Student Affairs finalists selected

By Toby Eckert
Staff Writer

A University search committee Tuesday chose Jean Paratore and Harvey Welch as the two finalists for vice president for student affairs.

Welch currently is a used vice president for student affairs. Paratore is assistant vice president for student affairs.

The search committee received only one other application for the position, committee member Phil Lyons said. The committee was formed in August, after Bruce Swinburne left the position to become president of Mitchell College, a private liberal arts college in New London, Conn.

Paratore and Welch appear before the Student Center Thursday to field questions from the public. Carriage will be open from 2 to 3 p.m. Welch will appear from 2 to 3 p.m.

Both candidates stressed that their close, day-to-day working relationship would not be affected by the fact that they are competing for the vice president's position.

"We've always gotten along and there's absolutely no animosity between us," Paratore said. "It's a logical career move for both of us."

"I don't anticipate any problem with the fact that she's as interested in the position as I am," Welch said. He characterized his and Paratore's relationship as "cordial and professional." It will continue to be so no matter who is ultimately named to the position, he said.

Both candidates have similar philosophies about the role of the Office of Student Life in the University community. The office's mission is to help students in their growth as individuals and scholars.

"We are here to furnish and provide services for our students that allow them to maximize the benefits of an academic environment," Welch said.

Paratore said the office should play "a major role in the development of the students' whole beings while they are in school."

Union wants bill to banish law firm

By Toby Eckert
Staff Writer

The local chapter of the Illinois Education Association is hoping legislation passed by the state General Assembly in June will encourage the administration to drop the law firm representing it in collective bargaining proceedings.

The legislation, an amendment to an omnibus collective bargaining bill, would prohibit public employers from using public funds to retain "any external agent, individual, firm, agency, partnership or association in an attempt to influence the outcome of collective bargaining elections."

Gov. James R. Thompson signed the bill Thursday.

The Illinois Education Association, or IEA, is one of two unions vying to represent SIU-C's employees in collective bargaining.

David Gross, a member of the Democratic staff of the Senate Labor Committee, said the amendment would allow unions to file unfair labor practice complaints with the state Labor Relations Board if they believe management is trying to influence the outcome of collective bargaining elections.

Gross said the law firm representing the administration in collective bargaining activities - Seyfarth, Shaw, Fairweather and Geraldson of Chicago - specialized in "union avoidance," or helping employers devise strategies to thwart the establishment of unions. The IEA is one of two unions vying to represent SIU-C employees in collective bargaining.

Both candidates have stated that their close relationship as day-to-day colleagues would not be affected by the fact that they are competing for the vice president's position.

"We've always gotten along and there's absolutely no animosity between us," Paratore said. "It's a logical career move for both of us."

U.S. forces on alert as gulf tension rises

MANAMA, Bahrain (UPI) - U.S. forces on heightened alert in the Persian Gulf Tuesday fired warning shots across the border as they guarded a hovercraft the day after U.S. gunship helicopters attacked an Iranian vessel caught "red-handed" planting mines.

Three Iranian women were killed and 26 captured in the strike Monday on the vessel Iron Ajr, which was spotted throwing mines overboard in international waters off the coast of Bahrain.

Indiana, in its first official report on the Iran Ajr attack, denied the vessel carried "wartime defense equipment" and said it was loaded with a dung gunship which was loaded with a dung gunship which was destroyed by a fire on the "Islamic Republic News Agency" report.

The U.S. frigate Jarrett, towing the disabled Iranian vessel, fired warning shots over the bow of an Iranian hovercraft that was approaching it at a high rate of speed at 10:30 a.m. EDT Tuesday.

Record 24,160 students enrolled

By Mary Wisniewski
Staff Writer

Enrollment at SIU-C swelled to an all-time high this semester at 24,160 students, according to an official report released Wednesday.

The fall semester total, which includes on- and off-campus students, is up 899 from fall semester last year. The new figures beat the record of 23,991 students set in the fall of 1987.

This fall's record enrollment figure is no surprise to University officials, who have been preparing for the population boom with added class sections, classroom space and housing units since the beginning of the summer.

R. Kirby Browning, director of Admissions and Records, said he was "not a bit" unprepared for the total, though he had been disappointed by the lower number of transfer students this fall.

The total number of transfer students is 3,311, down 297 from last year. Browning said data suggests students are staying at community colleges and at other four-year state institutions, according to University News Service.

University President John C. Guyon said he is pleased with the high enrollment, but expects some problems. "If we're going to be able to continue to provide a high level of education, we're going to have to make some sacrifices to deal with the new population," he said.

Guyon said that students in General Education classes in particular have had to defer some of their class requests until next semester.

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — The official Cambodian news agency reported Tuesday the capture of an American Vietnam War veteran who said he entered the communist country illegally, apparently in search of missing U.S. servicemen. The news agency SFK, in a dispatch monitored in Bangkok, said a border patrol captured Sterling Brian Bess, 35, of Las Animas, Colo., more than four months ago inside Cambodian territory.

Thatcher condemns Iranian attack on tanker

LONDON (UPI) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher called the Iranian attack on a British-flagged tanker “absolutely outrageous” Tuesday and angrily defended the U.S. strike on an Iranian ship believed laying mines. The Foreign Office summoned Iran’s charge d’affaires and handed him a formal protest, demanding an explanation and an apology. Two Iranian soldiers were killed during the tanker Gentle Breeze that killed one Filipino crewman and injured 30 others.

Solidarity leaders call for ‘militant action’

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — Solidarity leaders, in the first open criticism of Lech Walesa, are demanding that the founder of the outlawed union spearhead a new militant action against the communist authorities. The demand, contained in an open letter to Walesa, echoed the discontent of workers who have stepped up pressure on the banned union’s leadership in recent months to fight for more democracy in the Socialist country.

Nicaragua to postpone action against Contras

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — President Daniel Ortega Tuesday reopened a Catholic radio station and said Sandinista troops would postpone military operations against Contra rebels in order to explore a possible cease-fire. U.S. officials welcomed the reopening of the radio station, but said Ortega’s announcement on the postponement was unclear and that all combatants must be involved in any cease-fire. Ortega announced the measures after meeting Tuesday with Nicaraguan Cardinal Miguel Obando y Bravo, head of the National Commission of Reconciliation.

Bush’s vote prevents ‘Star Wars’ program cut

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Vice President George Bush cast a rare tie-breaking vote Tuesday, saving the “Star Wars” program from an $800 million cut critics sought to make in the controversial defense system. With the Senate deadlock at 50-50 on a move to kill the amendment, written by Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La., Bush voted with Reagan administration allies to defeat the proposal. The Senate’s version of the 1986 defense bill set aside $4.5 billion for the Strategic Defense Initiative, and Johnston wanted it cut back to $3.7 billion.

Hahn details sexual encounters in ‘Playboy’

CHARLOTTE, N.C (UPI) — The November issue of Playboy magazine appeared in Charlotte Tuesday six days ahead of schedule, and featured Jessica Hahn in the nude and revealing all about her sexual encounter with Jim Bakker. The 35-year-old former church secretary, who is now a reporter, said entered the church while doing the interview and photo layout helped restore her sense of self-esteem, which she said was destroyed in the 1989 encounter with Bakker.

U.S. Embassy in Moscow to remain standing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States has decided against tearing down the U.S. Embassy in Moscow for at least a year. Rep. Dan Mica, D-Fla., said after a meeting Tuesday with State Department and CIA officials. The U.S. Embassy in Moscow was found to be wired with hidden microphones and other spying devices planted by Soviet intelligence. Mica’s announcement followed by a day the public complaint by Rep. William Broomfield, R-Mich., the senior Republican on the Foreign Affairs Committee, that Congress was consulted, as promised, by the administration before a decision was made on the future of the Moscow embassy.

Biden tries to salvage presidential campaign

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., fearing multiple bunglers may have “overwhelmed” his candidacy, said Tuesday he may be forced to drop out if the disparity between his campaign and the Bork hearings was but in the presidential race “at this point.” At the same time, another tape recording of Biden blunder remarks emerged that showed he at least twice embellished his academic achievements.

New AIDS laws educate public on prevention
By Laura Milbrath
Staff Writer
The new laws allow health officials to trace the sex partners of AIDS victims and require people planning to marry to test for the disease. The laws also require a court order by a judge on the status of AIDS victims can be quarantined and schools will teach sex education to teach sexual abstinence.
Fesco, visiting the University of Illinois campus yesterday, said the new laws are "a good step forward" and stressed that parents, educators and physicians in Illinois must work together to provide preventive medical education to warn teenagers that sexual promiscuity can make them more vulnerable to AIDS.
Fesco said that AIDS is no longer a moral problem but a public health problem and teenagers must be made aware of it because of the rise in teenage sexual promiscuity in recent years.
"Adults know that casual sex is out," Fesco said. "But I don't think that has gotten into the teen community. Teenagers have a feeling of invincibility and that makes them vulnerable."
Parents play a critical role in educating their teens on the risks of casual sex and the tragic consequences it can bring, Fesco explained. He said "Parents must understand that they should teach their children about the dangers of their growing sexuality. If they don't, it may be that they will not have their children or grandchildren or a future. It will be a dead end."
Fesco cited statistics showing almost 50 percent of teens in Illinois between the ages of 15 and 19 are sexually active.
AIDS has spread into the heterosexual community and teens must be made aware of this, Fesco said. They must learn that the disease is not spread by "just dope addicts and homosexuals. It would come from anyone they have sex with."
The importance of AIDS education is also being stressed to physicians because frequently, they are the first people teens approach when they are concerned about their health, Fesco said.
He stressed his belief that sex education in the schools must explain the risks that teenagers take when they engage in sexual activity.
"AIDS is a fatal disease. It puts a different slant on promiscuity," he said. 'They have to know what they are getting into. Information about HIV can't hurt anybody. It may save their lives."
Student band to play during voter registration
By Dana Schulte
Staff Writer
"New South Whales," a University student band formerly known as "Art Splatter," will perform from 1 to 4 p.m. in the Free Forum area to kick off the Undergraduate Student Organization voter registration rally.
At least one registration table will be set up in the Free Forum Area that is in contact with the Student Center.
We would like to create a big awareness so we are looking to start off (the rally) when there is a large number of students outside," David Madlener, USO coordinator of the rally, said Tuesday.
USO members also will walk through the crowd to register voters, he said.
Madlener expects about 150 students to register Tuesday night at tables in the dueling halls. This would bring the total to about 800 who have registered since the campaign started Wednesday.
"Most of the registering has been occurring in the dining halls," Madlener said. Today "we have an opportunity to register off-campus students."
About 10 registrars will be available to register students, according to Stephanie Bedinger, USO secretary.
Because of a school board election, the deadline to register is Monday.
Tables will be set up in Lenz, Trublood and Grinnell dining halls between 4:30 and 6 p.m. through Monday. Madlener said a table may be set up at the football game Saturday.
Students also may make registration changes at the registration tables.
Registration is important to students so they can vote in the presidential primary in March 1988, Madlener said.
"Some say they can wait to register," he said. "We want to get as many people now as possible."
Madlener said students need to be aware that they can only be registered in one place at one time. Students who are registered at home — in a different county — can register here and cancel the health registration, he said.
"If you are going to live here, it's important for you to elect someone who will be supportive of you when it comes to issues that will affect you," Madlener said.
The USO is competing with the University of Illinois to get the most students registered.
"SIU students don't like to play second rate to U of I," Madlener said. "This is one opportunity we have to say, 'Yes, we are the best.'"
USO to propose rollback on state tuition increases
By Dana Schulte
Staff Writer
Proposals for a rollback on the proposed tuition increase and a student transit system will be discussed at the Undergraduate Student Organization meeting at 7 tonight at the Recreation Center.
The USO agenda states that the group realizes a tuition increase is necessary to offset state funding cuts. Gov. James R. Thompson cut General Revenue Funding to SIUC by 4 percent in July.
If the funding is recovered, the tuition increase becomes necessary, according to the USO agenda. The group would then ask the board of Trustees to roll back the proposed tuition increase.
Also, the student welfare commission will be given until Oct. 21 to report its results.
The USO will seat seven senators: Marvin Tanner, Ron McCarthy, Judy Ann Thompson, Jill M. Rogers, Todd Green, John Steinbeck and Arno Burnett.

Reagan's shackle 'ness crippling to students

Regardless of whether your summer was spent at work or on campus, we are all painfully aware of how Governor Thompson spent his summer.

He tried to get us to pay more taxes to support the state's enterprises, but when he asked to bill Illinois, it was left with last year's budget minus a raise for the governor and his top workers. These raises must have been quite substantial to necessitate a 5 percent cut in education statewide and a 30 percent cut in the botany department, where I work.

This hides a negative impact on those of us who made education our career and who lost summer jobs because the state had no money to pay us. Somehow that Governor Thompson's raise should be made possible by the loss of our jobs.

Although we were unem­ployed, life continued and college students have been asked to meet escalating tuition and costs of living, then he took back his promise with the slick "expected family contribution" maneuver.

College students must wonder whether education is really a priority of our government or if it is becoming something that only the children of elected officials can afford. What can we do about it?

A vote — with a vengeance. Replace these people with others who have their priorities straight. We won't be a major world power for long if most of our offspring are barely educated enough to work at a gas station. If the way to improve the world is to improve ourselves, education is a good place to start.

— Gary Spitzer, graduate, botany.

Budget cuts haven't hurt administration

My department couldn't afford to hire me to teach here this summer, so I spent June, July, and August away from campus, I returned to discover that budget problems resulted: a cut in the salary of a junior professor in the botany department, where I work.

This was a depression indeed were it not for the fact that there is one bright spot in the midst of all the economic gloom: we still have jobs.

For example, we have boosted the salary of our new president, John Guyon, to a staggering $106,000, 25 percent more than we paid his predecessor, Albert Somit. And we are able to pay a $32,000 salary to a secretary who will keep track of the social calendars of Mrs. Guyon and the wife of our new chancellor, Lawrence Pettit.

Norse we have had any trouble finding the $12,000 Chancellor Pettit wants in order to renovate Stone House to suit his tastes. Among all these hefty six-digit figures, it seems hardly worth mentioning our $10,000 we came up with to pay off Chancellor Pettit's Texas state income taxes, which he used for the loss he took in selling his Texas home.

And there was plenty of money to pay for Chancellor Pettit's recent European tour — a tour he apparently undertook somewhat grudgingly. To paraphrase his comment upon his return: It was a dirty job, but somebody had to do it.

Since SIU-C faculty members — at my level at least — have been told by the University administrators that we can't expect any money for (among other things) salaries or travel, I would like to offer myself to Chancellor Pettit's consideration the next time he is faced with a tour requiring a University representative and, to quote his words, "somebody has to pay for it."

— Mehardt, associate professor of Spanish.

Tuesday and ignored a request to stop, the Pentagon said. "The hovercraft then turned away and stopped," it said.

The Jurell fired the warning shot when the hovercraft — which rides over the water on air cushions at speeds up to 40 mph — was a nautical mile away from the frigate, the Pentagon said. The craft then turned off the air pressure at the sound of the shots and came down onto the water.

"It was one way for them to show that there were no bad intentions," one source said. "Possibly they were looking for survivors. Nothing happened."

Meanwhile in New York, Iranian President Ali Khamenei, speaking before the U.N. General Assembly, called the U.S. account of Monday's attack a "pack of lies" and threatened retaliation for the attack.

"I unambiguously announce that Washington will receive the appropriate response to its mischievous act," said Khamenei.

He also rejected President Reagan's call for an immediate cease-fire in the gulf and blamed the United States, which "called it Satan," for tensions in the gulf region.

Pentagon sources said naval forces in the gulf were put on alert and that attempts by Iranian terrorist attacks against U.S. ships in the region in reprisal for the attack were thwarted by helicopters that attacked the Iranian craft.

Adm. William Crowe, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, told United Press International U.S. forces "caught" the Iranians laying mines, but that the quality of photographic evidence of the activity was poor.

"This was the first time that we caught them red-handed," one Pentagon official said.

Crowe said naval forces were engaged in "prudent" preparations that he suggested were aimed at thwarting any Iranian reprisals for the gulf attack.

Reagan vows not to invoke War Powers Act in attack

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan said Tuesday he would not invoke the War Powers Act because of the U.S. attack on an Iranian ship, but lawmakers promised new efforts to force Reagan's hand with an amendment to a key bill.

Despite the threats from Capitol Hill to make Reagan invade the Vietnam-era law, lawmakers were nearly universal in their support of the military strike.

Reagan delivered a flat "no" when asked if he would invoke the act in light of Monday's incident in the Persian Gulf. A U.S. helicopter gunship fired on the Iran Air, which allegedly was spotted planting mines.

"This was exactly what the war powers act had in mind," said Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., who accused the administration of downgrading Congress in crafting its Persian Gulf policy.

The law, enacted in the aftermath of the Vietnam War, requires a president to notify Congress within 48 hours whenever U.S. forces engage in hostilities or a situation "where imminent involvement in conflicts is clearly indicated."

Congress then has 60 days to vote on whether to authorize the military action. In the absence of a vote, the military action must be terminated.

Services slated for ROTC commander

A memorial service for the late Col. Alexander R. MacMillan will be held at 2 p.m. Saturday at St. Andrews Episcopal Church, 402 W. Mill. Mr. MacMillan, who died on Aug. 15, was the retiring commander of SIU-C's Air Force ROTC from 1964 to 1969. A professor of military science, MacMillan retired from the Air Force in 1969 and went before the University's Transportation Institute.

Although he retired from the University in 1966, MacMillan served as an advisor to University presidents until 1971. MacMillan will be interred at West Point Military Academy in New York. He graduated from the academy in 1929.
Groups present views of Bork

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Harvard law professor Laurence Tribe told the Senate Judiciary Committee Tuesday that Robert Bork likely will remain hostile to individual rights, despite the Supreme Court nominee's assurances that his views have changed. Tribe led a parade of legal scholars, law enforcement officials and artists testifying about the qualifications of the controversial nominee as the committee prepared to open with an exhaustive dissection of the jurist.

"It is crucial to remember that Judge Bork is not on trial before the Senate, at stake is not simply his future, but the Constitution," Tribe said.

The Senate Judiciary Committee, which is reviewing Bork's positions as a legal scholar over the last 25 years, scheduled a lengthy list of witnesses including writer William Styron and artist Robert Rauschenberg, who were to testify about Bork's view of free speech.

In a prepared statement, Rauschenberg said the artistic world feared Bork's lifetime appointment to the Court would "be more important than the nation's high court well into the twenty-first century," Tribe said.

Tribe added, "You can't, rich and hopeful are united in a rebirth of what a new change in change of ideology, might overturn of innocence and artistic freedoms," the artist said.

By Carla Hills, a Cabinet official in the Ford administation, said Bork's view of equality advances, not retards, women's rights. She said Bork's views that the state and federal legislatures should be allowed to decide distinctions between the sexes.

Allowing democratically elected officials to make such distinctions, Judge Tribe said, will become "a serious issue for women's rights, as his opponents charge. Rather, his tone more sensitive," Hills said.

Lawyer and Democrat and former adviser to President Jimmy Carter, said Bork is a conservative jurist "who is closer to the center than to the extreme right."

President Ronald Reagan nominated Bork, 60, on July 1 to take the high court seat of the retired Lewis Powell. Justice.

Critics have charged that Bork, an appointee would shift the balance on the nation's highest court well into the 21st century, and could provide the crucial vote to overturn such liberal decisions as Roe vs. Wade, the 1973 ruling that legalized abortion.

Despite exhaustive hearings expected to last another week, four committee members still say they are undecided. Sen. Howell Heflin, D-Ala., indicated he has been heavily lobbied by Bork's supporters and opponents. When asked whether he had been under political pressure because of the Bork nomination, Heflin quipped, "Have my arms been twisted?" the answer on all are ready for a transplant.

Tribe, a longtime Bork critic, said that despite Bork's assurances that his views on key issues such as civil rights and women's rights have evolved, he could "proceed as a jurist exactly as his public record should lead this committee to fear."

"The moderation suggested by Bork's latest choice of words turns out to be illusory," Tribe said.

Law group member to speak against Bork

By Susan Curtis Sturtz-Winberg

A representative from Lawyers for the Judiciary, a nationwide group of attorneys and law professors, is expected to testify next week against the nomination of Judge Robert H. Bork to the U.S. Supreme Court.

The group, with more than 600 members, was formed in July to oppose the Bork nomination.

President Reagan nominated Bork, 60, a conservative member of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia. The group has prepared a statement to be read Monday or Tuesday at the U.S. Senate Judiciary Committee hearings in Washington, D.C., according to a statement by John Clay, president and spokesman for the group.

Clay said he will testify for the group, "The appointment of Robert Bork is not in the best interest of the country," he said. "He is a judicial radical, outside the mainstream of constitutional thought. That is why I am opposing him."

The group also objects to Bork's "too narrow interpretation of the Constitution," Clay said.

Bork's own testimony is more important than other peoples' or groups, but people can make valid points and have some effect, Clay added.

Clay said he will cite constitutional protections that Bork has criticized. Lawyers for the Judiciary also made other efforts to counter Bork's nomination.

Press conferences were held last week in Marion, East St. Louis, and Springfield, Clay said.

Among the groups who oppose Bork are the American Association of University Women, National Committee for Women and Girls in Education, National Organization for Women, Mexican American Women's National Association, National Abortion Federation, Right to Life League and the Black Women's Agenda.
October is Adopt-a-Dog Month

October has been named Adopt-a-Dog Month at the Humane Society for Southern Illinois and over 800 shelters across the nation. Nationwide, more than 13 million homeless, lost or abandoned canines are waiting to find new homes this month.

These canines, which face euthanasia each year, need homes. "All dogs make wonderful pets, and we need your help in making people aware of the number and variety of dogs we have available." Cindy Nelson, manager of the Humane Society of Southern Illinois, said in a letter.

Nelson invited residents interested in owning a pet to visit the shelter, located on Illinois 13 between Carbondale and Murphysboro, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Tuesday through Saturday and Sunday from 1 to 5 p.m.

The shelter has many different dogs of all ages and sizes — mostly mixed breeds.

Library awarded grant to catalog collections

By Laura Milbrath
Staff Writer

Morris Library’s Special Collections center has been given a $130,000 grant from the U.S. Department of Education to catalog and prepare First Amendment Freedom collections for researchers.

David Koch, associate professor in library affairs and curator of Special Collections, said the center will hire staff who will work with the First Amendment Freedom collections, cleaning and conserving the many works and placing bibliographic information in catalog.

The staff will also be placing the information into a national computerized data base. Included in the collections is the Ralph E. McCoy Freedom of the Press collection which contains more than 10,000 titles examining freedom of the press in England and America, Koch said.

Because of budget limitations in the past, the volumes in Special Collections were not always adequately prepared and made available to researchers, Koch said.

The grant "will help make one of the country’s freedom collections in the country available to researchers," Koch said.

Kenneth Peterson, dean of library affairs, said the library has been trying for several years to get this grant.

“We feel this is a major breakthrough,” Peterson said. "We are especially pleased that it has been funded this year to get us started on this important project.”

Chicago teacher strike talks move slowly

CHICAGO (UPI) -- School officials said Tuesday there was some movement in bargaining with their 29,000 striking teachers during a 15-hour overnight session aimed at ending the walkout, now in its third week. Talks were to resume later Tuesday.

The degree of movement was described by the Board of Education as "a fraction." Chuck Burdeen, a spokesman for the Chicago Teachers Union, said union bargainers "responded to the board proposals," but he labeled them "disinformation" allegations that the CTU had previously refused to respond.

Negotiating between the two sides ended shortly after 3 a.m. Tuesday and were expected to resume late Tuesday afternoon.

The walkout, which began Sept. 8, has canceled classes for 380,000 students and sparked demonstrations Tuesday at school board headquarters, the State of Illinois Center and the State Street Mall.

A lawsuit was filed Tuesday on behalf of a coalition of parents of public school students and community activists seeking to reopen the schools and return the children to the classrooms. The suit was filed by Lou Myers, attorney for the People's Coalition.

School officials also responded to reports they were considering firing 5,000 teachers in order to meet the teachers' demand for a pay hike as the nation's largest school strike finished its 11th school day.

Two teachers union officials said the firings would be illegal because they would increase class size, a union violation.

The Alchemedians will open the 1987-88 Shryock Auditorium Celebrity Series season at 8 p.m. Sept. 26 as part of SIU-C’s Parent’s Day celebration.

Robert Hageman, Shryock business manager, said about 600 tickets are left, so good seats are still available.

The Alchemedians are Bob Berky and Michael Moschen, who combine juggling, mime, clowning, dance, acrobatics, and mentalism, to what has been described as New Wave Vaudeville.

Berky and Moschen never speak during the performance, instead they rely on comic timing and physical skills. They animate objects such as tubes, pipes, bowls and balls by giving them the illusion of life.

The strange background settings and props look like baby space crafts, conic strips, or something that could have been designed by Dr. Seuss.

The soundtrack by David van Tieghem, former percussionist for Laurie Anderson, uses everything from baby space crafts, or something that could have been designed by Dr. Seuss.

The Alchemedians, who are full-time college or university accounting teachers, although Illinois CPA Society membership is required. Nominators need not be CPAs.

The winner will be honored at the society’s Spring Awards Banquet on April 21, 1988, and will be eligible for the American Institute of CPAs national Outstanding Educator Award.

Initial nomination forms are due Nov. 15. Finalists will be chosen from the pool of initial nominations, and a more detailed form will be issued.

To receive an initial nomination form, write Steve Smith at the Illinois CPA Society, 222 S. Riverside Plaza, 16th Floor, Chicago, 60606, or call 1-800-572-9850.

The show will be in two acts. Act One is called “Laboratory,” and the two become mad scientists wearing strange gowns and bathing caps. The act features Berky’s prefalling and Moschen’s juggling, each man’s specialty.

Act Two is called “Vital Principles,” and features magic, illusions and participation from the audience.

Nominations for the award recognize an active CPA educator who makes a significant contribution to accounting through both teaching and active involvement in professional organizations.

Rock band spurs new name for ministry

By Tom Trotter
Staff Writer

The Baptist Student Union (BSU) has changed its name to Megalife Christian Ministry, Philip Nelson, pastor of the ministry, said last week.

James Smith, student president of Megalife, said he and others involved in the ministry "reevaluated the goals of the ministry" and that reevaluation led to the name change.

One new goal of Megalife is to distinguish itself from the Baptist Student Center, where its meetings are held. "Baptist Students' P'n' sound old-fashioned and caused students to confuse the ministry with the building," Nelson said.

Moreover, "under the old name, it may have appeared that this ministry is for Baptists only, while the truth is that we are open to all denominations," Smith said.

Nelson said the rock band Megadeth was the inspiration for Megalife. Megadeth opened for rock musician Alice Cooper, who performed at the Arena last spring.

Members of the BSU stood outside the arena during the concert passing out pamphlets which read, "Megadeth or megasex? the choice is yours," Nelson said. "Then someone mentioned that a bunch of people ought to walk around with 'Megalife' written on their shirts."

Nelson and BSU members took flier statement seriously and printed Megalife in large red letters on fronts of white T-shirts before the end of the spring semester.

Keanu Reeves' portrayal of Matt is sensitive and powerful in revealing the anguish felt by all the teenagers and he provides the clearest solution to the gang's strange behavior.

What follows is a riveting, nightmare analysis of moral breakdowns in middle-class America.

Divorce and his mother's drug use have seriously influenced Matt and his struggle to keep the family together is desperate and seems a timely and monumental task.

A crucial scene occurs when a high school teacher confronts students in his class and challenges their behavioral and emotional responses to the movie.

The 'River's Edge' did a good job of depicting the event, but if communication and respect between teenagers and authority figures has diminished as much as it seems in the movie, then the matter needs closer examination than the movie can provide.

The staff of the Th East Side Story newsletter (ESS) has completed this semester’s first edition without the use of its press, a housing coordinator said.

The press has been used by previous staffs since the ESS started over 15 years ago.

Gary Brown, program coordinator for University housing, said the ESS staff is now using a microcomputer to print its finished copy. The copy is then photocopied.

At least 1,000 copies of the oldest edition have been printed for circulation on campus.

“The East Side Story has cost about $4,000 a year to produce,” Brown said. “The main expense has been to run and maintain the press,” he said.

He said using a microcomputer in conjunction with photocopying will cut cost by at least one third.

Most funding for the ESS is donated by east campus halls. Brown said, “Each hall has donated about $1,500 a year. That money comes from the $12 campus housing activity fee paid by each student,” he said.

Brown said staff members also will save time using the microcomputer. “Previous staffs spent more printing than they did writing, since the press often broke down,” he said.

The ESS is a non-profit newsletter written and produced by volunteer students. The ESS’s main focus is on news surrounding east campus housing.

The decision to start printing by microcomputer was made by the spring semester’s staff.

“The staff wanted to bring the ESS up to date with the printing process,” Brown said. He said the press is at least 30 years old.

The press, bought with state funds, has gone to the University: surplus property department, Donal Ballestro, as assistant director for University housing said. In reference to the department, Ballestro said, “It’s up to them what will be done with the press.”

‘Laugh-In’ straight man dies age 65

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Dan Rowan, the bemused pipe- smoking straight man to comic Dick Martin in the 1960s– ’70s hit “Rowan & Martin’s Laugh-In,” died Friday night. He was 82.

Rowan, who teamed with Martin for more than 20 years in nightclub and television shows, died at 8 a.m. EDT, said Valerie Douglas, a family friend and public relations consultant in Hollywood.

At Rowan’s side were his third wife, Joanna, and his daughter Starr. His son, Tom, was en route to the Rowan home when the comedian died of a sympathetic cancer.

ROGAN was the driving force of the comedy team, which starred in “Rowan & Martin’s Laugh-In” on NBC-TV from January 1968 through May 1973. Shortly after its debut, the show became No. 1 in the Nielsen ratings and won Emmys in 1968 and 1969.

“We were as close as brothers and I will miss him,” Martin said. “He was a very pleasant guy who never enjoyed show biz as much as he did his friends, his boats and the outdoors.”

“Dan was always in the best of company when he was alone,” Martin said.

“Laugh-In” was a fast-paced hour of blackouts, sketches and silliness that reminded viewers of the old Olsen and Johnson TV specials. It was an innovative series that broke all the rules and led to such satiric copycats as “Saturday Night Live.”

“Actually, I was a fast-paced hour of blackouts, sketches and silliness that reminded viewers of the old Olsen and Johnson TV specials. It was an innovative series that broke all the rules and led to such satiric copycats as “Saturday Night Live.”

IN ADDITION to making “overnight stars” of Rowan and Martin, the comedy series introduced such other comic greats as Goldie Hawn, Lily Tomlin, Henry Gibson, Ruth Buzzi and Judy Carne.

Rowan signed off the show each night with “Say good­ night, Dick.” Martin each week responded with “Goodnight, Dick.”

Rowan and Martin were close friends off-camera and were proud that their partnership had endured longer than any other comedy team.

In addition to “Laugh-In,” they co-starred in two feature films, “The Maltese Bippy” and “Once Upon a Horse.”

ROWAN was born in Beggs, Okla., July 2, 1922. At age 4 he was dancing and singing in a touring carnival; with his parents. He was orphaned at 11 and placed in an orphanage in Colorado, where he was eventually adopted.

EIU’s Payton gets chance to throw passes for Bears

CHICAGO (UPI) — The substitute Chicago Bears will be led by a Payton, just he won’t wear No. 21. He’ll be the quarterback of the football team, and he won’t be black.

The Bears have signed former Eastern Illinois University quarterback Sean Payton to quarterback the team that will play in place of the regular Bears, which are on strike along with the rest of the NFL players.

Payton, from nearby Naperville, Ill., is no relative of the Bears’ star running back Walter Payton.

By Tuesday afternoon, the Bears had “no- something” players signed to substitute for the regular Bears, a Bears official said.

But they said roster announcements would be made until Thursday, although the substitutes needed to be selected by the Bears at the Bears’ training camp in Lake Forest Wednesday for their first training session.

The first other player agent signed by the Bears is punter Kevin Brown of West Texas State who worked out with the Bears in training camp before being cut.

Bears’ personnel chief Bill Tobin was responsible for signing the 40-player roster to be used for the games during the strike.

“We’re a little short in the critical area,” Bears’ coach Mike Ditka said, alluding to linemen.

Bears officials said they have yet to decide what kind of refund will be offered ticket-holders not interested in seeing the substitute team. The Bears do not have a home game until Oct. 11 — against Minnesota.

Sean Payton played with the Chicago Bruisers of the Arena Football League until he got an offer from the Ottawa Roughriders of the Canadian Football League. He was released the Roughriders after less than a month.

“This is an opportunity for me to help myself in the future,” said Payton, who set several passing records at Eastern Illinois before graduating last spring. “I haven’t even thought much about crossing a picket line.”

Crossing a picket line apparently won’t be a problem at Cris Collins’ Hall because the Bears do not intend to set one up.

Instead of picketing, Bears’ assistant player representative Dave Duerson said, the players will begin meeting Thursday to work out together so they stay in shape for the resumption of the season.

In four years at Eastern Illinois, Payton threw for 10,905 yards to place third on the NCAA’s all-time career passing list. He owns 16 of 20 passing records at EIU and finished his career as an honorable mention All-America selection.

Falcon scout says ‘scabs’ would’ve got call anyway

SUWANEE, Ga. (UPI) — Ken Herock of the Atlanta Falcons, likening a college recruiter to a pro scout in trying to find players for the pro team.

“The quality that is coming in is not necessarily the quality that walked out,” said Herock, who ordinarily scouts for the college teams. “But there are a lot out there, probably 90 to 100 athletes who would have come into the league sometime during the season as replacements for those who are injured.”

The Falcons have sent out contracts to 40 players. As of last Saturday, just before the strike, they had acceptances from 15.

“A lot of the people that we are in contact with were on the border of making the cut, people who would still be in the NFL if each team had been able to carry four or five more players on their active rosters,” Herock said.

“Obviously, every body realizes we won’t be the level of play that we were, this past Sunday (when the Falcons beat the Redskins 21-9). But I still feel you’ll see good football.”

The Falcons intend to skip this coming weekend and resume play Oct. 4 with replacement teams.

“The quality of play will be real good,” Herock said. “It’s not like we’re putting people up against the total varsity players. They’re going to be lining up against equal competition. If somebody catches a 60-yarder, whether to Joe Smith of Lester Hayes, people are still going to be there cheering.”

Networks could be hit hard if players strike is lengthy

A prolonged strike by the NFL players' union would hit some television networks harder than others.

The stakes are higher at CBS and NBC, which televise the bulk of NFL play and paid the most for the rights to the games. ABC and ESPN also have interests.

ABC, which paid far less for the rights to the weekly Monday night game, television during prime time when advertising rates are much higher than on Sunday. The networks are contractually obligated to televise games involving non-union players but might get a rebate from the NFL.

For ESPN, the NFL this year represents a step into the major arena of television sports. Even though the cable network did not pay as much as the commerical networks, it wants to see its eight-game package to be the forerunner of bidding for other key events. A look at the networks:

CBS
- Costs — CBS paid $150 million yearly for the rights to televise the NFL down 10 percent from last year's $165 million payment.
- Programming — CBS has quietly explored switching some CFA college games to Sunday should a strike widen out games. CBS also has the NBA and could work out a modified deal to increase its coverage for nearly every game if there is a long strike.
- Stake — CBS might suffer the most if there is a long strike. CBS has the principal television markets — New York, Chicago, Los Angeles, Philadelphia and Detroit because it televises the NFC games. It also has the current glamour teams — Bears, Giants, Eagles and Cowboys. CBS paid more than the other networks for this and might be forced to pay, higher rebates to advertisers because of the potential ratings loss.
- NBC
  - Costs — NBC paid $120 million a year for the rights to televise the AFC package, down about 17 percent from the $166 million it paid last year.
  - Programming — NBC has some insurance in baseball. It has the rights to the playoffs the first two weeks of October which could ease loss of programming. NBC does not have rights to college football.
- Stakes — NBC's major markets in the AFC do not measure up with the NFC markets of CBS. In addition, NBC is No. 1 in prime-time programming and a ratings drop from an NFL strike would not be as critical to General Electric, owner of NBC, than it would at CBS.

ABC
- Costs — ABC paid $117 million for the rights to the NFL Monday Night package this year.
- Programming — Because only one game a week is at stake, ABC could fill the three hours with entertainment shows, notably movies. It could also try CBS' play and college football games switched to Monday night, but that is a longshot.
- Stakes — Like CBS, ABC is behind NBC in the prime-time sweeps. It counts on the highly rated Monday night games to lift its overall share in prime time or else could lose valuable advertising revenues should the networks be forced to make rebates. If a strike were to last all season, ABC would be the big loser: it has the Super Bowl this year.
- ESPN
  - Costs — ESPN paid $54 million for the first cable telecasts of NFL games this year.
  - Programming — ESPN is loaded with the biggest arsenal of alternative sports programming. It has rights to college football as well as a myriad of NCAA championships. It also covers boxing, golf, tennis and auto racing that could be modified to fill programming holes.
- Stakes — ESPN paid the least but is counting heavily on its eight telecasts during the season's second half. While it could fill programming with other sports events, ESPN paid 10 percent of NFC advertising inventory this fall. It spent $10 million on promotions and imposed a surcharge of 9 cents per subscriber per month to local cable operators to help defray the rights' fees. In some cases, it could force rebates, ESPN might also be forced to pay back cable operators.

Contract has Wilson crossing picket line

LOUIS ANGELES (UPI) — Los Angeles Raiders quarterback Marc Wilson, advised that his 35 million contract that he went on strike, crossed picket lines Tuesday and prepared himself for games involving non-union players.

"I've been on the phone with my attorney (Howard Shuster) the last couple of days and I was decided," said Wilson at the Raiders' practice facility. "From what I understand, there are about four percent of the players in the National Football League with guaranteed contracts. Fortunately, I'm in that position."

Wilson said that even though the strike was called for by the NFL player's association, his absence might be viewed as a breach of contract.

The decision, Wilson said, was not an easy one. "I think people are going to construe my being here that I'm supportive of management and perhaps not supportive of Gen: Upanah and the union," Wilson said. "The fact of the matter is that I'm very supportive of the union and their demands."

"My commitment is the direct result of some of the demands and issues that the Players Association is demanding. Free agency being the number one issue. My own situation with free agency is that there aren't two teams bidding for my services in the NFL. It was two competing leagues."

Wilson is in the final year of his contract he signed in 1983 when the U.S. Football League pushed itself forfree.

"I think I want to make it clear that I'm ready, willing and able to play, but I'm not going to play unless there are NFL-caliber players to play with," he said. "I think it's implied in my contract that the Raiders are going to provide certain things for security my safety helmet, shoulder pads, knee brace and those kinds of things. I think that means they are also going to provide players of NFL-caliber."

Wilson said he would be on strike if the contract was not in question. "I think if I were absolutely secure in knowing that my helmet, my shoulder pads, my knee brace and things like that were going to be provided, then I'd be here," he said. "I know I would not be here."

"I hope the players understand and the public doesn't misconstrue this to mean that I turned my back on the union."
Both teams had two players missing from the usual lineup. SIU-C's Ellen Moellering and Maria Coch did not play because of class conflicts. Evansville's No. 4 and No. 6 players did not play because one had a sprained ankle and the other could not miss classes.

In doubles play, Cherebetin-Jeffrey beat Graczky-Cook 6-2 and 7-5 at No. 1, Auld-No. 2. Stueby-Michele Yates beat Wilson-Docks 6-2 and 7-4 after trailing a set to 5-4 at No. 3. Knight-Burgess beat Owen-Jane Lindour 6-2 and 6-2.

Auld said she was pleased to see the team play with more confidence.

"Physically and mentally we had a letdown in the first set," Auld said. "We made a comeback in the second and third sets. I think that was a reflection of the tough competition we played this weekend.

"Right now, we're right on schedule. The players are progressing well. What has helped us up to now is our depth. We still can still get better."

The next time the Salukis take the court will be Oct. 2 in the Northern Illinois Invitational. SIU-C will play Northern Illinois, Eastern Michigan, Marquette and Cincinnati.

Met bashing is new sport with Card scoreboard fans

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Terry Pendleton couldn't quite understand why the crowd at Busch Memorial Stadium cheered when he struck out.

But it wasn't a sudden surge of animosity toward the St. Louis third-baseman — who has helped the Cardinals become contenders rather than pretenders this year.

Perhaps the crowd's reaction could best be explained by the ABM theory — ABM stands for anti-Mets missiles, but for: "Anyone But the Mets."

As Pendleton fanned, the scoreboard flashed the news that the New York Mets were losing in Pittsburgh. It was the Mets' misfortune that had roused the 43,000 fans.

Such is life in the major leagues during the pennant chase. Scoreboard-watching often becomes more consuming than the game on the field.

But it goes deeper than that this year in St. Louis. The home of the Gateway Arch has a real grudge against the Mets. St. Louis talk shows are filled with anti-Mets chatter. It was as if what happened to the Cardinals didn't really matter — as long as the Mets didn't win.

Never mind the Montreal Expos, who also were in the thick of the race for three months, had beaten the Cards 10 or 14 times and had a good chance to win the flag.

And the anti-Met hysteria goes beyond St. Louis — permeating the NL East.

The Cubs, longtime arch rivals of the Cardinals and the Cards' opponents in the game at hand, were admitting to having mixed feelings about beating St. Louis.

"St. Louis is one of my favorite teams," said Cubs' ace Rick Sutcliffe. "What do I think of the Mets? You guys have written that enough."

Dawson picked by lowans as MVP

DES MOINES, Iowa (UPI) — Chicago Cubs right fielder Andre Dawson has received high praise this season and is now getting outside votes for the National League's MVP award.

The latest vote came by way of an editorial Tuesday in the Des Moines Register: "He was a loser for the Chicago Cubs, but it should not be for right fielder Andre Dawson. He should be chosen as the National League's Most Valuable Player, the newspaper said.

"The numbers are impressive — .289 batting average, 136 runs batted in and 43 home runs, with 13 game-winning plays.

But they're more impressive since they were achieved playing for a loser. Dawson had to face the toughest pitchers who lost for winners. And no statistic measures hustle, leadership or guts. All but forgotten in the record books is the number of times a dangerous hitter like Dawson gets decked by opposing pitchers, but it weighs heavily onstats that do get noticed — like RBIs.

"Pitchers throw at Dawson to keep him off balance because the only other consistently dangerous hitter in the Cub lineup, Ryne Sandberg, bats ahead of him."

"Hit Babe Ruth and he was out on base with the likelihood that Lou Gehrig would drive him home. Hit Dawson and the next batter is likely to be somebody who a week ago was playing in Des Moines. Or should be.

"On a winning team, everyone looks good. On a loser, only the very best get noticed. Dawson, we submit, is the best and should be so recognized."

Gridders defense stung by injuries

Crouse joins disabled list

By Bill West Staff Writer

Head football coach Ray Dorr faced a difficult week of rehab for his team. In addition to the rash of injuries that are decimating the defense, "It looks like we are in the ninth week of the season."
The prognosis for pre-season All-Conference Gateway pick free agents by offering bonuses in "strike-option" contracts, allegedly the president Brian Holloway said. The New York office of the union's complaint was filed in Federal law under which the NFL Gridder defense stung every day of the Conference-East way. The owners voted to institute their rules. Sammy Gholston after his recent neck injury, took the second opinion from Indianapolis Colts' knee specialist Donad Sheibourne. "It doesn't appear that surgery will be necessary," Dorr said.

Crouse hurt his knee Saturday when he tackled Austin Peay quarterback Sammi Gholston after chasing him the width of the field. "Gholston saw me at the last moment and cut back. I jumped on him, missed him, and drilled him. I knew right away that I strained my knee," Crouse said.

Crouse's replacement is Maryland freshman Doug Reid, a 6-6, 250-pound defensive tackle, left for Indianapolis Tuesday seeking a second opinion from Indianapolis Colts' knees specialist Donad Sheibourne. "It doesn't appear that surgery will be necessary," Dorr said. Crouse's injury was a blow to the defense, but it is expected to be back in time for this Saturday's game against Illinois State. Bootie is replacing Anthony Woods. Bootie's back up, James Cow, ajunior outside linebacker, is out with a knee injury.

The injuries to the defense have the coaches talking to themselves. "Two weeks ago we were looking to moving one of the offensive players to the defense. Now he's a household name on defense, in my book anyhow," Dorr said.

Women netters nail Aces in stormy, disputed match

By Dave Miller Staff Writer

The Salukis' tennis women's team defeated Evansville 9-0 at the University Courts Tuesday. Evanesvi: disputed several calls throughout the match. Since the USL holds matches, even some of the things that were said," Auld said. "I think the team's a reflection of their coach. Our players wanted to beat them and beat them badly." The win improved the Salukis' record to 9-1, while Evansville dropped to 4-2. Boardman and Dana Cherubini won in straight sets. Boardman beat Gruzyk at No. 1 singles, 7-6, 6-4.

NFL Players Association files suit against league labor practices

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The NFL Players Association filed unfair labor practice charges against the league Tuesday, accusing clubs of offering "illegal financial inducements" for players to cross picket lines.

The action, announced on the first day of a strike against the NFL by some 1,600 players, singled out the New England Patriots for trading union vice president Brian Holloway allegedly as retaliation for his labor activity. The complaint was filed in the New York office of the National Labor Relations Board and came less than a week after the league filed its own unfair labor practices charge against the union.

The action names the NFL Management Council, the league's labor bargaining arm, and the league's 28 clubs. The union said the complaint contends the league unlawfully induced strike-breaking by offering agents $1,000 bonuses in "strike-option contracts" under which a player would agree to return to the club during a work stoppage. Federal law prohibits an employer from offering financial inducements above what is offered union workers to work during a strike. A union statement said the inducements also included promises of guaranteed future roster spots in 1988 for crossing picket lines.

The owners voted Sept. 10 to field teams of free agents and dissident veterans during a work stoppage, with "scab" players, starting Oct. 4. The non-union players are scheduled to begin practicing next week.

The complaint with the National Labor Relations Board also accuses the Management Council of obtaining information "through a bargaining representative's technically involving direct contact with free agents.

The union, empowered since 1982 to certify agents representing players in individual contract bargaining, formally decertified all agents Sept. 16, in effect retaking rights to represent all NFL players in individual contract bargaining. The NFL acc langued the league of "bypassing the union by negotiating directly with scab players.

"We traded Holloway, the team's union representative and the owner's interests," said Boardman. "It's intended he refused a forced retirement. Patriots Coach Raymond Berry said it was the best move for the team at the time that the move was punishment for union activity.
