Date changed for payment of tuition, fees

By Charity Gould
Staff Writer

The deadline date for payment of tuition and fees for the spring semester has been moved from Jan. 4 to Jan. 11, Kirby Browning, director of admissions and records, said Monday.

Currently, students pay their fees on the Friday before classes begin, but the spring semester class schedule states the last day to pay or defer advance registration tuition and fees is Jan. 4, two weeks before school starts.

Browning said the date was changed to Jan. 11 due to conflicts with Christmas vacation. Having the payment deadline a week before classes begin allows students to register for classes that have been reopened due to the registration cancellation of those who fail to pay fees on time, he said.

Vice President for Academic Affairs Frank Horton said "instead of making the payment date Jan. 4 this year and Jan. 11 for next year, we decided to make the date Jan. 11 just to eliminate confusion," Horton said.

A plan that would allow students to pay their fees in three installments rather than one lump sum could go into effect as early as fall 1980, Henry Andrews, assistant director of admissions and records, said.

Students' registration will be canceled if tuition and fees are not paid or deferred at the Bursar's office by 4 p.m. on Jan. 11.

Also, a late registration fee proposal for both graduates and undergraduates is being discussed by the educational policy committee in the Graduate Council and by an ad hoc registration committee.

Roland Keim, associate director of admissions and records and a member of the ad hoc registration committee, said the proposal will be taken before both the Undergraduate Student Council and the Graduate Student Council.

Browning said that if the fee is installed it will not be effective until at least fall 1980.

Error causes search nominee change

By Shelley Davb
Staff Writer

The change in the rank ordering of the Faculty Senate nominees for the Presidential Search Committee was due to an error in addition, said Joann Paine, chairwomen of the Committee on Committees.

According to Paine, the tallying of the ballots was correct, but the error occurred when the results were added together.

The search for a search committee was conducted on a preferential ballot. Seven candidates were listed on the ballot and senate members were asked to place a number of zero through six next to each name. A "six" indicated that the member wanted that person to be ranked No. 1 on the list Shaw would receive.

The numbers were then totaled for each of the candidates and the one receiving the highest total would be ranked No. 1.

Paine said the mistake, that moved Joann Boydston from fifth position to a tie for third and moved Chandra Banerjee from fourth to fifth, occurred when Paine overlooked a six in Boydston's total. She said her totals were recounted by Banerjee—who also did not find the error.

"I think the source of the error clearly indicates there wasn't any tampering with the ballots," Paine said. "It clearly indicates the thing was conducted properly."

Concern over the recount surfaced last week when an informal faculty group called Concerned Professors, circulated a petition to call a special faculty meeting to determine why a recount was conducted.

Lawrence Dennis, senate president and the person who first noticed the error, said a recount was held by him and Howard Allen, vice president, immediately after Dennis noticed an error while canvassing the ballots.

"There is really no procedure but any executive officer of any organization can canvass the ballots after an election," Dennis said. "Usually the secretary would do that, but the secretary (Chandra Banerjee) was a candidate."

Concerned Professors, however, was not satisfied with Dennis' response, a member of the group said. She said the group then asked Dennis to call a special meeting of the Faculty Senate to explain the matter and when he declined, drew up the petition to call a special meeting of the entire faculty.

The member said the 75 names needed to call the meeting were obtained by noon Friday. But she said the meeting has been indefinitely postponed. She said Dennis will be unable to attend the original scheduled meeting on Thursday and a regularly scheduled meeting of the general faculty on Tuesday may clear up the matter.

Paine also said Dennis is correct when he canvassed the ballots in the Faculty Senate office two days after the election was held.

"I was going to go home and canvass them myself," Paine said. "It is proper for one or the other appropriate persons present to canvass the ballots."

"(Canvassing) is an American custom. I think by not doing it, there would be a question in procedure. There is no law but ethically it must be done."

DuWayne Englert, one of the six final nominees, said regardless of the procedure involved in the recounting a special meeting must be called to erase the suspicions that have arisen.

"I think with all of the clouds of suspicion over the character of the search committee is very bad," Englert said.

Athletics budget still unapproved

Lack of income sources causes delay

By Paula D. Walter
Staff Writer

The present primary concern in the Office of University Relations is the lack of an approved budget for both the men's and women's intercollegiate athletics programs for this year, said Jerry Lacey, associate vice president for University Relations.

Lacey presented the concern in the first fall meeting of the Intercollegiate Athletics Council on Monday.

Lacey said this year's delay in finalizing the budget is "much longer than it's ever been" and is primarily due to a lack of income sources in order to satisfy all the budget requests.

Lacey said the total athletics budget for a school year is based on projections of student enrollment made in February of the previous year, because athletics monies come primarily from the Student Athletics Fee. This projection is matched with budget requests from the various sports and a certain amount is authorized for expenses. This authorization holds true, even if the enrollment projection proves to be too high and a deficit occurs, he said.

Due to an overprojection of enrollment last year, the athletics department began the fall semester with a deficit of more than $104,000, Lacey said. In addition, a deficit of about $79,000 will occur in the men's athletics budget this year, even if they continue to operate as they have in the past, he said.

Lacey said his office is trying to explore various options in order to identify other possible income sources, but he declined to be specific. He did say that he expects to have the final budget by the first of the year, "but there's always the potential of problems."

The proposal to raise the student athletics fee by $2 beginning summer semester, 1980, will be presented to the Board of Trustees at the November and December meetings, Lacey said. The fee increase would eventually help the budgetary deficit, but other options are needed to provide funding before summer, he added.

Lacey said he has cautioned Gale Sayers, men's athletics director, to "proceed with caution" with expenditures, but that funding for the men's spring sports is only protected by that cautionary measure.

"If something has to be cut back, we'll have to do it in spring," he said.

Lacey also said that the decision to add a 12th competitive sport at SIU-C will "have to be made soon," and that the sports being considered are the most water polo, soccer and volleyball.

Addition of a 12th sport would enable SIU-C to remain in NCAA Division IA in football competition. This alternative proposal is one of three measures the NCAA cited in which a school can meet compliance, said Fred Huff, assistant men's athletics director. The other two alternatives are an average football attendance of 17,000 people or a stadium with the capacity of seating 30,000 people, he said.

"Since it's very difficult to think SIU-C will meet the other alternatives, the easiest and most logical, realistic way is for us to consider a 12th sport," Huff said.

Division IA status would put SIU-C in the same division with UCLA, Michigan State, and Alabama, and will also make it easier for coaches to recruit the "blue-chip" athletes, Huff said. Lacey declined to specify the primary sport considered but did say "the water polo would be the easiest to institute, since we already have 70 swimmers and the coach..."

Carbondale to become convention center

By Mary Ann McNary
Staff Writer

Even though Carbondale's Convention Center is still in the planning stages, the city will become a "convention center" this week, when both the 4th National Urban Railroad Relocation Conference and the Region 5 Citizens Participation Council, Inc. are scheduled to convene.

The Urban Railroad Relocation Conference will bring about 100 people to Carbondale from the 14 cities around the country that are currently participating in the federally-funded project.

Representatives from the railroads, city governments, state governments, state highway departments, engineering consulting firms and other agencies involved in the project are scheduled to attend the two-day conference, according to Eldon Gaanell, Carbondale's project director.

Under the Federal-Aid Highway Acts of 1973, 1974 and 1976, 19 cities across the country were selected to receive federal funding for the railroad relocation demonstration project. The projects are supposed to increase traffic flow in the cities as well as provide information on the feasibility of additional projects to the federal government.

John D. Kramer, secretary for the Illinois Department of Transportation and Hans Fischer, mayor of Carbondale, are scheduled to open the conference at 9 a.m. Wednesday.

Jay Miller, division administrator for the Federal Highway Administration in Springfield, will also address the group Wednesday.

The Chief of the Railroad and Utilities Branch of the Federal Highway Administration, James Carney, is scheduled to give a report at 1 p.m. Thursday.

Representative from the following cities are scheduled to attend and present status reports: East St. Louis; Springfield; Augusta, Ga.; Elko, Nev.; Brownsville, Tex.; Greenville, Tex.; Hammond, Ind.; Lafayette, Ind.; Terre Haute, Ind.; Lincoln, Neb.; Metairie, La.; Pine Bluff, Ark.

and Wheeling, W.V.

The Region 5 Citizen Participation Council, Inc. has scheduled its annual fall conference from Friday through Sunday in the Holiday Inn.

About 200 people from Region 5, which includes citizen representatives from Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Michigan, Minnesota and Wisconsin, and other regions in the country, are scheduled to attend, according to Ima Valentine, Region 5 board member.

The Citizens Participation Council, Inc. is a nationwide group that "wants to make people more aware of programs the government has set up for them," said a spokeswoman in

Plane crash lands; students escape injury

By Leanne Waxman
Staff Writer

Four SIU-C students escaped with minor injuries Sunday night when a four-passenger airplane crash-landed and came to rest in a farm field near the Effingham Airport after the engine failed.

The plane, a Cessna 172 Skyhawk piloted by Mitchell Kaufman, senior in sociology, was reportedly severely damaged when it bounced several times and came to stop in a field in an attempted landing on the airport runway.

The plane was descending to refuel at the Effingham Airport when the engine stopped at about 4,000 feet, according to John Izumi, one of the passengers of the plane. Izumi is enrolled in a private flying course.

"Honestly, I wasn't scared cause I know Mitch is a very good pilot and I knew he would get us safely to the ground," Izumi said Monday.

The other two passengers were David Olsen, junior in agriculture, and Mike Cummins, senior in engineering. Olsen and Cummins were sitting in the back seat of the plane, Izumi said.

Izumi said Kaufman dropped the altitude of the plane to 8,000 feet over the Effingham Airport where he planned to refuel before continuing to the Southern Illinois Airport. The engine stopped functioning and the plane came down in a field about 1,000 feet beyond the runway at the airport, which is not equipped with a tower or ground control facilities.

Student arrested, charged with battery

An SIU-C graduate student has been arrested and charged with battery following an alleged beating of a woman at Carbondale Mobile Homes.

Pierre Tonye, graduate student in classical studies, is accused of beating his roommate, Aisha Foggy, and of damaging several pieces of furniture in their trailer at the mobile home park Sunday.

Tonye was released from Jackson County Jail Monday after being assessed a $1,500 recognizance bond in Jackson County Court. He will appear in court for a pre-trial hearing Nov. 29.

University police said Foggy was lying in the doorway of the trailer when officers arrived. She had apparently been beaten on the back, both shoulders, both arms and face. Foggy had numerous bruises on her body, police said.

Foggy told police that she had been beaten and kicked several times that morning. Police said the furniture in the trailer was overturned and some pieces were broken.

Police were dispatched to the trailer after receiving a call from another trailer court resident who reported that she heard a woman screaming in the trailer.

Funnel clouds touch down in local county

Although funnel clouds were sighted in three Southern Illinois counties Monday morning only one touched down and did any damage to property.

The Breese Police Department reported that four farms in Clinton County were damaged by high winds at about 8 a.m. A spokesman for the department said two funnel clouds were sighted in Clinton County and one touched down, damaging farm buildings in the area.

No injuries were reported and, due to bad weather conditions, the dollar damages were not yet available.

Funnel clouds were also sighted in Jackson and Perry Counties, Du Quoin State Police said, but none touched down or did any damage. Police said one sighting was northwest of Pickneyville and the other six miles north of Murphysboro.

A representative from Southern Illinois Airport said weather conditions have changed since Monday morning and the threat of further funnel cloud activity no longer exists. The representative said winds were gusting up to 35 mph Monday morning.

Weather

Much colder Tuesday. Cloudy in the morning and becoming partly sunny in the afternoon and rather windy.

Israel to abandon Arab outpost

JERUSALEM (AP) — The Israeli Supreme Court, in a landmark decision that surprised the nation, ruled Monday that the government had illegally seized private Arab land for a Jewish settlement and ordered the hilltop outpost in the West Bank be abandoned.

The ruling, the first in which an Israeli court found a settlement in the occupied territories to be illegal, came just a day after Moshe Dayan resigned as foreign minister in a deep-seated dispute over the settlement policies of Prime Minister Menachem Begin's government and its tough line on Palestinian autonomy.

The developments dealt a one-two punch to Begin's ruling coalition, and hopeful speculation raced through Arab capitals Monday that they might foreshadow major changes in Israel.

The government will face several motions of no-confidence in the Israeli Parliament on Tuesday. But it is expected to survive them, and Begin will probably reject the opposition Labor Party's call for new elections.

The five-judge Supreme Court ordered that the settlement at Elon Moreh, near the Arab-populated town of Nablus in the West Bank, of the Jordan River, be dismantled within 30 days.

Sears charged in discrimination suit

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government took Sears Roebuck & Co. to court in five cities Monday on charges that the world's largest retailer practiced illegal job discrimination against women and minorities across the United States.

News Roundup

A nationwide suit filed in federal court in Chicago accused Sears of job discrimination against women in the 48 contiguous states in violation of the Civil Rights and Equal Pay acts.

Four other suits filed simultaneously in New York City; Atlanta; Montgomery, Ala.; and Memphis, Tenn., charged the retailer with discriminating against minorities in hiring at seven facilities in those four areas.

'Hillside Strangler' gets life sentence

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Kenneth Bianchi, quiet and calm, was sentenced to life in prison after pleading guilty on Monday to five slayings in the "Hillside Strangler" murders that terrorized Southern California women for six months. "I wish I had the power that it be ordered that your sentence...run consecutively." Superior Court Judge William B. Keene told Bianchi after imposing six life sentences.

Bianchi had quietly answered, "Yea, I did," as Deputy District Attorney Roger Kelly asked him if he killed each of the five victims in a string of slayings from September, 1977 through February, 1978. He also pleaded guilty to one count of conspiracy.

Activists on trial in Czechoslovakia

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — Six human rights activists went on trial under heavy police guard Monday, and dissidents said more than a dozen of the defendants' supporters were detained by police in and around the courthouse.

Those taken into custody included a defendant's wife, expelled from the courtroom and seized after she began taking notes on the trial.

Dissident estimates of those detained ranged from 13 to about 25.

Humans affect aid

Diane L. Johnson's letter regarding student aid was a near-sighted and thoughtless attempt to uphold a grossly mismanaged financial aid system. My wife filed all the necessary forms, got them in by the assigned time, stood in all the long lines just like Mrs. Johnson says to do. The effort was futile because someone in Ms. Johnson's (and I quote) "efficient Student Work and Financial Aid Office" put the file in the wrong place. Consequently, the BEOG check hasn't arrived and no one knows when it will. When we made an appointment with a counselor to try to get the matter cleared up, we showed up but the counselor did not and no reason was given. In all fairness I must say the vast majority of people we have dealt with were very helpful, but a select few simply are not.

Let's face it, as long as we're dealing with a system run by humans, there is going to be human error. In some places there will be more than others.

In closing, a personal remark to Ms. Johnson: You're in public relations? Then stop making half-bigoted generalities about food stamps and ADC, get off of your ivory pedestal and start doing some real serious relating to the public.

Financial aid great?

"Financial Aid—Isn't it great?"

Yes, Diane, it is—when it ever comes! I cannot disagree with you more about the so-called "efficiency" of the Student Work and Financial Aid Office. 1976 was the last year that office was efficient. Back then, the system was quite simple: one person was responsible for each different type of loan. If you filed in March, you would receive your loan papers in July. But not any more. Now they have "Team Leaders."

My husband, John, is a graduate student and is supposed to be a recipient of a National Direct Student Loan.

He does not fit into the category of students who smugly chose to generalize. John applied for the aforementioned loan in early February, long before the March date. He was assured his application would be processed "right away" and to expect the money by the beginning of the fall semester.

However, August came and went, and he received no money. Upon inquiring as to why, he was told that his application had gotten "misplaced" on the director's desk and had not been found for three months. Therefore, he was no longer at the top of the pile. Furthermore, he was told, Mrs. Wright, the team leader who handles people with last names beginning with A through G, had broken her foot. (I am not blaming Mrs. Wright, however; up to that point she had been very considerate.)

September has now come and gone, and so has half of October. John has still not received the money. We are in desperate need of it at this point. We both work as well as go to school, but we are not making enough to pay our bills.

Be thankful, Diane, that your last name begins with "J" instead of "D". But think about it: you may not be so lucky next year. Who knows what calamity might befall the H through N team leader in 1980?

Meanwhile, to whom do we send our bills?

Jesse Jackson is the auctioneer putting Black America on blocks

WASHINGTON—The "leadership" is on the lips of all serious citizens, and is used in references to such people as John Paul II and Earl Weaver. (Weaver is manager of the Baltimore Orioles and is, in his field, infallible.) And Edward Kennedy is said to "look like a leader."

A Democratic senator with a flair for wishful thinking says, wistfully: "Maybe Carter had Kennedy's first term." Like many Democrats, the senator wants to believe that Kennedy has watched Carter, taken notes, and silently vowed not to make the mistakes he otherwise would have made. That would be easier to believe were it not that Kennedy's complaint about Carter is that Carter has not been Kennedyesque meaning ardent, in pursuit of policies they both favor.

Kennedy's talk about "leadership" may be a tactic for turning political talk away from the similarity of his and Carter's views. In the competition for the Republican nomination, too, the talk of "leadership" is incessant, in part because there are few discernible differences between the views of the leading candidates.

The word "leadership" also appears in another context. There is said to be a contest for "the leadership of black Americans." At least there is a contest to be anointed by the media as leader of those who seem to wish that more black Americans would think a little less about wretched schools, inadequate police protection, uncollected garbage and spotty bus service, and would get hot and bothered about Palestine.

Since the murder of Martin Luther King Jr., no person has stood forth as the predominant spokesman for black Americans. This probably is a sign of progress. Since the enactment of the civil rights agenda in the 1960s, the movement of blacks into the mainstream of American life has proceeded far enough that blacks have a more rounded, complicated political agenda, and can no longer be regarded as a single-minded group with a single dominant spokesman.

Still, Jesse Jackson seems to aspire to that role, and it is reasonable to surmise that the resignation of Andrew Young set off alarm bells in Jackson's mind. Young in private life can be a potent rival. Jackson has scrambled to get in front of Young on the issue that draws the television cameras: the championing of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

The day newspapers carried photographs of John Paul II urging the Irish to shun the terrorism of the Irish Republican Army, many newspapers also carried a picture of Jackson embracing Yasser Arafat, head of the terrorist organization which is the moral equivalent of an especially vicious and powerful IRA.

Jackson says the PLO is made up of, among others, "doctors, lawyers, et cetera." It is, presumably, those et ceteras who invade Israeli schools and massacre the children, and who place bombs in Israeli marketplaces. (The Nazi SS included doctors and lawyers. It was not, however, an organization for dispensing medical and legal assistance.)

In Beirut, Jackson announced that the PLO had agreed to a cease-fire in southern Lebanon. Someone must have then pointed out to him that this cease-fire had been negotiated and begun weeks before he arrived. So, later, he said that what the PLO had agreed to do was "strengthen" the cease-fire, whatever that means.

When Jackson is not exercising such leadership in Beirut and elsewhere, he runs Operation PUSH, an acronym coined by someone wondrously deaf to satire. It stands for People United to Save Humanity. Christopher Swan of the Christian Science Monitor recently visited PUSH headquarters:

"In almost every office, corridor, and hallway, there are pictures of Reverend Jackson. The cover of PUSH's current newsletter bears a photo of him over the caption, 'The father of us all.'"

When God planted the American garden, he did not put Jackson among the shrinking violets. But if humility is a Christian virtue that the Reverend is having trouble getting the hang of, he seems to have mastered commercial matters. Swan accompanied Jackson to a Chicago meeting with Arab businessmen:

"These businessmen, who say they are representing several Arab governments, urge Reverend Jackson to help them capitalize on the 'momentum' created by Andy Young's resignation.

"We know something about the American psyche," he tells them, "and what your enemy is doing." But he also warns that "by October 1, there will be no black leader left" willing to come to the aid of the Palestinian cause, if there is not an immediate infusion of funds into the black community from Arab states.

"We will all learn to recite the alphabet without three letters, P-L-O," he tells them.

This is an illuminating vignette of leadership, or at least of leadership as practiced by an auctioneer at an auction.

Nuclear fusion is needed energy source for the future

By Dale Turner
Student Writer

Crisis: an unstable or crucial time or state of affairs.

Energy: resource used for supplying power.

Those two words are seen frequently by millions of Americans daily. Together they adopt a clearer definition.

Energy Crisis: the world is in trouble—serious trouble.

The words take on a different meaning given that definition. But it is a definition that should be seen more often, and taken seriously.

The problem is that supplies of fossil fuels are inadequate. Oil supplies will be exhausted within the next century. Coal destroys the land during mining and pollutes the environment during refining. Uranium, used in the process of nuclear fission, is feared because of the potential of radioactive contamination of the environment.

Solar energy, then, would appear to be the great hope for the source of tomorrow's energy. Despite the trust that the sun's power won't dry up, other factors make reliance on solar energy desirable.

Cost is indeterminable; it is inefficient; it is geographically biased.

The ultimate answer is to duplicate and control a man-made form of the sun's energy. That process is called nuclear fusion.

Fusion differs from fission in several ways. Nuclear fission, our current method of procuring nuclear power, involves breaking large atoms up into small, highly radioactive atoms. It utilizes uranium, a rare metal, found only in a few places. Considerable energy is produced per pound of uranium, but large quantities of uranium are necessary for production.

In fusion, smaller atoms are combined to create a somewhat larger atom. Deuterium, a form of hydrogen, is the energy source, and is found in water. Fusion results in helium, with only small amounts of radioactive waste produced. A malfunction in the fusion system does not mean a nuclear emergency—the process simply stops. Finally, fusion produces four times the amount of energy that fission does per pound of fuel.

The problem with fusion is that scientists have yet to successfully set off a controlled fusion reaction. To combine the atoms, the temperature must be raised to 100 million degrees Celsius (Centigrade). This presents a rather unique problem in that temperatures of that magnitude are found at the center of the sun.

On earth, scientists have attempted to reproduce this temperature in two ways. The first is by producing electromagnetic fields strong enough to hold electrically charged atoms in place while temperatures are raised to the required level.

The alternative is use of lasers. Lasers can directly concentrate high levels of energy to a small area efficiently and accurately. It is hoped that lasers could heat the atoms before they have a chance to move out of the way of the beam.

For now, electromagnetic fields and laser beams fall short of the magnitude needed to produce the successful fusion. But with more human energy directed toward nuclear fusion we could begin to produce successful results in the near future.

A new, almost inexhaustible source of energy is at our fingertips. We can hardly afford to let it pass through.

Choir performance delightful

By Diane Penner
Staff Writer

Young and old were treated to a delightful blend of contemporary and classical choral arrangements at the performance of the Norman Luboff Choir last weekend.

The strongest performances of the choir came with the folk and popular songs performed after the intermission, especially with Luboff's arrangement of "The Three Little Pigs." Choir member Raymond Keast thrilled especially the youngsters with his animated narration of the tale, and was backed up nicely by the choir.

The 24-member choir began with traditional sacred songs, including L. E. Larsson's "Missa Brevis," and Mendelssohn's "Regina Coeli." The concert was highlighted by a solo quartet. Luboff's arrangement of E. Hovland's "Saul" featured Raymond Keast of the choir as narrator in a moving rendition of a Bible story.

Mendelssohn's "Voyage of the Lark," three Moravian duets by Dvorak, Rossini's "I Gondolieri," and Rachmaninoff's "Prelude No. 10" comprised the next section of classical secular songs.

The choir moved to a lighter tone before the intermission with paradoxical familiar quotations set to serious-sounding music. Well-known sayings such as "nothing ventured, nothing gained; but 'better safe than sorry,' and 'absence makes the heart grow fonder; but out of sight is out of mind" were performed with intricate harmonies and descants, much to the delight of the audience.

A lively rendition of "Old Dan Tucker," a traditional Appalachian folksong, opened the concert after the intermission. The Swedish folksong "Dennaredansen," or "Dance of the Judge," rounded the section out.

"The Happy Wanderer," a German folksong, and "Never Be Afraid," by L. Spence, opened the show songs. Dennis Martin offered a splendiferous solo performance in Luboff's own "Yellow Bird." The choir delivered a moving version of Duke Ellington's "Mood Indigo," and then moved into favorite spirituals and gospel tunes, including "Do Lord" and "Old Time Religion."

After being called back for two encores, Luboff led the choir in another bit of levity, singing that it is difficult to "stop this sort of music" and not go on forever.

A special round of applause should go to piano accompanist David D'Ambrasio.

Student plays offer entertainment

By Paula Walker
Entertainment Editor

Sunday night's performance of "An Evening of New Plays," consisting of three one-act plays written and directed by students, was, in general, successful.

The first production, "Is This A Murder?" written by Dan Martin, is an adaptation of James Thurber's short story, "The Catbird Seat." Frankie Day, a theater student who has performed in many University Theater productions, directed the play.

Joe Russel, as Erwin Martin, contributed the most to the play. Without him, the play—which was interesting but slow-moving—would have been boring.

Mary Nitti adapted "The Country of the Blind" from a short story by H. G. Wells. Initially the play was moving, but as time dragged on the impact was lessened severely.

The biggest drawback of the show, directed by George Pinney, was that many of the performers seemed to be constantly struggling to appear blind. Such a role is extremely difficult—and that difficulty was heightened by the proximity of the audience.

'Madcat' Ruth reveals varied talent at show

By Jennell Olson
Staff Writer

Fingers were snapping, feet were tapping and hands were clapping to the jazz and blues tunes of Peter "Madcat" Ruth in the Student Center Friday night. Ruth performed for a near-capacity crowd in the Old Main Room as part of the International Coffeehouse Series.

The 30-year-old jazz soloist displayed an immense amount of musical talent which delighted his audience. His harmonica playing was especially impressive and he played the guitar and kalimba (thumb piano) with equal skill.

Ruth started his performance with a piece that made use of his "mouth harp," penny and bird whistles and duck and crow calls. He began the show alone, but was later joined by bass-guitar player Jason Boehle.

"You've got to understand a little bit of folklore to understand this song," said Ruth as he introduced his version of "All a Ne'd Is a Pig in a Pen." The introduction and the song, which inspired laughter from the audience, were representative of Ruth's easy-going, personable style.

Some of the blues numbers he performed were "Shortnin' Bread," "Sweet Home Chicago," "Trouble of Mine" by Big Bill Broontzy and "All Blues" by Miles Davis.

He also invited the audience to participate in a three-part sing-a-long he termed "a real hootenanny."

Ruth's onstage vivacity indicated he was having a great time performing. He danced around and seemed to pour himself into each piece. He provided his audience with a performance that was both unique and dynamic.

Exxon: Oil company's profits not result of U.S. consumers

By Mark Potts
AP Business Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Exxon Corp., the world's largest oil company, said Monday its profits were up 118 percent for the third quarter, a time when many Americans were waiting in gas lines and worrying about the price and supply of heating oil.

Atlantic Richfield Co., the nation's seventh largest oil company, said its third-quarter profits jumped 45 percent from last year.

"It was a good quarter," Ulysses J. LaGrange, Exxon's comptroller, said of the company's $1.14 billion profits. He said, however, that most of the company's profits were not reaped at the expense of American motorists and homeowners but from big increases in earnings from the company's overseas operations.

"The big story is still overseas," LaGrange said in a telephone interview. "The governments there are recognizing this tight supply situation and they're willing to let their consumers pay more to get their share of the world oil supply.... In the U.S. we haven't even been able to pass all our costs through."

Exxon, the nation's second largest industrial firm, said the profit of $1.14 billion came to $2.60 per share of common stock. That compared with $525 million, or $1.17 per share, in the same period of 1978.

This year's third-quarter profits were the biggest in Exxon's history and among the most ever earned in a quarter by a U.S. company. Exxon's sales in the quarter rose to $20.65 billion from $15.9 billion.

Arco, based in Los Angeles, said its earnings in the third quarter were $320.4 million, or $2.60 a share, compared with $220.5 million, or $1.81 per share, a year ago. Sales in the quarter rose to $4.4 billion from $3.4 billion in 1978's third quarter.

The announcements by Exxon and Arco of the results for the July-September period followed Standard Oil Co. of Indiana's announcement Friday that its profits rose 49 percent in the quarter. Other large oil firms are expected to announce similar hefty increases in profits in the next few days.

The size of these increases will no doubt kindle a fresh wave of protests.

President Carter said Monday oil companies have adequate ability to raise money and "they want more. But it's not fair to the American people for them to have more."

At an East Room gathering for community leaders, the president made another pitch for the windfall profits tax on oil companies. He said the Senate Finance Committee version of the bill is a beginning.

Spectator leaps onto House floor; wanted to be heard

WASHINGTON (AP) — A man shouting, "I'd like to be heard," leaped from the spectators' gallery 18 feet onto the floor of the House of Representatives on Monday, but was quickly taken into custody by police.

U.S. Capitol Police identified the man as Saïeuh Mohammad Bah, 31, who gave a Washington, D.C., address.

Police said he was not injured. Bah was charged with disrupting Congress and unlawfully entering or remaining upon the floor of Congress.

Police officials said it was the first time in memory that a spectator actually leaped onto the chamber floor. People have caused disturbances many times over the years by shouting from the galleries.

The latest incident occurred about 15 minutes after the House convened for the day.

Neely Council to make final decision on whether to rejoin program board

By Leanne Waxman
Staff Writer

The Neely House Council will meet next week to make a final decision on whether the dorm will rejoin the East Campus Programming Board. Neely Hall and the ECPB went their separate ways earlier this semester.

The split occurred when the Neely House Council rescinded $1,650 in programming funds requested by the ECPB.

"We may fund them at the beginning of next semester," Neely House Council President Cindy Streit said.

Streit said she requested the 16 council representatives from the dorm floors to canvass residents for input on the decision of whether Neely Hall should rejoin the board. The council met Monday to hear the representatives' reports.

The representatives will cast their final vote the way they think residents want them to, Streit said.

The ECPB became an independent unit two years ago when the East Campus Resident Affairs Council dissolved. The board had previously been a committee of ECRAC. The board, which now plans East Campus activities and programming, is composed of house council representatives from the East Campus residence halls. The ECPB is funded completely through monies generated from council contributions of campus housing activity fee allocations to the board.

"We will welcome them back if they come back and put forth an effort," ECPB co-chairperson Ron Hearst said Monday.

The board requested that the three high-rise residence halls contribute $1,650 in CHAF funds to the board. The Triads House Council, which withheld its contribution to the board last year, was required to contribute $1,700 if it wanted its residents to be allowed to participate in activities planned through the board. The Triads council obliged the board this year.

Streit said the Neely House Council decided to freeze its $1,650 contribution after a misunderstanding occurred concerning the way the pur-

U.N. Week to be marked with seminars

This week has been designated United Nations Week at SIU-C, and Wednesday is U.N. day.

John D. Holum, a member of the U.S. State Department's planning staff, will give a lecture titled, "Gail II," Tuesday at 8 p.m. in the Student Center Auditorium as part of the weeks events planned to celebrate United Nations week.

Holum is currently a speech writer for Secretary of State Cyrus Vance. Holum previously served as chief speechwriter for George McGovern, D-S.D., in McGovern's 1972 presidential campaign. Holum became a principal foreign policy advisor in connection with McGovern's work on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Melvyn Nathanson, professor of mathematics and an expert on arms control, will lead a discussion following the film, "War Without Winners," Wednesday, U.N. Day, at 3 p.m. in the Mackinaw Room. The film will deal with the problems of nuclear war.

chasing authorization for the money was to be delivered to the board. The council thought a board representative was going to pick up the purchasing authorization and the board thought the council was going to drop off the purchasing authorization.

Jeff Moore, a graduate assistant working with the board, said it is taken to be standard procedure that the house councils are responsible for bringing the purchasing authorizations to the board. Streit said when the board did not pick up the purchasing authorization the Neely House Council interpreted it to mean it did not want the money, so the council froze the funds and eventually rescinded them.

Another dispute between the Neely House Council and the board is a $300 budget allocation for refreshments provided to residents while they are viewing films sponsored by the board. Streit said the council thought a 50 cent admission charge to the films was going to be used to provide refreshments. The council was opposed to the budget allocation for refreshments rather than admission money being used for this purpose.

Neely Hall residents are required to pay $1, rather than 50 cents to get into board sponsored films. Streit said, that at the last film shown, however, Neely Hall residents were admitted to the film for 50 cents because the people taking money were rushed and did not have time to explain to the residents the reason for the additional charge. Only three Neely Hall residents attended the last film.

Another reason cited by Streit for the split, was the inability of Neely Hall to find representatives to serve on the board. "They are worried about the time element of serving on the board," Streit said.

Since most of the students living in Neely Hall are freshmen, another problem was the lack of advertising for board sponsored activities and programming, she said. "It's partially our fault (not finding the representatives), but I think the ECPB could have generated a little interest," she said.

Streit said she didn't think the split was going to affect the quality and quantity of programming offered to Neely Hall residents since the board schedules activities very similar to activities planned for Neely Hall residents by the council.

"They're doing the same programming that dorms are with the exception of movies. We're putting our money into the floors instead of the board," she said.

Currently, the council has about $2,500 to schedule activities for Neely Hall residents. According to the board's revised budget, it is working with a total of about $7,467 to plan area-wide events and activities. "There is a great amount of spare (from Neely Hall)," Moore said.

Island's medicinal plants subject of study

By Lis Baer
Student Writer

Montserrat, an island in the West Indies, is a long way from home for an Illinois farmboy. David Brussell, an SIU-C graduate student in botany from a farm near Charleston, has been to the island twice to collect plant specimens for his work in ethnobotany.

"Ethnobotany is the study of plants useful to people for medicine, food, fiber and poisonous material," Brussell said. He will write his dissertation on the island's plant lore.

Brussell's first visit to Montserrat was for six weeks during the summer of 1977. Last winter he spent three weeks there. His fieldwork consisted of gathering and compiling information about plants and their uses by the people of the island.

"If no one records it, could very well be lost because the young people aren't getting into it," Brussell said. "I'm getting most of my information from the old people."

"In this type of investigation 50 percent of the plants have active elements readily identified," Brussell said, "and the other 50 percent turn out to be old wives' tales."

Brussell identified some plants on Montserrat which have medicinal qualities. Batroot is used to relieve pain. A tea from the inflammation bush is used as a purgative, or laxative. A treatment for cancer is produced by boiling the seeds from Jumbie beads, a legume. Half of all the medicines are derived from plants Brussell said.

Other plants he found to have poisonous properties. The Manchineel apple tree has a caustic sap containing sulfuric acid. A person sitting under the tree during a thunderstorm will begin to get blisters, Brussell said. The sap is used to remove warts. The seeds from the Black apple tree are ground and used to stupefy fish to facilitate fishing.

Sansivera, a fibrous material, is used to make rope and mats. Children make jump ropes from the plant Brussell said.

Brussell lived with the people during the six weeks he spent on the island.

"I got to know the people well enough that they entrusted their secrets to me," Brussell said. "The island is an enchanting place," Brussell said the people live simple lives of farming and fishing. He described them as "close to nature and laid back."

Brussell received his bachelor's and master's degrees in botany from Eastern Illinois University. For his post-graduate work in ethnobotany he received funding from the Pacific Tropical Botanical Gardens in Lawai, Hawaii; the Montserrat National Trust; and the Scientific Research Society of North America in New Haven, Conn.

Job, career workshop conducted for SIU faculty and staff members

By Jacqui Koszczak
Staff Writer

Most people change their jobs or their careers 11 to 15 times before they retire, and many look for a new job every 3-5 years, says Deborah Lindrud, University personnel officer.

This fact prompted the development of a six-hour workshop geared toward faculty and staff members who "wish to improve their opportunities for making satisfying career changes," Lindrud said.

She said people are frequently motivated to change their jobs because their values and goals change, current jobs are phased out by technological advances, or their career plans have been fulfilled and they are ready to move on to something else.

The workshop was conducted last year for civil service personnel, but will be expanded this year to include faculty and administrative and professional staff personnel.

The three main topics that will be discussed during the workshop are self assessment, assessment of the job market in Southern Illinois and other regions, and "selling oneself" to prospective employers, Lindrud said.

Staff members from Personnel Services and Career Planning and Placement will conduct the workshop in two sessions. The first will be held on Wednesday, and the second on Thursday from 2-5 p.m. at the Student Center.

Enrollment may be completed by contacting Personnel Services at 453-5334.

English teacher named to Illinois Writers Board

By Jacqui Koszczak

Assistant Professor of English James Paul has been selected to serve on the board of directors of Illinois Writers Inc., a statewide literary organization based in Champaign.

Paul was the featured poet at the not-for-profit organization's annual conference last year. This fall, when a position on the eight-member board was vacated unexpectedly, Paul was chosen to represent Southern Illinois.

Illinois Writers Inc. is funded by the Illinois Arts Council to promote literary readings and magazines throughout the state.

Paul said the readings are held mainly at colleges and universities, although some are conducted in Springfield and Chicago.

As the first representative from Southern Illinois on the board, Paul said he wants to arouse greater interest in literary activities in the area. He said one of his primary concerns is making the poetry reading series that he initiated this fall "a stronger and permanent feature" of the University.

He also said he hoped that literary publications in Southern Illinois, such as SIU-C's newly-created Little Egypt magazine, would benefit from his work with the organization.

Illinois Writers Inc. has a membership comprised of writers working fulltime for publications in the state, as well as freelance writers.

Aside from sponsoring readings and publications, the organization also publishes a newsletter four times a year that lists publications in the state that are looking for poetry, fiction and non-fiction submissions. Paul said the newsletter is especially helpful to freelance writers and non-professionals.

Golfers finish sixth at regional

By David Gafrick
Sports Editor

It may have been an omen. The strong wind which swept through the fairways at Purdue South golf course on the final day of the Midwest Regional at West Lafayette could have been trying to tell members of the women's golf team that they had no business being among the top teams after the first round.

Instead, SIU shot its best score in the final round to finish sixth in the final meet of the fall season. Ohio State defended its title, winning by 12 shots over second-place Marshall. SIU finished 39 shots behind the Buckeyes.

"Realistically, it's the best we could have done," Coach Mary Beth McGirr said. "I was really pleased."

"We know that 10 strokes would be the difference between sixth and 12th place."

The Salukis shot two of their best team scores in the 19-team tournament, finishing with a 36-hole total of 659. Consistency was what beat the wind.

"Out of eight scores in the two days, we had seven decent ones," said McGirr, who hoped she would not have to count scores above 85 toward the team total.

Sandy Lemon, the low Saluki scorer, finished in an 11th-place tie with Sheri Brogan of Ohio State. Lemon shot rounds of 79 and 81 for a 160. Teammate Sue Fazio, 81-83, finished with a 164.

Rose Jones, last week's champion at Indian, was the tournament medalist, finishing the tournament with a 159. Mamie McClure of Indiana was second with a 152.

Depth played another key roll. Lori Sackman, 83, and Kim Birch, 87, plus Lemon and Fazio combined to shoot a first-round score of 330. Judy Dohrmann, 80, Birch, 85, Fazio and Lemon combined for a second-round total of 329.

"All are seniors playing in their last regional," McGirr said. "That could have given them a little incentive."

If not, the wind may have.

"They were like gale winds," McGirr said. "But it was war. It could have been cold, windy and raining. This was the warmest weather we've had all year."

McGirr said many players had problems making par on the lengthier holes because of the wind. Strong gusts swept leaves on the fairways several times, covering up balls in the process. Frustration was an emotion that needed to be controlled, according to McGirr.

"It was nice to come back," said McGirr, whose team finished 15th against many of the same teams at last week's Indiana Invitational. "If you look at the teams in the tournament, four of the top five are Big Ten schools."

Spikers win two at Champaign

By Mark Pulich
Staff Writer

All of the things that women's volleyball Coach Debbie Hunter wanted to see happen in Champaign over the weekend, happened.

The Salukis won two of their three matches, came away without any injuries and got some badly needed rest, something Hunter said the team needed more than anything.

"After five weeks on the road and two big invitationals, the team was tired," Hunter said. "The matches in Champaign were slower-paced because there were only four teams.

"It was nice to play three matches in two days because it gave us some time between matches."

SIU defeated Indiana, a team the Salukis lost to earlier in the season, 7-15, 15-11, 15-9 and 15-12. Indiana, considered to be one of the strongest teams in the Midwest, did not win a match in Champaign.

"Indiana just had one of those weekends, they just couldn't get their act together against us or anyone," Hunter said.

The Salukis also handed Western Illinois a loss. SIU won in three straight games 15-12, 18-16, and 15-11. Hunter said her team was behind 11-1 before coming back and winning the second game 18-16.

"That game really showed that our team wouldn't quit," Hunter said.

Southern's only loss came to host Illinois. The Illini won the first three games of the match by close scores, of 15-12, 15-11 and 15-13. Hunter was pleased with her team's performance against Illinois.

"I really enjoyed the match," Hunter said. "They didn't have control over the match at all and our team played well."

"Illinois doesn't have a great win-loss record, but they will be one of the strongest contenders at the state tournament."

Hunter said that everyone on the team played consistently well all weekend. "The whole team did a good job," Hunter said. "We got very solid playing from Ann Cronin and Robin Deterding."

"From an experience standpoint, the weekend was good because our team is learning when to relax and when to be intense. Relaxing on the court is important. It's impossible to play intense volleyball for five straight hours at a tournament."

SIU will be hosting the Saluki Invitational tournament this coming weekend. Eight teams, including DePaul will compete for the championship title. Matches will begin Friday at 4:00 p.m. at the SIU Arena and will continue through Saturday.

"Our team is looking forward to being home for a change," Hunter said. "It's Parent's Weekend, and there will be some good competition. The tournament will be a good chance for the fans to see some top volleyball action."

SIU's Burnell Quinn seems to be taking a break during one of his runs. Quinn, a senior, needs just 35 more yards to break Amos Bullock's career record of 2,442 yards. Quinn will attempt to break the record this Saturday when the Salukis, who were idle last weekend, travel to Northern Illinois.

The Saluki basketball team will be without 6-foot-11 center Rod Camp for the 1979-80 basketball season.

According to Saluki Head Coach Joe Gottfried, the Salukis received unofficial word of Camp's ineligibility Monday. The statement is expected to become official once the NCAA's ruling in the matter is presented to University officials in writing.

Gottfried announced the NCAA's decision Monday at Saluki Media Day.

Gottfried said he does not know whether he will appeal the decision, made by a three-person board meeting in St. Louis over the weekend, until he meets with Vice President for University Relations George Mace.

Gottfried said he will not meet with Mace until official notification is received. Gottfried said it could be a period of two or three days.

According to NCAA rules, all courses which are considered to be transferable must be used to calculate a student's grade-point average.

Questions arose over whether courses failed should be retaken and passed should be taken in figuring the GPA.

"I was really optimistic," said Gottfried of his anticipation about the ruling. "I felt it was an unfair rule."

Recruits will make women cagers' offense faster

By Rod Smith
Staff Writer

An early season injury to the returning leading scorer and rebounder, eight new faces on the roster and the toughest regular season schedule in three years would make some basketball coaches skeptical about their season fortunes. Not so at SIU.

Saluki Coach Cindy Scott feels that if her lady cagers can stay healthy throughout the season and if her new recruits can gain playing experience, the team will be stronger than last year's 20-4 club that won the women's state crown.

The 1979 edition of the Saluki women's basketball team will be younger and quicker than last year's, bigger, more physical squad.

"We want to run a lot more and score off of the fast break," Scott said. "Our new recruits will give us a lot of speed."

Scott has a fine recruiting year, bringing five talented freshmen and two junior college transfers to SIU. Many of these new players will be counted on heavily early in the season.

Connie Erickson, a freshman who led Niles West High School to 29-1 record and last year's high school girls' state championship, will play point guard.

"Connie has looked good handling the ball and running the offense," Scott said. The 5-foot-7 guard averaged 7.8 assists in high school and was selected to play on the U.S. Junior National Basketball Team last summer.

The Salukis had great success in recruiting at the forward position. Alondray Rogers, a 6-foot transfer student from Shelby State Junior College in Memphis, Tenn., should bolster the rebounding at both ends of the court.

To compliment Rogers the rebounder, Scott recruited Rogers the scorer, Kellye Rogers, a freshman from Batesville, Ark. averaged 33 points per game during her final two years in high school. She scored over 40 points six times and had a high of 65 points one game.

Scott said Kellye is very good offensively, but needs work on defense.

Returning starters from last year are Sue Faber, last year's woman athlete of the year, and Lynn Williams, last year's co-captain.

Faber was last year's leading scorer, and rebounder, averaging 20.2 points and 11.1 rebounds per game. Faber, a 6-

SIU harriers take fourth at state meet

By Scott Salsauer
Staff Writer

Placing three runners in the top seven, Illinois State University's men's cross country team conquered a 40-mph wind and Illinois to win the Illinois Intercollegiate championship Saturday at Champaign. The Redbirds finished with 53 points, edging out the Fighting Illini, 55. Eastern Illinois was third, 67, and SIU placed fourth, 96.

Illinois' Jon Schmidt was the surprising individual champion with a time of 25:18.8. Eastern Illinois All-American Joe Sheeran was second, 25:32, and Saluki Mike Bisase finished third, 25:24. Karsten Schulz of SIU was 17th, 25:45.

"I'm really happy we won," said SIU Coach John Coughlan. "But because of the wind, we felt we couldn't run our kind of race. The wind kept Illinois close to us."

Despite the wind, the Redbirds got strong performances from Dave Irwin (fourth, 25:25), Mike Baker (sixth, 25:34), and Herman Sanyeh (seventh, 25:36).

For the Salukis, an unhappy tradition was continued. SIU Coach Lew Hartzog said his team has not done well in the past six state meets.

"We seem to have developed a tendency of not running well there," he said. "But if we have to trade off, I'll take winning the Missouri Valley Conference championship." The Salukis, who won the Valley last year, will try to defend their title Nov. 3, at Des Moines, Iowa.

"I can't be discouraged," Hartzog said. "I'm still not sure that if we would have run much better, we would have finished better than fourth. We knew Illinois State, Illinois and Eastern were all going to be tough."

"I did not think we ran well, but I did not think Illinois or

Mike Bisase

Illinois State ran particularly well, either."

One Saluki who could not improve much on his performance was Bisase, who continued his history of running well in important meets. The senior finished third, just six seconds behind Schmidt and two seconds behind Sheeran.

"The race was set up to favor middle-distance runners such as Schmidt and Bisase," Hartzog said. "Schmidt is Illinois' No. 1 middle-distance runner. The pace was really slow, and when you run a race like this, it doesn't tax middle-distance runners. They have the advantage because of their speed."

Hartzog said Bisase led until the fourth mile of the race, when the wind forced him to relinquish the lead.

"The fourth mile was run almost entirely into the wind," Hartzog said. "That took a lot out of him."

Hartzog said the other Salukis were able to stay in the pack until that fourth mile, when the leaders began to break away.

"The kids ran well the first three miles," he said. "With 1-4 miles to go, it was still anybody's race. But when the pack broke up, only Bisase and Karster knew what was going on."

Coughlan said, "At that point, with the wind, it became a kicker's race." That kept us from winning by a bigger margin, and it kept Southern from finishing second."

Tom Fitzpatrick of SIU finished 22nd overall, 26:11. Tom Ross was right behind him in 25th, 26:12. Mike Choffin placed 34th, 26:36, and Bill Moran finished 38th, 26:39. Chris Riegger, who Hartzog said ran well until he was spiked, was 63rd, 28:55.

"We didn't do as badly as it might look," Hartzog said. "All four teams ran hard, and the competition we ran against was very strong."

Hartzog said the Salukis, who have this weekend off, will now focus their training toward the Missouri Valley Conference meet.
