How much?

At first glance this "for sale" sign's placement Thursday seemed like the University was trying to make back some of the money the state legislature plans to take away from it. But don't fret, Smith residents—it was probably the work of some clever vandals.

Protests sting S-Senate vote OK

By Lyndall Caldwell
Staff Writer

The Student Senate ratified the results of the April 14 Undergraduate Student Organization elections amidst charges of election code violations by Sting Party members. The election results were approved by a 21-yes, 15-no roll-call vote, dividing the senate along party lines.

The yes votes were cast by 20 Maverick Party senators, with one proxy. The no votes came from Sting and independent party senators.

The senate also ratified the results of the student trustee election by voice vote. The Graduate Student Council must also ratify the trustee results.

SEN. FRITZ Levenhagen, vice president-elect, said, "The Maverick party was elected because we represent the students. We worked for what we got and we deserve that," and the senate applauded.

President-elect Jerry Cook, USO chief of staff, said, "It was our intent to run a positive campaign.

"The Sting has not recognized that they lost the election," Cook said, citing vote tallies in his monthly report which listed the election returns. "I have a low opinion of what's happened lately. If you really want to give the students what they want, they want the Maverick party."

But Sen. Scott Bayliff, who was elected as a Maverick but now considers himself an independent, said, "If the senate looks at itself and says this was an honest, fair election," then something is wrong. He said the senate should have a new election.

DON BURK, Sting vice presidential write-in candidate, acting as a proxy for a senator, read his formal complaint to the election commissioner. He charged several violations of state and federal election laws.

Burk said provisions for a secret ballot were violated because there were fingerprints on the ballots, which make them "traceable" to the voter, and that pollworkers at Lents Hall

Beware military dinosaur, Minor says

By Randy Rendfeld
Staff Writer

Military establishments are like dinosaurs because both developed "fixated habits" that made them unable to adapt to a changing environment. Professor William S. Minor told a crowd of about 50 persons Thursday afternoon in Morris Library Auditorium.

"Creative criticism of military establishments tells us one thing most clearly," said Minor, "namely, that we must abolish military establishments, not just our own, but all of them in all nations." The declaration sparked a loud burst of applause.

"We cannot wait for them to destroy themselves by simply dying out, like dinosaurs, for they may destroy all of us in their futile struggle to survive."

"HATE IS LOVE frustrated," Minor said.

Minor interjected in his address frequent maxims, analogies, anecdotes and examples of what he called "creative interchange." After his formal speech, Minor engaged some of his critics in "creative interchange," not by trying to argue or debate, he said, but by trying to learn from them.

Minor's address, entitled "20th Century Dinosaurs: The Military Establishments," he said, is the "consummatory development of my life." He said it was the first time in decades of research that he had announced publicly his conclusions. Minor's address was a part of Ground Zero Week, a series of events to focus attention on the consequences of nuclear war. The address was sponsored by Student Environmental Center and the Coalition for Change.

Gus says worrying about what happened to the dinosaurs probably won't cause a single goose bump in the Pentagon, or the Kremlin, either.

Tight budget forces SIU job cutbacks

The University will leave 100 to 120 positions unfilled for fiscal 1983, including about 60 faculty positions, and there will be no salary increases for University employees. President Albert Somit has decided.

"It is my best estimate" that 60 faculty positions will have to be left unfilled, Somit said, "but we're going to do our best to avoid mid-contract terminations or dismissals."

Leaving positions unfilled and not increasing salaries are two of several measures the University will have to take to stay within Gov. James Thompson's fiscal 1983 budget for higher education.

currently are under construction, Somit said. The precipitators are designed to bring the Steam Plant's smokestacks within Environmental Protection Agency standards for coal-burning power plants.

Additional reductions in other support lines such as supplies and travel should be expected, he said. The University will be forced to "absorb any inflationary price increases outside of utilities, and absorb utility costs in excess" of the IBHE's recommendation, which is for only 80 percent of projected utility cost increases for fiscal 1983, Somit added.

The University also will have to make "major cuts in equipment and related services and will have to downgrade 10 to

'We have to plan for certain contingencies, and the planning is grim'—President Somit

Thompson's budget is $117 million less than what the Illinois Board of Higher Education recommended. The University expects to receive about $666,500 less than it did for fiscal 1982, unless additional state funds are appropriated.

Somit outlined the measures the University plans to take in a letter sent to Chancellor Kenneth Shaw about one week ago.

"We have to plan for certain contingencies, and the planning is grim," Somit said.

However, he said University officials hope that additional funds will be appropriated by the Legislature.

Somit also said that there could be "possible layoffs of civil service employees in some areas." But he was quick to point out that this is something "we prefer not to have to do, and it sounds worse than it is because most of them will be transferred from one area to another."

Somit said it is probable that some "prevailing rate" personnel, such as electricians, carpenters or painters, will be laid off "if we are compelled to raise hourly rates without" additional state appropriations.

Also, there could be a delay in operating the Steam Plant's electrostatic precipitators 20 positions," he said.

Somit said that because 60 faculty positions will be left unfilled, class sizes in some areas, especially those with high student demand, will have to be increased. However, he said, the increases will be "modest and won't be particularly noticed."

In addition to larger classes for some students, Somit said that there could be a reduction in library hours, but "we would be reluctant to do that."

Housekeeping services, heating and cooling will have to be reduced, Somit said.

Somit said that the measures being taken assume "no rescission of funds once they are appropriated," but the University currently is reviewing two courses of action it could take if SIU-C is asked to return funds to the state.

The first is the possibility of maintaining a 1 percent reserve of appropriations until Jan. 1, 1983 "when state revenue projections are more certain," Somit said.

The other is that, if a 3 percent salary increase is recommended as the result of tax increases, 1 percent would be held in reserve until Jan. 1,

PLO says no military action will be taken against Israel

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Radical Palestinians clamored Thursday for violent reprisals for the Israeli bombardment of south Lebanon but PLO chief Yasser Arafat and his dominant Fatah faction appeared to have reined in the extremists.

Palestine Liberation Organization officials said privately no military action will be undertaken against northern Israeli towns from southern Lebanon.

Israeli jets flew over Beirut on three reconnaissance flights Thursday, drawing anti-aircraft fire and sending local residents running for shelter.

The United States, meanwhile, strove to re-establish the cease-fire that was broken when Israeli jets blasted Palestinian strongholds near Beirut and downed two Syrian MiG-23 fighters over eastern Lebanon.

Latest police figures show 23 people killed and 60 wounded in the attacks Wednesday afternoon.

"We are working hard to re-establish and maintain the cease-fire," said U.S. Ambassador Robert Dillon after a 45-minute meeting here with Lebanese Foreign Minister Fuad Butros.

The 9-month-old truce was sponsored by both the United States and the United Nations to halt a 15-day cross-border battle between Israel and the PLO.

and a massive air attack that killed nearly 300 people in a Palestinian-controlled Beirut neighborhood.

Syria vowed to confront any new Israeli attack.

"Syria asserts anew it will confront any new Israeli military move in Lebanon," according to a statement from the Soviet-backed government broadcast on state radio in Damascus. "Arab skies will not be open to enemy arrogance."

The Syrians maintain a 30,000-man army in Lebanon under an Arab League mandate to police a civil war armistice between rightist Christians and an alliance of leftists and Palestinians.

Britain presents new peace plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — With her warships nearing the Falkland Islands and already poised to storm the dependency of South Georgia, Great Britain presented to the Reagan administration on Thursday a plan seen as a final, long-shot attempt to avoid new bloodshed with Argentina.

As Foreign Secretary Francis Pym outlined London's latest proposal to Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., British destroyers and troops were reported ready to strike at South Georgia, the Falklands dependency defended by an estimated 300 to 500 Argentine invaders.

South Georgia is 800 miles east of the Falklands, and about 1,100 miles off the coast of Argentina. It was captured by Argentine forces a day after the invasion of the main islands April 2.

British defense sources said the entire 61-ship armada in the South Atlantic would go on full war alert Friday night when it came within striking range of Argentine aircraft.

Pym said upon his arrival in Washington that Britain is committed to a peaceful outcome, if at all possible. "We will do everything we can to try to find a peaceful settlement to the dispute," he told reporters.

1983.

And University officials already are looking ahead to fiscal 1984.

According to John Guyon, vice president for academic affairs and research, "There may be further major cuts in personnel services and all term employees probably will receive fiscal '84 non-renewal notices in June."

Guyon said that the term employees involved are faculty, administrative and professional employees with contracts that have specific "beginning and ending dates." He added that University officials hope conditions will permit the University "to re-hire the majority."

About 200 University employees would be affected, he said, adding "This is nothing startling. We been doing this for years. We're just trying to develop a co-tenure plan."

Bomb explodes in Paris, killing one

PARIS (AP) — A time-bomb exploded in a rush-hour crowd near the Champs Elysees Thursday morning, killing a pregnant woman and injuring 63 other people in a fireball that sent chunks of a car soaring eight stories high.

The bomb also soured French-Syrian relations and raised speculation that the terrorist Carlos had struck again.

Interior Minister Gaston Defferre denounced the attack as "a bloody settling of scores which has nothing to do with France." He ordered the Syrian military and cultural attaches to Iraq to leave the country within 48 hours and recalled the French ambassador from Damascus.

Syrian officials denied any involvement in the bombing.

Third woman testifies at Parker trial

ROCKFORD (AP) — A woman testified that "I thought I'd met my first millionaire" when she was wined and dined by a former University of Illinois official who is being tried on charges of stealing thousands in university funds and spending it on women.

Cathy Robinett, 29, was the third woman to testify in the felony trial of former U of I Vice President Robert Parker, accused on 157 counts of stealing more than $600,000 in school funds and spending it on female companionship, sex and entertainment at the Club Taray in a Chicago suburb.

MOSCOW (AP) — Looking pale, drawn and somewhat shaky, President Leonid I. Brezhnev appeared in public Thursday for the first time in four weeks and listened with a hearing aid to KGB chief Yuri Andropov deliver the keynote address at a major Kremlin ceremony.

The 75-year-old Brezhnev has long been rumored to be in poor health and was reported to have been hospitalized late last month.

USO, GSC set 'pro-peace' day

By Doug Hettlinger
Staff Writer

The Graduate Student Council and Undergraduate Student Organization announced at a news conference that on May 1 a "Solidarity Day" march and rally will be held.

"It will be more pro-peace and less anti-anything," Todd Rogers, USO president, said.

The march and rally are responses to "Massive military increases" at the expense of education, legal assistance, food stamps, unemployment, veterans' benefits, health care, energy programs and environmental protection.

"We are not anti-military, but when it comes down to people not eating, what do you do?" Debbie Brown, GSC president, said at the conference Tuesday.

The march will begin at 11:15 p.m. from the SIU-C Free Forum Area for students and from the Eurma C. Hayes Center, 441 E. Willow, for Southern Illinois residents.

The two groups will converge on the Federal Building where, at noon, State Rep. Wyvetter Young, D-57th District, will address the crowd. State Sen. Vince DeMuzio, D-49th District, also has been asked to speak.

Steve Katsinas, graduate student in higher education and a member of the Southern Illinois Solidarity Committee as well as GSC president-elect, said 80 union groups in Southern Illinois have been contacted about the march and rally.

The Ministry of Criminal Justice, Hill House Cooperative, The Women's Center and the Mid-America Peace Project are among local groups that already have endorsed Solidarity Day, according to Katsinas.

The Southern Illinois Solidarity Day is an effort to motivate "an enlightened self-interest" among SIU-C and community groups according to Joyce Webb, whose name tag simply read "community volunteer."

examined ballots before placing them in the ballot box.

He also said that "solicitation of voters" occurred within the distance to the polling place limits allowed under federal and state election, and that a "non-secure ballot box" was delivered to the counting site by Maverick party member Todd Rogers.

ANOTHER CHARGE Burk made was that federal law states if a party's presidential candidate is declared ineligible, its vice presidential candidate can take over the presidential slot and the party can select a new vice presidential candidate to appear on the ballot.

Stolar was originally vice presidential candidate with Joe Dietzler as the Sting's presidential candidate. But USO Election Commissioner Dave Williams checked Dietzler's academic and disciplinary standing, and learned that Dietzler was on disciplinary probation. He then notified Dietzler of his ineligibility.

Williams said he complied with Dietzler's request for time for him to ask a dean to cancel the probation, which the dean refused.

WILLIAMS SAID Dietzler then suggested that since only the two of them knew about the probation, they not tell anyone else so Dietzler could run for USO president, a request that Williams refused by maintaining that Dietzler was ineligible.

Williams said he wondered why Dietzler failed to notify Stolar of his ineligibility until the candidates' pre-election meeting, after which no filing petitions may be submitted, and as a result he ruled that no parties other than the Maverick and Big O were eligible to appear on the ballot.

Burk said, "The election commissioner is responsible for informing a party if a candidate is ineligible because the party has no way to perform the necessary disciplinary and academic checks. In this regard the election commissioner was negligent and eliminated the Sting party's ability to qualify a new executive ticket for the ballot."

A MOTION WAS made to allow Stolar to speak before the vote on election results was taken, but the senate rejected the motion to suspend parliamentary procedure, which allows only senators to speak at senate meetings.

Stolar was allowed to speak after the vote, and he said he did not actively support Burk's objections because the bylaws upon which Burk based his objections were not written to deal with the voting process, but rather the campaign.

But Stolar told the senate, "I really don't see how you can say you represent the students."

Crime at SIU-C drops but felonies increase

By Anita Jackson
Staff Writer

The overall crime rate at SIU-C dropped 6 percent in 1981, while "index crime," which covers eight felony categories and some non-felony crimes, increased 5 percent, according to the SIU-C Security Department's annual report.

SIU-C's overall decrease in crime corresponds with the FBI's annual report which shows a decrease in crime nationwide for 1981. The report compiles crimes reported to the police and shows that, of major crimes, only robbery increased in 1981 — by 5 percent.

SIU-C Security recorded 1,651 criminal offenses last year compared with 1,750 in 1980. Most of the crimes reported in 1981 were in the misdemeanor and felony theft categories. Thefts over and under $150 increased.

SIU-C Security's annual report also shows a 4 percent increase in bicycle thefts last year with the value of the 206 bikes stolen estimated at $34,115. The average cost per stolen bike was $165, compared to $145 in 1980 and $119 in 1979.

According to the report, there was a 17 percent decrease in Illinois Vehicle Code Violations last year, while the number of accidents increased 7 percent. There was also a 4 percent drop in the category of University rules and regulations violations. The number of parking tickets issued dropped from a five-year high of 72,667 in 1980 to 60,902 last year.

Of the 1,035 "index crimes" reported, increases were recorded for forcible rape, attempted rape, robbery, attempted robbery, aggravated assault, battery, burglary, attempted burglary and larceny theft and attempts. Vehicle thefts, attempted vehicle thefts and arson were the only "index crimes" showing decreases. The 5 percent increase compares to a 7 percent increase in 1980.

"Index crimes" accounted for about 63 percent of the total criminal offenses other than traffic offenses recorded at SIU last year.

The number of rapes reported last year grew 300 percent over 1980, from one to four incidents. The number of attempted rapes was up 50 percent, from two to three reported incidents.

In his cover letter, Virgil Trummer, director of SIU-C Security, noted a 3 percent increase in property crimes, a category that accounted for 80.5 percent of all recorded criminal offenses other than traffic.

Reclassification of marijuana offenses as violations of University rules and regulations led to a 35 percent drop in the personal disorganization category. Actual criminal cannabis offenses dropped 91 percent last year because of the reclassification.

Opinion & Commentary

Politics is still a big part of higher education

THE CREATION OF the Illinois Board of Higher Education in 1961 brought a measure of civility and order to the politics of higher education. The scrambles for money and influence that took place in the days before the IBHE came into being are over. But it would be naive to think that hardball politics have disappeared from higher education simply because of the IBHE.

The SIU system, for instance, still shells out more than $120,000 per year in pay of four lobbyists to see after its interests with the Legislature in Springfield. There would be no need for this expense if the IBHE had completely removed politics from higher education.

The fact is that as long as the state allocates money to universities, and that will probably be for a long time to come, politics and higher education will remain intertwined. Some critics claim, for instance, that the IBHE is simply a tool used by the governor to force his will on the state's universities.

FOR THE PAST several years, however, the governor and the IBHE have failed to agree on budget proposals for state universities. This year, the governor, in his efforts to limit the state budget, gave the IBHE a budget for higher education that was about $117 million less than the IBHE and the universities felt was needed.

This is a perfect example of one of the times when the opinions of educators and politicians did not coincide. The politicians' views, obviously, took precedence.

Under the old system in which universities went directly to the Legislature, opponents of the IBHE say they might have been able to wrangle more funds to meet their needs.

THIS IS NOT to say that the IBHE is a hindrance. It is not. Because of the IBHE, some order has been imposed on a previously chaotic and unpredictable system of budget allocations. The IBHE also brings a certain amount of expertise to budgeting for the universities and works closely with them to determine their real needs.

As today's Focus article on the IBHE points out, higher education is still very much affected by political maneuvering. The IBHE may have helped reduce some of the backroom dealing, but it hasn't eliminated it. Those who chart the course of higher education must recognize this reality.

Letters

Thief took infant's clothes

I am writing this letter because I would like the thief or thieves to realize what they brought upon me and my son through their incomprehensible, unjustifiable and absolutely unforgiveable disregard for an innocent child.

With no attempt at exaggeration, you stole every single stitch of clothing my child owned. When you stole my baby's clothes from the Laundromat located at Calhoun Valley, you may have marveled at your luck, your good fortune, your ability to "get over," but you failed to consider the degrading act you were committing by taking something that did not belong to you.

There was nothing left for me to do but cry, lie awake nights and cry some more. You have everything that my child owned. Some of his undershirts are smaller than the others. Because I could not afford to buy new ones, he had to continue wearing those that he had.

I know his clothes were nice; I had no choice but to take care of them — so that they would last longer. Now he doesn't have one pair of pants, not a shirt, not a pair of socks, no pajamas, not a jacket left. Even his baby blanket is gone.

No words can express the sentimental loss, the frustration, the pain of seeing my 1-year-old child so incredibly wronged by you and your thoughtfulness. It hurts! I have thought of nothing else. Do you know what it is like to have nothing to dress your child in except what he has on his back? Can you understand the sacrifices and struggles that one must endure to clothe a child?

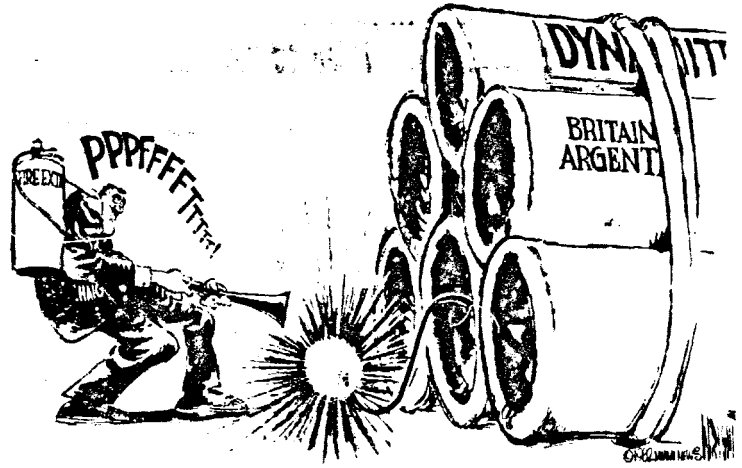

Bring my baby's clothes back! Leave them in a plastic bag with my name on it — no questions will be asked, and I will be eternally grateful. — Leona Ogbara, Secretary, Rehabilitation Institute.

Turn down the thermostat!

Can you tell me why it is always so hot in the Student Center? Does it have something to do with the geothermal gradient? I'm thinking of opening up a sauna in the second floor study lounge in order to pay my tuition for next year.

Seriously, I think this is an area of real concern. Buildings such as Morris Library, Parkinson Laboratory and the Student Center are consistently overheated. I've asked around and the best answer that anyone has given me is that the temperature is automatically controlled by some vague monitoring system. If there is and it doesn't work, then why don't they — whoever they are — abandon it and have the guys that go around and close the curtains also check the thermostat every now and then? This might save some money, but more importantly, it would make things more comfortable for people who relax and study in campus buildings. — Dieder Collahan, Junior, Radio and Television.

Holocaust will kill human souls

By Joe Proffitt
Chairperson, Student Environmental Center

What I'd like to write about is the myth of the survival and the myth of winning a nuclear war. I'm not here to preach doom and gloom. I'm here because I'm an optimist. I believe we still have a chance to save ourselves from the brink.

... we are at a point in the history of this country and this world where we, our generation, will make or break the world. But we need to look at the past for what it was, what it teaches us and, more importantly, the future — not what it will be, but what it could be.

AS HUMANS WE are very technologically advanced. Yet, we are still ruled as a species by our primitive emotions. The same being that can make great advances in physics, medicine — all the wonders of our technological society — can and does revert back to the cave in times of great emotional stress. This same person in a fit of anger can, without realizing it, kill someone in 30 seconds. Thirty seconds to pick up a gun or a club and kill someone. Thirty seconds to push the button — an irrational act by emotional primitive beings.

The problem is that our technology advances at an exponential rate while our emotional advances creep at a snail's pace. We can float with our technology in the space shuttle, yet our emotions take us barely from the mouth of the cave.

If history teaches us anything, it teaches us that escalation of weapons — be it bronze swords to iron, crossbows to longbows, or phosphorus to napalm — they all lead to their use. In the past these weapons had great short-term effects on the distinct populations that they were used on. We called this war.

What we face today is not war, but the end of the human species — not in the sense of obliteration, but in the sense of soul and spirit. There was in the past and is again a myth being touted that we as a species can survive a thermonuclear war. In all honesty, if you are unlucky enough to survive the holocaust, what you will face on the surface and below the ground is the end of the human race.

THERE IS A myth that we can survive underground as a society. Perhaps this is the cruelest myth of all. We as a species (you and I) are shaped and affected by our natural environment — whether it is known to you or not. A human society underground is a society that can be much more easily controlled and programmed. An underground human society is a society cut off from the natural environmental stimuli that shaped us. Never before has a society been subjected to the loss of freedom and the loss of natural stimuli! If we go underground, this will happen!

We will become a species in a total man-made environment. We as a species will become like the white rats in the basement of Life Science II. Like these rats, we will be total prisoners. We will never feel the heat of the sun, see the night sky full of stars. We as a species will never touch the wind or hear the sound of birds on a spring morning. We will never know the privilege of open spaces such as forests, fields or oceans because we will constantly be surrounded by walls. The feel of dirt and the smell of a just-finished thunderstorm will be no more. So many little things we take for granted, so many things that made us human and keep us human. They will be forever lost!

We in effect will become shells of human beings. On the outside we'll have all the appearances of humans yet, like those rats, we will have no spirit, no soul, no being. We as a species will cease to live and begin to only exist. This is called winning?

IF YOU GET A chance in the next week or two, go visit the basement of Life Science II. Look those rats in the eye. If we don't stop the madness soon, that is the future of the human race. Your light will come from the switch on the wall. Your air will come from a ventilation duct. The only sound you'll hear is the noise of your fellow interns, and you'll be constantly surrounded by walls.

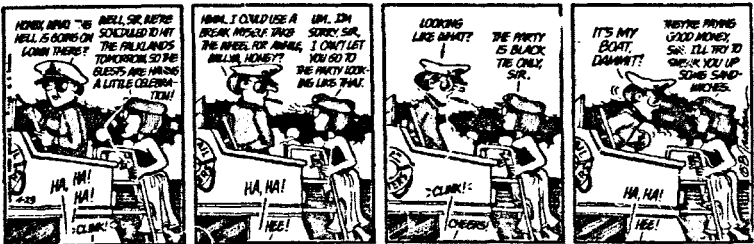

I have often asked myself how those people in charge of this country can talk about going into a nuclear war to protect liberty, freedom and the American way of life. These people will do exactly the opposite in the name of protecting us.

We must all realize that nuclear war is not a democratic process. In each country with nuclear weapons, only a hundred or so people make the decision to start the holocaust. Do a thousand or so people have the right to decide the fate of 4.5 billion?

If you ever wondered how the good German people stood by and allowed the genocide to happen, ask yourself if you are doing anything to freeze nuclear weapons.

The politics of higher education

By Mike Anthony
Staff Writer

With the recent death of former SIU-C president Delyte W. Morris, much has been written about the incredible growth of the University during his 22-year term, which began in 1948. The evolution of SIU-C from a small teachers' college to one of the largest universities in the nation during the Morris years has been termed "an educational miracle." But the transformation was hardly an act of God.

State universities are political creatures, and much of SIU-C's growth was the result of some nitty-gritty hardball politics, first with direct lobbying by Morris and his SIU lobbyists, and later through a board to coordinate and recommend funding for the state's colleges and universities.

Morris' success in turning SIU into the nation's 17th-ranked university in 1970 was accomplished largely through his own political skills combined with those of former state Rep. Clyde Choate, D-Anna; former Speaker of the House Paul Powell, D-Vienna, and former state Sen. John Gilbert, R-Carbondale.

BUT BEFORE SIU, with the aid of these legislators, could start on the path toward becoming a major university, there were numerous obstructions that had to be cleared.

For one thing, SIU needed an independent governing board, something that could only be mandated by the General Assembly. The first obstacle that the University had to overcome was the Legislature.

Starting in 1917, SIU (then named Southern Illinois Normal University) — along with Northern Illinois State College, Eastern Illinois State Teacher's College, Western Illinois State Teachers' College and Illinois State Normal University — was governed by the State Normal School Board, later called the Teachers' College Board.

BESIDES THE Teachers' College Board, which was under the jurisdiction of the Illinois Department of Registration and Education, the only other major university governing system was the University of Illinois Board of Trustees. The U of I board presided over the Champaign-Urbana campus and the school's medical complex in Chicago.

The push for an independent SIU Board of Trustees began in the 1940s, under President Roscoe Pulliam's administration, and culminated at the beginning of Morris' presidency. After a lengthy legislative battle in the spring of

'If the IBHE had come about in 1945, there would not be an SIU like we know it.'

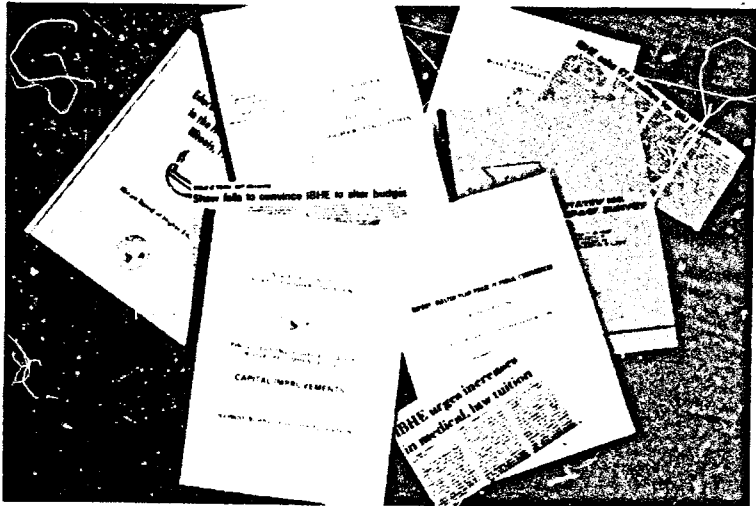

—David Derge

1949, Gov. Adlai Stevenson signed into law a bill creating an autonomous SIU Board of Trustees.

Once SIU had its own board, free of the Teachers' College Board, the University's growth accelerated.

"Morris and the the SIU Board of Trustees decided to go to Springfield and they were on their own to develop their own kind of support in the Legislature," according to David Derge, who followed Morris as SIU-C president and served from 1972 to 1974.

HE SAID THAT before the creation of the Illinois Board of Higher Education, the climate was more conducive to politicking than it is today.

"Under the old freewheeling system, our people went up there and got everything they needed," said Derge, now a faculty member in political science.

Vice Chancellor James Brown agreed, saying that before the creation of the IBHE, "the determinant about how you fared with the Legislature was how much power your friends had."

And SIU had, and still has, many powerful friends in the General Assembly.

George Criminger, an SIU lobbyist for 15 years, was in the thick of the legislative action during the Morris years.

"WITH MORRIS' leadership and our own board," he said, "we began to develop political influence. As our student enrollment grew, our political influence grew with it."

When the General Assembly stripped the Illinois Department of Registration and Education of its authority over the Teachers' College Board in 1951, the three major university governing boards began to compete with each other in the search for state funds.

While the U of I historically had received the majority of state funding for higher education, the University became a formidable power against the U of I at appropriations time once SIU had its own board and began to develop political influence.

"This was an era when public universities could go to Springfield to get their slice of the pie," Derge said. "The success of SIU in accomplishing this is due to the political skills of Powell, Choate and Gilbert, who saw this University as their university."

David Derge

CRIMINGER AGREED with Derge, while also attributing much of SIU's prosperity to Morris, who often traveled to Springfield and Washington to seek funding and support.

"There was no one that had the art of persuasion on a one-to-one basis better than Dr. Morris," Criminger said. "He was a real salesman and for the first few years he was here, he was the University's lobbyist."

But while the extensive political influence wielded by the prestigious U of I and the ever-expanding SIU aided their growth, other state colleges and universities did not fare as well.

"By the end of the 1950s," Criminger said, "the U of I and SIU were battling it out for the money and the other schools got what was left over."

BUT THE DAYS of "survival of the fittest" that pitted the two large universities against all the rest were numbered. By 1960, Criminger said, the General Assembly felt that a "buffer was needed to keep this big dogfight from continuing" and established a legislative study commission to look at the problem. The commission's report recommended establishing a strong coordinating board to diffuse the power of SIU and the U of I, he said.

"The theory was that if we continued at the rate we were going," Criminger said, "we would have two monster universities with 50,000 or 60,000 students and they were going to be like giants going at each other's throats all the time."

Even though all six universities expressed opposition to a strong coordinating board, Gov. Otto Kerner liked the plan, and in 1961 he signed a bill establishing the 15-member

Since the advent of the Illinois Board of Higher Education, the freewheeling lobbying for higher education funding that occurred during the 1940s and '50s has been curtailed somewhat — but not entirely.

SIU and other universities continue to lobby for funds, and for or against bills that affect them. Most universities, however, prefer not to call it lobbying. They call it governmental relations.

And, indeed, governmental relations officers for state agencies are excluded from the legal definition of lobbyists in Illinois. One reason is that lobbying for a higher education institution differs from lobbying for other private interest groups, such as the American Medical Association.

"THE AMA DOES not receive state funding and they're not fettered by the same restrictions as we are," according to Chancellor Kenneth Shaw. Unlike private interest groups, state agencies such as the SIU System cannot contribute funds to political candidates and campaigns, and in many cases, those political contributions can make the difference between a yes or no vote on an important piece of legislation.

Political contributions are one of the most effective tools lobbying groups can use, ac-ording to George Criminger, former SIU lobbyist. "Since we represent a higher education institution, we act more in the role of an educator than a lobbyist."

Currently, the SIU System employs four governmental relations officers, each of whom is responsible for a certain area. Keith Sanders represents the entire system; former state Rep. Clyde Choate, the SIU-C campus; Robert Bruker, the SIU-E campus; and Jason Barr, the SIU-C School of Medicine.

"WHAT OUR legislative effort does is help us keep track of and sometimes influence legislation that will affect us," Vice Chancellor James Brown said.

Sanders is the only full-time lobbyist, Brown said, while the other three have "other significant responsibilities" within the SIU System in addition to their lobbying duties. Every week the General Assembly is in session, SIU's men in Springfield keep track of bills that might have a direct impact on the system or the universities.

Once a week a listing of those bills is compiled and reviewed by Shaw, Brown and the four governmental relations officers to determine the system's stance on them.

BROWN SAID that after a bill is reviewed, a decision is made on whether to just keep track of it or to attempt to get it changed if it is perceived that it might affect SIU negatively. And if a bill is perceived to be potentially positive for the SIU System, the lobbyists will determine how they can indicate their support for it to help it pass, he said.

SIU governmental relations officers and legislators alike agree that the most valuable function of a lobbyist is to provide information to legislators, committees and committee staff members.

"We depend on lobbyists," said state Rep. Bruce Richmond, D-58th District. "It's a dirty word, but actually it's a very honorable profession. Lobbyists provide a very valuable service to legislators."

"With the wide scope of the thousands of bills we deal with, it's important to have knowledge on either side of an issue, and from lobbyists you can depend on getting accurate information."

STATE SEN. Kenneth Buzbee, D-58th District, agreed with Richmond.

"A good lobbyist will give you both sides of the argument. Lobbyists get the respect of legislators by pointing out the weak points also," Buzbee said.

But in order for a lobbyist's information to be viewed as accurate, he first must have the legislator's trust, and once he does, it must never be violated. "One guy lied to me nine years ago," Buzbee said. "and never to this day have I talked to him again - I refuse to."

Because of the restraints imposed on lobbying efforts of state agencies, one of the major problems SIU faces in its lobbying efforts is a lack of funds, Brown said.

THE FOUR governmental relations officers earn a combined total of more than $160,000 annually for their lobbying efforts and other responsibilities, according to the 1981-'82 personnel listing issued by the chancellor's office. They are reimbursed by the SIU System, SIU-C or SIU-E for travel expenses.

The system also spends "several hundred dollars a month" for a telephone link-up to the General Assembly's computer "so we can find out the current status of bills," Brown said.

Once a year the SIU System holds a "gathering in the name of goodwill" for legislators, lobbyists and committee staff members in Springfield, Brown said. The SIU Foundation funds the event, he said.

Such a gathering enables SIU officials "to see 200 people in an evening that otherwise wouldn't know we ever think of them," he said. "We just want to let them know we do realize they exist and recognize their support. We're going to fare much better with their support, than if we don't have it."

BROWN SAYS the lack of funding for lobbying efforts is even more evident when either the Democratic or Republican party holds a campaign fundraiser, and SIU lobbyists are invited "at so much a head."

The SIU lobbyists "don't have the money to pay that," Brown said. "The system doesn't have the money to pay that. But if someone isn't there, the question is, 'You didn't show up at our gathering. You didn't support us and now you want us to support you.'"

"So we continually have the problem of how to pay for these things," he said. "Most of the time, the person ends up paying for it himself, saying, 'Oh hell, it's part of my job.'"

When an SIU lobbyist pays for that sort of function himself, he is "subsidizing the University out of his own pocket," Brown said.

Criminger agreed, saying, "Any money I ever gave to a political personage came out of my own pocket. Usually it wasn't much — $25 here, $50 there — but it comes out of your own pocket."

"Since we represent a higher education institution, we act more in the role of an educator than a lobbyist."

—George Criminger

FOR THAT $25 or $50, Criminger said, lobbyists will get a chance to soft-sell their point of view along with "a lot of handshaking and maybe they'll have a lar and some hors d'oeuvres."

However, many agree that the benefits of attending such events are manifold. Not only do lobbyists get to develop close working relationships and friendships with legislators and their staffs, but in many cases, they also learn legislators' personal preferences.

For example, the late Paul Powell, who was speaker of the House and later Illinois secretary of state, "used to like cheese and crackers," Criminger says.

POWELL'S CULINARY taste may seem unimportant, but, if lobbyists can learn such personal preferences of a legislator, it can help immensely in the lobbying process, lobbyists say.

But for its time, effort and money, how much influence can the SIU System exert in the political arena?

"Sometimes we can have a pretty good influence," Brown said. "Other times we don't have any influence at all."

IBHE. The law required that the governor appoint the chairman of the IBHE, a practice that continues today. Other board members, with the exception of a student representative and a U of I representative, also are appointed by the governor.

THE IBHE WAS responsible for coordinating planning, administration and budgeting for federal programs. As a result of a study commissioned by the IBHE to study all aspects of higher education, five separate university systems were established within four years: the SIU Board of Trustees, the U of I Board of Trustees, the Board of Regents (responsible for NIU, ISU and Sangamon State University), the Board of Governors (responsible for EIU, WIU, Northeastern Illinois State University, Chicago State University and Governors' State University) and the Illinois Community College Board. The governing boards of each system were responsible to the IBHE.

The IBHE's authority over higher education was very weak at first, but in 1963 the General Assembly expanded the governing board's power and limited the power of the university systems' governing boards. The IBHE's functions — acting as a coordinating and planning agency — have not changed much in the last 19 years, according to Bernard Warren, IBHE governmental relations officer.

IN ACCORDANCE with the 1963 changes, the systems' governing boards now submit both operating and capital budget requests to the IBHE for review, and can no longer establish any new unit of instruction without the approval of the IBHE.

In addition, the IBHE has the authority to consider tuition and fee rates at universities and colleges, and submits its budget recommendations to the governor.

Wren said the IBHE also provides some liaison work between the governor's office and the General Assembly.

"We try to make the needs of higher education known by answering questions raised by the governor and the staff and members of the General Assembly," Warren said.

SOME PEOPLE feel that if the IBHE had been created during the 1940s or '50s, SIU would be very different from what it is today.

"The advent of the IBHE has crippled the freewheeling search for funds that characterized the growth period of SIU," Derge says. "Now the universities are bound by the system the IBHE created partly to control the uncontrolled lobbying that went on in the 1940s, '50s and '60s."

"The IBHE has crippled universities that did well under the old system," he said. "If the IBHE had come about in 1945, there would not be an SIU like we know it."

Criminger agreed, saying, "if the IBHE had been formed earlier, I don't think they'd have allowed us to grow as rapidly as we did."

Derge said that the IBHE is an "intervening body" between the university systems and the political decision-makers.

"THIS HAS imposed a kind of restraint on the university systems and the way they deal with the decision makers," he said.

While the IBHE has its critics, there also are those say it is the lesser of two evils and that it's to a school's advantage to work with the board.

The IBHE has provided "some semblance of logic" in the distribution of higher education funds to all five university systems, Chancellor Kenneth Shaw said.

"We go out and try to get every dollar we can," he said, "but there should be some control over that because the state wants to allocate the money in a way that best serves the public interest."

More importantly, says Shaw, "if we want to be effective, we have to work with the other institutions and the IBHE."

BROWN AGREED with Shaw, saying, "It's to an institution's advantage to go through the IBHE. Institutions have input to the IBHE when it is allocating the governor's budget."

Theoretically, an institution could refuse the IBHE's budget recommendations Brown said, but then the Bureau of the Budget would end up allocating funds to an institution without the expertise that the IBHE, working with the institution, could bring to the process.

While many agree that working with the IBHE has its advantages and disadvantages, some claim the IBHE is controlled by the governor.

"The IBHE is, in many respects, the governor's creature — not an independent body," Derge said. "It was designed to take the heat off the governor and the Legislature." In the early 1970s, Derge said, the IBHE chairman "was the governor's man and he did what the governor told him. He did the governor's bidding. If the governor said 'cut back,' he did."

CRIMINGER, however, has a less harsh view of the IBHE. "Sometimes they oppose the governor," he said, "but most of the time they don't. In some cases when they do battle, there are a lot of deals that are made."

Brown said that being appointed by the governor does not necessarily make you his tool.

"I have seen the IBHE say they'll allocate the governor's budget this way, but at the same time they assert their support for their own budget," he said.

Shaw said he doesn't believe the IBHE is run solely by the governor, but agreed that such charges are "more correct than incorrect."

STAN IRVIN, SIU-C student trustee, is another individual who has had to deal extensively with the politics of the IBHE.

"Like it or not," he said, "the IBHE has coordinated but it has also stifled efforts to build education when times are tough."

"And sometimes," he added, "what's good for politics is not good for higher education."

Focus of talk is Cold War, detente

The executive director of the U.S. Peace Council will speak at 8 p.m. Monday in the Student Center Auditorium.

Michael Myerson, who is also the author of "Stopping World War III," "Watergate: Crime in the Suites" and "Memories of Underdevelopment," will speak on the history of the Cold War through the Vietnam era and the beginnings of detente and the SALT process.

In addition to discussing the nuclear build-up in the United States, Myerson will examine the U.S. military escalation and the threat it poses to world peace.

The program is free. It is sponsored by the Coalition of Progressive Social Scientists and the Student Programming Council Expressive Arts Committee.

Museum director chosen to create militia museum

SIU-C Museum Director John J. Whitlock has been named a special consultant to the Illinois Military and Naval Department to help create an Illinois Militia Museum in Springfield.

The announcement was made by Maj. Gen. John R. Phipps, adjutant general of Illinois.

To be built on the grounds of Camp Lincoln, the museum will house uniforms, weapons and other military artifacts dating to the French occupation of the Illinois territory.

Whitlock will also help Phipps compile a history of the Illinois militia, in which he has been named an honorary major.

Whitlock has been director of the University Museum since 1978.

Stand-by flight rates lowered

24-hour coffee shop can ease late-night exam-cram blues

By Doug Hettinger
Staff Writer

It's 3 a.m. and the walls of your dorm room or apartment are starting to close in.

It's cram, cram, cram, for that exam, exam, exam, and man, you got to take a break, cut out for a different environs.

But, where to go? Well, come about May, when the early-morning breeze should have a whiff of spring in it, students weary of study will be able to trek down to "John Doughs" at anytime of the night or day for a doughnut, a cup of coffee or just a change of walls.

At present the walls of "John Doughs," along with the rest of the place, look kind of barren.

However, John Zakhar, new proprietor of the building located at 603 E. Illinois Ave. between David's and the Texaco station, said it won't be that way for long.

"I want a lot of people in here," the 29-year-old Zakhar said while he perched atop a stool and surveyed the otherwise vacant space that will soon accommodate tables and benches.

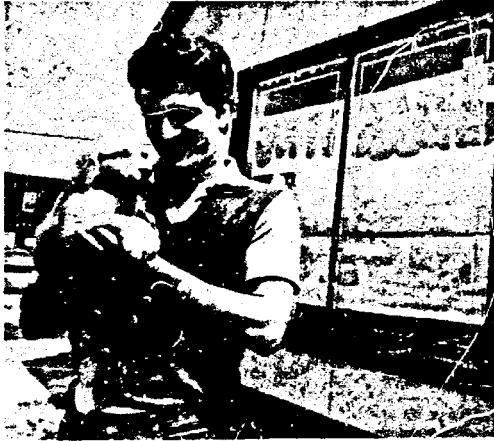

Owners of other coffee shops and restaurants near where "John Doughs" will be don't seem concerned about the possible competition.

"I don't think it will affect my business at all," said Jay Stemm, owner of Makanda Java at 607 S. Illinois for four years. "If anything, it will help."

Stemm said he probably wouldn't see Zakhar's business as a direct competitor because Makanda Java's emphasis is on exotic coffees and teas and "different" kinds of foods and pastries, thus Zakhar's shop, he said, might actually draw business to his shop as well.

Tom Fligor, owner of the Southern Barbecue at 220 S. Illinois, said he had tried going 24 hours a day in 1976, but "it didn't go over too well."

"Not as many people are going uptown now with the economy the way it is," Fligor said.

Zakhar, a native of Blue Island, said he started in the doughnut business when he was a kid. Later, he and his brother managed a family-owned doughnut shop in New Lenox.

But it is doubtful that many people in Carbondale would recognize Zakhar as a doughnut magnate.

However, anyone who has seen "Cut-Rate Comedy," a local comedy troupe, might recognize Zakhar as a member.

"I've been basically a working actor not making money," Zakhar said. "I have done tons of community work for things like children's groups and nursery homes — mostly vaudeville, Abbott and Costello kind of stuff," he said.

Zakhar received some of his training in acting at the "Second City" acting school in Chicago, but most of his training came from working with the drama guild in Joliet.

New VP facing 'big league' task

By Rod Furlow
Staff Writer

State funds for universities are shrinking, and schools are being forced to turn to other sources of revenue.

Besides deciding to raise tuition for the summer and fall semesters, SIU-C has decided to strengthen its development program — the program for fund-raising.

That's the situation — in a nutshell — facing the developmental specialist, who's been hired as SIU-C vice president for University Relations. Stanley R. McAnally, assistant vice chancellor of development at the University of Missouri at Columbia, will come to SIU-C July 1.

McAnally, 45, has been at Missouri for about two years, after an 11-year stint at the University of Tennessee, where he held posts in the alumni program, legislative relations, external relations, and served as the associate director of development.

SIU-C is placing such an emphasis on development that the administration tackled the limited to acting and cake dough. He has knocked around the country a bit, living as far away as Alaska. There, he looked after five horses and 14 dogs near a remote lake. He also did some commercial fishing and tended bar.

"It was neat," Zakhar said, "but I figured it was time to settle down for a while."

Zakhar, wearing an engineer's cap and smoking a pipe, looked like he would be right at home in a train's caboose but he seemed content just sitting on his stool inside his soon-to-open doughnut shop.

"I'm going to have an area for wheelchair, a grocery corner, and I'm going to play taped music," Zakhar said, seeming to imagine it as he looked around.

"My prices are going to be very reasonable," Zakhar said. "I'm going to have special prices for non-profit groups, church groups and special hotel orders," he said.

Zakhar said he will offer whole-wheat, honey-wheat and other non-sugar dietary doughnuts.

"I'm going to have a very, very comfortable place," Zakhar said, smiling.

And that is something weary students almost always appreciate.

His ideas for carrying out the "development" part of his duties will, he indicated at a telephone interview, involve words "and development" on the end of McAnally's title, every faculty member and dean on campus, not to mention SIU-C alumni everywhere.

"There has to be a greater emphasis on the alumni program," McAnally said. "People need to be made aware that there's a need for things like scholarship assistance and library grants that can't be covered by state funds anymore."

McAnally said the SIU-C alumni program needs to "use more pressure" in soliciting funds, and that deans and faculty members need to get involved in soliciting.

Herbert Donow, Faculty Senate president, strikes a serious pose in his office in Faner Hall.

Donow is touching all bases as author and political activist

By Doug Hettlinger
Staff Writer

Herbert Donow says he likes to do things in cycles.

He was Faculty Senate president in 1975, then took time out to write a book which he finished in November, and was recently elected Faculty Senate president again.

"I can't imagine the hours I spend with the Faculty Senate will be anywhere near the number I spent on the book," the English professor said. "However, in the Faculty Senate all of a sudden you're doing all of these nit-picking things," he said.

Donow's book, "The Sonnet in England and America: A Bibliography of Criticism," will be published by Greenwood Press in June.

Now, according to Donow, he is swinging back into the political end of his cycle.

Nevertheless, he has been Carbondale Federation of University Teachers president for nine years, including the time he spent writing his book, and has pushed to get teachers' the right to unionize, bargain collectively and strike.

Currently, two bills are before the Illinois Senate that, if passed, would give Illinois teachers these powers.

Donow said if the bills pass they would change the Faculty Senate's role in the future.

"The senate would be less likely to be concerned about salaries, fringe benefits, and working conditions," he said. "If the senate no longer has to talk money to the administration, the relationship can be more a collegial one."

Donow said the senate would be able to concentrate on establishing academic policies and participating in things like commencement exercises and other ceremonies.

"The concerns of the Faculty Status and Welfare Committee and the Budget Committee would be less the concern of the senate," he said.

Donow said if the faculty gains the power to bargain there will also be increased participation.

"If people know that we can ask for and receive a collective bargaining election, the eagerness and enthusiasm will be much greater than it is now," he said. "I think we could have accomplished a lot more if we would have had more people in the past."

According to Donow, senate members don't have enough time to be full-time faculty members and thoroughly investigate many things that go before them.

Donow used the task force report on rewards as an example of the kind of topic that requires an in-depth study.

"We could have put a full-time staff to work on that problem," Donow said. Instead, the senate was only able to use the Faculty Status and Welfare Committee (which Donow chairs), and it could not devote full-time efforts, he said.

The senate rejected the task force report because it didn't offer non-monetary rewards such as sabbaticals, time off with pay, and reduced work loads as possible rewards for deserving faculty.

If the bills pass the Illinois Senate, the Faculty Senate will be less concerned with topics such as pay and benefits because faculty could have a union to bargain for these rights, according to Donow.

Besides the Alumni Service, McAnally will control SIU-C's Office of External Affairs, the Communication Services, and the Developmental Office.

Charles Hindersman, acting vice president for University Relations, said McAnally will get $33,004 a year for his duties. McAnally declined to disclose his salary at Missouri, but said the SIU-C figure was a substantial increase.

"My responsibilities will be much greater. I'm looking forward to the challenge," he said.

Besides boosting the alumni program, McAnally wants to do something at SIU-C he said he's had success with other universities — encourage the business community to contribute to the University.

"The school needs to do a much better job of informing corporations and businesses of our needs, and it must do a better job of informing business of the service we're providing them — graduates," McAnally said. "And we need to get faculty members and deans involved to help the businesses, by way of research and training workshops."

At Missouri, McAnally was in charge of the development program, which includes the annual fund, business and corporate gift, capital campaigns, foundation grants, deferred gifts, and special gifts.

At SIU-C, McAnally hopes to drum up some special gifts.

"Most people don't know, and they need to, that they can contribute special gifts through things like wills and insurance policies," he said.

"Development has never been given the attention here it should have received," Hinder-man said. "We want a big league program. We need someone to coordinate it all, get everyone involved — deans and faculty members."

Hindersman was head of the search committee which picked McAnally. Hindersman became acting vice president when George Mace resigned last July to become an executive consultant for the American Council on Education in Washington, D.C.

The SIU' Board of Trustees granted Mace a one-year $50,000 leave of absence to go to Washington.

Hindersman said development at SIU-C hasn't deteriorated lately, but that it's never been adequate.

"It's been improving lately, but it's still not a big-league program," Hindersman said. McAnally has some ideas on how to lift it to the big leagues, he said.

Britt to take over Ozark's flights in Williamson County

By John Ambrosia
Staff Writer

A changing of the guard will occur this weekend at Williamson County Airport when Ozark Airlines discontinues flight service and Britt Airways takes over the vacated slot.

Ozark's last flight will leave the airport Saturday, and Britt will begin service on Sunday. Earlier this month, Britt received permission to replace Ozark from the Civil Aeronautics Board and the Federal Aviation Administration.

Spokesmen for Ozark and Britt could not be reached for comment Thursday.

Officials at Air Illinois, the firm that had competed with Britt for the empty service slot, declined comment on the "all-clear" signal given to Britt. Previously, Air Illinois President Roger Street had expressed disappointment in the choice of Britt over his own airline.

The battle for the air service began in early January when Ozark announced it was planning to move out of Williamson County Airport on April 24. Federal regulations require that a replacement airline be chosen by airport authorities and receive CAB and FAA approval before any change can be made.

Britt, an Indiana-based firm, received the support of the Williamson County Airport Authority over Air Illinois, a Carbondale-based firm. Critics of the authority's move claimed that Air Illinois would have been a better choice because the firm would help stimulate Southern Illinois' economy.

Britt will be taking over Ozark's flight schedule and will be adding two additional flights to St. Louis.

Ozark cited economic difficulties as its reason for abandoning Williamson County Airport.

Faure's 'Requiem' planned at CCHS

The University Chorus, conducted by acting Director Deborah Burris, will perform Gabriel Faure's "Requiem" at 3 p.m. Sunday in the Carbondale Community High School Central Campus Auditorium.

Featured soloists will be soprano Sandra Cohlmeier and baritone Eric McCluskey.

The program is sponsored by the Southern Illinois Choral Society. Tickets are $2 and may be purchased at the door.

WIDB helm has student navigating rough waters

By Joe Walter
Staff Writer

Jim Hagarty, a senior in radio-television, will become the new general manager at student-run cablecast station WIDB in May after he completes his training for the job this month.

He will not have an easy task facing him.

Hagarty was chosen from among three applicants by the WIDB board of directors on April 14. The station he will inherit is in debt to the tune of approximately $8,400 and has been the subject of controversy over possible cuts in the soul programming it has been running during prime advertising time on weekends.

The cuts will hit another area as well. Hagarty said the number of paid positions at the station is going to be reduced from 10 to four.

Student Organization for WIDB's next fiscal year starting in June, the station was allotted $4,000 — "the bare bones," Hagarty said — making the belt-tightening necessary. "We received a lot of moral support from the USO," he said, "but not financial."

Still, Hagarty said he is very eager to take the helm even though he knows what awaits him. "I have some big challenges," he said, "with the AOR (album-oriented rock, a term used to describe a radio station format) and the soul issue and financial matters."

He will get some help from WIDB's promotions and sales people and the task force that is looking into the programming matter.

"Bob Roos, our promotions director," he said, "engineered two big successful fundraisers both this semester and last at T.J.'s, and our sales of advertising time have been pretty good."

"Our sales for the month of March have exceeded our expectations," he said. "It was one of the best months in WIDB history."

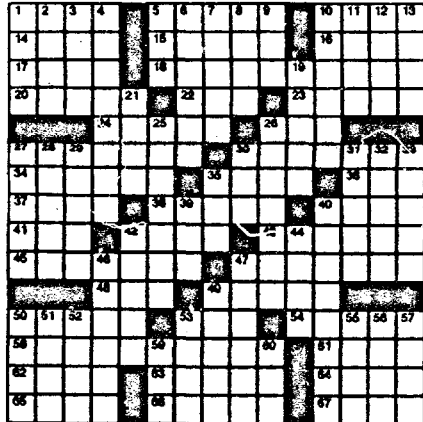

Hagarty replaces present WIDB general manager Lisa Dartt, who will graduate in May.

Black Fire Dancers avoided swan song

By Ken Perkins
Staff Writer

When the Black Fire Dancers unite for their second annual spring dance concert Sunday at the Student Center, no one will be more surprised—and proud—than the Black Fire Dancers themselves.

That may seem a bit ironic, especially since the troupe has 27 members, a director of management, and truckloads of talent.

But the fact remains that nearly two years ago, the Black Fire Dancers were a vanishing breed. After a strong start in 1972, the group, struck with graduations and apathy, began fighting extinction.

In 1978, Camellia Terrell stepped in. Along with Gina Henry, Ann Hart and Leslie Cole, the foursome vowed to get the organization back on its feet. Now a senior and president of the troupe, Terrell "recruited" more girls, got a few dancing engagements and proceeded to rebuild.

By the spring of 1979, after performing around the campus and community, the group's first tryout attracted 40 girls. Terrell had succeeded and BFD had arrived.

"We just stuck with it," Terrell said of the groups' willingness to survive. "It was very discouraging and a lot of times we felt like just giving up. But we just love to dance and kept at it."

By 1980, the group, using funds from the Black Affairs Council, had established itself in Carbondale and was bombarbed with so many engagements that it had to do something it didn't want to do. Turn some people down.

Now a little larger, confident and more professional, the troupe has become a household word in Southern Illinois.

"One of our main goals is to become known on a state-wide basis," said Shirley Hogsett, manager for the group. "At the rate we are going, it will be pretty soon."

The group has received so much interest that tryouts are now more strict and are scored on a 40-point scale. The four-part system scores 20 points each for personality and stage attitude, flexibility and endurance, an impromptu dance routine and a two-minute dance, choreographed by the potential member. Terrell said it has been a success.

"It gives us a chance to pick up quality people," she said. "At our last tryout we picked only 10 girls out of about 40. That ten has got to be good."

The group, which made its first appearance as entertainment for the Black Togetherness Organization's Cultural Festival in 1972, started out with only African and cultural dances. Now, however, the group combines a variety of dances, including tap, modern, jazz and contemporary.

Ann Hart

Sunday's show, entitled "We've got it all together," will feature 23 dance selections. Also appearing will be Robin Jones, 1980 Miss Ebonyess, who will sing, and Deloris Porter, 1981 Miss Ebonyess, who will perform a dramatic reading. "We've come a long way and the show will be a result of how far," said Hogsett. "It's true. We do have ourselves together now."

Woodruff Services

Healthy to face 'disabling' day

To promote an awareness of what it means to be handicapped, the Carbondale Park District will conduct handicap simulation activities at the University Mall Saturday and Sunday from 1 to 5 p.m.

The activities, conducted as part of the district's Leisure Accessibility Program, will offer individuals an opportunity to experience simulated cases of eye disease-cataracts, or tunnel vision, muteness, blindness and physical disabilities that require using a wheelchair.

According to a park district news release, the program "will hopefully increase the realization of the general public of the many problems that are encountered by our handicapped citizens in their day-to-day lives."

Representatives of service organizations in Jackson County will also be on hand to provide information and answer questions concerning the services available to handicapped citizens.

Springfest set to entertain visitors

By Laurie Landraf
Entertainment Editor

Students may fly a kite, learn to roller dance, listen to nine mainstage acts and maybe see the vice president for student affairs become a dunking-booth victim at Springfest '82 Saturday at the Old Main Mall.

Races, free movies, contests, Earth Week demonstrations and other attractions will entertain visitors to the daylong outdoor festival, sponsored by the Student Programming Council.

Ongoing programs — all free — will include a Student Center Graphics tent featuring body and face painting, hair streaking and T-shirt air brushing.

An SPC Video Wandering Gogag Show will have camera crews scouting the grounds for the most unusual entertainment for a live documentary. Winner will receive $100.

The Student Center Craft Shop will sponsor mural and doodle competitions, a watermelon seed-spitting and carving contest and a craft shop on wheels featuring craft demonstrations. The shop will also provide materials for those interested in creating a face mask.

Movie buffs can see "the worst movies ever filmed" at a "bad cinema tent" sponsored by SPC Films. Adding to the festivities will be a caricature artist, a Moon Walk area, roving clowns, mimes and assorted food specials and carry booths.

SPC Consorts has scheduled a full slate of free entertainment, with several local bands performing on the front steps of Shryock Auditorium. They include:

- 12 noon-12:50 p.m. — Dr. Bombay Revue.
- 1:10-2 p.m. — James and the Flames.
- 2:20-3 p.m. — Critical Mass
- 3-3:30 p.m. — Clothing and Textiles fashion show.
- 3:30-4:20 p.m. — Katie and the Smokers.
- 4:40-5:30 p.m. — Jason and the Nashville Scooters.
- 5:30-6 p.m. — Gavin Wilson, ventriloquist.
- 6-7:30 p.m. — Dick Siegel, rhythm and blues artist.

Springfest fever is in the air, as Ann Pastorelle, junior in public relations and promotions coordinator for SPC, and Stuart Sorkin, junior in accounting, dance up a storm.

8-9:30 p.m. — Amy Hart and the Attacks featuring Harvey Mandel.

In addition, several special attractions are planned: 9:30 a.m. — Participants in the March of Dimes Walk-A-Thon will leave from the Free Forum Area.

9 a.m.-6 p.m. — Southern Ultimate Jam II Frisbee, to be played at the Arena playing fields.

10:30 a.m. — Free kites to be distributed south of Quigley Hall to the first 100 registrants in a kite festival, set to begin at 11 a.m. in the Old Main Mall. Prizes will be awarded in several categories.

10 a.m. — Camp Olympia 10-mile race, to start at the Recreation Center, finish at Old Main Mall.

12 noon-6 p.m. — Big Wheel races, in front of Altgeld Hall, Old Main Mall.

12 noon-6 p.m. — Coggles and sledgehammers provided to automobile mutilators in the WIDB Car Sledge Slam, south of Altgeld Old Main Mall.

12 noon-6 p.m. — Todd Rogers, Bruce Swinburne and others to be the targets in the Sphinx Club Dunk Booth, north of Wheeler Hall, Old Main Mall.

1-4 p.m. — Rent skates for $1.50, receive instructions from a Skate Street expert at the Roller Dance, in front of Davies Gymnasium, Old Main Mall.

1 p.m. — Canoe races at Campus Lake; prizes to be awarded.

1-3 p.m. — Saluki Saddle Club exhibition east of McAndrew Stadium.

Following the final mainstage presentation, a fireworks display will cap off the evening at the Arena playing fields.

said. "This failure to understand that the violation of intelligence by using violence and deceit to attain peaceful human relations simply generates more violence and deceit so that it is extremely difficult for one person or nation to trust another."

"WITHOUT TRUST and trustworthiness, there is no fundamental basis for creative human relations. The outcome in the current context of military technology operative over the planet is that humanity may go the way of the dinosaurs," Minor said.

Since military establishments have become "fixated" in their habits (and "nothing fixated can be creative"), Minor said much of the burden of coping with the military will be placed on the shoulders of the younger generation. Youths bend and adapt easier, he said, because the young aren't as set in their ways.

"The politically and nationalistically fixated habits of the military prevent them from understanding the import of the technological development of transportation and communication that is being the world together economically, governmentally, and educationally.

"THIS FIXATION and lack of understanding is further evidence that the military must finally go the way of the dinosaurs.

"Since military establishments are ultimately non-productive economically, they struggle as parasites on the people, and in their effort to survive, they demand that they

Blues music selections to be performed

Hear the music of Fats Waller, Louis Armstrong, Duke Ellington and other blues traditionalists at a performance at 7:30 p.m. Friday in the Student Center Old Main Room by singer, songwriter and pianist Bryon Quam.

Quam will perform such blues, ragtime, swing and jazz selections as "Ain't Misbehavin'," "Don't Get will drive the nations' treasuries into international bankruptcy together with their own self-destruction unless we can quickly commit them to the graveyards of the dinosaurs," he said.

What can we do about the military?

MINOR SUGGESTED six therapies of "creative education and learning:"

— Understanding that military establishments are inconsistent and self-defeating activities.

— Learning that such activities are basically evil and that good creative activities are consistent and self-facilitating.

— Learning that creative and self-facilitating activities are reliable and trustworthy and that inconsistent and self-destructive activities are unreliable and untrustworthy.

— Learning from 50 years of scientific research on creativity that...creative interchange between persons had its roots in nature long before human beings were created.

— Learning from this research that creativity at work in nature... (and human nature) can be released, experienced and understood as the basic guideline of human conduct.

"CREATIVE CRITICISM of military establishments tells us one thing most clearly, namely, that we must abolish military establishments, not just our own, but all of them in all nations," he said.

Minor suggested this procedure for abolishing the military:

— Provide for research on abolishing the military establishments. — Research how to recycle valuable materials in possession of the military establishments, using experience and knowledge of persons in the military and of manufacturers of military materials.

"WHEN THE recycling process is...accepted by the people of all nations," Minor said, "it will open the way for millions of persons to be employed in creative and constructive jobs that are not regarded as a duty or a mere obligation but as an opportunity for saving humanity from extinction and for the advancement of all forms of cultural development.

"We can discover that learning how to deal with human conflict creatively rather than destructively is the way to eliminate the false assumption that military establishments are necessary."

'Unpredictable' netters will try to boost record

By Ken Perkins
Staff Writer

It's do or die for the men's tennis team, as it will take an 11-13 record into a busy weekend that will determine whether or not the Salukis close out the season with a winning record.

Coach Dick LeFevre — after ending last season with a 10-15 — is hoping that the netters can win four of their five matches, which would send them into next week's Missouri Valley Conference tournament over the .500 mark.

The netters will host Illinois and Purdue Saturday, Eastern Kentucky and Missouri Sunday, and end with Illinois-Chicago Circle Monday. All matches will be played at the University Tennis Courts.

"To come out of this one with a winning record, we'll have to beat Eastern Kentucky and Chicago Circle," said LeFevre. "Illinois and Purdue will be strong. I'm just hoping for a good day."

The Salukis are especially hoping for a good day against Illinois, who LeFevre said is going to be their toughest foe. The cross-state rivals will be looking for revenge against SIU-C because of an earlier indoor defeat.

In that contest, the Salukis went into the doubles competition ahead 4-2 only to watch the Salukis rally back to sweep all three doubles matches and win the match 5-4.

"This team is so unpredictable," LeFevre said of his netters. "I don't know what they are going to do sometimes. It's hard to tell. But hopefully this time we can go into the doubles competition at least 3-3."

According to LeFevre, the netters' 5-4 victory over Illinois doesn't mean much, especially since SIU-C is primarily an indoor team.

"We're much better indoors," he said. "We beat them indoors, but they will be a lot tougher to beat outdoors."

Purdue may be even tougher. The Boilermakers knocked off Illinois last week. Despite the odds, LeFevre said if his Salukis can continue to improve like they have in their last several matches, they will have good news by the end of the weekend.

Lito Ampon, David Filer and senior Brian Stanley have played big parts in the netter's recent resurgence, leading the team to victories over St. Louis, Indiana State and Memphis State. The trio will be counted upon to continue their winning ways.

"If we can win at those three spots and pick up a few more, we can win them," said LeFevre of the weekend's matches. "There are going to be some good matches."

LeFevre said that his prime objective of "exposing" his players to top competition will be met even if the Salukis finish the season with a losing record.

"We've established ourselves with very good teams," said LeFevre. "That's something we hope to continue. With the competition as tough as it was, breaking even would be saying a lot. And right now, winning the 11 matches we did win, I would say we've done pretty well."

The Salukis will go into the MVC tournament with a 2-1 record. After losing 9-0 to Wichita State, which is ranked No. 19 in the nation, the Salukis defeated Bradley, 8-0, and Indiana State, 7-2.

No. 3 seed John Greif and No. 4 seed Filer will bring winning singles records into the weekend's play. Greif is 13-10 and Filer is 12-11. No. 1 seed Stanley will come in with a 14-1 record.

SIU-C senior ties for clay pigeon title

By Keith Mascitti
Staff Writer

SIU-C senior Ron Yanor and Texas A&M's Jeff Montgomery hit 151 of 175 targets to tie for the national championship in the Association of College Unions' International Clay Pigeon U.S. Shooting Championships in Peoria Thursday.

Yanor, a 22-year-old education major, and Montgomery finished tied at 85 after each had taken 100 regulation shots.

The two then shot three shoot-out rounds and each hit 22 of 25 targets in each round. This was the first time in national competition that co-champions were named.

Yanor, a member of the SIU-C Shooting Club, has been trying to win the international event for several years and said the feeling of winning it is "weird."

"I didn't know whether to cry, scream or jump up and holler," Yanor said. "I feel so tired but yet I feel like going out and celebrating."

"I've been here (the annual meet) for four years and I wanted to do this for a long time," he said. "My knees were shaking so bad that I caused a little windstorm two feet off the ground."

Last year, Yanor placed 11th in the same competition with a score in the low 80s. He expected a similar finish this year.

"After I finished shooting I went over to the scoreboard, saw my score of 85 and figured that would place be about 5th place," Yanor said. "I put my gun away and the next thing I know people are congratulating me for having the highest score."

Although Yanor is no stranger to shoot-out competition — he's been shooting since age four — he said that he still was nervous.

"I've had to go through shoot-outs before, but never for something this important. We had to wait two hours before we could shoot for the title. I think they (the judges) do that just to get you nervous," he laughed.

"But once you get out there and start shooting, you get so involved that you forget that you are scared," Yanor said. "Anyone who tells you they aren't scared is a liar."

Although the 85 tally led to his eventually sharing the national title, it is low for Yanor. He said he averages around 90 and once tallied a 96, although he didn't win that meet.

Lady netters, softballers set for invitational play

By Women's Sports Information
TENNIS

Coach Judy Auld's netters will be at Edwardsville Friday and Saturday for the 10-team SIU-E Invitational. The 10-6 Salukis should be one of the favorites in the tournament.

Points will be accumulated for each match won. Brackets will include Nos. 1 and 2 singles; Nos. 3 and 4 singles; Nos. 5 and 6 singles; and all doubles teams.

SIU-C's entries by position are: No.1 singles, Lisa Warrem, who has an 8-8 record; No.2, Alessandra Molinari, 8-6; No.3, Heidi Eastman, 0-2; No.4, Amanda Allen, 8-8; No.5, Stacy Sherman, 10-6; and No.6, Maureen Harney, 11-5.

Doubles teams will consist of Eastman and Allen, 1-1; Warrem and Molinari, 6-6; and Sherman and Mona Etchison, 7-7.

SIU-E, Illinois State, Western Illinois, Eastern Illinois, Southwest Missouri, Indiana State, St. Louis, Principia College and Sangamon State will be out to top SIU-C.

SOFTBALL

The Saluki softball team will be at Bloomington, Ind. for the 10-team Indiana Invitational. Games are scheduled for Friday and Saturday. Coach Kay Brechtelsbauer's squad is 13-18 and will be in a five-team pool that includes Illinois State, 15-10-1; Miami of Ohio, 6-4; Indiana, 19-10; and Central Michigan, 23-3. The other pool consists of Western Michigan, 12-3; Ball State, 5-6; South Carolina, 23-3; Michigan State, 5-14; and Indiana State, no record available.

On Friday, SIU-C will play Illinois State, Central Michigan and Indiana. The Salukis close out pool play on Saturday with a game against Miami of Ohio. Semifinal games are slated for 3 p.m. Saturday. The third-place game begins at 4:30 p.m. with the championship game following at 6 p.m.

together a media guide for women's athletics, which was judged the best in the nation by SIDs around the country. For every sport, from field hockey to volleyball, there is an informative, attractive program. But that's the "glamour" work. The nitty-gritty chores are the ones he copes with, effectively, each day. Statistics must be compiled from the past weekend's events and for the coming weekend's events. Then they have to be mailed to schools throughout the nation as well as to local and regional media.

When women's athletics sponsors special events on campus, Parkinson is in the midst of it all, making sure things run smoothly and promoting them through the area media. In his first two years at SIU-C, he worked with 20 special events on campus, including four state tournaments, three international exhibitions and a couple of volleyball tourneys.

"My first three years here were more than hectic," Parkinson says, "because I didn't have any help at that time." He adds that despite the "tremendous undertakings" in women's athletics at the time, he was able to stick it out.

"Too often, though, things would happen all at once and I'd have to drop what I was doing."

This year the sports information director for the first time has a graduate assistant.

Graduate student Rick Klatt and part-time student worker Jackie Rogers help Parkinson with the daily chores.

Parkinson came to SIU-C in early spring 1978. When he heard about the job opening here, while working on a master's degree at the University of Tennessee at Knoxville, he arranged for an interview. During the interview, he was asked how much he knew about field hockey.

"I don't know much about it," he responded, "except that it is played with a stick and a puck." Actually, field hockey is played with a ball, but despite the error, he got the job.

"When I said that I thought for sure I had blown it," Parkinson recoils with a smirk.

But Parkinson grew up in an area that was fanatic about women's sports, he says. So he was familiar with all sports, minus field hockey of course, when he came to SIU-C. After graduating from his hometown high school in Cleveland, Tenn., he spent two years at a junior college, where he met his wife, Linda.

Parkinson then moved on to Knoxville, where he earned an undergraduate degree in journalism. Finally, with only the thesis between him and his master's, Parkinson came to SIU-C.

His interest in women's athletics began at home, but was nourished through amateur golfer and close friend Connie Day, he says.

"Women's basketball at the high school level would draw 3,000 people just like the boys," the eastern Tennessee native says. "My golf companion and close friend Connie nourished my appreciation for women's sports."

Parkinson is happy where he's at right now, he says. He draws encouragement from Charlotte West, the women's athletics director, whom he regards as the person who plays the lead role in women's athletics at SIU-C.

"As long as she's here, I can't imagine anything but an outstanding program."

Though the men's sports information director's job is soon to be vacated by current SID and assistant athletics director Fred Huff, Parkinson is happy where he is — for now at least.

"If I ever got out of the women's side and went to the men's side, it would be because I miss the fanaticism of men's athletics," he says. "It's always been there in men's sports — the big crowds, the enthusiasm. Unlike women's sports, the interest has always been there with the men's programs."

"That's why my job is so challenging. I have to generate the interest."

Indeed he does. And if women's sports ever become the big hit that men's sports have become, keep an eye on the rooftop outside Mitch Parkinson's office. He may be out there.

do." The law of good pitching may turn the Saluki hitters around Saturday. Redbird Coach Duffy Bass plans to toss his two top pitchers at SIU-C.

Right-hander Duane Johnson, 4-1 with a 0.98 ERA, and lefty David Wampler, 2-0 with a 2.05 ERA, will start for ISU. Jones will counter with lefty Rob Clark, 4-3, and right-hander Ken Klump, 3-4. Rick Wysocki and Jerry Halstead will probably start Sunday.

Clark, who was 10-1 last year, has lost two in a row. Jones felt the senior "hasn't been as sharp as he has been." Clark was touched for just six hits by Bradley last weekend, but four of those were homers. Jones said this year's Salukis aren't as loud or excitable as some of his past teams, but added that the team's calm may work to its benefit.

"You have to play like you practice, but this isn't a fiery group of kids," he said.

Both double-headers start at 1 p.m. and will be broadcast by WCIL-AM radio.

Junior college standout signs with Salukis

By Bob Morand
Staff Writer

Saluki basketball Coach Allen Van Winkle announced Thursday that SIU-C has signed another basketball recruit.

Benny Smith, 6-3, 180-pound guard from Volunteer State Community College in Gallatin, Tenn., signed a letter-of-intent to attend SIU-C Wednesday evening.

"He shoots well, is a confident player and handles himself with a lot of poise," Van Winkle said in his Arena office. "Benny plays with a lot of experience. He runs and jumps well. I think he's a big-time player, myself."

Smith is the second player to sign with the Salukis this spring. A week ago Carbondale Community High School's Brian Welch, another prospective guard, inked the letter to attend SIU-C.

At Volunteer State, Smith averaged 17 points per game this past season while leading the Pioneers to the National Junior College Tournament in Hutchinson, Kan. The Pioneers lost in the first round of the tournament, but finished the season ranked ninth in the nation. As a freshman at Volunteer State, Smith averaged 21 points per game.

A native of Murfreesboro, Tenn., Smith was an all-state, all-conference and all-regional player his senior year at Oakland High School in Murfreesboro. That same year the guard averaged 23 points per game and was awarded Mid-state honors, which recognizes the most valuable player in the middle portion of Tennessee.

Before signing with SIU-C, Smith considered Arkansas State, East Tennessee State, Middle Tennessee State and Austin Peay.

"Benny crossed off some very fine schools on his list. He has been recognized by many people across the country," Van Winkle said, adding that Smith should help the Salukis tremendously in the shooting department. "He adds that one ingredient we were looking for this year."

Van Winkle said of Smith's shooting abilities. "Van Winkle said he would like to sign one more guard, and about three or four 'big front' people. Presently, the first-year Saluki coach is still waiting to hear from four or five players who are considering SIU-C among other schools."

"We're recruiting four or five people that are also looking at schools such as California, Arizona, Missouri, Kansas State and other schools of that caliber," he said.

"We've set our sights high with the kids we're recruiting," Van Winkle said, adding that the Salukis have not lost any prospective recruits to any other Missouri Valley Conference schools.

The Salukis were looking at Melvin Hardin, a 5-10 guard from Pratt, Kan., but decided they didn't need another small guard and deleted him from their list. Hardin earlier in the week signed with Bradley.

Though the Salukis' sights are set high, they're having trouble finding height among this year's recruits, Van Winkle said. He noted that the recruiting crop throughout the nation is short on tall prospects.

"It's been a struggle for us," he said. "But any coach in the country will tell you this is a very slim year for recruiting big people. It's tougher than I thought."

With the shooting talent of Smith, Van Winkle doesn't see the lack of height on the Salukis as so critical a factor, though he hopes he'll sign at least two or three of the big men on his list.

"Teams outbounded us only five times this year, so rebounding may not be as critical as our shooting was last year," he said. The Salukis ended the season shooting a low 42 percent from the field.

"If we could get the kind of fan following that says Mitch Parkinson, women's sports information director, men's athletics does, I'd jump off the roof,"

Sports information director works for fan, media support

Mitch Parkinson likes to win. No, better yet, Mitch Parkinson thrives on winning.

As sports information director of women's athletics, Parkinson would like to see women's athletics at SIU-C win the support of fans and media that men's athletics has.

"I'd jump off the roof if we could get the kind of fan following that men's athletics do," he says from his office inside the old white house that is interim headquarters for Women's Intercollegiate Athletics at SIU-C.

Some day Parkinson might have to live up to his promise. For the past four-and-a-half years, the 32-year-old Tennessean has been doing his best to promote women's sports on campus. And as frustrating a task as that may be, he is not about to give up.

Parkinson describes himself professionally as the "liaison to the media." In laymen's terms, he's the one who works feverishly through the week, trying to draw local and regional attention to the 10 women's sports teams of SIU-C.

His work week starts out like a slap in the face. On Mondays, Parkinson is hit with a barrage of busy work. The minute he enters his modest, file-cabinet-walled office, the phone rings off the hook, the paper work mounts endlessly and Wednesday seems months away.

"Monday is chaotic," Parkinson says. "SIDs (sports information directors) from other schools are constantly on the phone with me, requesting information from the weekend's events. If somebody calls and wants information, I stop what I'm doing to service them. It's my job."

"If you can live to Wednesday, you'll be all right," he adds with a chuckle.

Despite the eruption of early-week work, Parkinson has "lived" to see many Wednesdays. He has mastered his craft, providing the women's sports program with needed media exposure.

First of all, Itchy's men must face Illinois State Tracksters to face strong field

The baseball team will be in on several firsts when it plays Illinois State in a four-game series Saturday and Sunday in Normal.

Southern will face Illinois State for the first time since 1974, the Redbirds will play their first-ever Valley series and, more importantly, the Salukis have a chance to return to Carbondale in first place in the Valley's Eastern Division.

The Salukis are 22-12 overall and 3-1 in the Valley. The Redbirds are 17-7-3 and, along with Indiana State, haven't played a Valley game. The Sycamores will be at Bradley, 1-3, for a four-game set.

In other words, this weekend's games play a key role in the Salukis' chances of repeating as Eastern Division champs. They beat Bradley by a game a year ago for the top spot.

"We've got to go out wanting to win four games," said Saluki

Coach Itchy Jones. "We have an intelligent group of kids who are knowledgeable in the game. They know what they need to do."

One thing Jones would like the Salukis to start doing is simply hitting the ball. Southern "pounded" out just ten hits in its twinbill sweep of St. Xavier Wednesday.

"Our pitchers have kept us in all of our ball games. If we got into any kind of a slugfest, we'd be in for some problems."

Jones said the Salukis' many close ball games might end up helping the team in the long run.

"It would be to our advantage to be in close games. We know what to do and we don't panic. That hurt Wichita State last year," he said. The Salukis won the Valley title last year, beating the favored Western champ Shockers two games to one.

Jones thinks SIU-C would be okay if "the law of averages turn around as they normally Women's track Coach Claudia Blackman called the Becky Boone Relays a "stronger meet event by event" than any the Salukis will compete in this season.

Blackman hopes SIU-C can finish in the upper half of the field at the relays Friday and Saturday in Richmond, Ky. Last year, the Salukis placed 15th of 21 teams at Becky Boone.

This year the field should number "about 25," according to Blackman. Big Ten powers Purdue, Ohio State and Indiana, winner of a triangular meet at SIU-C three weeks ago, will be among the competition. But Blackman said it would be hard to pick a favored team because of the quality and depth involved.

"Only the quality athlete will place," Blackman said. "Also, because of the length of the meet, it will be an endurance test to see who can stay up mentally."

Blackman added that the relays should be stronger than "even the state meet." She said because of the large number of teams with quality people, no one team is likely to dominate the meet, though individual teams may control particular events.

The Salukis qualified 23 athletes for Becky Boone, only a few less than the "25 to 27" that SIU-C usually takes on the road, Blackman said.

The Salukis should challenge in one event they've been strong in all season, the javelin, according to Blackman.

"There are usually strong javelin throwers at this meet," she said. "We'll have our hands full." Salukis Cynthia Joy, Cindy Bukauskas and Sheila Lamberson will hurl the javelin this weekend. Joy placed first last weekend at the Midwest Invitational in Charleston.

"Joy tends to perform up to the level of competition," Blackman said. "We'll see if that trend holds up this weekend."

Sophomore sprinter Debra Davis should have her best chance to qualify for the AIAW Outdoor Nationals at the relays, according to Blackman. The coach thinks Davis has a chance to qualify in the 200-meter dash as well as in her strong suit, the 400.

"Davis doesn't think she has a chance to qualify in the 200," Blackman said, "but she ran a 25.8, admittedly wind-aided, last weekend. I think she could do it." The qualifying time for the 200 is 24.4.

Though Davis will run in the 400 relay, she again will be held out of the mile relay. The coach cited the fact that Davis may have to run individual events "three or four times" as the reason for holding her off the mile relay.

Distance specialist Patty Plymire-Houseworth is the lone Saluki to qualify for the nationals so far. The senior made the grade last weekend at Eastern, winning the 10,000 run in 36:48.7, more than a minute ahead of second-place finisher, EIU's Nancy Kramer.

"I was especially pleased with Patty's run, considering the 40 mph winds," Blackman said. "She needed a 95-second lap on the last quarter to qualify, and she ended up with an 84."
