Search continues for Law dean

By Paula D. Walter
Staff Writer

Wanted: Dean of small, Southern Illinois law school. Qualifications sought: Mature administrator, great person, preferably a Hiram Lesar. After a year-long search for a dean for the SIU-C School of Law, Associate Dean David Johnson said in his mind the "perfect replacement" for Dean Lesar would be Dean Lesar. "Personally, I'd like to have Lesar stay on forever. He's a marvelous administrator and I think the possibility of his staying or is in the back of all our (faculty) minds," Johnson said Tuesday.

Search for a replacement for Lesar began in September, 1978, after he announced his retirement, effective May 1979. However, his retirement was postponed until this August after the school failed to find a successor.

In the meantime, Lesar was named acting president of SIU-

C after Warren Brandt resigned in April. He is now serving in the dual role of president and Law School dean, for the second time in five years. He served in those positions in 1974 after David Derge resigned as president.

Johnson said the position of Law School dean has not been very popular lately, due to the amount of bureaucracy which is included in the job.

Irvin: Law student merger unlikely

By Diana Penner
Staff Writer

The Student Senate last week was presented with possible alternatives regarding the controversy between law students and graduate students by Undergraduate Student Organization President Pete Alexander.

Some of the proposals discussed would involve the USO in a solution to the current dispute between the graduate and law students. Alexander said that he wanted to make the senate aware of long and short range implications that the dispute may have, and how these could affect the USO.

Stan Irvin, law school representative to the Graduate Student Council, said he wanted to make clear that he had not made the proposals, but that Alexander had written them.

Irvin said he had been asked to explain the controversy in the GSC to the senate, but that he had not been aware of the proposals on the senate agenda until just before the meeting. Alexander said that he wanted the senate to discuss the problem because he is striving for greater cooperation between the GSC and the USO this year. The author of the proposals was not listed on the agenda.

Irvin said that though he could not speak for the law students officially, he felt that they would lean toward resolving the dispute internally. Some law students have alleged unequal distribution of activity fees by the GSC.

Irvin added that the law students would probably be less likely to affiliate with the USO than to remain with the GSC, because the USO represents undergraduate students, and undergraduates have fewer common goals with professional students than do graduate students.

ISSC student vote OK'd by Thompson

By Joe Sobczyk
Staff Writer

Gov. James Thompson will be appointing the first voting student member of the Illinois State Scholarship Commission "within the next month," Ed Webb, director of Illinois board and commissions, said Tuesday.

Thompson signed the bill authorizing the creation of a new student position on the ISSC Monday.

The new law will increase the membership of the ISSC from seven to nine with one new position to be filled by a non-student. Thompson's action marks the first time a student will be given full voting privileges on a higher education governing body.

Webb said the governor will solicit nominations to fill the position from several multi-campus student organizations. Those groups sending lists of nominees to Thompson will include, but are not limited to, the Illinois Student Association, the Organization of Community College Students and the Student Advisory Committee to the Illinois Board of Higher Education.

The student selected by Thompson to represent student interests to the ISSC will serve a two-year term, beginning July 1 of each odd numbered year. In addition, the student representative will not be eligible to receive any grants or scholarship awarded by the ISSC during his or her term of office.

Although the bill had received some negative reactions from current members of the ISSC, Webb said it sailed right through both houses.

"It had pretty wide acceptance," he said.

The bill was passed in late June by both houses of the General Assembly.

Ricardo Caballero-Aquino, a former member of the IBHE's Student Advisory Committee, said the bill's passage was the culmination of lobbying efforts by statewide student organizations to make the ISSC more responsive to the needs of those enrolled in Illinois' universities.

27 law students oppose GSC constituency split

By Charity Gould
Staff Writer

Law students do not feel "special" and some students do not want to split from the Graduate Student Council, Sue Myerscough said in a letter to the editor printed in Friday's issue of the Daily Egyptian.

Confirming her letter and stating her position again Tuesday, Myerscough, who is also president of Moot Court— which "competes" with other university law schools—said "I wrote the letter because the attitude of the GSC and the articles of the Daily Egyptian seems to be that law students are elitists. Law students aren't any more special than other groups."

Law students have said that the Graduate Student Council has not been supportive of law students, especially in the area of fee distribution. At a Student Bar Association meeting, 70 members voted to pull out of the GSC. Jim Rodgers, SBA president said earlier that law students would pull out if they didn't come to some agreement. He also said law students were different in many ways from the graduate students and that a totally separate organization for professionals might be the only solution.

Rodgers was one of the 27 people who signed Myerscough's letter, which stated "we don't feel that there is a great difference between law students and graduate students." Myerscough also said those people who signed the letter wanted to stay with the GSC. She said most of the people who didn't sign the letter said it was because they wanted to split with the GSC.

Rodgers said Tuesday that he didn't want to split with the GSC, but he wants the fees to be distributed differently.

Myerscough, who was an English graduate student three years ago, says "it seems that I got more benefits when I was a graduate student, than now that I'm a law student."

"I feel that we need to solve the fee distribution problem, but I would like to see law students stay with the GSC, because we are stronger that way," she said.

Myerscough said there are two sides of the issue with the law school. "One side is for staying with the GSC and the other is for splitting from the council, but both sides agree that fee distribution should be different."

City prepares plan for decreased mortgage rates

By Mary Ann McNulty
Staff Writer

In an effort to get money back into Carbondale's economy for home mortgages as quickly as possible, Carbondale City Manager Carroll J. Fry submitted his report on mortgage bond revenue financing to the City Council two months ahead of schedule.

The Carbondale Plan, which the council directed Fry to complete by Nov. 16, provides "scarce mortgage money" to families at reasonable rates for the acquisition or improvement of single family residential units within the corporate boundaries of Carbondale.

Under the guidelines of the plan, the city would sell revenue bonds to generate funds. This revenue would then be available to local financial lending institutions, which would grant the loans under the "established mortgage loan procedures."

However, the U.S. Congress is also working on such a plan—

House Bill No. 3712, which is currently stalled in the House Ways and Means Committee.

Further development of the Carbondale Plan will depend on what the federal government decides to do with this measure, as well as with cities which had initiated work on plans such as this prior to its development, Carl E. Shoaff Jr., a municipal finance consultant, said.

Fry explained, "All it (the plan) is, is a proposal that might work if legislation is passed. It's a statement of policy the council may want to consider. But until Congress acts, we're dead."

Fry said the reason he submitted the plan now, after just 60 days of research, is because of the "pressure I'm getting from the financial institutions. The money market is dead—you can't get any money to do anything."

"Now is the time to present it (the plan) before the financial institutions," Fry said.

Fry was directed by the City Council Monday to bring up the issue at the next council meeting Oct. 1 and arrange an administrative meeting of financial institution officials.

The city manager and Shoaff are also scheduled to talk to Rep. Paul Simon, D-Carbondale, about getting the Senate Finance Committee to allow cities that had worked on developing plans prior to April 25, 1979 to implement them.

Jury selected for trial of 'crime spree' suspect

By Ella Reilly
Staff Writer

More than 85 prospective jurors waited their turn for questioning in the North Courtroom of the Jackson County Courthouse Tuesday morning. Many had a day-long wait as one by one 12 jurors and two alternates were selected for the trial of Charles King Young.

Young, 27, of Elkville, has been charged and will be tried for allegedly committing attempted murder, rape, sexual deviate assault, aggravated kidnapping and four counts of armed robbery.

Judge Richard Richman told the prospective jurors that he would not isolate them from the public during the trial, but told them not to discuss the case with anyone and to pay no attention to the news media.

State's Attorney Howard Hood will begin presenting evidence for the prosecution Wednesday. Public Defender Larry Rippe will represent Young in the trial.

Young is accused of being one of three men who robbed and shot Charles Zimmerman of Carbondale, in the vicinity of East College Street and Washington Street the night of April 10. Young is also accused of being one of three men, who robbed at gunpoint two men and one woman, all SIU-C students, in the Carbondale Mobile Homes laundromat later that same night.

The woman, who was abducted from the laundromat by the assailants, told police that she was raped by two of the three men after they drove her to a rural area. She said she was also forced into acts of oral sex with all three men.

The suspects' car was a Ford that runs on an access road which runs parallel to the Big Muddy River off Dillinger Road. The car, with the suspects in it, was stuck on the road. The road was almost

Career Day sheds light on jobs

By Jacqui Koszczuk

Job recruitment officers from 64 business, industrial, and governmental organizations were in the Student Center Ballrooms Tuesday to answer students' inquiries about career trends, job opportunities, and application procedures.

An estimated 3,000 students attended the Career Day '79 event, which was sponsored by the Career Planning and Placement Center in order to acquaint students with the present job market, according to Vice President for Student Affairs Bruce Swinburne.

"It's the largest turnout of both students and recruitment officers ever," Swinburne said.

Job recruiters set up information tables at 9 a.m., and chatted informally with students throughout the afternoon. Most came prepared with pamphlet explanations of their organizations to distribute, and some displayed full-color photographs or slide shows.

National employers, including IBM, Zenith, Xerox, and Caterpillar were represented, as were government agencies such as the FBI, the armed forces, and municipal police departments.

Utility companies, insurance agencies, research laboratories, supermarket franchises and airline companies also sent job recruiters to give students a general idea of available positions and the necessary qualifications.

"Not many schools conduct a general Career Day as SIU does," said Raymond Phillips, a recruiter from J & L Steel Company. "It gives us a chance to meet faculty as well as students, and it gives students a chance to find out first-hand what industry is looking for

City Council members differ on proposed annexation policy

By Mary Ann McNulty
Staff Writer

Although City Council members agreed Monday night that some type of policy on annexations and sewer connections needs to be instituted in Carbondale, they disagreed on the content of such a policy.

Citing an "increasing concern by both the City Council and administration over a plethora of zoning requests on the periphery of the city," City Manager Carroll J. Fry submitted a proposed policy for the council to discuss at the informal meeting.

The policy said, "There will be no land rezoned to medium- or high-density or planned unit development use, within one-half mile of the corporate limits of the City of Carbondale, nor will any subdivision be approved in that area unless and until a binding agreement is reached by which a public water supply and public sewerage facility are provided."

Councilman Charles Watkins asked whether the policy was a no-growth one. "It seems we will have a lot of people taking every pain to make sure they are one mile outside of the city."

Councilwoman Helen Westberg said she didn't see it as a no-growth policy—but she did see it as a slow-growth plan.

Mayor Hans Fischer said, "Although it won't be a no-growth policy, it ends up as a no-growth incentive. The developers will go into areas where they won't be affected so they won't have to pay (for the sewerage)."

Fry said he disputes the conclusion that it is a no-growth policy.

"We have had an on-again, off-again situations as far as development in the areas. If a policy is established and they realize this, then the developers will get together and enhance the annexation policy and we will have planned growth," Fry said.

Council members agreed to put the matter up for discussion at the next informal council meeting Oct. 8.

In other discussion, the City Council agreed to sell gasoline to the Southern Illinois Enforcement Group, as long as the city can obtain ample supplies of gasoline.

Carbondale stopped selling gas to SIEG in June, when the city learned that it had no supplier either. Since July, the Hines Oil Co. has been supplying the city's gas, according to A. William Moss, assistant city manager for purchasing and property.

Fry disagreed with the council members' decision.

"All of the outside agencies that we are dealing with want to take advantage because we buy gas cheaper than the pump. I don't see any point to getting back involved with selling gas to outside agencies," Fry said.

Steve Hoffman, employee at Eastgate Liquors asked the council's permission to hold the sale in the Eastgate Liquors parking lot from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. on Oct. 13 (Homecoming) and on Oct. 31 (Halloween).

After two council members objected to the sale on Halloween, Hoffman agreed to withdraw it.

New contracts end grain strike

DULUTH, Minn. (AP) — The 11-week strike that halted all grain shipments from the ports of Duluth, Minn., and Superior, Wis., ended Tuesday when grain handlers ratified contracts with eight grain elevator companies.

The vote was 354-86. A union spokesman says millers will report back to work beginning at 8 a.m. Wednesday. The union spokesman said the clincher to the vote was a guarantee of a $1,000 bonus per employee for each year of the three-year contract.

The striking grain handlers voted Tuesday, in two separate sessions, on contract offers made by the eight Duluth-Superior grain elevator companies.

Twenty ocean-going vessels waiting in the Duluth-Superior harbor will move into the harbor and begin tying up at 12 grain loading berths, said Local 118 Vice President Bob Dawson.

Throughout Minnesota, Wisconsin and North Dakota, grain elevators are filled to capacity and some grain is piled on the ground.

Surging fuel costs drive inflation up

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration's hopes of holding the annual rate of inflation below a double-digit level dimmed in August as consumer prices were driven up once more by surging fuel costs.

The Labor Department said consumer prices rose 1.1 percent last month, the eighth consecutive month with an increase near or above 1 percent.

If prices in September, October, November and December continue to rise at the same rate as they have since last December, the year will end with a post World War II record inflation rate of 13.1 percent, said Labor Department economist Patrick Jackson.

This would top the 12.2 percent record price rise, which was established from December 1973 to December 1974.

Pageant VIP target of sex charges

CHICAGO (AP) — Two former winners and three other contestants have accused Richard Schiller, executive director of the Miss Illinois pageant, of making "sexual advances" toward them, and Schiller said on Tuesday he will leave his post.

Schiller denied the allegations but said he had informed the pageant board by letter last week that he will not seek reelection when his term expires on Nov. 1.

Part of Schiller's duties is to train Miss Illinois contestants and some of this is done in his home where they are guests.

Schiller denied the allegations and said he never had made improper advances. He said, however, that he had dated one pageant contestant and had unsuccessfully sought a date with another. This, he said, occurred four or five years ago when he was single and after contest judging had ended.

He said both women were losers in the contest and the highlight of his one date with nothing more sensational than a goodnight kiss. Schiller was touched by the national limelight last month when the board, on his recommendation, stripped the crown from 1975 Miss Illinois, Shanna Jean McNeill of Carterville. He recalled her of being "mentally unfit."

NRA fails to defeat judge confirmation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Abner J. Mikva, D-Ill., who led the fight for gun control in the House for nine years, was confirmed Tuesday by the Senate as a federal judge despite a last-ditch battle by the National Rifle Association to defeat him.

Mikva, 53, a leading liberal on the Ways and Means Committee who also fought the oil depletion allowance, said after the 58 to 31 vote he expects to be sworn in "fairly soon" as a judge of the U.S. Court of Appeals in the District of Columbia.

"First I'm going to discuss it with Sen. Kennedy and then I'm going to take it up with the Justice Department, the White House and the speaker," Mikva said as he hurried out of the Senate chamber with his wife, Zoe.

Mikva sat in the Senate gallery as conservatives attacked his stand on guns and what they said were his views on "judicial activism." Sen. James McChure, R-Idaho, said Mikva had "a legislative career strewn with inconsistency, irreverence, hypocrisy and injudiciousness."

Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., urged opponents to remember Mikva represents a district near Chicago whose residents worry about crime.

Soccer makes sense as 12th sport for men

SIU must decide on the 12th intercollegiate sport for men that it will support in order to comply with National Collegiate Athletic Association regulations. Soccer ought to be that sport.

According to the regulations, SIU must field 12 varsity teams in order to retain its status as a division IA school, because it neither has a stadium with at least a 30,000 capacity nor has averaged at least 17,000 in football attendance for the past four years.

Though a declaration of the 12th sport doesn't have to be made until April, 1981, action should be taken soon. Soccer should be the 12th varsity sport for various reasons.

Soccer is a rapidly growing sport on the national scene. The success of the North American Soccer League points to its popularity. Playoff games are shown on television, and attendance around the league has been good.

Closer to home, soccer has long enjoyed attention. St. Louis University and SIU-Edwardsville have two of the finer teams in the country. High schools in the St. Louis area have placed soccer on an even par with football. Some have no football, only soccer teams. "Little league soccer" is as popular as its more famous baseball counterpart. There is a pool of talent there for SIU-C athletes.

Economically, choosing soccer would also make sense. The Athletics Department will undoubtedly face a financial crunch as provisions for Title IX implementation take hold. But quality competition in soccer is so near to Carbondale, and travel costs would be minimal.

The base of support for soccer is evident by its growing popularity. Fan support would be expected, and the younger pool of talent that could be tapped would make the team competitive for years to come, as well as make recruiting cheaper and easier.

The present SIU Soccer team is already competitive. In a recent game against an English team, the clubs played to a tie. Soccer is THE sport in England, and a tie against an English team looks very impressive.

So the logical choice for a 12th varsity sports team at SIU is soccer. It also would be a timely choice. If the decision is made soon, time would be gained for developing a team that would make this school proud.

Thorogood fans support artist with boycott

What is happening here? Contradiction in one article? I am referring to Craig DeVriese's article promoting George Thorogood. What really is happening here is that Mr. DeVriese is actually promoting MCA records, while demoting Thorogood and Rounder Records, which is the label he is signed to.

As was stated, there is a legal dispute over MCA's right to release "Better Than the Rest," which was recorded years before he became well-known. Thorogood himself did not want this record released and has requested that his fans not purchase this album.

Therefore, if DeVriese really was aware of the facts, he would not have reviewed this album, much less accredited it. How can a real Thorogood fan purchase this album knowing the artist is against it? Not to mention the bureaucracy involved. Once again the big guy is trying to eat up the little guy.

Come on, fans, let's keep within business ethics and boycott what must be boycotted.

'Lefties' take a back seat in Lawson

Having been on the SIU campus for only a few short weeks, I must say I have been very impressed with all aspects of the campus, from the faculty to the architectural designs of the various buildings. There is no much I have not liked here at SIU.

However, an incident recently brought to my attention that SIU, like many other campuses, is guilty of discrimination.

Entering one of Lawson's lecture halls for the first time, I searched for a seat designed for lefties like myself. I found none, so I, as usual, sat myself down in a seat designed for righties. Believe me, I was used to it! (I had not even seen a seat designed for lefties until I was a junior in college.) Well, the next time I entered the lecture hall, I discovered that the designers had not forgotten us after all.

They were kind enough to put a whole row—yes, lefties—a whole row of seats designed especially for us—in the back row!

It was nice of whoever is responsible to think of us as an "elite" group to put us all together. I am fortunate enough to have good eye-sight and hearing, but what about those lefties less fortunate?

I'm not down on the designers—they've obviously done a good job on the SIU campus. I'm also not demanding Equal Rights (or lefts for that matter.) I don't think we need equipment in equal proportion to right-handers. However, I do feel we lefties are kind of taken for granted sometimes.

Kole only a preacher

Andre Kole is returning to SIU. Since he has been less than a year ago, it's probably safe to assume that his act hasn't changed much. He's basically a Christian preacher, using illusions as a gimmicky visual aid for his proselytizing.

I must object to his ads, which state that he "exposes for the first time the truth behind" the occult, out-of-body projection, spirit communication and other paranormal phenomena. Actually, Kole's dogma does not permit him to believe in the paranormal, and his "expose," which is hardly new, is that it's all Satan's work.

He can believe what he likes, but this is a clear case of the superstitious function of religion overriding any interest in the truth. At least Harry Houdini, in his exposing of fraudulent mediums, kept an open mind, and was willing to concede that spirit communication was a possibility in the real world. Kole simply seeks to equate such unexplained phenomena with illusions in a theater.

I've known too many people who have experienced paranormal phenomena to dismiss it blithely as the devil's doing, or to deny that it exists at all. Anyone who is interested in such phenomena should consult the work of serious researchers, such as J.B. Rhine, and not someone whose only research tool is a bible.

All musical tastes different and acceptable

Why do people insist on bickering about other folks' musical preferences? Some people like C-W, some like jazz, some punk, some disco, some blues, some heavy metal, some folk, some classical, some bluegrass and some don't like music at all. None are better than others, except that they each suit some people's personality more than the other types.

Hatred of another person because of the type of music he listens to is even more trivial than racial or religious prejudice. What's so funny about peace, love and understanding?

Custom, tradition being destroyed

As an Alumnus, I have been appalled at Anthony Hall's repeated attempts to destroy our tradition, custom, and spirit that made SIU one of the best known universities in the Midwest.

Ever since the riots, many of the trustees, who must have believed that Old Main burned for our sins, have done everything they could to make SIU into another University of Illinois. First they found a very conservative president who discovered a way to run out all the radical professors (even the good ones) and get the rest to make their classes twice as hard because of some Northern myth that SIU was a lazy school.

They let, and well from their old A.I.D. friends, who used SIU as a base to train our Vietnamese spies. Now they have their own secret police called the Office of Student Development.

A case in point is how the O.S.D.'s stooges cancelled the movie "Hollywood Boulevard" because it had an R rating and that new students would have a bad idea of what SIU is like. In the eleventh hour, the O.S.D. watchdog just happened to know of a movie they could get for free for new student work.

I hope every new student gets to stand the wall at the end of the main entrance of the library, for this will tell you what SIU is all about. I am surprised they haven't covered it with pictures of their sacred law and Medical Schools.

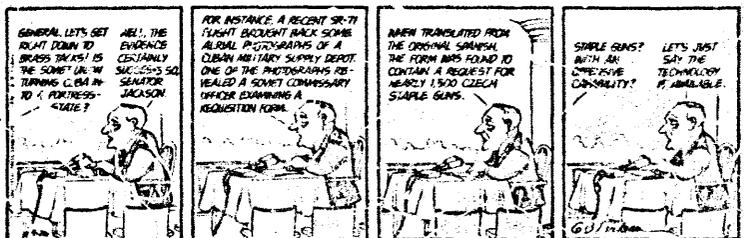

SIU (where dogs run free) is the most enviable school in the state. That is why Chicago Magazine wrote that story about us. Most of their readers are alumni from U. of I., N.I.U., Northwestern, and those other lake front schools. They are so jealous of SIU that they get turned on when they read bad things about us.

If you, the students, don't try to stop this plan, don't be surprised if, in 1984, they move the Halloween ceremony to the free-speech area, build a high-rise hotel in Thompson Woods and make Carbondale a cricic campus of Edwardsville.

'Wifemistress' doesn't hold up on the screen

By Mark Marks
Student Writer

"Wifemistress" probably never, like it would make a pretty good film when the script landed on producer Franco Cristaldo's desk. Unfortunately, it didn't survive the trip to the screen. For a film with some interesting themes, there's not much to it.

Female heart-throb Marcello Mastroianni and male heart-throb Laura Antonelli are wasted in this film. He plays Senor Luigi De Angelis, a tireless lawyer, landlord, philosopher, philanthropist, atheist, anarchist, Don Juan. She is a bed-ridden, frigid frump until she transforms herself into a whirlwind of political and sexual energy. The reason? Her husband, who previously was off saving the world and seducing women, gets implicated in a murder he didn't commit. He fakes abduction and goes into hiding — across the street from his old home — just in time to witness his wife's miraculous rise from bed. Sounds contrived? It is.

Their marital situation is instantaneously reversed. Now it's his turn to become the passive observer to his spouse's carnal and career exploits. De Angelis is reduced to the role of impotent voyeur.

Then, one hokey day, the Mrs. discovers her husband's whereabouts and starts putting on bedroom shows for his "entertainment." Senor sits by his window and watches her, through the two hangings, but — the murder he supposedly committed has been confessed to and his name has been cleared.

Yet, he doesn't go home — partly for self-punishment, partly because of self-importance (he thinks his return will crush his wife's newfound independence) and mostly for melodrama.

There are some good ideas in the film. Men with hearts full of righteousness too often neglect their families. Sometimes it's easier to inspire the masses than it is to keep the lovelight burning.

"Wifemistress" may show feminist inspiration, but male hangovers keep it from advancing too far. Senor De Angelis, though pathetic, eventually gets played for sympathy.

The end's reconciliation is inconsistent with the character Senor De Angelis has become. And, typically, the filmmakers pander to a male audience — only naked women are shown. In the "kinky" three-way love scenes, there are always two women and one man. This may be the story of a woman liberated — but it's a man's fantasized version of it.

Flying is second nature to aerialist troupe kids

By Jenell Olson
Staff Writer

At the age most children learn how to ride a bicycle and play hopscotch, the Farias children learned how to swing from a trapeze 34 feet above the ground.

Julio, 15, Carmelina, 11, and Tata, 8, are the Flying Farias, an aerialist troupe performing with the Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey Circus. Even though they are young, they are performing adult-sized feats.

"I was playing on the net one day when I was 4 or 5," said Julio, whose father, Fidel, started performing a hand-balancing act in a Cuban circus at the age of 18. "Then, all of a sudden my dad pulled me up by the safety belt that was around my waist. I almost cried, but I didn't. I was scared and shaking, but I took the bar and my father's partner let me go right away while my dad held onto the other end of the belt," Julio recalled.

Julio added that the second time he was hoisted up to the trapeze bar, he was more confident and the third time he took the safety belt off.

The three youths are on the road 48 weeks of the year. When they're not traveling, they're practicing new routines in Venice, Fla.

They learn arithmetic, spelling, science and social studies through a correspondence schooling program. They use special machines located in various office buildings around the country to take tests.

"We're kind of special kids," Julio said. "We aren't allowed to play football, baseball or other sports for more than half an hour because it might hurt some of our muscles."

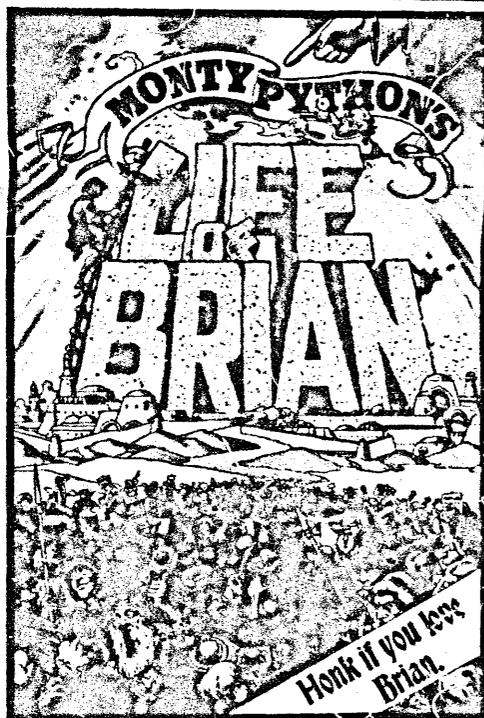

Julio, Carmelina and Tata are among few youths traveling with the circus. Their lives are different than most people their age, yet they all agreed that they wouldn't want it any other way.

"It's fun, I like it," said Tata, who started professionally when he was only 6 years old.

The youths' father serves as catcher for his children. "When my dad yells 'vueno' I know it is safe to break," said Julio, the youngest flyer ever to perform the triple somersault at the age of 10.

The three children also have a sister, Clara Maria, who is 7 months old. She'll probably join the act when she is 5, Julio said.

"I don't think flying is something we've been taught to like," asked Julio. "I think it's just in us."

Student recalls Columbia trip Tribute to Who is excellent

as much as a half-hour late to class. Hicks said, and then the class would stay the hour and be a half-hour late to the next class.

All the classes were taught in Spanish, he said, and most of the American students had four classes. The topics of the classes ranged from poetry to computer science.

"The university was beautiful," Hicks said. "It was built on the side of a mountain. Bogota is at an 8,000 foot altitude, though, and I never knew a heart could hurt until I started climbing the stairs at the university."

Most of Colombia is mountainous, Hicks said, and "at any time, you can find any climate of the year, just by going up or down a mountain."

Bogota's streets are arranged in respect to the mountains, Hicks said. "All the streets are numbered — east and west streets go from the mountains, and north and south streets go from the center of the city."

"You can find anything you want because it's so simple," Hicks paused. "I miss the place," he said with a rueful grin.

The American group as a whole went on several side trips to visit remnants of the Spaniards. "In Bogota alone, there were old Spanish-style houses right next to high rises," he said.

Gold is often evident in the remnants of the old culture. Hicks said that the group visited the ruins of a fort once used to store gold and a gold museum. "Even 12-foot-tall Easter procession religious figures were decorated with gold," he said.

The group also took a trip to the Amazon River, which involved encounters with native tribes and boat constructors.

"We visited this little backyard zoo and saw a boa constrictor 9 feet 11 inches long," Hicks said. "Some of the group let the boa wrap around them while two husky guys held the snake's head. He shook his head and laughed. "But I sure didn't."

Their hotels there were one-room, four-bed, thatched-roofed houses, he said, right on the river.

Another side trip involved going to San Andres Island, a Colombian island in the Caribbean. "It's duty-free,"

Hicks said, "and people would fly there and get Betamaxes, Sonys, Pioneers and Seiko watches."

"The mainland has a 250 to 300 percent import tax on luxury items," he said. "A Chevy Blazer that sells for $13,000 here would go for $35,000 there."

Money flows very freely, though, in Bogota, Hicks said. "When I'd go to the bank, I'd see people bringing in $100 bills in paper bags, tupperware bowls, hair dryer boxes and even distinguished leather briefcases."

"The least I saw was $13,000 and the most was $130,000. It's all in cash," he said, "and it's all drug money."

Not all of Hicks' experiences involved gold or $100 bills. "I went to Honduras to see my 'Save the Children' foster kid," he said.

"It was hard to talk to him at first, but after he got his shingles shot out," Hicks smiled at the memory, "things got very, very interesting."

The culture shock of coming home after four months of total communication in Spanish still lingers.

"I had to think in Spanish and translate in my head to English," he said. "Most of that problem, though, cleared up after two or three days."

Hicks went to Colombia "to see how their language really was and how they live. It was especially challenging because of my hearing problem."

"I just wanted to see if I could do it," he said as his eyes smiled in triumph, "and I did."

German music for final Sunset show

The Waterloo German Band will perform at 8 p.m. Thursday in Turley Park. The concert is part of the Sunset Concert Series and is sponsored by the Carbondale Park District and the Student Center.

The band has been in existence since 1944. Its music is Bavarian in style and features accordion, clarinet, trumpet, tuba and drums.

From Waterloo, Illinois, which is 30 miles southeast of St. Louis, the band plays about 225 concerts a year. Those concerts have included weekly visits to the Bavarian Inn in St. Louis since May, 1967.

In case of rain, the concert will be held in the Student Center Ballrooms.

"The Kids Are Alright," a loving documentary-style tribute to The Who's 15-plus year career, opens and closes with two of the greatest moments I've seen in rock music.

The film, which is dripping with nostalgia, opens with a 1967 appearance by the band on the old Smothers Brothers Show. Lead guitarist-songwriter Pete Townshend and bassist John Entwistle blandly give Tommy Smothers their names and the fact that they're both from London. Then vocalist Roger Daltrey introduces himself as "Roger from Oz," which draws a great double-take from Smothers.

The Who then rip into an explosive version of their instant classic "My Generation," which ends with Townshend ramming the neck of his guitar into his amplifier and beating it against the floor. Drummer Keith Moon equals Townshend's fury by smashing and kicking his drums off the stand.

Just as you think the frenzy is over Moon hits the bass drum once more. A huge explosion follows and smoke fills the screen, the audience screams and Moon is thrown backward off the stage. Smothers, obviously awe-struck, walks back onstage with his acoustic guitar in hand and Townshend grabs it away from him and smashes it into splinters.

"The Kids Are Alright" ends with a brilliant version of "Won't Get Fooled Again." Townshend's performance is riveting during this song. He leaps, dances and shakes across the stage at a breakneck pace which I haven't seen equalled by anyone.

However, just as Daltrey lets out the final scream of the song, Townshend leaps halfway across the stage and slides to a halt on his knees.

These two moments are worth the price of admission themselves, but the rest of the film is an exciting, funny and often poignant summary of the group's entire career.

Director Jeff Stein has compiled film footage from every era of The Who's career—including a brief silent film clip of the group when they called themselves The High Numbers in 1964. The in-concert footage accurately portrays the breakneck energy which has always been a Who trademark.

Townshend and Moon are incredible throughout the film. Moon's untimely death at age 31 last year has to be the ultimate rock music tragedy. His frantic drumming and hedonistic lifestyle made him one of the all-time greats. His memory is brilliantly preserved with this film.

Aside from the concert footage, the film contains some memorable interviews with the group. At one point Townshend reveals that The Who realize that they're getting old, but not ready to give up. He admits he is "a desperate old fart, but not boring though."

The film also includes some comic moments from the group's career, including a hilarious safe-cracking scene and Moon destroying a hotel room with the help of Steve Martin (in a mini-cameo). There are also brief cameos by Ringo Starr—interviewing Moon—and Rolling Stones' lead guitarist Keith Richards clad in a gangster outfit complete with cigar and eye-patch.

Entwistle also has a great moment as he goes skeet shooting with a machine gun and gold records. He has a wry and quiet, but effective, sense of humor.

Student reminisces trip to Colombia

By Cady Humphreys
Staff Writer

"The first night I was back, I had so much to tell my parents...and I couldn't. I just couldn't remember the English," said Scott Hicks, who spent spring semester of 1979 studying in Colombia, S.A.

Hicks, a junior in computer science, went to Bogota, the capital of Colombia, with a group of 35 college students from 20 states. The annual trip is offered through Rollins College in Winter Park, Fla.

"Colombia was chosen because they speak Spanish the most clearly," Hicks, who has studied Spanish for about two years, said. "But I still had a problem."

Hicks' problem is his partial deafness, which is due to nerve damage caused by childhood ear infections.

"One ear's almost completely gone," he said. "and the other's 40 percent gone. I couldn't pick up what anyone was saying."

"I was almost ready to come home until I learned to read their lips," he said. "Then it was okay."

Hicks lived with a family who spoke no English. There was a maid and a "butler." The butler was the talkative 6-year-old nephew of the maid. "Out of the whole family, I think I learned most of my Spanish from him," Hicks said with a quick smile.

In Colombia, the family unit is so important that "there are no old-folk homes," he said. "Most of the universities don't have dorms, and young people, until they get married, usually live with their parents."

Colombians as a whole, Hicks said, don't appreciate Americans being there because some visitors will be the typical "ugly American." "Some of them expect a Mac Donald's," he said. "I found that if you try to be as Colombian as possible, then there's no problem."

The people there accepted him as a Colombian, Hicks said, but "only because I wore their clothes...no tight blue jeans or Marlboro jackets."

Hicks said that the average outfit of clothes he wore on a school day was a good pair of pants, a sport shirt and a pullover sweater.

Both sexes in Colombia wear the type of shoe called clogs, he said, and the men carry a purse-like satchel with a wrist-loop to foil pickpockets.

"You put your watch, money and I.D. in your purse," Hicks said, "and you hang on to it. I got so used to carrying it that I didn't even think about it when I was at the airport waiting for my dad to pick me up."

"Dad came with a couple of his friends and when he saw me with my clogs and my purse..." Hicks shook his head and groaned, "he just said 'Oh my God...'"

The Colombian concept of time is another difference between the two cultures, Hicks said.

"If you say you're going to pick up a date at 8, you don't get there until 9," he said. "They don't expect you to be on time. If you are, you wait."

Fischer rides horseback as circus arrives in town

By Mary Ann McNulty
Staff Writer

Horses, elephants and camels became a new method of transportation for city officials and business members Tuesday morning, when Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey Circus was officially welcomed to Carbondale.

Mayor Hans Fischer, his wife, Carla, and son, Mark, led the parade of horses and camels to the arena on horseback.

Mary Lou Trammel of Mary Lou's Grill; Jim Bondurant, assistant to the owner of the Carbondale Holiday Inn; and Jan Beckenbach of Carbondale also rode in the parade down University Avenue to the arena.

At the arena, Fischer welcomed Buckles Woodcock, the elephant trainer, and the circus to the community.

"The whole community is looking forward to the show," Fischer said.

The mayor also got a ride from Anna May, an 8,000-pound Asian elephant, when at the arena.

Plans to have the officials ride elephants in a parade on Monday were changed, according to Julie Moller, arena promotions director, after train delays in St. Louis, caused the 108th edition of the "Greatest Show on Earth" to arrive in Carbondale about six hours late.

The elephants were walked to tents set up at the arena.

Aviation safety award won by Carbondale woman pilot

A Carbondale woman has been elected to receive the 1979 Sharples Award for outstanding contribution to the advancement of general aviation. Lois Feigenbaum, a corporate pilot for Turco Manufacturing Co. in Du Quoin, is the first woman to receive the award. She received it specifically for her work in aviation safety throughout the world.

John L. Baker, president of the Aircraft Owners and Pilots Association, said, "Her record has been filled with so many accomplishments that only a few of them could be cited for the Sharples Award."

Feigenbaum is a past president of the International Women Pilots Organization and has served on the Board of

State comptroller, cage coach, 2 others receive alumni awards

The Illinois state comptroller, the women's basketball coach at the University of California, Los Angeles, a former college placement director and a retired education assistant professor will receive the 1979 SIU-C Alumni Association Achievement Awards.

The 22nd annual awards will be presented at 11:15 a.m. Oct. 13 during the Alumni Recognition Luncheon at Homecoming festivities in the Student Center Ballrooms.

Billie Jean Moore of Fullerton, Calif., and Roland Burris of Chicago will be honored for their distinguished professional achievements while Roye R. Bryant and Elizabeth C. Meehan, both of Carbondale, will be cited for their distinguished service and dedication to SIU-C and the Alumni Association.

In just about a decade as a basketball coach, Moore has reached heights most coaches only dream about.

For eight years she was coach and assistant athletic director at Cal State Fullerton where she dominated West Coast women's basketball. Her teams won six league and seven regional titles, qualifying seven of eight years for the AIAW national tournament and only lost one home game during that time. In addition, the 36-year-old Westmoreland, Kan., native's team won the National Invitational Championship (the forerunner of the AIAW national championship) in 1970.

Considered the top women's basketball coach in the country, Moore was wooed to UCLA in 1977 where as head coach she won the AIAW national title in 1978.

Last season at UCLA, she placed fourth in the AIAW tourney while compiling a 197-30 lifetime record.

Also, she coached the U.S. Olympic Women's Basketball team in 1976 to a silver medal.

For her outstanding efforts in women's basketball, she was honored as the AIAW National Large College Coach of the Year in 1977-1978 and was inducted as the first woman in the Washburn University of Topeka (Kan.) Hall of Fame (her undergraduate alma mater).

Moore, who graduated from SIU-C in 1968 with a master's degree in education, is the women's vice president of the Amateur Basketball Association, USA, the official governing body of amateur basketball in this country.

V. Len Burris, 42, was inaugurated as Illinois state comptroller Jan. 8, 1979, he became the third person elected to that office and the first black to be elected to a major political office in this state.

A 1959 political science SIU-C graduate and a 1963 law graduate of Howard University, Burris has worked for the U.S. Treasury Department as a national bank examiner, a vice-president of Continental Illinois, the state's largest bank, the director of General Services in the cabinet of Gov. Daniel Walker and, most recently, has served as the national executive director and operating officer of People United to Save Humanity.

Bryant, a Norris City, Ill., native, spent 22 years as a public school administrator in Illinois before coming to SIU-C in 1948.

Retiring twice from SIU-C (1968 and 1972), Bryant, a 1930 SIU-C graduate, served in various capacities at the University: field representative, the first director of the University's Placement Services, professor, taught courses in educational administration and supervision, assistant to the chancellor, acting dean of the School of Home Economics, and assistant to President Delyte Morris (1971-1972).

A native of Chicopee, Mass., Meehan, 82, has contributed to hundreds of SIU-C student teachers. For more than 35 years, she supervised student teachers and taught at University School.

Besides her degree from SIU-C (1938), she has a two-year teaching certificate from Fitchburg State (Mass.) College in 1918 and a master's degree from the University of Illinois in 1940.

Meehan still works every morning as a "volunteer grandmother" for physically and mentally handicapped infants at the Archway School in Carbondale.

INTEREST BOOST

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Banking Committee has approved a bill that would phase out federal controls limiting the interest that banks and other institutions pay on savings accounts.

Einstein address scheduled for

Wednesday night

A tape-recorded address by Albert Einstein will be part of a lecture titled "Einstein Remembered" to be given at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday in Morris Library Auditorium by Professor Paul Schilpp.

Schilpp's lecture, based on his personal acquaintance and conversation with the great philosopher and scientist, was originally scheduled in February as part of the Einstein Centennial but was cancelled when severe weather disrupted the week-long program.

Schilpp, visiting professor of philosophy, will present a tape-recorded address that Einstein made in a national radio broadcast in 1948.

SIU expands medical services

By Leanne Waxman
Staff Writer

As self-care and health awareness continue to grow in popularity, so do the services provided by the University Student Health Program. The Student Wellness Outreach Program has opened its doors to students living on East Campus.

The Student Wellness Outreach Program, which is housed in Trueblood Hall, was established this semester to provide students living in the dorms with self-care information and to help educate students on how to become active in staying healthy, according to Martha Shephard, nurse-educator in charge of the program.

Shephard said the outreach program is closely affiliated with a service called patient activation, which is part of the Student Wellness Resource Center. The patient activation program encourages students to become aware of how they can participate in preventing minor illnesses.

"There is a need over here, to activate people to take responsibility in their health care," said Shephard, who was a nurse at the Health Service for two and a half years. "There is a need for the assessment of illnesses."

The outreach program grew from a proposal prepared in March by Samuel McVay, administrative director of the Student Health Program, and two student representatives. McVay, Robert Hopkins and Perry Krokidas based their proposal for the outreach program on "a perceived need for extending student health program benefits to students on East Campus."

"We believe this program would have a positive effect on the level of health of the students in this area," the proposal said.

The Student Wellness Outreach Program, located in Room 106 of Trueblood Hall, is open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.,

Monday through Friday.

Shephard said the difference between the outreach program and the Student Wellness Resource Center is that the wellness center deals with specialized fields of health awareness and has specific programs dealing with these fields. The outreach program deals with the educational side of helping students understand what is wrong with them and helping them to assess their symptoms.

"Maybe, with a little education, students will see that some things can be taken care of at home," Shephard said.

Shephard is not allowed to prescribe medication to students, but rather, serves as an advisory or counseling agent, she said. The outreach program was established to serve as an advisory and counseling program to help students become aware of themselves and aware of other programs available to them, according to Shephard.

amount of deanships available around the country. It's just not the greatest applicable in the world any more because of the increasing amount of paperwork which separates the dean from the students in the classroom," he said.

Of the three candidates invited for on-campus interviews for the job thus far, two declined and the third came to campus but turned down the job offer, said law professor Robert Beck, chairman of the dean search committee.

He said that in addition to the lack of interest in deanships, the University's rural location has been a problem. Some potential candidates for the position expressed concern that their spouses would not have the professional opportunities available in larger cities, he said.

Beck said he was optimistic that a replacement will be found in a few months and that the names of at least three more qualified candidates will be presented to the faculty in October. The faculty will then select finalists from that list for on-campus interviews.

Johnson is also optimistic, but about "two possibilities—either finding a replacement or getting Lesar to stay on," he said.

However, Lesar said he sees no reason why the law school will not be able to find a replacement and that he has no plans to stay on as dean past August.

"I wouldn't consider it now," he said. "It's just not possible or likely. I'm not planning to be dean after August."

representative to the GSC, said she felt a lot of "hostility" at the GSC meeting Wednesday.

Wednesday was George's first GSC meeting and she said "I didn't really know what was going on and of all people, I was as opened as anybody about the whole situation. But I think there's a lot of communication barriers. I felt frustrated at the meeting. Some of the people on the council have turned off their ears and won't listen just because we're law students."

George said that Gary Brown, GSC president, "promised to be fair—but there are too many old, bad feelings."

completely covered by the river due to heavy rains in the area that night. When police shined a light on the car the suspects fled and the woman, who was naked, ran toward the police. When the area was searched, Young was found nearby and charged with rape, sexual deviate assault and the armed robberies at Carbondale Mobile Homes. He was charged later with the attempted murder and armed robbery of Zimmerman.

On April 15, the body of Jeff Johnson, 21, was found in the floodwaters of Crab Orchard Creek near Dillinger Road. He along with his brother Floyd R. Johnson and Young were identified by the victims as being the three suspects of the crime spree. Jeff Johnson had the "of drowning in 20 feet of water near the area where the suspects car had been found. The police are still searching for Floyd R. Johnson.

Young has been held in the Jackson County Jail on $100,000 bond since his arrest.

Job openings eyed

Robyn Lee, senior in psychology and administration of justice, said that by speaking with the recruiters she "discovered that companies were using psychology people to an even greater extent in their human relations departments than I thought they were."

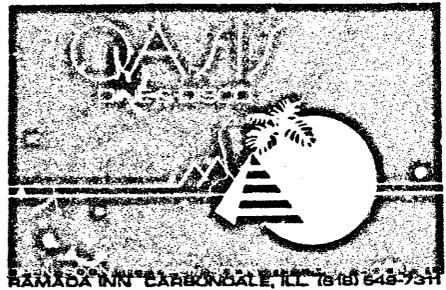

Another student, Mark Michalic, a junior interested in studying law after graduation, said he was able to get a better idea of what sort of legal personnel companies use. "I discovered there is a great demand for lawyers in the radio-television field, for example."

One student said she found out her major in aviation management could be applied to many management fields apart from the aviation industry. "It's good to know that my major is not limiting," said Hazel Jones, senior.

Not every student was blessed with Career Day optimism, however. "I'm disappointed," said Vince Finate, radio-television senior. "I've talked to a few people, but everyone around here is looking for chemists, computer scientists, and engineers."

Timothy Adams, representing the State of Illinois recruitment office, said he was impressed with SIU-C's Career Day "because students here are genuinely interested." He said he has been to other university recruitment events in the state where "the recruiters ended up sitting around drinking coffee and talking to each other because no one showed up."

The MAGA Gift Shop, located at the north end of Faner Hall, brings a bit of the rest of the world to SIU-C.

The gift shop, located next to the University Museum, is filled with articles from countries all over the world. One may purchase jewelry from Mexico and India, and children's games and toys from Japan, as well as curio's from Thailand, China and Eastern Europe.

The shop also sells items made by local craftsmen. At the present time, a collection of corn husk dolls made by Dorothy Thompson of Cambria is being offered for sale in the shop.

According to Mary R. Muchmore, a clerk at the shop, the items sold are ordered from import catalogues or obtained at gift shows.

536-3321 STUDENT CENTER

Counseling and workshops offered in new health center

By Jacqui Koszcrak
Staff Writer

The establishment of the Student Wellness Resource Center might be viewed as SIUC's adaptation to a heightened awareness of health and preventative action against illness that has prevailed in American society in the last decade, says coordinator Marc Cohen.

Since its beginning in 1978, the center has evolved into a major division of the student Health Service.

The Health Service once operated solely as a medical treatment facility, but now offers a comprehensive program for the maintenance and improvement of health.

The wellness center's guiding philosophy, Cohen says, is the facilitation of optimal long-term health for the student. "You can't expect your doctor, your grocer, your government, your friends, or anyone else to keep you well," he says. "The quality of your health is entirely up to you."

The center, via its four major subdivisions, offers group and individual counseling, workshops, and specialized publications for students interested in improving their physical and emotional well-being, Cohen says.

One subdivision is the Lifestyles Program, consisting of ongoing workshops and individual consultation sessions that emphasize physical fitness and the interrelationship of fitness and emotional well-being.

Students are instructed in the areas of weight control, smoking habits, exercise, nutrition, and stress reduction, Cohen says.

Another division is the Human Sexuality Service, which offers individual counseling for pregnancy, birth control, and relationship issues.

Human Sexuality also conducts on-campus lecture presentations and ongoing seminars, during which participants discuss homosexuality, bisexuality, and sexual awareness and assertiveness.

"You can't expect your doctor, your friends or anyone else to keep you well."

A third division, called the Patient Activation Program, encourages students to assume greater responsibility for the prevention of minor ailments and injuries, which do not require clinical attention, Cohen said.

The activation program originated and maintains the Self-Care Resource Room, located just off the main waiting room at the Health Service. The room is a mini-library of health literature, with pamphlets and books about heart and lung disease, birth control, alcohol, drugs, the common cold, nutrition and sun bathing.

The room is open to all students during regular health service hours. Many of the publications are free, and some are available on a loan basis.

The wellness center also extends student services through the Alcohol Education Project. According to Cohen, the program was developed to "help students make responsible decisions regarding their use of alcohol, and to help discourage its irresponsible use."

The AEP conducts workshops concerning the physiological and psychological aspects of alcohol, and the social aspects of alcohol consumption.

In addition, training workshops for residence hall staff and interested faculty members are held. The AEP is also a referral service for individuals with alcohol problems.

Synergy Inc., a community agency which provides peer counseling and a crisis intervention service also operates under the Student Wellness Resource Center. The center has about 20 paid staff members, including professional staff, graduate assistants, student workers and civil service employees. The main office is located on the second floor of Kesnar Hall across from the Health Service.

The center's workshops and ongoing seminars began in September, and will continue throughout the semester.

Parkinson rededication to feature symposium on energy exploration

By University News Service

The future of U.S. energy exploration and development will be a lead topic at a geology symposium: Friday, Oct. 12.

The gathering of invited geology experts from around the country will be one highlight of two days of ceremonies Friday and Saturday, Oct. 12 and 13, marking the rededication of Parkinson Laboratory, home of the department of geology.

The 50-year-old building, which houses an array of specialized coal research laboratories in addition to geology department classrooms and laboratories, was reopened late this summer after completion of a yearlong, $2.1 million renovation.

Weekend activities also will feature a Saturday morning rededication ceremony and open house at the three-story laboratory building.

Frank Horton, vice-president for academic affairs and research, and Norman Doornbos, dean of the College of Science, will open the all-day geology symposium at 9 a.m. Friday in the Student Center Auditorium. Topics scheduled for discussion include: earthquakes and geologic hazards; coal exploration and utilization; the future of oil and gas exploration in the United States; geology in the future of Illinois, and governmental policy and geologic exploration.

Saturday activities will begin at 8 a.m. with an open house at the geology department in Parkinson Laboratory. Hiram H. Lesar, acting president, will preside at the 9 a.m. rededication ceremony, which will be followed by a meeting of the College of Science Constituent Society.

An informal banquet will be held Friday evening at the Holiday Inn. Interested persons may obtain tickets (priced at $12.00 per person) from the Department of Geology. A buffet luncheon also will be served at noon Saturday in the Student Center. Luncheon tickets are priced at $5 each and are available from the Alumni Office.

Golfers' effort at Indiana State boosts hopes for state crown

By David Gafriek
Sports Editor

With less than a week to go until the state tournament, women's golf Coach Mary Beth McGirr says she can see the improvement in her team. Even though the Salukis finished third at the Indiana State Invitational, McGirr still believes that the team is on course to defend its state title.

"We're getting better," McGirr said of the team's performance on the long and treacherous Hulman Links course. "The scores are coming down. Sandy (Lemon, the No. 1 golfer) is still consistent. What we now need to do is to develop a supporting cast."

Lemon finished in a fourth-place tie with Stacy Dutcher of Central Michigan. Both shot scores of 167, eight shots back of tournament medalist Lisa Leonard of Purdue.

Learn-on and teammate Linda Branstetter, whose 160 placed her second, allowed Purdue to take the team title with a 637 team score. Central Michigan was second, 699, followed by SIU, 706, Cincinnati, 717, and Ball State, 719.

McGirr unexpectedly found a new member of the supporting cast in the No. 1 36-hole tourney. Kim Birch, a senior walk-on, tied Sue Fazio for the second lowest score shot by a Saluki at the tournament. Birch's score did not count in the team totals, however, because she was playing exhibition.

"She was a nice surprise," McGirr said. "The key to her success was that she stayed out of trouble. Her score on the first day was the best of anyone on the team."

Birch shot an 85, one shot better than Lemon's 86, in Friday's damp opening round, and finished Saturday with a 92. While Birch seemed to have little trouble on the wet and narrow fairways, others did.

Lori Sackman, who finished with a 179, shot an 83. Judy Dohrmann, 185, had a 96. Penny Porter, 187, could manage only a 98.

"The weather was wet so the course played longer," McGirr said. "And the fairways were tight. There were 130 traps and lots of water."

McGirr said the Salukis were going to the higher-numbered woods, ones which provided more control at the expense of distance, to tame the course. Still, many had holes on which they scored triple or quadruple bogies. McGirr added the Salukis, upon arriving at the greens, still had trouble putting.

McGirr hopes to have the problems worked out when the team travels to Champaign for the IAAIA state meet, to be held Friday and Saturday. The meet will be played on a course much easier than Hulman Links. It is a course many of the Salukis can visualize in their dreams from playing it so much.

"I know SIU won the tournament by a lot of strokes last year," McGirr said. "I believe the competition this year will be much tougher."

meet and have a dual-meet record." She said Coach Judy Auld and Saluki team members played an important role in convincing her to come to SIU and not to Kentucky, Indiana or Michigan State.

"I knew Judy real well," Warrem said. "I play in a tournament in Decatur every summer and I see Judy there. I've played doubles with her at that tournament."

"Another reason I came was because all the players are really nice," she continued. "Mauri (Kohler, a senior member of the team) showed me around when I visited here and that really made an impression on me. I like the school a lot, and it's close to home."

Warrem said the mononucleosis has affected her mentally as well as physically.

"It's in my head, and it really feels strange," she said. "I'm usually a 'hyper' person, but I've been kind of low-key lately."

When Warrem, who hoped to begin practicing again this week, finally is able to get back onto the courts, stamina will be a big problem.

"My biggest adjustment will be to get back in shape," she said. "I didn't get to play much in August because I was sick."

Once she begins to play again, Warrem hopes to compete in both singles and doubles. She said both events have advantages.

"I'm better at singles," she said. "But I like doubles, because if you win, you get to share the victory with a teammate."

"These dual meets I'm missing are the most important part of the season," she added. "The state meet is coming up and I hope to be back for that. That's why I should come back and try to do really well."

WHERE NEXT? — Two members of the Saluki football team seem to have differing views of how to complete the agility drill. One seems content to leap over the one square, while his teammate prefers to take a step-by-step approach.

Grid success may hinge on passing

As the season progresses, the conservative coaches, legend states, runs 60 percent of the time. To throw more than 30 times is to indicate weakness.

One can hardly quarrel with Dempsey's offensive strategy for it has produced winning teams in two of the three seasons he has been here. At the same time, the Salukis have shown they can move the ball by passing. One need look no further than the late rally at Arkansas State, when Cornak completed four straight passes to get the ball from the ASU 16 yard line down to the Saluki 7.

It seems only natural to stick with something that has been successful.

'Serious' spikers notch another win

By Mark Pabich
Staff Writer

The women's volleyball team could have made one of two choices concerning its match Monday night with Jefferson Community College. One choice would have been not to take Jefferson too seriously, especially after the Salukis had a tough weekend playing schools like Missouri and Eastern Illinois. The other choice was to take on the Vikings as though the match was for the national championship.

Luckily for the Salukis, they chose the latter.

Although the scores of 15-8, 11-15, 15-4 and 15-4 indicate that SIU walked all over Jefferson, the Salukis had to play tough volleyball the entire match.

Coach Debbie Hunter said that the Viking's aggressive play forced her squad to play faster than they have had to this season.

"Jefferson returned and blocked a lot of the balls we sent toward them," Hunter said. "I was glad that our team didn't take it easy."

In the first game, senior Dinah Devers played the front line as though she owned it. Devers sent a variety of spikes at the Vikings and consistently blocked their shots in the Salukis' opening 15-5 win.

"Dinah has finally come around and is playing solid volleyball," Hunter said. "She had a great tournament last weekend and her performance since then has been very good."

In game two, the tables turned on the Salukis. Bad serving plagued SIU throughout the set, which Southern lost 15-11. "Our service was a real problem in that game," Hunter explained. "One of our better servers came in toward the end of the match, but she (Ann Cronin) only got to serve once."

The Salukis rebounded back from the loss to win games three and four, both by 15-4. Freshman Bonnie Norrenberns, who played all four games, put on a powerful display of spiking prowess in both games.

"Bonnie helped our offense tremendously. She is just an awesome player," Hunter said. "A lot of people are going to remember her name before she leaves Southern in four years."

One problem that hampered the Salukis early this season was communication. Talk among the players on the court was confusing, and resulted in missed passes and spiking opportunities. Hunter said the communication gap was closed after playing Jefferson.

"I'm pleased with the communication aspect of our game now," Hunter said. "The players are talking to one another and our offensive attack is more potent. Overall, I'm excited about our progress. We're moving along very well."

Golfers seventh at Murray; Clemens top Saluki finisher

By Rod Smith

The Saluki men's golf team knew the 11 schools entered in the Murray State Invitational would be tough competition. They didn't know, however, that they had to compete against two unforeseen forces—Mother Nature and the flu bug.

The Salukis finished seventh in the rain-shortened tournament, nineteen shots behind first-place Austin Peay. Eastern Kentucky took second place with a team score of 595, only one shot back of Austin Peay.

Doug Clemens, the Salukis' No. 1 golfer, finished fifth in the individual standings. He had a four-over-par 148 for the 36-hole tournament. Dave Gaer of Eastern Kentucky was the medalist for the tournament with an even-par 144.

Five inches of rain fell on the Murray Country Club late Thursday night and early Friday. Play was delayed until noon, and only 18 of the 36 holes scheduled for Friday were completed. The golfers played Friday through a downpour and strong winds. The tournament concluded Saturday after another 1/2-hole round.

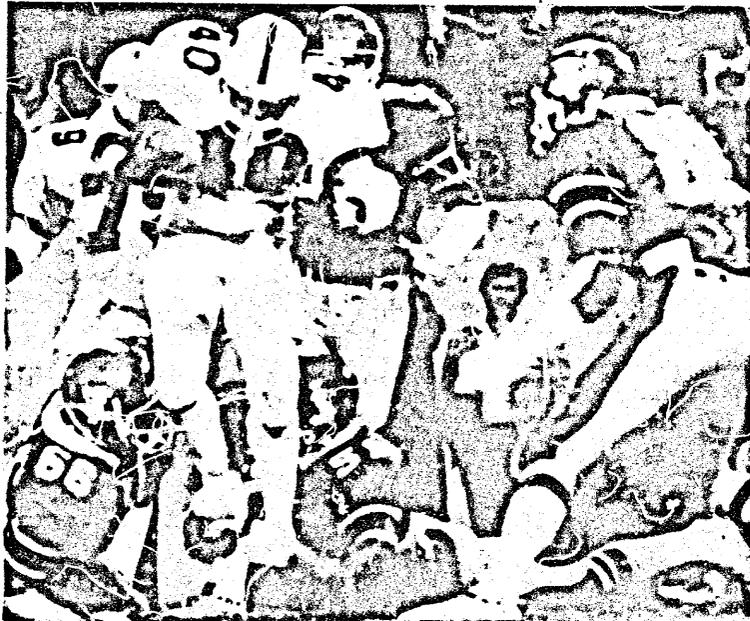

Jim Reburn, the Salukis' No. 3 man, was ill Friday and did not compete. He returned Saturday and fired a 72 to tie Clemens for the low score over 18 holes for SIU.

Mike Thompson, 154, Rich Jarrett, 158, and Butch Poshard, 160, rounded out the 36-hole scores for the Salukis.

Coach Walt Siemsgluz was pleased overall with the team's performance. "We have had our troubles on that course in the past, usually being left behind the leaders," he said. "This time we were in sight of the leaders the entire match and finished only three shots away from a tie for fourth."

The coach was particularly happy with Clemens' play. "Doug was in second place after the first 18 holes but had a rough front nine on Saturday," he said, "he was even-par on the back nine, finishing strong."

Siemsgluz is looking for a stronger team performance later this week in the Sycamore Classic at Terre Haute, Ind. "Poshard and Jarrett are both better golfers than their scores from this meet indicate," he said. Poshard had been battling Clemens for the team's No. 1 position.

HANGING ON — Arkansas State linebacker teammates move in. Coleman rushed for 42 Steve Shrabie clasps both ankles of Saluki yards in the Salukis' 24-16 loss to Arkansas State Saturday evening in Jonesboro.

Passing may key grid success

By David Gafriek
Sports Editor

Before the season started, it was said that SIU would do well if it split its first four football games. Wins were expected over West Texas State and Southwestern Louisiana. Losses would come at Tennessee State and Arkansas State.

With the exception of a couple of upsets, the forecast has proven to be true. SIU is 2-2. Things, however, are not as rosy as the prognosticators had led us to believe.

On campus, the questions about the team's performances have returned as one might have expected. What happened to the Salukis Saturday evening in Arkansas? Indeed, it would be easy to shrug off the fans' reaction as being too wishy-washy and negative after the loss.

There is something puzzling about this year's team, and maybe the fans sense it best. Outside of the Tennessee State game, SIU has yet to put all aspects of its game together. Everything went wrong at West Texas State. The defense and specialty teams were strong against Southwestern Louisiana.

The offensive performance was impressive against Tennessee State. In the first 22 minutes at Arkansas State, it looked as though SIU would blow the Indians out of their own stadium. The offensive and defensive efforts were that strong.

Then, pffft. The team went flat again. They were unable to capitalize on mistakes, unable to generate any offense until the game's final minutes.

Truly, the Salukis' performances in the first four games have been enigmatic. Such has Saluki Head Coach Ray Dempsey concerned.

"No, I'm not happy that we're 2-2," he said after the 24-16 loss to the Indians Saturday evening. "I feel we should be 3-1."

What is wrong? Fingers can be pointed in many directions. One outstanding fact remains. SIU has scored an average of only 12.8 points per game, even though it averages more than 273 yards in total offense.

It is no secret that SIU's greatest success on offense has been by passing. It seems strange to say it. SIU was a team that ran twice, passed once and then punted. Offensive line problems, inexperienced quarterbacks and receivers forced it to be that way. Perhaps the Salukis are guilty of practicing a bit too much of the strategy now.

The Salukis have Kevin House, a senior split end. Too often, sportswriters describe a receiver as a game-breaker just because he's quick. House is a game-breaker. He has good speed. He can catch the ball too — sometimes spectacularly.

House's eight catches for 189 yards against Tennessee State still ranks as the Valley's top offensive output by a receiver, and one of the top performances in the nation.

The team has an experienced tight end in Larry Kavanagh, who has caught 11 passes this season. Only House has more.

The quarterbacks seem more willing to throw the ball, while the line has proven capable of good pass blocking. John Cernak and Arthur Williams have shown the ability to throw — to ends or running backs and have avoided linebackers and defensive backs. Both the quarterbacks and the receivers seem to have confidence in the passing game.

The line gave Cernak the starting quarterback, good time to set up an "I concentrate on the receivers running downfield at TSU and against Arkansas State. Of course, a good passing attack means good performances by the linemen."

So why doesn't SIU throw more? Obviously, the Salukis can't afford to throw on every down. A coach would be a fool to pass twice or three times on every set of downs. The defenders would become outfielders waiting to catch balls.

Dempsey comes from the old line of coaches that believes you must establish a running game to complement the passing one. He has been maligned at times for being too conservative — for falling to gamble on occasion,

You wouldn't expect a freshman tennis player who finished ninth in her state high school tournament not to play in a college tennis meet. But Lisa Warren was sitting in the bleachers next to the University tennis courts at last Saturday's SIU-Illinois State match.

Since she could not play an active role on the court, she decided to play an active role off the court. "Way to go, Carol," she said when teammate Carol Foss hit a shot past her ISU opponent. "C'mon, Jeannie," she exhorted when Jeannie Jones began the third set of her match.

Lisa Warren, forced to the sidelines by mononucleosis, would give up her role as a fan any day.

"You don't know how much you enjoy playing until you can't play," the freshman from Mattoon said. "I had never been sick or injured or anything like that until this."

This year was supposed to be Lisa Warren's year to burst onto the SIU tennis scene. Along with her ninth-place finish in last year's women's state high school tennis tournament, Warren was formerly ranked 29th in the 16-and-under division of the Western Tennis Association. She has been a member of Junior Wightman Cup team, and qualified for the state tennis tournament four times while playing at Mattoon High School.

But Warren's dream of starring in college tennis must be temporarily shelved. She attempted to come back early in the season, but suffered a relapse and was forced to the sidelines.

"I was a couple of my first matches," Warren said. "But I was really dead. I had a blister on my foot, and my head felt really bad."

Warren said that before being sidelined, her only goals were to "do well in the state
