 were reported stolen.

Karen V. Parsons, 702 S. Dixon, told police that her Pugeot bicycle, which was locked up, was stolen sometime before 6 p.m. Friday night. Police said the bicycle was valued at $151.20.

At 9:06 a.m. Saturday, Reiner W. Lambert, from the Dunn Apartments at 250 Lewis, called police to report the loss of a $200 Bridgeston 10-speed bicycle. Lambert’s bicycle was locked up. It was stolen from his unlocked bicycle sometime between 6 p.m. Saturday and 6 p.m. Sunday.

Three hours later, Susan Redmond told police her Sun 9 bicycle, which was also locked up, was stolen from outside her home at 300 E. College.

Two unlocked bicycles were reported stolen right from a porch at a house at 502 Glennview at 3:41 p.m. Saturday. W. Brooks, Hayden lost his Climo 10-speed valued at $300 and a $300 Fuji Special that belongs to Darrell Maleke. The bikes were reported stolen before 6 p.m. Saturday.

Samuel Brittingham, 1000 W. Main, told police that a 26-inch Columbia bicycle worth $75 was stolen from in front of his house shortly after 6 p.m. Sunday.

Ex-smoker doesn't miss cigarettes

By Karla Clare

Warning. The Surgeon General Has Determined That Cigarette Smoking Is Dangerous to Your Health. How often do you warn your friends not to smoke? They carry on and on, aren't they? I can actually say that I have kicked the habit. Not for a day, nor for a week, or even a month, but three months and more. And I'm beginning to reap the advantages of joining the ranks of the non-smoking major! Since I've quit polluting my body, I've saved $30. That's enough to pay for my phone and else. I used to light two or three cigarettes a day, and now I don't smoke at all. It's a great feeling to know that I'm not harming anyone. And I'm glad I made the decision to quit.

But that's all. I have this strange feeling that people are objecting. Maybe it's because I don't have smoker's hiccough anymore. All smokers are blemished by the ash tree breed. Or maybe it's because my hair actually retains some of the freshness that my friends and I used to have. I don't think anyone has come up to me and said, "I like your hair, it's so nice!" But then again, that's what's so terrific. But seriously, I think they just want me to quit polluting myself and the people around me.

What I like about not smoking is the feeling of freedom. It's like the freedom from giving me dirty sniffs and taking a cough just to give me a lift. I've overcome my need for cigarettes and now I'm only in the company of other non-smokers in one group or restaurant smoking a cigarette. So I'm not taking anything, but not a smoker.

It's nice not carrying cigarettes and matches around. I keep them in my mittens and an ash tray at the end of my bed. Weird, isn't it? But I love it. It's my new life. I'm not a smoker anymore.

Letters

Doesn't care who shot J.R.

I refer to Chuck's Okapla-Osaka's letter published in the 17 July DET. There is no doubt about the fact that he suffered an unjust, evil, and cruel injustice. The Europeans' activities in Africa were wrong, but I completely disagree with his conciliatory approach. The world's great nations should support the causes of the oppressed African countries. The world should look over the issue of apartheid.

I wonder whether appeals would be made to the United Nations and other European and American countries to know the true nature of the capitalist, especially in South Africa. When the British originally left the country, they had the human right to maintain apartheid in South Africa. The British left the country just before the clear signal. When the present generation of African leaders take the world on, they will be the representatives of the people.

I refer to the United Nations for the records of the United States in the Viet Nam dispute. There is no doubt about the fact that the British are the best people in the world. They have a great army and the United States is fighting in the same way. The black people want to know the true nature of the world. South Africa is just one country. There are more than 400,000,000 people who are fighting for their freedom. The British are fighting for their land and their lives.

Whether South Africa is a member of the United Nations, it will eventually fall. Our black people want to know about the world. It would be the greatest glory that we all fight for the preserver of humanity, justice, and dignity.

WASHINGTON—If nominations are in order for the worst Supreme Court decision of the term, I nominate Fullilove vs. Cahn, a three to three decision on July 2. This was the case in which the government, under the Civil Rights Act of 1968, sought to ensure minority participation in the housing construction industry. The Court, in a divided decision, held that the government's efforts to encourage minority participation in housing construction were an illegal invasion of the states' rights to regulate housing.

Justice Brennan, writing for the majority, said bluntly that the government's efforts to ensure minority participation in housing construction were an illegal invasion of the states' rights to regulate housing. The Court, in a divided decision, held that the government's efforts to encourage minority participation in housing construction were an illegal invasion of the states' rights to regulate housing.

The Court's decision, Brennan said, "is a victory for the states' rights over the federal government." Brennan said, "The states' rights argument is a powerful one, and we should not lightly reject it." For Brennan and his colleagues, the decision was a victory for the states' rights over the federal government.

But for others, the decision was a defeat for the states' rights argument. Justice Douglas, in a dissenting opinion, said that the Court's decision was a "violation of the Constitution." For Douglas and his colleagues, the decision was a violation of the Constitution.

Justice Marshall, in a separate opinion, said that the Court's decision was a "violation of the Constitution." For Marshall and his colleagues, the decision was a violation of the Constitution.

Sherlockians 'think' Holmes was a reality
By Anne Becker
Staff Writer

Take a famous literary detective, establish a ground rule that he was a real person and get set to play the "Sherlock Holmes game."

The game, which uses the brain and not the body, is played by members of Sherlock Holmes societies across the nation. Patrick Drazen, music director of WSIU radio, is vice president of the local society, "Occupants of the Empty House."

Explaining how the "Sherlockians" play the game, Drazen said, "It is a mental game; the way tennis is a physical game. A Sherlockian starts with the four novels and six short stories by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle about Holmes and just takes off from there on fanciful flights of scholarly speculation."

"Basically we go through all of this mental exercise for the fun of it," he added.

According to Drazen, a Sherlockian not only extensively reads the works of Conan Doyle, but also studies book and newspaper stories regarding the time period in which Holmes lived. Books and papers that speculate about the Holmes character, such as a book Drazen is working on about Holmes as a musician, are also published.

Sherlockians, Drazen said, do realize that their hobby is based on a fictional character.

"We don't think there was a Holmes. But the ground rule of the game is to behave as if there was a Sherlock Holmes. We knows it's a game, but we take the game seriously," he added.

"In fact, a died-in-the-wool Sherlockian doesn't admit that their hobby starts just takes off from there on fanciful flights of scholarly speculation," he said.

Child Development Lab is packed with toys, books and ‘caregivers’

By Charley Gould

Staff Writer

Children are their only concern.

The Child Development Laboratory located in Quigley Hall, Room 116, is packed with essentials like an endless mountain of toys, animal decorated cribs and scratch-and-sniff books for children ages six months to four years old.

More importantly, at least for the parents, are the “caregivers” — students, graduate assistants and volunteers who take care of the children.

Mary Lindahl, assistant director of the CDL, said although students use the facilities most, the laboratory is open to anyone in the Bondale community.

Lindahl said the children are divided into two groups — infant-toddler and preschool. This summer only the infant-toddler program is operating, but both programs will be offered fall semester.

“Currently, in the infant-toddler program, which is for children ages 6 months to 2½ years, we have seven children in the morning and seven in the afternoon,” Lindahl said. “Fall semester we expect to add another child to both programs.”

The morning session runs from 7:45 a.m. to 12:15 p.m. The afternoon session is from 12:45 p.m. to 5:15 p.m. adding that these times will also make up all semester hours for both programs.

Fall enrollment for the program, which is for three- and four-year-olds, will be 12 children for each session. The CDL is open five days a week, Monday through Friday, for each session.

Lindahl noted there will be a “slight increase in the program this beginning fall semester.”

“The final enrollment date is July 25,” but this might be extended if we don’t fill our quota,” said Lindahl, who has five years of experience working with children in a child-care setting.

The staff consists of two graduate assistants, students from human development classes and volunteers. Usually four people at a time take care of the children, she said.

Daily logs showing the parents what their child ate, how much they slept and what type of activity they participated in are kept in the infant-toddler program, said Lindahl, who obtained her master’s degree in human development at SJU.

Although the infants have a number of different things they can participate in, they aren’t forced to do them, said Lindahl, who also teaches a few human development classes as a visiting instructor.

“The room where the preschool program is located is set up in corners.” This is the housekeeping corner,” said Lindahl pointing to a carpeted area complete with stove, refrigerator and dishes.

The science corner is filled with plants and an aquarium while beads and puzzles are found in the manipulative corner.

An observation booth for students and parents is also a part of both programs.

“We try to work closely with the parents. We have monthly meetings with them and discuss any problems or questions they may have,” she said.

“A very casual relaxed atmosphere is what we strive for,” Lindahl said.

Robber employs slimy accomplice: aims boa constrictor at his victim

CHICAGO AP-A robber used a 6-foot-long boa constrictor as a weapon to hold up a man and make his getaway with the snake on a bicycle, police said.

Antonio Zavala was awakened in his Northwest Side apartment by a bandit who pointed the snake at him and demanded money, police said.

Zavala, 28, told police he surrendered.

Police Officer Arthur Nielsen said Tuesday that Zavala chased the robber. "But he didn't want to catch him because he wouldn't know what to do if he did."

Investigators said a 15-year-old boy had been seen in the area carrying a snake. Police found the snake coiled up in a box under a stairwell, but they didn't find the youth.

Police treated the incident as an armed robbery.

"It may not be a gun, but the snake sure is a weapon," said Nielsen. "This is only the second armed-robbery case I've seen in 21 years."

"We once caught a guy who was using a big German shepherd to scare money out of his victim."

Animal control officials said the snake would be held at the city pound as evidence, and probably will wind up in Lincoln Park Zoo.

Sherlockians play mind game

It is a part of the game that Conan Doyle is what we call the "literary agent" for Holmes."

About 100 Sherlockians, including Drazen, gathered at a conference that was held July 18-20 in Kingston, Ontario. Drazen said the activities included speakers and discussion groups, an Anglican church service and a 1900 English movie based on a Holmes story.

The Sherlockians also participated in a scavenger hunt, where the clues had to be located before being figured out. Some clues were hidden on a mantle inside an old Persian slipper with pipe tobacco, which is where Holmes kept his tobacco, Drazen said.

Drazen added that everyone at the conference was urged to come in costume. Many came wearing elaborate Victorian clothing. Drazen, however, chose to masquerade as the Dalai Lama of Tibet, a person Holmes kept his robe on, Drazen said. Drazen commented.

"Some people agree that I made the noblest sacrifice for art." Drazen concluded.

His efforts did not win him the prize for the best costume, but he did obtain acknowledgement from Societies. he said. can be translated all over the word."

"Holmes touches something responsive in the basic human soul. That may sound pompous but it holds out, as the stories have been translated all over the world," Drazen said.

Coach expecting good season from experienced hockey team

By Scott Stahmer
Staff Writer

Even though SIU's field hockey team has an automatic berth in the AIAW national championships as the host team, Saluki Coach Julie Illner hasn't forgotten the regular season and state and regional meets.

"Our first goal is to recapture state and regional titles, I would say, and our second goal is a good finish at the nationals," Illner, entering her second season as coach, said. "And we very definitely plan to qualify, even though we have an automatic bid.

Illner is anticipating a big season for the Saluki stickhandlers. A bevy of experienced players are returning from last year's 21-1 team, and several promising recruits have been added.

"I have high hopes," Illner said. "We're still what I consider a young team, but we have experience. We had a good season last year and everything points to a better season this year.

SIU, along with the nation's top field hockey teams, will compete in the AIAW finals at Wham Field and McAndrew Stadium Nov. 19-22. Probably the Salukis' top two returnees are goalies Kenda Cunningham and inner forward Ellen Massey.

Cunningham, a senior from Kings Park, N.Y., posted 13 shutouts last year and has 47 for her career. She has allowed 80 goals in 80 games during the last three years.

"I'm looking forward to her having her best season ever," Illner said.

Massey, a sophomore, started last season with the junior varsity, but moved up to the varsity and scored 34 goals to lead SIU in that department.

"I look for her to pick up even more goals this year," Illner said. "She's a lot of good skills.

Illner has three other seniors returning besides Cunningham, as Debbie Dennis will play halfback, team captain Mary Gilberti will start at fullback, and Renee Skrypchak will contend at attack.

At wing forward, Illner said sophomore Cindy Davis and junior Peg Kielsmeier will see action, while Mary Bruckner and Tacy Miller are contenders at right inner forward.

Sophomores Barb Smith and Karen Tozzi will play link and fullback, respectively. Illner said freshmen Dore Weil, Jennifer Bartley and Linda Brown will see action. Also, whom Illner said is one of the best players she's ever recruited, probably will start at fullback.

"She's got super skills, she's quick, and she has a lot of game sense," Illner said of the native of Elmont, N.Y. "It's a matter for her of learning our system.

"I doubt Bartley (wing forward) and Brown (defensive back) will be starting right away," Illner said. "I see them in backup roles. They will see a lot of action.

"I think we'll have a strong defensive club," Illner said. "And we should be strong offensively. Last year, we didn't score as many goals as we had in the past, but we still scored three per game, which is very high for hockey. All six of our forwards are capable of scoring.

Illner is pleased with SIU's schedule which features seven home games.

Coach is selected as Saluki cage assistant

By Ed Dougherty
Sports Editor

Former Texas Christian University head basketball coach Tim Somerville has been named the new assistant basketball coach at SIU.

Somerville, 34, is a well-traveled coach who should add a lot to the Frogs basketball program. He served as head coach Joe Gottfried.

Last season Somerville was an assistant coach at Bowling Green State University where he helped coach the team to the National Invitational Tournament.

Somerville, who coached the TCU Horned Frogs during the 1977-78 and 1978-79 seasons has also been an assistant coach in the Big Ten.

Tim has extensive recruiting experience in the Big Ten and the Southwest conferences, and we're delighted to have him on our staff," Gottfried said. "His two years of experience as a head coach at the Division I level and three years as an assistant to Fred Taylor at Ohio State are big pluses for him.

SIU Athletics Director Gale Sayers said he trusted Gottfried's decision and is sure that Somerville was the best choice for the job.

Somerville is a graduate of East Carolina University and has coached one year at the high school level. Before going to Ohio State in 1971, he was an assistant coach at Georgetown (Ky.) College.

He has also been a head coach at Steanviller (Ohio) College for one year, and he spent two years as head coach and athletics director at Concord (W. Va.) College.

Gottfried said Somerville got into several situations that weren't very good. And at Texas Christian he faced a new athletic director who decided to clean house.

Somerville replaces Mike Riley who resigned in June to seek a head coaching position.

Somerville is expected to be involved primarily with recruiting. However, he will be used to coach defense.

Simons resigns position as sports publicity head

By Joe Schmuhl
Sports Editor

SIU Sports Information Director Tom Simons has resigned his position. It was the second time in the past seven weeks that the sports information director for the university has been fired.

Simons was fired July 5. Since then he has been the University of Nebraska where he will finish his bachelor's degree.

"It's something I've wanted to do ever since high school," Simons said. "The longer I put it off, the harder it will be to do.

Simons decided, at least for the time being, to eliminate his former position.

Simons has been the sports information director at SIU for the past four years. He was brought to SIU! Simons was assistant publicity director for the St. Louis Football Cardinals for two years.
