Independent Senate bid a possibility, Epton says

By John Racine
Staff Writer

Former Chicago mayoral contender Bernard Epton said Thursday that it was too early to decide whether he would run as an independent candidate in the U.S. Senate race.

Epton, a 14-year veteran of the state House of Representatives, said in a telephone interview from his Chicago law office that several factors are at play in his decision.

"Chicago is my first love and I have no desire to go to Washington," the 62-year-old lawyer said. "I haven't ruled out the possibility, but my wife would probably kill me."

U.S. Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., and U.S. Rep. Paul Simon, D-Makanda, are set to square-off for the seat in the Nov. 6 general election. Both candidates said Thursday it was too early to tell what effect an independent candidate would have on their race.

Epton confirmed reports that he has been pursued by members of the New Republican Organization, a group of moderates who say they are dissatisfied with both the GOP and Cook County Democrats.

Chris Atchison, executive director of the Illinois Republican Central Committee, said that the Chicago-based group was a product of the strongly contended Epton-Washington race last year. Atchison said that if Epton decided to run as an independent, "he would be treated as Paul Simon would be treated."

He said that financing a campaign would not be a problem either.

"During the (mayoral) race most of the money we raised was small donations of $5 and $10," he said. "We only received a few large contributions."

Epton said that the group will meet to nominate candidates sometime after April 2, when officers are elected for municipal boards in Cook County.

"The Illinois Republicans have gotten in the bad habit of losing elections," Epton said, "I want to reverse that."

He said that if he decided not to run for the Senate then it was unlikely that the organization would nominate someone else. Epton maintains that he had a moderate voting record on social issues and a conservative bond on fiscal matters while in the Legislature.

"I would probably agree with Simon on social philosophy and would consider myself a conservative in the fiscal votes," he said.

He said that Percy often "gets in front of the crowd" on votes. He cited the three-term senator's support of the Baker school prayer amendment.

CATV plan retains St. Louis channel

By Paula J. Finlay
Staff Writer

Telecommunications Inc., parent company of Carbondale Cablevision, has agreed to retain Channel 4 from St. Louis with no additional rate increase in a revised 21-channel service package for Cablevision customers.

Through time-sharing, Cablevision will provide 23 channels of service on 21 channels in the proposed line-up beginning within one year of rate determination by the City Council. The proposed channel line-up, changes in the city's cable television franchise and a proposed $2.75 rate increase are to be considered by the council Monday.

In a move to provide more variety in programming, the Cable Television Commission agreed in January to give up St. Louis channels 2 and 4 to bring in Nickelodeon, which is billed as a family-oriented station, and Atlanta superstation WTBS. That action drew criticism at a March public hearing and, at the request of a negotiating committee, TCI agreed to retain channel 4.

The commission agreed Wednesday on the revised channel line-up and on proposed performance quality standards to be added to the franchise agreement.

The proposed standards require the franchise holder to maintain the minimum technical standards required by the Federal Communications Commission. Annual proof that the company is meeting the standards must be submitted to the commission and monthly tests of the strength of signals from stations would also be required. The city would reserve the right to do its own testing.

Commissioner John Gregory voted for the standards, but said that the standards could have been improved with a credit system for customers when Cablevision service falls below standards.

"It doesn't seem to me there are any teeth in what we have," Gregory said.

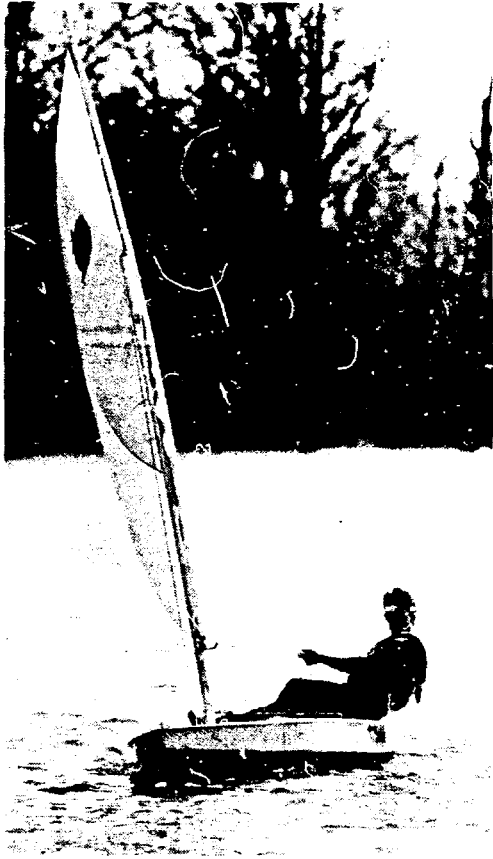

Cablevision manager Craig Perica said that if a station falls below the standards it can be penalized by the FCC, and that customers are given credit for days when they are without service because of a Cablevision error.

A request from the commission for an annual audited report from TCI was revised to allow an audited report annually, but retaining the right for the city to send an accountant to TCI headquarters to audit the report annually or when a rate increase is requested.

GPSC opposes layoff policy

By John Stewart
Staff Writer

In a resolution adamantly opposing revisions to the SIUC fiscal emergency policy, the Graduate and Professional Student Council Wednesday urged that students be exempted from having their pay cut or being laid off as provided in the policy.

The GPSC also suggested that the rule requiring doctoral candidates to have a 3.25 grade point average be lowered to 3.0, and nominated two candidates to run in GPSC elections to be held April 11.

The GPSC rejected the revised emergency policy for mandatory leave of absence without pay for contractual employees and involuntary pay reductions for all employees.

The resolution stated that students would be adversely affected by the policy, which was formulated by a committee without input of students. It also stated that upper-level administrators should possess the foresight to anticipate financial crises in order to avoid invoking the policy.

A rule requiring doctoral students to maintain a 3.25 grade point average was implemented last fall to correct Graduate School policy inconsistencies.

Previously, students were required students to have a 3.25 average to be accepted into doctoral candidacy, but needed only a 3.0 to graduate.

"Raising grade requirements will only lead to grade inflation," said Dan Venturi, a third-year law student.

Sherry Knapp, Graduate School liaison, said that the recently adopted policy was particularly unfair to students who take only one or two graded classes once accepted into doctoral candidacy and to students just beginning their Kennedy revived his measure for another try through parliamentary means, but Senate Majority leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., predicted that the GOP-controlled body would defeat this and other amendments by critics of Reagan's Central American policies.

Baker said a final vote on the aid package might not come until next week because of a filibuster by Kennedy.

The Pentagon statement read by Sasser said small bands of insurgent attacked a camp at San Miguel, El Salvador, where U.S. military advisers are stationed, in November and again in March. It said they did not enter the camp and no Americans were wounded.

Shells, rockets rip into Beirut; factional leaders convene in city

BEIRUT (AP) — Hundreds of artillery shells and rockets crashed into Christian and Moslem neighborhoods of Beirut Wednesday, killing at least 37 people. President Amin Gemayel convened a meeting of factional leaders in an attempt to avert further bloodshed.

Several rockets also slammed into the pinewoods of Baabda, close to the Presidential Palace.

In Paris, the Foreign Ministry announced that France would begin sending 40 army and police officers to Beirut Wednesday as cease-fire observers. The ministry gave no exact date for the contingent's arrival.

The "higher political-security committee" began its first meeting late in the evening at the Presidential Palace in suburban Baabda, following the worst day of violence since a cease-fire was declared March 13 by participants at a Lebanese reconciliation conference in Lausanne, Switzerland.

Beirut was not the only site of violence. In the southern Lebanese village of Jibchit, at least three civilians were killed and 10 wounded in a confrontation at a mosque.

Lebanese reports said Israeli forces killed six Shiite Moslem villagers who had thrown stones at the soldiers, but military sources in Tel Aviv said the forces involved were Israeli-supported Lebanese Christians. The Tel Aviv sources also put the death toll in Jibchit at three instead of six.

The political-security committee was created during the Lausanne conference, and was designed to help enforce the cease-fire and disengage Lebanon's civil war combatants after nine years of bloodshed.

Lebanese television showed the committee — leaders of rightist forces and of the Druse and Shiite opposition — meeting under Gemayel's chairmanship. The meeting lasted more than four hours and the state radio described the discussions as "positive," but gave no details.

Mondale-Hart debate heated

By The Associated Press

Walter Mondale and Gary Hart debated in heated and personal terms Wednesday night about the charges they had been leveling at one another in the ever-more intense Democratic presidential campaign.

Debating six days before the New York primary, the two presidential candidates lost little time going after each other in the nationally televised debate broadcast from Columbia University.

Mondale demanded that Hart act "this night" to withdraw television advertisements "that suggest I'm trying to kill kids."

Official says Meese kept $375 gift

WASHINGTON (AP) — Edwin Meese and nine other White House officials got expensive cufflinks from the South Korean government in November and are only now surrendering them, a senior White House official said Thursday.

The pale green jade blocks decorated with gold crests were appraised at $375 a pair, said the official who asked for anonymity. By law, federal employees must report or turn over to the government within 60 days any gifts they receive that are valued at more than $140.

Economic index, trade deficits rise

WASHINGTON — The government reported Thursday that its main economic forecasting gauge rose a healthy 0.7 percent in February, prompting the White House to proclaim that the economy is "still on a roll."

But official optimism was tempered by a separate report that the United States' foreign trade deficit broke into double digits for the first month in history, reaching $10.1 billion in February.

Northeast buried by blizzard

By David L. Lanford
Of the Associated Press

A spring blizzard with hurricane-force winds buried the Northeast under soggy snow up to 2 feet deep Thursday and forced thousands to flee coastal communities where floodwaters were neck deep.

The same storm on Wednesday spun off tornadoes that killed more than 55 people and injured more than 600 in the Carolinas.

At least eight deaths were blamed on the snowstorm in the Northeast. Three people were killed in Pennsylvania, two in Washington, and one each in New Jersey, New York and Connecticut.

"This storm is going to go into the books as having spawned more problems than maybe we have seen in a century on the East Coast," said David Leshner, a meteorologist in Maryland's Frederick County.

In New Jersey, part of Atlantic City's famed Boardwalk fell into the sea, and the gambling town built on islands was cut off from the mainland by high water.

A 473-foot freighter with 23 people aboard ran aground off Chatham, Mass., in the high winds. Almost a half-million homes and businesses went dark from Virginia to Massachusetts as snow and sleet broke power lines.

Coastal flooding aggravated by winds gusting up to 86 mph in Massachusetts and over 70 mph in New Jersey forced evacuations in several communities from Maryland to Connecticut.

Many schools closed, highways were impassable, and rush-hour traffic was snarled in cities such as Philadelphia and New York.

USO factions squabble over criticism of council

By Bruce Kirkham
Staff Writer

A dispute between the Thompson Point Executive Council and two USO senators turned Wednesday's Student Senate meeting into a battle between supporters for both candidates running for president of the Undergraduate Student Organization.

The dispute centered on a letter written by presidential candidate Lamont Brantley and senator Susan Disselhorst to TPEC advisor Charney Putney criticizing TPEC organization and procedures.

The letter said that meetings are "run like a machine with the president at the helm, making all the decisions and using fear and apathy as weapons to control the meetings."

TPEC President Brian Noonan and nine members of the TPEC board attended the meeting to defend TPEC's operating procedures, armed with a letter of rebuttal written by Noonan and signed by 10 TPEC members.

Noonan addressed the senate after a contested motion to allow him to speak was passed. Noonan defended TPEC against the charges leveled in Brantley and Disselhorst's letter.

Brantley told the senate and TPEC members that although the letter was written on USO letterhead, the content of the letter was intended to represent the opinions of himself and Disselhorst only.

Disselhorst later apologized to TPEC for her involvement in the letter.

Brantley is a senator and is the candidate for USO president of the Trojan Party. His opponent will be Andy Leighton of the Action Party.

Following the meeting, Trojan Party members said that TPEC'S attendance at the meeting was promoted by Mike Greathouse, USO Chief of Staff.

Greathouse was candidate of the Maverick Party for USO vice president in last year's election, when the Maverick Party was soundly defeated by the Trojans.

Greathouse was confirmed by the senate as chief of staff for the spring semester by an 8-4 vote with five abstentions following the discussion of the TPEC letter.

The confirmation followed a motion to amend wording of a bill to not confirm Greathouse. That bill failed by the same margin.

The senate also approved a resolution that calls for a system for posting final examination grades.

The resolution recommends that tests be numbered and results be posted according to the test number.

Background information on the resolution said that the cost of posting final examination grades on grade reports would be too costly.

Memorial Hospital to freeze rates

By Bruce Kirkham
Staff Writer

Memorial Hospital of Carbondale will implement a rate freeze effective April 1 that is expected to remain in effect for 12 months, according to George Maroney, administrator of Memorial Hospital.

Improvements in the Medicaid reimbursement situation, marked by a lower number of Medicaid patients and a higher rate of reimbursement from the state, were one reason for the rate freeze, Maroney said.

The hospital also anticipates adequate reimbursements from Medicare's new Prospective Payment System, which will help the hospital's financial situation, he said.

Maroney also said a general improvement in the economy and an increased volume of patients using hospital facilities have helped the hospital's financial situation, making the rate freeze possible.

The hospital does not anticipate raising rates during the next year unless the state legislature reduces Medicaid reimbursements, Maroney said.

"Last year, the reimbursement was terrible," he said.

Last year, rates were increased by an average of 12 percent, increasing the basic rate of semi-private room from $169 to $190 per day.

programs.

A 'B' shouldn't be construed as unfit performance and being placed on academic probation is too severe, Knapp said. The 3.25 average rule was not applied to doctoral programs which are anchored on research performance, said Steve Zullo, a graduate student in chemistry.

Other options GPSC considered were to continue the current 3.25 policy, to delay effect of the policy until students were five or nine hours into their programs and to abolish any grade requirements.

Glenn Stolar, graduate student in marketing, was nominated to run for GPSC president, and Nancy Bandy, graduate student in higher education, was nominated for vice president.

GPSC's representative on the Natural Areas Committee, Todd Udvig, a graduate student in forestry, reported that the committee has recommended that chemical herbicides be sprayed throughout Thompson Woods to control the spread of honeysuckle.

Food for thought whets kids' appetites

A BREAK FROM filling blank pages presented itself: an invitation to speak to fourth- and fifth-grade classes in a neighborhood public school.

Children at this age are feeling for the first time the elation of forming their own opinions. They are questioning. They are moving into discernment. They are taking our messages about rules, goals, and values and saying to themselves deep inside, "I wonder now..."

THIS PROCESS IS one of the thrills of childhood, and to be on hand when it begins — in a classroom among beginning questioners — is for me a thrill of adulthood. On this morning at Somerset Elementary, I encouraged the children to exercise their right to independent thinking: disagree with me as openly and candidly as you wish. I will talk for 20 minutes, I said, and then we'll have a free-for-all of the mind.

This was a school in which

Colman McCarthy
Syndicated Columnist

teachers were comfortable with children who spoke their minds. Many teachers aren't. How can kids learn, they seem to ask, if they waste their time thinking? Besides, who cares what kids think?

This shut-up-and-learn curriculum is reflected in many of the education reports that have been issued in the past year. Teachers, principals, boards of education, parents and the authors of the reports have chalked the blackboards with solutions to education's problems. Why aren't children asked for their ideas?

A FEW WEEKS after my talk, 39 letters arrived. They were as lively as the exchange we had that morning. "I really appreciate you taking your time to give us a good idea of what a news reporter does," began one letter. "At the beginning of your speech you said you liked people who disagreed with you. Well, there were quite a few things that I disagree with. I don't want to hurt your feelings, but it's true."

Another said: "I liked some of your ideas but some were so unusual that I couldn't stand it." A third wrote: "Thank you for coming to feel that you had some unusual ideas about the world though."

These three disagreeers, like others in the class, had trouble with the SOS (Standard Outrageous Shockers) that I sent: boxing and football are not sports, armies are useless, animals have rights and owning them as pets is slavery, bicycles are better than cars, prisons should be abolished.

IN THE CLASS discussion, we wrestled these out. We could have gone all morning. The hour passed like ten minutes. Every child wanted to say something. Ideas were straining to be released.

The children wanted to be there. I wasn't the attraction. Their own enthusiasm was. I was a newspaperman talking about journalism and some of the issues I write about. I could have been a bus driver or a plumber, provided I invited the children to give me their independent views. If kids at this age are reaching intellectual independence, why not take advantage of it?

When I leave schools after giving talks like this, I always wonder why so many teachers burn out or get bored. How can anyone be wearied by children's minds? I know it is easy for me, a one-shot visitor, to tell teachers how to practice their craft. Don't I understand, teachers can ask, how the school system beats down even the most creative educators?

I DO UNDERSTAND that, but the school world is first of all the world of children. Why enter it unless you are willing to be co-equals with the young? And why make that world colorless with only the grays of textbook knowledge, while leaving out the bright reds, greens and yellows of life to be found in the openable minds of children?

To ask children to disagree if they like is to give the message they hunger for: You matter. That should be the first function of a school. One child wrote me: "I think it was good for you to come. You made us think about everything you said. Were you just trying to make us think or do you believe what you told us?"

Both. After loving, all we have is thinking and believing.

Opinion & Commentary

Utility bill disclosure sheds light on Bracy

LIKE IT OR NOT, the Bracy Building seems destined to become a future storage site of SIU-C's library materials.

A $1.6 million state appropriation for the purchase of the grocery warehouse in Marion is expected to be released within the next two weeks. With the support of the University administration and Board of Trustees from the outset, the purchase seemed destined to happen, despite objections from students, faculty and the former library dean, Ralph McCoy.

The utility of those objections in the face of the administration's will becomes clear with the disclosure that since August 1982, when a one-year, $120,000 lease on the warehouse expired, SIU-C has been paying the building's utility bills, estimated to be about $4,500 a year. Those who managed to follow this episode will recall that rent paid on the building doesn't apply to the purchase price.

AS LATE AS LAST September, despite President Albert Somit's declaration that SIU-C had a "moral obligation" to buy the Bracy building, the University was supposedly "considering" alternatives to it: the Baptist Student Center and the vacated Wal-Mart building on West Main Street. Not surprisingly, neither of those buildings — far closer to campus than the Bracy warehouse 15 miles away — were found to be suitable. The University, it is now clear, had a continuing financial, as well as moral, investment in the Bracy building.

It is disturbing that the public didn't learn about the utility bills until almost two years after SIU-C started paying them. It is even more disturbing that the information came not from University officials but, rather, from the son of the building's owner.

THE DECISION HAD already been made, apparently, despite the objections of campus groups, whose arguments — the building was too expensive and inaccessible — had to confront the investment the University was making in Bracy.

Of course, the money spent on the warehouse while SIU-C administrators considered the alternatives may not have influenced the final choice. The race is not always to the swift, nor the battle to the strong — but, as Murphy's law says, that's the way to bet.

Stand up and sing, America!

Most sporting events start off with the playing of our national anthem. What amazes me is that only a handful of people are singing along. This is our opportunity to show our patriotism and to show appreciation of our founding fathers and our soldiers who have died for this country in the name of freedom. We should be proud of our country and singing the national anthem — one small way to show our appreciation.

To those who cannot sing very well, do not fret because your neighbor probably sounds just as bad. Besides you are not singing to win a Grammy award.

Even worse than those who do not sing are the ones who do not stand at attention, leave their hats on or use this as an opportunity to chat with their neighbor. The disrespect of these people is repulsive.

the next time The Star Spangled Banner is played, stand up and sing America and be proud. — Cathy Dylsln, Senior, Public Relations

Letters Cookie tampering a sick action

What is this world coming to? I thought I'd heard it all when I heard about the Tylenol incidents. But Girl Scout cookies?! How can anyone be so sick?

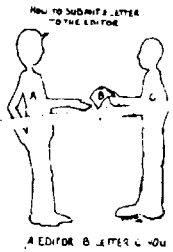

I thought that Girl Scout cookies were right up there with baseball, hotdogs and apple pie. Millions of young girls are trying to raise money to go to camps, on field trips and other innumerable wonderful and exciting learning experiences. In the process of selling cookies, they learn about responsibility, economics, social interaction, and yes, hard work. I remember the last one very well. I was a Girl Scout for many years. Why would anyone want to infringe upon such a worthy, ~~important~~ important institution?

These young people are being taught about honesty and trust. How can they believe in what I hope could be called some of the fundamentals of life if such sick weirdos are running around putting pins and needles (and who know what else) in foods and medicines?

I am a parent of a 6-month-old little girl. How can I protect her? I will soon be teaching young children. How can I teach them right from wrong in a world as sick as ours seems to be?

It makes me sad. Very sad. God help our children.—Mrs.

Carole Mathews, Senior, Early Childhood Education

Precede merit pay with equitable pay

I would like to propose a hypothetical situation. Two students submit final exams. Both exams are equally excellent. One student is in management, the other in the arts. The management student receives an "A," the arts student receives a "C" — not because his/her work lacks distinction, but because his/her chosen field of study "lacks distinction."

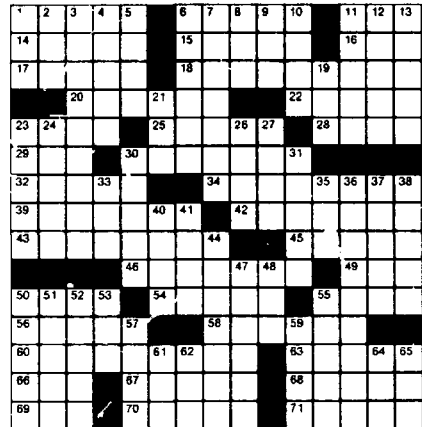

Let's take this hypothetical student situation and apply it to a not so hypothetical faculty situation. How about talking salary equity before debating merit pay? — Lilly Ann Boruszkowski, Assistant Professor, Cinema and Photography

I looked into those gray eyes, nice eyes with little crow's-feet from squinting in the sun on outdoor jobs. I thought, I can't keep my mind off him, either. I needed a daddy for Teresa, too. Not everyone cared about a girl with a little illegitimate child. I wanted desperately to say something, yet I was all confused from knowing my own mother wanted Dave, also. He was more than twice my age yet somehow I couldn't see that part of it. To me, I was a lonely woman, and he was a lonely man. It was that simple and that urgent.

Jazz All Stars to bring back 'The Golden Age' on April 6

By Joe Walter
Staff Writer

For more than 30 years the name "Newport" has invoked images of jazz's greatest talent, and at 8 p.m. April 6, the Newport Jazz Festival All Stars will present a concert in Shryock Auditorium.

Titled "The Golden Age," the concert will feature hits from the '20s, '30s, '40s and '50s.

The program will feature popular jazz for fans of Louis Armstrong, Duke Ellington, Count Basie or Benny Goodman. Fans of show tunes will enjoy the songs originally played by Richard Rodgers, George Gershwin or Irving Berlin.

This edition of the Newport Jazz Festival All Stars, directed and assembled by festival founder-producer George Wein, boasts an assemblage of jazz stars in the great Newport tradition.

Wein, pianist, is a foremost producer of jazz festivals and presenter of jazz artists in the world. He has produced the nationwide series of 22 Kool Jazz Festivals, the Playboy Jazz Festival, the New Orleans Jazz and Heritage Fair and La Grande Parade du Jazz in Nice, France.

Norris Turney plays soprano saxophone, clarinet, flute, alto flute and piccolo. He has 35 years of experience as a player, writer, leader, teacher and lecturer.

Scott Hamilton will play tenor saxophone in the tradition of past great saxophonists such as Coleman Hawkins and Lester Young.

Drummer Oliver Jackson will also appear with the All Stars. He is a veteran of the Teddy Wilson, Yusef Lateef and Earl Fines groups and has played with Oscar Peterson, Erroll Garner and in his own JPJ Quartet.

Slam Stewart, bass fiddle, first became nationally known, along with Slim Gaillard, as half of the famous Slim and Slam team over 40 years ago.

Warren Vache plays trumpet with the All Stars. He was described by jazz critic John S. Wilson of the New York Times as one who "has broken through the Dixieland curtain toward an identity of his own that builds from his traditional jazz roots and reaches out into a broad, middle area of jazz that is as searchingly contemporary as it is rooted in tradition." Vache has toured with Benny Goodman.

Tickets are priced at $8.50, $7 and $6. The Shryock Box Office is open from 11:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday. For ticket information call 453-3378.

Summer storage space fills up fast

By Joyce Vonderheide
Staff Writer

When students leave for the summer, business thrives for area storage companies as students leave behind books, furniture, clothing and other unneeded items.

The 113 storage units at the U-Haul Co. at 415 N. Illinois Ave. are usually filled by the late April or early May, Jim McCann, manager at U-Haul, said. In the non-summer months, about 90 percent of the units are filled.

A lot of business comes from

Beg your pardon

A headline in Thursday's Daily Egyptian read "Apartment owners say manager left with deposits." The headline was incorrect and should have indicated that a former owner of Garden Park Acres Apartments is accused of withholding deposits, not the current manager of the apartment complex.

SIU-C, but the majority doesn't, McCann said. Many University professors moving to Carbondale use the facilities to store furniture and other items until they find housing. Students frequently store boxes of clothes, records and books, he said. Rent per month ranges from $22 for a 4-foot by 8-foot unit to $75 for a 12-by-18 unit.

The U-Haul Co., the only inside storage company in Carbondale, is protected by fire and burglar alarms. Customers provide their own locks.

The number of phone calls at Stor-N-Lok Mini Warehouses suggests that the units will be full soon for summer storage. Sarah Mandahl, resident manager, said.

Located at 707 E. College St., the units cost from $25 a month for a 6-foot by 6-foot unit to $70 for 10 feet by 12 feet of space. Customers provide their own locks for the smaller units, Mandahl said, but the larger units have garage doors with locks on them.

At Carbondale Mini Warehouses, 710½ E. Main St.,

space is also usually sold out all summer, according to the manager, who asked not to be named. Customers provide their own locks.

Prices begin at $15 a month for a 4-by-6 unit and the largest unit, 19-by-29 is $100 a month. A 10 percent discount is given for yearly rentals.

Workers key to peace, speaker says

By Phil Milano
Staff Writer

The only way to stop an impending world war is to form a united front of the working class to lead a world revolution against the ruling class, said a speaker promoting the Revolutionary Communist Party.

Larry Mustafa, a St. Louis correspondent for the Revolutionary Worker newspaper, told an audience of 10 people Wednesday in the Student Center that the fundamental problem of imperialism — what he called the highest form of capitalism — is stronger countries exploiting their workers and the workers of weaker countries for capital gains.

The Revolutionary Communist Party, Mustafa said, is one of the members of the Internationalist Revolutionary Movement — a movement formed by 14 Marxist-Leninist parties on March 12 at the Second International Conference of Marxist-Leninist Parties and Organizations in London.

Mustafa said that in the late 19th century, capitalists internationalized their problems by shifting capitalist contradictions to weaker Third World nations. They had less trouble with the working class in those countries, he said.

He said contradictions between the working and ruling classes in various countries today have intensified and are leading to a world war or a world revolution.

"If we don't take action, there will be a world war in which countries fight to reorganize the world economy on a basis which is favorable to their own capital gains," Mustafa said. "They will hide behind ideological reasons such as totalitarianism versus freedom to justify the war."

He said that wars are conjunctures at which the opportunity for revolution is heightened or placed in jeopardy.

Mustafa said liberals in the United States advocate more money for the people, but this advocacy leads to a "me first" chauvinism in favor of America and opposed to other countries.

"When the revolution in Iran occurred, leftists in America ran for cover because they knew if they supported it, they'd be rejected by the mainstream in America," he said.

The revolution Mustafa described would consist of civil wars in countries at different times, with the destruction of the ruling class in one country stimulating similar revolutions in other countries.

He said voting for communist policies was not an alternative in the United States because "we're talking about overthrowing an entire system of government, and that's not legal."

According to Mustafa, members of the Revolutionary Internationalist Movement have been arrested periodically for distributing the paper, which he said has a circulation of between 50,000 and 100,000 in the United States.

Leland Stauber, associate professor in political science, said Thursday that splinter groups from the old-line Communist Party are not a new thing.

"Basically, the Bolshevik Revolution in 1917 impressed extreme left-wing American socialists and members of the Progressive Party, and they formed the American Communist Party in 1919," Stauber said. "They felt an emotional loyalty to the Soviet Union, which has controlled their policies since the early 1920s."

By 1922, the International Communist Party had pushed its policies in other countries far to the right, and all revolution policies in the United States were pushed aside, Stauber said.

"This group (the Revolutionary Internationalist Movement) seems to be another example of a group of radical socialists who stand to the left of the old-line communists," he said. "They have become frustrated with the fact that the Soviet Union does not support revolutions abroad, but instead tries to promote its own interests and take advantage of communist uprisings in other countries."

Stauber said a third world war was not inevitable, although there was great reason for concern over the arms buildup. The idea that a world war is inevitable is a simplistic one, he said, because governments of various countries realize the horrendous consequences of a general nuclear war.

"Of course, there is a great rivalry between the United States and the Soviet Union, but I don't think this group has an accurate conception of what a general nuclear war would be like. They use the prospect of a nuclear war to attract attention to their program," he said.

Stauber said all great countries are imperialistic, and many intervene into the affairs of other countries to protect their own material and ideological interests. Smaller countries also intervene into the affairs of their weaker neighbors, he said.

"I value political democracy," Stauber said. "The only other alternative is an authoritarian system."

POW, MIA week to illustrate plight of vets missing in Asia

By Phil Milano
Staff Writer

Since 1973, efforts to locate and bring home Americans reported missing in Southeast Asia have most often proven fruitless or have been met with token gestures by the governments there, says Perry Murry, coordinator of the Veterans Affairs at SIU-C.

To call attention to the situation and inform the public about it, the Arnold Air Society and Harper Angel Flight, Air Force ROTC organizations, are sponsoring a number of activities during POW-MIA week April 8-14.

The two organizations will have information tables in the Student Center on April 10, 11 and 12 to collect signatures on a petition that will be sent to the Laotian government requesting the release of information on military and civilian personnel still listed as missing.

Members of the SIU-C Veterans Club are expected to be on hand to discuss the situation with the public, according to Eric Kendall, senior in aviation management and member of the Arnold Air Society.

Other events scheduled include a program on April 11 from 6:30 to 8 p.m. in Davis Auditorium featuring a talk by a former POW, a showing of the Air Force film "The Homecoming" and a flag history ceremony by the National Guard and Rotary Club of Du Quoin. The program will be repeated from 6:30 to 8 p.m. on April 12 in Brown Auditorium.

Murry said the official word from the U.S. government is that no soldiers are still being held against their will in Southeast Asia.

"Every so often the United States sends a delegation of senators and diplomats to Vietnam, they have some tea and then ask them to turn over the remains. The efforts by our government are really token efforts. From time to time, some remains are returned," he said.

Almost 2,500 American soldiers and civilians are missing in Southeast Asia, according to the National League of Families, which was formed to lobby legislators to find out if any soldiers or civilians are being held in Laos or South Vietnam.

"It's almost as if the governments in Southeast Asia have a whole warehouse full of remains over there, and every once in a while, when it's politically advantageous, they will release a few," Murry said. Murry said one of the most effective means of getting some results would be to place economic sanctions on Laos and Southeast Asia.

"It would really be impossible to just go in and demand that the remains or prisoners be returned. The prisoners could be scattered all over the country. Besides, how many guys could we send in? The government doesn't want to risk another involvement somewhere," he said.

Murry acknowledged that some Vietnam veterans may resent the media and public attention given to crises such as those that occurred in Beirut and Iran.

"Something happening today gets more attention than something that's not a hot news item," he said, calling the POW-MIA issue "not a flash-in-the-pan news item."

BSC gets facelift; will re-open in fall

By Bethinda Edmondson
Staff Writer

Ten months after a fiscal crisis closed it down, the Baptist Student Center is being renovated for student occupancy next fall.

Because of area Baptists' commitment to the center's "ministerial mission," it has survived plans to convert it to a library storage center and a prison half-way house, said Paul Hicks, BSC advisory council chairman.

Campers on Mission, an Illinois Baptist volunteer group, has been working with local church volunteers for the past week to renovate the center, which closed last May.

According to Hicks, who is also the pastor of the Murdale Baptist Church in Carbondale, the BSC administration brought the issue of selling the center before delegates at the State Convention of Illinois Baptists in Mount Vernon last October.

The delegates voted overwhelmingly to re-open the center, but because of the lack of funding and personnel the delegates were charged with the responsibility of getting it ready for the next school year. That's where the volunteers came in.

"The administration made a black-and-white financial decision to close the building," Hicks said. "It was in the red, there weren't enough students and the costs were higher than the profits."

"They used financial procedures to judge the situation, but the body of the convention wanted to look at the ministry concept," he said. "The way we see it, what is a ministry worth — $500 or $5,000? Ministries don't always pay themselves back."

Hicks said that the BSC is not designed to be a profit-making entity, so if it makes any profits next year "we'll be excited to death."

He said the administration just hopes to break even, as it expects to do after a semester or two, when they hope the center will have capacity occupancy.

Changes in the structure of the BSC are centered mainly around construction, such as a pitch roof being constructed to prevent leakage, and price. The cost of room and board per semester will be $1,100, which is about $100 below the cost of other University-approved residence halls, Hicks said. He said the rules of the center, including separate-sex housing and enforced visitation hours, will remain the same as it before the center closed.

The BSC administration took an opinion poll of the residents' feelings toward the housing rules recently, to determine whether resident grumblings about rules caused a drop in the number of occupants at the center.

The administration found that the number of residents who complained about separate-sex housing and visitation hours were equalled by the number of residents who said they had picked the BSC for the those policies, Hicks said. Because of this, the administration has decided to continue the policies, he said.

"The Baptist Student Center offers a Christian environment, and therefore it has certain rules that reflect those values," Hicks explained. "We're not going to compromise these values just to be like other dorms on campus, though I don't know that our rules are all that stringent. SIU has a rule of allowing no alcohol on the premises, too."

The No. 1 priority for the center is advertising, Hicks said. To avoid confusion about the purpose of the BSC, the management has erected a sign outside the building which reads "Christian Living Center," to indicate that the center is for all denominations.

Prison worker testifies about conditions

WASHINGTON (AP) — A staff member at the federal prison at Leavenworth, Kan., told a House subcommittee Thursday how she was held hostage for two hours and sexually assaulted last year by an inmate serving multiple life terms.

Barbara Richter, who worked at the time in the prison hospital, told a House Judiciary subcommittee the institution was understaffed and only one guard was in the hospital at the time — and he was unaware of the incident until it was too late.

Richter was among four representatives of the American Federation of Government Employees union testifying about what they called a lack of staff and poor morale among employees at the 44 institutions in the federal prison system.

Norman A. Carlson, director of the Federal Bureau of Prisons, acknowledged that staffing is low and said that unless a current expansion program is completed, "future overcrowding would far exceed tolerable levels."

Carlson said the federal correctional facilities contain a record inmate population of 31,262, which is 28 percent over the capacity the institutions were designed to house.

But Carlson disagreed sharply with civil liberties attorneys who testified that guards beat prisoners at the Marion correctional facility after two guards were killed there last October.

The attorneys asked for the subcommittee or some other impartial group to conduct an investigation, and panel Chairman Robert W. Kastenmeier, D-Wis., said he would consider the request. Heavy restrictions still apply at Marion as a result of the killings.

Richter, in testimony and an interview afterwards, described the assault she experienced Nov. 30, 1983, while she served as a medical records technician in the hospital.

Dish will bring news via satellite

By Dave Saelens
Staff Writer

WSIU-FM will soon be receiving United Press International news by means of a satellite instead of telephone cables, thanks to a new satellite receiving dish recently installed on the west side of the Communications Building.

Jak Tichenor, news director for WSIU-FM, said Thursday that Carbondale was one of the areas designated by UPI to receive a dish for use in receiving printed and audio broadcast news.

Tichenor said the dish, which cost almost $10,000, belongs to the University for the length of its contract with UPI and will rid the station of its dependence on telephone cables to receive news from UPI.

"The benefit of using a satellite instead of telephone cables is that the UPI audio will come in much clearer and cleaner," he said, "and there is less opportunity for something to go wrong," such as wind blowing down telephone lines.

Tichenor said Physical Plant employees and engineering staff from the Broadcast Service installed the 3-meter dish Monday next to the already standing 10-meter dish next to the Communications Building. He said the larger dish is used to receive programming for Public Broadcasting Station television programs and National Public Radio programs.

Although the dish is not yet in use by the station, Tichenor said it should be operational next week when a representative from UPI comes to SIUC to "sight" the dish — position it so that it receives signals from the Westar 3 satellite. Tichenor said UPI is currently setting up a system in which a limited number of radio stations across the country will receive dishes.

Lobacz: concern blazes his trail

By Margaret Callcott
Student Writer

Steve Lobacz is a name well known on the SIU-C campus. To some it is noteworthy; to others, notorious. Yet, in his three years as director of ministries at the Wesley Foundation, Lobacz has definitely been noticed.

His views may seem radical to the more conservative members of the community, but Lobacz has been as well-spoken as he is outspoken on such issues as taxes, nuclear weapons, foreign policy and sexuality.

While some people consider him far too liberal for his own or anybody else's good, many find him a refreshing alternative to the norm among church ministries.

Lobacz will be leaving Wesley in June, but not without leaving his mark on SIU-C and the community.

LOBACZ CAME TO Carbondale and the Wesley Foundation in June 1981, after completing three years at Garrett-Evangelical Seminary in Evanston and a two-year internship at Salford Methodist near Manchester, England.

He grew up in Chicago and finished high school in Olney. He attended Olney Central College, the University of Illinois at Champaign and the University of Sterling in Scotland.

Lobacz's interest in peace drew him to draft counseling duties early in 1982 and led him to become a member of the Peace Action Committee of the Southern Illinois Coalition for Peace in 1983.

The Coalition for Peace is an organization concerned with peace and non-violence, Lobacz said.

"They are what I would consider a church," Lobacz said of the coalition. "The people there really care about each other."

AS A DRAFT counselor,

Lobacz helped young men become aware of the options to and the consequences of being drafted. He said that after two years in the Army, with service in Vietnam, he would have done anything for anybody to help fight the draft.

Lobacz spent 10 months in Vietnam as a teletype operator before finishing his required two-year period of service as a company clerk in the United States.

After pulling guard duty around the perimeter of his camp in Saigon for three months, he decided to become a conscientious objector and refused to carry a weapon.

"I felt like the Army could not depend upon me to kill anyone else," Lobacz said.

TODAY LOBACZ encourages people to be advocates of conscientious objection, a position which opposes weapons and other forms of violence as a way of handling conflicts.

Recently Lobacz has captured the spotlight with his views on American foreign policy, government, and — particularly — sexuality.

In 1981, He allowed the Gay and Lesbian People's Union to hold meetings at the Wesley Foundation and distributed pamphlets stating that homosexuals were welcome at services there.

LOBACZ SAID the resulting strong sentiment — including approval and disapproval — from members of the community created a dialogue between church and non-church people that resulted in a deeper understanding of the role of gays in relation to the church.

"A lack of acceptance of gays implies a lack of acceptance of diversity in the church," Lobacz said. "If we're going to be a loving institution, we must accept all persons."

Lobacz said that if a church doesn't have openly gay members, it needs to be looking for them, because there are many young people growing up with suppressed emotional feelings, which can lead to unhealthy attitudes.

LOBACZ'S INTEREST in foreign policy stems from an early interest in foreign countries.

"Since I was a child, I've always dreamed of going to other countries and seeing other places," he said.

While visiting Bangkok during his military service in Vietnam, he vowed to make an overseas trip every year to help broaden his horizons.

Lobacz's vow resulted in visits to Poland, Germany, the Soviet Union and Peru during and after his senior year at the University of Sterling in Scotland. His Christmas vacation that year was spent working in an Israeli kibbutz picking bananas and walnuts, and after graduation he visited an African tea plantation in Kenya.

students on study trips to Ireland and India.

In January of 1983 he went to Cuba to learn more about the church and society there, and during the 1983-84 Christmas season he spent two weeks at a Spanish-language school in Nicaragua.

Visiting other countries has led to an interest in their political affairs, which often run contrary to U.S. foreign policy.

On his trip to Nicaragua, Lobacz found that the U.S. government's efforts to establish what the Reagan administration thinks Nicaragua's status quo should be have created immense problems for the Nicaraguans, the majority of whom oppose U.S. intervention in Central America.

"SOCIALISM HASN'T been given a chance to work in poorer countries," Lobacz said. "But it's obvious that it's working in Nicaragua, and it should be given the chance to succeed."

Lobacz said he will probably vote for "just about anyone" he perceives as capable of beating Reagan in November because of the destruction he feels the president's policies have caused in foreign countries.

"Reagan bases his foreign policy on fear, and fear is never a good thing," he said.

Lobacz has withheld 50 percent of his federal income tax for the past two years as a statement to the government that he doesn't want his tax money spent on weapons.

"IT'S A public statement to encourage people to think about what their taxes go for, and also to make things difficult for the government so they will know there are objections," he said.

Lobacz objects to nuclear weapons, saying that they will backfire on us. He also believes that nuclear power is costing the United States more than what it seems to be worth at this point.

"We're spending an awful lot of money on things we'll never use," he said of nuclear weapons. "and if we do use them, the government is lying to us, because they say we're not going to use them."

THESE DAYS, the Wesley parsonage screen door sports a sticker that says, "We support the freeze." This is done in more ways than one, as the parsonage usually goes without heat during the winter months.

"I see lots of people with less than I have and I think I can do without (the heat)," he said. "Of course, it's not good for the plants."

Although Lobacz will leave Wesley in June, his imprints are likely to stick around for a while. Beside the building improvements made during his stay, Lobacz feels that he has put Wesley in the public eye and that the Wesley Board of Directors understands campus ministries better since he has been here.

"He certainly will be missed — there's no question about that," said Carol McDermott, secretary of the board.

"YOU COME IN by yourself and do your own thing," McDermott said. She described Lobacz's job as an odd position to come into, because a new minister arrives without the support of a United Methodist network already behind him.

"Steve is a very practicing Christian," McDermott said. "He not only says what he thinks should be done — he tries to do something about it, which can be sort of controversial sometimes."

Lobacz is particularly supportive of the Campus Ministries at SIU-C, saying that they are especially important because they give students guidelines to live by when they're on their own.

"Going to ministers isn't as threatening as going to counselors with problems," he said. "I think just being there for people means a lot."

CHICAGO (AP) — An expert on Soviet-American relations says scholarly exchanges and tourism between the two countries are flourishing despite the chilly state of official relations.

In an article in the April issue of the Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists, University of Chicago historian James Cracraft says the trend "must be welcome news to anyone who deplores the present political stalemate."

Official Washington-to-Moscow talks have all but ceased, and two sets of talks in Geneva on nuclear arms limitations have been suspended, he noted.

The U.S. State Department reports that scientific exchanges conducted under various official U.S.-Soviet agreements dating back to 1972 are running at 20 to 25 percent of their 1978-1979 levels.

But this still means that between 300 and 500 U.S. scientists, studying "everything from agriculture to zoology," will have gone to the Soviet Union in the 1983-84 academic year, Cracraft said. At the same time, about 250 of their Soviet colleagues will have come to the United States.

Soviet visas granted to U.S. tourists decreased from more than 65,000 in 1976 to fewer than 13,000 in 1980. But in the first 10 months of 1983, the number of the visas had risen to more than 38,000, according to Cracraft.

He estimated that in 1984 the number of American tourists traveling to the Soviet Union will reach if not exceed, the 1976 level.

As an example of closer unofficial exchanges, Cracraft said that in May 1983, 26 leading Soviet scholars formed the Committee for the Defense of Peace and Opposition to the Nuclear Threat and established contact with Western scientific organizations interested in arms control.

The Most Sophisticated Training Ground For Nuclear Engineering Isn't On The Ground.

It's on a Navy ship.

The Navy has more than 1,900 reactor-years of nuclear power experience—more than anyone else in America. The Navy has the most sophisticated nuclear equipment in the world. And the Navy operates over half of the nuclear reactors in America.

With a nuclear program like that, you know the Navy also offers the most comprehensive and sophisticated nuclear training.

Every officer in the Nuclear Navy completes a full year of graduate level technical training. Outside the Navy, this kind of program would cost you thousands. In the Navy, you're paid while you learn.

Then, as a nuclear-trained officer, you supervise highly trained personnel in the operation of the most advanced nuclear propulsion plants ever developed. You get a level of technical and management experience unequalled anywhere else.

You get important responsibilities and you get them fast. Because in the Navy, as your knowledge grows, so do your responsibilities.

Today's Nuclear Navy is one of the most challenging and rewarding career choices a man can make. And that choice can pay off while you're still in school. Qualified juniors and seniors earn approximately $1,000 per month while they finish school.

As a nuclear-trained officer, after 4 years with regular promotions and pay increases, you can be earning as much as $40,500. That's on top of a full benefits package that includes medical and dental care, and 30 days' vacation earned each year.

As a nuclear-trained officer, you also earn a place among this nation's most qualified and respected professionals. So, if you're majoring in math, engineering or the physical sciences, send in the coupon. Find out more about the most sophisticated training ground for nuclear engineering. Today's Nuclear Navy.

Coalition for Safety begins monitoring rape cases

By Terry Lovecke
Staff Writer

In view of the prevalence of violent acts committed against women and the outcome of recent court cases in Jackson County, the Coalition for Safety has formed a court watch program to better understand judicial proceedings in such cases.

The coalition, which was formed about a year ago to pool ideas to improve women's safety in Carbondale, is conducting its first court watch in the trial of Kevin L. Simmons, which began Monday in Jackson County Court.

"Right now we're at the stage of gathering data about how the entire process works," said coalition member Emily Stafford.

Simmons is charged with rape, deviate sexual assault, armed robbery, armed violence, home invasion and residential burglary in connection with a rape on June 19, 1983, of a 23-year-old woman in a Freeman Street apartment.

"In view of the outcome of recent court cases we decided to form the court watch,"

Stafford said. Stafford refrained from naming particular cases that caused concern.

A jury acquitted Simmons in November of an attempted rape charge involving a 15-year-old girl in her southeast Carbondale home Aug 20, 1983. The father of the victim had shot a man in the leg who was fleeing from his daughter's room. Simmons was arrested later that night when he was found at his 308 S. Graham St. home with a bullet wound in his right leg.

Stafford said that case definitely fits the category of cases that caused the coalition to initiate the court watch. Other recent rape cases include that of Arron L. Snowden, who was found guilty but mentally ill on Feb. 2 of four counts of rape, two counts of deviate sexual assault and one count of home invasion. Snowden is scheduled for sentencing April 17.

During each watch program, Stafford said the coalition is conducting meetings to discuss the proceedings. Organizations involved in the watch are

Jackson County Mental Health Center, Jackson County Sheriff's Department, Memorial Hospital of Carbondale, Women's Center Rape Action Committee, SIUC Women's Services, SIUC Counseling Center and Carbondale Police Department.

Defense attorney Tom Mansfield said defense testimony should end Thursday and closing statements by himself and prosecuting attorney Paul Panno should follow on Friday.

Bandit, Somit lead ugly man race

By Renee Rybarczyk
Student Writer

Who would you vote for ugly man on campus?

The Ugly Man on Campus race is tight between Bandit the Saluki mascot, who is in first place and President Albert Somit. In second, according to contest coordinator Mary Beth Davis.

Alpha Phi Omega, a national co-educational service fraternity, is sponsoring the contest to raise money for the American Cancer Society, Special Olympics and Synergy.

According to Davis, student donations are "so-so" this year. The contest ends Friday.

The eight nominees in the

The object of the contest is to raise money for charity drives. All eight nominees were asked and agreed to pledge their support.

An awards ceremony will be held at 8 p.m. Monday in Gugley Hall to announce the winner.

Tables have been set up at the south end of the student center for two more days from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Students who wish to contribute money to these charity drives may vote by slipping their donation into one of eight jars labeled with nominees' names.

SIU-C's spring blood drive expected to better '82 record

By Morgan Falkner
Student Writer

SIU-C's annual spring blood drive, being given an all-out promotional boost, kicks off at 10:30 a.m. Monday and will run through Friday, April 6.

The drive is being sponsored by the American Red Cross and two SIU-C organizations. Mobilization of Volunteer Effort and the Arnold Air Society are coordinating what Red Cross blood services consultant Bridget Smith describes as the most organized and elaborate blood drives ever held here.

The blood drive's goal, as it has been in the past, is to break the 1,850-unit SIU-C record set during the fall '82 drive. The big difference this time, according to Smith and Mark Beveridge, MOVE coordinator, is publicity.

Live entertainment and gift coupons have been arranged to attract donors, Beveridge said.

Wendy's fast food restaurant will give coupons good toward food purchases to anyone who registers to donate — whether the potential donor is eligible to donate or not. Plaza and Wuxtry records are providing merchandise to be given away in a drawing on Friday, April 6.

SIU-C will participate in the drawing as well. The University Bookstore and Student Center food service will both offer gift certificates to those who register to donate. Tentatively scheduled to be on hand for the drive's kick off Monday will be new SIU-C football coach Ray Dorr and members of his squad.

Radio station WIDB is also to be involved over the course of the week-long drive, broadcasting from the Student Center site where blood donations will be made.

A jazz band and a professional clown have agreed to perform during the drive, too.

Beveridge said that one focus of this drive is donor recruitment. Arnold Air Society, Air Force ROTC group, has been busy setting up appointments for individuals to give blood at certain times during the week. The society has arranged for several competitions between on-campus groups to increase the number of donors.

Smith, who represents an 80-county area for the Red Cross, said that "In the past our objective has been to run the blood drive smoothly. Now it's the number of donors we're going after." Smith said that if SIU-C reaches its goal she would recommend that it receive an award from the American Association of Blood Banks.

The drive will be held in Student Center Ballroom D from Monday, April 2 through Thursday, April 5, and in Ballroom A, B and C on Friday, April 6. The drive will take place from 10:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. each day.

Judge angry at petty cases in federal courts

CHICAGO (AP) — A federal judge says he is enraged by people who bring petty grievances into federal court.

U.S. District Judge Charles Kocoras charges that federal civil rights statutes are being "debased" and "manipulated" by such practices. He cited several examples, including the following:

— A high school student who sued over a reduction of his grade-point average from 95.478 to 95.413.

— A dog owner who sued a city dog catcher because the owner's dog was locked up for several hours.

— An acting police chief who sued after he was reprimanded for trying to arrange the ouster of a village manager.

Kocoras said Tuesday that such plaintiffs had stretched application of the civil rights laws far beyond their legislative purpose.

The Ku Klux Klan Act of 1871, enacted to "curtail outrages perpetrated by the Klan in the Reconstruction-era South," is one of several laws passed to allow citizens to seek redress in court for alleged civil rights violations by government officials, the judge said.

Now the law is being used to "transform the federal courts into the favorite forums of litigious individuals intent on prosecuting trivial causes," Kocoras said.

The judge said corruption of the law had "become all too common in recent years as plaintiffs and their lawyers have tried to make a federal case of every petty grievance."

Church slow to redeem condemned

VATICAN CITY (AP) — For renegade members of the Roman Catholic church, condemnation was once as quick as the sentence of an Inquisition court — or as final as being burned at the stake.

But where the church condemned in haste, it has repented at leisure. Restoring the standing of a select few outcasts, such as Galileo Galilei, Martin Luther and Joan of Arc, can take hundreds of years.

Galileo bedeviled church leaders by reducing the Earth's status in the heavens, insisting that the sun was the central body of the solar system with the planets revolving around it. Summoned to Rome and tried by an Inquisition court in 1633, the astronomer was forced to abjure his beliefs — and only this month did the church fully admit the errors of its condemnation.

Joan of Arc, who inspired French troops trying to expel the English, was tried for heresy and witchcraft by French clerics who supported the English, and who considered her claim of direct inspiration from God to undermine the church hierarchy. She was burned at the stake in 1431 — and not made a saint until nearly 500 years later.

Martin Luther's 16th-century religious rebellion sparked armed battles between Protestants and Roman Catholics on the plains of Europe. A joint Catholic-Lutheran commission, strongly supported by Pope John Paul II, has been studying for two decades the teachings and protests of the German monk who led the protestant Reformation, but he remains excommunicated.

The church's handling of Galileo, Joan of Arc and Luther shows the Vatican has no single way of revising its past views or "rehabilitating" those scorned in the past.

"There isn't any one process for the simple reason that no two cases are alike," says

Monsignor William Purdy, an expert on Vatican history.

Purdy said in an interview that much of the current revisionism dates back to the Second Vatican Council, which in 1965 opened the church to a more tolerant view of divergent thoughts.

The church also has other reasons for accepting one-time outcasts. For example, the Vatican says reconciling the boastful, swaggering Galileo with the scientifically unenlightened prelates of his time will improve the church's historically strained relations with science.

Dominican friar Bernard V. Lity, one of the authors of a new Vatican-commissioned study exonerating Galileo, said, "The work will open horizons and discussions." He calls Galileo a "symbol of modern times."

Pope John Paul II said last year that the church erred in 1633 when it condemned Galileo as being "vehemently suspected of heresy." The Vatican put the final touches on the process March 1 when its newspaper, L'Osservatore Romano, said, "The so-called heresy of Galileo seems to have no foundation."

Joan of Arc, the excommunicated Maid of Orleans, was burned at the stake on May 30, 1431. Twenty-five years and 115 witnesses later, the church realized the political motives behind her burning and officially rehabilitated the French national heroine who led several successful battles against the British. The pendulum had swung completely by May 1920 when the church canonized her.

Catholics continue their research on Luther.

The pope, speaking on March 2 to a joint Catholic-Lutheran commission, said that a "more complete picture of the person and teaching of Luther" was a key element in working out eventual reconciliation between Catholics and Lutherans.

Last November, John Paul praised the monk for his "profound religiousness," and called for more work so Luther's life and legacy can be "better understood" and the "true image of the Reformation" can be reached.

A month later, he visited a Lutheran church in Rome, becoming the first Roman Catholic pontiff to attend a Lutheran service.

Still, there is no evidence the church will revoke Luther's excommunication.

"An excommunication is solely a type of ecclesiastical sanction that puts a disability on a man who's living," Purdy said. Retracting it would serve no practical purpose because "Luther's either been in purgatory or heaven for a very long time," he added.

Church officials have condemned and excommunicated thousands of people over the centuries, and Purdy said the Vatican is not about to engage in wholesale revisions of their reputations.

For example, he noted the cases of Giordano Bruno, burned at the stake as a heretic in Rome on Feb. 17, 1600, for his advanced cosmological ideas, and Venetian priest Paolo Sarpi, excommunicated in 1606 for challenging papal authority.

Purdy said he knows of no formal move to refurbish their images, but added, "Most Catholics wouldn't defend the way in which these people were treated."

Sometimes the impetus for revising church views comes not from the Vatican, but from individual religious orders.

For example, Dominican friar Innocenzo Venchi is promoting sainthood for Renaissance friar Girolamo Savonarola the Dominican religious reformer who after his excommunication in 1497 was hanged in Florence and then burned.

Men's golf match still on despite weather report

By George Pappas Staff Writer

Despite the rain and frost warnings for Savoy, the Illini Golf Invitational scheduled for this weekend is still on, Saluki Coach Mary Beth McGirr said.

The Invitational was originally scheduled to be 54 holes and played on the Blue and Red courses in Savoy, but it has been changed to a 36-hole tournament to be played on the Blue course. According to McGirr, only the Blue course is ready for action after the rain that came down this week. She said that the Blue course has a better draining system than the Red course.

The Salukis, who finished sixth in a 15-team field at the FIU Sunshine Invitational in Florida two weeks ago, were not able to compete in the Evansville Open last weekend because of rain.

SIU-C's opponents this weekend are: Illinois, Purdue, Western Illinois, SIU-E, Iowa, Wisconsin, Bradley, Nebraska-Wesleyan, St. Francis, Western Michigan and Loyola.

McGirr said that since Purdue won the Big Ten tournament last year, it, along with Iowa, Wisconsin and Western Michigan, is the favorite to place in the top five. Last season, the Salukis finished eighth out of 15 teams. McGirr said she would like to take it one step better this season.

"If we could finish anywhere in the top five," McGirr said, "that would be great."

McGirr isn't sure if the bad weather and playing only on the Blue course will help the Salukis.

"The Blue course is much easier than the Red one," she said, "so we should see some good scores this weekend. As far as the weather goes, I don't know if this will hurt us or not. We know it will be cold so it will be up to the players to adapt."

Each team will have six players and the top five scores will count. McGirr said that Scott Briggs will play No. 1, John Schaefer No. 2, Tom Jones No. 3, J.D. Tomlinson No. 4, Tim Sass No. 5 and Jay Sala No. 6.

In last year's Illini Invitational, Schaefer finished the highest for the Salukis at fifth place out of 90 players. Briggs placed 15th.

Women tracksters favored to do well in 7-team home meet

By Steve Koulos
Staff Writer

Illinois, Illinois State, and SIU-C should field the three strongest teams in the Saluki Relays at 9 a.m. Saturday at McAndrew Stadium.

It will be the first home of the season for the Salukis.

Other teams in the seven-team field are Western Michigan, Southwest Missouri State, Murray State and SIU-E. No team scores will be kept in the meet.

Saluki Coach Don DeNoon thinks the Salukis match up well against the Redbirds because their top distance runner, Wendy Van Mierlo, is ill and won't compete. Van Mierlo ran in the preliminaries of the 3,000-meter run in the NCAA indoor national meet three weeks ago.

Illinois State handily won the Gateway Collegiate Athletic Conference indoor championship February with 166 points. The Redbirds had three first-place finishes by Van Mierlo in the one-, two- and three-mile events. SIU-C finished sixth in the meet with 37 points.

"Based on the top six events, if our kids finish exactly as they are seeded, we could win the meet by 10-15 points if team scores were kept," DeNoon said. "Perhaps Illinois would be second, Illinois State third, and everybody else would be competing for fourth."

Saluki athletes are seeded in the top two in 11 of 18 events. Illinois State has 10 seeded in the top two, and Illinois has nine. But Illinois State is seeded first in seven events, while the Salukis are seeded first in five events and Illinois four.

DeNoon said he expects first-place finishes from Rhonda McCausland in the throwing events, and Denise Blackman and Debra Davis in the sprints.

McCausland, a sophomore, is seeded first in three events — the shot put (46 feet, 1.5 inches), the discus (148-4) and the javelin (140-9). McCausland and teammates Cynthia Joy (134-5) and Laurie Dvorak (120-3.75) are the top three seeds in the javelin.

McCausland's top challenger in the discus could be second-seed Donna Hollingworth (146-9). Her top opponent in the shot put might be No. 2 seed Angie Heitz of Illinois (44-10).

Blackman will run in four events — the 100- and 200-meter dashes, and the 4x100 and 4x400 relays.

The Salukis just might dominate the 200 with the top three seeds in Blackman (24.18 seconds), and teammates Jennifer Bartley (25.27) and Cathy Davis (25.37). Blackman is seeded second in the 100 (11.92) behind Kim Dunlap of Illinois (11.90). The Salukis are seeded second behind Illinois State in the 4x100 and 4x400 relays.

Davis, the only senior on the team, is seeded first in the 400 (55.60). Her closest challenger is Illinois' Rolanda Conda (57.30).

SIU-C's Karen Cooper is seeded second behind Maria Shoup of Western Michigan in the 400 hurdles. Shoup's time is 62.0, and Cooper's is 62.64.

Other hopefuls for the Salukis include Sue Anderson, who is seeded fourth in the high jump (5-7) and triple jump (34-2). In the long jump, Sydney Edwards is seeded fourth and Jennifer Bartley fifth, even though they have identical jumps of 17-9.

The Salukis' biggest weakness is in the distance events. They don't have seeds in the top six in the 800, 1,500, 3,000, 5,000 and 10,000. Sally Zack, Lisa Hicks and Odette James will compete in the 10,000 for the first time this season. DeNoon said that they have been running well.

DeNoon said running at McAndrew Stadium will be an advantage for the Salukis.

"I think a home meet is always an advantage in track or cross country as long as there are fans cheering the team on," he said. "I think it helps that we're used to the tough terrain at McAndrew because we know where the crevasses, cracks, and holes are in the track."

The lone Saluki who isn't healthy is distance runner Tammy Talbert, who has strep throat and has lost 12 pounds. DeNoon said he isn't sure if she will compete Saturday in the 800.

Heidi Eastman, SIU-C's No. 2 singles player, has won three of her last five matches to boost her record to 6-8 this spring.

Women seek to extend winning streak to 5

By Jim Lexa
Sports Editor

Just when Coach Judy Auld and her SIU-C women's tennis squad took off for Southwest Missouri State, the rain disappeared and the sun came out, perfect weather to practice tennis in.

SIU-C, which left Thursday, will take on Kansas State (3-5 this spring and 6-11 overall) Friday afternoon and Gateway Conference member Southwest (1-1, 3-8) Friday night. The Salukis play Stephens College (Division II) Saturday morning.

Auld is used to the rain that often forces her squad indoors or to cancel practice for the day. "It always does this to us," said Auld, whose squad is 2-8, 13-13. "All it takes is for us to get down to the court, then it starts raining."

Her squad may get rained out this weekend. Southwest has played just two matches this spring after being rained out six times. Kansas State is used to the rain. The weather has allowed the Wildcats just one outdoor practice this season. Stephens opened its season this week.

Auld said she "feels confident" that her squad will leave Southwest with three wins. That would give the Salukis a five-match winning streak, and it would put them within three matches of .500, the closest they've been to it since SIU-C lost its third match during its spring trip.

Kansas State is a "decent team," Auld said, but added that the Wildcats are not as strong as Kansas, which fell to the Salukis 6-3 in the fall.

Stephens is in a rebuilding stage, Auld said.

"They had a good program in the early '70s," Auld said. "We beat them twice last year. They have good players at the top of their lineup, then they trail off toward the end."

The crucial match is against Southwest. Seedings at the GCAC tournament are based on conference matches. SIU-C won its lone GCAC match this spring, 9-0 over Indiana State. Auld would like to go with her lineup that she has used all spring, but No. 1 singles Alessandra Molinari has had a sore shoulder this week.

Auld is worried about overplaying Molinari this weekend, but she wants her in top shape for the Southwest match. Only rest will rid the pain in Molinari's shoulder. She tries to shrug off the injury as nothing, but it hurts her.

"One day I get up and I can't hold on to my racket anymore," Molinari said.

Carter optioned to Cubs' farm team

MESA, Ariz. (AP) — The Chicago Cubs Thursday optioned four players to their Iowa farm club, sent catcher Bill Hayes to their minor league complex for reassignment and placed veteran pitcher Rick Reuschel on the 15-day disabled list.

Pitcher Don Schulze, infielders Dave Owen and Dan Rohn and outfielder Joe Carter were optioned to Iowa, reducing the roster to 28 players, three over the opening-day limit.

and they are good enough to play."

A question mark still surrounds the status of defensive lineman Kenny Foster. He is seeking another year of eligibility, and his case is with the Missouri Valley Conference, Dorr said. "He has been given permission to practice," Dorr said. "That's a positive sign."

Dorr said that if Foster is not allowed to play this season, then the defensive line would be an area that was hit hard by players who ran out of eligibility. Former Saluki lineman Eddie Norman signed a contract with the Memphis Showboats of the United States Football League, but he was cut from the team.

The defensive secondary was also hit hard, with starting cornerbacks Donnell Daniel and Terry Taylor and safety Greg Shipp all having their eligibility expire.

Last year's starting fullback, Corky Field, decided not to play his senior year. Running back Terry Green lost out on his bid for an extra year, and Dorr said those two losses have hurt the ground attack.

Dorr said it will be a healthy Saluki team that opens the season.

College coaches favor shot clock use

SEATTLE (AP) — For the first time, a majority of U.S. college basketball coaches favor a shot clock, a survey by the National Association of Basketball Coaches showed Thursday.

The survey found 53 percent of NCAA coaches approving a 45-second shot clock, which 11 conferences experimented with this season.

That's a major step toward adoption of the rule, which will be considered at an NCAA Rules Committee meeting next week.

If it opts for a shot, the committee also will decide whether it should be in effect the entire game or it should be turned off for the last few minutes.

In a 1980 NABC survey, three clock suggestions were turned down by as much as a 10-to-1 margin.

"But I have no idea what the NCAA Rules Committee is going to do," said Vanderbilt Coach C.M. Newton.

Saluki intermediate hurdler Sam Nwosu may participate. Nwosu has been hampered by a sore leg this week but Hartzog is hopeful he'll be ready when the gun sounds.

A number of McAndrew Stadium track and field records are expected to fall Saturday, namely the 1,600-meter record currently held by Kansas. The Salukis were timed at 3:02.71 last weekend. That was a new school record and was the second fastest collegiate time ever.

The 200 and 400-meter relay records could go, along with the hammer throw, pole vault and high jump records, according to Hartzog.

Hartzog said another good race will be the 3,000-meter steeplechase in which Salukis Edison Wackerburn and Chris Bunyan will be attempting to qualify for the NCAAs.

Hartzog had nothing but words of praise for Indiana Coach Sam Bell. Bell has consistently had contending teams year after year.

"Sam Bell is a great track coach," Hartzog said. "He's been the dominant coach in the Big 10 and he's won more championships than anyone else. It's always fun to run against him. He's a complete track coach."

The meet begins at noon with the field events.

Holland enjoys underdog role

SEATTLE (AP) — Virginia Coach Terry Holland is enjoying the role of the underdog in the NCAA Final Four.

"The pressure is on the seeded teams," he said Thursday. "I do think if we're tied 40-40 with 10 seconds to play, it won't bother us. It could conceivably bother Houston. I think that is the advantage of being the underdog."

Holland knows about pressure, having been expected to produce a national champion the past three seasons with 7-foot-4 Ralph Sampson.

The Cavaliers are here as the only unranked team, hoping to follow their Atlantic Coast Conference brethren North Carolina State, which won the title last year in a stunning upset over Houston.

"N.C. State blazed a trail for us," Holland said. "A lot of underdogs have made the Final Four, but the fact they went further helps us believe that we can go further."

Virginia's 21-11 record and talent pales in comparison with the other survivors — second-ranked Georgetown at 32-3, third-ranked Kentucky at 29-4 and No. 5 Houston at 31-4. If they win the title, the Cavaliers would be the losingest team ever to do it. N.C. State's 10 losses last year were the most by a champion.

In Saturday's semifinals, Virginia meets Houston in opener, followed by Georgetown against Kentucky at the Kingdome.

To reach the Final Four, Virginia beat Iona 58-57, Arkansas 53-51 in overtime, Syracuse 63-55 and Indiana 50-48.

The Cavaliers were beaten by Houston earlier this season 74-65.

"If it were a regular season game, there could be the revenge factor," Holland said, "but with the Final Four you don't need anything to fire you up."

The Cavaliers are expected to be busy with Akeem Olajuwon, Houston's 7-foot center who led the nation in rebounds with 13.7 per game, and averaged 16.6 points and 5.7 blocks.

"He always seems to blossom in tournament time and they're always pushing the ball in to him," Holland said. "Michael Young also finds a way to hurt you." Young, a 6-7 forward, led the Cougars with a 20.1 average.

Houston, in the Final Four for the third straight year, also has 6-8 Rickie Winslow up front and a good outside shooter and penetrator in guard Alvin Franklin.

Olden Polynice, a 6-11 freshman, took over as Sampson's replacement at Virginia, averaging 7.7 points. Also up front is Kenton Edelin, 6-7, mainly a defensive player. The Cavs get outside shooting from forward Jim Miller and guards Rick Carlisle and Othell Wilson.

The Kentucky-Georgetown matchup focuses on Patrick Ewing, a 7-0 All-America, against Kentucky's Twin Towers of 7-1 Sam Bowie and 6-11 Melvin Turpin.

Bowie said upon arriving Thursday that he is only at three-quarters speed because of an ankle sprain suffered in last weekend's Midwest Regional championship victory over Illinois. Kenny Walker, the 6-8 forward who fills out the Wildcats' massive front line, said he is only half-speed because of a strained achilles tendon suffered in the same game.

Colts moving to Indianapolis

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The Baltimore Colts of the National Football League will move to Indianapolis and play in the new Hoosier Dome, Mayor William Hudnut said Thursday.

The mayor announced the move of the team shortly after Colts Coach Frank Kush and another team official arrived in Indianapolis.

"It's great (coming to Indianapolis). It's something we're doing with a lot of anticipation. It's a new experience," said Kush.

Kush arrived here with Michael Chernoff, the Colts' general counsel, on a flight from Baltimore in the private jet of team owner Robert Irsay. The owner was not aboard.

7-foot centers match up evenly

SEATTLE (AP) — In a pickup game of playground basketball, which center would you choose first: Patrick Ewing or Akeem Olajuwon?

C.M. Newton, basketball coach at Vanderbilt, smiled at the question. "Well," he said, "if I picked Ewing, you wouldn't be too badly off with Olajuwon, now would you?"

College basketball's two dominant 7-foot centers are both in the NCAA tournament's Final Four and they could stage an explosive showdown for the championship Monday night. Ewing and No. 2 Georgetown go against No. 3 Kentucky and Olajuwon and No. 5 Houston faces unranked Virginia in the tournament semifinals Saturday.

The big men had similar seasons statistically and, except for a strange slowdown game between Georgetown and Southern Methodist in the tournament, their postseason numbers are comparable as well.

During the season, Ewing averaged 16.0 points and 10.1

rebounds, shooting 66.1 percent from the field and 65.2 from the foul line. He is at 13.7 points on 59.3 percent from the field and 9.7 rebounds for the tournament.

Olajuwon had a 16.9 point average and 13.7 rebounds per game in the regular season. He shot 67.3 percent from the field but only 52.5 percent on free throws. In the tournament, he is averaging 23.3 points on 69 percent field goal accuracy and 12.3 rebounds.

"They are both emerging players who will be better in the pros than they are in college," said George Raveling, coach at the University of Iowa and assistant coach of the U.S. Olympic team. "They have unusual quickness, are excellent jumpers, great shot blockers and rebounders."

Olajuwon has a devastating spin move to the basket and seems a shade quicker off his feet, which may account for his national lead in blocked shots (189) and rebounds (479). Ewing had 106 blocked shots and 325 rebounds.

Ewing has outstanding range under the basket and surprising speed that allows him to block a shot, change direction and charge in front of the Hoyas' fast break.

Salukis hit road to face Cards

By Daryl Van Schoewen
Staff Writer

By now, the baseball Salukis may feel like their fight song is "On the Road Again." The road has been rocky thus far for the Salukis, who haven't played a game at Abe Martin Field, due to three rainouts last week.

They take their 6-8 traveling show to Louisville this weekend, where they hope to bust out of a hitting slump against the 12-3 Cardinals. As a team, SIU-C is hitting .259 and averaging less than four runs a game in its last six outings.

"We have to score around six or seven runs a game to have great success," said Saluki Coach Lichy Jones. Jones is itching to rack up some wins for two reasons.

"We have to generate a winning spirit and attitude on this ballclub," he said, "and we'll need a lot of wins to get an at-large bid to the NCAA tournament."

At the outset of the season, Jones set 14 or 15 losses as a team goal. Despite the slow start, he said his goal is still the same.

At Louisville, the Salukis play a single game Friday and a double-header Saturday. Friday's probable starters are Gary Bockhorn (2-1, 6.35 earned run average) vs. Scott Reburn (4-0, 3.30). Saturday, Jones will send Jay Bellissimo (1-2, 7.80) and Lee Meyer (2-0, 2.18) or Paul Saikia (1-0, 3.38) against Bradley George (1-0, 2.62) and Dave McCormick (1-1, 6.24).

While the Saluki bats haven't rattled in recent games, the SIU-C hurlers have done an admirable job, yielding just three games in four of the past five games.

At Louisville, they'll have to contend with first baseman Ty Cobbs, shortstop Greg Newcom and second baseman Mark Cambron, the Cardinals' most productive hitters.

Cobbs is hitting .412 with one home run and 19 RBI. Newcom is hitting .396 with two round-trippers and 12 RBI, while Cambron has four home runs, 12 RBI and a .324 average.

Cambron and Newcom have given Louisville less than flashy fielding around second base, combining for 13 errors. In contrast, the entire Saluki infield has made 10.

According to Louisville sports information, Cambron was an excellent second baseman last year, but he's committed five miscues already this season.

Among the Cardinals' victims are Indiana, Indiana State and Ball State. They swept the Hoosiers in a double-header last Saturday and split with SIU-C's Missouri Valley Conference foe Indiana State in their season-opening twin-bill.

It was Reburn, unbeaten in four starts, who beat the Sycamores, 4-2, before Indiana State got even in the nightcap with a 11-8 win.

SIU-C's all-time record against Louisville is 20-8, but the Cardinals have had the upper hand the past five years, taking five of nine games in that span.

Despite a shortage of runs of late, not all of the Saluki bats have been silent. Left fielder Scott Bridges is hitting a steady .340, tops on the team. He has two home runs, five doubles and 11 RBI.

Center fielder Steve Finley is hitting .321 and leads the team in runs scored with 18. Infielders Terry Jones and Mike Gellinger own .296 and .283 batting averages, respectively.

Robert Jones leads the team with four homers and 18 RBI. Jones has displayed explosive power, but hasn't driven in a run in SIU-C's past five games. He's hitting .271.

Meanwhile, the Salukis will be without the services of catcher Steve Boyd, who hit .381 in seven games in Florida before going down with a leg injury. Freshman Kerry Boudreaux, who Jones said has handled the receiving chores in fine fashion, will continue to fill in.

Jones said that since Boudreaux, a Paducah, Ky., native, is logging playing time now, he won't hesitate to use him when Boyd returns.

The Saluki basketball team and its supporters celebrated their first winning season in five years Wednesday night, but it was guard Nate Bufford who wore the biggest party hat.

Bufford received the Paul Lambert Memorial Award for team Most Valuable Player, and the Most Inspirational Player and Floor Leadership awards at the Salukis' annual banquet at Ballroom D of the Student Center.

The 6-2 transfer from Midland (Texas) College appeared overwhelmed and hard-pressed for words as he accepted the MVP award.

"I just remember when I was at Midland College," Bufford said, "and all I ever dreamed about was playing Division I basketball. Now, I just want to commit myself toward getting SIU to the top."

The Saluki players and coaching staff voted on the MVP.

Members of the media selected Bufford for the Inspirational award, while the Auburn, Ala., native earned the floor leadership award based on season-long statistics which indicated his overall floor game was the best among his teammates.

Bufford ranked third among the Saluki scorers, from which the top five were separated by just 2.3 points. Bernard Campbell led with 13.7.

Bufford was second to center Kenny Perry in field goal percentage, 53.8, third in assists and first in the Missouri Valley Conference in free-throw percentage, 87.7.

Perry, the MVC's Newcomer of the Year and the only Saluki to make second-team All-MVC, took the field goal percentage award. Cleveland Bibbens won rebounding honors (7.3 per game, eighth in the MVC) and Chris George was tabbed as the best defensive player.

Dan Weiss received the scholastic award (3.6 GPA), Roy Birch was recognized for earning the most points in pre-season conditioning drills and Bufford was recognized for leading SIU-C in free-throw shooting.

Senior Harry Hunter, the only player who'll be lost to graduation, received a Senior Award and special mention to the free throws he made that iced SIU-C's double-overtime win against Wichita State.

"It's not every day you'll find me at a loss for words," Hunter said, "but I am now."

Hunter also thanked his parents for their part in his accomplishments.

Van Winkle expressed pride in his players and staff, who posted a 15-13 record. The players on this year's squad make up the first group recruited exclusively by Van Winkle's staff. Van Winkle took over at SIU-C three years ago and posted 11-16 and 9-19 records before this season.

"We took a lot of different personalities and threw them together," he said of his squad which consists largely of junior transfers. "We were just a point or two away from being 17-11."

"Your hearts are in the right place," he said, "and ours are right there with you."

Tracksters ready for 'classic' meet

The showdown nears. It will be the Missouri Valley against the Big 10 Saturday at McAndrew Stadium as the Saluki men's track team hosts the Indiana Hoosiers. It promises to be one of the top dual meets of the year.

The Hoosiers and the Salukis won their respective conferences in the indoor season. Saturday will be the eighth meeting of the two teams. Indiana leads the series 4-3 after defeating the Salukis 78-76 in Bloomington, Ind., last year.

Saluki Coach Lew Hartzog is hoping his squad can even the series record and he has no doubts that the meet is going to be close.

"We're ready to go," Hartzog said. "It appears to me we'll have good weather. The weather will play a role in the pleasantness of it (the meet)."

Good weather is something that has been lacking from SIU-C-Indiana meets the last three years. Hartzog said there have been cold rains at each meeting. Despite the inclement conditions, however, Hartzog said there has been "unreal competition."

"The meet has developed into one of the perennially strongest teams in the Midwest," Hartzog said.

The Salukis' 400-meter relay team had close to a 90-minute workout Tuesday in good weather to practice their baton passes. Last weekend at the Paper Tiger Invitational in Baton Rouge, La., the relay team had trouble with it, and as a result, finished fourth in 40.30. Hartzog is hoping their troubles are behind now.

"The kids were serious," Hartzog said, "and we've got to have that. We had a rewarding workout and I think we'll have a good performance."

The Salukis will be without Parry Duncan in the hurdles and intermediates, but Duncan will run in the 400 and 1,600-meter relays. He is coming off his best split time of 46.57 in the 1,600-meter last weekend.

Saluki gridders to start spring football practice

The defending NCAA Division I-AA national champion SIU-C football team will contain a different look this spring when the Salukis begin their first official practice of the 1984 season at 3:30 p.m. Friday at McAndrew Stadium.

First-year Saluki Coach Ray Dorr will be at the helm. Former Saluki coach Rey Dempsey, who guided SIU-C to a 13-1 mark last year, is at Memphis State, and he will not be walking the McAndrew Stadium sidelines for the first time in nine years.

Another different look this spring will remind Saluki fans of last year's championship march, when the goal posts were torn down in four straight home games. They have not yet been replaced, but they are on order. A temporary goal post will be put to use until the permanent ones arrive.

If the goal post situation is the only thing upsetting practice this spring, Dorr probably won't mind a bit.

"We're excited about it," said Dorr, who was an assistant coach at Washington the past nine years. "This is the time of year when you can experiment. You can look at other things that maybe you'll be hesitant to do in the fall."

More than 120 players have been attending the team's voluntary workout sessions, and 65 of them are walk-ons. Dorr said Washington would have 60 walk-ons of the 150 players on the football team.

Last year's starting linebacker Fabray Collins and top substitute defensive end Ashley Sledge had the list of seniors who were granted another year of eligibility under the retroactive redshirt rule.

"It's a real asset to the program that they're coming back," Dorr said. "Obviously, they care a lot about winning,
