Brazil has first civilian president in 21 years

Jose Sarney was sworn in as Brazil's first civilian president in 21 years Monday as the body of president-elect Tancredo Neves was borne atop a red fire truck through the jammed streets of Sao Paulo and then flown to the national capital. Sarney, 54-year-old vice president who assumed Neves duties when the newly elected president became ill in mid-March, officially became president for a six-year term in a ceremony at the Senate offices in the federal capital. He pledged "the legacy of Tancredo Neves will live on."

"I did not deserve this," were said to have been the last words of the 75-year-old Neves

before he lapsed into a final coma last week

The Soviet embassy said:

Students lacking geography skills

DETROIT (UPI)
American students are so bad at geography that most of them cannot find Vietnam on the map or locate the African nations with starving multitudes, the president of the National Geographic Society said Monday.

Gilbert M. Grosvenor, who also is editor of the National Geographic magazine, said a University of North Carolina study showed 71 percent could not name one of the more than 30 countries south of the Sahara in Africa. "We know about malnutrition but very little about where millions are dying," he told the Economic Club of Detroit.

"Ignorance of geography will finally defeat the best of intentions," he said, at home as well as abroad.

Ignorance of Indochina's geography and ethnic rivalries caused the initial blunders of the United States in Vietnam, Grosvenor said. "If ignorance of geography helped trigger our original involvement, what did we learn?" he asked. "Today, 95 percent of the incoming freshn.en at a nearby college could not find Vietnam on a map."

Twenty percent of the students in a Dallas test put the United States in Brazil on the globe, 50 percent could not name the two largest states and 70 percent could not identify the two smallest, he said

Most vital decisions in location of the General Motors Saturn plant are geographic decisions, he said.

State official says fraudulent deals plague consumers

By Lisa Eisenhauer Staff Writer

The two surest signs of consumer fraud are being pressured to sign a contract right away or being told that something is free, said Howard Hood, director of the consumer protection division of the Illinois Attorney General's Office.

It is easier to cheat someone on a contract than it is to burglarize their home, Hood said during his address at Shryock Auditorium on Monday, the first day of Consumer Awareness Week.

"There are a lot of crooks doing business in this country," he said, adding that the extent of this crime is often underestimated.

In 1984 the attorney general's office handled 20,000 formal complaints about questionable commercial deals and returned more than $7 million to consumers. However, in a recent press release Attorney General Neil Hartigan alleged that "this may be just the tip of the iceberg" of fraud perpetrated against Illinois citizens.

HOOD SAID that more than a fourth of the complaints reported to the attorney general deal with automobiles. The main problem with the vehicles is that the odometers have been rolled back, which is illegal under state and federal law

To avoid buying a car that has more miles on it than its odometer says, he suggested that customers request to see the car's mileage disclosure statement. This document, which all car dealers are required to have, records the car's mileage when the dealer bought it.

car's mileage when the dealer boughtit.

Hood said his division recently began an investigation into resort area advertisements that promise potential customers outrageous prizes just for coming to see the areas.

"THERE'S always four prizes that are fantastic and one pitiful prize," he said. Often the pitiful prize is "a fabulous boat" which turns out to be an inflatible one worth $35, Hood said. People are lured by the advertisements into paying $7,000 to $8,000 to camp two or three months a year at the so-called resort.

In addition to the attorney general's investigation, Hood said that there are bills in the legislature that would restrict the advertising techniques used by owners of such resorts.

OFTEN THE people duped into bad business deals are elderly, Hood said. One reason for this is that they usually own their home and are concerned about home improvement.

On one occasion, he said an elderly woman was conned into paying $50,000 to treat "cancer of the bricks" in the foundation of her home.

foundation of her home.

A fraudulent technique commonly used to lure all types of customers into buying something is the "bait and switch" tactic, Hood said.

"This is when a store or company advertises something at a fabulously low price and when you go down there they don't have it or they talk you into buying something

THE FIRST STEP that consumers who believe that they have been cheated should take is to complain to the seller or contractor. Hood said. If that doesn't-help, they should contact the company and then the local Better Business Bureau. If no relief is granted by then, he said, the customer should notify the attorney general's office.

Hood said the attorney general's office does not have a criminal jurisdiction. They don't have power to arrest anybody or put them in jail, but they can sue someone to end a fraudulent contract and to force them to refund money.

To avoid problems, the best

To avoid problems, the best rule for customers to follow is to deal with businesses that have been in a fixed location for a reasonable amount of time and that want to stay in business, Hood said.

An incredible gift; a lot of land to sell

IT WAS INDEED A GENEROUS GIFT. Calvin and Jean Ibendahl, long-time friends of SIU-C and the School of Agriculture, have donated their 615-acre farm — worth an estimated $1.1 million — to the SIU Foundation.

Through what is known as a charitable remainder unitrust, the Ibendahls will continue to live on the farm's original three-acre homestead and will receive in unspecified percentage of the money made from the sale or rental. It is the foundation's responsibility to find a suitable buyer, or rentor, for the land.

Upon the Ibendahls' death, the amount of the original investment, plus the interest accrued, will then be funneled into the School of Agriculture.

G. H. Kroening, dean of the School of Agriculture, estimates that the Ibendahls' gift represents roughly half of the school's present operating budget.

But before the School of Agriculture sees a penny, the foundation must find a buyer or renter for the land — preferably a buyer. That is precisely what it is in the process of doing. Foundation President Stanley McAnally hs indicated that there are several prospective buyers, and although unable to offer any specifics, McAnally hopes to hve concluded the matter by the foundation Board of Directors' next meeting, scheduled for May 10

IT IS IN THE IBENDAHLS' BEST INTEREST for the foundation to do. If the foundation is unable to find a suitable buyer by the time the fall planting season arrives, it is possible that the foundation will give serious consideration to other temporary

Who is involved and how much they are willing to pay, is being kept under wraps by the foundation until a deal — be it an outright purchase or a rental agreement — is cemented.

Until the foundation finds the right buyer, or rentor, it will remain responsible for the farm's up-keep. McAnally stressed that, regardless of the foundation's success in attracting a buyer, the University would not be stuck with something it couldn't get rid of. Again, McAnally is fuzzy on the specifics.

WITH THE FOUNDATION IN THE MIDST of negotiations, WITH THE FOUNDATION IN THE MIDST of negotiations, McAnally is leary of making public anything that might hinder the success of the transaction. Considering the sheer size of the Ibendahls' donation, and the prospect of attracting future such unitrust donations to SIU-C, the foundation is justified in keeping silent the progress of the negotiations. But speed in finding a suitable buyer is especially important, given the foundation's good faith agreement with the Ibendahls to sell the land all at once and quickly.

the foundation's good faith agreement with the Ibendahls to sell the land all at once, and quickly.

Expedience in selling the farmiand works to the benefit of both the Ibendahls and the University. By selling soon, the Ibendahls will realize a greater percentage of the interest on their gift to SIU-C; the School of Agriculture will eventually realize a tremendous boost to its budget, and the University will have broadcast a signal to other potential donors that such benevolence can work to everyone's benefit.

Apparently other universities have enjoyed success in such arrangements, perhaps SIU-C can as well.

USO presidential candidate wrong to question commission's ruling

I'd like to thank Dan DeFosse and the rest of the Independent Party ticket for a Independent Party ticket for a very sincere and com-mendable campaign in the Undergraduate Student Organization elections. I thought the Independent Party came to the public with a good plan and received votes based on that plan. They did not resort to mudslinging, as they have been accused. Dan and the Independents were very professional and admirable throughout.

I wish I could say the same for Tony Appleman and the Phoenix Party. I can't believe that someone who professes to be so concerned about students be so concerned about students would resort to the types of campaign practises and ethics which we all witnessed recently. I felt badly when I heard that the entire slate had been disqualified, instead of the responsible individuals.

To que mission's question the mission's integrity, after admitting to all of the above, is ludicrous and obviously absurd. I was really disgusted to see Tony and his followers out telling students that they really weren't disqualified and that the story in the paper was nonsense. Again, I feel that the slate should have been spared, except for the responsible candidates.

During World War II the world witnessed unbelievable atrocities on all sides, most infamous among which was infamous among which was the Holocaust.

Although war in itself is perhaps the worst crime of humanity, the slaughter of Jews and other "undesirables" by Hitler and his regime gives our race its most heinous legacy. The human race as a whole, not only the individual perpetrators, must bear the guilt for the Holocaust. Furthermore, we are all responsible for keeping the memory of this crime alive and vivid, for only through such vigilance can we hope to ensure that similar instances of genocide will be prevented.

month, Next month, President Reagan will visit Europe to commemorate V-E Day. He has announced, however, that he will not visit any con-centration camps for fear of awakening bad memories that may embarrass the West Germans. Only after many people expressed outrage over his planned visit to the Bitburg Cemetery, containing German army and, significantly, SS war dead, has Reagan showed signs of reconsidering a death camp visit. This is too little, too late.

Stressing. the "unity allies, "reconciliation allies," "reconciliation" and 40 years of peace in Europe, Reagan has apparently placed diplomatic niceties ahead of historical importance. Eager to forget a thing that would make the West German people uncomfortable, the President is demonstrating one again is demonstrating once again his flawed sense of priorities.

The West Germans, no more or no less than other people, must never be allowed to forget the terrible inhumanity which humanity is capable of.
On this anniversary remembrance, forgiveness and understanding, would be appropriate; forgetfulness would be a crime rivaling the crime itself. - Andrew Lisec, sophomore, Cinema and sophomore, Photography

The SIU-C Vocal Jazz Ensemble will be performing back-up vocals for Foreigner's hit song, "I Want to Know What Love Is."

LeGault said that when Foreigner's choir coordinator contacted him about the performance, he explained to her that the ensemble had only three black singers, to which she replied, "Well, could you get some arms?" get some more?

LeGault, an associate professor in music, is "very happy" that the ensemble is nappy that the ensemble is performing with a big-name group, even though the song the ensemble will be per-forming is very different from its usual repertoire.

"It's a departure from vocal jazz, but a lot of the kids are into (rock music). And I think it's good for the group, even though it's not the style we generally do. We're kind of breaking ground in this area, and doing the Foreigner time. and doing the Foreigner tune may broaden our scope," said LeGault took seven years, $2 million and an Armenian born in Egypt, but Count Arnaud's Creole landmark glistens again in the heart and soul of the French Quarter.

Arnaud's, founded in 1918 by Frenchman who gave up medicine to run a saloon on Bourbon Street, was in its golden years a favored dining spot for bon vivants from around the world.

It was, in its sad decline, an insult, and embarrassment and a foundering business strung out over 11 buildings needing paint, blackened with cigar smoke and open above to the occasional curious pigeon.

'IT'S FAR MORE difficult to bring back a restaurant with a tarnished name than to start one from scratch," observed Archie Casbarian, the Swisstrained hoteleir who found his entrepreneurial stride taking over the fading landmark in

"I had some idea of the emotion attached to Arnaud's — the good and the bad — but

He learned quickly that despite its faded granduer, Arnaud's meant most to the Count's aging daughter, Germaine Cazenave Wells. The place was such a necessity to her view of life as an endless Mardi Gras ball that she resisted all efforts to change it in order to save it.

"With that kind of history, I would assume that something is very wrong with the way the institution is being run," Rundle replied.

Magistrate Kenneth Meyers questioned Rundle's

Sue Brieschke uses her official KFVS rain gauge at her Makanda home.

Weather watcher checks conditions for local TV station

Student Writer

After the torrential rains ceased, Sue Brieschke tromped across the recently formed swamp in her backyard. Her official KFVS rain gauge read 7.5 in-ches — more rain than Makanda ever had at once.

This was a fact KFVS meteorologist Don McNeely should be aware of. Being an official KFVS weather watcher for two years, it was Sue Brieschke's responsibility to inform

"I heard Don McNeely announce on the news one night that they were looking for volunteer weather watchers," said Brieschke. "I've always been interested in the weather so I wrote a letter to Don and volunteered."

She received an acknowledgement letter from McNeely a couple weeks later that made her a KFVS weather watcher. Along with the letter came an official KFVS thermometer and rain Brieschke has been heard on the evening news twice since she became a weather watcher. She either calls in and reports an unusual weather condition or McNeely calls and asks about the weather in Makanda. KFVS usually calls about an hour before the news to make sure someone is going to be home, she said.

About 10 minutes before the weather report, the station calls back and does a volume check.

"Then I just wait until they come back on the phone and ask me about the weather, "Brieschke said. She said she never watches the TV when she's on the air.

"I just pretend I'm on the phone with a friend. That way I never get nervous and so far I've never really messed up. It's surprising," she said. Brieschke said her husband, Walt, doesn't really have any opinion on her role as a weather watcher.

'I think he thinks it's sort of neat, but he doesn't really say," Brieschke said. "Sometimes after I've been on the air I ask him how I did and he just calmy replies, 'Fine.' No more or less of an opinion is given."

She said she is frequently teased about her role as a weather watcher by her co-workers and friends.

"I always get lots of feedback, especially right after I've been on the air," she said. "People just tease in fun. I think peole are really interested in what I do. People are always asking me what a weather watcher does. I simply reply, 'I watch the weather."

Being a KFVS weather watcher requires no technical knowledge of meteorology, she said.

"It is more or less just an interest that is needed."

Brieshcke said she took a weather weather watcher.

"I guess that's what sparked my interest," she said.

She said she believes the weather watcher idea is public relatons for

"When people hear a familiar name or voice on the air, it personalizes the news for them," she said.

People then keep watching night after night waiting to hear that familiar name or voice again, she added.

Brischke has been an employee of Brischke has been an employee of SIU-C for eight years and is employed by the Service Enterprises office. When asked if she was interested in pursuing her interest in meteorology, 32-year-old Brieschke replied, "I don't really know what I want to be when I grow up, but I don't think I want to be a meteorologist" meteorologist.

In spite of all of all the teasing, Brieschke says she enjoys being a KFVS weather watcher.
"Everybody likes it when someone comes up to you and says, 'Hey, I heard you on the news last night.' It's a kind of neat feeling."

Cleveland upends Detroit 6-4 to extend win streak to 3 games

Rookie third baseman Chris Pittaro's fourth-inning error led to three unearned runs Monday, helping the Cleveland Indians defeat the Detroit Tigers, 6-4, and extend their winning streak to three games.

Cleveland, 5-7, snapped a three-game losing streak to Detroit despite committing four errors. The Indians have won five of their last seven games. The Tigers, which swept the season-opening series between the two teams, fell to 7-4.

Don Schulze won his first decision, pitching seven in-nings and striking out four while allowing two runs, seven hits and no walks.

Mike Jeffcoot relieved in the eighth and permitted two unearned runs on two-out RBI singles by pinch hitter Tom Brookens and Lou Whitaker.

Tom Waddell replaced Jeffcoat and got the final four outs to notch his fourth save.

After Pittaro's RBI single gave Detroit a 1-0 led in the fourth, Cleveland rallied in the bottom of the inning off loser

Pittaro bobbled his grounder and took third on Mel Hall's single to le't. Pat Tabler's infield single off Morris' glove scored Franco and, after George Vukovich was in-tentionally walked, Jerry Willard hit into a fielder's choice to score Hall.

Tony Bernazard then blooped a run-scoring single to center that gave the Indians a 3-1 lead.

The Tigers narrowed the gap to 3-2 in the seventh as Pittaro tripled and scored on first baseman Tabler's error. baseman

With a record of 15-12, the Saluki softball team will travel to Cape Girardeau, Mo., on Tuesday for a 5 p.m. doubleheader with nonconference op Southeastern Missouri opponent

The Salukis, currently 5-4 in the Gateway Collegiate Athletic Conference, need to keep winning to improve their ranking for tournament play in May. SEMO, 27-11, is

Football Salukis battle for starting positions

By Mike Frey

At the beginning of spring practice, Saluki football coach Ray Dorr announced a starlineup of 11 offensive and 11 defensive players.

That lineup remained relatively stable through the first two weeks of practice but some major shakeups were made following the Salukis' third spring scrimmage Saturday

The most visible change Dorr and his staff have made is moving redshirt freshman Kevin Brown into the No. 1 quarterback slot in place of freshman Pat King, who started the Salukis' final game of 1984. Dorr said the move was made for a simple reason: Page 20, Daily Egyptian, April 23, 1905

Brown has played better than King in the past two weeks.
"He (Brown) has looked better," Dorr said. "This will set the stage for excellent competition at that position in the Maroon-White game."

The Maroon-White game."

The Maroon-White game, the annual contest that ends spring practice, will be played on Saturday at 10 a.m. at McAndrew Stadium. Dorr has said that he would like to determine his starting quarterback for 1995 coming out of the game, so it will be a crucial test for both players.

Brown has yet to play on the collegiate level, but King played in four games last season. He completed 41 passes in 82 attempts and threw for two touchdowns.

Dorr has also made changes Dorr has also made changes at the receiver positions, where Sebron Spivey has gained the edge over Bobby Sloan at split end and Paul Patterson has moved ahead of lake McGhee at flanker.

Two other offensive positions that are up for grabs are tailback and fullback. Byron Mitchell has retained his No. 1 status at tailback, but Mel Kirksey and Malcolm Liggins have presented him with strong connection. with strong competition. At fullback, Bryce Phibbs, the Salukis' leading rusher last season, has seen Kenny Harris move into a tie with him for the No. 1 position.

Dorr said he has been happier with his team's defensive play more than its offensive play this spring, but he has also made several defensive changes.

At defensive tackle, Jim White has assumed the No. 1 white has assumed the No. 1 left defensive tackle position over Darren Wietecha. Wietecha has been recuperating from an injury for much of spring practice and was unable to regain his clusting sections. starting spot when he returned to action last week.

Dorr said perhaps the fiercest battle for a starting spot is at noseguard, where the No. 1 position has switched back and forth between Brad Crouse and Alonzo Bailey. Sterling Haywood, a three-year starter at noseguard, has a fractured shoulder and will miss all of spring practice.

At right outside linebacker, Anthony "Popeye" Woods, a junior college transfer, has overtaken Greg Givens for the No. 1 spot. Dorr said Kevin Gleason has also played well at the position and could be a factor before the final decision is mode. is made.

At inside linebacker, five players — Rick Spielman, Frank Carr, Mike Carbonaro, Mark Griggs and John Edwards — are all vying for starting jobs.
