Bush signs landmark disabilities bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The nation's 43 million disabled "can now pass through once closed doors into a bright new era of equality," President Bush said Thursday as he signed landmark civil rights legislation for the handicapped.

The South Lawn signing ceremony had a festive atmosphere, as 2,000 people representing major disability groups witnessed the end of their long battle to prohibit discrimination against those with physical and mental disabilities.

"Three weeks ago we celebrated our nation's Independence Day, and today we are here to rejoice in and celebrate another independence day, one that is long overdue," Bush said. "With today's signing of the landmark

The Southern Illinois Center for Independent Living in Carbondale will be the beneficiary of a $23,500 grant given by the Illinois Department of Rehabilitation Services.

IDORS is a state agency that serves people with disabilities and maintains relations with rehabilitation facilities statewide.

Melissa Skilbeck, a spokeswoman for IDORS, said 60 grants were given out statewide to community facilities. She said the money is a type of discretionary grant for people at the facilities to buy equipment, machinery, or as in SICIL's case, a lift-equipped van.

"This is one-time federal money that we are pleased to be able to distribute to community facilities. Community facilities play an important role in integrating people with disabilities into the community and workforce," Skilbeck said.

Paulette Subka, independent living specialist at SICIL, said the grant money will be "used to enhance community integrated

"Now I am signing legislation that takes a sledgehammer to another wall, one that has for too many generations separated Americans with disabilities from the freedom they could glimpse but not grasp. And once again we rejoice as this barrier falls, proclaiming together we will not accept, we will not excuse, we will not tolerate discrimination in America."

Bush addressed the business community, which has been concerned about the associated costs. Bush said this "flexible" law will provide them with a new pool of eager, loyal and competent employees.

Illinois State Comptroller visits SIU-C

By Karen Radius
Staff Writer

Illinois State Comptroller Roland W. Burris came back to SIU-C, his alma mater, to review the state's finances of the 1980s, discuss the implications for the 1990s and offer suggestions.

Burris is the democratic candidate for Illinois Attorney General.

"The factors creating a roller-coaster effect on state finance during the 1980s have set the stage for a very difficult period during the early 1990s," Burris said.

"Record surpluses have rapidly become record deficits," he said.

"When the next governor takes office in January, he will inherit a tight budget. I expect major cash-flow problems to occur during the early 1990s... The fiscal year '92 could present the toughest challenge since 1969 when the income tax was adopted," he said.

"This is a result from over-spending compounded by minimum growth, he said.

He said that in 1983, the state had to borrow $200 million and $100 million in 1987 to keep Illinois afloat.

Students rally for rights of Palestinians

By Brandi Tipps
Staff Writer

A group of SIU-C students fasted and rallied Wednesday to promote solidarity with the Palestinians of the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

The students promoted their message about the Palestinian situation by fasting from 8 a.m. until 6 p.m.

"We're sending a message to all the students and the Carbondale community about the problems in Palestine and Palestinians' rights as human beings," said Wael Gharbieh, a junior in accounting from Jaffa, Palestine.

At 6 p.m. the musical group Spitunes provided entertainment for the estimated 85 people who came out to support the event sponsored by the Mid-America Peace Project and the Palestinian Solidarity Committee.

According to the Palestinian Human Rights Information Center, Israel is the largest recipient of U.S. foreign aid. According to the center, Israel received $3.8 billion from the U.S. last year alone.

Omar Al-bishtawi, an engineering graduate student at SIU-C from Palestine, said the United States sends this money to Israel and the money goes to the purchase of weapons.

According to the PHRIC, the weapons have been used to kill 838 Palestinians in the last two years.

"I think it's very sad and tragic. Tragic because the Palestinians are suffering," said Hilmi Adas, graduate student in English from Palestine.

"At around 7 or 8 p.m. all Palestinians must be inside their homes. If they are caught outside, they are given a 21 day restriction where they must stay inside. If they have no food, they just don't eat until they can go out again," he said.

John McHale, president of MAPP, was the first of three speakers who talked about the situation in Palestine since 1967.

"They have a right to education just like we have that right, the right that we all enjoy," said McHale, graduate student in speech communication at SIU-C.

Palestinian schools have been closed by Israeli forces for the past two years, he said.

"I feel it's unjust and unfair to close the universities. Education is a basic human right," said Bareth Kilani, political science graduate student at SIU-C.

McHale said there are several actions that the American government and individuals in the United States can take to help correct the situation in Palestine.

"At the national level, use the $3.8 billion as leverage to persuade them to recognize the Palestinians' rights. Apply general economic embargoes until the situation has changed, and lastly discontinue supporting their military machine," he said.

"At the local level, individuals can write to their congressmen and express their feelings about the situation. You can work for candidates that support the

GPSC approves lower insurance rates

By Christina Hall
Staff Writer

The Graduate and Professional Student Council unanimously approved the lower rates for student medical insurance premiums that have been in effect since Tuesday.

By voting in favor of the adjusted insurance rates, the GPSC "wanted to thank Sam McVay for trying to keep them (the rates) as low as possible," said Charlie Ramsey, president of GPSC.

In May the SIU Board of Trustees adopted a resolution to increase the student medical insurance premium to $172 per semester. Rising medical insurance nationally led to the $58.50 increase in off-campus medical insurance at SIU-C and a 120 percent increase in dependent insurance, Samuel McVay, director of Student Health Program, said.

The new rates are the result of renegotiating and rebidding. A new insurance company, Accordia Collegiate Benefits, offered a lower priced basic student benefit package, said Martin J. Baggott, administrator of the Health Center.

One of the reasons SIU-C's original insurance company, Blue Cross/Blue Shield, increased their rate of the Board of Trustees, McVay

Prime seats part of proposal from Oakland area officials

San Francisco Examiner

OAKLAND — The plan to bring back the Raiders to Oakland is just the ticket for some officials here.

The latest proposal, which must be accepted by the football team, would place 100 prime football seats on reserve for members of the Alameda County Board of Supervisors, the Oakland City Council and directors of the Oakland-Alameda County Coliseum, where the team would play.

The beneficiaries largely defended the ticket arrangement, which would be worth $60,000 to $70,000 a year. A few, however, said they were unaware it was part of the proposal. Another four "luxury boxes" designated for city and county use could be worth $50,000 each.

Oakland council member Wilson Riles Jr. said the addition of 100 premium loge seats was "buried in the stack of documents, and not in the staff report" on the Raider proposal.

Riles said while it was not unprecedented for city officials to receive tickets to games — they get complimentary seats for Oakland A's and Golden State Warrior games — he was disturbed by the large number. He said most of the seats should be used for public benefit.

"I think the city and county are prepared to sell some of the seats, and some of the skyboxes in order to raise money for schools," Riles said.

But Warren Widener, an Alameda County supervisor who opposed the Raider proposal because he considers it too financially risky, saw no conflict in accepting the seats.

"We own the Coliseum," he said. "They are our seats anyway. ... We're just not leasing them to the Raiders."

Supervisor Mary King said she didn't know the seats were part of the deal, but didn't object.

"I do my best to serve the public, and if this is a courtesy offered by a sports franchise coming to the Coliseum to improve the financial benefits to the community, I have no problem with it," King said.

Don Perata, chairman of the Board of Supervisors, responded heatedly.

"It is a silly notion that 100 free tickets would be the basis to sign a deal after more than 18 months of negotiations," Perata said.

Oakland resident Frank Russo, a member of Mayor Lionel Wilson's citizens committee to help shape the latest proposal, said news of the ticket windfall "happens at a time when everyone should be happy with the effects of democracy and what the people here in Oakland have done to bring about a much better deal for the public."

The tickets and luxury boxes are public property, Russo said, and "belong to residents of the city and county and not to individual public officeholders. There ought to be publicly adopted guidelines adopted for their use and to make sure of it."

He said the citizens committee had previously recommended that three of the four luxury boxes be sold to generate money for the city and county "in light of our current financial condition where we're talking about closing hospitals and cutting other services."

Cardinals' managerial list complete

Commentary

By Bernie Miklasz
St. Louis Post-Dispatch

A lot of people are wondering: How can it take Dal Maxvill so long to find a new skipper to replace Whitey Herzog, when President Bush fills a vacancy on the Supreme Court in less than 72 hours?

Anyway, Maxvill's moment of decision is coming soon. He's assembled a slate of seven managerial candidates. He's carefully conducted interviews, asking each Whitey wannabe questions such as, "Don't you agree that spending money to sign free agents is foolish?" and "Is it really such a terrible thing to finish in last place as long as 3 million fans are coming to Busch Stadium?"

The candidates have responded with enlightened answers such as "I see no reason why I can't finish in first place next season with no third baseman and an outfield of Bernard Gilkey, Ray Lankford and Milt Thompson," and "I'd consider it a rewarding challenge to manage a team like the 1962 Mets, and I want to introduce Jose Magrane to this woodoo give I met in Dominican League baseball."

Since I've been known to place an occasional $10 bet on a racehorse, it might be fun to handicap the Magnificent Seven, one of whom will become the next Cardinals manager.

The post parade consists of Joe Torre, Hal Lanier, Pat Corrales, Gene Tenace, Don Baylor, Gaylen Pitts, Mike Jorgensen.

First, some background. Except for Baylor, each man has something in common. They're either (1) Maxvill's buddy, (2) Maxvill's former

Schmidt a tough player to stop

SEATTLE (UPI) — Given a second chance to compete for the Goodwill Games gold medal, the United States basketball team spent Thursday trying to figure out what to do with Oscar Schmidt.

"I played against Schmidt last year," said Syracuse forward Billy Owens, "and I learned that when the man is hot you can't stop him unless you foul him."

Despite the attention given the United States and Soviet Union on the basketball floor at the Games, the Brazilians have become favorites for the gold medal.

The Americans face Brazil in the semifinals Friday and the Soviets meet Yugoslavia.

Preparations for those games took place Thursday on a light day at the Games — one in which nine medals were at stake on the final evening of track and field.

Teams from the Soviet Union and China met for the women's volleyball gold medal and the Soviets faced the Americans in baseball.

Entering Thursday night's events, the United States led the medal list with 92 — 35 of which were gold.

The Soviet Union had 28 gold medals among its 81 total.

As competition slowed down near the end of the first full week of the Games, organizers said they had found no problems because of the walk-out by 40 employees aimed to distribute results.

"The only difference is that some of us are working longer hours," said Leslie King, in charge of public relations for the United States boxing federation. "But everything that needs to be done will be done without any problem."

The race for the basketball gold has turned out to be one of the most interesting competitions of the Games because of the twists that took place during the round-robin portion that ended Thursday night.

On the first day, the Soviets had trouble against Italy and the Americans had trouble against Puerto Rico. The Soviets then defeated the United States, the Americans overwhelmed Italy and the Puerto Ricans surprised the Soviet Union.

Junk car turns into attraction for divers

By Todd Gardner
Staff Writer

When it came time for Peter Carroll, faculty adviser for the Egyptian Divers scuba club, to retire his car he had driven for 16 years, he didn't take it to the junk yard — he sank it.

The Gray Ghost, a 1968 Olds Delta 88, became the latest addition to the bottom of strip pit section owned by Ed's Underwater Education Corp. The organization was formed a 18 months ago to purchase an area so that scuba fanatics would have a place to dive.

"It's a fitting resting place for it," Carroll said, who has been diving in the pit since 1972.

Before sinking, the gas tank was removed and the engine and transmission were washed with high pressure steam to remove anything that might be a contaminant, said Chris Bachman, president of Egyptian Divers.

The car was floated into position with the aid of seven divers and nine 55 gallon drums before the faucets attached to the drums were opened by divers.

"Once it got past 10 feet it went on its own," said Bachman, "It dropped level which was the goal."

The car joins a sail boat already sunk in the pit to provide objects of interest to swim around and attract fish.

"Within minutes of us putting the car down there, two big bluegills moved into it," Carroll said, adding that the club doesn't allow spear fishing. "We like to look at fish, play with them and feed them."

Carroll said it was lawsuit against the coal company for accidents in their pits that led to the barring of scuba diving in the pit in 1987 and prompted a group of divers to purchase 40 acres of it and 20 acres of joining land.

Now the club's roughly 30 members pay a fee to use the 30-foot-deep lake, which is near Pickneyville.

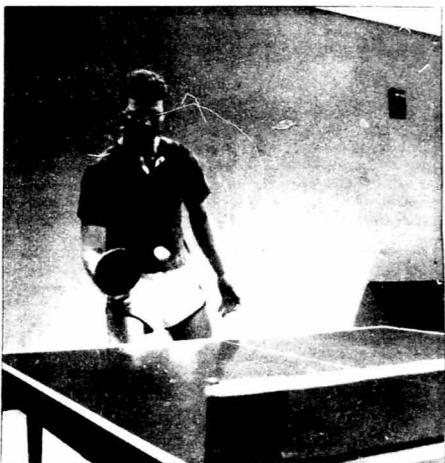

State and federally managed lakes in the area don't allow divers to use them citing safety reasons.

"It's an extremely safe activity for people who have the training," Carroll said.

"The people who have gotten involved with the club over the years have been very dedicated, very safety conscious and very well trained," Carroll added.

The club meets at 6 p.m. every Wednesday at Pulliam 23 to work on diving skills and offer training to uncertified divers.

But most club members get their training through the courses offered by the University's physical education department, as well as their first exposure to the sport.

Celtics' guard surplus a confusing situation

By Kevin McNamara
Providence Journal

WELLESLEY, Mass. — The Boston Celtics' backcourt will be a bit crowded, especially at the point guard position, when the team's training camp opens in October.

First in line to claim Dennis Johnson's former job is John Bagley, who disappointed Celtics management with weight problems and inconsistent play in his first season in Boston.

Another contender is Charles Smith, whose exploits at Georgetown are fresher in most fans' minds than those during his rookie year, since he spent much of the season anchored to Jimmy Rodgers' bench.

If those two falter, the job will be available for first-round draft choice Dee Brown of Jacksonville.

There are also unanswered questions about Johnson and Brian Shaw.

Johnson, a player who has epitomized Celtics Pride the last decade, is being hung out to dry this offseason. He is an unrestricted free agent and free to cut a deal with any NBA club. The Celtics would re-sign Johnson only if problems with Bagley, Smith or Brown develop.

Celtics management still says publicly they want Shaw back in the lineup, although the chance of that happening grows slimmer by the day.

As insurance, this week's free-agent camp was flooded with the athletic, quick guards the Celtics want. Michael Anderson (of Drexel), Curtis Taylor (Jacksonville), Carrick DeHart (Cal-Santa Barbara) and Everette Stephens (Purdue) competed for an invitation to training camp.

The heavy competition for both roster spots and playing time has all players concerned, although they might not be saying so.

"I don't concern myself with that," Bagley said of the high point guard population. "I'm not done yet."

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — President Frederik de Klerk held an urgent meeting Thursday night with black leader Nelson Mandela over a crisis sparked by the government's allegations that communists in the African National Congress are plotting armed insurrection. de Klerk issued a statement saying he sought the meeting with Mandela because the ANC had "failed to appreciate the seriousness of the facts." Presidential spokesman Kobus Pietse said the two men met at the government complex in Pretoria for about two hours.

CAIRO, Egypt (UPI) — Iraq has scored a initial political victory in a dispute over oil production with its Persian Gulf neighbor Kuwait. As tensions in the region eased with Iraq's pledge to not use force against Kuwait, rapid progress was reported at a crucial OPEC conference in Geneva Thursday to prevent quota cheating by setting a higher production ceiling. Analysts said Iraq strengthened its position within the 13-member OPEC cartel, gaining the support of pivotal members Iran and Saudi Arabia in its drive to discipline Kuwait and the UAE.

Historian narrates PBS Civil War film

Five part movie 'mesmerizing blend' of photos and music

LOS ANGELES (SHNS)—When Ken Burns was considering making a film on the Civil War, he asked people whom he should talk to, and "Robert Penn Warren told me I'd be an idiot if I didn't talk to Shelby Foote."

Burns, who had read Foote's three-volume history "The Civil War: A Narrative," spoke to Foote initially as a historical advisor. But what he got was much more than someone to check accuracy.

Foote appears 82 times in the 11-hour film "The Civil War," which will air for five consecutive nights on public television beginning Sept. 23.

Foote does voice-overs for a number of people in the film, but his biggest contribution comes when he speaks on camera about the war.

He lived the Civil War during the 20 years it took to write the trilogy, bringing a novelist's skills to the telling of that terrible experience.

Foote's writing is heavenly. It turns out he speaks as eloquently as he writes. Interspersed throughout the narrative are Foote's comments on the war, ranging from grand strategy to the war's effects on the common soldier.

"He's perfect for television," Burns said. "He speaks in perfect paragraphs and brings it alive."

Burns remembered one memorable experience. Foote was talking about the Gettysburg Address, and at one point tossed his head slightly to the side. "He's there. You believe Abraham Lincoln is sitting right next to him," Burns said.

Foote and Burns were here during the PBS portion of the summer press tour for TV writers. Both spoke "passionately" about the film, but the ones who had seen it need not be convincing.

Foote had few reservations about appearing to promote the film. "The best thing I found from the start, no matter how strong the narrative was, if it was shaky historically, he would drop it," Foote said.

Foote recognized Burns's problems in compressing the story of the war. Foote's trilogy runs a million and a half words. Burns had just 11 hours to tell the same story. Foote would have liked to see more about the New Mexico campaign—extremely colorful but not influential—more on the Western campaigns and more about the war at sea.

"These are just quibbles. What he did do was just fine," Foote said.

Foote may have been joking when he said "I've done everything I can to forget everything I know about the Civil War," but he realizes people won't forget his part in Burns's film.

"It's going to do something terrible," Foote said. "It's already beginning. The phone keeps ringing, I'm getting mail. I'm going to have to get an answering machine or an unlisted number."

People who watch "The Civil War" will know they are watching something magnificent. Its blend of narrative, photographs, music and sound effects is mesmerizing.

New play tells of value of friendship

A Review

By Anne Ryman
Staff Writer

Sex and strong language give "Dirty Harry Inferno" its sizzle but the play also speaks about the importance of friendship.

Sherman, played by Brian Gant, is the central character and the macho male personality. He guzzles beer and competes in sports.

Sherman seems permanently entrenched in the past. The vintage music used throughout the play helps reinforce the theme that Sherman has not changed over the years. Sherman's best friend says, "If you changed with the times, California would probably fall into the ocean." He maintains his cocoon of values throughout the play.

Gant captures Sherman's crazy uninhibitedness. He is constantly joking and playing pranks and has a jovial perspective on life. He has no reservations and will do anything for a laugh. The element that makes Sherman more than a prankster is that he sometimes reveals his feelings beneath this clowning mask.

A turning point occurs when Sherman finds out his girlfriend is having an affair with his best friend. He remains friends with both of them even though they have hurt him. This gesture gives the first indication that Sherman values friendship above all other things.

The fact that the characters remain friends even after deceiving one another indicates that trust is only one part of a relationship. Sherman seems like the perennial joker but he also reveals his feelings. This aspect of Sherman is what gives him depth.

"Dirty Harry Inferno" should not be dismissed as just a play with sexual overtones. It has a strong story that illustrates love triumphs over hatred.

"Dirty Harry Inferno" was written by Dan Stark and is part of the Playwright's Workshop. It will be performed again Aug. 1 in the Laboratory Theater.

Anti-crime bill to help educational funding

COULD FEDERAL support for higher education be on the rise in the 1990s?

Congress has pledged at least $400 million to students who enroll in law enforcement programs and then commit to work four years in the field. Recently passed by the Senate, the anti-crime bill has been touted as the "toughest, most comprehensive crime bill in our history," by Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del.

Financial support for students is a welcome change from the Reagan administration.

Funding for quality educational programs should be near the top of the list of priorities for the states and the nation. Yet a national outcry about moral decline and high crime rates has taken precedence.

IN THE PAST, a higher education had been available only to the elite in society. Today, higher education has become a pursuit for many individuals so that collectively, society might improve. We note, however, that higher education is not the cure-all for today's or tomorrow's social ills.

Laws and law enforcement has always been necessary for us to maintain a sort of security blanket against those who commit acts of violence, greed and dishonesty.

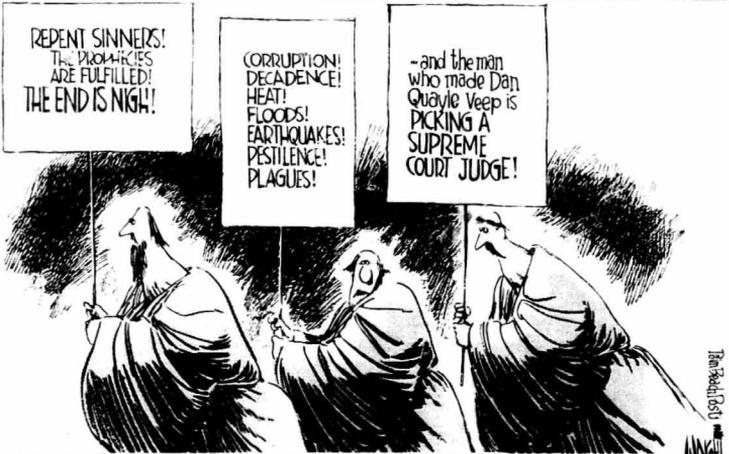

Americans have identified a social problem and demand a solution coupled with appropriate action. It is encouraging that national legislators have worked seriously toward a solution. In a world of rising costs, financial support while in college helps students step out of the usual hole of debt experienced by many students of the 1980s.

ENCOURAGING employment in law enforcement is a step in the positive direction if lawlessness is rampant or if law enforcement is ineffective against a growing problem such as illegal drug use or crimes against individuals.

The Daily Egyptian realizes throwing money at our problems does not solve them. An effort to improve the condition of higher education and combat social ills must begin within, and when problems are such a great burden, outside help is necessary.

Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., has said, "This will go down in history as one of the greatest pieces of legislation ever passed." We prefer to wait a little longer before we make such a statement. Results that happen because of legislation will prove its effectiveness.

The verdict is not in on the education incentive in the anti-crime bill, but we hope the future is encouraging.

Souter nomination 'out of this world'

By Dale McFeathers Scripps Howard News Service

WASHINGTON — President Bush has nominated a new minority to the Supreme Court—an extraterrestrial.

David Souter's appointment to the high court may have been an astute, if inadvertent, political move by Bush because Congress, having cut NASA's budget, will be unable to do a background check.

And Senate Democrats will be unlikely to block his confirmation for fear of offending a potentially powerful, and—who knows?—maybe even omnivorous, interplanetary special interest group.

When Souter appeared beside Bush at the White House, veteran UFO watchers knew right away: The lack of expression, the immobility were classic signs of an android at rest.

Occasionally, a slight smile and flicker of the eyes would indicate that the judge was listening to orders being broadcast from a huge spaceship in the Great Asteroid Belt millions of miles above the White House.

A faceless alien commander may have been boasting maniacally, "Ha, ha, F2Xk4 (or whatever the judge's real name is), soon I will be master of the Earth!" Of course, it's equally possible the alien was asking, "Dave, is the fall TV season going to be as bad as it sounds?"

Some mysteries we may never be solved.

A lonely farmhouse in rural New England was a clever place to plant an alien.

The flinty, taciturn locals mind their own business, if the judge accidentally reverted to his actual life-form—a glowing green centipede, for example—his Yankee neighbors wouldn't tell the newcomers and summer people and they certainly wouldn't tell the gumshoes from Congress.

Ethan: "You see them bright lights over at the Souter place 'round about midnight?"

Ephraim: "Aye-yup."

Ethan: "Looked to me like an Omega-class Star Cruiser from the Andromeda Nebula."

Ephraim: "Aye-yup."

The judge must have come to realize that, of the three branches of government, the duties of the White House and the Congress are largely confined to making speeches. The real power is in the Supreme Court, he decided.

That's how, over the weekend, the thought materialized in the president's brain: "Why don't I nominate to the Supreme Court a man I've never heard of, let alone met, and whose opinions I know nothing about?"

Bush will speak truer than he knows when he tells Congress that, as a justice, his appointee will be out of this world.

Quotable Quote

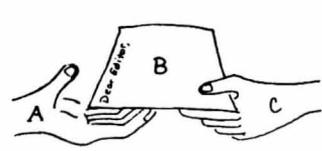

"The Padres understand that many people were concerned about Roseanne Barr's rendition of the national anthem. She was doing the best she could under the circumstances, and she certainly meant no disrespect."—Tom Werne, executive producer of the ABC sitcom "Roseanne." The rotund comedienne gave a screeching vocal performance prior to a San Diego ball game Wednesday night that climaxed with her grabbing her crotch and spitting on home plate. Her wailing met with boos and catcalls.

become effective in two years for employers with more than 25 workers. Two years later, employers with 15 or more workers will be subject to the law.

The public accommodations provisions take effect in 18 months. There is a phase-in schedule for the transportation requirements and within one year, the Federal Communications Commission must issue regulations setting guidelines for the telecommunications services.

Gene Hohl of Hampton, Va., said the bill means something very personal to her.

Subka said the program will provide job coaches for people who will give them suggestions as to how to be more efficient at work.

"For some people, job coaches are a temporary thing. Others will always need a job coach. It depends on the nature of the disability," Subka said.

"The van will be used primarily for our Supported Employment Program," Subka said.

"It will be used to take consumers to their employment site. It will give people with disabilities better access to employment opportunities," she said.

Palestinians, hold rallies and demonstrations to communicate our intentions to our elected officials, and have an active 'sister institution' program," McHale said.

McHale said when the Reform Party will enter the Undergraduate Student Government in the fall it will push for the initiation of the sister institution program.

The program consists of making SIU-C the sister school of a school in Palestine. The students of SIU-C can write letters to Israelis to try to persuade them to re-open the school and support Palestinian students, McHale said.

University of California at Berkeley, and the City Universities of New York, just to name a few, have already established this program," said James Starks, speaker for the Palestinian Solidarity Committee in Chicago.

Approximately two months ago the U.S. cut talks with the Palestinian Liberation Organization.

Al-bishtawi said he feels very strongly that, if the U.S. government would re-open the negotiations, the Israeli-Palestinian conflict could be resolved.

The issue of U.S. recognition of human rights violations by Israel was also addressed at the rally.

"Under the (Foreign Assistance Act) any country that has a consistent human rights violation in not allowed to trade with the U.S.," Starks said.

Not until May 9, 1990 at a Congressional hearing was Israel charged with this violation, Starks said.

In 1967 the United Nations passed a resolution calling for the withdrawal of Israeli forces from Palestine.

Today, much of the territory of Palestine occupied in 1967 is still under Israeli control.

In 1988, the Palestinian National Council renounced terrorism and established the state of Palestine.

"I will ask the board to reassess the health service fee down to the lower figure for spring," said William Hall, student trustee.

"I will ask the board to recognize the success the health service has had in locating a lower bid offer and to share the savings with the students," Hall said.

$700,000 savings for the health service and that money will be used to cushion next year's fee increases, McVay said.

"He (McVay) seemed to say that the savings will come in just in case we need to raise the health fees next year," Hall said.

International students expressed their concern over the increase in medical insurance last month, because they rely heavily on off-campus medical care.

International students have a limited income because usually the spouse of the student is not allowed to work on or off-campus. Many international students would not be able to afford a rise in medical insurance costs, said Mukti Banerjee, president of the international spouses group.

VISIT, from Page 1

The state government finance in the 1980s represents a "boom or bust mentality," he said.

The causes have varied and are due to the slowing of the economy, overspending and shifts in expenditure trends. Public aid, education and Medicaid payments to hospitals have decreased, and correction spending is up, he said.

The comptroller also discussed how during the last ten years the state's economic position has declined. The unemployment rate in Illinois of six percent has exceeded the national average of 5.3 percent and the average in Southern Illinois is much higher than the state average.

As of June 30, 1989, the year-end balance stood at $541 million, but in the FY 90, revenues fell to a balance of $395 million.

The governor's veto actions of the FY 91 appropriations will merely postpone expenditures until 1992, he said.

His suggestions to the "boom or bust cycle" and other state financial problems include establishing a "rainy day" fund for fiscal emergencies and raise the fiscal warning zone another $200 million.

The warning zone acts as a minimum balance in the state's checkbook.

His "Rainy Day" fund would account for set-aside surplus revenues to be kept on hand in a separate account to avoid excessive spending and only used in emergencies.

"From a long-term perspective, we must control spending," Burris said.

Gorbachev: Aid needed from West

MOSCOW (UPI) — President Mikhail Gorbachev said Thursday the Soviet Union needs immediate financial aid from the West to salvage his economic reforms.

Gorbachev bared the dire straits of the Soviet economy at a joint news conference with visiting Italian Prime Minister Giulio Andreotti.

"In these two years—I would say very difficult and crucial years—we need this help," Gorbachev said. "And we need it, of course, within the present year."

Gorbachev said aid from the West would give him room to maneuver as he tries to move the economy from a centralized administrative system to a market-based distribution of goods.

"We will act during this period to unleash economic initiative, create an environment for entrepreneurship and organize cooperation between Western firms and those of ours that work for the market," Gorbachev said.

Since the introduction of five-year plans in 1928, industrial ministries have run the Soviet economy, distributing both resources and goods through administrative commands rather than a Western-style market regulated by uncontrolled prices.

Andreotti indicated that Italy, the Soviet Union's fifth-largest trading partner, is willing to grant credits to Moscow but gave no figure.

Andreotti, whose visit was arranged just 10 days before his arrival Wednesday evening, came to Moscow both as leader of the Italian government and as head of the Common Market under the rotating six-month EC presidency.

Gorbachev said his huge nation can easily manage repayments of any forthcoming aid.

U.S. poison gas removed from German storage depot

BONN, West Germany (UPI) — The first convoy of about 80 trucks removing U.S. chemical weapons from West Germany arrived under heavy guard at a U.S. Army depot in the Rhineland Thursday en route to destruction in the Pacific.

The 4-mile-long convoy carrying 15 tons of deadly nerve gas crawled 30 miles from an Army chemical depot at Clausen along closed, guarded freeways for 2 1/2 hours before reaching the U.S. Army base at Miesau, near Kaiserslautern.

The weapons will remain at Miesau until shipped out of the country by rail and sea.

West German radio interviewed Germans living along the convoy route who said they were happy that the weapons were being taken away but were also concerned about a possible accident during the operation.

The United States agreed to remove the chemical weapons from West Germany at the 1986 economic summit in Tokyo. The weapons had been stored in Clausen for almost 30 years.

A total of 102,000 artillery shells containing the highly poisonous nerve gases are scheduled to be moved out of Germany within the next 30 days.

Mercenary sues employer for not giving supplies

MIAMI (UPI) — A Wisconsin mercenary sued a company that shipped down over Nicaragua during a Contra supply mission testified Thursday that his employers failed to provide needed equipment and that he would be dead if he hadn't bought his own parachute.

Eugene Hasenfus, 49, was the sole survivor on the four-man mission to Nicaragua in 1986. Their transport plane, carrying arms and ammunition to the Contra rebels, was owned by Southern Air Transport of Miami, a cargo company with ties to the CIA.

Hasenfus was captured and convicted in Nicaragua for crimes against the state. He was sentenced to 30 years in prison, but was pardoned Dec. 17, 1986, and returned to his home near Marinette, Wis., two days later.

Hasenfus and his wife, Sally, sued Southern Air and former Air Force Maj. Gen. Richard Secord, who allegedly had ties to the company, charging they failed to protect him and failed to pay for his defense in Nicaragua.

Kasane Sawyer and Nockrope Sawyer, the wife and 7-year-old son of Wallace "Buzz" Sawyer, one of the crew members killed when the plane was shot down, joined suit, seeking compensation for Sawyer's death.

Hasenfus testified at the trial of his civil suit that he was hired by Southern Air with the understanding that he was working for the U.S. government-backed "Enterprise" project and that the flights would be protected. He said he was forced to sign a secrecy agreement.

"My understanding was I was working for the U.S. government-backed Contras," he said. "I agreed to work for the Enterprise solely on the U.S. government backing the Contras. It was a time of need and they needed somebody."

He told jurors that Southern Air provided him with shoddy equipment and denied numerous requests for parachutes and other survival equipment.

Cairo residents protest riverboat bill at state capitol

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — Carrying the crude riverboat model that's become a symbol of their fight for a coveted riverboat gambling license, 100 Cairo residents steamed into the state capitol Wednesday to urge a veto of a bill that guarantees a floating casino for East St. Louis.

The delegation from Illinois' southernmost city told state officials they're more deserving of a gaming boat than cash-strapped East St. Louis, which could receive a steamboat license as part of a $30 million bailout from the state.

Gov. James R. Thompson has not acted on the East St. Louis bailout bill or another bill that changes the riverboat gambling law to authorize an East St. Louis boat.

"Cairo has a balanced budget; East St. Louis doesn't," said city councilman Darrell Hoppe. "We don't want $30 million—we just want a riverboat license."

Cairo officials look to riverboat gambling as a salvation that could return the city of 5,000 to its glory days of the 19th century, when its strategic position at the confluence of the Ohio and Mississippi rivers made it a major riverboat port.

The state Gaming Board is considering which towns should become home ports for the five licenses authorized in 1991.

Poor local fruit crop costing migrants work

COBDEN (UPI) — The virtually non-existent fruit crop in Southern Illinois has stranded some migrant farm workers and sent others south looking for jobs, the head of a migrant labor camp said Thursday.

As many as 2,000 agricultural workers annually come to the deep southern part of Illinois to pick apples and peaches. Marisela Sanchez, manager of the Union-Jackson Farm Worker Labor Camp, guessed there would be jobs this year for only about 400 workers.

Sanchez said many workers came to the area from Florida and Texas without realizing the fruit crop had been virtually wiped out by harsh winter and spring weather.

Sanchez said local volunteer groups had pitched in with food and other assistance to help workers return south. She said some workers had found jobs picking cucumbers and peppers.

"So many came without knowing they couldn't get jobs," Sanchez said. "In June we had so many single men looking for work and there was no work. So many left for North Carolina, Missouri, Texas."

Lupita Hernandez-Thompson, a legal intern for the Legal Assistance Foundation of Chicago working in the camp, said many migrants were ineligible for food stamps and other assistance. She said at times some members of a family are eligible and others are not depending on the type of immigration documents they hold.

Sanchez said workers were typically paid minimum wage or by the amount of a crop they harvested.

teammate; (3) a former or current employee of Maxvill's; (4) not Mike Shannon.

Torre remains the heavy favorite, but remember Secretariat lost once. If the favorite falters, or if Torre pulls up at the last minute, this derby could heat up.

Let's examine the field, in probable order of finish:

Joe Torre, even odds:
Strengths: He managed Atlanta to a division title in 1982; the Braves crashed after he was fired following the 1984 season. A popular former Cardinal, he has solid St. Louis roots and his choice would go over well with fans. In Atlanta, coaxed the best career years out of power-hitting enigma Bob Horner and also squeezed 29 victories out of Pascual Perez in two seasons. So he can deal with people. While managing Mets, he had a third-base coach named Maxvill. While managing Braves, he had a third-base coach named Maxvill.

Weaknesses: He hasn't managed since 1984. He's stayed in the game as a broadcaster but has been watching American League baseball, which isn't really baseball. Former Brave players say he's better suited to handling veterans, and the Cardinals figure to be a young team in coming seasons. How rusty would he be after an extended layoff?

Why he'd get the job: He's a safe, if uninspired, choice. He has a track record. This is a chance for Torre to come home, in a manner of speaking, and close out a rewarding baseball career. And twice he hired a third-base coach named Maxvill.

Don Baylor, 4-1:
Strengths: Tremendous presence. An inspirational leader who commands respect. Pushed his teammates to perform to the best of their abilities. Former teammates speak of him in reverent tones. A winner throughout his career, Baylor played on seven first-place teams in 17 seasons and learned his baseball from Earl Weaver and Frank Robinson early in his career and Gene Mauch and Billy Martin later. Holds the major-league career record for most times being hit by a pitch. The aggressive Baylor would establish the tempo for a young, spirited team. If his history of relationships with young players is any guideline, Cardinals prospects like Lankford would worship Baylor.

St. Louis talk shows callers have said the Cardinals won't hire a black manager. It's hard to believe people feel compelled to state that, when Baylor has so much to offer.

It's more difficult to believe that the team's management would be so narrow-minded.

Weaknesses: Hasn't managed before. But that didn't prevent Cito Gaston, a novice, from guiding the Toronto Blue Jays to a 77-49 record and a division title after he replaced Tim Lincecum 36 games into the '89 season.
