MacVicar defends stand concerning AAUP statement

By Nathan Jones
Staff Writer

Chancellor Robert W. MacVicar defended his stand against the American Association of University Professors' statement on rights and freedoms of students during a Student Senate meeting Wednesday night.

There are no major philosophical differences between the AAUP policy and administration feelings, MacVicar said, and "I accept the statement, but not in its entirety."

The document, which deals in many specific areas of student rights, leaves off a serious matter of student responsibilities, MacVicar said.

"And there are no rights without concomitant responsibilities," MacVicar added.

The statement, which was presented at the last Board of Trustees meeting, is being reviewed by the Board now.

Carl Courtnier, student senator, who addressed himself as MacVicar's counterpart, challenged the Chancellor's remarks and said that "we (the students) have no room for responsibility and are not given any by the administration either.

"We are told like little kindergarten kids that this is the way things will be done," Courtnier continued. "We make recommendations but they go ignored."

"I can sign bill after bill, issue after issue, that we (the Senate) have concerned ourselves with for nothing but stone silence," Courtnier said.

"I contend, Chancellor, that until the University is willing to involve the students in decision making, in the actual formulation of all policy, that until that time comes students can never act responsibly," Courtnier said.

"And I further contend that irresponsible present administration will continue in the present framework," Courtnier concluded.

In response to this, MacVicar said, "I just simply can't agree with you that without total rights there must be total irresponsibility."

"I don't think that this body has been treated as a child either," MacVicar continued. "You are responsible for the expenditures of large sums of money and I do not think that your bills have disappeared into limbo with no response."

"I would hope that as we move into next year that we may do so with the spirit of trying to seek better ways of having this body bring forth actions which can be accepted without major modification," MacVicar added.

LATE BULLETIN

At press time, the Student Senate was still in debate over a bill "demanding each one of the senators to be expelled unless the University abolish women's hours and give amnesty to all those participating." An amendment was added proposing a sit-in at President Delyte W. Morris' office Monday by the senators until the women's hours policy was changed or they were expelled, thus disbanding the Senate. This bill was motioned after Chancellor MacVicar addressed the Senate. A special meeting was then called to consider this bill at 8 p.m. today in the University Center.

Hours change recommended

By Theo Howard

The Women's Hours Committee has recommended that all women aged 18 and over have self-determined hours, provided that those under 21 have parental consent.

Wilbur N. Moulton, dean of students, announced the recommendations after the committee, composed of five coeds and two administrators, presented the written recommendations to him at 3 p.m. Wednesday. He had requested that they be made in time to be presented to the Student Senate Wednesday night.

The committee has not yet compiled the statistical data which were to accompany the recommendations. It has sent questionnaires to faculty, parents and students on the issue.

The committee prefaced its recommendations with the following statement:

"In making our recommendations from the data available at this time, the committee on women's hours has considered the following areas of concern:

"1. Academic performance has not been significantly affected by participation in the pilot program.

"2. Social behavior has remained constant.

"3. Over 99 per cent of parents responding to the present hours program have given consent.

"4. A large majority of faculty members feel that self-regulatory hours do not adversely affect academic performance.

"5. We have excluded those women under 18 years of age from the program of self-regulatory hours because of existing state curfew laws. It is an agreed-upon fact that all women 21 years and older have reached majority, and therefore have become voting citizens.

"However, since parents are liable for their daughters under 21, and are major financial contributors to their educational expenses, we believe that permission should be granted by parents for their daughters' participation.

"We, the members of the committee on women's hours, make the following recommendations and suggest that they become effective June 17, 1969:

Businessman questions 1,500-foot liquor ban

By Wayne Markham
Staff Writer

A local ban on the sale of beer within 1,500 feet of University property has been violated, according to a Carbondale businessman. He says strict enforcement of the ruling could affect a number of licensed liquor establishments.

Gene Gelling, part owner of the Purple Mousetrap, 701 S. Illinois, made the charges following examination of a city map which he said indicates that at least one already licensed business lies within the 1,500-foot banned area.

The restaurant owner said he will present his findings to the Carbondale Liquor Advisory Committee at its meeting Wednesday along with further proof that other possible violations exist.

At issue in the case is a license held by Jim's Pizza Palace at 519 S. Illinois Ave. which, according to Gelling's calculations, is well within the 1,500-foot limit.

Gelling, whose own application for a liquor license was turned down a year ago, said he does not question the licensing of Jim's Pizza, but would like to see the 1,500-foot limit eliminated since it is already being violated and, as a policy, is ineffectual.

One other license refused because of the 1,500-foot ban is Little Caesar's, which is located in the Campus Shopping Center off S. University Avenue.

Question liquor ban

Gelling charged that the banned area are suffering from "a new balance in licensed establishments," which he said are pulling customers to the licensed restaurants outside the restricted zone.

"In private discussions we were encouraged to maintain our places with the promise that we would be given consideration for future licenses," Gelling said.

He stated that since that time licenses have been granted to at least nine other businesses, some of which have similar types of investment in pizza parlors but with the added attraction of being able to serve beer.

"Those guys have knocked our brains out," Gelling said, and estimated that his on-premise business has dropped off 50 per cent as a result.

He made an appearance before the Liquor Advisory Board at its meeting May 14 and raised issue with the city policy at that time.

Gelling questioned whether or not the 1,500-foot limits were ever measured and said that previously Cherry Street was accepted as the cut-off point.

A further issue raised by Gelling was with past policy of using the Home Economics Building to demark the furthest extension of University property.

According to Gelling, classes are held in buildings along Marion Street and near Washington Square which, if used as the base point for measurement, would include more than just Jim's Pizza in the 1,500-foot ban.

Carbondale Mayor David Keone was informed of Gelling's charges and said that it was his understanding that the distance to Jim's Pizza was measured before the license was granted.

In addition, he said he had not made any promises to any businessmen in the area covered by the ban concerning future issuance of liquor licenses and knew of no one who had.

B. J. Schwegman, director of Public Works, said that one of his staff measured the distance on the Jim's Pizza case with a "walker" along Illinois Ave.

He could not determine exactly where the 1,500-foot limit fell but said he believed Jim's was just outside the boundary.

Swegman also indicated that in the past he had recommended that Cherry Street be used as the demarcation line since it was hard to determine the exact limit.

"A special survey would have to be done to find the exact boundary," he said.

On the issue of where to measure from, City Attorney George Floorlage indicated that the state law which governs liquor on the 1,500-foot basis is used as the guideline for the Carbondale ruling covering beer.

According to Floorlage, the law reads from "any building used for regular classroom or laboratory instruction on the main campuses of state institutions of higher learning."

He interpreted that to mean the Home Economics Building itself rather than the University property line.

As for the place of business itself, however, Floorlage said the state law makes no provision on whether to measure from the building or from the property edge.

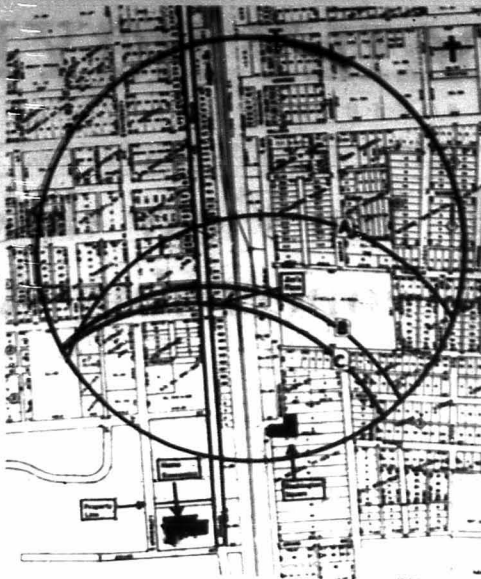

The city attorney said that a 100-foot state ordinance which prohibits sale of any alcoholic liquor including beer covers churches, hospitals, schools and homes for the aged, but is superceded by the specific law on state universities.

Gelling, who said he is not out to have any existing licenses rescinded, expressed the hope that the Liquor Advisory Committee would apply the 100-foot ruling to beer sales in Carbondale.

"Carbondale should be synchronized with what is accepted in other state university towns," he said, "like Champaign-Urbana or Normal where beer can be sold to within 100 feet of campus."

"Otherwise this city will never get any kind of quality restaurant to come near campus and the result is a lot of hamburger joints dotting the nearby area."

A further question was raised with the city's liquor license classification system which no longer has a license specifically for beer with meals as had been provided under the previous ordinance.

The revised ordinance has a Class D license for beer and wine with meals which Gelling said could be interpreted so that wine would be classified as liquor. Since state law covers liquor, the license category could effectively continue the 1,500-foot limit regardless of action on the beer ban.

The Liquor Advisory Committee is scheduled to meet Wednesday afternoon. Com-

Need enactment of abortion law

Recently the Illinois House in Springfield defeated a bill sponsored by Representative Lelan H. Rayson (D, Tinley Park), on easing the stringent Illinois abortion law. This is unfortunately just another defeat for the people in this state.

In the last two years, new laws on abortion have been enacted by six states: California, Colorado, North Carolina, Maryland, Georgia and Mississippi; and it was time for Illinois to follow suit. As reported in the Chicago Sun-Times, "each year, some 50,000 illegal abortions are performed in Cook County alone as compared to over one million illegal abortions in the United States."

As the American Civil Liberties Union declared, "a woman has a right to have an abortion—that is, a termination of pregnancy prior to the viability of the fetus—and that a licensed physician has a right to perform an abortion, without the threat of criminal sanctions."

"In pursuit of this right the union asks that state legislatures abolish all laws imposing criminal penalties for abortions performed for whatever reason, by a licensed physician."

Certainly the state legislature can see the serious implications involved in not approving the liberalized abortion law. (1) It causes thousands of women to turn to unprofessional help often with the result being death. (2) Many women are forced into trying to abort themselves. This too can have disastrous results. (3) It often causes women to have physical and emotional breakdowns. (4) It often brings unwanted children into the world with often no visible means of support. (5) It causes unwanted marriages often ending in divorce.

It is time to stop the danger of serious illness or death from infection or plain butchery from illegal abortions, and pass the two abortion reform measures still alive in the Illinois House and one that is pending in the Senate.

Manifesto issues challenge to white churches

By Dick Gregory

An old peace and freedom song speaks of laying one's sword and shield "Down by the Riverside." On Sunday morning, May 4, James Forman, representing the National Black Economic Development Conference, laid down a Freedom Manifesto by the altar of historic Riverside Church in New York City. His Black Manifesto is directed to all the white churches and synagogues of this nation, and it is a direct challenge to the religious establishment.

Public reaction to Forman's invasion of the Riverside worship service seems to fall heavily on the side of the sanctity of public worship and the unholiness of disrupting such gatherings. It is not as though James Forman had not tried white America's popular "law and order" route. He had asked Riverside's pastor, the Rev. Ernest Campbell, for permission to read his Manifesto during the worship hour. Permission was denied, the reason given that May 4 was Communion Sunday.

Still trying to avoid "crime in the pews" Forman asked when he could have Sunday morning time. Permission was still withheld, so Forman decided to follow the historical precedent of Amos, Jesus and a few others, and speak the truth regardless of propriety.

Riverside Church obtained a court order to restrain Forman's future disruption of worship services. New York's Mayor John Lindsay offered police protection and the full support of his city's legal system for any churches requesting it. And the issue of religious tranquility seems to have obscured the force and justice of the Manifesto demands.

In summary, the Manifesto of the National Black Economic Development Conference is demand-$500 million in reparation for the black community from the white churches and synagogues to be used for:

1. The establishment of a Southern land bank to help blacks who have been forced to leave their land because of racist pressure. A sum of $200 million is designated for this program.
2. The establishment of four major publishing and printing industries in the United States to be funded with $10 million each.

3. The establishment of four of the "most advanced scientific and futuristic" audio-visual networks. Each TV network will require a funding of $10 million.

4. A research skills center which will provide research on the problems of black people ($30 million).

5. A training center for the teaching of all skills needed in communication ($10 million).

6. Assistance for the National Welfare Rights Organization ($10 million).

7. The establishment of a National Black Labor Strike and Defense Fund ($20 million).

8. The establishment of the International Black Appeal, designed to produce more capital for creating cooperative businesses in the United States and in Africa ($20 million).

9. The establishment of a Black University, located in the South, ($130 million).

How the churches and synagogues will respond to the demand for financial reparation to black people remains to be seen. I understand some Roman Catholics

Says source does not exist

To the Daily Egyptian:

I certainly think that one can say with a good deal of propriety that one of the most amusing stories in the Egyptian recently is the Mickey Rooney rumor.

Thursday, April 24, the Egyptian printed a front page article to quell a rumor that Rooney would appear at the Spring Festival. The paper then stated the names of the groups which would appear. The source of that information, according to the story, was a Michael Zee of the Student Government Activity Council.

According to the latest report, there is no such person! Therefore, I ask, who is kidding whom?

Notwithstanding the fact that Rooney may indeed be a "back, washed-up actor" (Letters, May 8, Mr. Tim Terchek), I think the readers are entitled to an explanation from the Daily Egyptian.

Shryock needs new pipe organ

To the Daily Egyptian:

Although the carpenters and electricians have already taken over Shryock, one major factor in the renovation program still apparently remains undecided—the acquisition of a new pipe organ for the auditorium.

The so-called instrument which currently eliminates about one-third of Shryock's usable stage area has been in a state of rapid deterioration for several years now, and it has been kept in playable condition only by continual (literally day-to-day) repairing.

Although the organ is presently under wraps in an attempt to protect it from the remodeling work, surely an act of divine intervention would be required to get it back into playable condition after remaining in storage, for a year or more, and exposed to the dust, dirt, and temperature changes which will necessarily result from the major construction work at the sides of the stage.

The absence of an adequate performing instrument would be a severe setback to the rapid progress the organ department has achieved during the past several years, and a most unfortunate loss to the entire Department of Music as well. The present instrument, with innumerable last-minute emergency operations and prayers, has served for the establishment of an outstanding program of yearly organ workshops, and as accompaniment for choral programs; it has been used in numerous programs with the orchestra and other instrumental ensembles, and of course in the faculty and student organ recitals.

The existence of a suitable recital instrument on our campus is particularly desirable from the standpoint of Southern's location, inasmuch as there are no other large pipe organs within a hundred miles of Carbondale.

In addition, failure to acquire a new instrument will give Southern the distinction of being one of the very few universities, if not the only one, of our size in the country without an adequate pipe organ on campus.

Hopefully, the necessity for reaching a decision for a new pipe organ will be realized before remodeling proceeds much further. Consultation between the contractor and organ builder at this stage of the work could eliminate many problems and headaches later on. Finally, the presence of a fine new organ in the refurbished auditorium could well be one of the most striking aspects of the completed project.

Films create reality

Malanga, Warhol succeed

By Bruce Kurtz

The best attended and most well received event of the Fine Arts Festival was the screening of Andy Warhol's Vinyl and Gerard Malanga's Pre-Raphaelite Dream. Malanga, a close associate of Warhol and a poet and film-maker of his own merit, was present for the screenings, for a reading of his poetry, and for a panel discussion and coffee hour.

I was especially surprised at the attendance because I have been trying for a year and a half to bring a Warhol film to Carbondale and I have been repeatedly told that "it would appeal to too small a faction of students."

I think the opposite is true, and I think this is the case because Warhol and Malanga assert a quality which is strongly lacking in our technological society: faith. The faith they assert is not a faith in the ecclesiastical sense, the secular sense, or the profane sense, and this is their strength. Rather than dramatize an event, a la Hollywood, building parts of the drama up to the climax of the plot, built on a specific (usually simple minded) point of view, Warhol and Malanga simply point their cameras at interesting people and let the cameras record their observations. (When I picked up Malanga at the airport I took him to the spillway, where he immediately got out his 16mm camera and shot some footage.)

In this way Warhol and Malanga are not limiting themselves to expressing only their point of view, religious or otherwise, but are rather allowing their subjects to express themselves a highly moral point of view.

Warhol and Malanga observe, accepting everything they see, fascinated by human nature, dealing with human lives as their media, recording every facet of the obsessions of the people who wander into Warhol's "factory", realizing that we are all obsessed, that all of us are really strange the only way we can communicate is to acknowledge our obsessions and accept them, along with those of others. It is within Warhol's acceptance of everything he sees that his faith lies. It is within our differences that we often find similarities. This is part of the irony of Warhol.

Irony is the language, visual and verbal, which Warhol employs. Malanga is less ironic and more romantic, as was evidenced by his poetry reading and his film. Malanga's poetry and film were autobiographical, as though they were diaries. They were about himself, the romantic idea of the individual artist as one who leads a special, more lofty kind of life. Warhol, on the other hand, leaves little evidence of his touch on his films, little or no apparent autobiography, at least in terms of what he thinks about a given situation, because he never reveals a viewpoint, he just observes. "People are so fantastic. It's impossible to take a bad picture," Warhol said.

How does Warhol go about creating his films, and what has led up to his film-making?

In the late 1950's Warhol was an illustrator in New York City. He was known as "Mr. Shoe" because he was especially in demand for shoe advertisements. In 1960 he began to paint comic strips, but soon turned to his now famous silk screen reproductions of Campbell's Soup Cans, Marilyn Monroe, Elizabeth Taylor, Troy Donohue, Elvis Presley, and other popular icons.

His method of reproduction was photo silkscreen, a mechanical process. When he felt like making some paintings he would invite some of his friends up to his "factory" and they would all help. The strange thing is that while these paintings look so mechanically reproduced, they are extremely dramatic and emotionally involving. Warhol also executed a series of paintings called "death and disaster series" in which he silkscreened photos of automobile accidents, electric chairs and Jackie Kennedy after the assassination.

These paintings all communicate their emotional content through their lack of romantic commentary on the part of the artist. Warhol acts as a medium, simply re-presenting the situation to us, in a context which might heighten our awareness of the situation, but without altering the situation through his personality. In the words of the greatest single source of Warhol's ideas, Marcel Duchamp, "My irony is that of indifference..."

While Warhol presents us with images which appear to be taken with indifference by the artist, they are mysterious and engaging, not only to us but to Warhol as well. Warhol as understood that in order to communicate that mystery, he could only act as a medium, allowing us to experience the mystery as directly as possible. Thus, the separation between art and life becomes less distinct, but only for the initiate, a fact which further compounds the irony of Warhol. The direct experience of life, which Warhol seems to advocate, is only possible through his works, through the highly refined and cultivated sensibility against which he reacts. We must be in the same frame of mind, we must accept the basic premises of Warhol, to experience his art.

But this is true of all art, a fact most eloquently stated by Coleridge, "In order to produce or view a work of art one must effect a willful suspension of disbelief."

This is the leap of faith necessary for any experience which is not based on rigorous logic. Art had traditionally served the function, along with religion, of satisfying those non-logical needs of man. That is, there are aspects of our experience which we cannot explain in terms of logic, but which still seem important. The faith expressed by Warhol is of a similar nature. But rather than existing in a traditional religious or artistic form, Warhol expresses his faith through his acceptance of all aspects of the life he observes around him.

Refined techniques, one of the hallmarks of art, are ignored by Warhol. Camera movement, dramatic close-ups, dramatic movement don't exist in Warhol's films.

How does he go about making a film?

Sometimes a scenario is written, usually not. If a scenario is written, it only gives a general idea of what the main character is going to say and he ad libs the rest, which is easy, as the dialogue that has been written is based on his life.

In Vinyl, for example, the characters present are all members of the "factory" group. They run the full range of social strata from socialite to hustler. The star, Gerard Malanga, wrote his lines and the others in the cast just said what they wanted.

The camera moved only once during Vinyl. In the very beginning, when only one image was on the screen, there was a close-up of Malanga. Then the zoom lens was used (the camera didn't actually move) to zoom out to a bigger format, the size used for the rest of the film. Even when the action moved out of the frame, the camera was not used.

Vinyl was originally made to be shown one reel at a time, as there is some slight narrative. However, Warhol and Malanga decided, several years after they made the film, that it would be better if they showed it double-screen. The sound track was then switched back and forth by use of a jack. During the showing at SIU, Malanga simply switched the sound when he wanted.

Although in both Vinyl and Pre-Raphaelite Dream the images which were side by side at any one point seemed to have been carefully selected for their relationship to each other, the pairing of images was totally arbitrary, just one more bit of evidence that we insist on ordering everything we see, another basic fact of perception. But the important issue here is that Warhol and Malanga let us make our order to as great a degree as possible. They provide us with enough alternatives so that we can make up our own minds, engaging us as an integral part of the work of art and acknowledging our ideas as equally as important as those of the artist.

The separation between the film and the lives of the people in it is slight, the separation between the viewer and the film is reduced, and Warhol and Malanga have used film as a medium to increase our awareness of part of the life that goes on around us: the most basic function of art. The grand irony of the films is that while they appear to be indifferent, because they do not offer commentary, they express a high degree of morality in the unwillingness of the artists to judge, realizing that their judgments would be based on the narrow realm of their experience.

Instead they accept, as relevant to their lives, other lives. The films are not about technique, story, or trickery: their content is a gripping (because of the use of irony) observation of human nature.

Bruce Kurtz, instructor of art history at SIU, has been a faculty member for the past year and a half. He received his B.F.A. from the San Francisco Art Institute, and his M.A. and M.F.A. from the University of Iowa. Upon completion of work at the University of Iowa, Kurtz came directly to the SIU Art Department.

Lorek disputes appointment of Rieff to city post

By Wayne Markham
Staff Writer

Jackson County's defeated Republican candidate for state's attorney, Ted Lorek, appealed to the Carbondale City Council Tuesday night to review his bid for a city post.

Lorek told the Council that his application for a recently filled position of assistant city attorney was refused by City Manager C. William Norman.

The former assistant staff member of the University Legal Counsel said he felt that the city administrators had not notified any local attorneys but had "brought a man in from outside."

According to Lorek, Norman had responded to the criticisms by saying that the man hired would not be an outsider after he moved to Carbondale and that a verbal agreement had already been given.

Norman replied to Lorek's statements and said that the job had already been filled before Lorek came to apply. The city manager also said that his remarks about the newly hired attorney, Melvin A. Rieff, not being an outsider once he moved to Carbondale was a facetious comment and was not meant to be an answer to Lorek's criticism.

Lorek questioned Rieff's qualifications to fill the post since the newly hired assistant attorney was a recent graduate from the University of Illinois.

Norman answered that he relies on the department heads to make recommendations about personnel hired and said he felt that City Attorney George Fleerlage had adequately reviewed Rieff's qualifications.

Fleerlage defended Rieff's law background and added that the assistant attorney's post had been vacant for five months before Rieff applied. Fleerlage said he did not accept Lorek's contention that local attorneys had not been notified and pointed out that legal notices as well as stories had been run in local newspapers announcing the position opening.

'Spotlight' to host three local men

"Spotlight on Southern Illinois" will feature an interview with the Rev. John Francisco of the Bethel AME Church of Carbondale today at 6:30 p.m. on WSIU-TV, Channel 8.

The interview will center around the Rev. Mr. Francisco's association with the Head Start program.

The program will also feature William F. Price, coordinator of the SIU Outdoor Recreation Laboratory at Little Grassy Lake. Price will discuss the facilities used by handicapped children during the summer at Little Grassy.

A filmed interview with William F. Vincent, who coordinates rehabilitation of handicapped students on campus, will be shown.

response from the councilmen and said he thought the Council should review its position on allowing Norman to have control over city employee hiring practices.

Each of the councilmen answered in turn and expressed their regret that the post had already been filled but added that the city had committed itself to hire Rieff.

The assistant city attorney post is a part-time position which pays $6,374 and entails work as city prosecutor.

Convo to feature Angel Flight

The SIU Angel Flight will perform for Convocation at 1 p.m. Thursday in the Arena.

The Angelaires will sing various selections, including "I Know Where I'm Going," "The Air Force Medley" and "Everything's Coming Up Roses."

The Angelettes will present some of their favorite dance routines.

The group has just returned from a five-day visit in New Orleans where they attended the National AAS-Angel Flight Conclave.

Designers to initiate officers

The SIU student chapters of National Society of Interior Designers (NSID) and the American Institute of Interior Designers (AID) will install new officers at a banquet Sunday.

The new officers were chosen by the organization's members in a recent election. Southern Illinois Book and Supply of Carbondale also will announce the winners in a church design competition which it sponsored among interior design students at SIU. Trophies and certificates of merit will be presented.

Faculty sponsors of the organizations are Mrs. Lucy Stewart and Miss Donave Green, both instructors in the Department of Interior Design at SIU.

Sub-committee passes town act

The Illinois Senate Education sub-committee passed 11-5, Wednesday, the College Town Act sponsored by Rep. Gale Williams, R-Murphysboro.

Present for the committee hearing, which precedes consideration by the Senate whole, were four representatives from Carbondale called to Springfield to testify for the bill. Carbondale Mayor David Keene; City Manager, William Norman; City Attorney, George Fleerlage, and City Councilman, Archie Jones made the trip.

The College Town Act, if passed by the legislature and signed by the governor, would provide Carbondale with some $360,000 in aid.

Winged Wheels sets understanding as goal

By Mary Frazer
Staff Writer

If the population of students in wheelchairs seems more numerous the past few days it may be because the Winged Wheels organization is in motion.

Winged Wheels is an organization composed of handicapped students in wheelchairs and able-bodied students interested in understanding the lives of the handicapped.

The organization received official recognition from the SIU Administration a month ago. Since then they have elected officers, established a current membership of 15 students who are now holding a Winged Wheels Week through Friday of this week.

John Taschler, co-prefector (president) of WW, said membership will increase as knowledge of the organization spreads.

Taschler is the only handicapped officer in the group. The other officers are Dennis Neilly, treasurer, Barry Morgenstern, co-prefector, both from Wilson Hall, and Susan Ames, secretary from Thompson Point.

Many members live in Wilson Hall which is predominantly a dormitory for handicapped students, Morgenstern said.

One of the far-reaching goals of Winged Wheels is to break down and eliminate the psychological barriers which exist between handicapped and non-handicapped students, Taschler said.

The barriers will be made evident to students through a pamphlet the organization hopes to compile based on their findings.

One of the barriers, Taschler noted, is that "Wheelchair students seem to have been lumped in a mass." He said the alienation is due partly to the handicapped students themselves and to the able-bodied students.

He said wheelchair students are afraid to ask someone for help because they may resent being asked. On the other hand, he said, able-bodied students hesitate to offer help in fear of embarrassing the handicapped.

Some of the able-bodied members are making an effort to better understand the handicapped by traveling in wheelchairs.

Four students are participating in the "experiment." They are Barry Morgenstern, Pat Grilley, Dave Scheina and Joel Shoemaker. All the participants are freshmen from Wilson Hall.

Scheina said he is participating because he thinks he can help the student body in general understand that wheelchair students are not as handicapped as they think.

He said traveling in a wheelchair is a fairly good means of getting around the campus. He displayed his hands which showed signs of swelling. He said wheelchair travel was hard work, especially on his hands which turned the wheels many times the past few days. Winged Wheels will conclude Saturday with a baseball game between WW members and the AB (able-bodied) team of Wilson Hall.

Scheina said all the players have been practicing for the game. As manager of the AB team, he said his team could expect stiff competition from the WW team. He added the pitcher of WW is in a wheelchair and can throw a "mean" ball.

City Council offers employee pay raise

Cardonalds Mayor David Keene, Wednesday, termed the City Council's offer in answer to firemen's grievances "a fair proposal, and as far as I'm concerned, the only proposal."

Following a late-hour closed meeting Tuesday night, the Council decided to offer a wage increase, change in probationary plan and review of the overall city personnel and pay program.

Included in the proposal will be a 2.5 per cent wage increase offer to all city employees except for unionized water and sewer department workers.

The probationary period would be changed to ensure that no city employee would work over 12 months before advancing to step two of the pay plan.

The Council also promised a review of the entire personnel and pay plan which was enacted by last year's Council.

Firemen were notified of the Council's decision following the meeting which lasted until 1 a.m. Wednesday, but spokesmen for the firemen refused to comment on the offer pending a meeting of the department.

Captain Charles McCaughan, who spoke on the firemen's behalf at their two prior appearances before the City Council, said late Wednesday that a meeting had not yet been scheduled and that he could give no indication when one could be held.

A proposal from the firemen presented to the city personnel board Monday differed in several areas from the Council offer, both in amount of pay increase and with a retroactive clause to cover the change in probationary pay scale.

Nixon chooses Burger

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Nixon reached into the federal judiciary Wednesday night and chose Warren Earl Burger, a relatively obscure federal appeals court judge, to be 15th chief justice of the United States.

The white-haired, 61-year-old Minnesotan, who has sat for 13 years on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, told the President: "You pay tribute to all of the sitting judges of the federal system with this nomination."

If the Senate confirms the nomination after what may prove to be the closest scrutiny ever given a Supreme Court appointee, Burger will succeed Earl Warren in the highest judicial seat in the land.

Warren is retiring next month at age 78 after 16 turbulent years as chief justice—and at a time when the court itself has become a center of controversy.

But the timing of the appointment of a new chief justice—when Nixon could have waited until summer to choose Warren's successor—promised to overshadow to some degree the tempest created when Justice Abe Fortas resigned last week under criticism for his off-the-court financial dealings.

Fortas was nominated to the top judicial post by former President Lyndon B. Johnson last summer. Senate Republicans led a fight to defeat the nomination, however, citing his continuing close ties to Johnson and his acceptance of outside fees while sitting on the court.

Recommend women's hours change

hours of women's residence halls.

"2. Self-regulatory hours apply to all women ages 18 and over, and that parental consent be required for all women under 21 years of age."

The recommendation was endorsed by all of the active-committee members, which includes five women students and two administrators: Cheryl Brassel, Pyramids; Anthony Giannelli, assistant dean of students, activities; Michele Martin, Neely Hall; Marcie Pellegrini, Kellogg Hall; Gayle Schulz, Mae Smith; Cass Van Der Meer, Mae Smith; and Elwyn Zimmerman, assistant dean of students, Thompson Point.

The committee is gathering statistical data regarding the issue of women's hours. Questionnaires that were sent out last week are now being returned and results are being tabulated. The completed statistical report and the committee's detailed recommendation will be presented to Moulton soon after the end of the current quarter, when grade-point averages become available.

Jacob Bach returns from Afghanistan trip

SIU educator Jacob O. Bach has returned after a six-week world trip that took him to Norway, Beirut, Lebanon, and the SIU manpower training program in Afghanistan.

Bach, professor of educational administration and foundations, spent 30 days teaching high school methods and curriculum development courses to staff of the Afghan Institute of Technology and the Ministry of Education. He also did consultative work at the institute, situated at Kabul, Afghanistan's capital city.

At the trip's outset, a vacation segment was spent with relatives in Norway, where Bach's father was born.

En route to Afghanistan, Bach gave doctoral degree preliminaries to Saif Wady, who received his master's degree in government and did his course work for the doctorate in education at SIU.

Wady, now an adviser to the palace of Abu Dhabi, in Trical Oman, a sheikdom on the Persian Gulf southeast of Saudi Arabia, came from that country to meet Bach at Beirut for the tests. Bach said Wady frequently serves as personal emissary from his nation's ruler to King Hussein of Jordan and President Nasser of the United Arab Republic.

Bach's students at Kabul were all natives except two Americans, a Peace Corps worker and an SIU staff employee who took a course for additional credit.

The SIU team members, Bach explained, are helping to strengthen the training of both teachers and students at the Afghan Institute, a comprehensive vocational high school with an enrollment of 500. The institute, which moved into a $4 million complex last December, has a fixed curriculum and teaches such vocations as auto mechanics, welding, drafting, electronics and surveying. There are courses in science, mathematics and English, he said, but no social studies. One big obstacle to education in Afghanistan is that there are four main countries helping with programs, each teaching in its own language, Bach said.

"There is not technical vocabulary and with four different countries in the picture, there are problems of language," he said. "The country is at least ten years away from instruction in the vernacular in the upper level schools." SIU's Afghanistan project has been operating under a contract with the U.S. Agency for International Development first signed in 1964. A team of five members is headed by John Griswold, chief of party.

Board of Governors adopts policy for campus disorders

The Board of Governors of State Colleges and Universities has adopted a policy to cover campus disturbances that might occur at any of the institutions under its jurisdiction.

The board is the governing agency for the following state colleges and universities: Eastern Illinois at Charleston, Western Illinois at Macomb, Chicago State College and Northeastern Illinois State College, both in Chicago, and Governors State University, to be constructed soon near Park Forest in Will County.

"This action makes it clear that unlawful activities will not be tolerated at any of the campuses under the board's jurisdiction," Frederick H. McKelvey, executive officer of the board, pointed out.

According to McKelvey, unlawful activities include willfully damaging or destroying campus property, causing bodily injury, and trespassing in campus areas or remaining in these areas after being notified to leave.

"Article 21 of the Illinois Criminal Code provides appropriate penalties for dealing with persons who willfully damage state property or commit trespass on the campuses," he added.

"Those who participate in these unlawful activities will be arrested," McKelvey said. In announcing the policy, McKelvey made it clear that it "is in no sense intended to deprive any person of his rights of free speech and assembly. It is primarily aimed at those persons whose actions deprive others of their rights without due process of law."

The policy was adopted at the board's recent meeting in Springfield.

Graduate recital to be presented

Troxler will spend next year in study and repertory work at the International Opera Center in Switzerland. He has been a graduate assistant and assistant conductor in the University Opera Workshop this year.

Betaudier defines situation of U.S. black artists

By Richard McCann
Staff Writer

Patrick Betaudier is a man with a difficult job. He is trying to teach something that no one really knows anything about.

Betaudier, a Trinidad-born and Paris-based painter, whose works have been exhibited in galleries over the world, is an SIU visiting professor in both the Department of Art and the Black American Studies Program.

"My work with the Black American Studies program is sort of trying to define the situation of the black artist in America," said Betaudier, in a distinct British accent that betrays him as a former student and resident of England.

"I think the job would have been much easier if there had been more exposure of black artists," he said. "I suppose out of 200 million people there would have been a minimum of 1,000 working black artists, but they are little known. They are working in isolation, obviously not included in the mainstream of the art world."

Betaudier began his seminar discussions here with studies of African art. Although the real significance of some African art—for example, why a certain mask was done—may remain anthropologically obscure, the subject is relatively easy to teach because of the abundance of literature in the field, Betaudier said. The same is not true of black American art.

"Black students are happy to learn about African art, but they want to feel some sort of parallel that they can set up regarding black American artists," he said. "They want also to know if black artists are involved in the same way as black writers in the affairs of the day."

"It seems to me important to find out if there is a definite pattern which has been taken by black artists in the field. The fact occurred to me that someone could spend two years going around the country and discovering these people—making them known. There is an academic need, urgent and emotional, for the exposure of these artists."

Betaudier sees the whole Black American Studies program as being important to the country as a whole and in meeting an emotional need of black students. "If the life of the black person in this country tends to support the idea of a culture, the university is the place to find out about it," he said.

"White America cheats itself," he added. "There is this group which has been here and the more America knows about it the better."

Betaudier claims to speak mainly as an observer since this is his first trip to the United States.

"These three months have been almost entirely taken up in becoming acquainted with the United States," he said.

Born in Trinidad, Betaudier moved to England at the age of 15. He studied at the St. Martin College of Art where John Napper, also a current SIU visiting artist, was his professor for four years.

Betaudier taught art at Stanhope College for two years before going to Paris nine years ago to work as a professional painter—a craft at which he has proved quite successful.

"People who talk about what I do use the word surrealist quite often," said Betaudier. "I suppose I am."

"I exhibited in quite an interesting gallery in Paris. It was run by the wife of Andre Breton, who has been called the father of modern surrealism. I had probably the last show in his gallery before she retired."

Betaudier is currently under contract with the Galerie Jacqueline Ranson to exhibit there and "in a kind of way, what I produce belongs to the gallery," he said.

Betaudier's work has been exhibited in major galleries throughout the world.

His work has been included in the annual "Comparaisons" and "Salon de Mai" exhibitions, the two major shows of the Museum of Modern Art in Paris.

After some initial problems adjusting to the life and strange feeding habits of America, Betaudier thinks he is gradually getting used to it and admits finding SIU to be an interesting place.

"I've had the most interesting contacts," said Betaudier. "So much so that I have been persuaded to return in September. Then, I will be actually painting which, in a way, is more interesting. After all, that's what painters do."

Betaudier will leave June 10 for Europe where he will spend the summer.

Arts, crafts exhibition scheduled for weekend

Jackson County's first arts and crafts exhibit will be shown Saturday and Sunday in the old Post Office building, 14th and Walnut Street, in Murphysboro.

"The purpose of the exhibit," according to Sidney K. Kirach, the extension advisor to the sponsoring organization, the Jackson County Cooperative Extension Service, "is to increase area interest in and appreciation of art and to encourage the amateur artist in his work."

Competition is open to any amateur, high school age or older. An entry fee of fifty cents will be charged to cover the cost of the exhibit. Works in all media completed since January 1, 1966, will be accepted.

Blue ribbons will be presented to first award winners and these winners will be eligible for competition in the Regional Town and Country Art Show to be held July 15-20. Second and honorable mention awards will also be given.

Roy E. Abrahamson, professor of art at SIU, will judge the exhibit.

Items will be accepted for exhibition from 7 to 9 p.m. on Thursday, May 22, and from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Friday, May 23.

The exhibition will be open to the public from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. on Saturday, May 24, and from 1 to 4 p.m. on Sunday, May 25.

Further information may be obtained by calling or writing the Jackson County Cooperative Extension Service, Box 106, Murphysboro, Illinois; 687-1727.

Track meet Saturday may establish rivalry between Southern and University of Illinois

By Dave Cooper
Staff Writer

SIU and the University of Illinois may not have yet established a rivalry, but the Illinois Intercollegiate track meet at Champaign Saturday could be the beginning of a track rivalry.

The Illinois Intercollegiate meet includes most of the state's colleges and universities. The major entries are Southern, U. of I., Northwestern, Northern Illinois, Eastern Illinois, Illinois State, Loyola, DePaul and Bradley, according to Saluki track coach Lew Hartzog. The Salukis and the Illini each have a victory in two outings against one another this year.

In the indoor Illinois Intercollegiate at Champaign Jan. 25, Illinois edged Southern for the title, 164-159. Then in a dual meet in McAndrew Stadium April 29, Southern drubbed Illinois 79-57.

SIU and Illinois dominated the indoor meet, outdistancing third place Northern Illinois who finished with 40 points. Southern captured four firsts, eight seconds and seven thirds in the meet.

Eastern Illinois was fourth with 34 1/4 points, followed by Illinois State with 32, DePaul with 27 and Loyola with 24.

Rounding out the field were Bradley, North Central, Millikin, DuPage, Illinois Wesleyan and Western Illinois.

All of the teams which were in the indoor meet are also entered in Saturday's meet. "This meet should pretty much be a two-team affair between us and Illinois again, but not quite as much so as was the indoor meet," Hartzog said. "The rest of the field should stay within about 40 points of us and Illinois."

Hartzog said it should be an extremely close meet between Southern and Illinois if both teams are healthy. "Our kids are preparing for this meet just like they might a conference meet, and I'll be terribly disappointed if we don't perform exceptionally well," Hartzog said.

"This meet is like a conference meet because all the schools involved could compose the Illinois Intercollegiate Conference. Besides, we don't want it to be called a state meet because we don't want it to be confused with the high school state meet," Hartzog said.

Several preps officially sign with Southern

Some speculation about which high school athletes will enroll at SIU next fall under athletic scholarships ended yesterday as several preps officially signed national letters of intent.

Gymnastics coach Bill Meade and baseball coach Joe Lutz each announced they had signed three athletes.

All-around performers,

Steve Graham, Wis.; Dave Oliphant, Forest Park; and Bob Quintinelas, Skokie, have agreed to enroll at SIU next year and compete on Meade's gymnastics team.

Dave Baxter, pitcher from St. Louis; Mike Eden, shortstop from Brevard Fla. Junior College; and Dave Hawse, catcher from Gulf Coast, La., are the three baseball players who plan to play at SIU next season.

Although most of the coaches were anxiously trying to sign top prospects across the nation, no other official announcements were released.

Football team to play OSU

The SIU football team has made an agreement to play Oklahoma State University in 1973, according to Donald Boydston, athletic director.

Boydston said the contract to play the Cowboys at Stillwater is still subject to approval by the University Athletic Committee. He noted this would be the first time that SIU has competed against a Big Eight Conference school in football.

The OSU athletic director, Henry Iba, has been friends with Boydston since the days when the SIU director was an undergraduate competing in track at the Stillwater school.

Lutz explains

SIU may not make District 4 play-offs

By Barb Leebens
Staff Writer

Could the SIU baseball team be overlooked as one of the entries in the District Four play-offs scheduled to be selected this weekend?

SIU baseball coach Joe Lutz seems to think there is a slight possibility this could happen.

"The District Four committee only has the obligation to select two teams for the play off, the Big Ten champ and the Mid-American title winner," Lutz cautioned. "Of the eight districts, District 4 is only one of three that holds a four team play-off."

"The past couple of years the committee has selected two independents to participate in the play-off," Coach Lutz said. "But what other independent in our district could they select?"

Minnesota should clinch the Big Ten. The Gophers need just one victory in their remaining four conference games to ice the title. Runner-up Ohio State needs to win all four of its games remaining this season to win.

The Mid-American Conference is still up for grabs with the defending champ Ohio University and Western Michigan waging a see-saw battle for the top spot.

Meanwhile, there does not seem to be another independent entry. Question mark possibilities for the final spot in the District Four playoff include Notre Dame, Detroit and Marquette.

"On the other hand, the committee could go with three teams," Lutz added, "which would be unfair to two of the teams. With a bye, one of the teams could possibly win the tourney in two contests, while the other two would have to play as many as five games to win."

"You just never know how the committees will select the teams. In District 3 Virginia Tech was chosen over Florida State (a two out of three game winner over SIU this season) as the top independent in that district," Lutz said.

Lutz believes certain that if the play-off is a four team affair, the Salukis will be one of the independents selected to play. And if the tourney is a three-team play-off, Southern will be the third team, he says.

The bids for the District 4 play-off are phoned to the coaches on Sunday.

"I guess we'll all have to just wait and see," Lutz said as he walked out on the diamond to gather his squad together for a pep talk.

Staff: Hartman, Walt Frazier, Dick Garrett, George Lubelt, Jim Smelser and Charles Garrett.

Cost: $30.

"We've talked about a basketball school for a long time, but we didn't really know how to go about it," Jim Smelser, SIU freshman basketball coach, said. "Since Mr. Lubelt and I have taught at basketball clinics the past few summers we feel that we can put on a camp and do it right."

Shooting techniques, dribbling, passing, ball handling, individual defense are among the topics that Hartman hopes to cover.

"The bulk of the teaching will be handled by the coaches," Smelser said.

As a New York Knick this past season, Frazier was voted outstanding defensive player in the NBA. Garrett, who finished this season as the third leading scorer in SIU history, has signed to play next season with the Los Angeles Lakers. Frazier and Garrett were Saluki teammates in 1967 when Southern won the NIT.

The sessions will be held at University City, 602 E. College. Twelve outdoor basketball goals will be used and six large courts for game competition. An indoor swimming pool, and air conditioned lecture rooms for films and instructional talks will also be used. Daily schedules will consist of fundamental basketball instruction, practical application of skills learned, and staff lectures.

The actual basketball school will run from 9 a.m. until noon and recreational supervised swimming will be provided from 12 noon to 12:30 p.m. if any boy so desires.

"We've always wanted to offer the younger boys of this area some special individual instruction in the basic fundamentals of basketball," Smelser said. "And we felt that with Dick and Walt helping out it would increase the younger boy's motivation."

The school, which is not a University sponsored activity, reportedly has 70 boys who have already sent applications to the clinic.

"We've had applications from all around the area and we even received an application from Corpus Christi, Texas," Smelser added. "Eventually, we are hopeful to have 120 boys come out."
