Garner emphasizes faculty respect

By Brian Gross
Staff Writer

Don Garner, elected president of the Faculty Senate Tuesday, said the faculty will assert its voice this year, a voice he claims has been muffled by an increasingly bureaucratic administration. "The faculty does not have the prestige and respect it should have," Garner said. "The administration is becoming very hierarchical and elaborate, and it is easy for the faculty not to be heard. I

Student conduct code changes still a priority would like to see the faculty start asserting its voice." As a first step in asserting its voice, the newly seated 1990-91 senate reaffirmed its proposed amendment of the Student Conduct Code made in November 1989.

The amendment will give faculty greater academic authority in the classroom, Garner said. Under the current code, teachers must go through the dean to fail a student for classroom cheating.

"Right now, the teacher has absolutely no authority if he catches a student cheating on a pop quiz," he said. "This sends a message that the faculty don't count."

Jervis Underwood, newly elected senator from the School of Music, said he wonders how the current code slipped by the faculty without protest.

"This is a very serious problem to the extent that it allows someone other than the instructor of the class to mess with a student's grade," Underwood said. "That violates the whole principle of education as I understand it."

Garner said the proposed amendment has caused a fair amount of student concern, but he said nobody will be kicked out of class.

"There is a real concern that students will be kicked out of class with no recourse," Garner said. "I think student leaders are misinformed on how we would reform the Student Conduct Code. There really is no reason to alarm the student body. Students would

Study to help meet needs of disabled

By Eric Reyes
Staff Writer

Improvement of rural transportation systems mainly used by disabled people and elderly can be helped by a study being done at SIU-C.

The University's department of community development is performing a descriptive study of rural non-emergency transportation in Illinois.

There is a need for the study, according to the proposal, because in many rural areas, publicly funded transit no longer provides specialized and public transportation in communities no longer served by intercity buses.

A non-emergency transport system, according to the proposal, carries passengers in Illinois on relatively fixed routes and schedules but may provide on-call or pick-up service by appointment. The system may operate one or more vehicles, may be public or private or not-for-profit and may or may not charge fees. School, church and tour buses are excluded.

A study of rural non-emergency transportation systems will help give Illinois policy makers a new opportunity to review and assess priorities and reconsider how rural non-emergency systems may fit in the state's rural transport mix, Paul Denise, professor in community development and principal investigator, said.

Data generated will be analyzed to determine if different systems, types of systems or systems in different rural regions of the state appear to have significant different ride characteristics, Denise said.

"One thing we're looking for are innovations. Until you know what's there you won't know what's unique," Denise said.

Denise said the final report should be done by late June.

U.S., Soviet trade talks begin in Paris

United Press International

Negotiations between the United States and the Soviet Union on a bilateral trade agreement began in Paris Tuesday after Washington softened its threat of retaliation against Moscow over Lithuania.

There had been speculation most of Tuesday that the talks would be postponed as part of U.S. retaliatory measures against the Soviet Union for its decision to cut off oil and gas supplies to Lithuania.

But the fourth and perhaps decisive round of talks began on schedule and is expected to last until Thursday, diplomatic sources said.

After meeting with congressional leaders Tuesday, President Bush deferred any action against the Soviet Union.

"I've not decided what will be done," Bush announced in Washington with the apparent backing of Congress and U.S. allies. "This is a highly complex situation that we're facing, and there's a lot at stake in this situation."

Sexual harassment: A prevalent threat

By Rob Coné
Staff Writer

First, a lingering stare. Next, a subtle touch. Perhaps you'll steal a kiss, maybe two. Your "intended" keeps resisting, but you know better. You drop a hint, make a proposition and finally...you're in.

What "you're in"—if you're a professor, employer, supervisor or student and your intended is a student, employee, subordinate or peer—is jeopardy. Because along any one of the steps just mentioned, you could be guilty of sexual harassment.

University counselors agree that sexual harassment is much less sexual than it is an abuse of power.

"Sexual harassment is different from most grievances because of a power imbalance between two people," said William Capie, SIUC's director of personnel and labor relations. "Certainly the students on this campus are vulnerable because of this tremendous power differential (that exists between students and professors)."

According to Capie, 20 incidents of sexual harassment have been reported during the past year. Capie said the majority of those incidents were only informational inquiries.

Space telescope, Discovery in orbit

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — The shuttle Discovery's crew rocketed into orbit Tuesday, unlimbered the ship's robot arm and readied the $1.5 billion Hubble Space Telescope for launch Wednesday on a quest to map out the history and fate of the universe.

Running seven years behind schedule and some $1 billion over budget, the space telescope appeared none the worse for its ground-shaking ride into orbit and

Engineers on ground give life to instrument

4 1/2 hours after liftoff, engineers on the ground began routing computer commands to the costly instrument, slowly bringing it to life.

"As far as we've been able to see on board, everything looks perfect," co-pilot Charles Bolden radioed mission control as the astronauts inspected the huge, 24,330-pound satellite, locked down in Discovery's cargo bay.

Later in the day, the telescope's five primary instruments were activated and if all goes well, astronaut Steven Hawley will use Discovery's 50-foot robot arm to deploy the most expensive satellite ever built around 1:57 p.m. EDT Wednesday.

Softball team nips Cougars

By Eric Bugger
Staff Writer

SIU softball bragging rights were on the line Tuesday afternoon at IAW Field, with SIU-C beating sister school SIU-Edwardsville in a 2-1 and 6-2 doubleheader sweep.

The Salukis improved their record to 29-6, while the Division II Cougars dropped to 28-9. The Salukis are on a school-record 16-game winning streak.

Junior Lisa Robinson (7-3) went the distance for the Salukis in the first game, allowing one run on five hits.

Coming off a 10-day layoff, the Saluki bats were silent through most of the opener. They mustered their two runs on only five hits.

"It's hard to tell if it was because of the days off or not," SIU-C Kay Brechtelsbauer said. "You have to give their pitcher credit, they didn't win 28 ballgames without good pitching. That ball moved around and we went after some pitches out of the strike zone. We just didn't look comfortable at the plate."

Thanks to a hit by sophomore center fielder Kim Johannsen, two walks and three errors in the bottom half of the fourth inning the Dawgs jumped ahead 2-0.

The Cougars gave the Salukis a scare in the sixth when they scored their run on two hits and a sacrifice. Robinson worked out of trouble with fly balls to left and center.

The one-run victory was the ninth for SIU-C in the spring season and the eighth in a row.

The Saluki bats still were asleep in the nightcap, but finally exploded in the fifth inning. With a 1-0 score in favor of the Cougars, junior left fielder Shannon Taylor drove a triple down the left field line. She scored on an RBI single up the middle by junior third baseman Mary Jo Firnbach.

Gibbs later scored on a wild pitch by Cougar Michele Cleeton. With the Salukis taking a 3-1 lead the Cougars attempted a comeback, scoring a run on three hits and a sacrifice in the top half of the sixth.

In the bottom of the inning the Salukis attacked again.

Taylor doubled and scored, freshman catcher Colleen Holloway tripled and scored and Firnbach doubled and scored, slamming the door on the Cougars 6-2.

Holloway and Firnbach went three for four at the plate, each driving in a run. Taylor went two for four and scored twice.

"One game it's the top of the lineup coming through for us, the next game it might be the middle and next week it may be the bottom. In this second game it was the top...the first three hitters really exploded there at the end," Brechtelsbauer said.

Freshman Angie Mick picked up her fourth win of the spring season, allowing two runs on seven hits in seven innings of work. Mick struck out four, walked two.

"Those were two very tough wins," Brechtelsbauer said. "We struggled through both of those two ballgames and it wasn't until the latter part of the second game that we started exploding offensively. We played good defensively, but our bats were just a little slow getting started."

Salukis pound 18 hits in 17-3 win over Bills

By Greg Scott
Staff Writer

It is safe to say the Saluki baseball team has the St. Louis Billikens' number.

For the second time this season, the 12th-ranked Salukis dinged the Billikens, this time 17-3 Tuesday at Abe Martin Field.

The Salukis defeated the Billikens 21-1 April 5 in St. Louis.

SIU-C improved its overall record to 33-8. St. Louis fell to 6-31-1.

"St. Louis U. is very unfortunate," Saluki coach Richard "Itchy" Jones said. "They don't really support their baseball program like a lot of schools."

Junior right-hander Mike Van Gilder (1-0) was the winning pitcher for the Salukis. Van Gilder yielded no runs and four hits in five innings. He struck out four

Shields out to prove Salukis a winner

Senior outfielder passed on draft to play this year

By Greg Scott
Staff Writer

Maybe good things do come for people who wait.

Last season the Saluki baseball team went 26-38, setting a school record for losses in a season.

Saluki center fielder Doug Shields could have escaped what looked like a bad situation. He was drafted in the 15th round by the Chicago White Sox in the major league draft last summer.

But Shields turned down the Chicago offer and decided to return for his senior season at SIU-C.

"I had heard that I was going to be drafted higher," Shields said. "But when I heard the 15th round, I knew I wasn't going to get the money I wanted. I didn't think it was going to be enough to sign me out of my junior year. And things didn't go well in negotiations."

Shields said he had something to prove this season. But he hit .364 with five home runs and 31

Doug Shields

RBIs last season. He led the Salukis in almost every major offensive category. What did Shields have to prove?

"I felt if we had won last year I would have been drafted higher," Shields said. "That's the thing I wanted to stress — that I am a winner and this team is a winner."

It looks like Shields has accomplished his mission. The Salukis have turned their fortunes around this season.

After finishing last in the Missouri Valley Conference last season, the Salukis are tied for first in the conference with an 8-4 mark this season. They are 33-8 overall and are ranked 12th in the Collegiate Baseball/ESPN Division I poll.

Shields has done his part during the Salukis' drive to the top. Going into this week's action, Shields is hitting .356 with five home runs and 37 RBIs.

Saluki coach Richard "Itchy" Jones said Shields didn't want his collegiate career to end with a down season.

"Doug has a lot of pride," Jones said. "He didn't want to leave on a sour note. It has been a pleasure to coach him."

And Jones welcomed Shields' return.

"When he decided to stay, we called it our best recruit of the year," Jones kidded.

Shields is the total package in a two-thirds of an inning. Marvel hit three Saluki batters and walked two.

The Salukis' only hit against Marvel was a two-run double by Manne. The Salukis took advantage of Marvel's wildness with five runs on only one hit in the second inning. The Salukis led 12-0.

SIU-C added double tallies in the third and fourth and three in the sixth. SIU-C scored 17 runs on 18 hits. Every SIU-C starter had at least one hit.

Endebrock and Shelton had three hits each. Geary and Ed Jaike had two hits each. Shelton and Manne had four RBIs each and Wrona had three RBIs.

St. Louis scored twice in the seventh and once in the eighth. St. Louis had nine hits in the game.

The Salukis play Murray State at 3 p.m. Thursday in Murray, Ky.

■ The Salukis played without center fielder Doug Shields Tuesday.

Shields injured his left shoulder making a diving catch in Sunday's game at Wichita State. His shoulder was diagnosed as a bruise and will be sore a couple of days.

"I would say Doug's on a day-to-day basis," Jones said. "We probably won't consider it before Friday. If he's hurt Friday we won't use him."

Shields' injury probably will keep him out until the four-game series Saturday and Sunday against conference rival Illinois State in Normal.

Jones said if Shields isn't ready Friday, Endebrock will start in center. Endebrock, the starting first baseman, started in center Tuesday and made a diving catch in the seventh inning.

Big Ten stars whip South in exhibition

By Kevin Simpson
Staff Writer

Former Saluki basketball teammates joined some of the best players in the Midwest for 40 minutes of high-flying exhibition action Monday at Rich Herrin Gym in Benton.

In the end it was the Big Ten all-stars who walked off with a 150-123 whitewashing against the Southern all-stars before an estimated crowd of 1,500. It was a high-spirited game with a lot of dunks and one main objective — having fun.

Three members of the 1989-90 Missouri Valley Conference champion Salukis suited up. Seniors Jerry Jones, Freddie McSwain and Jay Schafer teamed with former Saluki Randy House to represent the Dawgs.

More hostage releases hinge on promises of 'good will'

Daily Egyptian wire services

BEIRUT, Lebanon — There were signs Tuesday that more Western hostages, including an American, could be freed soon, but groups close to the kidnappers linked the releases to demands of freedom for Arab prisoners in Israel and Kuwait. However, the chance for more hostages to be freed hinges on some gesture of appreciation from President Bush to Iran. But Bush's position is that the United States will demonstrate his promised "good will" toward Iran only after all seven Americans held in Lebanon are released.

Curfew lifted in Nepal; water supply threatened

KATHMANDU, Nepal (UPI) — Authorities Tuesday lifted a shoot-to-kill curfew, imposed after street battles pitting supporters of Nepal's ousted hard-line regime against police and vigilante gangs killed at least 18 people. The curfew ended at 6 a.m. and there were no immediate reports of violence overnight. Several citizens reported receiving telephone threats that the municipal water supply would be poisoned. The water supply corporation said Tuesday that tests conducted Monday night determined the water was fit for consumption.

Embryo research focus of British legislation

LONDON (UPI) — Legislators debated until late Tuesday whether to reduce the legal limit on abortions after earlier approving a law allowing medical research on embryos in test tubes during the first 14 days of existence. The two-pronged Human Fertilization and Embryology Bill on abortion and embryonic research culminates a six-year public debate in Britain and party leaders have granted members in the House of Commons a rare chance to make a personal moral vote — rather than along party lines.

Milken pleads guilty, agrees to pay $600 million

NEW YORK (UPI) — Junk bond financier Michael Milken avoided trial on insider trading and racketeering charges by pleading guilty to six less serious felony violations of federal securities and tax laws Tuesday and said he was "truly sorry" for his crimes. Milken, who agreed to pay fines and penalties totaling $600 million, faces up to 28 years in prison.

Track inspection begins at derailment site

BATAVIA, Iowa (UPI) — An Amtrak passenger train that derailed near Batavia was traveling at the prescribed speed limit and investigators will concentrate their initial probe on the track conditions, government officials said Tuesday. Eight cars of Amtrak's California Zephyr carrying 394 passengers jumped the tracks Monday afternoon in southern Iowa en route to Chicago, injuring 97 people.

Privatization of area lakes questioned by Poshard

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Any so-called "privatization" at Rend Lake or Lake Carlyle should be done without jeopardizing the area's water supply and without imposing increased user fees, U.S. Rep. Glenn Poshard, D-Carterville, said Tuesday. David Hewitt, a spokesman for the Army Corps of Engineers, which operates the lakes, said recent stories that Rend Lake—or Carlyle—were going to be "sold off by the Corps are completely off-base."

20,000 downstaters get Chicago parking tickets

CHICAGO (UPI) — An estimated 20,000 downstaters may have received parking tickets they didn't earn from the city of Chicago, a spokesman for the Chicago Department of Revenue admitted Tuesday. John Holden, a revenue spokesman, said the city last week mailed 650,000 notices of delinquent parking tickets — 100,000 of which went to people living outside the Chicago metropolitan area — in its bid to collect $80 million in outstanding tickets and compounding fines. Holden said since the notices went out, the department has received calls from all over the state, complaining about unwarranted demands for payment.

Local volunteers to be honored for service

By Wayne Wallace
Staff Writer

Three outstanding volunteers in the Carbondale community will be honored Thursday at 4 p.m. when the Volunteer of the Year awards are handed out in the Old Main Lounge of the Student Center.

The awards ceremony is one of the highlights of SIU-C's observance of National Celebrate the Volunteer Week. Thursday's Special Olympics at McAndrew Stadium and the March of Dimes' Walk America fund-raiser on Sunday are two other volunteer events slated for this week.

Donald Lockart, president of the Mobilization of Volunteer Effort at the Office of Student Development, said his organization received 16 nominations for the Volunteer of the Year awards, presented annually by MOVE.

"We recognize outstanding volunteers on campus and in the community to promote volunteerism and to encourage others to get involved," Lockart said. "It's good to see people volunteer."

Paul Adalikwu, graduate adviser to MOVE, said the names of the winners have not yet been released, but the three recipients of this year's awards represent volunteers from the University community, the Carbondale community and volunteers to social service agencies.

Also honored at the awards ceremony will be the RSO Adviser of the Year.

Lockart said MOVE is an RSO that recruits volunteers for non-profit and charity events in the area.

"When we were approached by the March of Dimes, we were thrilled to help," Lockart said.

At 1 p.m. Sunday, volunteers from the March of Dimes will be joined by MOVE volunteers for Walk America, a fund-raiser where participants accept pledges for how many miles they walk.

The trek will begin and end at Turley Park on West Main Street, Lockart said. "From Turley to Murphysboro, the overall walk is about 30 miles, and it lasts all day," he added.

For the Special Olympics, MOVE has recruited volunteers to help pass out drinks, food and prizes to the participants, Adalikwu said.

MOVE volunteers also will act as huggers, congratulating or consoling athletes after each Olympic event, Adalikwu said.

"We have a steering committee to decide which ones really need help the most," Lockart said. "We coordinate volunteer efforts for the Carbondale community, not just campus events."

Lockart said MOVE recruits volunteers for the University's blood drives, the Carbondale Clean and Green and the Earth Day rallies at Turley Park, noting that SIU-C's Greek organizations are the driving force behind all volunteer efforts on campus.

"We actually go out and knock on doors to recruit these volunteers. The dorms, too," Lockart said.

"I picture every volunteer on this campus as a member of the Mobilization of Volunteer Efforts in one form or another," Lockart said.

Springfest 1990 a success, organizers say

By Stephanie Steirer
Staff Writer

More than 15,000 parties gathered at what organizers say was a successful Springfest 1990.

"The number of people at Springfest 1990 was larger than last year's crowd," said Dave Miller, Student Programming Council Springfest chairperson.

But Miller noted that the crowd was not as large as the crowds in previous years, when Springfest and the Carboard Boat Regatta were combined. "This is because two major events were combined in one, so there was more of a turnout for both events," he said.

The weather also played a factor in Springfest's success.

"Springfest was very successful despite the rain," Miller said. "But the rain did affect the bands on the Mainstage."

Many of the bands had to go through numerous sound checks, which delayed and even shortened the bands' performances, Miller said.

Miller also noted that recycling bins were set up around the entire Springfest area, but they were not readily used. The amount of garbage created by Springfest goers was not determined.

Springfest 1991 is in the works as a new Springfest chairperson has been selected.

Opinion & Commentary

It's legislators' turn to help the planet

NOW THAT all the media fanfare surrounding Earth Day is beginning to calm down, what are you going to do about the environment? The overwhelming success of the environmental celebration indicated an enormous grassroots movement toward preserving the planet. Your constituency has voiced its opinion—in favor of a cleaner Earth, no matter what the cost. It's finally starting to get through people's skulls that this is the only planet we're going to get, so we'd better take care of it.

HOWEVER, caring about the environment and being knowledgeable enough about the situation are two different things. Average people are beginning to look at recycling and conservation measures as ways to combat the depletion of our natural resources, but they don't know how to go about it. Once they investigate the subject, they will find that, in many cases, recycling is time-consuming, inconvenient and the economic gain is not large enough to merit their time.

Sure, they should look beyond the "what's in it for me" philosophy that is all too prevalent in our society, but we have to be realistic. People have gotten used to convenience, speed and instant gratification. If they have to go to extreme lengths to recycle, they won't do it.

THAT'S WHERE legislation can help. We shouldn't force people to recycle, but we could make it in their best interests to do so. If people are given an example to follow, they will be less likely to apathetically shrug their shoulders and think they can't make a difference. Every little bit helps. We could install recycling programs to make it easier for people to recycle. Federal and state cooperation could result in a curbside removal service for glass, aluminum and paper products could be very effective in cutting down on waste.

Tax breaks could be implemented for those who recycle. Business people could work in conjunction with environmentalists and scientists to replace common household items, such as plastics, detergents and chloroflourocarbons, with safer, more environment-friendly items. Business people could be encouraged to suggest recycling programs and look into ways to curb industrial waste within their own offices.

THESE ARE but a few suggestions that we could expedite through strong, supportive legislation. The time to act is now. We need to follow up on our initial efforts with some definite action. We owe it to our children and grandchildren to give them a habitat in which they can grow and prosper. One thing's for sure. We all need to work together and share the responsibility of giving Mother Earth a face lift. The planet you save may be your own.

Guilt plays essential role in life

By Jeremy Iggers
Minneapolis-St. Paul Star Tribune

I got into an argument recently with a friend on the question of guilt. She thinks that guilt is always a bad thing, while I think it has an essential and sometimes positive role to play in our lives.

The word has several meanings, including a legal one. But I'm talking about guilt as a moral emotion — the painful feeling you get when that little voice inside your head tells you that you have done something you shouldn't have, or have failed to do something you should have.

I remember once in the late '70s going to a sales pitch for a self-improvement course. The speaker offered, for a mere $450, to turn us into totally self-actualized people, free of nagging self-doubt and uncertainty. "You know those tapes in the back of your head that are constantly telling you that you should do this, and you shouldn't do that? We can teach you how to turn them off."

The part about getting locked into a hotel ballroom for two successive weekends and not being allowed to go to the bathroom didn't appeal to me. But the really scary part was the idea of turning off that little voice. He never used the word, but he was talking about my conscience.

What this man was offering me was nothing less than a moral lobotomy. Today, explicit value judgments and talk about ethics seem to be making a comeback. It's everywhere you go: too many days, from the cover of Time to the bestseller lists. The real reason to be cynical about a lot of this ethical revival, but there's no doubt that we're hearing a lot more moral talk than we used to.

Football program produces winners

In one year, I have read half-a-dozen letters in the DE trying to kill football at SIU-C. I played football six years, officiated eight years and have coached. I've observed many young men build self-confidence and reach personal goals because of their association with football.

Research revealed positive things about SIU-C football graduates. SIU alumni football players have influenced students, both traditional and non-traditional, to attend SIU-C. Please keep in mind that attendance equals money.

Here's a list: Carl Mauc played and coached in the NFL for 12 years with Baltimore, Miami, San Diego, Houston and Kansas City. Kevin House played with Tampa Bay and the L.A. Rams; Isaac Brigham, Dallas Cowboys (and was one of the few players ever to manhandle Ray Nitzke, all-pro linebacker from Green Bay, on national television). Now Dr. Isaac Brigham is dean of admissions at John A. Logan College.

Lionel Antoine played for the Chicago Bears; Terry Taylor, Seattle Seahawks and Minneapolis; Tom Bauga, Kansas City Chiefs; Huston Antwine, AFL all-star team Patriots.

Marion Rushing, Sam Silas and Jim Hart played for St. Louis. Hart is athletic director at SIU-C. Carver Shannon a top official in airline industry, played for the L.A. Rams.

Lombardi and Patton both said, "Americans love a winner and will not tolerate a loser." Maybe some on the abolish-football-at-SIU bandwagon just can't stand losing.

Bill O'Brien, former faculty member and coach, received numerous awards at SIU. O'Brien is an NFL official and observer.

Abe Martin, former baseball and basketball coach SIU-C, played football, as did Bill Norwood, chairman of SIU-C board of trustees and current alumni director George Loukas, successful Chicago businessman.

Former SIU faculty members Frank Bridges, William Freeburg, Lynn Holder also played.

There are hundreds of men with college degrees in the United States, making positive impacts on society, who played football at SIU. Without their football talent, many would not have degrees.

SIU has, no doubt, lost a few quality players in the recruiting process because of negative media attention. If we change coaches every year or two we will probably see football eliminated.

Changes equate to rebuilding, which usually leads to more losses than wins.

Lombardi and Patton both said, "Americans love a winner and will not tolerate a loser." Maybe some on the abolish-football-at-SIU bandwagon just can't stand losing. I have not read any letters proposing cancellation of basketball, baseball or swimming programs at SIU—all winning programs.

Coach Bob Smith is a winner. He builds winners and has had tremendous success as a football coach. Winners breed winners.

Give Coach Smith and his staff an opportunity to build a successful program. That means playing with seniors Coach Smith recruited as freshmen. Figure four years minimum to build a solid program. Stick around, Coach Smith and staff will build a winning tradition.

If the team wins, the stadium fills, more money schools want to play SIU, and the program makes money. Then, Professor Handler and associates won't have a leg to stand on.—Tom Tate, graduate assistant, vocational education.

Faculty: Walk to work in honor of Earth Week

What are you gonna do for Earth Week, my eco-friend asked me. So I said on Alternative Transportation Day, I'll ride my bicycle to work. Big deal, they said, you ride your bike to work every day. So then I said, how about if I start a campaign to get everybody who works at SIU, except those physically disabled or who live too far from Carbondale, to ride their bikes that day.

So here I am, challenging all SIU employees to ride (or walk) to work. The advantages of riding over driving are so numerous its almost embarrassing to list them all, but I will attempt to name a few:

It's environmentally conscious. Not only is auto exhaust a major contributor to smog, acid rain and the greenhouse effect, but cars are greater indirect polluters. They are the primary reasons that tankers like the Exxon Valdez are cruising (and polluting) the oceans of the world. Cars also make an incredible solid waste disposal problem.

It's healthier. Obviously, riding is good exercise. It gets people out into the fresh air and sunshine, in a day when it's possible to go without hardly seeing or feeling the natural environment.

It's safer. Some statistics show this isn't true, but I believe the main danger in biking is all the cars on the road. Fewer cars mean less danger. I know of no one ever killed by being hit by a bike.

A drunk in a car is a potential murderer; a drunk can't even keep a bike upright. The state does not require liability insurance of bicyclists for a good reason. A bike is light and maneuverable. A car is one ton of metal, glass and flammable liquid.

It saves energy. The energy crisis may be behind us, but petroleum remains a non-renewable resource, and overseas purchases are a major contributor to the trade deficit.

Bikes not only use no gasoline, but they also require less of other petroleum products, like lubricants and plastics. They also cause less wear and tear on the roads and infrastructure.

It's cheaper. Bikes use no gas, cost less to buy and repair and need no insurance. A parking sticker at SIU costs more than my used bicycle did.

It's less of a headache. You can always find a place to park a bike. They seldom get dented, and I've never locked myself out of one. With fewer mechanisms, they have less to go wrong and thus are seldom in the shop.

They are kinder to animals. Ever see a dog or a squirrel killed by being run over by a bike? Bicycles are so quiet they don't even frighten the birds.

In short, there is every reason to ride. So come on SIU employees, let's see what you're made of. Are we a bunch of wimps or what? Never locked myself out of one. With fewer mechanisms, they have less to go wrong and thus are seldom in the shop. Our goal should be empty parking lots.—Gary K. Shepherd, president, Coalition to End Internal Combustion.

Discrimination on campus must stop

This letter is in reference to the flagrant discrimination against minority students working on campus.

It has been our experience that minority workers face several unnecessary obstacles due to the racial attitudes of some supervisors at their place of employment. Countless times we have heard supervisors refer to workers under them as "nigge," "boy," "gook," etc. We've also heard comments such as: "It'll be better when we can get rid of some of these 'milkduds' and get some real workers," referring to a weeding-out process involving the replacement of minority workers with white workers. In this, certain supervisors find insignificant reasons to terminate the student or continually harass the student until he/she finally quits.

The University may have an office for complaints of this nature, but if it does, little information is provided to the student worker. The workers need such an office where they can confidentially submit complaints without fear of reprimand or loss of job.

How many students fail to lodge such complaints from either lack of knowing where to go, assuming nothing would be done about the matter even if he/she did complain, or fear of having his/her supervisor find out? This is a problem because supervisors have the power to write a bad report on their workers that could make it difficult for a student to obtain another campus job for the remainder of his/her study at SIU.

The intent of this letter is to encourage the University to consider this problem. We realize mos. supervisors do not hold these racist attitudes or act in a discriminatory manner. Yet something must be done about those that do. Racism is not a new issue.

It is unfortunate that some administrators may feel it doesn't carry as much "weight" as the football team controversy of the parking lot dilemma. But it should be remembered that much of the money earned by student workers goes directly back into the University to pay for tuition and related college expenses. No student working on this campus for this University should have to tolerate verbal abuse or work in constant fear of losing his/her job due to racial prejudice.—Ron Ruppnow, junior, history and John Gehner, freshman, pre-major.

NORML promotion of marijuana unreasonable; MAPP should try harder to get message across

To the people of NORML. You can call it whatever fancy name you want: Hemp, cannabis plant, etc. But the bottom line is that marijuana is a drug. You can spout off about all its potential uses, but you and I (and everyone else on campus) know what you really want it legalized for.

And to the people of MAPP: I have a difficult time believing that you really care about the environment. If you are really concerned about McDonald's using foam packaging and clearcutting, then you would talk to the people in the corporate offices in Oak Brook, Ill., instead of protesting a little store in Southern Illinois.

And as far as McDonald's going into the Student Center:

You had several months to voice your opposition while it was still in the planning stage, and you did nothing. The plans have been finalized and it's far too late to start complaining now. You had your chance. Actions speak louder than words, but I didn't hear a sound out of MAPP.—Phil Schuyler, junior, aviation management.

Pro-gay interpretation disputed, but humankind deserves right to counsel on professional level

In case any of the loyal Daily Egyptian fans have not been following the dialogue that has been going on, I wrote a letter challenging the pro-gay interpretation of history. I am responding to inuendoes that I will not defend the oppressed.

Ethically, it is often hard to be a lawyer. Not everyone can do it.

You might have to defend a murderer or rapist even though you can't understand why they did it. The same is true for homosexuals.

I am not a homophobe. Homophobe means homo (same), and phobe (fear). I am not afraid of gays. I just think what they do is an abomination.

I resent these attacks on my professionalism. I will defend anyone on a professional level. But I reserve the right to privately detest them. I am a person of principle. One of my principles is that homosexuality is wrong, and a person without principles is a sorry excuse for a human being.—Alexander M. Wilson, graduate student, law.

General studies course titles perpetuate sexism, but overall mission accomplished, merits praise

Isn't it time that a non-sexist name was adopted for GENA 221 (also GEB 221 and GEC 221)? I refer to "Survival of Man." I want to stress that I refer only to its name; conceptually, the course is far-sighted and enriching. The departments that present this course should be commended. Each semester the course is brought about through a cooperative effort of several instructors from several departments (which in itself is no small feat of coordination and cooperation); even more worthy of respect, however, is the mission of the course—namely, to stimulate awareness that we live in a global ecosystem.

It speaks well of the University in general that such an environmentally conscious course has been offered as long as it has. This would be a model course, I think, if only it had a name that was inclusive of all humankind!—Todd Hedinger, graduate student, educational psychology.

Saluki Shakers' requirements unnecessary; sponsors at fault for stale prejudiced attitudes

In yesterday's Daily Egyptian I saw an ad in the paper that dealt with the Saluki Shakers tryouts for Spring 1991. The requirements to try out that were listed in the paper were: full-time student, 2.0 college G.P.A., attendance at two clinics and "meet weight requirements." I felt that all of the requirements were justified except meeting weight requirements. I feel that this was very prejudiced, and knowing that the school sponsors the Shakers, it is just as much at fault. Who gives anyone the right to pass judgment on a person in a world that comes in all different colors, shapes and sizes. I shall hope that everyone should learn from this. You need to respect a person for who they are and what they are, not for what they look like. In life or in the business world a person will go a lot farther on this policy.—Brian James Schroeger, senior, education.

Editorial Policies

Signed articles, including letters, viewpoints and other commentaries, reflect the opinions of their authors only. Unsigned editorials represent a consensus of the Daily Egyptian Board, whose members are the student editor-in-chief, the editorial page editor, the associate editorial page editor, a news staff member, the faculty managing editor and a School of Journalism faculty member.

Letters to the editor must be submitted directly to the editorial page editor, Room 1247, Communications Building. Letters should be typewritten and double spaced. All letters are subject to editing and will be limited to 500 words. Letters fewer than 250 words will be given preference for publication. Students must identify themselves by class and major, faculty members by rank and department, non-academic staff by position and department.

Letters for which verification of authorship cannot be made will not be published.

"However, if we resolved 20," Capie said, "we probably left 200 unresolved." Unresolved, he said, because most persons are afraid to come forward.

Capie's claim has been substantiated by an independent survey of 792 female University employees conducted in October 1988. That number included all SIU-C's female faculty, administrative and professional staff and a random sample of University civil service employees.

The survey found that almost 70 percent of the 5,9 women who responded claimed they had been sexually harassed at least once during the two-year period prior to the survey.

Nancy Bandy, assistant athletic director for student services, conducted the survey as the basis for her doctoral dissertation, Sexual Harassment of Female Employees at a Midwestern University.

Her survey found that women in non-traditional jobs—jobs that are more likely to be performed by men—were significantly more likely to be harassed than women in traditional areas.

The survey also found that a majority of women did not take formal action against their harassers because they "saw no need to report it," they "thought it would make their work situations unpleasant" or they "thought that nothing would be done about the harassment."

Bandy said she decided to conduct the survey because of a 1988 sexual harassment. "I was involved in the first case here that went to the formal hearing stage," she said.

The case involved a female University employee who claimed her male boss was subjecting her to physical and verbal sexual harassment. Bandy said she served as the woman's advocate because "the harasser had a lawyer and she had no one to help her through it."

"Jane," requesting her identity not be revealed in a 1988 Daily Egyptian interview, reported the harassment to the University's Affirmative Action Office. "Somebody had to break the ice," she said. "It was thin ice, too, and I went in quick."

Jane called the hearing "a circus." Bandy said after eight hearing sessions, two of which lasted all day, and 14 witnesses later, the three-person neutral panel found Jane's boss guilty.

Their written recommendations were given to SIU-C President John C. Guyon for review. "The president overturned it," Bandy said. "He said it never happened."

Bandy said an appeal was filed with the Board of Trustees, but they upheld Guyon's findings.

Bandy believes the results of that case, and the outcry and publicity that followed, served as the impetus for re-writing portions of the University's sexual harassment policy. The changes to the policy were implemented in March 1989.

Before the revisions critics said a claimant had little support or recourse short of filing a formal grievance—a step, as in Jane's case, that can have serious personal and career consequences for all parties involved.

Capie said the current policy is designed to not only better facilitate claimants and respondents but also to sensitize the University population.

Capie said that through the policy's new emphasis on education he hopes to alleviate the number of sexual harassment incidents on campus.

But there remains one factor the policy addresses but can do little to prevent—retribution.

"People are afraid to come forward because of a fear of retaliation," Capie said. He said simply because the supervisor agrees to stop the behavior the person found offensive doesn't mean the crisis is over. "That power imbalance doesn't go away," he said. "In many cases that person has to return to that same environment with that same supervisor."

Jane is still an SIU-C employee and she no longer works for that same boss, Bandy said. She said, however, Jane has been shifted to several different offices since her case was closed by the University.

"The arm flies real well," Hawley said after a closed-circuit TV inspection of the telescope. "As near as we can tell everything looks perfect."

The Hubble Space Telescope is arguably the most important scientific payload ever built. Once in operation high above Earth's obscuring atmosphere, the automated observatory is expected to revolutionize knowledge about the birth, structure, evolution and fate of the universe.

"The adventure begins!" said an elated Edward Weiler, a NASA astronomer who has worked with the space telescope project for years. "It's going to revolutionize astronomy."

Taking no chances, Discovery's cabin air pressure was lowered to 10.2 pounds per square inch and astronauts Kathryn Sullivan and Bruce McCandless spent the afternoon checking out the space suits they will wear in the event of problems with the telescope that might require an emergency spacewalk Wednesday.

"It's been a long haul (but finally, we've got it into its element," NASA Administrator Richard Truly said in an interview. "I think it's a historic day in America's space program."

Hawley, 38, Bolden, 43, Sullivan, 38, McCandless, 52, and shuttle skipper Loren Shriver, 45, spent their first day in orbit checking out Discovery's systems and testing the robot arm to make sure it will be up to the task of deploying the space telescope Wednesday.

before Congress can consider President Bush's request that the Soviet Union be granted most favored nation trade status.

The sources said the talks will center on conditions for U.S. investment in the Soviet Union, ranging from hiring policies to the repatriation of profits.

A formal trade treaty would lead to expanded trade between the two countries and provide a legal framework for broader commercial relations.

In addition to the negotiations on a trade agreement, the two countries are working on a separate set of investment and tax agreements.

Both Washington and Moscow would like the negotiations to be completed so a treaty can be signed by Bush and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev at their summit May 30 to June 3.

There is no existing comprehensive commercial agreement between the two superpowers, although accords on specific areas such as wheat are in effect, the diplomatic sources said.

Acquiring most favored nation status is of crucial importance to Moscow, the sources added, because it would permit it to import the high technology products and know-how necessary to modernize the troubled Soviet economy.

President Bush withheld any decision on sanctions against Moscow after consulting with congressional leaders Tuesday.

be operating under the same rights as students at the University of Illinois do. I don't believe any due process is going to be lost."

The teacher should offer to hold a hearing with the student before lowering any grade, and the dean should be allowed to immediately re-enter students into class, Garner said.

He said the conduct code is an example of the faculty's voice being muffled by the growing administration.

"It's not just the tremendous financial resources needed in manning this system, but in the many layers of administration, the voices of the faculty become muffled," Garner said. "This is what happened with the Student Conduct Code."

Bureaucracy stifles University life, he said, and the administration would be more efficient without so many job titles.

"The growing Chancellor's

Office has added so many new positions and titles that the faculty is faced with two administrations," Garner said.

The faculty does not have the prestige and respect it should have from the administration, he said, but SIU-C President John C. Guyon has been sympathetic to and supportive of the faculty's goals.

"John Guyon is a president this Faculty Senate can work with," Garner said. "I am very hopeful that, in working with Guyon, next year is going to be a good one for the University."

Garner, elected president by acclamation at the senate's transition meeting, replaces Donald Paige, who is stepping down after serving two terms as president.

James Fox, re-elected by acclamation, will serve as Garner's vice president. Cheryl Hanley-Maxwell, senate secretary, also was re-elected.

In other business, the senate approved a resolution setting an annual deadline of January 20 for submitting proposed new general education courses.

A motion to request a review of the Capstone Program was withdrawn by the general education committee, but will be forwarded to the undergraduate education policy committee for further action.

Jack Brown, UEPC chairman, said the motion should not be passed before the senate defines the nature of the review.

"If we pass this, the vice president (of academic affairs) could simply act on this before we discuss what the nature of the review should be."

A report from the senate's 21st century task force, which was to request the formation of a campus-wide liaison committee, was postponed because of the absence of task force chairman George Gorman.

COLA chooses 1990 Outstanding teacher

By Anne Ryman
Staff Writer

The College of Liberal Arts has named Leland S. Person Jr. as its 1990 Outstanding Teacher, the first time the annual honor has gone to a single teacher.

"In the past we have had five outstanding teachers (each year)," John Jackson III, liberal arts dean, said.

"This year, we cut it in an attempt to emphasize the importance of the award. Dr. Person has got some outstanding credentials, including a recently published book," Jackson said.

Person's book, "Aesthetic Headaches: Women and Masculine Poetics in Poe, Melville and Hawthorne," was nominated for the John Hope Franklin and James Russell Lowell prizes.

The College of Liberal Arts

Council, made up of faculty and student members, reviewed candidates' teaching histories and letters of recommendation from former students in making the selection.

Person, associate professor of English, came to SIU-C in 1987 from Indiana University-Purdue University at Fort Wayne. He specializes in 19th century American literatures and gender studies. He currently is working on a study of masculinist issues in the work of novelist and critic Henry James.

Person earned a bachelor's degree from Middlebury College in Vermont, a master's degree from the University of New Hampshire, Durham and a doctorate from Indiana University, Bloomington.

Home health care provided through Carbondale agency

By Michelle R. Walker
Staff Writer

Roosevelt Turley is recovering from a stroke that required surgery. Even though she is a widow without any family in Carbondale, she is not alone.

Each day, a nurse from Quality of Life Services visits Turley in her home and helps in her recovery.

"They are so kind and nice. They are more than just nurses, and that really helps when you are sick."

"They don't just sit and look at you," Turley said. "They talk. They ask questions to find out what you think is wrong."

Turley said that a nurse from Quality of Life Services was there to help her as soon as she was released from the hospital.

Betsy Brown, director of program development at the agency said that cases like Turley's are a new trend in medicine.

Now hospitals try to dismiss patients as soon as possible after surgery. Brown said that even though this means lower cost, it also means that some patients, especially older ones, go home even though they are not completely recovered.

People must be homebound in order to qualify for care at Quality of Life Services. Brown said the agency feels a responsibility to help these people.

For older people, Quality of Life Services provides an alternative to a nursing home, Brown said.

"People are happier at home and they can get better faster. In a nursing home, sometimes people get depressed," Brown said.

Brown also said that people who cannot get along completely on their own will not be forced to go to a nursing home because Quality of Life Services can provide what little help they need. Brown cited diabetics who cannot give themselves insulin as an example.

The focus seems to be on older people, Brown said, but Quality of Life Services also meets the needs of paraplegics and other younger people for various reasons.

Although the agency is not the only home health care agency in Southern Illinois, Brown said it stands apart from the others because it is charitable. Hospitals provide similar services, but they operate differently.

Quality of Life Services, a private, non-profit home health care agency certified by Medicare and Medicaid, accepts all patients in the community, Brown said.

Its services include skilled nursing and personal care, physical therapy, speech therapy, pediatric care and medical social services.

Dr. Jean Robinson started Quality of Life Services in 1978 out of her home. Robinson still resides in Carbondale and has remained active with Quality of Life Services. Today she is the chief executive officer.

The business has expanded with the main office still in Carbondale and five branch offices in Southern Illinois. It serves 19 counties in Southern Illinois and has a staff of 60 employees with 14 in Carbo date.

Quality of Life Services works with SIU-C students by providing internships. Brown said it now employs about 10 medical students and four nursing students.

The agency wants to expand its intern program by offering not only clinical internships, but also internships in other areas like finance and program development, she said.

"Another function at Quality of Life Services is to educate.

"Not only do we want to improve the quality of care, and therefore, the quality of life, we also want to educate people and teach them to take better care of themselves," Brown said.

"Education is the key and we want to educate as many as possible."

On May 9, Quality of Life Services and the Illinois Home Care Council are sponsoring a Home Health Conference and open house at the Mount Vernon branch office.

The open house marks one year since a fire at the main office in Carbondale. Now the office has been remodeled.

The key speaker will be Jean Simon, attorney and wife of U. S. Senator Paul Simon D-Makanda. She will speak about the federal role in home health care.

For details about the conference one may call Betsy Brown at 529-2262.

Police Blotter

Carbondale Police reported a burglary at II Hearts Club, 213 E. Main St., early Tuesday morning between 2:15 a.m. and 3:19 a.m.

Police said they recovered some alcohol, chewing gum, cigarettes and stereo equipment after chasing and losing a suspect carrying a cardboard box. Police said they traced the items back to the club, where it was discovered someone had hidden inside the club before it closed. Once it closed the person took the items and left the building, police said.

All items were recovered but police estimated losses at $1,500. No arrests were made by officers, and there are no suspects.

Discussion of state tuition levels set for GPSC meeting

By Richard Hund
Staff Writer

The Graduate and Professional Student Council will discuss its response to state tuition levels in its last meeting of the semester at 7 tonight.

GPSC President Charles Ramsey said no formal resolution had been written as of Tuesday, but it would address the issues in the resolution passed by the Undergraduate Student Government last week.

USG's resolution approved of the Illinois Board of Higher Education's recommended budget for fiscal year 1991 with its necessary appropriations. USG also approved the Senate bill asking for a tuition freeze for the 1990-1991 school year.

Ramsey said GPSC must determine if the two issues concerning appropriations and the freeze are related.

Another resolution in the meeting will call for the formation of a budget committee for fiscal year 1991.

In other business, GPSC will vote for graduate council nominees. The four people running on the ballot are Scott Delinger, Deborah Fleener-Oscarson, Collette D'Cruz-Enderley and Jean Dee.

Journalism Week events planned

By Dale Walker
and University News Service
Staff Writer

The SIU-C School of Journalism's newly chosen Alumnus of the Year will join other experienced newspaper professionals in sharing knowledge with students during Journalism Week, which ends Friday.

Douglas K. Ray, vice president and executive editor of Paddock Publications, has been named Alumnus of the Year by the School of Journalism.

Paddock publishes 18 daily Heralds in Chicago's northwest suburbs with a combined circulation of 90,000.

Ray will speak to students about the Daily Herald's transformation at 10 a.m. Thursday in Communications 1214.

Other speakers featured for the week include Patrick Coburn, managing editor of the Springfield State-Journal Register, and Cal Olson, Pulitzer Prize winner and retired editor of the Sioux City, Iowa Journal.

Coburn will deliver a keynote address at the annual Journalism Banquet at 6:30 p.m. Thursday at the Giant City Lodge. Ray will be honored at the banquet as 1990 Journalism Alumnus of the Year. Student scholarship winners will also be announced along with the winner of the 1990 Polly Robinson Feature Writing Contest.

On Friday the Southern Illinois Editorial Association will convene its spring meeting at the Lodge. Three newspaper editors will be inducted into the Journalism Hall of Fame during the luncheon meeting.

Olson will lead an SIEA workshop on newspaper photography at 10 a.m. at the lodge. During the luncheon address Olson also will give an account of the Journal's coverage of the United Airlines flight 232's crash last year.

Olson will meet with journalism students at 3:30 p.m. Thursday in Communications Building, room 1244 to discuss "Is There Life After Photojournalism."

The American Advertising Federation will take a presentation of a magazine proposal for single parents to a contest in Chicago on Friday.

A group of students known as S.A. Lukis Ad Agency will present a marketing campaign developed for Apple computers at 4 p.m. Wednesday in Lawson 121. The group's marketing campaign won first place in Apple's Invitational in Rosemont on April 12.

Ray joined Paddock publications in 1970 as a reporter. Since then the paper has grown from a community weekly to a major daily in competition with the Chicago Tribune and the Chicago Sun Times.

"I'm flattered and I feel very proud that the award came to me this year," Ray said. "It's been a long time since I've been to SIU. I'm sure it's a different place from the one I knew."

Ray will accept the award during the annual banquet.

An Effingham native, Ray earned his bachelor's degree in journalism at SIU-C in 1969, he said.

During his visit to SIU-C, Ray said he wanted "to look at some of the upcoming graduates for possible positions" at Paddock Publications.

Ray became city editor in 1972, news editor in 1975, and managing editor in 1976. He was named executive editor in 1983 and was elected a vice president at Paddock a year later.

Ray is immediate past vice president and current board member of the Associated Press Advisory Council and is a member of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, Sigma Delta Chi, the Chicago Headline Club and the Associated Press Managing Editors Association.

He was president of the Illinois United Press International Editors Association in 1981 and 1983.

Campus recycling program well under way — Glisson averaging 1,850 pounds of refuse. The largest amount collected is 2,150 pounds, Glisson said.

Massive quantities of paper, aluminum and other items are the target of students who work with the University's Pollution Control unit to collect refuse generated campuswide.

The campus recycling program, which began Feb. 1, involves the work of about 20 to 25 students, ranging from freshmen to graduate students. The program has averaged 1,800 to 2,200 pounds of waste collected each month, Patrick Glisson, a junior in geography and manager of waste pickup on campus, said.

Glisson said at a presentation Tuesday in the Student Center, 15 to 30 offices on campus call for refuse pickup each week. Some of these offices do not have to call for pickup because of the refuse amount generated. Glisson said between 50 to 60 offices participate in the program, but not all these have a weekly pickup because the amount of refuse-generated is sporadic.

Thus far, pickup for April is Glisson said all revenues generated by collection efforts go back into the program, and it is eventually hoped the program will be self-supporting.

Students from Pollution Control collect paper—both ledger and computer, glass, aluminum cans and newspapers. This waste is taken to Southern Illinois Recycling, 220 S. Washington St., where it is dropped off.

The waste is then transported from the center to buyers in the five-state region. Glisson said the market price for the products fluctuates from week to week.

Plans are being made for containers to be put in offices by the end of the summer, Glisson said. The University currently generates 48 tons of waste a week, with 20 to 25 tons generated during breaks.

Plans also are being made for students next fall to be informed of the recycling efforts on campus, either through the new student orientation program or welcome packs handed out to entering students, Glisson said.

Museum exhibit to feature artwork of graduate students

By Tracy Sargeant
Staff Writer

Two graduate students will display several years worth of study and artwork at a Masters of Fine Arts Exhibit today in the University Museum, but the official reception for the opening will be from 6 to 8 p.m. Friday.

Martin Munson's exhibit includes several mixed media pieces on his thesis theme of construction and deconstruction and Timothy Starns will show his kinetic exhibition called "The Scaffold."

Munson said his sculptural investigation began three years ago.

"(The exhibit) is about the paradoxes within the human condition and organic reclamation, or natural evolution over man's architectural forms and his struggle to manipulate those natural powers," Munson said.

Munson said he became familiar with this daily process when he worked construction several years ago.

"In construction we would tear down houses and wipe them away," Munson said. "It's a society where we want it all right now. We are based in the economy and not ecology."

Munson said his artwork contain iconographic forms, which are semi-religious symbols that represent the values of society building materials.

Starns who also has a background in building construction scaffolding, says his thesis artwork reflects this experience.

"It was a living. I never thought I'd be dealing with scaffolding work as part of art," Starns said.

Starns said he enjoys working with massive sculptures whereas some artists have trouble adjusting to larger pieces.

"I like to work with massive outdoor pieces," Starns said. "When you work with things that are 80 to 90 tons, a one ton sculpture seems like nothing. It's just second nature to work with heavy masses."

Munson said the chance to exhibit is an excellent opportunity for MFA candidates to show the work to the community.

"It's a chance to expose the work and get feedback on what the people see," Munson said.

Stewart, Hitchcock lose Supreme Court case

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court Tuesday ruled against film giants James Stewart and Alfred Hitchcock in a copyright case that could slow the pace of reissuing movie classics for the home video market.

The court's 6-3 decision by Justice Sandra Day O'Connor found that Stewart and Hitchcock, who died April 29, 1980, violated copyright law when they redistributed "Rear Window," a 1954 movie classic directed by Hitchcock and starring Stewart.

The court upheld a decision by the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals that ruled in favor of the successors of Cornell Woolrich, the author who wrote the original story on which the movie was based. Any monetary awards to the plaintiffs would depend on further court action.

The complex decision came in a case closely watched by the motion picture industry, which warned that a ruling favoring authors might force production companies to pull hundreds of classic movies out of circulation to avoid possible copyright infringement liability.

However, the ruling is somewhat limited by the unusual facts. The author, under copyright law, had sold the rights to his story for a 28-year period and an additional 28-year renewal period, but died before the renewal period commenced. Under the Copyright Act of 1909, if an author dies before the renewal period, the copyright passes to the author's successors.

The court ruled Tuesday that the author must be alive for the renewal to go into effect. If the author is not, any successors are not bound by the renewal agreement and may seek additional payment.

O'Connor said that Stewart and the others bringing the suit "would have us read into the Copyright Act a limitation on the statutorily created rights of the owner of an underlying work."

FULLERTON, Calif. (UPI) — A renowned photograph of ex-Beatle John Lennon that shows the late musician nude and curled in a fetal position has been removed from an art exhibit at a city-owned gallery, officials said Tuesday.

The decision to pull the 1980 photograph from the exhibit at the Muckenthaler Cultural Center was made by Beverly Gunter, chairwoman of the center's Board of Trustees, who, after initially accepting the piece, felt the photo was inappropriate to the show's theme, "Heroes, Heroines, Idols and Icons."

"The statement of the photograph is the exact opposite of the statement made by the concept of the show, which is 'heroes,' she said. The photograph, taken by famed portrait photographer Annie Leibovitz, shows a nude Lennon lying on his side next to his fully clothed wife, Yoko Ono. It appeared on the cover of the Jan. 22, 1981, issue of Rolling Stone magazine, one month after the musician's murder.

Gunter said her decision to pull the Lennon photo, plus a second Leibovitz photograph she refused to describe, was an "interim" action pending a meeting of the board's programming committee scheduled for Thursday. The committee could overturn Gunter's decision and vote to put the photos back in the show.

Two other Leibovitz photos remain in the show.

Stewart honored for long career

NEW YORK (UPI) —

James Stewart, last surviving male movie star of Hollywood's pre-World War II golden years, has been honored by his co-stars at a glittering Film Society of Lincoln Center tribute as an actor who is "more than the sum of his parts."

"He's an actor who has won the love and respect of his peers as well as a vast audience, a man who has truly led a wonderful life, an actor who is more than the sum of his parts," said Roy L. Furman, president of the society as he conferred the 1990 Film Society Tribute Award Monday on the 81-year-old Stewart at Avery Fisher Hall.

"I think he's the happiest man in the world tonight," observed Dorothy Lamour, who played a hula girl to Stewart's clown in "The Greatest Show on Earth" in 1952.

Furman led Stewart's colleagues—Lamour, Maureen O'Hara, June Allyson, Jack Lemmon, Kim Novak, George C. Scott, Janet Leigh and Robert Spark—in praising the spartan virtues of Stewart who began his Hollywood career in 1934 and made his last film in 1981.

If he had not taken five years out of his career to fly U.S. Air Force bombers in World War II, he might have made even more than 70 films, O'Hara noted, adding that "Jimmy was always convincing in whatever role he played."

Scott suggested that "nobody could ever have played Jimmy's roles but Jimmy Stewart."

Moslems ready to celebrate beginning of Mubarak holiday

By Fernando Fellu-Moggi
Staff Writer

Moslems around the world will have spent part of their afternoons looking at the sky last night, trying to sight the new moon.

A sighting of the new moon should have taken place last night or will take place tonight, the 29th or 30th day of the lunar cycle and, for the followers of Islam, the signal for the end of the month of Ramadan and the beginning of the holiday of Mubarak, Ashraf Nubani, president of the Moslem Student association, said.

A celebration will take place in the Student Center Ballrooms on the morning after the sighting of the moon, either at 8:30 a.m. today or Thursday at the same time, Nubani said.

Ramadan is the ninth month of the Mohammedan calendar. Moslems dedicate that month to fasting, Nubani said. During Ramadan Moslems are not supposed to eat of drink between dawn and sunset, he said.

Nubani said Ramadan has a special significance for followers of the Islamic faith, offering them a chance to practice control and reflection.

"Total abstinence teaches Moslems patience and piety," he said. "It gives us a chance to get closer to God."

The practice of fasting is prescribed to Moslems in the Quran, their sacred book, Nubani said.

During the month of Ramadan, Moslems practice a special sunset prayer, that is followed by a dinner of dates and orange juice, he said.

The sighting of the new moon after the sunset of the 29th or 30th day of Ramadan marks the end of the month and the beginning of the month of Shawwal, and the holiday of Mubarak.

The Eid Mubarak is the Holiday of Breaking the Fast, celebrated the morning after the sighting of the new moon and commemorating the end of Ramadan, Nubani said.

"The Eid Mubarak is the Holiday of Breaking the Fast," Nubani said. "So you are supposed to eat."

He said Mubarak is a family celebration, families and friends gather dressed in their best attire and celebrate in a spirit "similar to Christmas."

Nubani said the fasting ends with the sighting of the moon after sunset, so people gather in different places to see if they will be able to see the moon.

"In our countries children would be out in the streets, trying to see the moon," Nubani said. "In Carbondale most of our children are too young."

He said some of the Moslems in the area travel to the observation tower of Giant City State Park to try to spot the moon from there.

Nubani said that last night and, if the sighting did not occur then, tonight, there would be Moslems all around the world trying to see the new moon.

He said in the United States the sightings are reported to an Islamic Center where the sightings are confirmed and then announced to various Islamic Centers around the country.

Nubani said that although nowadays there are scientific methods to know if the new moon is going to appear on one day or another, the measurements are not always accurate, and Moslems prefer to maintain the tradition of the sighting.

For details about the event one may call the Islamic Center at 457-2770 or 529-9560.

Sex church doctrines not prostitution — priest

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The self-proclaimed high priest of a church that incorporates sex in its rituals told a federal judge Tuesday that the church's doctrines are expressions of religious "dedication," not prostitution.

In his opening statements in a civil suit against the city of Los Angeles and the Los Angeles Police Department, Will Tracy also said he established the Church of the Most High Goddess after two "revelations from God."

TRACY, 51, AND his wife, Mary Ellen, 47, were convicted Sept. 8 of operating a house of prostitution and other related charges. Both were sentenced to jail time but their sentences were postponed pending an appeal.

The Tracys claim they are the high priest and priestess of the ancient Egyptian religion and that sex is part of their faith. Mary Ellen Tracy claims to have had sex with more than 2,000 men who joined the church.

IN THEIR FEDERAL suit, the couple is seeking a court order barring the city from further investigating the church and say their convictions and alleged continuing harassment by police amounts to religious persecution and a denial of their constitutional right to practice their religious beliefs.

Addressing allegations that members of the church typically pay it about $150 cash for its services, Will Tracy told U.S. District Court Judge Matthew Byrne: "We want dedication to the religion."

WHILE MEMBERS must make a sacrifice, Tracy said that "we prefer it not be money." Under questioning by Byrne, Tracy said that "well under half, maybe 25 percent, of church members paid monetary sacrifices."

The Tracys claim they are the high priest and priestess of the ancient Egyptian religion and that sex is part of their faith. Mary Ellen Tracy claims to have had sex with more than 2,000 men who joined the church.

Tracy added that sexual acts performed by his wife are a type of expression. "Pimping and pandering laws are a pure form of speech that should only be regulated if it's commercial," he said.

In tracing the roots of the church, Tracy said he established it following revelations from God in 1980 and April 1984.

ON THE LATTER date, Tracy said he saw "a brilliant, white light" and had a vision of a 6-foot man with flowing white hair, a white beard and wearing an open, transparent white robe. "His eyes were extremely brilliant and flashing, he had a belly button and all the male appendages and he was also well-built," Tracy said.

A key doctrine of the church, he said, is the idea that members' sins or transgressions are wiped out "through the power of the priestess." Individuals must repent their sins and make restitution, he said. To accomplish that, they must confess to a priestess, then undergo "dedication" by performing oral sex on the priestess.

ACCORDING TO Tracy, his wife was "very much shocked and distraught" when he told her about his revelations. "The religion of the goddess is a sexual religion," requiring a priestess to have sex with at least 1,000 men, he said.

By 1988, the church had about 2,000 members, 90 percent of them men, Tracy said.

Sounds of local choir on album

A local minister and his church are spreading the gospel abroad through music.

Last April, Reverend James Morgan, pastor of Monument of Hope Deliverance Church, 215 East Sycamore St. in Carbondale, and five members of his congregation traveled to Johannesburg, Africa to record an album with a gospel mass choir.

Morgan said that more than 500 people were present as members of his church as well as members from affiliate churches in Africa joined to record the album, "Exodus Convention: Live in South Africa."

The album, recorded live during the Exodus Convention, an annual church service attended by the Monument of Hope Deliverance Church and sponsored by Deliverance churches from the United States and several African churchships.

The album was released in Africa six months ago and is scheduled for a May release date in the United States.

Morgan said that although there was nationwide participation in the trip to Africa, only 50 people traveled to Africa to participate in the recording.

Morgan has accompanied people from his congregation on trips to Africa for 10 years.

A local vocalist, Joyce Guy, led a song on the album, "Minister to the Body."

A changing world:

Work places face diverse challenges with emergence of minority predominance

By Rob Coné
Staff Writer

"As a black man, I always thought white men would be powerful," a leading expert on the study of black identity said during SIU-C's Diversity Day.

William Cross, keynote speaker for the event and associate professor of African-American studies at Cornell University, said Friday that while white males had always been the predominant work force in American business and industry. By the year 2000, they will comprise only 15 percent of entry level workers, he said.

That shrinking work force will be replaced by women and other minorities. "The great majority will be women ... more importantly women with children," Cross said.

He added that change facing business is "not simply a human resource issue but in a sense, a market share issue." Cross said that through business efforts to prepare for the changing complexion of the American work place, they have discovered there is an "internal culture."

This internal culture, Cross explained, is the method—either unconscious or conscious—by which workers are made a part of the work place environment.

He talked about "the shortcomings and values of minority hiring quotas and said that while business and industry were providing jobs they were failing to incorporate women and people of color into the workplace environment. Cross said they had the attitude that said: "I've been fair in letting you in, now go for it."

Cross said companies are now using as part of their employment assessments processes whether or not the person demonstrates "some sensitivity or competence in managing a diverse work force."

Cross then issued a report card to America's colleges and universities grading their performance in preparing for tomorrow's diverse campus population.

Except for graduation rates for black males, Cross awarded a "B+" for the overall conditions of undergraduate life. He expressed some concern over current trends by the federal government to cut student grant and loan monies and added that he believes the squeeze is directly related to the rise in campus racism.

Administration was given a "B+" with the provision that improvements be made to increase the number of women and minorities being promoted to more of the top-level positions.

He gave his lowest marks in the area of curriculum and faculty. This area earned a "C" bordering on a "D."

Cross chastised his fellow scholars saying they need to be more open to and nurturing of students who may have a different way of looking at their area of interest.

He encouraged an end to the debate over Western civilization vs. African-American studies or women's studies or other ethnic studies.

"We're still wrestling with whether teaching these will somehow lessen the quality of our education system," Cross said.

Artist commissioned to assist Crab Orchard

Gooden prints to be sold for $50; refuge will benefit

By Phil Pearson
Staff Writer

A local artist has agreed to use his talents to raise funds for the Southern Illinois Take Pride in America Committee.

The committee, based at the Crab Orchard National Wildlife Refuge, announced Tuesday that David Gooden has agreed to paint in acrylic a picture featuring eagles. One thousand prints will be made and sold for $50 each.

"The refuge has done much for me over the years. So, when the opportunity presented itself through the Take Pride in America Committee of Southern Illinois, my mission was very simple," Gooden said. "I really felt a need to give something back to the place that serves as a home for so much wildlife and a playground for so many people."

Formed in late 1988, the committee has held a number of fund-raisers, including fishing tournaments and raffles, to improve the facilities within the refuge. The committee has donated more than $8,000 to the refuge, mainly in the form of purchasing and installing two floating docks on Crab Orchard and one on Devils Kitchen Lake, and plans to raise another $16,000 through the sale of Gooden's art. Norrel Wallace, refuge manager said.

"This is not the kind of thing that will benefit a few groups, but will benefit the public at large," Wallace said. "These funds make Crab Orchard better for the using public."

With the money raised from the sale of the prints, plans are to purchase a floating fishing pier with a roof to be placed on the Wolf Creek part of Crab Orchard, Don Sanders, committee treasurer, said.

The pier, complete with ramps for wheelchairs, is designed to make access by the elderly or wheelchair users simpler, Sander said.

Gooden said the original painting will be completed by July and the prints, 13 of which Gooden will keep, will be ready for sale. A limit of 1,000 signed prints will be available. An estimated $50,000 could be generated from the prints.

The 26-year-old Gooden said the painting will feature a bald eagle in the nest with three eaglets with the mate soaring overhead. In the background, he said, will be an older man with two children, looking at the nest. The setting will be Crab Orchard's own Grassy Bay, home to many of the bald eagles on the refuge, he said.

Gooden and one of the officers of the committee will travel to Washington, D.C. later this year to present print number 0001 to the Secretary of the Interior Manuel Lujan, who has accepted the offer of the print as a donation from the committee.

Take Pride in America is a national campaign, begun as a result of former President Ronald Reagan's 1986 State of the Union Address, is a partnership between the public and private organizations interested in the management of natural resources.

"Mike did a real good job," Jones said. "I was impressed with Mike today. We'll probably use him more now as the season goes on than we have up to this point."

After building a big lead early, Jones was able to work a lot of players into the game. Chris Bend, Kent Wallace, Ryan McWilliams and Dale Meyer followed Van Gilder to the mound.

Jones was able to get 21 players into the game.

"It's good to be able to put some players out there that we haven't used that much and see what they can do," Jones said. "You get to watch them develop and that's usually how you pick up your extra pitchers — from these types of games."

The outcome Tuesday was never in doubt. The Salukis jumped on St. Louis pitcher Matt Weis (1-4) for seven runs on seven hits in the first inning. Weis lasted only two-thirds of an inning.

The Salukis scored their first two runs on a two-run double by Dave Wrona that scored Bob Geary and Kurt Endebruck.

Brad Hollenkamp and Boyd Manne also added RBIs in the inning.

Sophomore catcher Derek Shelton delivered the crushing blow. Shelton drilled a three-run homer over the left-field fence to give the Salukis a 7-0 advantage and chasing Weis from the game.

St. Louis reliever Randy Marvell didn't fare much better. In baseball player. He combines speed (9-for-10 in stolen bases) and power batting third in the Salukis' lineup.

The Salukis feel they have the Cadillac of center fielders in Shields. In 40 games this season, Shields hasn't committed an error.

A first-team all MVC selection last year, Shields makes the routine and spectacular catches and possesses a strong arm.

"I've never had a player make more diving catches and then hang on to the ball," Jones said.

Shields follows a tradition of outstanding Saluki center fielders. Past greats Jim Dwyer, Joe Wallis, George Vuckovich, Dave Stieb and Steve Finley also have patrolled center field for the Salukis.

Each of those players advanced to the Major Leagues. Dwyer, Stieb and Finley still are active in the majors. Dwyer is a utility player for the Minnesota Twins; Stieb, who was an all-America center fielder for the Salukis in 1978, is now an all-star pitcher for the Toronto Blue Jays and Finley is starting in right field for the Baltimore Orioles.

"Doug is a mixture of our past outfielders," Jones said. "He throws more accurate than any of them. Stieb and Wallis also were outstanding throwers.

"Doug doesn't have the power of Vuckovich or Stieb, but he can hit the breaking pitch. Stieb was more of a fastball hitter."

Shields is especially dangerous this season with clean-up hitter Tim Davis batting behind him. Davis is hitting .377 with four home runs and 43 RBIs, making it impossible for opposing pitchers to pitch around Shields.

"Last year I tried to do more than what I was capable of doing, especially with men on base," Shields said. "The pressure is not there this year. That's the secret — relying on your teammates. If you do your job, you know the guy behind you is going to do his job, too."

Anthony Bonner and Illinois guard Stephen Bardo were unstoppable with 40 second-half points as the Big Ten all-stars pulled away.

The South found itself in a hole at the end of the half 79-62. Illini guard P.J. Bowman's 25 first half points hurt the South.

Back-to-back dunks by McSwain and Jones cut the lead to 84-77 shortly after intermission. The teams traded several baskets and the lead was back to nine points — 96-87 — when Bardo and Bonner took control of the game.

Two long-range jumpers and an offensive stick-back from Bardo stretched the lead to 103-87. Minutes later Bonner and Bardo combined for 10 points as the Big Ten outscored Southern 12-2 for a 117-93 lead that turned the game into a rout.

Schafer played in front of a hometown crowd that saw him earn two all-conference awards during his prep career at Benton. He finished with nine points, three of which came after he launched a long bomb.

"It's fun any time you get to play basketball and there's not a whole lot of pressure on whether you win or lose," Schafer said. "The referees not calling it real tight makes it even more fun."

McSwain led the South with 20 points to go along with a slam-dunk title after the game.

"I enjoyed it," McSwain said. "It was a good game and we got a little running in, which helped me out some. I liked playing against tough competition."

Possible NBA first-rounder Bonner scored 29 points on a variety of dunks and power moves and showed his floor range with several 3-pointers. Illini teammates Bardo and P.J. Bowman combined for 63 points.

The Southern all-stars received 18 points from Jones and 16 points from Southeast Missouri's Ray Pugh.

Basketball Hall of Fame fascinating

By Gordo Engelhardt
Scripps Howard News Service

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. — I was never really a big fan of halls of fame. I ranked them right up there with museums and monuments. Lots of fun for about five minutes, then it gets ponderous. So it was with some apprehension when I decided to check out the Basketball Hall of Fame.

At the end of my 2-1/2 hour visit, I realized that a whole day could be spent at this fascinating place.

From the moment you enter the Hall until leaving, you feel a part of the entire history of the game.

As soon as you walk in the front door, you can stop to get your picture taken with life-size cutouts of Isiah Thomas, Patrick Ewing or Dr. J. The Hillyard Lobby main entrance foyer features two distinct exhibits. A natural maple wall from the floor to the ceiling — 40 feet — is the base for a series of colored reproductions of the "Court Key."

Also, 100 balloons impersonating basketballs are repeatedly tumbled from the 40-foot ceiling adjacent to the stairs as visitors ascend.

If you feel like shooting a few baskets from a moving sidewalk, there are 15 rims to choose from, some wooden, some glass, at various heights. But there was so much to see, I didn't take the time to find out if I could still nail the 17-footer.

There's memorabilia galore. A collage of Sports Illustrated's Faces in the Crowd, Steve Alford's smiling face from Feb. 21, 1983, was displayed next to Bill Walton, Lew Alcindor and Cheryl Miller. And yes, there's a cover of the April 6, 1981 SI with Isiah Thomas cutting down the net after the Hoosiers defeated North Carolina to win the national championship.

Enough Hoosier Hysteria. Let's go back to the roots. The third floor is a shrine to Dr. James Naismith, the man who invented the game here in Springfield in 1891.

The major feature is the Honors Court where each of the 168 Hall of Fame members are enshrined with medallions and a brief history of their career.

Adjacent to the Honors Court, the game's worldwide popularity is featured in four separate sections: Early Development, High School Game, Collegiate Game and Professional Game. The Basketball Hall of Fame is the only major Hall that honors the high school level. Looming over each section are hundreds of colorful jerseys hanging from the ceiling.

Passing through the corridor of basketball shoes, there are life-size color photographs of Hall of Famers in action.

On the second level, fans can see an entire section devoted to the women's game. In addition, two movies specialy produced for the Hall are shown.

One of the movies, "Hoople" begins with a young man shoveling snow off the dirt in front of a barn, then quickly cuts to an inner city game. Basketball transcends race and culture. "Hoople," adequately spans the gamut, from high school to college and the pros.

Late in the movie, Bill Bradley, a senator from New Jersey and a former New York Knick, sums up his love for hoops.

"Some people end in high school, others in college, others in the pros, but certainly, you end," Bradley said. "At least you end by the time you're 35 or so. And then you think back to what it meant, and those moments come back to you. And you still think that if you were out there, and you had the open jumper on the baseline, that you'd hit it and that you'd feel good when you hit it."

An average of 130,000 people visit the Hall per year since it moved from Springfield College on June 30, 1935.

I entered the Hall of Fame with a skeptical attitude and came away enthralled. If there is a next time, I'll spend an entire day there. Bill Bradley said it all.

Freshman, 'veteran' make equestrian nationals

By Jeff Grieser
Staff Writer

In her first year of competitive riding, Deanna Gegenheimer, a freshman on the SIU equestrian team, has qualified for the equestrian national tournament in Canton, N.Y.

Gegenheimer and Kim Green, a graduate student, will represent the SIU-C team May 4-6 at the tournament. Both will ride in the stock seat, or Western riding category.

"I've been riding off and on for my whole life, but this is my first year of competition," Gegenheimer said.

"I never competed but I trained in a summer camp in Wisconsin. I didn't own my own horse so I couldn't enter any shows. The camp supplied horses for its tournaments."

Gegenheimer qualified for nationals by notching 33 points on the season and winning the regional tournament at Murray State University in Murray, Ky.

A rider must have at least 28 points to go to nationals, she said.

Gegenheimer said the success has been startling to even her.

"It came as a total surprise," she said, referring to her regional victory.

Of her instant success in competitive riding she said: "I have a real feel for horses and I'm not afraid to show them who's boss."

As a graduate student, Green, a member of the Recreation Center honor roll, will be competing in the alumni stock-seat division, where she will have to perform patterns at the request of judges and do rail work, Mike Ramsey, faculty adviser and hunt seat (English riding) coach, said.

Gina Shiplett, the stock seat coach, said the team is in an 'unusual situation' sending a freshman and a 'veteran' to the tournament.

"With Deanna and Kim we have both ends of it," Shiplett said. "Deanna is a new student who was able to accomplish it all."

Shiplett said Gegenheimer has "absolutely performed higher" than expected.

"We knew from the beginning she had potential and we placed her in a higher division than we usually would," Shiplett said.

Shiplett said Green is "a diarch who never gives up."

Ramsey called Green a No. 1 team member and top competitor. Ramsey said Gegenheimer, who will compete in the intermediate class, will have to walk, jog and lope in the competition. She said the judges evaluate the rider, not how the horse moves.

Ramsey said judges pick their idea of the perfect rider. They judge such things as placement of the hands and legs and how the back is positioned. The judges will look at how well the riders control their horses, she said.

The riders will not have time to practice before they begin riding at the tournament, Ramsey said. They will have enough time to saddle up and get positioned on a horse that is supplied by the tournament. The rider receives a certain horse by drawing from a hat, she said.

"I'm confident going in," Gegenheimer said. "I'm very nervous."

The team, which competed in 10 tournaments this season, has club status at SIU-C and is given $300 at the beginning of each season. The bulk of the expenses are paid by team members, though the team does hold fund raisers such as bake sales, Ramsey said.

Gegenheimer and Green, who are making the trip alone, would appreciate sponsorship. Anyone interested can contact Gegenheimer at 549-3280 or Green at 549-5060.

Lakers fined for not playing two healthy starters

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — The Los Angeles Lakers were fined $25,000 Tuesday by Commissioner David Stern for keeping two healthy starters out of their season-ending game at Portland, Trail Blazers officials said.

Blazer spokesman John Lashway said Stern took the action because Lakers Coach Pat Riley kept Magic Johnson and James Worthy on the bench Sunday night, rather than risk injuring them.

Mychal Thompson also sat out for the Lakers, who suffered their most lopsided defeat ever in a 130-88 victory by the Blazers, their franchise-record 59th victory.

Rod Thorn, the NBA's vice president-operations, said Monday the Lakers were fined in 1985 for leaving Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Magic Johnson home rather than bringing them to a season-ending game at Kansas City.

The actions by Riley, who called Sunday's game in Portland "insignificant," drew the anger of Blazer fans and team officials who had promoted a pay-per-view cable telecast and closed-circuit showings of the contest.

Many callers to Portland newspapers and radio stations said they were upset at Riley's decision not to make the information on his starting lineup public before the game. The Lakers had played Saturday night in Los Angeles against the Clippers, with their starters.

"I apologize to the fans," Riley said after the game. "But it's bigger than that. It was an insignificant game for us. We found out last year that injuries are a big thing this time of season. I just didn't want to push it, and that is my privilege."

Blazer President Harry Glickman said his true feelings about the Laker move "wouldn't be quotable in a family newspaper. Every time you play in this league, even though it's meaningless, you always try to win."

Results of NFL draft sent warning: Only some underclassmen needed

Scrrips Howard News Service

When the issue of underclassmen entering the NFL draft first began to percolate in January, some league officials made two observations: 35 players might come out but only around 15 should; the market will take care of itself and things will level off in the future.

Based on the early returns, both came to fruition after two days and 12 rounds of selecting. A total of 38 underclassmen made themselves eligible for the draft. Five of the first seven selections were juniors, including top pick Jeff George, the Illinois quarterback. By the fifth round, 15 of the 38 were gone. The gusher then became a trickle. Twenty underclassmen were not selected.

That should send a warning to next year's underclassmen: Make certain of your value — if that's possible with so much double-talk from teams, agents and certainly their own college coaches. Though juniors get the draft luster, the market can handle only so many.

This draft is an aberration for another reason. A collective bargaining agreement almost certainly will be in place by next year. It might include a salary cap. The threat of a wage scale or cap is what scared most juniors into coming out this year.

Undoubtedly academics played a role as well. The fight to remain eligible for another year might have been too great. Too many college athletes major in "eligibility" as it is.

Drug problems led directly to the abrupt departure of at least one player — Reggie Cobb, a junior running back from Tennessee.

The final word on how many did the right thing won't come quickly. General Manager Dick Steinberg of the New York Jets, who took senior running back Blain Thomas of Penn State with the second selection overall, thinks it's too early to make a definitive statement about the state of underclassmen.

"We'll have to see how these guys play," Steinberg said Tuesday. "If they don't progress and become good players and don't last in the league very long or are not very successful, other players will see that and realize they'd better get all the experience they can."

"I predict some of these guys will be very ordinary players. Half the first round ends up being very ordinary anyhow. This is a law-of-averages business; it's not an exact science."

Steinberg says the number of juniors who come out next year (and maybe a sophomore or two like Tennessee running back Chuck Webb) still could be significant.

"I don't know what's there, but I would assume we could expect a fair number to try to come out," he said. "I don't think the rush was there because they were juniors. They were just potentially talented guys. If they develop to their potential, they can be really talented players. There was a big discussion in all the draft meetings around the league: Can a guy make the progress? Can he become a total player? None of them were in college. Everybody took them more on potential than what they did on the field."

(Keith McCants and (Junior) Seau are exceptional athletes, and can rush the passer. Can they do the other complex things their position requires? We don't know."

With so many juniors going, there would be major disappointments — make that a Major disappointment. The two most com-PELLING stories among the underclassmen were Major Harris of West Virginia and Marc Spindler of Pitt.

Harris went in the 12th — and last — round to the Los Angeles Raiders. He was the 317th pick of 331. Spindler, a defensive lineman dogged by bad workouts and an injured leg, projected at one time as a first-rounder. He went to Detroit in the third, a disappointing No. 62.

"Obviously some guys got bad information about their value, like a Major Harris," said Steinberg. "Is the money he's going to get as a 12th-rounder worth passing up his senior year when he might have been the Heisman Trophy winner and made the progress to become a better prospect? I don't think so."

Neither does Harris. He plans to spend his senior season in the Canadian Football League.

Spindler's trauma was shared by a national television audience. ESPN had a camera crew at his father's bar in Scranton, Pa. Every time the phone rang, a microphone was shoved in Spindler's face. Once, Chicago told him it might take him in the second round. But the news from the Bears was bad.

Spindler told the Pittsburgh Press he was so depressed at one time, "I didn't think I would get drafted." He finally left the bar to hit golf balls. A short time later, Detroit called.

Empathize with Spindler. Don't pity him or any of the juniors who fell short of expectations. It was their decision — a decision they should have the right to make. In no way should anything in this draft cause a change in the rules. Just the opposite: The first round shows how antiquated the NFL's policy has been.

But remember: The players must live with the consequences.

Harris: I didn't think I'd get drafted

NEW YORK (UPI) — Major Harris, selected in the final round of the NFL draft, Tuesday said he was only surprised that he was drafted at all.

Harris nearly led West Virginia to a national title as a sophomore and finished among the top five Heisman Trophy candidates the last two years, but was the 19th quarterback selected. The Los Angeles Raiders spent the 317th pick of the 331-selection draft on him.

Harris said he is sure he can play in the NFL, but sensed a lot of doubts among the 28 teams.

"I didn't think I would get drafted, I could just tell," he said. "I never got a phone call from an NFL team in my life."

"It's kind of ironic, a guy up for the Heisman two years in a row, who they said did everything, could get all this negative press all at once ... that he couldn't make it. After three years of starting there, all I heard was I don't belong."

NFL scouts say Harris' style is better suited to the wide open Canadian Football League, where he might end up. The British Columbia Lions own his CFL rights.

Harris applied for the NFL draft as a junior. He was the second player in NCAA history to pass for 5,000 yards and run for 2,000.

"I did that in three years and if I stayed another year, I would have done something else that no one's ever done," he said. "I knew it wasn't going to be based on ability but it's so funny — I'm getting the most publicity. If I wasn't good enough to go higher than 12th, then how come everyone's talking about it so much?"

The Mountaineers lost to Notre Dame in the Fiesta Bowl following the 1988 season when Harris was a sophomore and finished fifth in Heisman voting. He was third last year.

"He took a team that was not even on the map and made them TV's darlings," said his agent, Ed Abram.

Before the draft, all Harris heard was negative. He is considered short for an NFL quarterback at 6-foot and his powerful arm was knocked as inaccurate. The freewheeling that made him so exciting in college makes him a liability among structured NFL offenses.

"All I know is you give him the ball and points go on the board," West Virginia Coach Don Nehlen said.

Despite that endorsement, Nehlen and Harris have been perceived to be at odds. Harris and Abram said they heard that Nehlen gave NFL scouts poor reports on Harris. Nehlen denies that, and Harris and Abram say it doesn't matter.

"A lot of people say he hurt me but I didn't dwell on it," Harris said. "He's probably mad because I didn't stay."

Harris says lasting until the 12th round did not shake his confidence. But he takes no solace in getting drafted by the Raiders, a team known for taking chances on players other NFL teams pass on.
