Federal grant to catalyze local watershed research

DAN CRAFT
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Sixteen months after applying for a federal grant, SIUC researchers finally have the money to move forward with their study of a local watershed.

Geographer Christopher Lant and agribusiness economist Steven Kraft received the $718,000 grant last week from the U.S. Department of Agriculture to fund their analysis of the Cache River watershed near Cairo.

The two men lead a team that will examine how different uses of the land surrounding the river affect the river and its drainage areas.

Lant said the study also is intended to produce a working model that could be repeated when examining different areas, especially in the Midwest.

The team will coordinate with water resource management groups in the Cache River area, focusing on local interests and solutions rather than "engineering", a solution with the Army Corps of Engineers or other federal agencies such as the Tennessee Valley Authority.

"This is a departure from the traditional federally funded research approach," Lant said. "The dam-building era in this country is over, and the current problems with water management are mostly local concerns."

Lant, a professor of geography, and Jeffrey Baaseman in agribusiness joins Kraft. Anthropology professor Jane Adams, an expert in the Southern Illinois region, is familiar with many of the interests represented in the Cache River region. She will tackle the social aspects of the project.

Two former SIUC employees signed up with the project before leaving the University: Linda Bennett, an agribusiness and computer specialist now at the University of Kansas, is largely responsible for compiling project data into a Geographic Information System. The GIS is a computer model that allows researchers to combine many types of data into one overall picture.

When this plan went into effect, the campus' general revenue given by the state was reduced by $765,000 since the campuses would now be controlling the interest income directly instead of the income being allocated by the state.

In the plan for allocation of the money developed by Jackson, SIUE Chancellor David Werner and SIU President Ted Sanders, the first $765,000 earned by the campus would go directly to SIUC and SIUE to offset the reduction in money from the state.

The money in excess of the $765,000 is then split, with 50 percent allocated to the president's office and the other half divided between the Carbondale and the Edwardsville campuses in proportion to their contribution to the fund. Carbondale's amount represents its contribution to the fund of about 25 percent.

Ed Hippo, a professor of mechanical engineering, said he thinks all the income from the fund should be allocated back to the campuses for educational services, because it is mostly originally generated by the campuses.

Hippo said he believes the announcement of the additional money was merely a ploy by the president's office.

"My perspective is that it is an attempt to placate the faculty when there is a possibility of a no confidence vote from the faculty association."

Sanders could not be reached for comment, but Jack Dyer, administrative assistant to the president, said that this was not

The sunset concerts come to a close tonight at 7 p.m. with Eddie Mac, an alternative, hip-hop urban rock act busting out of the Twin Cities to play on the steps of Shryock Auditorium.

Fomed in 1996, the trio, made up of Mike Mehsikomer on bass, Pete McCauley on guitar and harmonica, and Chris Weidner on drums, got together to mix a diverse set of influences to produce a different kind of sound.

Jaimee Neath goes through several boxes of Kleenex a day in an effort to combat a runny nose — one of the common symptoms of allergies.

"I just kind of deal with it on my own and go through lots of boxes of Kleenex," she said, "I think I own a Kleenex company.

Neath, a senior in rehabilitation from Park Ridge, said she has been fighting allergies since the age of 12 and still has serious problems with them.

"The runny nose, the itchy eyes, I sneeze a lot. I cough a lot," she said. "It is just very miserable."

The main problem is that Neath's allergies are seasonal and not related to pet or other domestic animals.

"When I am around them my throat closes up. I get hives, and I just can't breathe at all," she said. "It is really bad." An allergy is defined as a hypersensitivity to foreign substances that normally are harmless. They can produce in the allergy sufferer a violent reaction that attempts to eliminate the foreign substance.

According to Student Health Program statistics for the 1997 school year, 540 SIU students were diagnosed as having allergies. Nationally, it is 8 percent of the U.S. population is affected by allergies.

Different types of allergic reactions include hay fever, migraines, asthma, allergic rhinitis, drowsiness and ear infections.

Common symptoms associated with allergies include itchy, watery eyes, sneezing and congestion, post nasal drip, dark and puffy circles under the eyes and itchy mouth.

Allergies may be seasonal, recurring at the same time each year, or perennial, consistent throughout the year. Seasonal allergies usually result from grasses, trees and weeds while perennial responses result from dust, mold and animals.

Chris Lubyk, coordinator for the Wellness Center, said diagnosing the difference between cold and allergy symptoms can be difficult and a misdiagnosis could hinder the detection of allergies.

"A lot of people think they are just getting a summer cold," she said. "If they get this summer cold at the same time every year, it is probably not a cold — it is an allergy.

Lubyk said to relieve the common symptoms associated with allergies, there are a variety of options available.

"For mild symptoms, there are antihistamines people can take over the counter that might cause drowsiness," she said. "There's also a whole new class of antihistamines available by prescription that are non-drowsy like Allegra and Claritin."

Neath said despite the wide range of medicines available to combat allergies, nothing she has taken has helped her.

"I have taken Claritin, Claritin-D, Benadryl, Tylenol Allergy — nothing seems to work," she said. "Nothing that I know of helps."

About The Band

Edward Mac's music is an explosion of energy, emotion and soul. The band really must enjoy playing live because, as having a11ergies. Nationally, it is 8 percent of the U.S. population is affected by allergies.

"It's all about sticking with it and growing," he said, "We're definitely much more comfortable playing live because, according to Mehsikomer, they are always going on tour, predominantly in the Midwest, but they do try to make it out to either the east or west coasts at least once a year."

"We're definitely much more comfortable playing live," he said. "We're allowed a bit more freedom.

The band must enjoy playing live because, according to Mehsikomer, they are always going on tour, predominantly in the Midwest, but they do try to make it out to either the east or west coasts at least once a year."

Irvan Trevathan, a pharmacist for The Carbottle Clinic, 2601 W. Main St., has been prescribing medicine for almost 50 years. He said he fills a large amount of prescriptions for antihistamines like Allegra and Claritin.

"You can't predict what medicine is going to work," he said. "It's hard to say which brand will work the best."

Because of the fluctuating nature of the income from year to year, Jackson said the income will have to be spent on one-year contracts for the band members.

Jackson said he was pleased to have the extra revenue for the campus and the decision on how to spend the money will be made soon. He said discussions would be held in the near future with the vice chancellors, the various constituency groups and especially the planning and budgeting committee to begin the process of allocating the funds.

Dear editor,

First, I want to publicly apologize to Louis G. Vaine for not responding to the proposal he sent me at the Public Policy Institute several months ago. I reviewed it and I fully intended to give him a timely answer. But, as pointed out in a letter published July 27 in the Daily Egyptian, I failed to do so. My criticism of my inaction concerning his proposal is well known.

Second, I am happy to disagree with his assertion that Paul Simon and the Institute be included in the discussion of tobacco controversy. Paul's voting record on tobacco issues — and other political-sensitive matters — documents otherwise. Even more to the point, Paul and the Institute are responsible for bringing to this campus two of the strongest and boldest critics of the tobacco industry — Dr. David Kessel, the former chairman of the Food and Drug Administration, and Dr. C. Everett Koop, who served as surgeon general of the United States. Dr. Feinberg was the first featured speaker at an Institute-sponsored symposium in October. And Dr. Koop will make presentations here this October.

The Institute, in its relatively brief 3-month history, has tackled such horticulture and controversial topics as Social Security reform, alternatives in building one prison after another, campaign finance reform, the relationship between multinational China and Taiwan and the questions of the religious community in America should be able to address poverty.

Unfortunately, we are not able to embrace each of the scores of proposals that come to us, and we know we have disappointed some of their sponsors. But to fulfill our mission, we need to avoid spreading ourselves too thin. We must focus on those areas where we believe we can make a distinctive difference. I believe we have done so, and we will continue to do so.

Lawsuit filed over hidden-camera taping

LOUISIANA TIMES

... Purveyors of “hidden-camera” videotapes that show naked college athletes using locker rooms, showers and toilets are targeted in a law suit filed Monday in Cook County Circuit Court. Charges in the civil suit range from invasion of privacy to unauthorized and unlawful use of plaintiffs’ images for monetary gain to mail fraud and wire fraud under the federal Racketeer Influencing Corrupt Organizations (RICO) statutes.

J.B. Ruhl of Florida State University is examining the legal limits and options available to those who manage the watershed.

“Together, we're trying to develop a way of solving problems in addition to the specific Cache River goals,” Adams said.

Both Adams and Lant said the project is possible largely because of recent technological advances, including the GIS system.

“The GIS makes the project much quicker and more flexible,” Lant said.

The GIS information also can be shared over the Web, Adams said, helping the team members keep in touch.

“This is particularly important in the case of Bennett and Ruhl, who cannot always be in the area. "This is just the beginning," Lant said. "We still have three years of research ahead of us."

“Right now, we're thrilled to finally have the grant,” Adams said.

A writer, he wrote. In 1962, Henry Dan came to Carbondale as the dean of Liberal Arts and Sciences. In 1963, he became a professor for the English department where he stayed until his retirement in 1988.

Howard Webb, professor emeritus of English, remembered Henry Dan as an important part of SIC.

“Dan was full of ideas,” he said. “He had a real concern for scholarship.

Andrew said his father would have wanted to be remembered as a teacher and a contributor to the lives of his students.

“I wound up being his luckiest student,” he said. “My abilities were shaped by him.

Henry Dan contributed to many books or the years including "Land Between Rivers," which celebrated the culture and history of Southern Illinois.

Interim Chancellor John Jackson remembered working with Henry Dan, who referred to him as "an excellent academic leader."

“He was a colorful and strong character," he said. “He walked into room and people noticed.”

Lions’ running back announces retirement

"I have searched my heart through and through and feel comfortable with this decision," said Sanders, who has been playing basketball since fourth grade, said she is pleased with what she is learning.

"It's a lot of fun," Moehring said. "We are improving the fundamentals of the game."

PONTIAC, Mich. - Detroit Lions running back Barry Sanders, the NFL’s second-leading rusher of all-time, announced his decision to retire from the NFL on Wednesday.

The 10-time Pro Bowl selection leaves the game as one of the most electrifying players ever to suit up.

The 31-year-old tailback leaves just four times. Sanders is a sure-bet to be selected to the Pro Football Hall of Fame.

The runner left without speaking through and feel comfortable with this decision," said Sanders, who has been playing basketball since fourth grade.

Sanders refused to comment on the team’s future, saying, "It’s a lot of fun," Moehring said. "We are improving the fundamentals of the game."

Sanders, renowned for his elusive moves and breakaway speed, arrived in Europe this week.

Sanders rushed for 13,769 yards and 99 touchdowns, leading the NFL in rushing yards for five seasons. Sanders was a centerpiece of the Lions’ offense over the past decade, including a league MVP award in 1997 as he scampered for 2,053 yards and 11 TDs, the Lions were a mediocre 7-8-2 during his tenure.
