Student election ballots to be tallied by computer

By Susan Fernandez
Staff Writer

A computer-read ballot may reduce errors and speed up the ballot-counting process in student elections, according to John Katovich, student election commissioner.

Katovich met with Phillip Spielmacher and Tom Purcell from Computing Services Monday to work out the final details of using computer ballots for the Nov. 15 Student Senate election.

"All I have to do now is obtain the obscan sheets that the computer will read, and print up a sample ballot," Katovich said.

"A strict standard to determine a spoiled ballot will be set up, and the computer will decide which ballots are spoiled," he said.

During last spring's elections, Election Commissioner Brian Adams discarded ballots that he judged as spoiled. This action was questioned by several senators, who charged Adams with election irregularities. However, no official action resulted from the charges.

Twenty-one election petitions were turned in Sunday for the 22 open senate seats.

West Side senate candidates face stiffer competition than do East Side candidates, Katovich said.

"Fifteen petitions were turned in for the nine seats open in West Side and West Campus districts, but only six petitions were turned in from the 13 open seats in the East Campus and East Side districts," Katovich said.

If fewer than the needed number of senators are elected, candidates who were not elected last spring will be asked to fill the empty seats, Katovich said.

If these candidates can't take the seats, write-in candidates with the most votes from this fall's and last spring's elections will be asked to fill the seats, he added.

Katovich said he feels that the proximity of Thompson Point and Small Group Housing to campus causes more students there to become involved with Student Government.

The tract of obtaining the required number of signatures from fraternity and sorority members may also figure in the greater West Campus participation, he added.

"One candidate had about 150 signatures from frat members," he said.

A minimum of 50 signatures and a 2.0 grade point average are required of all senate candidates.

At a meeting Sunday, Katovich explained the campaign rules to the candidates.

"Probably the biggest problem that occurs involves putting too many posters in the designated areas. Only one poster per candidate is allowed," he said.

A lottery was used to determine name placement on the ballot, Katovich said this was the fairest way to place names.

Autumn rain

Jerry McSparrin, senior in accounting, tromped down a campus sidewalk coated with wet autumn leaves on his way to class Monday morning. After a beautiful, sunny weekend with temperatures in the 70s, jackets and umbrellas became the order of the day Monday as the mercury sank down into the 50s and intermittent rain drenched the area. Relief is in sight, however. Tuesday is expected to be sunny and warmer with highs in the mid 60s while Wednesday's forecast calls for highs in the upper 60s. (Staff photo by Don Preister)

Agency cites conflicting laws

Audit charges ISSC with violations

By Bob Springer

Associated Press Writer

SPRINGFIELD (AP) — The Illinois State Scholarship Commission regularly has violated a state law by awarding grants to persons not first enrolled in a college or university, a state audit said Monday.

But Ralph Godzicki, assistant director of the scholarship commission, said two different laws conflict with each other and he believes the commission is following the right one.

Auditor General Robert G. Cronson said his audit, which covered the two-year period ending June 30, 1977, showed that students regularly are awarded the grants without first being enrolled or accepted by an accredited university or college.

"By complying with the law, the commission would reduce the number of applications to be processed and avoid approving awards to individuals who cannot gain admission to a qualified institution," the audit said.

Godzicki said another state law allows the student to apply for enrollment after getting a grant award.

"Our concern is that if an application must first go through the institution's admissions system, the institution could lose its freedom in selecting and accepting students," Godzicki said.

He said the commission each year awards 15 percent to 20 percent more in the grants than the General Assembly has provided for, knowing that many students will change their minds and either enroll at cheaper schools or not enroll at all.

The grants, which do not need to be repaid by the student, are good for up to $1,650 a year, Godzicki said, adding that this year lawmakers provided $94 million in state tax money for the program.

"The money goes to the school, not the student, only after the student has enrolled and been attending classes past the point at which he could claim a reimbursement for tuition or fees," said Godzicki.

The typical student applies for the monetary grant and for admission to a school at the same time, said Godzicki. He said forcing the student to enroll in a college before applying for the grant could restrict the student's choice of school he wants to attend.

The audit also criticized the scholarship commission's handling of the Illinois Guaranteed Loan Program, saying the commission has a fouled accounting system for keeping in touch with banks to see which students have defaulted and which ones are repaying the loans.

"Many of the problems result from the fact that there never has been an efficient system established since the audit said.

Egypt seeks 'modifications' in mideast peace treaty

By The Associated Press

Egypt asked for "modifications" Monday in the proposed peace treaty with Israel, apparently dissatisfied with the weak link the draft document makes between the Palestinian issue and an Egyptian-Israeli settlement.

In Jerusalem, meanwhile, Prime Minister Menachem Begin convened the Israeli Cabinet to consider the treaty proposals in what was expected to be a long and fiery secret session lasting well into the night.

Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan and the other Israeli negotiators at the Washington peace talks with Egypt had resisted putting "linkage" language in the proposed treaty — wording that would make the Israeli-Egyptian peace in some way dependent on progress toward settling the issues of the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip and the political future of the Palestinians living there.

U.S. sources said in Washington over the weekend the two sides reached a "50-50 compromise" on the linkage issue. A loosely worded formulation on the subject was inserted in the treaty's preamble to appease Egypt, the sources said, and apparently the U.S. was not strong enough to arouse Israel's opposition.

But Egyptian Prime Minister Mustafa Khalil said Monday that Egypt now has "asked for modifications." Khalil spoke with reporters in Cairo after discussing the treaty proposals for two hours with President Anwar Sadat.

He would not specify what modifications were sought, but he said he and Sadat "informed our delegation in Washington about some technical remarks on the text." He then explained that the "remarks" relate to the linkage issue.

Khalil confirmed, however, that a linkage formula had been developed in the Washington talks and stressed that "Egypt has not rejected the draft treaty."

A treaty incorporating a firm Israeli commitment to make progress on the West Bank/Gaza issues — such as a "synchronized" timetable for Israeli withdrawal from both the Sinai and those territories — could draw other Arab states into the U.S.-sponsored peace process begun at Camp David.

It would also help cool some of the Arab criticism aimed at Sadat.

Percy launches 'blitz' to regain votes

By Bill Deansmore
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Sen. Charles H. Percy, saying he is fighting for his political life against a challenger virtually unknown six months ago, flew six Republican colleagues into Illinois Monday for a blitz of Chicago-area and downstate voters.

"I concede that I am behind," Percy told newsmen. "This is a real horse race

(and) I expect it to be a photo finish right down to the line."

The 59-year-old moderate Republican issued a battle cry to his supporters, saying every worker and every vote is now needed to battle months of campaigning and searing television advertisements by his Democratic opponent.

"The re-election of Chuck Percy is more important than any other race in the nation this year," said Sen. Robert Packwood, R-Ore., who joined the other senators at a Percy news conference.

Percy said he accepts as accurate a recent newspaper poll that shows him trailing his Democratic challenger, Chicago lawyer Alex R. Seith, by several percentage points.

"All of us had no idea that Senator Percy was in any kind of trouble so far as the polls by Illinois newspapers are concerned," said Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y.

Javits, joined by Sens. John Chafee of Rhode Island, John Heinz of Pennsylvania, Richard Lugar of Indiana and Harrison Schmitt of New Mexico, condemned what they described as a vicious media blitz by Seith.

Javits condemned as "outrageous" Seith radio commercials, airing in heavily black Chicago, which contend Percy has called for the return of former Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz. The commercial begins by citing Butz' resignation as the result of "a racist and sexually obscene joke about blacks."

In a coup that could offset the impact of the Butz commercial, Percy lined up Monday an endorsement from world heavyweight boxing champion Muhammad Ali.

"You're just absolutely marvelous and the greatest Muhammad Ali," Percy said as he stood during a campaign stop outside a windswept telephone booth along Lake Michigan to return the boxer's telephoned offer of support.

Seith, 44, has been hammering away at Percy's relatively liberal voting record — including votes for the ERA, the Panama Canal treaties, federal funding for some abortions and limited handgun controls.

One of Seith's most widely used television spots condemns an "election-year bunk" Percy's claim to have consistently supported tax cuts and tax limiting legislation.

"I have voted for every major bill cutting taxes for 12 years," Percy told students at Loyola University during one campaign stop with Javits.

Percy, a two-term incumbent who won re-election in 1972 by more than a million votes, has been hammering away at the issues of inflation and high taxes in hand-shaking stops and speeches since the Senate adjourned Oct. 14.

But he got a late start on the trail, electing to stay in Washington through the adjournment of Congress Oct. 14. It was two days later that the first poll appeared showing a slip in his previously overwhelming margin.

"Our own data confirms that there has been a substantial decline," says James D. Nowlan, Percy's campaign manager.

But what has Percy running harder than anything else is a Chicago Sun-Times straw poll of a portion of the state which gives Seith 51.5 percent to Percy's 48.1 percent. These results come from pulling 9,870 persons at selected spots

Suspect charged in heist

An SIU student was arraigned in Belleville Friday and charged with the robbery of the First National Bank and Trust Co. of Carbondale Oct. 16.

Lawrence E. Johnson, sophomore in physical education, was arraigned before U.S. Magistrate Robert W. Schneider. He is being held in St. Clair County Jail in lieu of $25,000 bond.

Johnson was arrested at his home in Southern Hills Friday morning by FBI agents and officers from Carbondale and SIU police. A warrant was issued for Johnson's arrest Oct. 16, but agents said they were not able to arrest him until Friday because they believe he might have gone to Chicago to see his wife after the robbery. He was arrested without incident, agents said.

Agents said the money had not been recovered yet, but that they expect to recover it soon. Approximately $5,970 was taken in the robbery, agents said.

Johnson was charged with a violation of the Federal Bank Robbery Statute of the U.S. Code. If convicted, Johnson could be imprisoned for not more than 20 years or fined not more than $5,000 or both. Agents said Monday that the case will go to a grand jury, but the date has not yet been set.

A composite drawing made from witnesses' descriptions along with the cooperation of Carbondale police in the investigation helped with the arrest, agents said.

On Oct. 16 a man entered the First National Bank and gave teller Lisa Stangle a note that read "Give me your hundreds, twenties and tens or you'll die." She put the money in a backpack and the man fled on foot.

He'll stay home on election day

Blind man has no way to vote privately

By Bob Springer
Associated Press Writer

SPRINGFIELD (AP) — If Jimmy Hood wanted to go to the polls on Nov. 7, he'd either have to fumble alone in the dark or ask for help and have someone witness his ballot. He doesn't like either option.

Jimmy, 33, was born blind. He can't do it alone, and says he doesn't believe anyone should know how he votes. So he says he won't vote, even though he's on a first-name basis with many Illinois politicians and talks with some nearly every day.

Jimmy operates the Capitol Newsstand here under the 361-foot-tall rotunda. With a nearby statue of Abraham Lincoln standing guard, Jimmy sells cigarettes, candy and other confections to the elected ones, the appointed ones, the hangers-on and the countless tourists and students who visit the Capitol daily.

Jimmy says he is denied his right to a secret ballot by requirements that would have him either vote alone without knowing which name goes with which voting knob, ask a friend to help or have two election judges (of different persuasions) do his voting.

"I'm a loner," says the short, thick-framed Montana native who's been at his post from 7 a.m. to 4 p.m. for eight years. "I don't like the idea of having people witness my votes."

Jimmy says he'd like to see ballots printed in Braille — the language of the blind in which names and numbers are codes perforated on paper or raised on metal, skimmed over and read by fingertips.

Jimmy's problem is shared by about 20,000 blind Illinois adults.

More than 217,000 American wage earners and their spouses claimed blindness on 1975 federal income tax returns, the Internal Revenue Service says. The National Society for the Prevention of Blindness estimates nearly one-half million American adults are legally blind.

One can be legally blind but not totally blind. Legally blind means that even with corrective lenses a person sees something 20 feet away with his better eye as though it were 200 feet or more away.

No one knows how many blind don't vote because it is a hardship.

"I don't think they intentionally want to make (voting) inaccessible," says Hood. "I just think it's inaccessible because nobody complains loud enough."

He adds: "If you get used to living in a mental hospital long enough... you learn to enjoy it. If you live long enough and get treated as a blind person or a second-rate citizen and you never had any outside exposure, you're not going to mind it too much. And if nobody gripes about it, nobody is going to know about your problem."

Hood, who shuffles coins in his hands merely by their feel faster than most sighted folks fumble for them while looking, says his gripe has cost him sight sales dips when expressed to lawmakers during busy legislative sessions. "You just irritate them," the politicians' boycotts, he adds, don't last long.

Illinois law guarantees a secret ballot to eligible voters.

It also guarantees help to physically disabled persons who ask.

"I should have as much right as anyone else to a secret ballot," contends Hood.

The state Division of Vocational Rehabilitation, which lobbies for equal job hiring of the handicapped and operates training programs for the disabled, said it had never considered Hood's plight, or the plight of others like him.

"We've mostly worked to insure that blind people can vote by fighting to allow them assistance," said Richard Chrempt, a division lawyer, himself blind, who votes with his wife's help.

Pope endorses harmony with communists

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II endorsed the Roman Catholic Church's policy of accommodation with communist nations Monday, saying dialogue is the only way to ease problems.

"There cannot be true human progress for lasting peace without the courageous, loyal and disinterested search for cooperation and an increasing unity among peoples," the pope said in an address to representatives from some 125 nations and world organizations.

"For this, this church encourages all the initiatives that can be taken, all the steps that can be accomplished for the bilateral and multilateral plan."

The former cardinal from communist Poland did not mention any country or a specific policy but his meaning was clear when he said, "The principles which guided my predecessors and especially the mourned Pope Paul VI will continue to inspire the action of the Holy See."

Government to check nitrite preservatives

BRIGHTON (AP) — The U.S. Department of Agriculture intends to take a cautious approach to health hazards caused by nitrite preservatives that cure meat, Assistant Agriculture Secretary Carol Tucker Foreman told a gathering of farmers Monday.

She said research showed that nitrites can induce cancer in laboratory animals (and) any government action must strike a careful balance between competing health risks.

The problem, she said, is that nitrites have been used for many years to add taste and color to cured meats such as bacon and they prevent formation of botulism, a form of food poisoning.

Although she has in the past taken a strong stand against nitrites, she told the farmers that she would "never favor any ban on nitrites if there is nothing acceptable as a substitute."

Mental health bills fail to be paid by patients

SPRINGFIELD (AP) — Inadequate records and poor inter-office coordination have contributed to the Illinois Department of Mental Health's failure to collect millions of dollars owed by its patients, the state auditor general said in a report released Monday.

The report said that $17 million in bills has not been collected, including $8 million in accounts for which the most recent payment was more than five years ago.

The report released by Auditor General Robert G. Cronson also criticized the department for not maintaining adequate records to support claims for federal Medicaid funds.

And it said the department was lax in recovering overpayments to agencies that provide services on its behalf. More than $1 million in such payments went uncollected, the report said.

Troy maintains Scott keeps patronage army

SPRINGFIELD (AP) — In at least five cases convicted criminals have had their convictions overturned by appeals courts as the result of Attorney General William Scott's hiring practices, the Democratic candidate for attorney general said Monday.

Richard Troy said such convictions are being overturned because of Republican Scott's "continued insistence on keeping his patronage army intact" through use of part-time special assistants, many of whom Troy says contribute to Scott's campaigns.

Troy also said Scott's office had "deceived every one of the press corps by not acknowledging a 1977 appeals court decision overturning a murder conviction on the same grounds. Scott had sought unsuccessfully to have that conviction reinstated by the Illinois Supreme Court."

At issue is whether the attorney general should continue to employ part-time lawyers. Scott's office says 130 such lawyers are on the attorney general's payroll, and Troy contends that their workload can be absorbed by the full time staff.

SIU art student charged in kidnap of Makanda man

An SIU senior and a Murphysboro man were charged with kidnapping, home invasion and burglary in Jackson County Circuit Court Monday.

Shelley Kite, a 29-year-old art education major, and Fidelmar Tello, 28, allegedly abducted John O'Brien, a 26-year-old carpenter, at knife-point from his home in Makanda at about 10 p.m. on Oct. 19, according to Detective James Nesler of the Jackson County sheriff's office.

Kite and Tello allegedly held O'Brien overnight in their home at 1933 Minton St. in Murphysboro and administered beatings in an effort to gain information about a burglary at the Rough Edge, a leather shop at 404 1/2 S. Illinois Ave., according to State's Attorney Howard Hood. Two others were supposedly involved in the kidnapping, but no charges have been filed.

The leather shop, which is owned by Frank Bozek, was burglarized on Oct. 18, according to Carbondale police.

For the charge of home invasion, recently defined as a Class X felony, the two could face sentences of up to six years in prison. The charge is non-probationary.

Beg your pardon

It was incorrectly reported in Friday's Daily Egyptian that retired faculty members get their activity space. Frank Horton, vice president for academic affairs and research, said they get office space only.

Ronald Kohn, freshman in General Academics, has his blood pressure checked on the automatic testing machine on the first floor of the Student Center, across the hall from the television room. Arch Griffin, Student Center business manager, said it was recommended that persons get more than one reading to get an accurate reading. The machine was installed Monday on a trial basis by the Student Wellness Resource Center, the Health Service, the Student Center and Personal Services. (Staff photo by Brent Cramer)

Police seek identity of homicide victim

By Rick Klick
Staff Writer

Carbondale's police are trying to determine the identity of a badly decomposed body found in a field behind the Kroger food store, 1270 E. Main, Friday afternoon.

Police said they are awaiting the results of an autopsy performed on the body Saturday by Don Ragsdale, Jackson County coroner. A forensic scientist was called in to assist in the autopsy, police said.

Police are treating the matter as a homicide because of two large-caliber bullet holes found in the skull of the body, they said. The holes were probably created by a .32 to .45 caliber gun, police said.

The body was found unburied and fully clothed about 150 feet from the store by John W. Rendleman, a farmer who owns the field. He told police he found the body while harvesting beans. He said he had not been in the field since June, when he plowed the field for planting.

Police found some change on the body, they said.

The person may have been killed between June and August, police said.

In the meantime, police are canvassing the Southern Illinois area for missing persons reports. However, police said it will be difficult to get any leads until they determine the race and sex of the person.

The body may be of a man between 25 and 50 years old and between 5-foot-8 and 5-foot-11. However, police said the body was so badly decomposed that they could not say with any certainty whether the person was a male or female or whether the person was black or white.

Police continued to take samples and tests at the site over the weekend, but were hampered in their efforts Monday by the rain.

Dental plates of the body were made and have been sent off for identification, police said. However, they said the identification process has been further complicated because there were no fingerprints available on the body and because a large portion of the skin was gone through decay.

No treaty reached by U.S., Soviet in SALT meeting

By Barry Schweid
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — U.S. and Soviet negotiators failed Monday night to conclude a treaty to limit strategic weapons, complicating prospects for a signed accord or a presidential summit before the end of the year.

The next step in the drive by the two nuclear powers to restrain the arms race was not made clear as the talks ended at the Kremlin with Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev at the bargaining table.

"Any question about what happens next awaits the secretary's report to president," U.S. spokesman ... ng Carter told reporters.

Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance cabled a detailed account of the proceedings to President Carter, and plans to report to him on his return to Washington Tuesday night.

Both sides described the talks as "constructive" but said some issues remained unresolved.

"We continue to hope an agreement is possible by the end of the year," said State Department spokesman Carter.

Asked if he could use the word "progress" to describe the talks, the U.S. spokesman replied: "I'd really like to. I simply have not been given that description."

The official Soviet news agency Tass said "the two sides stated the resolve to bend every effort and bring this important matter to a conclusion so as to ensure the early signing of an agreement."

Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko said "we are a little closer than we were in Washington" and Vance concurred: "I would agree with him."

A announcement that no treaty would be nailed down during the Kremlin session, the last in the current round of SALT talks, came as no surprise, because both sides had indicated earlier they were still apart on some issues.

Brezhnev brought top arms experts to the negotiating table with him. His intervention, matching President Carter's participation three weeks ago in the previous round in Washington, underscored evident determination on both sides to complete the accord. The Soviet president was accompanied by Marshall Nikolai V. Ogarkov, deputy minister of defense, and Andrei Alexandrov-Agentov, his foreign policy adviser.

Auto crash kills former SIU student

A former SIU student was killed and a student was injured in a one-car accident on U.S. 51 about one-half mile south of Pleasant Hill Road Saturday night.

William E. Mueller, 22, of Lombard was pronounced dead on arrival at Carbondale Memorial Hospital. Jeffery R. Rakow, junior in agriculture and a passenger in Mueller's car, was admitted to Memorial Hospital with injuries to his back and head and face lacerations. He was listed in stable condition Monday.

Witnesses told Carbondale police that Mueller was driving south on U.S. 51 at 2 a.m. at a high rate of speed. Mueller passed a car and attempted to maneuver back into the southbound lane when he lost control of the car, witnesses said.

His car went into a skid and left the road, where it struck an embankment covering a cement drainage pipe, flipped over and came to rest on its roof in a ditch, witnesses said. Mueller was trapped beneath the car from the waist down, police said.

The Jackson County Ambulance Service was called to remove Rakow from the car and transport Rakow and Mueller to Memorial Hospital. SIU police were also called to assist in traffic control, police said.

Services for Mueller will be held at 2 p.m. Tuesday at St. John's Evangelistic Lutheran Church in Lombard.

Tobin fights taxes in superhero style

CHICAGO (AP) — James Tobin is a nervous sort who likes to think of himself as a "cross between Patrick Henry and Luke Skywalker."

While the combination of tax revolution and futuristic gunfighter smacks slightly of a runaway imagination, politicians in the state do not treat him frivolously. On a more mundane level, the 32-year-old Tobin is being called Illinois' version of Howard Jarvis, California's Proposition 13 co-sponsor.

"The people have their backs against the walls and they're willing to sacrifice their lives and their homes and their sacred honor to stop the robber barons in government from taking everything they've got," says Tobin. "That's what it comes down to."

Tobin is founder and president of National Taxpayers United of Illinois, and the state affiliate of National Taxpayers Union is one of the best organized and publicized anti-tax groups in the country.

Tobin is short, with thinning black hair and a close-cropped moustache. He fights his tax revolution most often wearing the armor of a three-piece gray banker's suit.

On the podium, slowly warming to his task, Tobin hardly looks like a speaker who could incite a crowd of suburban housewives and executives, farmers and city dwellers to revolt against their local government.

Yet, in suburban communities all around the city, that is exactly what he's been trying to do. Averaging two speaking engagements a week, Tobin tells the gathering to withhold payment of their property taxes to show politicians they mean business. Sometimes only a handful of people show up, other times hundreds. No matter the audience, the pitch is always the same.

"I want taxpayers to have at least as many rights as a medieval serf," Tobin says at the outset of each gathering. "A serf had to give his master about one-quarter of his year's yield. But today you're working until July 15 (two weeks beyond the state's fiscal-year deadline) just to pay all the taxes imposed on you."

After the meetings, Tobin stands around drinking coffee and talking to anyone about the issue of taxes. He smiles politely and listens when old ladies complain about tax bills, then sets his jaw squarely for debate when public employees tell him that his proposed tax revolt may terminate their livelihoods.

Tobin's base of operations is an apartment in Chicago that is blanketed by piles of tax-protest pamphlets, membership forms, and newspaper clippings on his rallies and tax issues. His family has owned the building for more than 50 years, and, since 1977, Tobin has paid no property taxes.

Ironically, Tobin may one day face the issue of tax revolt from the other side of the fence. He says that members of the two major parties, as well as the Libertarian Party with which he is closely allied, have proposed that he try running for Cook County assessor on their slates.

Temporary parking solution suggested

A traditional among the gripes of SIU students over the years has been the problem of trying to find a place to park a car.

Perhaps people tend to over-exaggerate the problem because of the tendencies that a driver has towards impatience and general crabbiners. Or maybe it is that when people drive they are always in a hurry and thus are quicker to complain about whatever slows them down. In any case, the fact that people take the time to complain and yell and holler about not finding a place in which they can park their belchfire while they go about their campus business is enough to warrant looking into the situation.

As all except the very daring and very ignorant know, parking spaces on campus are designated mostly on the basis of red, blue, and yellow sticker lots.

If the parking sticker you have purchased corresponds to the color on the lot in which you wish to park, you may park there, provided there is space.

Generally speaking, blue sticker lots are the closest in proximity to where one would probably like to park and that color sticker is available for sale at a premium price to faculty, staff and graduate assistants. According to the parking division of University police, by the end of September, 2,003 people had purchased blue stickers for 1,245 blue sticker spaces.

Red stickers, which are available to students as well as those who can buy blue stickers, were sold to 6,757 people with 4,267 red spaces available on campus. Yellow stickers were sold to 543 people for 1,921 spaces.

To keep the whole situation in perspective, one must realize that a vehicle with a blue sticker may park in a blue, red or yellow lot and a vehicle with a red sticker may park in a red or yellow lot and a vehicle with a yellow sticker may park only in a yellow lot. These restrictions apply for certain times of day and information on them is available at the parking division.

By looking at the above numbers, it can be seen that the ratio of people purchasing red stickers to the number of red parking spots available is very close to that of the blue. Thus, there appears to be no real discrepancy in the allocation of red and blue spaces on campus.

However, with the recent construction of a long needed new lot which should add 250 more parking spaces, there will be a loss of 35% parking spaces. So it appears that the problems associated with parking will only magnify as the weather worsens.

As disgusted red sticker drivers may have noticed though, there are often blue sticker lots around campus that lack being filled to capacity while red lots are packed with cars jammed together in all kinds of weird entanglements.

A solution to temporarily alleviating the increased problem created by the closing of 350 spaces while construction is going on would be to open some of the blue lots to red stickers.

A civil way to do this might be to allow red-stickered vehicles to park in blue lots at earlier times of the day, say for example after 10 a.m.

By doing this, those who usually use a blue lot could arrive before 10 a.m. and would not risk losing their place and those arriving after that time would be able to use those empty spaces left in the blue lots.

If this plan is too complicated then maybe some blue lots should be made red so as to avoid confusion and to make more efficient use of campus parking facilities. After all, what better way is there to start your school day than by finding a decent place to park?

Tired of concessions, a smoker demands his rights

With all the fervor of smokers being attacked by non-smokers, and the recent veto of a bill that would ban public smoking, it is time for citizens to realize that even smokers have rights. It was thoroughly pleasing to read that Gov. Thompson vetoed the anti-smoking bill, whatever his reasons were. The fact that smoking is a dangerous habit, and that it does offend some people is well known. But what about the smoker who continues to enjoy his/her reckless habits in the face of such well established facts?

Smokers have suffered quite a few little known indignities in the past, most taken with nary a complaint. Consider that much of the pipe tobacco on the market these days is catering to the noses of observers rather than the palate of the smoker. Tobacco used to taste like tobacco in pipes. Now it taste like whiskey, cherries, dutch apples, honey, or some other "aromatic" blend. Not those militant non-smokers see the concessions already made in their behalf? If not, then nothing has been gained by favoring pipe tobacco, for the avid pipe smoker certainly sees no benefits in these blends, and if any smokers have tried these brands, they'd know why. Sacrificing taste for "aromatic" appeasement is only one concession made by the die-hard smoker, there are more.

Light cigarettes are perhaps the latest concession by the smoking community. The question here is obvious. Why would any self-respecting smoker who enjoys his/her habit want to smoke something that looks like a cigarette, but has no taste, much less the heavenly quantities of tar and nicotine that smokers relish?

After considering some of the concessions quietly made by smokers, it could still be argued that smoking continues to offend some people. This can be blamed only on the selfish smoker, a person that I have yet to encounter. Never have I seen a smoker refuse to extinguish his butt upon request, although I know he/she must be out there somewhere. Smokers must realize that in order to enjoy their habit in peace, they must constantly yield to non-smokers in certain battlegrounds such as planes, buses, restaurants, carpools, and an ever increasing number of other places. This is a noble act on the part of the smoker, when he/she voluntarily puts out a smoke after a nauseating glance from an innocent by-stander, without so much as a whimper. And it is the only proper thing to do, to yield to the people who are so easily offended. When the smoker does not yield, this gives all smoking a bad name, for those offended usually find little difficulty in voicing their objections. Smokers must constantly yield.

If more evidence is needed to bring out the plight of the smoker, consider the taxes on his/her habit. With the current debate on taxing and over-taxing, how many smokers have complained about the taxation of tobacco? If they have, their voices are drowned by the chants of little children on television who write letters to help their contented parents stop smoking. The high percentage of tax on cigarettes and other tobacco products is usually accepted with little more than a sigh of relief after the first drag. Even though prices continue to rise, there are still those who will not let their cherished ritual of smoking go down in flames.

In an overall view, it is clear to most people that smoking is not a healthy habit. It is not clean, causing a variety of fatal illnesses as well as an equal number of varied inconveniences. Smoking stains teeth, draperies, burns holes in clothes and carpets, and it annoys animals and plants. This number of sad facts would tend to convince the logical mind against smoking, to reform. But as Mark Twain once said, "the only pleasure I could ever see in reforming from smoking is the heavenly pleasure of giving up the reforming and going back to smoking." A non-smoker is not expected to appreciate this remark, but if any smokers have tried to quit, for whatever reason, they certainly see the message. Smoking is here to stay, and only be conscious efforts by the smoker can he/she be assured that they can practice their disgusting habits in peace. Anyone for a smoke?

Little David battles corporate Goliath—and wins

By James Kilpatrick

One of the great recurring themes in life as in literature—a theme that never loses its special satisfaction—is the theme of David and Goliath. It turned up a couple of weeks ago in the U.S. Supreme Court.

The story began 15 years ago in Gardner, Mass., where 18-year-old Peter M. Roberts was working as a sales clerk in the hardware department of the local Sears, Roebuck store. The story hasn't ended yet, but it reached a climactic point last week when the Court refused to review a $1,000,000 award of damages against Sears and in favor of Roberts.

The teenaged clerk loved to tinker with tools. On his own time, he invented a quick release socket wrench, a device so ingenious that it permitted a mechanic to change sockets with one hand. Young Roberts, with only a high school education and no experience in the business world, took his invention to his Sears manager. One thing led to another, and in 1964 Roberts' drawings went off through the suggestion box to Sears' headquarters in Chicago.

Young Roberts was not altogether dewy-eyed. Presumably, he had read Popular Mechanics and had enough foresight to apply for a patent—a patent that would be granted a year later. Meanwhile, some amazing things had been happening. The Sears people were having a close look at the young man's socket wrench. The top tool buyer was so impressed that Sears had its chief toolmaker, the Moore Drop Forging Company, cast a couple of prototypes for testing.

By early spring of 1965, it was evident that a bonanza was at hand. The wrench worked beautifully; mechanics were enchanted by it. The Moore company reported that the cost of the quick release, originally estimated at 44 cents, could be reduced to 20 cents. The opportunity for stunning profits was apparent.

As two federal courts later would agree, Sears knew at this time what a beautiful thing it had going. The big-hearted merchandising Goliath wanted to do the right thing. A Sears negotiator wrote young Roberts to this effect—that his invention really was not new, that even if a patent were granted, the patent would be limited in scope, that the wrench would sell only to the extent that Sears promoted it, that Sears couldn't be certain that it would maintain sales on the item. But it was implied that because Roberts was such a fine young fellow, and a Sears clerk to boot, the company would pay him $10,000 for all the domestic and foreign rights. Sign here.

Roberts signed, took the $10,000, and afterwards enlisted in the Air Force. As the Seventh U.S. Circuit Court would later conclude, in an opinion by Judge Robert A. Sprecher, Sears well knew that it expected to sell several hundred thousand wrenches. Within days after the agreement was signed, Sears was manufacturing 44,000 wrenches a week. In nine months the store had sold more than 500,000 Roberts wrenches. By 1975 it had sold upward of 19 million. Roberts' counsel now estimate sales at 25 million—and every wrench proudly bears the Roberts Patent No. 3,208,318.

Roberts began to discover some of these things when he got out of the Air Force in 1969. He sued in the U.S. District Court in Chicago, charging fraud and misrepresentation. The trial jury awarded him $1,000,000 in damages. Sears appealed to the Seventh Circuit, where Judge Sprecher and his colleagues emphatically upheld the jury's verdict. Sears then sought review in the Supreme Court, complaining bitterly that the Roberts patent was legally worthless, invalid, and all the rest. The Court refused to listen.

The upshot is that the District Court, on remand, now will consider rescission of the contract, return of the patent, and further restitution. Roberts' lawyers estimate "conservatively" that Sears has made $44 million in profits off the Roberts wrench. They have one million now, and a green light to go for the other forty-three. Roberts now lives in Red Bank, Tenn., near Knoxville, where he runs a grocery store and manages an apartment house. He's a "very creative fellow," says his lawyer, "and has lots of good ideas."

Iran is unsuitable for feminist conference

As you probably know, throughout the last year Iran has witnessed the most massive political unrest.

Iranian women have participated by the thousands in the mass mobilization against the Shah's regime. In the majority of the hundreds of marches organized on Sept. 4 and 7, women made up the first contingent in the processions. Even in the most backward and isolated parts of Iran women have come out into the streets to voice their indignation. In some instances, they have not only joined the demonstrations in great numbers but actually led them.

This is unique in Iran's history. Never before have Iranian women participated in the political life of their country on such a massive scale.

In the last 25 years Iranian women have participated shoulder to shoulder with their brothers in the fight against the Shah's repressive apparatus. There are an estimated 4,000 women who are political prisoners in the Shah's jails. Physical and psychological torture is a routine practice of SAVAK in order to extract "confessions" from women political prisoners.

The United Nations "International Women's Decade Conference" (1976-1985) for May 1980, is to meet in Iran at the invitation of Princess Ashraf, the Shah's twin sister, who has contributed $5,000,000 toward the event.

Sisters, imagine what a disgrace it would be if thousands of women from around the world were to gather in Tehran to discuss how to promote the cause of women's liberation, while only a few blocks away 4,000 of their sisters would be undergoing sadistic torture at the hands of their host's government. All the propaganda about the "feminist" Shah and the Princess is manufactured solely for "foreign" consumption.

Inside Iran, the Shah's regime does not give us any sweet talk about how it has liberated us. There, they speak the language of brute force. Right after the declaration of martial law on Sept. 8, Gen. Ovasi, the newly appointed military governor of the whole nation: "Fellow countrymen, you are all familiar with my temper. I am a soldier and I have no pity for anyone." Then he said, addressing the men: "You should have pity for your wives and children and not let them go outside to demonstrate."

While the Shah was busy carrying out his mass murder in Iran, the world press (especially in the United States) was busy prettying up his bloodthirsty regime as a "Women Liberator." For example: ABC-TV has to be credited for taking this theme to the point of absurdity. On the evening news Sept. 14, after showing the demonstration in Behesht Zahra to mourn the victims of the Shah's savagery, the broadcast showed a woman putting on make-up as a "symbol" of the rights the Shah has given women. The ABC announcer then said that this is what the demonstrators are protesting against.

Sisters, don't believe these lies. It is obviously clear that Shah and his sister need this propaganda in order to save his bloody regime in the world's public opinion.

Considering all the abominable crimes committed against Iranian Women by the Shah's government we ask our American sisters to protest the choice of Iran as the site for the International Decade Conference and raise their voices to demand: Change the site of the conference from Iran.

Free all the women's political prisoners in Iran!

Male student seeking Homecoming Queen vote

Last week I read with delight that Sen. Figgins has chosen to run for Homecoming Queen. All ERA issues aside, I feel this is a great way to make our 1978 Homecoming a memorable one. I seem to remember a large university electing a male student as Homecoming Queen a few years back. However, I feel those students who would like to elect a man as Homecoming Queen should have a choice. It wouldn't be fair to those who want a male queen but don't want to vote for Mr. Figgins. I therefore throw my hat into the ring as candidate for the 1978 Homecoming Queen. Preliminary voting was Monday so if I make it to the finals I ask you for a big voter turnout.

Vote for the man of your choice, but vote!

City Water Depart. bookkeeping practices are "inept"

This letter is to advise all my constituents on the East Side of Carbondale of the inept bookkeeping practices of the Carbondale Water Department.

My condemnation stems from a recurring incident over a water bill left over from the previous occupant of my East Side apartment.

With the past three water bills, disconnection notices of my water service have been received. These notices were on the account of the previous occupant. Each time I explained the purpose of my visit, an apology was granted and the next month disconnection was again threatened.

The last time I appeared at the department, I was determined it would be the last. Instead of an apology, I received a threat that I may have to appear next month. I asked the water department how Carbondale City government was responsible for their department.

Friends and fellow students, I can honestly state that the City of Carbondale can no longer say that students are more apathetic to government than permanent city residents. For when I asked who was in fact responsible, for the water department—NO ONE KNEW.

To mayor Hans Fischer, I direct the next comment.

Matthews makes no sense as student body president

Chuck Beck is a public relations major who wanted to gain experience by working for an SIU organization with a public relations problem. Chuck saw the problem. The problem covered the entire student population at SIU and the third floor of the Student Center. The problem was student apathy in student government and an unfavorable image of Student Body President Garrick Clinton-Matthews.

On Oct. 3, members from Group Eight of Public Relations, Inc. met with Chuck Beck to work on this problem as a bonus assignment for Journalism 341. Chuck told us that he had met with Garrick and that Garrick thought it was a good idea and that Garrick would help fund the campaign. We also discussed why we thought Garrick's image as student body president had been less than favorable from the beginning of school and the reason was obvious: biased news writing by the Daily Egyptian.

And because the DE is the primary medium for disseminating news and information about Student Government to the students, Garrick, we thought, was never given a chance to be fairly represented.

Although we were working for Chuck, our client was essentially Matthews. One week later we were to meet

He accused students of being apathetic toward city government at a previous Student Senate meeting. I accuse city government of being apathetic toward itself.

But back to the search.

At the end of a long morning, a secretary in the office of the city clerk gave me the information I was looking for. Fellow disconnectees—may you now know that utility departments are not the responsibility of any specific city council member nor do these members have any specific duties to perform.

This form of government puts the voter in an indirect line with the official and encourages apathetic feelings toward his government. Why should students vote in an election in which government officials have no specific duties or need specific qualifications for office?

In summation I recommend to my constituents two things: 1) Keep all your utility receipts. 2) Search your soul and decide whether your city government is worth your vote.

Darrell Hensor
East Side Senator

with Matthews for the first time to discuss strategies and ideas and just get to know him. Chuck Beck came to the meeting and said Garrick couldn't make it.

We rescheduled the meeting with Garrick for the following Thursday, Oct. 12. Garrick thought it would be better this time if we could meet in his office on the third floor of the Student Center. Thursday night Chuck Beck and two members of Public Relations Inc. waited at the Student Government office for 45 minutes but Matthews never showed. Four days after Matthews had stood us up, we saw Chuck Beck who told us Matthews had still not contacted him nor could he reach Matthews in his office.

Chuck now saw the problem more clearly. How does one promote better and more effective communications between students and the student body president, when the president of the student body can't be available to communicate to the people who want to help him be a better communicator? If that doesn't make sense, then neither does Garrick Clinton-Matthews as student body president.

Soccer at SIU could have international significance

Many fine athletes would agree that one does not have to be an All-American to appreciate any kind of sport.

I say this in support of adding soccer to our athletic program, not only because there are many who like it, but because of its international significance.

I was fortunate recently to have watched the World Cup championship played in Argentina over British and French television stations and was convinced that the teams were no better than those of the North American League. In the light of this, there are many, like me, who believe that the United States will win the World Cup Soccer championship title within the next decade or so.

SIU has significantly contributed toward improving the national athletic program and one more area that could continue with this practice involves soccer.

I have been to many of our home games and have been more than thrilled by the very high performance of our boys; especially, I must add, the American students on the squad. Many of these guys are All-American "material" if given the opportunity to improve their talents and abilities.

We must keep up with our tradition of producing some of the nation's finest athletes and we must add soccer to our program because this is one area in which opportunities loom large.

Autumn colors on display now

By University News Service

If you want to see Southern Illinois' annual display of vividly colored fall foliage at its best, now's the time.

The flaming red, yellow, orange and purple leaves that decorate Southern Illinois hills will be at their most brilliant during the next few days, said botanist Robert Mohlenbrock.

College Bowl tournament set

Students with broad educational backgrounds and quick recall will be given a chance to compete against each other when College Bowl returns to SIU at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday in Ballroom B.

College Bowl, billed as the "varsity sport of the mind," is a game where two four-person teams compete and answer toss-up and bonus questions in subjects such as the humanities, arts and sciences. Sixteen teams registered for the single-elimination tournament held this year sponsored by the Student Center and the Council of President's Scholars. Colleges across the nation are holding similar intramural tournaments in preparation for the regional and national competitions in 1979. An all-star team will be chosen from the contestants and will compete not only regionally, but will also face an administration celebrity team in a match that will be televised by WSIU in January.

The 20-minute games will consist of a series of 10-point toss-up questions with bonus questions worth up to 40 points following each correct answer.

"We're extremely excited about how this thing has shaped up on this campus," said Jim Sheppard, Assistant Director of the Student Center. "We hope to continue this program in the years to come."

Ed McElone, chairman of the Department of Speech Communication and the designated "coach" of the SIU all-star team, feels that the new College Bowl competition differs from the televised competition of the 60's mainly in the number of students involved.

"I think it has the potential to become an exciting intramural sport for more students than in the 60's," said McElone. "We don't claim it's a test on anyone's academic achievement or intellect, though. It's primarily a game or quick recall," he added.

Competition will continue on Nov. 4 and 8 with the finals being held on Nov. 15 in the Student Center.

"Normally, the third weekend in October is the best," Mohlenbrock, a professor in botany said. "Occasionally, it comes as early as the 12th, but by the 25th it's generally done for the year."

The annual explosion of autumn colors comes from a wide variety of trees, Mohlenbrock says. Hickory, beech, sassafras and tulip poplar usually show leaves of soft yellow. Sumac leaves are brilliant scarlet, while sugar maple shows off foliage of flaming orange. Bright red is the color shown by varieties of oak while sweet gum leaves show hues ranging from purple to red and yellow.

Although almost anywhere in Southern Illinois is a good place to see fall colors, Mohlenbrock has a few favorite jaunts to places where he thinks the color is best. One is a drive from Eddyville to Golconda, through the heart of the Shawnee Hills. Another takes Tunnel Hill Road from Ferne Clyffe State Park to Tunnel Hill.

A third trip follows Ridge Road along the crest of Union County's Pine Hills.

Although the colors are most noticeable in the fall, Mohlenbrock says the fact that the calendar reads October has very little to do with the onset of autumn colors.

"If you go back to the early part of the year, every leaf has a great abundance of chlorophyll, but also present are brown and yellow colors," he said. "They're there in the leaf, but because of the great abundance of chlorophyll, they don't show through."

He says summer-long exposure to Southern Illinois sunshine makes the chlorophyll deteriorate to the point where the other colors show through.

The vivid reds and purples are a different story. Mohlenbrock says the chemicals that make red and purple are produced right in each leaf cell.

'Don Pasquale' full of funny business

By Marcia Heroux
Entertainment Editor
"What a turkey!" sang Steven J. Kosinski in the part of Dr. Malatesta in Donizetti's opera "Don Pasquale" Thursday night. Not a line expected to be in an opera.

But, then, all was in fun as members of the Marjorie Lawrence Opera Theater amused its audience with similar nutty lines and actions. Leading the pack in nuttiness was Deborah Schwab as Norina, who dared to sing (purposely) off-key as she acted "simple-minded" to deceive middle-aged Don Pasquale who wanted to marry her.

Adept in both singing and acting, the cast also worked extremely well together, picking up on each other's comic cues without trying to outwit one another.

Kosinski as Dr. Malatesta was the joining force in the opera, playing off both Schwab and David Sackman, who played Don Pasquale.

Sackman was perfect for the part of Don Pasquale. With his plump belly giggling, he was a merry fellow jumping up and down, anxiously awaiting his new bride. After he marries Norina and finds out that she is really quite a siren, he is full of woe, recoiling when she slaps him, saying "oh, she has beaten me and maimed me!"

Playing the romantic lead was Randall Black (Ernesto). Black didn't have much of a character to work with but he glided playfully along with the others, contributing to the general flow of funny stage business.

In her non-singing cameo role of the servant to Norina, Deborah Foley grabbed a few laughs with her pert and prima personality.

Singing, for the most part, was excellent. Schwab seemed to be having high-note problems in the first few scenes, but quickly

The SIU Symphony Orchestra will give their fall concert at 8 p.m. Wednesday in Shryock Auditorium. Robert Bergt will conduct the 57-member orchestra.

Featured will be Robert Schumann's "Symphony No. 1 in B-flat major," or as the composer subtitled it "The Spring Symphony." Other works will incorporate dances and folk tunes of Russia, Hungary and Rumania in music by Bela Bartok, "Rumanian Folk Dances," by Johannes Brahms, "Hungarian Dance No. 3" and by Dimitri Kabalevsky, "The Comedians."

There are many new players in the orchestra, including the 32

Performance recreates sounds of century past

By Kate Wall
Staff Writer

Even though it was a cool, October night in Southern Illinois, the audience believed it was a warm summer's evening in Tennessee.

Dave Fulmer, director of Jack Daniel's Silver Cornet Band, narrated and directed the band's performance at Shryock Friday night.

The silver-haired, bearded man walked on the stage wearing a vested suit with a dangling gold little toe tapping. Many couldn't.

The crowd grew more enthused and obviously more involved as the show progressed.

Songs were carefully arranged to highlight the talents of the professional musicians. A number detailing how a band is put together, gave each member a chance to be in the limelight.

The band made a transition from their fast-paced arrangements to a quiet melody with "Evening by the Moonlight." It incorporated a barbershop quartet accompanied by the strumming of a banjo.

Fulmer didn't forget a thing when he created the production: The concert was interrupted briefly for community announcements.

There was a 15 minute intermission after which many people returned with one of two albums which were on sale in the lobby.

The audience was captured quickly in the opening of the second act. A medley, which the audience was invited to sing in, included "Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight" and "Hail, Hail the Gang's All Here." The band moved from the Civil War period to the roaring 20's with their version of the Charleston. They progressed through time to contemporary music with a flute solo of "You've Only Just Begun."

The concert didn't deviate from tradition, ending on a benedictory note of "Amazing Grace."

After returning for two encores, Fulmer told the audience it was time to go so they could get the horses hitched and the kids to bed before it got too late.

Fulmer proved to be a dynamic, energetic performer. But then, he'd have to be to successfully revive a tradition that's nearly 100 years old.

pocket watch and sat in a tall, wicker rocker.

He brought back rural America at the turn of the century with his clever narration. The stark white gazebo stood in the center of the stage against a pale blue background.

Fulmer chatted with the older audience, reminiscing about concerts in the park.

He was successful in taking the audience back to a town where there were no strangers, at a time when concerts were the only source of entertainment.

The twelve-piece band entered one by one as Fulmer introduced them. They varied from a banker in a pin striped suit to a blacksmith in bluejeans supported by suspenders. The concert began with a smooth and freely flowing "Dixie" followed by the rambling melody of "Shenandoah."

After each number, Fulmer would chat with the audience, ending on an anecdotal note.

When the band struck up with "Waiting for the Robert E. Lee" Fulmer made a bet with the audience that they couldn't resist a overcame them and flew up to some unbelievably high notes, on vocal runs yet! There was a pleasant difference in the texture of voices of the men: Sachman with his deep bass. Black with his sweet tenor and Kosinski handling the middle register. Since the opera was in English, the words were more closely listened to by the audience. They were not always decipherable, however, since technique must sometimes overrule distinct pronunciation.

The traveling set designed by Darwin Reid Payne of the theater department works well with the singers' madcap situations. Curtains extending from either side made entrances and exits quick and necessary for such a fast-paced opera buffa. Though richly decorated, the flat on stage left had two paintings hung too close together and too low in comparison to the actors.

Though the opera was relatively well-attended Thursday night, there were many people who missed both a fine operatic and comic performance. The cast deserved a full instead of a half-full house of applauding patrons.

Cobham's band worth the wait and problems

By Nick Sorial
Staff Writer

Billy Cobham's concert in Shryock Auditorium Saturday night was worth waiting for.

It was worth waiting 43 minutes after the time scheduled for the band to take the stage because once the band got going, Cobham managed to hit every one of his 17 drums and eight cymbals with the accuracy and speed everyone expects of him.

It was even worth sitting through the shaky first set, as the group experienced numerous distracting mechanical difficulties, including half of the speakers going dead for the last two songs of the first set. Once Kamal started singing "Early Libra" and Randy Jackson started hammering it up on bass, technology was forgiven.

The band should not be blamed for either problem with the concert. As SGAC Consorts Chairman Pete Katsis said, apologizing for the late start, "not the band but the University red tape caused the delay."

Katsis said the band had not been paid before the concert, contrary to usual procedure. Apparently the office in charge of the disbursement of the money was at fault.

But the sound problems were solved during break, and everyone got their money's worth, including a 12-minute solo by Cobham.

"Puffinstuff," from Cobham's

Cobham has 'Wiz' as a singer

By Nick Sorial
Staff Writer

Although Kamal, lead singer for Billy Cobham, has only been touring with the group for two months, he is used to being on the road. Kamal was a star for the past four years in "The Wiz," an award-winning Broadway play.

"It wasn't an easy decision leaving such a musical experience as a Broadway play," Kamal said. "But in a way much of what I'm doing is the same as when I was in 'The Wiz.' I'm still performing and entertaining for people and I still enjoy it very much."

Like many professional musicians, Kamal was exposed to show business early. His father, Leslie Scott, was Porgy in the musical "Porgy and Bess," and Fats Waller, Billie Holiday and other stars visited Kamal's family often.

Although his father is no longer living, Kamal wants to spend some time touring and performing with his mother.

"She's one of those talented people whose abilities need to be exposed to everyone, because she started in an era different from now," Kamal said.

Kamal, 30, said "The Wiz" was "physically more demanding" than touring with a jazz group, but both activities are hectic.

"Singing with 'The Wiz' was just nuts. Each week I considered myself successful if my voice and I could just make it through the week," he said.

Kamal, who studied music at Yale, is not only interested in musicals and jazz singing, but also likes opera and ballet. Before Saturday night's performance at Shryock Auditorium, he entertained both workers and band members by trying to teach some of them ballet.

"I still have a love for the 'more refined' types of music."

Student presents crime report

By Melodie Redfearn
Staff Writer

The unique way in which Nigeria deals with criminal offenses led Obi Ebbe, a doctoral student at SIU in sociology, to attend a two-week seminar on criminal justice in West Germany. Ebbe is doing his doctoral research on the criminal justice system in Nigeria.

Due to an increase in its crime rate, officials in Monchengladbach, which is 120 miles northwest of Frankfurt, called for a seminar to compare criminal justice systems in other countries with low crime rates.

Because Nigeria has such a low crime rate due to the unique manner in which it deals with criminal offenders, Ebbe said he was asked to give his views on the country's system and Monchengladbach's.

Monchengladbach, which has a population of 260,000, had 6,000 criminal convictions last year, of which 3,000 were juvenile offenses. Reviewing the city's criminal justice system, which involves police encounters with offenders, judicial procedure and imprisonment, Ebbe said the manner in which offenders were tried posed a major problem area.

Because 50 percent of the city's convictions were of juveniles, Ebbe presented Nigeria's method of handling young offenders.

"In my country, attorneys are not used for minor offenses. The juvenile is tried by three laymen—two men and one woman—who are parents of children. Our system of punishment consists of reprimand, fines or corporal punishment. We have found that this is most effective for juveniles," Ebbe said. According to Ebbe, 80 percent of juvenile offenses in Nigeria are settled out of court.

Another major factor in Monchengladbach's high crime rate is the low number of policemen who work on the street, Ebbe said. "In Tokyo, which has the lowest crime in the world among all large cities of 250,000 and over, there is one policeman for every 350 people. In Monchengladbach, there is one for every 650," Ebbe said. "It is a simple fact that people are less likely to commit crimes if police are around."

Visits to various prisons, and juvenile institutions were also made by the seminar group. Ebbe said he was very impressed by their use of lawyers as prison wardens. "These men are given training in the law and in prison administration and are able to understand and cope with the problems of prisoners," Ebbe said. "Much unlike wardens in the United States, who are often insensitive to prisoners' needs."

"I also thought their system of housing prisoners and professional staff in the same building was very good." Separated by a corridor only, prisoners can see medical personnel, psychologists, psychiatrists and teachers almost any time they wish, Ebbe said.

A classification system by age and criminal record is also used in selecting the appropriate prison or institution for criminals.

Ebbe's trip was funded by the Graduate School, the Graduate Student Council and the Department of Sociology at SIU. The state of Northern Westfalen, in which Monchengladbach is located, provided lodging and meals.

Cobham worth waiting for

featured guitarists Charles Singleton and Ray Mouton singing a tight vocal trio, it was Cobham's drumming that kept the song from being just one of thousands of jazz-funk songs.

Although Tom Coster's keyboards covered up some nice vocals by Kamal in the first set (mechanical difficulties), the versatility of Coster blended with the style of music Cobham has been playing since Kamal, Singleton and others joined the group.

But it's still Cobham's band. Anyone who earns "Best Drummer" award in "Downbeat" magazine for five straight years deserves to have his own band and should be given allowances for occasional mechanical problems

Physiologists research cancer test

By Joan Vierung
Staff Writer

Prostate cancer has the second highest rate of occurrence in men as compared to other forms of cancer, according to Margaret Couture, a doctoral student in physiology. Lung cancer has the highest rate of occurrence.

Couture and Matthew Freund, chairman of the physiology department, are developing a test to detect early prostate cancer in men. The test is comparable to the Pap smear which is used to detect uterine and vaginal cancer in women.

Couture said the test would involve taking a sample of seminal fluid and processing it to detect malignant (cancerous) cells of the prostate gland. She said that after the sample was obtained, it would be put through a filter which would screen out stray white blood and germ cells.

She said there are three types of cells found in the seminal fluid.

"The first group of cells are exfoliated cells from the genitourinary tract," Couture said. "These cells are from the prostate gland, the bladder and the urethra and seminal vesicle. The other cells are white blood cells and germ cells like the sperm," Couture said.

Couture said she is having difficulty getting samples from men.

"We need more cooperation from local urologists. We're also looking for men with suspected prostate problems and men who have had vasectomies," she said. The doctoral student said a man who has had a vasectomy is easier to work with because his sperm cells are absent and this makes identification of prostate cells easier.

Couture said men begin having difficulty with their prostate glands in their 50s and 60s.

"It is thought that the process begins in their late 20s when the level of androgens, a male hormone, starts to drop, causing the prostate gland to enlarge around the urethra, a condition which causes pain during urination and ejaculation," she said.

She said she knows of two methods currently used to detect prostate cancer.

"The first method is a biopsy from

Margaret Couture, a doctoral candidate in physiology, is developing a test to detect prostate cancer. (Staff photo by George Burns)

the prostate gland which involves passing a tube through the urethra to reach to prostate. The second method involves examining cells in the urine, but this method only detects advanced prostate cancer," Couture said. She said the biopsy requires the man to be hospitalized. She said the new test would be painless, and the man could collect his semen in a condom and then send the condom to a laboratory. She said the test could be taken every six to 12 months to monitor the semen for the onset of a prostate malignancy.

Couture is working on another research project to determine whether the number of prostate cells remains constant or increases with age. She said the results of this test would help to determine at what age the prostate gland begins to enlarge.

Applications available for student editor

Applications are now available for student editor in chief of the Daily Egyptian for the spring 1979 term.

The application forms can be picked up in the School of Journalism office and in the managing editor's office in the Daily Egyptian newsroom. The applications will be accepted until 5 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 31.

The Daily Egyptian Policy and Review Board will interview applicants during the afternoon of Thursday, Nov. 2. Interview appointments will be made at the same time applications are turned in.

The position is open to full-time students with a GPA of 3.0 in their majors and a 2.5 overall. A semester of experience on the Daily Egyptian news staff is also required.

As you know, Bob Dylan is currently touring with his new band. It is the same band that plays on the album "Street Legal." On Columbia Records and Tapes.

Bruce Richmond has become one of the most effective advocates for education to ever serve in the legislature. He sponsored the change in the School Aid Formula which made available to downstate schools nearly thirty-seven million more dollars this year than they would have received otherwise.

He was chief sponsor of a bill to provide funds to maintain quality in higher education, and of legislation providing the money to construct a new SIU-C Law School building.

No member of the legislature has a better record of support for Southern Illinois' young people - Southern Illinois' future - than Bruce Richmond.

ALSAC drive events reach goals

By A. Steve Warnell
Student Writer

More than $2,500 was raised by the University Housing Programming Office for the Aid to Leukemia-Stricken American Children (ALSAC) charity through a month-long fund-raising drive.

The activities included a walkathon, radiothon, softball tournament, and a sale of discount food and drink coupons.

The walkathon was new to the ALSAC roster of events and was the creation of ALSAC chairwoman Sue Malahy. Eighteen participants trekked a 10-mile course through Carbondale Sunday.

Sponsors pledged to pay a specific amount of money for each mile a participant walked. About $300 was raised by this event. The money will be used for leukemia research and treatment at St. Jude Children's Research Hospital in Memphis.

"One girl walked it forwards and backwards, thus doubling her money, and two other persons jogged the entire route," said Mike Scully, assistant director of housing for residential life. Scully is in charge of the Housing Programming Office and is the initiator of the ALSAC fund-raising events at SIU.

He said he was motivated to start the fund-raiser at SIU after a friend of his died from leukemia about 5 years ago.

Scully said the number of people who participated in the walkathon this year was considerably less than the number who took out pledge sheets, "but I think that was because of the timing of the walkathon.

"After Parent's Day last weekend and Homecoming next weekend, plus two concerts coming soon, I guess students realized that if they were going to go home before Thanksgiving, this was the time to do it."

The WCIL-FM ALSAC Radiothon raised $2,566 in 18 hours of broadcasting Thursday from 6 a.m. to midnight.

A highlight of the radiothon was the auction of items donated or autographed by film, television, and recording artists. Celebrities who sent items include Carol Burnett, the Bee Gees, John Travolta and Olivia Newton-John, Bill Cosby, Seals & Crofts, John Denver, and Shari Lewis.

Miss Burnett's floppy hat, used in the "cleaning lady" routine in her Emmy-winning comedy-variety series on CBS, was auctioned for $88.

An album autographed by Jim Seals and Dash Crofts was auctioned for a $50 pledge, and a Shari Lewis coloring book went for $25.

The Stroh's Brewing Co. donated two lighted Stroh's signs for auction.

Scully said he encountered a problem when trying to schedule a basketball tournament, which has been the main sports feature of the annual charity drive.

"No one would allow us the use of a basketball court," Scully said. Instead a softball tournament was held as an attraction.

More than 80 individuals in three divisions participated in the softball tournament. The winning teams were: "The Number One Team," from Allen III, in the men's division.

"The Ball Busters" from Neely Hall, in the women's division, and "Sam Who?" from Brush Towers, in the coed division.

The last segment of the ALSAC fund-raising program is the sale of coupons good for free food and beverage with purchases at five Carbondale restaurants and taverns.

Scully said that although many coupons have been sold few returns have reached his office and he is hoping for the money from the sales to flow in soon.

ULTIMATE ROOTS

FALMOUTH, Maine (AP)—After 41 years in the plumbing business, Richard Waltz 61 says he's finally found the ultimate of roots.

"I've never seen anything quite like it," he comments about a 32-foot-long, 100-pound mass of tiny, almost hair-like interwoven root fibers pulled from a clogged drainage pipe.

Even after the roots were out, the drainage pipe remained clogged, and Waltz and his men kept probing. They found another 20-foot mass of fibers.

The roots apparently belong to a willow tree.

"Roots have almost an intelligence for locating pipes," Waltz explained. "They'll grow down to a pipe, then go longitudinally along the pipe until they finally locate a crack. Finally, a little spear the size of a hair on your head will work into the pipe," he said.

Four to be awarded at alumni ceremony

Tickets are still available for the annual Alumni Recognition Luncheon at 11:15 a.m. Saturday at the Student Center. The Alumni Association has announced.

The luncheon, which will be held prior to the Homecoming football game, will honor four Alumni Achievement Award recipients and the Alumni Great Teacher.

President Warren W. Brandt will give a "State of the University" address.

Alumni who will be honored with the achievement awards are E.T. Bucovaz, cancer researcher, Memphis, Tenn.; J. Kenneth Craver, an inventor, Glendale, Mo.; I. Clark Davis, former SIU dean of students, Carbondale, and Donald McHenry, United Nations ambassador, New York City.

The Alumni Great Teacher award will be announced during luncheon ceremonies. The annual award is presented to a teacher for classroom teaching excellence.

The teacher is selected by voting members of the SIU Alumni Association. The award carries a cash prize of $1,000 and an engraved plaque.

Alumni, students, family, friends and the general public are invited to attend. Tickets are $5 for the buffet luncheon. They can be ordered from the Alumni Office, 2179 Paner Hall, 453-2408.

ROADS OVERCROWDED

WASHINGTON (AP)—If there seem to be just too many cars on the roads today, it's undoubtedly because the nation's miles of roadway are not keeping pace with increased traffic, says the Road Information Program.

The information service reports there are 1.8 million miles of paved roads in the United States, an increase of 16 percent since 1962.

But cars, trucks and buses have increased 43 percent during the same 10 years, from 101 million to 144 million, it adds.

Jobs on Campus

The following jobs for student workers have been listed by the Office of Student Work and Financial Assistance.

Spikers win second tournament title

By Gerry Bliss
Staff Writer

The SIU women's volleyball team won its second tournament title of the year this past weekend at the Eastern Kentucky Invitational. The spikers defeated Northern Kentucky 9-15, 15-11, 16-14, 15-8 to win the tournament. Indiana and Eastern Kentucky tied for third place.

The spikers won four of the five matches they played, losing only to Indiana 8-15, 15-11, 11-15. It was the third time this season SIU played the Hoosiers.

SIU had a relatively easy time in round robin play Friday, defeating Wright State 15-12, 15-9, Northern Kentucky 15-10, 15-13, and Eastern Kentucky 15-6, 8-15, 15-3. It was also the second time that the Salukis had faced Northern Kentucky, both teams met previously in the Cincinnati Bearcat Invitational, where the Salukis came out on top 15-8, 15-1, 15-8 to win their first tournament.

Terriers flop at homecoming

By Gordon Engelhardt
Staff Writer

The Carbondale Terriers seemed to have taken a cue from the St. Louis Cardinals' performance against Baltimore as they became an authentic replica of the Big Red misfits in losing their homecoming game to Harrisburg 33-14 Friday.

Dropped touchdown passes, fumbles on the Bulldogs' 1-yard line, and a touchdown run nullified because of a penalty all became part of the Terriers' misfortunes.

The Harrisburg victory was its first over Carbondale since 1964. Perry Duncan was the instrument of success for the Bulldogs as he caught a 58-yard touchdown pass from John Wright on the second play of the game, made an interception thwarting a Terrier drive, and ran 78 yards for a score on Harrisburg's first offensive play of the second half. He amassed 111 yards on four carries.

Duncan was not even eligible for the Bulldogs' first game because he decided to go out for cross country. He changed his mind a week before the first football game of the season. Coach Ken Jogerst is obviously happy about the decision.

"Perry played an integral part in our team," Jogerst said. "I told the team that they needed three wins in a row, and they're taking one game at a time. With a 4-1 conference record we have a good shot at the title."

Carbondale's slim title hopes were extinguished as their conference mark fell to 2-3 and their overall record dropped to 2-5.

"We simply made too many mistakes," Terrier Coach Jim Lovin said. "You can't make those kind of errors and expect to defeat a team that is much more physically strong than we are," he concluded.

SIU Coach Debbie Hunter said Northern Kentucky was much stronger this time. "They came at us real hard and played real well. It was a real hard-fought match for us to win," Hunter said.

Last Thursday SIU won a hard-fought match against a tough University of Illinois-Chicago Circle team which they had faced the weekend before at the Windy City Invitational. The Salukis won the best-of-five match 15-13, 12-15, 15-10, 15-2. All the games were close except for the last one, when the lead changed hands several times.

In the first game, SIU found itself behind early, 9-1, but came back to tie the game behind Dinah Dever's serving. The Salukis then took a one-point lead at 8-7, but then fell behind again before Robin Deterding's dunk gave SIU a 13-11 lead. Circle then came back to tie the game before a Mary Shirk spike gave SIU the win.

In the second game, Circle began to dink more in the middle and took a commanding 13-6 lead. SIU came right back, however, pulling to within two points before dropping the game 12-15.

The third game was almost a repeat of the second with Circle jumping to a 7-1 lead. This time the spikers weren't to be denied as they scored eight straight points to take a 14-9 lead. The scoring spree featured a double block by Deterding and Shirk to tie the game at nine. The spikers then held Circle to only one more point the rest of the game.

The fourth game was close from start to finish with Circle again taking an early lead. After being behind 8-5, the Salukis came to within 4-3 point on Ann Cronin's dink. Circle then took another three-point lead before SIU called time out. After the time out, the spikers got the ball back and scored six straight points behind Deterding's serving to take a 13-11 lead. The spikers then allowed Circle to tie the game and eventually win it as Deterding and Cronin both tried to make a 2-on-1 save on the winning point.

The fifth and final game was all SIU as the spikers took a commanding 9-1 lead and held Circle to only two points. The game featured some good spikes from Deb Stamm on sets from Deterding.

Here's The Opportunity
To Broaden Your Experience

SEARS, ROEBUCK AND CO. is offering a unique opportunity to graduating seniors with an aptitude for and a definite interest in Computer Programming. It is a selected training program that will equip individuals with the knowledge and skills that are necessary to become a full member of our Data Processing team.

We are interested in all majors. Training programs begin in October, February and June.

In addition to your training and salary, we also offer an outstanding employee benefit program and unlimited future career potential. Students interested in an interview should contact the Placement Office.

WE WILL BE VISITING YOUR CAMPUS ON OCTOBER 26, 1978 FOR OUR NEXT TRAINING CLASS.

Meyer scores 100th career goal

Gerry Bliss
Wright
Senior forward Helen Meyer scored six goals Saturday including her 100th career goal to lead the SIU women's field hockey team to victories over SIU-Edwardsville and Indiana State at McAndrew Stadium. The varsity then lost to St. Louis University Sunday 7-1, their biggest defeat of the year.

The junior varsity remained undefeated by beating SIU-E and Indiana State Saturday and playing to a 1-1 tie with Meramec Community College Sunday.

Saturday's games marked the last home appearance for the Salukis this season and the last home games for seniors Moe Allmendinger, Brenda Bruckner, Chris Evon, Judy Seger, Ann Stribling Verderber and Meyer. All six seniors played exceptionally well Saturday with Bruckner, Evon, Verderber and Meyer scoring.

In the first game against SIU-E, the Salukis took a 2-0 halftime lead and then scored four goals in the second half to blank the Cougars 6-0. The victory gave SIU-C goalie Kenda Cunningham 12 shutouts for the season, tying her record of last year. Cunningham picked up another shutout against Indiana State as the Salukis routed the Sycamores 7-0.

In the first half of the first game, Karen McHale and Evon gave the Salukis a lead they wouldn't relinquish. McHale scored the first goal at 7:20 on a rebound from the right side of the goal. Two minutes later, Evon scored on a penalty corner shot. Meyer had numerous opportunities to score in the first half, being stopped by SIU-E goalie Jan Bamberger on one long rush upfield. With three minutes left before the half, Meyer took a shot that just went by the left goal post.

After Bamberger made another save on Meyer to begin the second half, the Crestwood, Mo., native got her 100th goal on a shot that just trickled past Bamberger from about 25 feet out. The goal came eight minutes into the second half and gave the Salukis a 3-0 lead.

McHale then got her second goal of the game at 13:00 when her shot went between the legs of Bamberger. Mary Haddad increased the lead to 5-0 on a penalty shot that went into the lower left-hand corner. Meyer closed the scoring with her second goal of the game at 24:25. The Salukis outshot SIU-E 39-2.

After the game, Meyer said she felt good about reaching the coveted mark. "I was just relieved after I scored," Meyer said. "I just wanted to go out and get it over with. Their goalie made some pretty good saves in the first half and that's when I was thinking about it (the goal). It's fine that it's over with now."

Bamberger, a freshman, tried to explain what happened on the first goal by Meyer. "I don't know exactly what happened,"

Bamberger said. "It was just one of those shots that happened to get in."

In the second game against Indiana State, Meyer scored the winning goal only two minutes into the game on a penalty corner shot. It was the first of four goals she would score in the game, three in the first half. Brenda Bruckner also scored twice in the first half to give SIU a commanding 5-0 lead at halftime. Karen McHale picked up an assist on Bruckner's first goal. Moe Allmendinger also picked up an assist on Meyer's second goal.

Meyer then opened the second half with an unassisted goal on a beautiful rush upfield during which she got past two Sycamore defenders. Verderber then had an unassisted goal at the 12-minute mark to give the Salukis an insurmountable lead. SIU goalie Jackie Gammon never saw the shot as it came from about 15 feet on the right side.

Barb Morris, Mary Gilbert and Allmendinger did a nice job of containing SIU's high-scoring Theresa Veith, who has 33 career goals. Veith never got a off a good shot during the entire game as the Salukis defense did a nice job of keeping SIU outside the circle area.

In the JV games, Peggy Kiehlmeier led the Salukis scoring attack with two goals for the day. Kiehlmeier scored the only goal in a 1-0 shutout of SIU-E. Dawna Blanford and Leesa Barnard each picked up an assist on the goal.

Sawyer wins state cross country

Redbirds were hurt by his collapse, because Madison is the team's No. 1 runner. SIU's No. 2 runner, Dave Irion, placed third individually behind White and Sawyer. A number one performance from their number one runner would have given the Redbirds four of the top 16 spots and a better score than their fourth-place 90.

"It makes me mad," Coughlan said. "He (Madison) should have more intelligence than that. Why try to catch Sawyer and win when you can help the team by saving yourself and finishing further down?" But Coughlan realized that he has a rapidly improving team on his hands — a team that was given an outside shot at winning the title and could have wound up giving Illinois and EIU a scare and nudging past SIU into third place.

"We've got some good guys who love to run," Coughlan said. Which was probably Madison's downfall. He apparently tried to run harder than he knew how.

Madison wasn't the only one. Wheaton College's Danny Henderson, a tall rangy fellow, dropped out of the race after running third at the three-mile mark. He was also expected to contend with Sawyer for the individual title.

But this day the race belonged to Mike, even though he said after the race, "I wasn't feeling that great." "I don't know if we ran to our full capability," Sawyer said, "but we'll come around for conference and district. Those are the ones that count. If we come home with a Missouri Valley Conference trophy, that's the one people will be looking at."

One reason the Salukis didn't come around Saturday, Sawyer said, is that they "might have worked too hard" in preparation for the meet. "We've been working pretty hard," Sawyer said. "You have to work hard to be good, but sometimes you have days when it just catches up to you."

The race could have reflected this. The Salukis, said 25th-place finisher Tom Fitzpatrick, weren't doing enough catching up when they could have. For most of the race Fitzpatrick was running with Paul Craig, who finished 17th. Karsten Schulz, who was 29th. Bill Moran, 28th, and Bisase.

"At the three mile mark everybody was dying out there," Fitzpatrick said. "They were just dropping like flies. All those people were moving back but we didn't get them. Bisase was the only guy who passed anybody."

"We trained hard and we're in good shape, but we came out and didn't do that well," he said. "We ran together in a pack but not in the front."

Bisase did his thing again — coming from behind and closing with a charge. At the two-mile mark, he was running "in the 30s somewhere," and finished eighth. Passing 22 runners in three miles doesn't happen very often in cross country.

"I just try to keep an even pace," Bisase said. "Some people go out fast and end up running backwards." Saturday, he said, most of the people he caught up with were "running backwards."

That Bisase was able to finish eighth with a 26:31 clocking reflected the slow times in the race. For example, Mike ran his best Midland Hills time of the season, 16:18, in a dual meet against Murray State and finished fifth. A slower clocking Saturday dropped him only three places in a championship caliber meet.

And Paul Craig was 26 seconds slower Saturday than against Murray and dropped only from third to 17th.

Time-wise, then, the Salukis did not run as well Saturday as they did against Murray State. But as Coach Lew Hartzog says, you don't run for times, you run people. Times aren't that important if you can catch the runner ahead of you.

And the Salukis running together in the "pack" didn't catch enough people to enable the team to finish with fewer points than it did. "I was hoping we would," Hartzog said, "but sometimes it's pretty tough for things to turn out that way. Eicken didn't finish in the top 10 either, and he's a super runner."

"I'm pleased that we finished as well as we did, and I'm especially pleased with how Sawyer ran. I'm really pulling for him to make All-American."

Sawyer, Illini defend distance titles

By Brad Beker
Staff Writer

Illinois cross country Coach Gary Weineke was pacing, awaiting the official results from Saturday's Illinois Intercollegiate meet at Midland Hills golf course. He was pretty sure that his team had won its sixth consecutive intercollegiate title, but he couldn't be positive his addition would jive with that of the people scoring the meet.

"It's close," somebody said.
"Too close," Weineke noted with a nervous half-grin.

Weineke was referring to the single-point margin that eventually would be found to separate his team from runner-up Eastern Illinois. Illinois prevailed, 41-42 thanks to the dogged effort of senior Charlie White, known better as a half-miler than a distance runner.

As for the individual championship, that was not "too close." It was not close at all. Mike Sawyer won his second consecutive intercollegiate title by a whopping 15-second margin over second-place White who, from past performance, would appear to have no business running that well.

Sawyer's finishing time of 25:45.5 was the second-lowest run on the Midland Hills roller coaster this year, and it helped SIU to a 79-point third-place finish, 11 points ahead of an Illinois State squad which could have easily done better.

Sawyer went for the lead near the three-mile mark and when he crossed the finish line the rest of the pack was still a collection of dots in the distance.

But the meet was decided by the efforts of the Illinois and EIU runners behind Sawyer. White was second, EIU's Bill Dandy was fourth, followed by Tim Close (Illinois), Casey Reinking (EIU) and Dave Walters (Illinois) in fifth, sixth and seventh.

SIU's Mike Bisase interrupted the succession with his eighth-place finish, in 26:21.2 before EIU's Joe Sheeran and Larry Schults rounded out the top 10.

Illinois also took the 12th and 13th spots to complete its scoring, and EIU grabbed 13th. When the addition was completed, Illinois prevailed by a margin that was among the closest in the history of the Illinois Intercollegiates. And in cross country, a one-point margin can be reversed simply by passing one of the runners on the team ahead of you.

Which is why EIU's All-American Joe Sheeran was discouraged with his ninth-place finish. Sheeran has been hurting all year, but if he could have come close to duplicating his second-place finish in the intercollegiate meet last year, EIU would have dethroned Illinois.

The same thing could have happened in countless other ways. What if White had not finished so high? Illinois would have lost. But the Illini needed his effort mainly because their No. 1 runner, Jim Eicken, struggled to an uncharacteristic 12th. Eicken was expected to contend with Sawyer for the individual title.

"I just didn't run very well," Eicken said. "Nothing was wrong. I've got nobody to blame but myself."

White expressed surprise at his stratospheric finish. "I'm usually not this high up," he said. "Usually I run about third or fourth for our team. Sometimes I'll be second, but I've never finished higher than that."

Weineke credited White's finish to the vagaries of competition. "If someone would have said Charlie White was going to finish second, no one would have believed it," he said. "But it happens. Sometimes the intensity of a championship meet makes up for a lot of differences."

Strangely, White said the part of his success could be explained by his ability to run the course most runners love to hate.

"I run better on a hilly course," he said. "It's my mental flame, I guess. I always concentrate on the hills."

On a hilly course, White said he always concentrates on running the hills properly — shortening the stride on the way up, and lengthening it as he reaches the crest.

"You don't have time to think about how hurt you are," he said. On a flat

course, less thinking is required — the runner uses the same stride and the same pace — and he "has time" to think about the pain.

The hills do, however, impose their limitations on the runners, as Illinois State's Mike Madison discovered. Madison, said ISU Coach John Coughlan, passed out at the bottom of the hill that leads to the finish line, and had to "walk" the rest of the way to finish 52nd.

Apparently Madison went out too quickly in an effort to stay with the leaders and paid for it later on. The (Continued on Page 19)

Salukis give Shockers early Yule present, 33-7

By George Csolak
Sports Editor

The Saluki football team held the Christmas holiday eight weeks early Saturday. But it didn't seem like Christmas. The temperature was 83 degrees in Wichita, Kan.

And the Salukis carried on the old tradition of giving. After all, it is better to give than to receive — it's the spirit of Christmas. SIU sacrificed its chance of winning the Missouri Valley Conference championship this year, and gave Wichita State new life, in a 33-7 loss at Cessna Stadium.

The Salukis went about their merry Yuletide venture by furling, throwing interceptions and showing signs of a general collapse, all early presents to the Shockers.

Arthur Williams played Santa Claus for the Salukis, and threw a pass right into the hands of Shocker linebacker Brian Anderson, who promptly returned the interception 22 yards for a touchdown. Joe Williams, who would later enter collegiate stardom, with a NCAA record-tying 67-yard field goal, booted the extra point.

Shocker Williams had given his team a 3-0 lead earlier in that second quarter with a 24-yard field goal. The field goal was set up by a 43-yard run around right end by tailback Mickey Collins, who had 124 yards rushing on 22 carries for Wichita.

The Salukis were down 10-0 at halftime, and came out with another bag of presents. They wasted little time passing them out as Santa Williams fumbled for the second time in five minutes. The Salukis had stopped a Wichita fourth-and-two on the SIU 4, and took over with 9:59 left in the third period.

Williams, attempting to handoff to fullback Bernell Quinn, lost the ball and it bounced into the end zone where defensive end Willie Smith fell on it for another Shocker score.

The Salukis finally got on the board when Gerald Carr, who replaced Williams at quarterback, hit tight end Hugh Fletcher with a 36-yard scoring pass with 14:20 left in the game. It was Fletcher's first career touchdown reception. Paul Molla kicked the point after and the Salukis had a breath of life.

But Shocker fullback Jeff Haney scored on a 1-yard run two minutes later, and added another touchdown run — this one good for 30 yards. Haney had 119 yards on 18 carries.

And then Williams added the killer. With a 25-mile-per-hour wind at his back, the 6-0, 175-pound junior came out with four seconds left to try a 67-yard field goal. The ball sailed through the uprights, and Williams joined Russell Erbeben of Texas and Steve Little, former Arkansas Razorback and now St. Louis Cardinal, for the longest field goal in NCAA history.

Christmas had come to an end for Wichita. The Shockers set up their final two touchdowns on a long pass from backup quarterback Scott Burger to Brian Hanning for 49 yards to the Saluki 1, and a 15-yard SIU punt by Tom Striegel.

Saluki Head Coach Rey Dempsey wasn't pleased with the gifts his team had presented the Shockers. He talked about his quarterback Williams and how he had returned to preseason form.

"This is what Arthur looked like before he made the team," Dempsey said. "He didn't look like a freshman today. He looked more like a senior in high school, as far as I'm concerned."

The Saluki coach had every right to be disappointed. He and his coaching staff had spent so much time preparing for the Shockers. And he felt good going into the game — better than he felt before the SIU-Arkansas State clash the week before.

"I tell you, this is the truth, I never went into a game so confident," Dempsey said in a solemn voice. "I almost feel we should have given them a better game. It almost makes you feel ashamed that we played so poor. It wasn't that we were overpowered, because we didn't feel that was a physical team we played."

The Shockers weren't physical. They played good football, but they capitalized on the Saluki errors by recovering three fumbles and picking off three passes. SIU fumbled four times.

"They played well," Dempsey said, "better than they've been playing. But it wasn't a good game for us. You can't have turnovers like that and do real well. If you just take turnovers out of a game and you've got a pretty good team, the game's close right now."

Dempsey said he underestimated Collins, the Shocker running back, and the Wichita State offense as a whole. He said the Salukis were preparing for a lot of passing.

"I didn't think we'd give them that many yards on the ground," he said, "and I really thought we'd stuff 'em in a box on the ground. On film I felt they were one of the worst offensive teams in terms of the ground game, and yet I knew they were going to try and establish it."

Dempsey wasn't upset when the Shockers called time out with four seconds left to let Williams kick his record-tying field goal.

"If someone would have beaten me, 100-0, I wouldn't say anything," he said shrugging off the field goal. "I don't apply that philosophy. We could've done it against Illinois State. The guy came over to me after that game and thanked me...he knew we could've scored 30 that day and blown them out."

"I'm not opposed to them for doing it," he added of the field goal, "and I've always felt that way. If that's what they want to do, then that's okay. I don't get as upset about a big play like that as I do when we don't do the job. We gave 'em a whole pile of points."

Merry Christmas, Shockers.
