Foundation likely to amend S. Africa policy

Leland Stauber, an associate professor of political science, spoke Monday at a rally sponsored by People Living the Dream against the SIU Foundation's investments in South Africa. Stauber spoke nine years ago at the same site, the Free Forum Area, about the same subject.

SIU-C President Albert Somit said Monday that the board of directors of the SIU Foundation is likely to consider amending its policy and limit or withdraw investments in companies linked to South Africa.

Somit and the board came under fire earlier Monday from speakers at a rally urging the foundation to stop investing in companies that do business in South Africa.

Somit said in a telephone interview after the protest that foundation policy has prohibited it for more than a year from investing in companies that operate in South Africa and do not follow the Sullivan principles.

Companies that follow the principles presumably do not further the system of racial segregation enforced by the white-minority government of South Africa.

But since the foundation board tightened its investment policy, Somit said, "the situation in South Africa has definitely deteriorated."

"The foundation will be meeting in September and a number of people will undoubtedly be raising the question of re-examining the policy regarding South Africa," Somit said.

At a rally organized by People Living the Dream, a local anti-apartheid and social activist group, Somit was criticized for signing a letter along with 94 other university presidents asking Congress to impose sanctions on the white-minority government of South Africa but not taking steps to sever the foundation's ties to the nation.

Luke Tripp, assistant professor in social and community services and one of the speakers at the rally, said Somit should focus on ending the University's links to the government of South Africa.

"We do not want the president of this University to throw the ball into another court," he said.

Tripp also said the board of directors of the foundation, which solicits private donations to the University, should be pressured to remove its investments from companies that do business in South Africa.

The rally began in the Free Forum Area south of Anthony Hall, included a march to the foundation's office on Chautauqua Street and ended with speeches on the lawn in front of the building. About 50 people took part.

Tim Larson, one of the rally's organizers, said that nine years and one day earlier 250 people had taken part in a similar rally to pressure the foundation to divest from companies linked to South Africa.

Larson and other speakers charged that companies with investments in South Africa help the government stay in power and strengthen its policy of apartheid, which imposes racial separation on South Africans.

During the last nine years, the speakers charged, the foundation has done little to address its ties to companies that invest in South Africa.

Anne Carman, newly named foundation president, referred all calls regarding the protesters' charges to Jack Dyer, director of University Relations.

Dyer branded as untrue the charges that the board of directors of the foundation has shown no concern toward potential links between foundation investments and the racist system in South Africa.

"The board of directors has taken a look at it and they're concerned about it," Dyer said.

Leland Stauber, associate professor of political science, told rallyers that imposing economic sanctions on South

Administrators must oblige; employ minorities, says AAAC

The Affirmative Action Advisory Committee wants to make administrators accountable if they don't comply with obligations to hire minorities and women.

"Some departments don't even know what the goals of affirmative action are," says Nancy Bandy, committee chair.

The advisory committee was set up in April upon the recommendation of William Baily, assistant to the president for affirmative action.

The committee is reviewing hiring procedures of faculty, administrative professionals and civil service employees. The intent of the review is to make the hiring procedures less "ambiguous" and to make administrators accountable for who they hire, Bandy said.

A draft of the review is expected to be released in August, she said.

"People think they have to hire unqualified minorities and women, but the real problem is that qualified minorities and women have been excluded in hiring because of discrimination," Bandy said.

Susan Rehwaldt, assistant to the president, said the committee's purpose is to review SIU-C's policies for hiring minorities and women and whether the policies work.

The policies were established by the Affirmative Action Advisory Council, formed in 1975 at the request of the federal government, according to Marian Davis, equal opportunity officer.

President Albert Somit has requested the committee to look into several areas of affirmative action, Bandy said. Some are identifying affirmative action problems, recommending actions needed to remedy problems and to review proposed programs and policies, she said.

The president also requested that the committee develop "criteria for and assist in screening" of nominees for the SIU-C Annual Affirmative Action Award, Bandy said.

The committee consists of Bandy, Graduate and Professional Student Council; Mike Zurek, Undergraduate Student Organization; Norma Ewing, Graduate Council; Ron Mahoney, Civil Service Council; Sylvia Greenfield, Faculty Senate; and Jim Seales, Administrative and Professional Council.

Also on the committee are four presidential appointees: Tom Dugan, School of Medicine; Mary Davidson, School of Social Work; Renard Strickland, Dean of the Law School; and Ron Blosser, Disabled Student Services.

Can ban meets opposition from Halloween Core group

By Toby Eckert
Staff Writer

The Halloween can ban proposal ran into an obstacle recently when one of the committees planning the annual celebration rejected the idea.

The Halloween Core Committee voted unanimously July 17 to support a "no can ban" policy and recommended an alternative plan to prevent the throwing of beer cans at the annual Halloween street festival.

The can ban was proposed by Police Chief Ed Hogan as a means to prevent personal injury and property damage resulting from can throwing during the celebration. The City Council has indicated it would support such a proposal if a way could be found to enforce it.

But according to the minutes of the committee's meeting, a can ban would cause more problems than it would solve.

A main concern of the committee was the servicing of booths selling beer in cups to the celebrants. "Of the 10 obvious locations for beer booths, four may be serviceable, six are not serviceable," the committee report stated.

Of the possible alternate locations for beer booths, the report noted that "three may

Jenco freed because of poor health

WIESBADEN, West Germany (UPI) — The Rev. Lawrence Jenco, held the entire 18 months of his Lebanese captivity in a small room with three other Americans, had a tearful reunion with relatives Monday and prayed his fellow captives "will have the same joy I have today."

"He always knew this day would come," said Andrew Mihelich, 51, Jenco's nephew. "He is a very fragile and emotional man. It didn't take long for the tears to come to our eyes."

Relatives of the Roman Catholic priest from Joliet said during his 18 months of captivity at the hands of Moslem extremists, he was often fed bad food and given little clothing. He recited "15 million" Hail Marys asking for his release, they said.

U.S. military officials said Jenco, 51, who suffers from a heart condition, was tired from his ordeal but in satisfactory condition. He was to undergo testing at the Air Force's Regional Medical Center at Wiesbaden for a few more days.

Jenco, one of five Americans who had been held hostage in Lebanon, was released by the Islamic Jihad terror group in the Syrian-controlled Bekaa valley in Lebanon on Saturday. The group said he was released because of "worsening health."

In Washington, the White House said President Reagan spoke by telephone to Jenco Monday and said he would not be satisfied until "all our citizens are released from captivity."

Ten Jenco relatives flew to West Germany aboard an Air Force C-141 transport for the reunion with Jenco, head of Catholic Relief Services in Lebanon when he was kidnapped in Moslem west Beirut on Jan. 8, 1985.

No group claimed responsibility.

Philippine military pledge loyalty to Aquino

MANILA, Philippines (UPI) — The 250,000-strong military pledged loyalty to President Corazon Aquino's government on Monday as rebellion charges were lodged against 41 allies of ousted leader Ferdinand Marcos who staged a failed revolt against Aquino. Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile and armed forces chief Gen. Fidel Ramos led the military in pledging allegiance to Aquino's interim "Freedom Constitution" in nationwide rites aimed at dispelling doubts about the military's loyalty to her government.

About 500 champagne-toasting wellwishers cheered and clapped as the research vessel Atlantis II arrived at 10 a.m. at the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution. The expedition — which netted 57,000 photographs — lasted 13 days.

Reagan honors Horowitz with Freedom medal

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan presented the Medal of Freedom Monday to pianist Vladimir Horowitz, calling him an "ambassador of the heart." The gold medal with a blue-striped ribbon, the nation's highest civilian award, was hung around the neck of the 81-year-old Russian-born pianist by Nancy Reagan. The first lady kissed Horowitz on the cheek and he returned the compliment, kissing her hand and bowing.

State police reported no new sightings of the animal, described as a white or off-white Bengal tiger weighing 300 pounds to 450 pounds. State Police said they have no firm leads on the tiger's origin.

Hostage's friends await homecoming in Joliet

JOLIET (UPI) — Friends and relatives of the Rev. Lawrence Martin Jenco said Monday they would wait to consult the recently freed hostage before making plans for any large scale homecoming celebrations. Jenco, one of five Americans who had been held hostage in Lebanon, was released Saturday. "We'd really like to have something planned and I know I'd like to have a big homecoming" said David Mihelich, Jenco's nephew. "It's really up to him."

Minimum security prisoner escapes Marion

Vets group vows to continue fight for 'day in court'

By Justus Weathersby Jr.
Staff Writer

Although legislation to repeal a 1933 law prohibiting veterans from seeking judicial review on claims against the government has been defeated, a veterans group has vowed to continue fighting for veterans to "have their day in court."

Vietnam Veterans of America, a U.S. veterans group, charges that Title 38 of the United States Code unduly restricts U.S. veterans from judicial review of compensatory claims.

HR 585, repeal legislation promoting judicial review, had been introduced by Rep. Don Edwards, D-10th District, Calif. The bill failed to be presented before the House because the Committee voted against the bill 20-12.

Rep. Ken Gray, D-West Frankfort, who was one of the principle backers of the proposed legislation, was absent from the committee the day of the vote.

Edwards, who also authored HR 585, said the VA "fought us tooth and nail. We'll try again next year."

THE VETERANS of Foreign Wars, Disabled American Veterans, the Paralyzed American Veterans, the American Legion and AM-VETS opposed the bill. The Vietnam Veterans of America was the only veterans group that backed the proposed repeal legislation.

The veterans groups that opposed the legislation numbered about 8 million members. The VVA has about 30,000 members.

Perry Murry, SIU-C Office of Veterans Affairs coordinator, said he agrees with the opponents of HR 585.

MURRY, WHO IS also the faculty adviser of the SIU-C Veterans Association, said there are times when judicial review might be justified if a veteran has exhausted all possible solutions. However, the majority of cases are decided in favor of the veteran, he said.

"From personal experience, the majority of veterans that we have been able to help receive their claims," Murry said. He added that veterans who cannot substantiate their claim with applicable documentation will receive disapproval of their claims.

"WHEN LOOKING at this issue on this campus, we have helped veterans locate medical records and other documentation to help them file a claim" with the Veterans Administration, Murry said.

"If an individual cannot satisfy his claim with enough documentation through the VA board of appeals, he won't be able to satisfy a court of law. Adding judicial review won't help the vet," Murry said.

Bart Stichman, Vietnam Veterans of America litigation director, said that U.S. veterans are one of the few groups that don't have a right to file a complaint if they have a dispute against the government.

A KEY ISSUE within the move toward judicial review legislation concerns veterans who have allegedly been underpaid after an effective pay reduction date of March 1.

Stichman claims that the VA unfairly applied the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings act to VA benefit recipients, and corrective measures can only be addressed through the federal court, he said. Stichman said the VVA intends to file a class-action suit on behalf of those veterans who received unfair benefit reductions. However, the VVA must first address the law that prohibits veterans from seeking judicial review.

FEDERAL LAW says that "we don't have a right to have our case heard," Stichman said.

Recycling program outlives usefulness

IT'S STRANGE HOW THE TIMES CHANGE. Attitudes and values now hardly reflect those of even eight years ago. Just look at the change of attitude of University administration toward recycling solid waste.

Eight years ago the University was firmly behind a fledgling program to recycle solid waste. The need for such a program in the environment-conscious 1970s was never really in question, at least at SIU. The only thing that had stood in the way of such a program was proper implementation.

PREVIOUS PROGRAMS HAD BEEN MOSTLY volunteer in nature, and each usually had one strong leader. When that leader lost interest or left the area, the program died. So John Meister, head of Pollution Control, set out to devise a permanent recycling program.

First step was to determine how interested the public would be in supporting the project. A poll of faculty, staff and graduate students discerned that 97 percent of those polled believed in recycling waste, and 94 percent said they would actively participate in the program. So, the support was there to launch the recycling program.

ON JULY 1, 1973, THE MAROON COLLECTION bins that students eventually became so familiar with were placed around campus. Six bins, in addition to one already in place beneath the Route 51 overpass, were available for collection of old newspapers.

Money-making was not one of the project's prime objectives. "Right now we hope to break even. If it works we can make money, not only saving money on the amount of refuse to be disposed of but making money on the refuse itself," John Meister said at the time.

Meister now says the program is losing money because of the declining market value of waste products. Prices have dropped from a peak of $65 per ton to the current low of $10 per ton. As a result, hauling the paper to a recycling center costs more than SIU gets from the sale.

THE CITY HAS HAD SIMILAR PROBLEMS, and recently lost its recycling contractor, Don McWhorter, who said gathering the papers cost his company more than the paper was worth. Both McWhorter and the University have placed the service at the vagaries of the economy.

So both the city and the University now have no recycling programs. Maybe it would make too much sense for the two to consider some joint venture in the recycling field. By combining the two operations, surely the cost of hauling the papers would be better handled jointly than separately.

And there are certain feel-good aspects to such an undertaking. The public feels good about supporting worthwhile projects, and recycling is certainly a worthwhile project. By supporting recycling, the city, University and public are kept environmentally conscious.

BESIDES THE LONG-TERM COSTS TO THE environment from failure to recycle wastes, there are, once again, economic problems to be considered. Such as the cost of hauling the papers off to a landfill. There are no current figures for such an operation, since that kind of hauling has not been done for eight years, but in 1975 it cost the University about $118,000 to haul away its paper.

About 100 tons of paper was collected by Pollution Control last year. The University could make $1,000 from the sale of this paper, instead of just throwing it away. Or it could save the papers until market rates return to previous levels, placing them in a proper storage facility, such as a pole barn in place of the existing overstuffed trailers. Storing the paper will surely cost less than hauling it to a landfill.

CONSIDER THE PROBLEMS OF DUMPING THE papers in a landfill. For one, you considerably shorten the life of the landfill. And there is only so much land that can be used for landfill purposes.

But what the heck. This is the 1980s. Forget the environment. As Clarence "Doc" Dougherty, vice president for campus services, says, "it was a good program, very strongly supported, but it has outlived its usefulness."

This means that we will lose a very important service as we cave in to the throw-away society of the 80s, and lose sight of our moral responsibility to those who will inherit this Earth. No matter what the cost.

Freedom fighters at it again

Congress has every right to be proud of itself. And we have every right to be proud of Congress. The Contras, those brave freedom fighters so near and dear to our hearts, have proven that Congress did not misplace their trust and that they are deserving of the faith we have in them. Not even thirty hours after the approval of $100 million in aid, our courageous Contras set out on another daring sortie in order to advance the aims of re-establishing the values of the "True Revolution" — the values of the revolution that have been usurped by the Sandinistas.

Yes, under the fatherly guidance of their ex-Sorroza leaders (in whose hearts still burn bright the values of the True Revolution, which they fought against, our brave seekers of truth, justice and freedom stealthily crossed the border to engage the enemy.

These moral equivalents of our founding fathers entered a state-run cattle farm in the Boaco province, made efficient use of their "humanitarian aid" and quickly "neutralized" a peasant farmer whose misguided life had of late been taken up with raising cattle for the Nicaraguan people under the direction of the Sandinistas. And with no qualms about displaying their heartfelt unity with the Nicaraguan people, and with a strong sense of the values enshrined in the phrase "and with justice for all" they proceeded, in true democratic fashion, to "neutralize" the farmer's four daughters as well, two of whom were children under the age of twelve. No doubt these two children felt a strong sense of gratitude for being exposed to the true sense of freedom and democracy at such a young age, even if it only lasted a moment.

Yes, our brave freedom fighters have once again proven that they are worth their salt and deserve every dollar of aid we send them (even if most of it ends up in Caribbean bank accounts) in support of their efforts to free the Nicaraguan people.

So the next time President Reagan (he's a Contra, too!) asks Congress for $100, $200, or even $400 million in aid for these admirable chaps, Congress should undoubtedly approve it without reservation. And any misguided congressman who feels the slightest twinge of conscience at funding the brutal slaughter of Nicaraguan peasants need only be reminded that "If you don't stand with the President on this one, you stand with the Soviets." That should allay their qualms. — Darrell Johnson, graduate student, Philosophy.

Catering to baby boomers important

The fact that SIU has failed to provide a permanent home for Rainbow's End, the day care facility for faculty, staff and students, is short-sighted and just plain bad business.

Elementary marketing teaches us that to be successful, organizations need to define their potential customers, determine their needs and find ways to meet those needs. SIU, by not committing itself to a permanent facility for Rainbow's End, may well be closing itself out of a vast potential market — the baby boom generation.

As the pool of 18 to 25 year old students dwindles, the number of baby boomers returning to school increases. Some of these men and women never had a chance to go to school at 18, and now are in a position to finance a college education. Some older students wish to finish a degree that was interrupted, while some are returning for advanced degrees to enhance career growth.

A student over 30 does not have the same needs as an 18 year old. A primary need for many "returning" men and women is day care for their children. In fact, this is one factor that is taken into consideration when choosing which school to attend. If the University is to remain competitive in recruiting older students, it is going to have to recognize their different needs.

A high-quality pre-school is a winning proposition for everyone. Rainbow's End has proven this by providing excellent care through the efforts of a highly qualified staff. It also provides a tremendous learning facility for student workers involved in a variety of fields ranging from early childhood education, developmental psychology, art and music to physical education.

Come on, administrators at SIU. Perhaps you, too, should return to school and brush up on some marketing principles. Lifelong education is gaining momentum. — Deb Connelley, graduate assistant, Business Administration.

Sandinistas devoted to destroying democracy

What is a Sandinista? To read and listen to leftist tripe, one gets the idea that they are romantic warriors. The Managua regime has demeaned the name of their patron, Cesar Augusto Sandino. This fervent nationalist was opposed to all forms of foreign intervention by international Marxism as well as Yankeeism. He was for independence and emancipation. The one similarity that he shared with Managua is the destruction of the Miskito Indian.

In 1981, La Prensa reported that Comandante Humberto Ortega, minister of defense, told his subordinates that "Marxist-Leninism is the scientific doctrine that guides our revolution. We cannot be Marxist-Leninists without Sandinismo and without Marxist-Leninism Sandinismo cannot be revolutionary. Our doctrine is Marxist-Leninism."

Tomas Borge, the minister of interior, stated in a 1983 Playboy interview that he was a Communist. According to a 1984 Newsweek article he said, "you cannot be a true revolutionary in Latin America without being a Marxist-Leninist." Borge controls the feared turbas, divinas or "divine mobs" composed of Sandinista thugs used by the government to raid Catholic churches, break up political rallies and harass opponents of the regime. The turbas were used to intimidate potential voters for opposition presidential candidate Arturo Cruz before the 1984 elections. This contributed to Cruz's decision not to run for president.

Obviously the Sandinistas are not Sandinistas but a barbaric Soviet-installed puppet government devoted to the destruction of democracy. It didn't stop with Cuba and won't stop with Nicaragua. — Jeff Thomason, Murphysboro.

Funding can't buy reputation

Hurray to MAPP, Matthew Meighan and the others surely to follow suit in their condemnation of the SDI (Star Wars) research beginning at SIU-C.

Concerning Dr. Harold G. Richard's letter to the editor which Mr. Hughel's and MAPP's comments regarding the 60 per cent of chemistry and physics faculty pledges of refusal of SDI grants as "outright lies or gross distortions" and lacking in credible evidence, I refer him to the Wall Street Journal front-page article entitled "Conscience Crisis," by Clare Ansberry (July 1986).

In that article, in what is surely considered by most to be a conservative newspaper, it is reported that more than half of the faculty members at our nation's top 20 physics departments have signed pledges disavowing SDI grant monies. Also, more than 1,600 scientists and engineers from almost 100 government and industrial laboratories have petitioned Congress to curb SDI financing. The Union of Concerned Scientists has consistently opposed SDI research from both a fiscal and technical tack.

Further, unease in defense work in general is reported among scientists and engineers who may not belong to any special interest group. Polling its 10,000 members last year, the Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers, a mainstream professional group, found a third of them strongly factor in nonmilitary assignments in job change decisions.

Groups are emerging such as the Center for Economic Conversion, Peacework Alternatives, High Technology Professionals For Peace, and Computer Professionals For Social Responsibility which are addressing the ethical issues involved in defense work.

To label SIU-C a first-rate institution under the guise of academic freedom because two faculty members have no ethical or scientific qualms about funding their graduate students, embellishing their laboratories with new equipment, advancing their careers with scientific publications, and supplementing their teaching salaries is to do disservice to the central issue of SDI research. That issue is that SDI simply will involve far too many human and other resources in its inception, and will not work in actuality. So much for first-rate research endeavors.

Let this institution not fall prey to any and all financial inducements in order to advance the reputation of itself or its research community. Although much can be said about the merits of "pure research" and its many humanitarian benefits, in this instance, the faculty directive could well be "Publish and Perish!" — Valeri DeCastris, former SIU researcher.

Culture-blind

This letter is in response to Scott Parker's letter on July 23. Mr. Parker refers to Carbondale as a "cultural wasteland." Just because he attended one free concert with one admittedly bad band, he feels that he has the right to brand us a "cultural wasteland."

Coming from the land of wine coolers and skateboards, I know you must find it difficult to believe that we may have qualities that arise from an interest in excellence. We have several excellent stage companies in the area, not to mention McLeod Theater. What is culture to a Southern Californian may not be culture to an Illinoisian, but we offer a vibrant cultural scene in Carbondale, Illinois, and Little Grand.

The University and community have been working closely together to provide a free activity where people can gather and relax.

Just because we have a few bad bands down here, why should we be cursed? Are all the bands in Southern California excellent? Does that make Southern Californians cultured? No, Mr. Parker, you keep your generalizations. And I'll keep my Southern Illinois culture! — Karol Abrams, Carbondale.

Respect other opinions Will SDI be boondoggle?

I have read a lot of letters in the DE over the past three years. Some deserved praise and I came close to saying so. Others served no purpose and I came close to saying so, too. The latter type is written by people whom I wonder have any common sense. So, to these people, I dedicate my views.

To all of you who are trying to tell others how to live their lives, mind your own business. Don't agree with abortion? Fine. I respect your opinion, but don't impose your views on others. The same goes for those against birth control.

Freedom fighters? Get out of town! Read my lips: guerillas. Heck, even Reagan called them "Contras" once. By the way, they'll never overthrow the Sandinistas.

To all these groups that do nothing but protest everything the University says or decides, and are known for their frequent rallies, why not do something positive, such as helping the school get rid of its party image? Start working toward the elimination of the Halloween mess, which some dare to call "tradition."

Before closing, I would like to make a suggestion, something which has been touched on previously. Could the DE possibly publish daily baseball standings, plus scores and scheduled games? How about weekly football standings? It can't be that much trouble, can it? I mean more variety. Chicago is not the only city in the United States that has sports. — Bernardo A. Albarracin, graduate assistant, Mining Engineering.

In reply to Harold Richard's reply to me in the July 25 DE, I think a dialogue on the SDI question is a healthy exercise of freedom of speech. I would like to exercise that freedom to question further the wisdom of SIU accepting SDI research, not to attack anyone's academic freedom.

As for the choice of MAD or SDI, it is really not that choice at all: SDI is part and parcel of MAD. I do not accept the administration newspeak about SDI—I do not believe it is purely a defensive system, nor that it would save lives, nor even work. And meanwhile, from the same people who gave us the $700 toilet seat, we can buy a trillion dollar boondoggle. Why is it that Reagan and like-minded politicians consider it unthinkable to put a trillion dollars into providing adequate housing or food for our citizens, or even those of the world, but are eager to spend it on weapons?

I've made my main points and I think Professor Richard's probable answer to this will make his. Let's hear some other points of view. — M. Lionel Bender, chairman, Anthropology.

Ballet and modern dance are different

My classmates and I are writing about the article printed in the July 17 DE concerning the Ballet Workshop.

After reading the article, we questioned its purpose. It was supposed to cover the ballet workshop directed by Maggi Cortez. Instead, the article briefly and incorrectly focused on a comparison of ballet and modern dance and seemed to imply that most anyone can become a professional dancer. While educated dancers will realize that the article was a misrepresentation of dance, non-dancers will not only be confused, but misinformed.

In order to write an article comparing ballet to modern dance, one would need to obtain a more thorough background in dance. The writer's brief and incorrect discussion of this comparison clearly showed inadequate study to the informed dancer.

Also, one must realize that serious ballet dancing requires dedication, desire and most of all discipline. It is not something that anyone at any age can begin and expect to get into a professional company.

We, the students of the ballet workshop, would like the readers to know that ballet is the basis from which all types of dance (jazz, modern, tap, etc.) begin. The art of dance has its roots in its most classic form—ballet.

It is unfortunate that the writer did not mention the fact that this was the first ballet workshop (complete with an accompanist) held at SIU. We also wonder why she did not discuss the fact that through Maggi Cortez, ballet has become a more prominent focus among the dancers here at SIU.

In summary, it is apparent that the reporter, Mary Wisniewski, did not spend enough time at the workshop in order to obtain a clear understanding of it. — Melissa Joy Dobbins, Colette Tangel, Kristen Sherrard and GERALYN Brossart, students of the ballet workshop.

SDI will be deterrent

For some time I have followed MAPP, and their latest decision to protest the grants given to the two researchers, Stelios Thomopoulos and Ramanara Viswanathan, has been the most entertaining.

SDI stands for Strategic Defense Initiative folks, not offense, and is supposed to be a deterrent. Tim Larson insists that this research will make the world a more frightening place. I'm sorry, Tim, but I believe this will deter the Soviets from moving "their trigger finger more nervously toward the button." It is known, although not widely, that the Soviets have been developing their own strategic defense plan for some time, and are much further ahead than we are. If you believe that they will stop researching theirs if we don't even start ours, you are sadly mistaken and very naive. Soon they won't be so nervous about pushing the button.

You also seem very pessimistic. If the Star Wars system, as you call it, fails, many will die. But as the Soviets become more confident in a nuclear war, many more will die without it. Show some pride and faith in not just two men from your school, but others who are trying to save millions of lives.

Maybe you know that SDI will fail before research has begun, but I am certainly glad that great researchers of the past didn't have the same mentality. — Michael Johnson, sophomore, Business Administration.

Megabucks gives audience pop music with blues twist

By Maureen Cavanagh
Entertainment Editor

Megabucks is into money for jam. The new Carbondale band, formed in March, is ready to hit the music scene and give listeners a show. Megabucks plays Top-40 tunes combined with a blues twist. The group plays songs by artists such as the Rolling Stones, ZZ Top, Dire Straits and Heart.

The group — vocalists Linda West and James Barnes, lead and rhythm guitarist Grant Morgan, bass guitarist Leo Maslowski and drummer Jose Orlando — is highly charismatic and energetic.

MOST IMPORTANTLY and obviously, the band is talented. The members are not a run-of-the-mill college band, although they play popular and timely songs. Instead, they perform the music with a very different style, which almost reverts to traditional rock and pop.

Orlando, 32, is a native of Honduras. He is a self-taught drummer and says he is eager to promote Megabucks and establish the band. Maslowski, 24, of Chicago, is also optimistic and says he wants to perform more songs. Maslowski currently plays solos like "Sultans of Swing" by Dire Straits and ZZ Top's "Sharp Dressed Man."

MORGAN SAYS the band entertains loudly, "but not so that it drives everybody out the door."

Morgan says the band is striving for a "super sound." He was a guitarist in the rhythm-and-blues band Dr. Bombay, and he and Barnes started the infamous funk band James and the James in 1982.

BARNES, WHO IS from Carbondale, has been playing with Big Larry and the Cold Blues for about two years and also worked in the St. Louis rhythm-and-blues band New Frontier.

Barnes played with Megabucks for the first time Friday. He says now that he's joined the group, he wants to play a lot of dance music, and bring in more songs.

Morgan said, "It takes time for a band to figure out what it's trying to say. Then you can best figure out how to dress, light and mix."

WILSON HAS played in Black Diamond and Robbin's rhythm-and-blues bands in his native Chicago. He says that when people buy albums, they usually buy a variety.

It's the same with Megabucks, he says, in that "the music is versatile. We play a lot of songs. We play rock'n'roll, funk, jazz and blues, plus, we put on a show. We come out into the crowd and almost sit in somebody's lap with it."

CARBONDALE HAS "the perfect audience," he adds.

West says, "Each person has an idea of what type of material they want to do, so we'll bring in the tape or record and listen to it, and if everyone agrees on doing that song, or if they see it as one to add to the list, then we all learn our part."

West, 27, said she started singing in her father's country band in her native Jamestown, N.Y. "There was always country music being played around the house, so that's where my musical roots are, although I like all types of music," she says. She also was lead vocalist in a Top-40 band Sudden Impact.

WEST ADDS THAT the audience response to Megabucks has been great. "The crowds are wonderful, real appreciative and supportive of what we are doing."

The group plans to cut an album in the future, when more original songs are created. "It's the way to go," says Wilson, who writes, along with Morgan Barnes, West and Maslowski.

WILSON, 29, started playing bass when he was 13 years old, and played professionally with a band when 14, dropping out of high school for awhile and moving to Joliet.

He says that although someone helped him with the fundamentals of the instrument, "It was mostly me watching and learning and listening to records. I was lucky. I remember when I couldn't play at all and I started crying. I couldn't play a note."

MORGAN, 26, moved to Carbondale from Springfield when he was seven or eight. He taught himself how to play guitar when he was 15. "I learned the chords in about a year, and God blessed me with a good ear," he says.

Morgan says he also listened to musicians performing upright. "I hung out on the Strip because I was 6-foot-2 at that time and weighed 180 pounds," he said.

He says he watched a keyboard, drum and trumpet player, named T Hart play. "T Hart knew every song, and I said, 'That's what I want to do.'"

'One Day at a Time' useful as flyswatter, not as book

By David Sheets
Staff Writer

People easily entertained by literature similar to the diary entries of an anti-social debutante will be enthralled by "One Day at a Time," the biography of country gospel songstress Cristy Lane.

Chock full of photos and hype, "One Day at a Time" recounts the average life of an average woman who is trying desperately to reach celebrity status more through media exposure than her singing ability.

Pointless symbolism was used by the writer — Lee Stollar, Cristy's husband — in an effort to make the book into something it is not: interesting.

FOR EXAMPLE, the book notes Cristy's birth arriving "on Elvis' birthday" in Peoria "on the wrong side of the tracks." No further explanation of these two coincidences, however, is provided.

Stollar laments the "two strikes against Cristy" from her childhood that supposedly should have discounted her from reaching fame, "poverty and shyness," which Stollar appears to rate above drug addiction and AIDS as killers of celebrity status.

WORSE THAN THE book's endless list of adjectives and adverbs geared to put a luster on Cristy's drab existence are the 150-plus photographs, made up of mostly black and white snapshots that probably came straight out of Cristy's family album.

Cristy Lane

Book Review

Cristy's mug, resplendent with mechanical smile, ranks high among the number of pictures. This repetitiveness makes the handsome woman look nauseating by book's end.

As a courtesy to the reader hungry for more at the book's conclusion, Stollar includes a few family recipes and order forms for Cristy Lane albums, T-shirts and dolls.

SO WHAT IS IT that would make "One Day at a Time" sell "over 500,000 copies to date," according to a press release from Cristy Lane Enterprises, Inc.?

Is it the avalanche of television commercials of Cristy lip-synching to her own songs in order to sell her records? Perhaps. After all, she was named 1979 Top Female Artist of the Year by the Academy of Country Music.

Is it because Cristy usually packs the house when she performs? Never mind that the house probably has no more than 1,700 seats and no air conditioning.

IS IT BECAUSE Stollar not only wrote the book but manages Cristy's career and seems to define success by the number of items he can sell each day with her name on them?

Answers: probably, probably and definitely. But let us not forget two other distinct possibilities.

First, purchasing the book off a bookstore shelf is next to impossible. Those copies that have found their way into society got there through free donations to unsuspecting book reviewers.

ANOTHER REASON, and this is probably the most important, is that the book has a textured, hard-cover jacket that looks expensive and covers up greasy fingerprints. As the oft-used saying goes, you can't judge a book by its cover. But people do anyway and this book cover looks classy.

Purchasing "One Day at a Time" for the purpose of reading is a waste. Buy the book and use it to swat bugs. The expensive jacket wipes off clean and won't stain.

Packrats put on endangered species list

By Nancy A. Garner
Student Writer

As part of a continuing research project, Jack Nawrot goes hunting for shotgun shell casings — not to find the casings, but to find the packrats that collect them.

A drastic decline in the population of the packrat, also known as the woodrat, in Southern Illinois and its being put on the endangered species list has led Nawrot, a researcher in the Cooperative Wildlife Research Laboratory, to investigate the situation.

The lab started an investigation that found a decline in the population of the packrats in Union and Jackson counties.

The investigation found a population of 300 packrats. Nawrot, who came to the lab in 1972, completed his own follow-up study to determine the status of the packrat population and found it had declined to 50 to 100.

The packrat was once widely prevalent in Southern Illinois, but has been on the decline for the past 80 to 100 years.

The lab applied for a grant from the Illinois Department of Conservation's Endangered Species Protection board in April to continue its research.

Livengood remains loyal to SIU-C

By Steve Merritt
Assistant Sports Editor

SIU-C athletics director Jim Livengood ended the suspense by withdrawing his candidacy for the AD position at the University of Wyoming.

"I came here eight months ago to accomplish a lot of things," Livengood said, "and I don't think we've even scratched the surface of what there is to be done yet."

Livengood was one of four finalists until late Thursday night, when he called David Baker, special assistant to Wyoming President Don Veal, and told him that he was withdrawing his name from consideration.

On Friday, Paul Roach was hired as Wyoming's new AD. Roach, a former Wyoming and NFL assistant football coach, had been executive director of Wyoming's booster club, the Cowboy Joe Club.

Livengood said his decision came after several hours on the phone with his family and parents, who he said "were a great help."

As one of the finalists, Livengood visited Wyoming's campus during his interview. He would not talk with the press during the past week, causing speculation whether he would be staying at SIU-C.

"I think a lot more was made of this than was appropriate."

Livengood said. Livengood said he felt his loyalty to SIU-C should not be in question.

"If I were not loyal to SIU, then I wouldn't have withdrawn," Livengood said. "If the people who were questioning my loyalty really knew the way I felt, it would be different — then they would know I'm dedicated to making the programs here the best they can possibly be."

Livengood says he didn't think the recent controversy would hurt his image or the SIU-C fundraising efforts.

"I certainly don't think it will hurt," Livengood said. "I would think the department is more important than Jim Livengood and I wouldn't think that my presence here would be that impactful on that aspect."

Although speculation indicated that Livengood was unhappy because of unspecified commitments that have not been kept by President Albert Soritt, Livengood said that was not the case. "The only commitment I'm looking for are from the student athletes and the staff," he said. "Providing the type of athletic department this University desires is a tough job and we all have to work together."

According to Livengood, his family will be coming to Carbondale on Aug. 14 or 15 and he would like to settle down and put all the controversy behind him.

"I think all the time spent on this issue could have been spent in a more productive manner," Livengood said. "I'm glad it's all over — now we can all get to work."

Livengood says the controversy has in no way changed his plans for the athletics department.

"We'll still go the way everything has been planned," he said. "We have a pretty good base to work with but we need to develop in almost every aspect of the departments."

Bradley players back Versace

PEORIA, Ill. (UPI) — Bradley University basketball players are urging the school president to reconsider firing Coach Dick Versace at the end of next season and warned some may transfer unless Versace returns.

Versace was given a one-year contract that will not be renewed following the 1986-87 season because school officials said he misled NCAA investigators looking into recruiting violations. The NCAA restricted Bradley basketball coaches from making recruiting trips for one year and banned the team from postseason play for one year for breaking NCAA rules.

The NCAA also criticized Versace for trying to "conceal his involvement" in the violations, which included airfare for a player's parents and the use of cars for the player.

In a letter to Bradley President Martin Abegg, team co-captains Trevor Trimpe and Hersey Hawkins, writing for the team, urge Abegg to reconsider firing Versace because he "has been a positive influence not only on our athletic lives but also on our academic lives and our pursuit of a degree from Bradley."

Versace, who left for Italy July 14 when the NCAA penalties were announced, was expected to hold a news conference this week.

Tribble surrenders to Maryland authorities

UPPER MARLBORO, Md (UPI) — The man believed to have supplied the fatal dose of cocaine to University of Maryland basketball star Len Bias surrendered to authorities Friday, officials said.

A spokesman for the Prince George's County sheriff's office said Brian Tribble, 24, a longtime friend of Bias, was placed in the custody of a court commissioner and held on a $250,000 bond.

An attorney for Tribble said he planned to request a hearing in an attempt to get a lower bond. Tribble's arraignment is set for Friday, and unless his bond is met he will remain incarcerated, spokesman Irv Smith said.

Tribble is charged with possession and distribution of cocaine and of the hallucinogenic drug PCP. He and two others were indicted Friday in connection with the death of Bias.

"We began discussions with Mr. Tribble's parents and his lawyer, Tom Morrow, on Friday," Smith said. "We told his lawyer we thought it would be better if his client turned himself in."

Smith said Morrow agreed, but Tribble was missing all weekend.

Four intramural champions are crowned in softball

By Peter Rechenberg
Staff Writer

The temperature was hot with the mercury climbing into the mid-90's, but the action was even hotter during the Intramural Softball Championships Thursday at the Arena Playing Fields.

Four champions were crowned Thursday: Mentalmango in the men's 12-inch division; the Drunken Bums in men's 16-inch; The Zoo I in co-rec 12-inch; and the Bubble Bath in co-rec 16-inch.

In the championship game of men's 12-inch, the Mentalmango rallied for four runs in the bottom of the sixth inning to defeat Pinch Penny Pub, 6-5. The Mentalmango strung together five consecutive hits and a sacrifice fly in the inning to win the game.

The rally started with a lead off double by Kurt Martin, who later scored on a RBI single by Bill Danielak to cut the deficit to 5-3. The Mentalmango tied the game on Steve Kers' RBI single and Greg Buck's bases-loaded walk, before Pete Clayton's sacrifice fly scored Chris Dunek with the game-winning run.

In the men's 16-inch championship game, The Drunken Bums rallied from a 5-2 deficit to defeat Pinch Penny Pub, 11-5.

The Drunken Bums scored three runs in the bottom of the second on a three-run homer by Mike Ferrari to tie the game at 5-5, and took the lead for good by scoring two runs in the third inning.

A bases-loaded, three-run double by Tom Evans in the fifth inning iced the game for the Drunken Bums.

Drunken Bums pitcher Patrick Perino was able to stop the Pinch Penny Pub attack by having a 10- to 20-foot arc on his pitches.

"I noticed that the batters can't hit the ball solid when it has a high arch," Perino said. "The follow throw is the key for me and I'm able to control the pitch."

In co-rec 12-inch finals, The Zoo I routed the Pingers 23-9. The Pingers scored three runs in the first inning, but The Zoo I came back with 10 first-inning runs, four coming on a grand slam by Jeff Best, to take a 10-3 lead.

"I just tried to hit the ball as hard as I could and as solid as I could and I got a grand slam," Best said.

The Zoo I increased its lead to 17-3 by scoring seven runs in the second, before the Pingers scored four runs in the top of the third to cut the lead to 17-7. The Zoo I secured the victory by scoring six runs in the bottom of the third to increase its lead to 23-7.

"It's great and it's been a long time coming," said Mike McGrath, captain of The Zoo I, on winning the championship. "Most of this team has been together since '91st fall and it's nice to finally win."

In the championship game of co-rec 16-inch, Bubble Bath tamed The Zoo, 7-6.

Bubble Bath was sparked offensively by left-center fielder Dennis Drabza, who was three-for-three and winning pitcher Dave Buchanan, who was two-for-three with two RBI.

"It was definitely a team effort," said Bubble Bath team captain Allison Boyd.

Buddy Goldammer, the coordinator of intramural sports, was happy with the number of people who participated in softball this summer.

"The teams showed excellent sportsmanship and there was a lot of party between the teams," he said.

"The tournament ran very smoothly and it was a lot of fun."

Liberty signs with JALC, remains close to SIU-C

By Steve Merritt
Assistant Sports Editor

Darryl Liberty, who signed a letter of intent to play basketball for SIU-C but did not meet academic requirements, decided Saturday to attend John A. Logan College in the fall.

A 6-foot-5 swingman from Chicago King High School, Liberty sat out his senior year last season due to IHSAA age requirements. Even though he signed a letter of intent with SIU-C, Coach Rich Herrin had said he would consider it a bonus if Liberty met NCAA academic requirements to play for the Salukis in the fall.

Howser gets released from hospital

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Kansas City Royals Manager Dick Howser, who is to begin radiation treatment this week for a malignant brain tumor, was released from the hospital Monday.

Howser was released from St. Luke's Hospital at noon, said Dean Vogelaar, spokesman for the Royals.

"He feels well, looks well, continues to be positive and upbeat," said Vogelaar. "He's a little bit tired. He has to pace himself."

On Tuesday, Howser will begin radiation therapy daily five times a week for about five weeks, said Vogelaar.

The 50-year-old manager of the 1985 World Champion Royals was released from the hospital earlier than expected. Doctors said Friday they had expected Howser would remain in the hospital for about another week.

"Dick is strong," said Vogelaar. "He's reacted well to everything they've done to him."

Vogelaar reiterated the Howser family's appreciation for the support they have received.

'Uh oh...;' Co-pilot utters last record of shuttle crew

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The shuttle Challenger's crew probably survived at least several seconds after the spaceship's explosion Jan. 28 and evidence indicates some astronauts activated emergency air supplies in a desperate but futile bid for life, NASA said Monday.

Six months to the day after Challenger's flaming demise, the space agency held a news conference to announce that the cause of death of the Challenger Seven cannot be positively determined.

The space agency released transcripts of intercom recordings made of crew conversations during launch and as expected, the conversations show the astronauts were unaware of their impending doom until the moment of the explosion, 73 seconds after blastoff, when co-pilot Michael Smith exclaimed: "Uh oh..." The recorder stopped at that point.

Rear Adm. Richard Truly, chief of the shuttle program, revealed the results of an analysis conducted by Joseph Kerwin, a former astronaut and director of life sciences at the Johnson Space Center in Houston.

"The findings are inconclusive," Kerwin said. "The impact of the crew compartment with the ocean surface was so violent that evidence of damage occurring in the seconds which followed the explosion was masked. Our final conclusions are:

"The cause of death of the Challenger astronauts cannot be positively determined; the forces to which the crew were exposed during orbiter breakup were probably not sufficient to cause death or injury, and the crew possibly, but not certainly, lost consciousness in the seconds following orbiter breakup due to in-flight loss of crew module pressure."

Kerwin said the astronauts may have survived up to 10 seconds or longer even with decompression and he could not rule out the possibility the shuttle fliers survived, albeit unconscious, all the way to ocean impact.

"We could not exclude that possibility with definite data," he said.

Truly said family members were notified of the findings in the last several days. None were immediately available for comment.

Challenger was destroyed 73 seconds after blastoff Jan. 28 when a rupture in its right-side solid-fuel booster triggered the explosion of the shuttle's external fuel tank.

Shultz talks with Soviets; summit agreement nears

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State George Shultz and a top Kremlin official met Monday for talks on U.S.-Soviet relations and a U.S. official said agreement was near on a higher level meeting before a second superpower summit.

Alexandr Bessmertnykh, Soviet deputy foreign minister, spent almost four hours at the State Department, meeting Shultz for about an hour on his third day of meetings with department officials.

A senior department official said, "We're getting a fully close" to setting a date for a meeting between Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze. But there was "absolutely no change" in the lack of agreement on a date for the second summit between President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, the official said.

The Shultz-Shevardnadze meeting, held up for months, is expected to be held in September when both men are in New York for the U.N. General Assembly session. It is seen as the major forum for preparing for the second Reagan-Gorbachev summit.

Details were scarce on the meetings with Bessmertnykh, one of the Kremlin's top experts on the United States, but State Department officials said the "standard agenda" of issues dividing the superpowers came up, including arms control and regional conflicts, which could also be the agenda for the Reagan-Gorbachev summit.

The talks touched on "the whole range of U.S.-Soviet relations and seeing how you can best move forward in the weeks ahead," said department spokesman Bernard Kalb.

Bessmertnykh, who headed a delegation that included Soviet Ambassador Yuli Dubinin, declined comment on the meetings as he arrived at and left the State Department. No further meetings were scheduled before he leaves for Moscow Tuesday.

Kalb noted Reagan and Gorbachev agreed at their first summit last November in Geneva to hold a second meeting this year in the United States and a third one next year in the Soviet Union. "The United States is operating on the assumption that these meetings will take place as agreed," Kalb told reporters.

Gorbachev, in a major foreign policy address Monday, said a second summit is "called upon to promote" a normalization of relations.

Alcohol usage drops this year

NEW YORK (UPI) — Americans drank less alcohol last year for the sixth year in a row and appear to be shunning the hard stuff in favor of sweet liqueurs and cordials, an annual report released Monday said.

Overall consumption of distilled spirits dropped 1.6 percent in 1985 — from 156.4 million cases in 1984 to 153.9 million cases last year, said Nicholas Furlotte, director of the annual report published by Jobson Publishing Company, a private marketing group. Furlotte said America's consumption of alcohol had risen steadily from Jobson's first report 33 years ago until 1976, when a peak 166 million cases of liquor were sold in the United States.

Since then, Americans have been drinking less hard liquor every year and Furlotte said other surveys have shown the consumption of beer and wine have levelled off as well.

The decline has been attributed to a surge of health consciousness among consumers, a crackdown on drunken driving and a 19 percent increase in the Federal Excise Tax on liquor that took effect last October.

"It's all added up," said Furlotte.

Sales of whiskey alone dropped 7.2 percent last year and tequila, gin and rum also showed losses.

Rehnquist under FBI scrutiny on charges of harassing blacks

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The FBI is investigating charges that Supreme Court chief justice nominee William Rehnquist harassed black voters in Arizona in the 1960s, Democratic aides said Monday — a day before Senate confirmation hearings begin.

The probe was requested by two Democrats on the Senate Judiciary Committee last week but the FBI said a background investigation was already under way.

The senators requested the investigation after charges resurfaced against Rehnquist concerning his role in a Republican election program in Phoenix, Ariz., where he practiced law in the early 1960s — including an alleged witness who told United Press International he saw Rehnquist personally approach two black voters in line.

"There's a fairly extensive FBI investigation under way in which the Justice Department and FBI are interviewing all persons who made allegations against Rehnquist which have not been previously investigated," a Democratic aide on the committee said Monday.

"It is essentially time to clear the air," the aide said.

An FBI spokesman said Monday the bureau was being conducting a background investigation on Rehnquist since he was nominated to be chief justice but declined to comment further.

Mark Goodin, spokesman for Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., chairman of the committee, said the FBI investigation was as "routine as a summer thunderstorm," and the committee frequently asks the FBI for last minute investigations on nominees.

A Republican source also described the Democratic request for the probe as a "stalling tactic."

Civil rights leaders later held a news conference and attacked Rehnquist as an extremist who should not be elevated to chief justice.

Sally's Dream plays a haunting, but fuzzy kind of dreamy music

By Mary Wisniewski
Staff Writer

Sally's Dream, which performed at the Sunset Concert Thursday in front of Shryock Auditorium, played a fuzzy but haunting kind of music that could have come out of anybody's dream.

The all-woman band from the latest Midwest new music hot-spot — Bloomington, Ind. — has opened for such acts as R.E.M. and Romeo Void.

Sally's Dream has released a five-song cassette called "Midnight Matinee" on the Sirius label.

Called Sally's Dream in part after a 19th century dream interpretation text called "Sally's Dream Book," the band's sound is similar to dreaming, and sometimes sleeping, in a number of ways.

Like a dream, the songs are repetitive, familiar and often slow. Solid but unadventurous, keyboardist Jenny Davis and lead guitarist Chris Dickinson stuck with basic chords in arrangements that could be bland and low in energy.

And though lead singer Cyn Hammond experimented with some stage theatrics, Davis and Dickinson stuck rigidly to their posts throughout the concert.

But also like a dream, the band produced a sound that could be hypnotic and disturbing. Singing on such subjects as the fall of the small town in "American City" and the death of Sid Vicious in "October Twelve," Hammond's sharp, fine voice flew over Dickinson's and Davis' perfect harmonies for a strangely discordant vocal sound reminiscent of '60s psychedelic groups like Jefferson Airplane.

Dickinson said although "the Dream" is an all-female group, it is not pointed in a feminist direction.

"I think our songs are, to an extent, humanistic," Dickinson said, adding that calling the group "feminist" is limiting.

Davis admits that bands like Sally's Dream and the Bangles are moving into all-male territory.

"You have to cut through a lot of garbage," Davis said. "I think by the year 2000, things won't be as difficult."

be serviceable, one is not serviceable."

"Since most beer booths cannot be serviced," the report concludes, "if (the) product runs out, it runs out, making that booth a target for frustrated celebrants."

A related concern of the committee was that large numbers of people will move their celebration outside the designated fair area to avoid the can ban.

"With plenty of cans available and little enforcement off the Strip, can throwing could cause major damage" to property in other parts of the city, the report said.

The committee adopted an alternative plan based largely on crowd dispersion to forestall potential violence at the celebration. The committee recommended that food booths and other sales booths be allowed in areas other than on Grand Avenue and that restaurants be allowed outside food sales "if such sales do not impede traffic flow."

The committee also recommended that bands and beer booths be allowed to locate near Elm and Freeman streets "to help thin the crowd and make enforcement efforts easier and quicker."

Concerns about crowd boredom were also raised by the committee. The report recommends that "diversionary activities" be allowed near beer booths and at other locations within the celebration area to entertain the thousands of revelers who will flood South Illinois and Grand avenues.

The committee suggested that a massive publicity campaign — to be paid for by liquor license holders — be mounted "to promote safety and good behavior." A similar tactic employed by the city of New Orleans has been successful.

Africa is one of the more moderate steps the United States can take to express opposition to apartheid.

Stauber, who had also spoken at the rally nine years ago, said the U.S. government could order U.S. companies out of South Africa, impose a naval blockade on the nation and sell arms to guerrillas fighting the South African government.

But, Stauber said, economic sanctions are a less radical option that could be effective in ending the government's racist policies.

Stauber said that the Reagan administration's claims that economic sanctions would do more harm than good to blacks in South Africa indicate that the administration uses "a double standard."

He said the administration did not worry about harming the people of Nicaragua and Poland when sanctions were imposed on those nations.
