Better World Search Linked To Computers

Another Story on Page 10

A computer game of "how do we make the world work?" will be established at SIU in a short time, according to R. Buckminster Fuller, professor of design.

Fuller, in the keynote address of the Vision 65 conference, said that society has an increasing confidence in the computer's ability to make decisions, and the University is going to start a "great computer program."

The computer game to be played at Southern is one that everyone can play, according to the short, bespectacled hero of the design world.

Progress toward winning the game will be attained when the research program shows how to make all men world citizens without interfering with the rights of other men, according to Fuller.

If civilization ends in war, Fuller continued, the game ends and everyone loses.

The man who created the geodesic dome said that he was deeply impressed with institutions of learning and research, and what they will do for man in the future.

Fuller said that soon, with the help of research programs, man will be able to enter a room and grasp a situation immediately, much the same as a 60-second camera develops a photograph.

In an earlier address, Ousmane Soce Diop, ambassador of the republic of Senegal, told the members of the conference of the difficulties, needs and improvements being wrought in the young nations of Africa.

Diop said that to achieve economic and social developments and improved living conditions, it is necessary to put into operation a complete network of communications channels.

No development is possible without first educating the masses, the ambassador said, and the way to develop education is through increased communications.

The expansion of communications facilities on an international level is just as pressing as it is on the national level, he continued.

As soon as possible, books, newspapers, films, educational television and cultural exchanges should be made available to all, Diop said.

"In this way, it will be possible to create and develop better understanding among continents, men and their respective civilizations," Diop stated.

Before the end of this century, he continued, universal civilization, with the aid of modern communications, should become the culture of all men on Earth.

War in Viet Nam Is Necessary, Victor Lasky Tells Convocation

COVERED CORVETTE - The owner of this Corvette Stingray has solved the problem of a dusty parking lot. Each morning when he parks in the lot southwest of the new Communications Building he carefully covers his car with plastic. It takes a lot of work but it's better than having to wash it a couple of times a week.

'No Alternative,' Columnist Says

The war in Viet Nam is necessary and President Johnson is doing what he has to about it, author Victor Lasky told two SIU audiences Thursday.

Lasky, syndicated columnist, political reporter and author of "JFK: The Man and the Myth," spoke at the 10 a.m. and 1 p.m. convocations in the SIU Arena.

"I think he's terribly disliked by liberals," Lasky said of Johnson. "In my travels across the country, I find him referred to as 'El Supremo' even by people who voted for him. And I didn't. I want you to understand that."

"Johnson's problem began when he took a hard-nosed attitude on Viet Nam, but he has no alternative."

Lasky believes that the United States must fight in Viet Nam in order to keep Communism from spreading across all of Southeast Asia.

"Our country has gone to much greater wars," he said. "I've been to Viet Nam six or seven times. It's a pip-squeak war and the tide is turning in our favor. We must fight to save our country's honor."

Most of the trouble in the Democratic party is coming from a minority, Lasky said. "But Johnson must also contend with the rise of the Kennedy dynasty and Robert Kennedy sounding off on foreign policy as if he knows what he's talking about."

Concerned about the minority of Republicans in the country, Lasky said the party is faced with an ideological split.

"As a conservative myself," he said, "I don't think the Republican party can be all conservative. We need a mixture of conservative and liberal, and we must learn to live with one another."

"But if the Republican national convention were held right now," he stated confidently, "I think Richard Nixon would win the nomination and would become President of the United States."

Quake Common in Area

Earth Tremor Sends Pictures Swinging But the River Didn't Flow Backwards

At 9:04 p.m. Wednesday, Marvin Lich, a graduate student, looked across the living room of his trailer and noticed the chairs vibrating and pictures swinging on the wall.

Fred Beyer, a senior, was sitting on a couch in his living room on the other side of the campus from the Lich home and began to feel the couch moving under him.

Lich said he didn't understand what was happening, and at first Beyer thought it was muscle spasms but quickly became aware that it was "something else."

That something else was an earthquake that sent a tremor across Carbondale and most of Southern Illinois and Southeast Missouri.

Dozens of reports came in from Carterville to Cairo. The quake had been felt in varying degrees throughout the area.

At St. Louis University's seismic station the quake was recorded at 9:04 p.m. A spokesman for the station said it received reports from people as far north as Chicago who felt the quake.

Its origin was in south central Missouri, said Otto W. Nuttli, professor of geophysics at St. Louis University. It had a magnitude of around five on the Richter scale (about medium intensity), he said.

Since the population in the area near the quake's origin is light, it is doubtful that too much damage occurred, according to the professor.

"There were two very light after-shocks following the quake, which is a good sign," Nuttli explained. "This probably means there will be no more strong quakes from that source in the near future, though it is impossible to be sure."

Earthquakes are not uncommon in this part of the United States, said Nuttli.

On Aug. 17 of this year he recorded seven very light quakes which originated near the southern tip of Illinois. During recent years there have been numerous earthquakes, some of relatively high magnitude, in this region.

The strongest earthquake ever recorded was in the area of Southeast Missouri in the early 1800s. A vast area of the region sank 10 or more feet but there were no ruptures in the earth's surface as is common in many earthquakes.

It was also reported that the quake caused the Ohio River to flow backwards for more than an hour.

"This is My Country" will be the theme for the banquet, according to Shelia K. Bates of Carlinville, banquet chairman.

The student union has asked the executive chiefs of the countries represented on campus to send messages for the annual occasion.

More than 20 greetings have been received from France, India, Republic of China, Australia, Laos, Turkey, Germany, Kenya and others.

President S. Radhakrishnan of India said in his message: "It is my earnest desire that students should look at all problems without any pride or prejudice and work for a happy home for humanity on earth."

Musical entertainment for the banquet will be provided by the Baptist Chapel Singers and a group of foreign students. An international menu menu is planned.

Tickets are on sale in the bookstore at the Baptist Foundation, Grand Avenue at Thompson Street, for $1 each.

The buyer of a ticket will be assigned an international guest for the evening.

Student Argues Traditional Case for Civil Disobedience

Today it seems to be treasonous to be against the War in Viet Nam. The war cry has gone out, the enemy has been named and the people have responded. Those who dissent are called "Communists." But there are those like myself, who after examination of both points of view, decide they won't go to Viet Nam. Why?

The basis of my reasoning lies with the Vietnamese viewpoint—the average Vietnamese—not the Saigon or Viet Cong supporters. I think these are the vast majority of people who are losing (being killed by the Viet Cong or by our government.) These people just want peace. They don't know who's on their side and who the enemy is. Both sides are killing them. How are they to know we're the "good guys," when we're bombing their villages? The majority of people killed in Viet Nam have not been Viet Cong, but have been the Vietnamese peasants and their families. Of course both sides justify this in the name of the cause ("Peace and Freedom"—U.S., and "Liberation"—Viet Cong), or in the name of the "national interest." This justification has been used falsely by governments throughout history and is not justified in this war, either. The Vietnamese war is one of the clearest examples in history of people being used (more accurately, killed) in the name of "national interests" of opposing sides.

I have decided not to be used in our "national interest"—in winning a war which disregards the interests of the Vietnamese people. In fact I feel so strongly about this that I would be killed, rather than kill people who I don't know, and who in the majority are innocent.

To me, the interest of the Vietnamese people would best be served by a cease-fire and negotiated settlement. Both sides claim to have attempted this (the Viet Cong during our '64 elections and the U.S. last May, although we did not actually stop the bombing and strafing as we'd promised.) Both sides seem willing to negotiate only from a position of strength. Again, this is the two "national interest," but ignores the interests of the majority of Vietnamese.

For the people who suffer from "national interest," whether our interest or the Viet Cong's interest, I will not go to Vietnam. I will stay here and work to get the government to redefine its interests to coincide with the interest of the people of Viet Nam: a cease-fire and negotiated settlement.

If A Is Not B and B Is Not C, Must A Be C?

A logician's nightmare! That, is the best description for Perry H. Patterson's letter, Oct. 11, concerning athletic scholarships. His reasoning was highlighted by football cause-to-effect relationships which, if intentional, are a black mark on his record as a person and, if unplanned, certainly do nothing to designate him as a thinker.

Patterson committed his first error when he said, "I have never heard why the loss of a football game should be regarded as a calamity." Most people realize that young impressionable high school seniors, other factors being equal, would choose the university at which they could go out on a Saturday afternoon and cheer their athletes on to victory—rather than a school which sports a perennial loser. Not so with our friend Perry! The public image of a university plays a major role in deciding what students it will attract. The students attracted make the university.

Next, he openly supports a no-win policy when he states that losses can be an "advantage" to a university. In effect, Mr. Patterson says that having a poor football team proves a university has other laurels. It is evident to the rational mind that neither scholastic reputation nor athletic prowess necessarily influences the other. It is not true that a poor football team guarantees a fine debate team or a scholastic image. It is much more reasonable (look that one up in Webster's, P.H.) that the team which plays coast-to-coast in a bowl game does much to enhance the attractiveness of its institution in the teen-ager's eyes.

The climax of the article is reached when Patterson "reasons" that "a spurious university must win because it has no other distinction." Is he suggesting that Purdue, Notre Dame, the U of I, UCLA, Harvard, and Yale, because they strive so hard to produce the nation's top gridiron teams, have no other accomplishments on which to rest their names. "Rowdiness" (Perry's pick for collegiate football) is an accepted and expected part of Saturday on campus. To ignore that fact is to be as irrational as Perry H. Patterson's letter.

Beware Yoke of Oppression!

Although I am not active verbally or otherwise in regard to America's policy in Viet Nam, I could not help but be shocked and repelled by Mayor Miller's attitude toward last Saturday's demonstrators.

His intended witticism, "If I were the marchers, I'd be grateful that eggs and not rocks were thrown," is not only unfunny, but denotes a totally irresponsible attitude. Were we all free to show our distaste for this or that demonstration by impinging upon the freedom of the demonstrators, I would have thrown tomatoes at the Shriners for blocking traffic.

Neither is it up to the Mayor to declare himself in or out of sympathy with a given ideology; his duties lie in seeing that the demonstration of that ideological viewpoint is carried out peacefully and without interference. Yet, in Saturday's incident, the marchers' freedom was impinged upon by egg-throwers.

I wonder if I should throw an egg at Mayor Miller, to show my lack of sympathy? I could justify myself by reminding him that I could have thrown a rock, instead!

Don't Drive the Talent Away

I would like to know why there were so many rude students in the 1 p.m. Freshman Convocation, Oct. 14. Even if they didn't appreciate Miss Karen Duke's singing and playing, they could have had the courtesy to sit quietly. I think that these students showed only their bad manners and immaturity. Their unkindness only makes it harder to get stimulating people to work at these convocations. Who wants to work for a group that can't appreciate their talents?

A Land Reform That Wasn't?

In his Oct. 19 letter Harrison Youngren claims that the U. S. Rural Aid Program of 1956-59 was "... successful until the encroachments of North Viet Nam-supported guerrilla terrorists. . . ." Mr. Youngren neglects to tell us what forced the "terrorists" to upset the U. S. program. If he would check back he would find that in 1955 the Diem regime instituted a series of "land reforms" which, according to a leading authority, were "... a long way toward explaining the resumption of hostilities in South Viet Nam after 1953" (Richard Morrock, Monthly Review, Nov. 1964). This "reform" actually took away land which was given to the peasants by the Viet Minh during the war against the French, and returned it to the former landlords. The government in effect reduced rents which the Viet Minh abolished, sold land which the Viet Minh had given away, and re-established estates which the Viet Minh had broken up. It was this "land reform" which led the peasants and Viet Minh cadres to organize violent resistance.

Freedom's a Sometime Thing

I am writing in reply to Dr. Randall Nelson's Oct. 19 letter. As "MC" at the teach-in, I can say categorically that several of the best qualified members of the faculty were asked, but refused, to defend administration policy in Viet Nam.

The teach-in was oriented toward an analysis and criticism of policies, in mind of a constructive search for viable alternative policies."

At the same time, it was and is a movement against war and is therefore critical of the draft and the administration's policies. I feel sure that Dr. Nelson does not feel it is opprobrious to criticize war, the draft, or the administration. That view would be repugnant in a democracy.

Dr. Nelson asks us if "any totalitarian country in history ever permitted a free election?" It is true that they have not, and on this basis we must in all fairness add our own country to the list. Dr. Nelson said an election was infeasible. It seems that, when the U. S. prevents a free election, it is "in defense of democracy," when another country does so, it is "totalitarian." Again, this does not include such "friends" as Spain, South Africa, and Mississippi.

Motorcycle Merry-Go-Round?

Being a motorbike owner, I am getting sick and tired of the Saluki police prohibiting places in which students once were allowed to park their bikes.

One place was across from the new Lawson building that was a convenient place to park bikes and was not in the way of any other larger vehicle. The latest place where motor bikes have been disallowed is right next to the library, a place where they have always been allowed.

What's the sense of having cycles if you can't drive them to class?

Meet the Faculty

Nine Join Language Department

Nine new faculty members have been added to the Department of Foreign Languages, according to J. Cary Davis, department chairman.

David L. Gobert, associate professor, specializes in 18th and 20th century French literature and applied linguistics. He received his doctorate at the University of Iowa, and then served as associate professor at Coe College, Iowa, prior to coming to SIU.

Meyer Reinhold joined the staff as an associate professor, after 17 years of teaching at Brooklyn College. He is the author of several books and is presently working on two more. Greek and Latin languages and literatures are his primary interests.

Mrs. Jerrilyn Emison, instructor, taught French at the Anna-Jonesboro Community Schools last year. She received her M.A. degree at SIU this year.

Gail D. Stark, instructor, comes from Laos, where he taught at the Lycee de Vientiane. Teaching elementary and intermediate French is his chief interest.

Alan L. Stiegebauer comes from the University of Missouri, where he served as instructor last year. He will serve in the same capacity at SIU while also completing work for his M.A. this fall.

Maxine Vogely, a teaching assistant at the University of Illinois last year, is an instructor in French. Miss Vogely has a special interest in the contemporary French novel and the teaching of elementary French.

Hans Wendler came to SIU as an exchange student in 1964, and will now be serving as an instructor. He has attended the University of Hamburg, Germany, and received his M.A. from SIU this year.

Hensley Woodbridge, instructor, served as librarian at Murray State College, Kentucky for 12 years before joining SIU's staff this year. An author and contributor to many linguistic and folklore journals, Woodbridge will divide his time between the department of Foreign Languages and the University libraries.

Mary K. Niddrie, lecturer, returns to the staff after a three year absence. She received her doctorate from the University of London in 1939, and has served much of her career as a teacher in South Africa and England.

Southern Represented At Building Dedication

Margaret Kaaiser, associate professor of botany, is at the University of Oklahoma for the dedication of its new Life Science Building.

Miss Kaaiser will be representing SIU at the ceremony today.

Illinois Education Association Holds SIU Enrollment Drive

A membership drive is being held by the campus chapter of the southern division of the Illinois Education Association.

This professional organization is comprised of nearly 70,000 active members who are united for the continued betterment of the profession and the improvement of education.

The association has been known for its success in working for and securing the enactment of laws for the benefit and protection of teachers. Such laws involve age retirement benefits, salaries, sick leave and other items relating to the educational system.

The association also provides $50,000 liability insurance for each of its members, group term life insurance available through the association, and additional low-cost term life insurance available through other agencies.

Financial and other assistance is available to individual members who are dismissed contrary to the provisions of the tenure law. Persons interested in joining the Illinois Educational Association should contact Benson Poirier, Extension Division.

Teacher, Graduate Show Art Works In Exhibit of 30 Contemporaries

An SIU artist and one of his recent graduate students are among 30 contemporary artists whose work is being shown in an international exhibit at the Museum of Contemporary Crafts in New York City.

Brent Kington, metalsmith and assistant professor of art, has two pieces in the exhibition, a gold necklace and a gold watch. The showing opened Oct. 8 and runs through November.

A sterling silver collar designed and made by Mike Croft of Hobbs, N.M., was also accepted for the exhibit. Croft, who specialized in silver-smithing under Kington, completed the master of fine arts degree at SIU last August.

Kington himself has been represented in four previous exhibitions at the Museum of Contemporary Art. Two of the exhibits have been sent on tour in this country and one to the Far East.

Johnson Bids Goodbye to Bethesda, Patients

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Johnson, a grinning convalescent, returned to the White House Thursday after admonishing others still in the hospital, "Now, you get well."

The President, in a dark business suit, his wife beside him, left Bethesda Naval Hospital at 1:05 p.m., 13 days after surgery that removed his gall bladder with a gallstone and also a kidney stone.

He had entered the hospital two weeks ago Thursday night. He left it weighing less, a little under 200 pounds, and with good color, good cheer and good words for the care he got.

Just before leaving, he spent a few minutes in a neuro-surgical ward to tell some Marines wounded in Viet Nam and other patients there that their families, their country and their President are mighty proud of them.

"I feel like a fellow casualty; I've been slashed up a bit. But I've gone through nothing like what you've gone through," he told them.

Some may feel they got a bad break, he said, but "because of what you had done three billion people in the world will get a better break."

He had special words for two wounded Marines who lay in beds in a separate room. "Guys like you have made this nation great," he told the two, Jonathan Fay, New York, N.Y.; and Virgil Bohler, Silsbee, Tex.

In the ward, eight Marines wounded in Viet Nam formed a semicircle in wheelchairs and chairs. Other patients, in blue pajamas and robes, sat in chairs or lay in their beds. Johnson told them to stay where they were as he went around shaking hands. Mrs. Johnson joined him.

The President took the occasion to thank the doctors, nurses and aides at the hospital. "They have certainly been wonderful to me and I hope they have to you," he told the patients.

Outside, pajama-clad patients in the wards leaned out the windows calling "Mr. President" as Johnson walked in the sunshine to his limousine.

Johnson turned toward them, raised his clasped hands in a salute and called out, "They fixed me up — I'm in good shape — now, you get well."

He is expected to stay at the White House for a short period and then probably go to his ranch in Texas for convalescence.

Troops Counter Seige On Garrison at Plei Me

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP)—Air-lifted troops joined the besieged garrison at Plei Me and a U.S. military spokesman said Thursday they apparently lifted the siege. The Viet Cong attack, launched

Thursday night, was reported to have ebbed quickly.

U.S. helicopters bore several Vietnamese companies to the embattled special forces camp, in the central highlands 210 miles northeast of Saigon. The spokesman said guerrilla operations diminished in both size and ferocity.

Four Americans were reported killed in a second helicopter crash in that area, this one attributed to mechanical failure. Four died Wednesday in a helicopter shot down by the guerrillas.

Government losses within the camp, regularly garrisoned by about 300 Montagnard tribesmen and 10 or 12 American advisers, were officially described as light.

Witnesses said the assault force, estimated up to 500 men, has suffered heavily. They reported seeing at least 90 enemy bodies in the defensive wire and on the ground beyond.

To the north, a U.S. Army officer who was senior adviser to a Vietnamese battalion based near Quang Tri City escaped from the Viet Cong after being held captive for several hours. Announcing this exploit, the spokesman identified the officer as Capt. Robert F. Hopper, 29, whose wife lives in Winter Haven, Fla.

Newsmen were told that Hopper apparently was captured when guerrillas hit a government outpost near Quan Tri, itself only 20 miles south of the frontier of Communist North Viet Nam. The raiders penetrated an artillery position and blew up an ammunition storage bunker.

Details of Hopper's escape were not learned immediately.

Was in Viet Nam on Date

Marine Jailed for Parking Ticket

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (AP)—Michael Strong, 19, a Marine private, said Thursday that while he was recuperating from shoulder wounds suffered in Viet Nam, Milwaukee police held him in jail for two hours for failure to pay another man's parking ticket.

Strong said he had told police he was in Viet Nam last July when the ticket was issued but was ordered to "get in that cell or I'll take a club to you."

Deputy Inspector Lloyd Lund, head of the Traffic Bureau, said a mistake had been made but the excuses of all violators had to be checked out.

After being wounded, Strong was sent to the naval hospital at Great Lakes, Ill., and was back in Milwaukee last Friday on convalescent leave to stay with two brothers.

He said he and a friend went to a district police station to ask about the legality of hitchhiking to Chicago. He said he received the information but an officer suggested a check be made to see if the two had any record. Strong said he was told a short while later that there was a warrant for him for an old, unpaid parking ticket.

The warrant was issued to a Michael Strong but listed an address other than the Marine's. Strong said he pointed this out, declared he had never owned a car such as described and was in Viet Nam when the ticket was issued.

Strong said he was kept in the precinct jail for about two hours while his friend raised the $11.50 for the ticket.

He said he went to the Traffic Bureau on Saturday, was told a mistake had been made and that he should return Monday for a refund.

On that day, County Judge John E. Krueger ordered the money refunded.

Grand Dragon Takes 'Fifth'

Investigators Seek to Link Acts of Violence With Klan

WASHINGTON (AP)—Congressional investigators accused the Ku Klux Klan on Thursday of plotting violence and harrasment — including stuffing dead rats and headless chickens into mailboxes of their enemies.

Finishing up two days of questioning of James R. Jones, Klan grand dragon of North Carolina, staff members of the House Committee on Un-American Activities brought out that a Klan officer in New Bern, N.C., pleaded guilty to a series of bombings.

Jones, as he has done all along, refused to answer any questions about the case involving Raymond Mills, who has since testified before the committee in closed session.

A letter from Jones was read in which he said Mills had been suspended but not "banished."

Chairman Edwin E. Willis, D-La., said, "You pretend to be against violence, but you have never expelled anyone."

This exchange followed the introduction of tax returns showing that Jones' income took a hefty jump when he became North Carolina grand dragon. He declined to answer questions about that, too, citing constitutional grounds.

Chief investigator Donald T. Appell read a long list of North Carolina cross-burnings, many of them on May 28 of this year, including one on the lawn of the governor's mansion.

Willis then read from what he indicated was a Klan document entitled, "Harrasment."

It said, "All members should tax their minds to devise new means. They should have a humorous twist in the nature of Halloween pranks."

The booklet then gave 16 suggestions, including: roofing nails, sugar and molasses in gas tanks, firecrackers, snakes and lizards, stink bombs, tear gas, paint, BB guns, roman candles and sky-rockets and noisemakers.

Willis said it also mentioned throwing dead rats in front of homes or into mailboxes, chickens with their heads cut off, and dead bugs.

The discussion of Jones' income was accompanied by testimony that he enjoyed these fringe benefits as well:

—A new Cadillac, which Klan Klaverns all over the state were assessed to pay for.

—A new Dodge station wagon they said was paid for out of Klan funds.

—A death benefit setup for widows of Klansmen with a built-in "enormous profit" for the Klan.

They also accused Jones of making a false accounting of Klan finances to a Klan rally at Rockwell, N.C., last Aug. 22.

Like Klan Imperial Wizard Robert M. Shelton before him, Jones has refused to deliver any Klan records and documents subpoenaed by the committee. He too was warned that he faces possible contempt of Congress charges.

LONDON (AP)—Prime Minister Harold Wilson announced Thursday he will fly to Rhodesia in a bid "to avert the tragic consequences" of seizure of independence by that African colony's prime minister, Ian Smith.

SIU Senior Freshman Hits Books After Dropping Out 39 Years Ago

By John Ochomnicki

In 1926, Chester L. Williams was a high school drop-out. At that time the term wasn't so notorious; it was almost a way of life.

In 1965, Williams is a freshman at SIU -- the oldest freshman at SIU. The events of the 39-year interim that led to Williams' college days indicate a determined man.

Williams quit Carbondale Community High School at 16. As he recalls it, "It was after the end of my first year." The reason? Being the oldest of the children in his family, he had to contribute toward the support of his brothers and sisters, all of whom went on to finish high school.

The years that followed found Williams in construction trades.

"I worked mostly as a carpenter," he said, "but I also did some contracting."

From construction he went to work as a postman, until a heart attack early this year influenced his decision to retire in June.

After nearly four decades of a life filled with active occupations and active outside interests, which included management of a baseball team, Williams found himself idle.

"I knew only construction work prior to working for the post office," Williams said. "I sought an office position in the construction field but found I was not qualified."

So Williams took the General Educational Development tests and received his high school diploma in August. He found the tests "pretty rough," but admitted that he had not prepared himself in any way for the G.E.D. tests. But he added that he did study for the exams on the state and federal constitutions.

At present, Williams claimed that his major field is undecided but said, "if my health stays the same, I would like to graduate from the College of Education." Williams is carrying 12 hours for the fall term.

His family supports his ambitions. "I have three boys who feel awfully good about it," he said with pride.

The tone of pride became more evident when he mentioned that one of his sons graduated from Southern and another had completed two years. It appears that Williams' enthusiasm for sports is shared by his youngest son, who is a sophomore at University High School and a member of the football team.

When asked about the reaction of his fellow classmates, Williams recalled a speech he had given in class about the incidents that led him to college. "After the speech, many of the girls in the class called me 'sir' but the boys called me by my first name," he said.

"My biggest difficulty is in organizing my work," said Williams. As for studying, he finds that it isn't too difficult and that he has no problem in concentrating.

Williams glanced nervously at his watch several times, indicating that he was due in class shortly. But before he went on his way, he gave advice for those people who have considered college but are not sure whether they could make it: "My advice is go to college."

Sophomores Dominate Lineups

Salukis to Play Wichita State; Teams Seem Evenly Matched

A pair of young, fairly-evenly matched teams will square off Saturday when the Salukis play Wichita State there.

Neither team has been very successful so far this year, and both have sophomore-dominated lineups and similar offenses.

The Salukis, 1-4 this season, have 30 sophomores on the 51-man squad, and Wichita State has 32 on its 62-man roster.

Both teams run with the wing-T and emphasize passing. Jim Hart's fine performance Saturday against Drake upped the Salukis' overall passing yardage to 627 yards. Hart and Doug Mougey have combined to give the Salukis 51 completions in 177 attempts and accounted for three touchdowns.

Wichita's passing has provided nearly three-fourths of its total offense. Although the Shockers have played one game less than Southern, they have the same number of completions, 51, and are 27 yards behind the Salukis in passing yardage. The Shockers, shockingly enough, have racked up their completions and yardage in 102 attempts as compared with Southern's 177.

Southern is far ahead of the Shockers in rushing yardage. The Salukis have a net gain of 537 in five games for an average of about 107 yards a game. The Shockers have rushed for only 252 yards in four games for an average of only 63 yards a game.

Chicago Harriers Bow Out of Meet

The cross-country meet scheduled Saturday with the Chicago Track Club has been cancelled.

The Chicago team was not able to get enough runners to come down, according to Bill Cornell, assistant coach at SIU.

The varsity team has five meets remaining including the NCAA championships at Lawrence, Kan., and the United States Track and Field Federation championships at Wichita.

again are fairly similar. Both have given up an average of 161 yards rushing to each opponent. Opponents have passed for an average of 127 yards against Wichita, and the Salukis' opponents have passed for 111 yards a game.

However, the competition must be taken into consideration. Wichita State's games have been against generally stronger competition than Southern's. The Shockers' four losses have been to Montana State, Cincinnati, Arizona State and New Mexico State, and only the latter beat Wichita by more than one touchdown.

Scrambling Quarterback

Frosh Football Squad Preparing for '66

By Doyle Atnip

Southern's coaching staff will be seeking a running quarterback for next year's varsity when the freshman squad travels to Memphis State for a 2 p.m. contest Saturday. "We will be using an 'I' formation offense in hopes of developing a scrambling quarterback for the varsity squad next season.

"We feel if our quarterbacks, Tim Kelley and Chip Marlow, can run the ball against the Memphis freshmen, they will be able to run the ball against any of Southern's foes next season," Coach Joe Lutz explained.

SIU won its first game of the season by downing Southeast Missouri State's junior varsity squad on the Southern field, 20-7. The yearlings used a wing-T formation against the Indians.

"We will add the wing-T and the straight-T formation to the I-series to add depth to our offense. By using these three offensive formations, both quarterbacks will be given a chance to run the ball," Lutz said.

In the I-series the quarterback will have four choices when he takes the snap from the center. He can hand off to a fullback coming through the line, keep the ball, pass to a split end, or pass to a halfback.

The trend of college football is to have a quarterback who can pass or run with the ball. If a college can come up with a signal caller who can pass and run, the university can hold its own against most competition.

"I thought that the boys played an above-average game against Southeast Missouri. It was their first game together and both the offense and defense worked well together," Lutz said.

Freshman football is the melting pot of the football system in a college. Most of the players were home town stars before graduating from high school. In several cases they were the only standout players on their teams.

The boys must become accustomed to playing with 10 other boys of the same potential. For the first time many of the linemen are hitting players of their own size.

"The players learn different techniques and offensive patterns during the first few weeks of practice and I feel the freshmen have adjusted adequately to this change," Lutz said.

"In our first game I felt the pass defense was adequate. We gave up several short passes in order not to allow the long one," Lutz explained.

Southeast Missouri attempted 17 passes and completed seven against SIU. The Sa-lukis completed two of five.

Southern's defensive front line did an excellent job of holding the Indians. Southeast Missouri gained only 36 yards on the ground while Southern compiled 164 yards rushing.

The undefeated Memphis team will use a wing-T and a straight-T offense.

Southern's freshman team will travel to Tennessee Tech Wednesday.

Death Force Coaching Staff Reorganization

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP)—Shaken by the deaths of two assistant coaches and serious injury to a third, Tennessee's football coaching staff has been reorganized for the remainder of the season.

Assistants William B. Majors, 26, and Robert T. Jones, 30, were killed Monday when a train struck a car in which they were riding. A third assistant, Charles Rash, 28, remains in grave condition in a hospital.

Heartbroken as they were by the tragedy, other coaches and players Thursday ran through one of their most spirited practices of the season in preparing for Saturday's game here with the University of Houston.

Head Coach Doug Dickey reshuffled his staff. He turned down the offer of coaching help for the rest of the season from the Dallas Cowboys of the National Football League.

In reorganizing his staff, Dickey shifted assignments of various staff members and called on Jim McDonald, assistant athletic director.

Assistants still on Dickey's staff are George Cafego,

Charlie Coffey, Jimmy Dunn, Vince Gibson, Jack Kile and George McKinney.
