Public relations funds cut back

By Marc Chase
Senior Reporter

According to national studies, college tuition is increasing beyond the rate of inflation while funding for institutional advancement is increasing at universities nationwide, but University officials say this is not exactly the case at SIUC.

According to statistics compiled by the College Board, made up of 2,800 universities, tuition has increased by 6 percent, or about twice the rate of inflation while tuition at SIUC will increase by 3.5 percent for fall 1995.

Separate statistics from the federal government, resulting from studies of expenditures in higher education, show that money spent on public relations, marketing and fund raising is on the rise at universities across the nation.

Public relations, marketing and fund raising for SIUC are carried out by three separate organizations including University Relations, the SIU Foundation and the SIUC Alumni Association. These three organizations fall under a larger organization, Institutional Advancement.

Although the efforts of the SIUC Foundation have increased contributions collected from outside institutions by over $3 million in the last five years, University officials said SIUC still lags behind other large institutions in its fund raising efforts.

Robert Quatroche, SIUC vice president for institutional advancement, said the University still has a long way to go in its institutional advancement efforts, beginning with hiring more personnel for fund raising, marketing and public relations efforts.

"To raise money at an institution requires that money be spent up front," Quatroche said. "If we (Institutional Advancement) are successful downstream, we could have a payoff that is two-fold, three-fold or 10-fold of what the original cost for hiring fund raising personnel and other costs was."

Quatroche said the office of Institutional Advancement is relatively new, explaining why fund raising efforts have not reached higher levels.

"The money that the University raises from outside institutions amounted to about $9 million for 1994," Quatroche said. "For a university of this size, this number should probably be double what it is."

"We are a new organization though, and I am very optimistic that in time we will be where we should be."

Jack Dyer, executive director for University Relations, said SIUC's public relations budget has taken a cut of $300,000 in the past five years and this directly affects the quality of fund raising efforts.

"University relations does not do the actual fund raising, but we produce the materials (such as slide-shows and pamphlets) that are used to attract donations," Dyer said.

While many other institutions like private colleges have been raising the amount they spend on public relations, Dyer said SIUC's public relations program has been forced to cut some positions in order to reallocate the money to other programs.

He said many private colleges across the country have increased expenditures on public relations because they are not as well known as public schools and need to concentrate on active recruitment.

"What we (University Relations) have done is cut back on support staff (such as receptionists and secretaries)," Dyer said. "What we have now is people who make a

Gangs come to small towns

Graffiti shows evidence of group activity in Carbondale

By Connie Fritsche
Staff Reporter

Although gang activity is not prevalent in Carbondale or around SIUC, local law enforcement officials say evidence of gangs can be found as close as a neighborhood back door.

"Urban city has come to the rural areas," Murphysboro Police Chief Kendall Grodo said at Thursday's gang awareness meeting in Murphysboro.

Lt. Calvin Stearns, of the Carbondale Police Department, said unlike some areas in Illinois, the influx of gangs into Carbondale did not happen overnight.

Stearns said gang activity in Carbondale tends to be cyclical. He said "a group" will come to Carbondale; members will get arrested, leave and another group will come. He said the department is seeing more and more signs of gang activity overall.

At last Thursday's meeting Stearns illustrated how close gangs are to Carbondale and the University by showing slides of gang graffiti at a footbridge by Detours and on "the rocks" near the Student Recreation Center.

Stearns said gang activity in Carbondale stems from two main sources, SIUC and the Southern Illinois Community Correction House of Glass in Carbondale.

He said some of the former inmates of the correctional facility like the Carbondale area and decide to come back after release. Some of those who return have been involved in urban street gangs at home and bring those ideas back with them.

Corporal John Allen, with the SIUC Police Department, said the department has not seen any reportable "gang crimes."

"We haven't seen any violence or crimes that we can attribute directly to gang activity," he said.

Allen stressed that the department tries to stay on top of gang activity at the University.

"We are aware of what goes on,"

Kids encouraged to stay home

By Kellie Huttes

While dressing up in costumes for Halloween may be regarded as a ritual for a child, Carbondale grade school administrators are downplaying the festivities based partly on SIUC students' ideas of celebrating the event.

Larry Jacober, superintendent of Carbondale elementary schools, said the school system eliminated dressing in costumes about three years ago.

He said the University has played a big part in stopping the school's celebrations along with the cost of costumes, which create problems and separate the student body, also.

"We (school administrators) wish it would snow six inches so everybody would stay home and away from Carbondale so we can have our little community," he said. "Everyone who wants to come down here and get drunk and raise hell should just stay away."

Jacober said school teachers are discouraging door-to-door trick-or-treating and emphasizing places where the atmosphere is supervised and controlled. Teachers are focusing on a fall festival theme rather than the traditional Halloween activities.

"We don't think any of our students should be out and about this weekend," he said.

Virginia Troutman, principal of Lewis School, said students will

Center to stay open with gift of good will

By John Knitta
Staff Reporter

A goodwill gift has turned into good news for a Carbondale day care center.

By gaining community support, the Gilbert Bradley Day Care Center raised enough money to remain open.

"We had a deadline of Oct. 10 to pay the back debt of $2,200," Denise Mezo, the director of the day care center, said. "An anonymous company donated $1,500, the rest was paid through fund-raisers."

The day care center, located in the basement of the First Baptist Church of Carbondale, was originally slated to close in December.

The church's congregation had voted to shut the center down.

John Jackson, chairman for the church's board of trustees, said the church was experiencing financial difficulties, and the congregation could not continue to subsidize the center.

But now that the back debt is paid off, the center will remain open as long as they can pay the bills. Mezo said the first couple of months will be the toughest, but they should be able to manage.

"It's kind of iffy, because there is no padding in the account," she said. "But I think we can make it."

U.S. TROOPS TRY TO LOCATE FIREARMS IN HAITI —
DUFOUR, Haiti — In Dufour, a market town on a busy highway 50 miles west of the capital, Port-au-Prince, the month-old U.S. military mission remains short of the goal envisioned by the U.N. Security Council when it authorized troops to use "any and all means necessary" to restore and keep Aristide's government in power. A senior U.N. official in New York complained last week that despite this sweeping authority, U.S. soldiers are allowing the arms to stay in the hands of the same people who helped military leaders oust Aristide in a 1991 coup. As a result, U.S. military authorities may well overlook areas where remnants of the old military regime are still in power, while the slow process of locating arms caches could mean many will go unrecovered. In hopes of encouraging people to turn in their weapons, the U.S. government is offering up to $300 for firearms.

ALASKA STILL SUFFERS AFTER 1989 OIL SPILL —
TATITLEK, Alaska — From subsistence hunters to investment bankers, virtually all Alaskans have found their futures rearranged by the five-year saga that followed the Exxon Valdez oil spill, which dumped 11 million gallons of crude oil in a body of water about two-thirds the size of Lake Michigan. The $5 billion court judgment against Exxon Corp. in late summer refocused attention among Americans in the Lower 48 on the problems of Alaska's fishermen. But Alaskans worry about the deep, potentially long-term harm done to the state's two biggest industries, fish and oil. Once-healthy businesses have folded, particularly in fishing, the state's biggest employer. Oil industry layoffs have become familiar. New service industries have added jobs, but the overall wage rate has dropped. People now routinely attribute divorces partly to financial stress from the spill.

STUDY: STRESS HORMONE AFFECTS MEMORY —
Experiences that trigger a strong emotional response are the stuff of vivid memories: For instance, most Americans who were alive on the day President John F. Kennedy was shot can recall exactly where they were when they heard the news. A new study suggests that the memory of such events is strong because the body's "stress hormone system" affects the way the brain processes the experience. Neurobiology researchers tested volunteers by telling them a story about a boy who gets hit by a car while crossing a road. Before hearing the story, one group of volunteers was given propranolol, a drug that blocks the activation of nerve receptors that respond to adrenalin. A second group was given a placebo. When questioned a week later, the placebo group recalled more details about the story. The findings suggest that the adrenalin-responsive part of the nervous system assists in the formation of memories of emotionally laden events.

SLOW GOVERNMENT CHANGE UPSETS VOTERS —
WASHINGTON — Two years ago, more than 100 new members of Congress came to town in the same election that saw Bill Clinton replace George Bush in the White House. It was an election about change and ending business as usual in Washington, and many promises were made. In two weeks, these politicians again will face the public. But even in those parts of the country that sent someone new to Congress, the voters are dissatisfied with the pace of change in Washington. A new Washington Post survey suggests that many of those same voters in districts that threw out incumbents or the incumbent party in 1992 are restless once again and appear willing to dump even the newly minted representatives they embraced on election day two years ago.

City, USG plan safe Halloween

By Chad Anderson
Staff Reporter

A meeting between Carbondale city officials and SIUC's Undergraduate Student Government has both sides looking forward to a safe and enjoyable Halloween celebration.

USG presented ideas for a safer Halloween and discussed its plans for the clean up of the Halloween aftermath in a meeting last Thursday with various city officials.

Matthew Parsons, USG chief of staff, said he thought USG was able to make the points they wanted.

"It went real well," he said. "I made it clear that it's important to point out that this committee won't be done after this Halloween. We'll start the day after (Halloween) to plan for next year."

Carbondale Mayor Neil Dillard also agreed the meeting went good, and thought the two parties communicated well.

He said the only disagreements between USG and the City were about the restrictions city council placed on bars for the Halloween

"We were both on the same wavelength," Dillard said. "We both want a safe weekend for the citizens of Carbondale."

"I think some people were having some remarks taken out of context. We (the city and USG) always communicated well. Brad Kelley and Chris Brueley have done an excellent job addressing the issues. We've thought the same all along," Dillard said.

USG plans to be on the Strip during the Halloween weekend in an attempt to keep people calm by talking to them as friends and not as authority figures while leaving the bars.

Members will also distribute condoms, candy, and directions to bars open past 10 p.m.

USG also will clean up the Strip on Sunday, Oct. 30.

Sam Jordan, SIUC chief of police, said he believes the safety committee is well organized committee that is truly concerned about the safety of students.

"I think if you have a dialogue and willingness to work together, things come out well," he said.

Colleges reward students for positive lifestyles

By Stephanie Moletti
Senior Reporter

Students who live a positive lifestyle containing low-risk use of alcohol, tobacco or other drugs have the opportunity to be rewarded for their choices.

The Midwest Consortium Positive Lifestyle Award provides a monetary award for students and recognition to faculty and staff.

Barb Fijolek, wellness coordinator for the Wellness Center, said the consortium is a group of area colleges that have joined together to help deal with substance abuse on campus.

"Most colleges have just a few people who deal with the problem on campus and sometimes you feel isolated," Fijolek said.

"This just gives the colleges the opportunity to share ideas (on substance abuse)."

Fijolek said the group has a small budget but decided last year for the first time, to give back to the students.

"We decided to try something other than don't do this or that, but to give back to the students who are really trying to live a positive life," she said.

"You don't have to be a non-drinker, but be someone who is safe and healthy."

Fijolek said the term positive lifestyle means different things to different people.

"I would define it as someone who cares for their self as well as cares about others," she said. "It's giving as well as receiving."

The center has its own test for determining a positive lifestyle, by taking the word "species" and applying the following terms: social, physical, emotional, career, intellectual, ecological or environmental, and spiritual.

There are three categories for contestants:

Full-time students with a grade point average of 2.5 or better; students with 12 credit hours completed prior to application; and lastly, students currently registered for 12 credit hours or more.

One prize of $250 will be given to the winner of this category.

Part-time students are eligible with a 2.5 GPA or better, 12 credit hours completed prior to application and current registration for 6 to 12 credit hours.

The winner of this category will receive an award of $250.

SIUC full or part-time administrators; faculty and staff make up the third category.

However, employees must be nominated by a fellow employee. The winner will receive recognition and a plaque.

The winning university will receive a rotating award, which can be displayed for one year, until the next contest.

Student applicants must submit a letter of application including name, address, social security number, an official copy of their transcript, and their hometown address.

Professor hunts for best method of weed control in soybean crops

By Diane Dove
Staff Reporter

An SIUC professor is working at the forefront of research to grow soybean crops in a less expensive and possibly more environmentally-safe way.

George Kapusta, professor in plant and soil science, is receiving continued support of his soybean weed control research to find the best means of weed-control in no-till soybean crop production.

Kapusta said his research has led to continued advancement of weed control in no-till soybean farming and weed control advancements with biotechnology.

"Our work is among the leading work in no-till soybean production," he said. "There are herbicides (which) when normally used would kill soybeans, but with herbicides made with biotechnology, the soybeans are now tolerant."

No-till farming, Kapusta said, involves planting crops into the field without disturbing the soil, a process which is less expensive and time-consuming and conserves the soil.

"When farmers no-till, weed control takes on a much different dimension," he said. "Weed control depends entirely on herbicides with no-till farming, so we have done a lot of research over the years on how to control weeds in our no-till soybean growing."

Kapusta said his study, supported by the Illinois Soybean Program Operating Board since 1980, will continue as long as he receives grants to cover research expenses.

His most recent award of $22,000, which he received last May, is to cover costs, which include paying research assistants and the purchase of supplies for one year, he said. Soybean weed control is important to Illinois farmers because the state produces approximately 13 percent of the nation's crop for soybean meal, animal feed, soy ink and other uses, Kapusta said.

"Without soybeans in Southern Illinois, farming would be much less successful and much less profitable," he said.

Kapusta said the farming community needs to know more about the proper use of herbicides because of an increase in no-till soybean farming during the last five years.

Among things Kapusta has researched is the best times to apply herbicides and which herbicides are the best or the most effective combination.

"With no-till, farmers need less equipment and smaller equipment," he said. "It's much less expensive to farm no-till than till and much more time-saving."

Kapusta said his research also could benefit the environment, as well as farmers, by helping them reduce the amount of herbicides being used.

Michael Tweedy, a plant and soil science graduate assistant, said the herbicides are environmentally safe if instructions are followed when used.

"It's as important for us to protect the environment as it is for everyone else because this is our livelihood," he said. "People perceive chemical use as negative. But if people follow directions there shouldn't be concern."

Michelle Obermeier, also a graduate assistant in plant and soil science, said no-till soybean farming is beneficial to the environment because it reduces erosion and adds nitrogen to the soil.

The day everything was right in the world

OCTOBER 24 MAY HAVE BEEN A DAY FOR THE record books. It was, quite possibly, the day all the planets fell into line, the day the air smelled new, the birds chirped and everything was right with the world.

In search of a topic in need of commentary for October 24 the Daily Egyptian editorial staff scoured the campus for an issue of concern to all students. The hope, as is the case with all editorials, was to find a program or funding issue being bungled by the administration or a gross misappropriation of funds to expose and bombard with criticism.

However, as the editorial eye swept the horizon for something to lock onto, we noticed a developing and unnerving trend. Nothing seemed to be going particularly wrong. Our first thought centered on the ever-popular topic of parking on campus. Why, we asked, were there no red parking spaces provided in the new Biological Sciences building? Surely this was another example of an underlying parking conspiracy designed to frustrate the students. But a phone call to the parking division revealed that the science building lot was entirely blue because lot four had been made entirely red, actually increasing the overall number of red spaces on campus.

Then came the inspired idea of turning to the good old target: the fuzz. The Beach Bumz incident in which Carbondale Police shut down a band for noise violations gave hope for a good editorial. We salivated at the thought of a free speech "down with the cops" piece. But again we found that things were handled pretty much by the book and no gross injustices were committed. Foiled again. Even Halloweenfest was beginning to look too tame for comment.

IN FEAR FOR OUR JOBS, WE STRUGGLED desperately to come up with something, anything, to gripe about. We even looked to the sky for inspiration in hopes that the thunderstorms would hold and the season's rotten weather could be condemned. But with the lousy rose-colored trend continuing, the clouds parted and Monday turned into a warm and sunny October afternoon.

So, we turned our critical eyes toward the international scene to look for a foreign crisis begging to be lambasted. Bad news again. We found an upbeat nation in Mozambique preparing for its first democratic elections. And, much to our chagrin, the talks in the Middle East between Israel and the PLO seem to be going better than anticipated. In a final stroke, the world is being made safer with North Korea's shelving of weapons-grade reactors, and there seemed to be no room left in the world for a hardened, pessimistic editorial writer.

IT IS OUR SINCERE HOPE THAT YOU GOT OUT Monday and frolicked in what was possibly the first, and more than likely last, perfect day. But, rest assured when you roll out of bed at 9:15 for your eight o'clock midterm, get a ticket on the way and find out the test was Thursday, everything will be back to normal.

Alley artist closes censored exhibit

I still believe SPC unfairly censored my work, but I think it is forgivable since what happened is mere miscommunication: SPC had no regulating policies in place. While it is true that I did not specifically propose the censored piece because I had not yet conceived it, neither did SPC notify me that my current work needed to be reviewed before exhibition. Don Castle even admitted that it was not my fault in Wednesday's article.

What is unforgivable however, is that I have been discriminated against in the SPC has given me stricter standards to adhere to than other artists on display in Art Alley.

due to my art's homosexual content. For instance, ordinarily an artist needs only the approval of the Fine Arts Committee in order to exhibit; I had to get the Fine Arts Committee's, the Student Programming Council's, and the Student Center Director's approval. (Fine Arts approved my exhibit last Thursday, but SPC disapproved it on Friday.)

Then SPC told me a comment book was required of all artists, so they placed one in front of my exhibit. But not Wanda Braden-Taylor's next door. And Ted Smith still insists that the content of my art has anything to do with this? If this is true, then why did SPC remove the black paper to review my art three times before voting on it? If procedure was the only thing SPC judged, then they had no reason to examine the portion they censored. Something smells in this alley if only certain people have to adhere to its "policies".

I would like to invite anyone who has not seen the censored work, and all people against censorship to attend the closing of my exhibit on Tuesday, October 25 at 5 p.m. in Art Alley.

Politicians are sharks, fail in serving citizens

Well the election draws closer and we are surrounded with dishonest politicians making promises they have no intention of keeping.

For some reason they all remind me of a shark smiling. In our hearts we know the politicians are really greed goblins out for themselves and working against our interests.

Like cheap prostitutes they sell themselves to the PAC's, the lobbyists, and the special interests.

Almost every single one is on the take, the only question is which pair of fat grasping little hands will collect the pay-offs faster.

Unlike the average working man or woman, politicians produce nothing of value but instead rake in the cash being offered from equally corrupt and non-productive class of crooked businessmen.

These people have no morality, no humanity, no sensitivity, and no shame. While the masses continue to toil and try to be honest the leaders have forgotten what work is and only try to lie more and more convincingly. Many parts of society have stopped working under their leadership but the game goes on.

If our flag were to accurately portray what our politicians stand for we would change it into a picture of a dollar bill. Both parties are responsible. Many people would like to believe the system is not as bad as I am portraying it. I would like to remind such people that denial is not a river in North Africa.

This great nation cannot solve the problem of its deep corruption until we can admit to the fact of the existence of the problem.

If you think it's not out of control ask yourself why so few politicians have promised to refuse PAC and lobbyist money. Many people are asking them to do so now.

Do you hear any response? Let's ask again.

City problems are larger than Halloween party

I cannot believe that this city does not have bigger problems to worry about. However, city council still chooses to waste paper and time with the Halloween saga. The situation is inevitable. If you want to solve the problem, do what has been done in the past: get together with the university and send everyone home.

I do not know what benefits the city council are trying to gain. The police officers will still face the same problems. As it stands, there are going to be drunks spread throughout Carbondale, instead of one confined area.

This Halloween dilemma is as big a farce as the O.J. Simpson trial. It is decisions like this by the city council that make me appreciate not being a permanent resident of Carbondale.

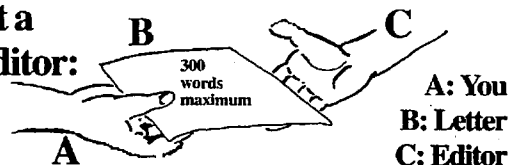

—Brian Deluca, senior theater

Outside Contributions to SIUC

Although outside donations have increased over the past few years, University officials feel they have not increased sufficiently for a University of SIUC's size.

COSTUMES, from page 1

receive treats from Parent Teacher Association members Monday, but will not dress up because of time considerations, costs and city rulings.

"We (teachers) didn't want to allot that much time for students to dress up," she said. "In doing that we thought we would support the city's efforts to de-emphasize Halloween activities."

Also, the cost of costumes have increased over the years and some students and their families cannot afford to dress up, she said.

"We considered how much money costumes are and the children who cannot afford them. Those children are frequently reduced to tears on that day."

Trountman said she also is encouraging students to attend SIUC's Safe Halloween celebration.

Mack Shwab, chair of the event, said all the University fraternities and sororities are helping with the event by providing games and candy to an expected 500-1,000 member costumed crowd.

The event will be in Student Center Ballroom D tonight from 7 p.m. until the candy is gone, he said.

Shwab said more than 20 prizes will be given away to children in grades kindergarten to eighth grade.

"This is the biggest philanthropy SIUC does," he said. "This is a real fun, safe thing to do that will be enjoyable for all ages."

There will be a haunted house in Ballroom C.

Carla Putrich, University Mall marketing director, said the mall has sponsored a night of trick-or-treating and costume judging for children for three years.

"It gives the kids a safe environment to trick-or-treat and the parents don't have to worry about them," she said.

Last year more than 600 children attended the trick-or-treat night.

All the merchants will pass out candy to children and a costume parade and judging will take place in the Grand Court at 5:30 p.m. Monday.

Trick-or-treating throughout the mall will be from 6 to 7 p.m.

Putrich said children enrolled in the University Mall Kids Club will receive candy bags with stickers.

sound dollar who are, also answering phone calls."

Dyer said although University Relations has had to cut back substantially as a result of decreasing state funds for higher education, all programs at SIUC have witnessed cut-backs for the same reason.

SIUC President John Guyon has said it has been necessary for the University to cut many programs, such as a doctoral program in physical education, to make up for a lack of state funding.

Dorothy McCombs, associate director of University Relations, said the only way for University Relations to deal with cuts in state funding is to make cuts in the payroll because other functions of the program are necessary for the operation of SIUC.

"These cuts are an ongoing process," McCombs said. "A lot of people think of University Relations as strictly public relations for the University. This is not true. We perform many duties on the very stake of the University depends."

"The only way to do what we have to do to make up for state cuts is to adjust salaries of workers."

According to University Relations documents, fourteen positions have been cut from the program in the past five years, including graphic designers, editors and secretaries.

increase funding is a fee increase at the center of $10 per week for infants and $5 for toddlers. All the parents have agreed to pay the fee increase.

"The parents are fully willing to pay what we have to pay to keep it going," said Michelle Vieira, the parent representative for the center. "By raising fees we will have an additional $500 per month."

The parents of children attending the day-care center campaigned hard and got the support they were looking for. Through fund-raisers, community members helped keep the center open.

"I think we were really supported by the community," Mezo said.

Allen said. "We are very cognizant of when they show up and from time to time we do discover gang graffiti and signs."

Searns said Carbondale has not seen a great deal of gang violence partially because the aspect of "staking out" an area as gang territory is not widespread.

Searns said the one incident that stood out in his mind is a shooting in February. He said he did not know whether the shooting was gang related, but said all of those involved were gang members. Searns said prevention measures to combat gang activity, for the most part, has to start at home.

Searns also said the city is trying to implement an anti-graffiti ordinance that will make property owners responsible for covering graffiti on their property.

He said the best thing the community can do is to be supportive of the department's efforts, including the anti-graffiti ordinance.

"The police are not going to be the ones to solve this. It's going to take parent involvement, school involvement and community support," Searns said.

tion, students must submit a 300 to 500 word description of life experiences which have led them to lead a positive lifestyle, two letters of recommendation from faculty or professional staff from their university and one personal reference.

To nominate an employee, a fellow employee must submit a letter explaining why the individual is being nominated, with additional information regarding the employee's commitment to role modeling for the entire college community. The nominees must display a positive lifestyle. The nomination should be supported by two letters of recommendation from fellow employees.

All applications must be submitted by Dec. 15 to Fijolek at the Wellness Center, campus mail code 6802.

word processing."

The class, which focuses on managerial decision making, often has students who have never worked with computers, he said.

Harris introduced computers to his students after persuading the manufacturer of a farm business software system to develop an inexpensive student version of its financial accounting software.

Though he thinks the use of computers in agriculture is reflective of computer use in society at large, Harris said the field could benefit from increased use of computers.

"I think probably every class has an aspect of it that could have a computer component added to it," he said.

"I think at some point almost everything in agriculture will have computer aspects with it."

MEETING, from page 3

Jordan said the Carbondale police and SIUC police will work together this weekend to try and control the Strip.

The two departments will work side by side with officers working as partners.

"We're trying to have as safe and quiet as Halloween as possible, and we want to make the citizens of Carbondale aware of that," Dillard said.

The meeting was also attended by USG president Edwin Sawyer, City Manager Jeff Doherty, USG City Affairs commissioner Chris Bruely, and Chief of Police Don Strom.

Aspiring artists vie for prizes

By Aleksandra Macys
Senior Reporter

Starving artists wanting to display art pieces may find some monetary relief if their works are selected as winners in the Seventh Annual Undergraduate Art Show.

Theodore Smith, fine arts chairperson of the Student Programming Council, said all types of art works will be accepted for the show, from paintings to sculpture to photography.

Ron Dunkel, coordinator of the Student Center Craft Shop, said there have been all types of pieces in previous years of the show.

"We've had everything you could possibly imagine — from trashy stuff to real nice stuff,"

Dunkel said.

Smith said more than 250 pieces were submitted last year for the show, which helped many artists get their names recognized in the community.

Judges from the Associate Art Gallery, the School of Art and Design and the Cinema and Photography Department will judge the pieces and select 30 pieces to be displayed in Art Alley.

The judges will select three winners from the 30 pieces.

The first place prize is a $200 grant from the Art and Design Department, the second place prize is a $100 grant from the Cinema and Photography Department and the third place prize is a $75 gift certificate from the University Book Store.

The winners will be announced and awards will be given at a reception 7 p.m. Friday in front of Art Alley, where the pieces will be displayed through Nov. 17.

Interested full-time SIUC students may drop off up to two pieces of art between 9 a.m. and 2 p.m. Wednesday in the Student Center Ballroom B and be available between 5:30 and 6 p.m. to see if their piece was selected.

All entries must be self-conceived and a product made by the entrant and all works must be presented in a proper state for display.

The show is sponsored by SPC's Fine Arts Committee. For more information about the show, contact SPC at 536-3393.

Plates celebrate 125-year history

By Stephanie Moletti
Senior Reporter

Salukis have the opportunity to display their pride in the University in conjunction with its 125th anniversary.

The SIU Alumni Association is offering SIUC 125th Anniversary License Plates, with proceeds from the sale going toward student and alumni programs, according to Greg Scott, assistant director of student and alumni relations for the association.

The plates are on sale now and the display period, the period of time in which the plates are legal to display on one's vehicle, is Nov. 2 to Dec. 31.

Only 200 of the plates are made available. Students and alumni may purchase the plates after the display period if they are still available, Scott said.

"We have a lot of orders coming in and a lot of people interested," Scott said. "Collectors are calling up requesting certain numbers — I'm getting 91, because that's the year I graduated."

Those interested in displaying the plates during the legal two-month period must be Illinois residents. A copy of their vehicle's registration and a check in the amount of $40 for association members and $50 for non-members, made payable to SIUC, must accompany an order. Form are available at the association's office.

The plates are available on a first come first serve basis.

UNFORTUNATELY, THIS IS WHERE PEOPLE ARE PUTTING TOO MANY RETIREMENT DOLLARS.

Every year, a lot of people make a huge mistake on their taxes. They don't take advantage of tax deferral and wind up sending Uncle Sam money they could be saving for retirement.

Fortunately, that's a mistake you can easily avoid with TIAA-CREF SRAs. SRAs not only ease your current tax bite, they offer a remarkably easy way to build retirement income—especially for the "extras" that your regular pension and Social Security benefits may not cover. Because your contributions are made in before-tax dollars, you pay less taxes now. And since all earnings on your SRA are tax-deferred as well, the money you don't send to Washington works even harder for you. Down the road, that can make a dramatic difference in your quality of life.

What else makes SRAs so special? A range of allocation choices—from the guaranteed security of TIAA to the diversified investment accounts of CREF's variable annuity—all backed by the nation's number one retirement system.

Why write off the chance for a more rewarding retirement? Call today and learn more about how TIAA-CREF SRAs can help you enjoy many happy returns.

Benefit now from tax deferral. Call our SRA hotline 1 800-842-2733, ext. 8016.

Ensuring the future
for those who shape it.™

CREF certificates are distributed by TIAA-CREF Individual and Institutional Services. For more complete information, including charges and expenses, call 1 800 842 2733, ext. 8016 for a prospectus. Read the prospectus carefully before you invest or send money.

Now in CFL, Flutie still proves worth

Newsday

HAMILTON, Ontario—Give him just one more last chance, pleads Doug Flutie. He is peeling tape off his ankles, sitting at his locker in his red football pants and sweaty gray T-shirt, muttering: "All I know is, there's still a second on that clock. At least a second."

It is 10 years since his so-called "Hail Mary" pass, that 48-yard lightning bolt that lifted Boston College past Miami on Thanksgiving weekend, 47-45, as time expired. That pass, one of football's most unlikely and memorable, conjured by one of the smallest men on the field for a national TV audience, virtually won Flutie the 1984 Heisman Trophy and, more than that, painted the official portrait of Flutie: Miracle worker. Patron of lost causes. When Colorado's Kordell Stewart, a month ago, threw a 64-yard Flutie on the last play of the game to stun Michigan, "everybody compared it to mine," Flutie noticed. Which was both a compliment and, somehow, an affront: As if that were the only play Flutie ever made. As if, in spite of that play and all that goes before and after it, Flutie still must prove that he is big and fast enough to play this sport at the highest level.

And he sits in a Canadian Football League locker room last week, summarily peeved over the unjust loss of one second. At least one second.

His first-place CFL team, the Calgary Stampeders, had just lost to the Hamilton Tiger-Cats, 27-24.

In the CFL, with the goal posts situated on the goal line, that put Calgary in position for the tying field goal, and overtime. But, as Calgary receiver Pee Wee Smith scrambled off the turf after the 29-yard gain, the game ended.

"I looked at Pee Wee and then I looked at the clock and I saw it change from 2 to 1 to zero," Flutie insisted. "That's B.S.; absolute B.S. That's aggravating. I mean, the whistles are in those guys' mouths. All they have to do is blow them when he hits the ground."

In high school, Flutie's Natick, Mass., team was losing to Braintree with 30 seconds to play when Flutie marched his team into field-goal range and, though he never had attempted a field goal before, he kicked the winning 36-yarder.

He was a fourth-string freshman quarterback at Boston College when he was called off the bench in the fourth quarter against Penn State and threw for 135 yards and a touchdown. "It was like somebody flicked on a switch," said Jack Bicknell, his coach at the time.

Over and over, for years and years, he has caused hardened old football people to shake their heads with a reverence that would set chills to singing "Amazing Grace."

Watch closely. Not drafted until the 11th round by the Los Angeles Rams, Flutie opted for Donald Trump's USFL New Jersey Generals in 1985 and didn't make it to the NFL until the Chicago Bears signed him midway through the 1986 season. He still was considered too small — listed as 5-9 at B.C. — but in his first NFL start, late in the '86 season, he quarterbacked an upset against Dallas.

some are even Hall of Fame inductees themselves, so they know who deserves to be in the Hall," Strickland said.

Cornell, who was born in Chelmsford, England, said he was lucky to get the job because he had already gone back to England after receiving his master's degree from SIUC.

"After I graduated there were no coaching opportunities available so Rose (his wife) and I went back to England and then Murray State called and asked if I would like interview for the job," he said. "I told them I did not have the money to come back for just an interview, but they said it would be worth my while."

Margaret Simmons, who is the assistant athletic director at Murray State and former women's coach in cross country and track when Cornell was men's coach, said he was a good leader.

"He was a tough coach, but he was and still is respected by his men," she said. "Bill and his men were very close."

Cornell still holds SIUC records in the mile and 1,500 meters. Simmons, who is also one of the four MSU inductees, said one of the reasons Cornell gained respect from his runners was because he had done what he expected from his athletes.

"He would run home, which was 15-20 miles off campus, just to get something and his men knew his accomplishments as a runner, so they really respected him," she said. "Whenever some of his former runners come back to Murray State they always ask about him."

Cornell said he left Murray State when he had a chance to coach at his Alma-mater, SIUC in 1982.

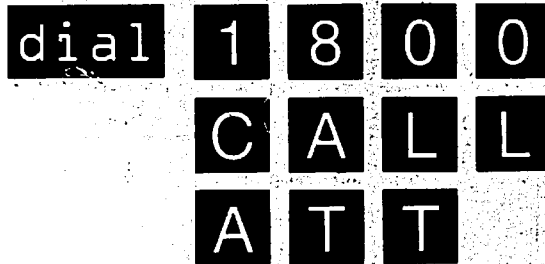

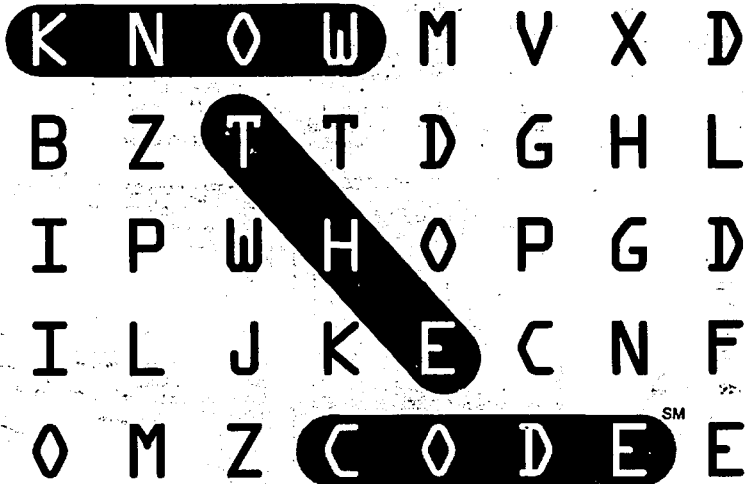

The induction ceremony will be on the Murray State campus at the Kurris Center beginning at 6:30 p.m. on Oct. 27.

president of Internal Affairs, said that the success of this years tournament is much greater than in years past.

"The organization of the tournament has made it run much smoother than last year. Last year doesn't even compare to this year," he said. "The competition is better, and the level of competition is higher than last year."

Tickets for the Palestine/Greek Originals game will cost two dollars. The proceeds from ticket sales will go to cancer research in the Carbondale area and to the family of Erick Enriquez, a former member of the ISC who recently passed away.

Cornell re-enters Murray State's 'Hall'

By Doug Durso
Senior Reporter

Murray State University will be inducting four members into its Sports Hall of Fame Thursday and one of those is an SIUC graduate who has gained recognition both as a runner and a coach.

Bill Cornell, SIUC men's cross country and track coach, has been selected to be inducted into the Murray State Hall of Fame on Oct. 27.

Cornell was the men's cross country and track coach for the Racers from 1967 to 1982, where he won three Ohio Valley Conference Championships and earned four OVC Coach-of-the-Year awards.

Cornell said he was not expecting to be named to the Murray State Hall of Fame.

"When the athletic director of Murray State called me up I was afraid one of my friends was sick, but when he started talking about the Hall of Fame I thought of my former athletes was getting inducted," he said. "I was surprised when he said he was talking about me."

Inducted into the SIUC Hall of Fame in 1980 as a runner, Cornell said being inducted as a coach is special.

"It's a real honor because when you leave a place they usually forget about you, so being inducted as a coach is really nice," he said.

Athletic Director at Murray State, Mike Strickland said Cornell was deserving of the honor.

"Bill did a marvelous job as track coach when he was here and is very worthy," he said. "He won conference championships and coached several Olympians on his team."

Cornell coached seven different Olympians and 28 of his Murray State athletes became All-Americans.

Strickland said the OVC was great in track during Cornell's coaching days, which made his accomplishments even better.

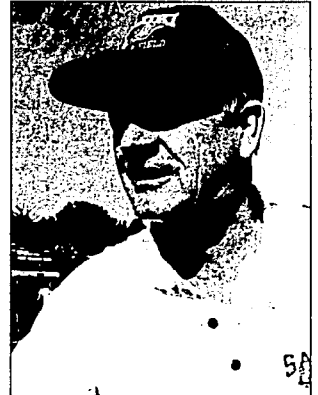

The Racers were in a conference that had Western Kentucky, who finished second in the NCAA's during a year in Cornell's reign and Eastern Tennessee was always a national power.

"My first year here (MSU) we finished in last place because I didn't get a chance to recruit yet, but the next year we won the conference," Cornell said.

Inductees are voted into the Murray State Sports Hall of Fame by a secret committee who has been associated with the University for many years. The committee usually picks three to five inductees a year, but each potential Hall of Fame inductee must have been out for at least five years.

"The people on the committee have been around Murray State sports for a long time,

Dawgs off hook, temporarily

When the Saluki football squad finally got its first win Saturday, a lot of people were taken off the hook.

SIUC head coach Shawn Watson and his staff are off the hook — temporarily.

Fans will quickly forget the 10-7 upset of No. 16 Western Kentucky and demand the victories on a consistent basis. People don't care if it's a coach's first year or that it takes time to build a program.

We all know the old Oakland Raiders saying — "Just win, baby."

Good luck guys, you have taken the first step, but the road back to glory is a long one.

SIUC Director of Athletics Jim Hart is temporarily off the hook.

Hart is the man who brought Watson in to turn the Saluki football program around and a winless season would have undoubtedly caused people to question his selection.

Even if the Dawgs don't win another game this season — the WKU upset delivered a glimmer of hope for the future and showed Hart made a solid choice in Watson.

But if the new coach takes his own sweet Bob Smith time to bring SIUC a gridiron winner — Mr. Hart is back up on the you know what.

Saluki quarterback Dave Pierson is off the hook.

After a troubling off-season and a rocky start, the senior QB from Norwalk, Calif. came up with the biggest victory of his career.

Watson brought in backup Matt Jones for a series against WKU to try and inspire Pierson to another level — and apparently it worked.

Pierson connected on 19-of-35 passing attempts for 256 yards and a touchdown. But most importantly, he led a crucial third quarter scoring drive to give SIUC a 10-7 advantage.

Up until Saturday, the Saluki offense had been virtually stagnant during the second half in all of its games.

Be careful, though, Dave, the QB is always either the hero or the goat.

The entire Saluki defense is off the hook.

After giving up over 33 points per game in 1993, the Dawg "D" came up big Saturday under first-year defensive coordinator Linwood Ferguson.

The Hilltoppers were averaging 28 points a game coming in behind its complicated flex-bone offense.

The Dawgs knocked WKU starting quarterback J.J. Jewell out of the game in the first quarter and held tailback Antwan Floyd in check.

SIUC linebacker Tony Seman racked up 20 tackles (10 solo) on the night in addition to his forced fumble and interception.

The Saluki freshman defensive end tandem of Arglita Scott and Ryan Smith received high praise from Watson after the game.

while junior strong safety Darnell Hendricks came up with big plays from the secondary.

Defense wins championships. Can this group remain consistent?

And last, but certainly not least, I am off the hook.

No longer will I have to answer the question around campus: "Do you think we'll win a game this year?"

Coming into the season I predicted a 2-9 finish for the Dawgs.

However, after blowing the UT-Martin, Western Illinois and Southeast Missouri State games — I changed my tune to 0-11.

But after pulling off maybe the biggest upset in Division I-AA football all year — How about 4-7?

That's right — the Dawgs will win three of their four remaining games.

There, I said it.

Now I'm off the hook, too — temporarily. Victory sure is sweet.

Greek Originals, Palestine advance to ISC finals

By Chris Clark
Staff Reporter

The stage is set for the International Student Council soccer tournament championship game, as Palestine and the Greek Originals advanced to the Finals after hard fought semi-final victories Sunday.

In the first game, Palestine battled Malaysia International. After 90 minutes of regulation, the game was tied 1-1. The teams then went through 30 minutes of overtime, with neither able to put the ball past the goalkeeper. The game then went into penalty kicks, where Palestine prevailed and won the game 4-3.

Palestine has now played two overtime games in two weeks defeating Latin Japan Oct. 15 on sudden-death penalty kicks after 30 minutes and one round of penalty kicks failed to settle the score.

The second half of the semi-finals matched the Greek Originals against United Africa.

United Africa got out to a quick lead in the first half, but the Greek Originals tied the score and went ahead 2-1 just before halftime. United Africa tied the score on another early goal in the second half.

That would be the last goal United Africa would score, as the Greek Originals went on to score three unanswered goals to claim the 5-3 victory.

Greek Originals team captain Yiannis Gavielides said that although Palestine is a tough team, he feels the Originals can defeat them.

"If we play the way we can and have been playing, Palestine is a team that we can beat," he said.

"We have to play good defense because you can't predict anything in soccer. The ball is round and can take some funny bounces during a game."

The championship game will be held at noon on Jean Stehr Field after the consolation game between Malaysia International and United Africa at 10 a.m. There will be a marching band and the ISC is even looking for local television coverage of the event.
