140 SIUC students' financial aid in jeopardy

Illinois House passes bill to eliminate legislative waivers; officials debate feasibility of awards

By Lori D. Clark
DE Assistant Politics Editor

One hundred and forty SIU students would have to find other means to finance their college education is a bill that recently passed the Illinois House is signed into law, a University official says.

Pam Britton, director of financial aid at SIUC, said if legislative tuition waivers are eliminated, as a bill that passed the House Friday calls for, students will have to replace the loss of the scholarships through loans or work.

Britton said last year, 140 students received the Illinois General Assembly tuition waivers worth

"I hate to see any grant program eliminated because it means students will have to borrow or work more."

*Pam Britton
Director, SIUC financial aid*

$470,296. She said 100 of those recipients were SIUC undergraduate students who collectively receive $168,675 in waivers, and the other 40 were graduate students who received $301,621. Britton said the graduate students received more in waivers because most of the students are medical students with higher tuition and fee levels.

The tuition waiver policy allows each of the 177 Illinois legislators to waive two four-year public university tuitions each year. Recipients must be from the legislators' districts and one recipient must attend the University of Illinois. The second recipient must attend any other state university.

Britton said students who need financial assistance should not have a problem receiving it if the waivers are eliminated unless they do not apply for financial aid.

"The state of Illinois has a very good, need-based program of grants through the Monetary Award Program," Britton said. "Many students get those grants based on need."

However, Britton said she does not favor elimination of any student aid, including the legislative waivers.

"I hate to see any grant program eliminated because it means students will have to borrow or work more," she said.

Rep. Bill Black, R-Danville, who sponsored the bill that would eliminate the waivers, said he did so because of the expense of the waivers.

"We don't pay one cent to SIUC or any college," Black said. "It's a $4-million expense every year."

Because universities must cover the cost of the tuition waivers, other students pay more in the long run because the tuition of students who do not receive waivers is increased, Black said.

Administration accepts offer to apply herbicide

By Lisa M. Pangburn
Daily Egyptian Reporter

SIUC administrators agreed Monday to accept an offer from a local plant nursery owner to begin re-juvenating native plant species in Thompson Woods for the price of $1.

Last week, 30 gallons of herbicide were donated to SIUC by Monsanto, an agriculture chemical company, to kill exotic plants in Thompson Woods that are choking out native plant species.

The Thompson Woods Management Committee was in the process of deciding who would spray the herbicide when Jim Jung, a local resident and owner of Hillside Nursery, 1900 W. Sycamore St, offered to spray for $1. Jung is licensed to spray herbicide.

James Tweedy, SIUC vice chancellor for administration, said after verifying that allowing an outside party to spray the herbicide would not violate a campus insurance policy, the University decided to accept the man's offer.

"I have been working on getting approvals so that Jim can work on campus," he said. "I needed to make sure the Campus Risk Assessment could allow someone else to spray because of insurance reasons."

Another problem that the administration had to overcome was the SIUC Physical Plant unions, whose members would normally be in charge of spraying the herbicide by contract, Tweedy said.

Tweedy said the unions also have agreed to let Jung and his crew spray the woods.

"The unions are very supportive," he said. "Everybody is quite happy because we are all working for the same thing."

Bruce Francis, SIUC superintendent of grounds, said the price of $50,000 for the rejuvenation of the woods will decrease because of the herbicide donation and the offer from Jung.

Jung said he is pleased with the decision, but he said people need to remember the reason he offered to spray.

"The reason I offered to do this is to bring the woods into ecological balance," he said. "It's been waiting 10 years."

Jung also said it is good to know that people are interested in making the woods a better place.

"It is a great place for students to go and learn," he said. "It's a living laboratory. I would even like to see SIUC make Thompson Woods its mascot."

Philip Robertson, an SIUC professor in plant biology and head of the Thompson Woods Management Committee, said the acceptance of Jung's proposal is what the committee needed to begin repairing the wood's ecosystem at a low cost.

Robertson also said spraying of the herbicide will need to continue for the next couple springs, but it has not been decided when the spraying will begin this spring.

Sorority members to appeal ruling

Student Judiciary Board finds students guilty of hazing

By Dustin Coleman
DE Special Projects Editor

An appeal process began recently for three SIUC sorority members found guilty of hazing by the University following an alleged incident in October 1995, an SIUC administrator says.

After a Student Judicial Board hearing, three members of the Delta Sigma Theta Sorority, were found in violation of the SIUC Student Conduct Code and were suspended from the University on charges of hazing, Harvey Welch, vice-chancellor of student affairs, said.

The Student Judicial Board is a committee of students appointed by the Undergraduate Student Government. Students on the board are under the guidance of Terry Huffman, coordinator of Student Judicial Affairs.

Huffman could not be reached for comment.

Two of the students have been suspended for one year each. One of the students has been suspended for two years.

Welch said the names of the three students and specifics of the incident are being withheld.

Until all appeals have been heard and the case has been exhausted, the students will be allowed to stay enrolled at SIUC, Welch said.

Welch said he does not know if a civil suit has been filed at the Jackson County States Attorney's Office regarding the alleged incident.

Mike Wepsiec, Jackson County states attorney, was not available for comment Monday.

YELTSIN TO BOOST CHINESE SUPPORT WITH VISIT — BEIJING

In the 1950s, Russians dominated this city, helping the newly established Communist government with everything from building bridges to organizing universities. Then, after China and the Soviet Union split in 1960, the Russians were thrown out and 30 years of chilly relations set in. Now, the Russians are back in Beijing, but this time as small-time traders and smugglers, hoping to make a few rubles by shipping low-cost Chinese products back to Moscow. Enter Boris N. Yeltsin. The 65-year-old Russian president is due to visit China for three days this week hoping to push relations between two of the world's biggest and most populous nations beyond the level of curbside vendors. While neither side expects or wants a return to the chummy days of the 1950s, both want to show the West that they have other friends who don't always lecture them on how their countries should be run. InJeed, China has started touting Russia as a model partner of sorts. Despite the two countries' different systems — Russia has started down the road to democracy and capitalism while China adheres, on paper at least, to socialism and communism.

ITALIAN LEFTISTS TAKE POWER VOWING REFORM — ROME

After half a century in the political wilderness, the Italian left stormed to power with centrist allies here Monday, promising a can-do reformist government to modernize Italy's institutions and finances in line with those of its European allies. In a historic turning, final returns from Sunday's national election made plain that the center-left headed by the former Italian Communist Party will form Italy's 55th post-war government. The margin of victory and the uncertainties of coalition politics, however, mean that the stability of a future government will remain open to question. "It is a clear and decisive victory," said Romano Prodi, the soft-spoken, 56-year-old economics professor who leads the center-left and will become the next prime minister. "Our priorities will be employment, education and institutional reforms.... People's faith in our program gave us victory."

NRA REAFFIRMS ITS OPPOSITION TO BILL CLINTON — DALLAS

Membership is down and balance sheets show problems. But members of the National Rifle Association, celebrating their 125th anniversary here, declare their power is undiminished as they aim to defeat "the most anti-gun president in U.S. history." Many came to their annual convention, an event that was expected to draw 25,000 to its seminars and weaponry exhibits, feeling defensive about their steadfast belief that any gun-control law is a bad gun-control law. But James Guest, president of Handgun Control Inc., said he believes that the NRA, in its uncompromising posture is "increasingly out of touch with the American voters." He came to Dallas as the NRA convention opened Friday to release a poll that shows 65 percent of voters would be less likely to support House members who voted for the repeal of the ban on assault weapons. Eighteen percent of voters would be more likely to vote for a representative who backed the repeal.

AIRLINES TURN OFF MONITORS IN WAKE OF CRASH —

The crash near Cali last Dec. 20 has sent tremors through the commercial airline industry. Top airline officials and "human factors" academicians alike say it may become the event that forces aviation to deal with a question safety specialists and pilots have been asking for more than a decade: Has automation gone too far? Have pilots been turned into computer-system monitors instead of aircraft commanders? American, stunned by its first jet crash in 16 years, is planning to end its policy of training pilots to try to "sort out" in-flight anomalies with their computers instead of turning off the computers and flying the plane manually. As Bob Baker, American's vice president for flight operations, said in an interview, "Maybe we got the priorities mixed up here." Some airlines, led by Delta's "turn-it-off" program, already have reversed philosophy and are using the American crash to reinforce their training.

SIUC English tutor honored for work

By Melissa Jakubowski
DE Assistant Features Editor

As a child, Eva Sramek watched her immigrant parents struggle to learn a new country's customs and language.

As an adult, she tutors other immigrants in English at SIUC's Adult Education Unit in the Evaluation and Development Center to give them the basic communication skills needed to survive in America.

Eva Sramek

Sramek, a senior in elementary education from Detroit, was rewarded for her efforts April 11 when she received SIUC's Student Employee of the Year award and a $200 scholarship.

The Student Employee of the Year competition is sponsored by the Financial Aid Office. A committee selects a nominee on the criteria of reliability, quality, incentive, professionalism and uniqueness of service. This year, there were 26 nominees.

Terri Gilliam, supervisor of Student Employee Services, said since most of the nominees met the first four criteria, they were judged by their uniqueness.

"We felt that the winner stood out because she applied her personal experience to help contribute to the community," Gilliam said. "Plus, many of her students praised her, and we felt that spoke out about her as an individual."

Sramek's father was born in the former Czechoslovakia, and her mother is from Chile. Sramek said her personal experience drove her to volunteer at the EDC.

"My mom has basically a third-grade education," she said. "I'm familiar with the problems people have if they don't understand the language. I knew I could help at least one person fill out an application or make a doctor's appointment."

Sramek began volunteering as a tutor and a teacher's aide at the EDC in 1993. She currently supervises six student workers.

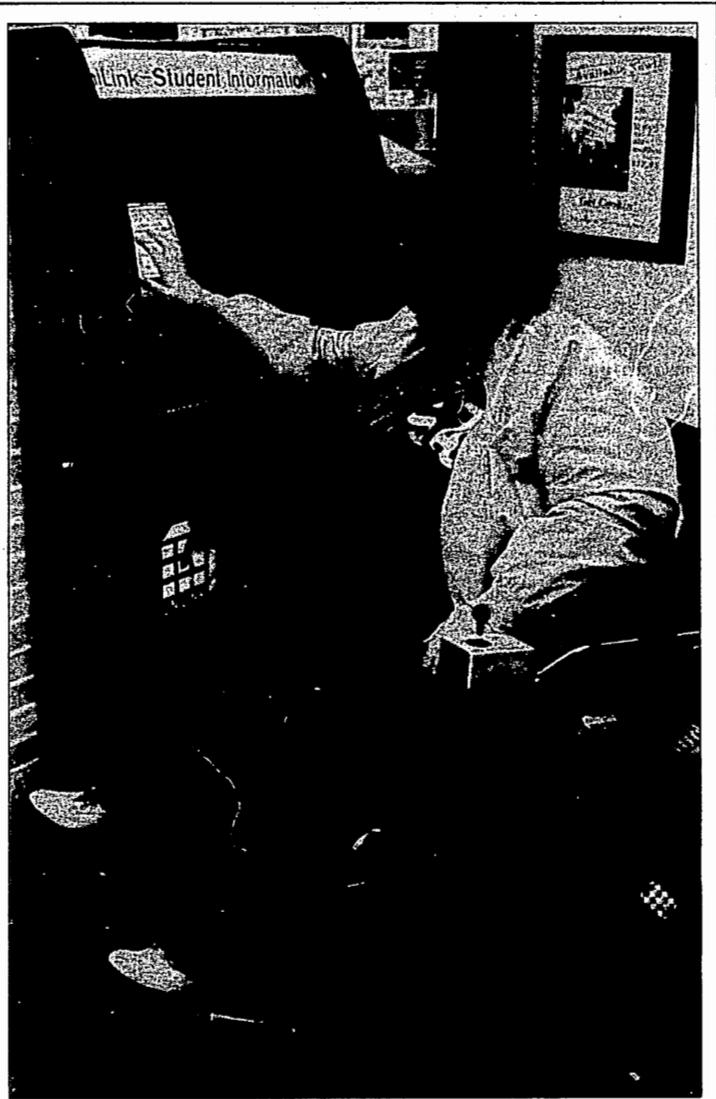

The EDC provides literacy training, GED preparation and job-seeking skills for adults, many of whom speak foreign languages.

Sramek said while she was teaching, she found many of her students could not read food labels or over-the-counter medicine labels. She said she incorporated a special curriculum into the class to address those problems.

"My students have to keep journals for class," she said. "One of my students went to buy a can of tuna and ended up buying cat food tuna. That's when I realized they needed to have exposure to basic skills."

Sramek said she wrote to food product companies, which sent

Alleged burglar found

By Kendra Helmer
Daily Egyptian Reporter

A search of a Carbondale man's home Thursday resulted in the recovery of approximately 100 pieces of stolen property, Carbondale Police say.

Police said they found the property at 10:45 a.m. Thursday after they issued a search warrant. Police would not release the name of the man, pending further investigation. The suspect was arrested and is in custody.

"The stolen property was probably taken in burglaries on the north-west side of town," Don Priddy, community resource officer, said.

Priddy said the stolen property consisted mostly of electronic items. There is not yet a dollar estimate of the stolen property. The owners of the property have not been identified.

"Anyone who has been the victim of a burglary can call Det. Jon Kluge (at the Carbondale Police Department) to determine if the stolen property is theirs," Priddy said.

Student government to discuss trustee election

By Signe K. Skimion
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Ideas to change student trustee election guidelines will be worked on this summer, to address concerns after last week's election, student government leaders say.

Patrick Smith, Student Trustee election commissioner, said there are two main problems with the student trustee election guidelines that need to be addressed before next year's election.

He said the problems involve the use of student social security numbers on candidates' petitions and recognizing write-in candidates.

He said one of the problems occurred this year when Troy Arnold, a senior in speech communication from South Roxana, was denied a place on the student trustee election ballot because some students did not write their proper social security numbers on his petition.

The signatures and valid social security numbers of 200 students are required before a candidate is allowed to run in the election.

Smith said some students who signed Arnold's petition did not give their proper social security numbers because they chose to keep those numbers private.

Smith said an idea to prevent this problem in future elections is to use the last four digits of a social security number instead of all nine numbers. He said by only using the last four numbers, a student's privacy is still protected and the commission can still verify that signatures are from SIUC students.

"The problem is you need some way to authenticate signatures," he said. "There is no way for the election commission to know 19,000 student signatures, and the way to verify the signatures has been through the use of the student social security

Web class set to begin Friday

By Aaron Butler
DE Online Editor

An SIUC graduate student is helping individuals learn to create pages on the World Wide Web by teaching a free Web page creation workshop this Friday.

Cary Desmon, a business administration graduate student from Sarasota, Fla., said he is presenting the workshop to anyone who wants to learn Hypertext Markup Language, the code used to write pages on the Web.

Desmon, the Webmaster for seven campus organizations including Blacks Interested in Business, McLeod Theater, Chicago Business Alumni and the Graduate Business Association, said he started the workshops hoping to help those in the organizations he supported to take over the Web pages when he leaves SIUC.

"It turned out to be a good learning experience for myself as well," he said.

"I learned more about HTML by finding the answers to questions for other people. And it's fun."

Because of the number of people who expressed interest in the workshops, they are now open to anyone,

"I'm teaching people how to write their own home page..."

Cary Desmon
Graduate student,
business administration

Desmon said.

"I'm teaching people how to write their own home page and how to pick the right text editor," he said. "They also learn to imbed images into it and include hypertext links."

Once their pages are created, Desmon said he teaches students to transfer them to a server using File Transfer Protocol.

Desmon led his first workshop April 11.

Several students who attended said they found the format he used helpful for beginners.

Mathew Long, a senior in finance from Danville, said the workshop helped him understand HTML and was easy enough that he would recommend it to a beginner.

"I think it's an excellent opportunity, and you can't beat the price," he said.

"It takes a little bit of time, but it's well worth it."

Shannon Burke, a junior in industrial technology from West Frankfort, said although the workshop covered a lot of material, it was presented in such a way that a beginner could pick it up quickly.

"I found it very useful," she said. "I'm planning to do my own home page, and I'd recommend it to anyone."

Desmon said he covers more than just basic HTML in his workshop. He also explains details like framing graphics and information, adjusting the color of the page background, text and links, and locations on the Web that offer graphic art for Web pages.

Desmon said that because of the high level of interest he has seen on campus for information about the Web, he is organizing a Registered Student Organization called siu.edu.

"USG has already seen the proposal, and they've said they don't have any problems with it," he said. "It will involve advanced technical HTML, electronic commerce and electronic communication."

State Senate needs to end legislative tuition waivers

THE ILLINOIS SENATE HAS A CHANCE TO correct a mistake it made last year when it failed to eliminate legislative tuition waivers.

For the second consecutive year the Illinois House has voted to end the 91-year-old waiver system that allows state legislators to grant two full-ride tuition waivers to four-year public universities in Illinois. The recipients are required to live in the legislator's district, and one of the waivers must be for the University of Illinois.

The main problem with the waivers is the potential for abuse that they provide. All Illinois universities, except for Eastern Illinois University and Western Illinois University, refuse to disclose the names of the waiver recipients. This, teamed with the fact that there are no financial or academic requirements recipients must meet, allows legislators to dole out free tuition for political reasons.

NOT SURPRISINGLY, SOME POLITICIANS have abused the system. When the (Champaign) News-Gazette analyzed the records of recipients at Eastern Illinois University and Western Illinois University, it showed that legislators had given the waivers to relatives, campaign contributors, state employees and political party workers. It also found that several waivers had been given to students who lived outside the legislators' districts.

This was uncovered by looking at waiver records of two schools. Imagine what might be found if the names of waiver recipients at SIUC, the University of Illinois, Northern Illinois University and Illinois State University were released. Such a scenario might result in more actions like last year's federal grand jury investigations of five current and former House members for alleged abuses of the waiver system. It's clear that the system not only has potential for abuse; it is abused.

These unethical practices should alone be enough motivation for the Senate to end the system, but there are additional reasons.

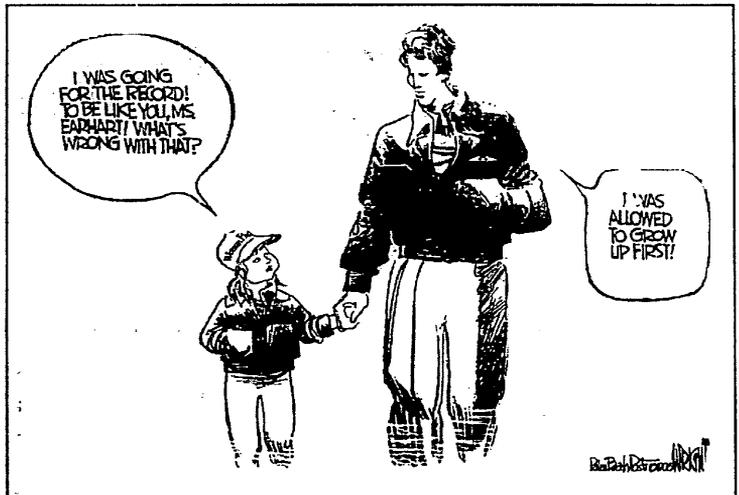

THE COST OF THE WAIVERS IS PLACED UPON the schools the recipients attend. This in turn places the cost on all SIUC students. In 1995, SIU had 140 students receiving the waivers. It cost the University $470,000 — about 5.5 percent of next year's budget shortfall. Assuming the cost eventually trickles down to SIU students, we each paid about $20 to support the waivers at SIUC.

Some local politicians still support the system. Rep. Terry Deering, D-Dubuois, voted against ending the waivers saying that some college presidents, coaches and other people have the same power to grant the waivers. We disagree with this logic. If other people also have the potential to abuse scholarship granting power, it does not follow that Illinois legislators should continue to have that power.

SEN. DAVE LUECHTEFELD, R-OKAWVILLE, along with the rest of the Illinois Senate should seize the opportunity to end this embarrassing system, unlike last year when the provision to end the waivers was eliminated in the Senate.

We recognize that some legislators use the system to help students who genuinely deserve the assistance, but this work should be done by agencies with the sole purpose of allocating financial aid.

Illinois is one of only three states that use this archaic system of legislative scholarships. This is no surprise, however. Why would any state want to have a system that places unfunded mandates on its universities and opens up college funding to political patronage?

Letters to the Editor

Daily Egyptian objectivity questioned

On April 12, the Daily Egyptian staff chose to dedicate nearly the entire front page to the gay wedding performed on April 11. Although I can understand the reporters' desire to present a controversial issue, I am angered by the way in which the articles are presented.

The reporters, Melissa Jakubowski and Erik Bush, devoted nearly three times as much space to supporters of the ceremony as they did to the protester at the ceremony. This imbalance gave the supporters of the ceremony a much larger forum to present their views than that of the protesters. Regardless of whether this imbalance was intentional or not, it made both of the articles appear biased on the side of the supporters of the gay wedding.

I have taken only a couple of introductory journalism classes, but I remember my instructors emphasizing objectivity and equal time to opposing viewpoints. These reporters failed to exemplify journalistic objectivity in these articles. It is my opinion that Jakubowski and Bush need to go back and review their notes on objectivity in journalism and begin to exercise that objectivity before they go out into the workforce where they would possibly allow their bias to be presented to a much larger readership.

Religion does not belong in public schools

Many of you are sick of the religious dogma letters like mine attract. I certainly don't care to be referred to as shallow, childish and accused of closing "doors" for myself, even if some or all of these things are true. But when all of the scrutiny over the content and method of my message is finished one simple fact remains - Christians still care very little about religion in the schools. What they do care about is Christianity in the schools. How would Christians react when they found their child sitting next to a child who worshiped the dead in the classroom? Or who sacrificed animals? Or who prayed to the sun?

How do Christians think God views those people who have made the location of prayer more important than the act itself? Are these people seen as crusaders who are bettering Christianity, or as people who have lost for all Christians, the right to pray in public schools?

I think Lawrence Juhlin made the most important point in his April 15 letter to the editor. Private colleges and universities have their origin in the church. If you are a person who needs to be surrounded by religion, go to one of these schools. If, however, religion is in your heart and education is what's important to you, then please attend a state-sponsored school. Share all your ideas, but please respect the rights of those who don't share your faith.

Four hour Internet limit is ridiculous

Here we go again. Another quick fix idea from SIUC's Information Technology Center, and a Daily Egyptian editorial that makes no sense.

Your editorial on April 18 was ridiculous. The four hour time limit now forced on us will not solve anymore problems than it will cause. Moreover, who the heck is the DE to recommend to us, the paying students of SIUC, to buy a "private service"?

My god, you were born yesterday! This would force us to pay a costly set-up fee, installing software and paying a fee that could exceed $30 a month, and then not even guarantee us access. That's an additional $200 per semester. But I guess the DE didn't think students would catch on to this.

So a small group of people, working on important term papers and research, are wreaking havoc on SIUC's servers? If it's just a small group of people, what difference does it make? What will happen in the 15 minutes when everyone who has been on for four hours gets kicked off? Will a memo be sent to everyone waiting, saying, "Hurry, hurry, click on now!" No, the people will just wait 15 minutes and then get back on. More modems and phone lines will solve the problem. You know, spend some money.

The DE explains to us, "Now people who only need to check their e-mail can do so without waiting." Only check their e-mail? Checking e-mail is more important than doing research for a term paper? Since when do we get grades by checking our e-mail?

It's very discouraging to see this University take steps backwards into the future of research and development. Hey, maybe I'll take the DE's advice, get a private service, buy a computer to do homework and then I can use SIUC for part of my lab fees that contribute to IT. Thanks, good advice.

Socialist party makes sense

One of the greatest leaders of all time, Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. said the following quote from a Selma, Ala., jail in 1965:

"If we are going to achieve real equality, the United States will have to adopt a modified form of socialism." (In These Times, Feb. 9, 1983).
Wait — there must be some sort of mistake.

Nope, it's true. Strange, I was never taught that quote in school.

I was also never taught that when Dr. King made his world-famous "I Have a Dream" speech, two Socialists shared the platform with him: African-American labor leader and Socialist A. Philip Randolph, and Socialist presidential candidate Norman Thomas.

Dr. King also wrote an article about Thomas entitled "The Bravest Man I Ever Knew" in Pageant magazine, June 1965.

Why would Dr. King support the Socialists of all people? After all, like many people, I always used to (falsely) associate the word socialist with communist.

Socialists and Communists are not the same. In fact, Socialists are strongly opposed to Communist governments such as the one that fell in Russia because these governments oppress people.

Real Socialists believe in democracy and equal rights, just like any American does.

Many great ideas in American history have come from Socialists. For example, the idea of Social Security, which helps millions of Americans today, was first proposed by the Socialist Party in 1901.

Did you know that it was African-American Socialist members who founded the NAACP in 1910? Socialists were also involved in the History standards, take two

The Washington Post

The National Standards for History have been to the woodshed and have returned leaner, less political and better. As revised they offer a reasonable and intelligent outline of the types of thought and knowledge that add up to a good education in world and American history, whether it's an understanding of how the continent was settled and the

Perspectives

Freedom Rides in the South.

They were against putting Japanese-Americans in concentration camps during WWII, an act which as a white person I am totally ashamed of, but which Democrats and Republicans in Congress allowed to happen.

Yes, the Socialist Party did many important things in the past. And believe it or not, even though our newspapers and TV networks seem to have forgotten, the Socialist Party USA still exists and is fighting for workers' rights, women's rights and equality among races.

Socialists are for letting everyone have a voice in what their government does. Socialists are for increasing the rights of workers on the job and giving all workers a wage that is enough to live on, so more people don't fall into the welfare system.

Socialists are for improving the quality of life. For example, do you know that in every other industrialized nation except Japan, workers work fewer hours and get longer vacations?

Imagine having a five-week vacation like most workers in France, Germany and the Scandinavian countries take for granted.

Reducing working hours would help everyone: Companies get more productive workers because workers are not as tired. They also make fewer mistakes and are involved in fewer on-the-job accidents, both of which cost companies money.

Instead of laying off workers, companies would be able to keep many workers or, in some cases, even hire more, reducing unemployment. Germany recently reduced its working hours and has not lost any of its economic edge.

There's so much more the Socialists believe that would help America that there isn't enough room here for it all. There's even a Socialist Presidential candidate, a special education teacher and environmental activist named Mary Cal Hollis, who is now trying to get her name on the ballot in all 50 states.

How do I know all this about the Socialist Party USA? I'm a member, and proud of it.

The media didn't tell me about the SPUSA, nor did my schooling. I found out by looking on the Internet at <http://sunsite.unc.edu/spc>

I'm not asking anyone to join — you can decide that for yourself. Just look at the issues and the ideas which we Socialists discuss. You just may find out that a lot of what we say makes sense.

Long live freedom, democracy, and equality!

number." To change the student trustee election guidelines, a committee of Undergraduate Student Government and Graduate and Professional Student Council members must be created. Members of the committee would have to review the guidelines and make recommendations to both organizations. The recommendations would then have to be passed by both organizations and would be sent to the vice chancellor of Student Affairs.

Mark Terry, GPSC vice president of Graduate School affairs, said when he takes over as GPSC president May 15, he will work to get GPSC members on the committee to amend student trustee election bylaws.

Troy Alim, USG president-elect, said when he takes office May 13, he will work on creating the USG portion of the committee.

He said he will work with GPSC in changing the guidelines because the problems that occurred this year hurt the election turnout.

"We need to start the committee to work on the election guidelines so we can remove any election obstacles for the students," Alim said.

Both Alim and Terry said they support Smith's idea of using only the last four digits of students' social security numbers, if it can work.

Smith said another problem with this year's election was that the guidelines do not clarify whether or not a student can run as a write-in candidate for student trustee. After Arnoldi was denied a place on the ballot with the Saluki Party, he also was denied write-in candidacy.

Smith said the guidelines need to allow for a write-in candidate or specify that the election commission cannot recognize such a candidate. He said because of this omission, the commission voted not to recognize write-in candidates this year.

"In every type of election there is an implied right for a write-in candidate," he said.

"With the omission of that right in the student election bylaws, something is needed to be added to either allow or disallow a write-in candidate. It needs to be cleared up."

Alim said before making any decision on write-in candidates in the student trustee election, he needs to know why the Student Trustee Election Commission voted against recognizing such a candidate.

"It's such common sense because every election allows for a write-in candidate," he said. "I need to know why they did not allow for one. What was the logic behind their decision?"

Jean Paratore, assistant vice chancellor of Student Affairs, said she has worked with student trustee election commissions for the past 15 years, and the guidelines have never changed.

"It is definitely time they (the student trustee guidelines) be looked at and revised if necessary," she said.

Terry and Alim said they will meet later this week to discuss preliminary plans for setting up the committee and to review the election guidelines.

boxes and product labels to the class.

She said she had the class study the vocabulary and the contents of the labels.

Sramek said she took the class a step further and organized a shopping trip to Wal-Mart, 1450 E. Main St., to reinforce the lessons.

"The field trip was about three hours," she said.

"It was a type of scavenger hunt. The class had to find certain items and food ingredients."

"They also had to describe a prescription to a pharmacist and have someone paged," Sramek said.

Lynn C. Wolff, adult education program manager, nominated Sramek for the award.

Wolff said Sramek takes interest in her students because of her unique family experience.

"She had to teach her own parents English," Wolff said.

"When she looks at her students, she remembers the trials her family went through," she said.

Sramek has helped two of her students enroll into John A. Logan Community College.

Sramek also helped her students apply for Carbondale Public Library cards.

Teresa M. Miranda, a Carbondale resident originally from Guatemala, has attended Sramek's class for more than a year.

Miranda said she appreciates the amount of patience Sramek has for her students.

"Eva has always taken the time to explain difficult things to each one of us," Miranda said.

"She is very patient, even with slow learners," she said.

Under a new law signed by Gov. Jim Edgar last year, anyone found guilty of hazing may be subject to harsher punishment than in the past.

Under the new law, hazing is a Class A misdemeanor.

Hazing that results in great bodily harm or death is a Class 4 felony.

A Class A misdemeanor is punishable by up to a year in prison and a $1,000 fine.

A Class 4 felony is punishable by three to six years in prison.

Under the previous law, hazing was a Class B misdemeanor and did not have a provision for bodily harm or death.

Welch said hazing does not have a place at SIUC and will not go unpunished.

"Hazing is not to be done," he said. "This University does not tolerate that type of behavior."

Penny Pitch, president of the Inter-Greek Council, a governing body of the fraternity and sorority system, said she was not aware of the alleged hazing incident, the charges or the appeal.

She said she had no comment on the issue.

perks that have the potential to be abused by those who grant them, Black said.

Black said he does not expect the Illinois Senate to pass the bill abolishing the tuition waivers.

"The Senate wouldn't consider it last year," Black said. "I'm not optimistic they will pass it."

Patty Schuh, spokeswoman for Illinois Senate President James "Pat" Philip, R-Wood Dale, said it remains to be seen if the Senate will pass the bill.

"It's definitely a bi-partisan issue," she said.

"We have members on both sides of the aisle that would like to keep them and members on both sides of the aisle that would like to eliminate them."

Schuh said Philip does not think Senate members abuse the scholarships.

Carbondale recognized by state for efforts to improve downtown

By Brian T. Suttton
Daily Egyptian Reporter

"Carbondale has shown that they are very committed ..."

Chris Allen
Spokesman for Lt. Bob Kustra

Volunteer efforts of the Carbondale community helped the town receive state recognition and will allow the city to seek input from the Illinois government on revitalizing its downtown area, officials said.

Chris Allen, spokesman for Lt. Gov. Bob Kustra, said Carbondale was recognized by Kustra as a Main Street community Thursday because of an effort by several community members to revitalize the downtown area.

Kustra started Main Street in 1993 to assist communities with populations under 50,000 with developing long-range economic plans for their downtown areas, Allen said.

"Carbondale has shown that they are very committed to this program," Allen said. "The thing we are impressed with is the organization and cooperation of city, civic and business leaders."

Valocia Crisafulli, coordinator of the Illinois Main Street, said the program is a way for the state to consult with communities about needed improvements. She said there are 32 cities in Illinois that are Main Street communities.

"We provide tips to these communities on what other communities have done in their downtown," she said.

"To be recognized as a Main Street community is to show that the community has an ability to succeed. A Main Street community is a community of self starters."

City Manager Jeff Doherty said Carbondale Uptown Inc. spearheaded the effort for Carbondale to be included as a Main Street community.

One of the efforts of Carbondale Uptown was to establish a Downtown Special Service Area. The Special Service Area requires an increase in property taxes for those who reside in the downtown area to fund revitalization projects.

The funds raised by the group, combined with property tax money, will allow Carbondale Uptown to hire a downtown project manager. The manager would oversee the revitalization projects.

However, Jim Myers, owner of Carbondale Herald, 215 E. Main, and the Printing Plant, 606 S. Illinois Ave., said he is organizing a signature petition to stop the Special Service Area.

Myers said he needs signatures from 51 percent of the land owners in the downtown area by May 4 to stop the Special Service Area. He said he is against the property tax increase to pay for revitalization projects, not the program itself.

If Myers' petition drive is successful and stops the Special Service Area, Carbondale Uptown would have to find another way to fund the program, Allen said.

"Losing the SSA would not take the Main Street recognition away," he said. "Carbondale would have to find another way to fund the program, and we would assist them in that area."

V-chip sparks debate about news shows

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—It's a question straight out of Journalism 101: What, exactly, is news? In the television business these days, it's become more than an academic issue.

A panel of TV executives, having met for weeks to develop a system of rating TV programs for sexual and violent content, is struggling to define what a news program is. Participants in the rating panel agree, for instance, that "NBC Nightly News With Tom Brokaw" certainly qualifies. But the line gets fuzziest as one hopscoches from "Good Morning America" to "Inside Edition" to "America's Most Wanted" to "Cops," all of which use news-gathering techniques.

The industry has been forced into this hairsplitting exercise because news programs will be exempt from ratings when they begin appearing next year. The ratings are being designed to work in conjunction with the V-chip, the electronic program-blocking technology that will someday enable parents to screen out programs rated as less than child-friendly.

Although news programming is often graphically violent — and certainly the most realistically violent — fare on TV, the ratings group is wary of placing any restraints on the public's right to know. The panel's chair, Jack Valenti of the Motion Picture Association of America, says putting ratings on news shows would tamper with the First Amendment and might invite the sort of legal challenge the industry has been trying to avoid since agreeing last month to design its own system.

The ongoing discussions — the 20-member panel will meet again this week in Washington — have consequences that go far beyond semantics. Being officially designated a news program may confer a small measure of legitimacy for programs on the ragged edges of journalism.

But the what-is-news debate has financial underpinnings as well: Without a news exemption, a quasi-news program might wind up at the mercy of the V-chip, which would restrict the size of its audience.

As a result, the jockeying has begun. "We have a set of standards that we as a news organization operate under when we cover news events," says Sandy Genelius, a spokeswoman for CBS News. "Any show that doesn't operate by those or similar standards, such as the syndicated (tabloid) shows, we believe should not be included" under the definition of news.

Taking that as a swipe at his show, Arthur Sando, a spokesman for "Inside Edition," replies, "I'm amused that CBS, whose program '60 Minutes' is the father of the ambush interview, is now calling the kettle black." Adds Sando, "I remember it wasn't so long ago that CBS was claiming that CNN wasn't a legitimate news-gathering organization, so apparently they haven't overcome their holier-than-thou attitude."

Officials: Taiwan, China may have chance for peace

The Washington Post

BEIJING—Just a month ago, China was firing missiles off Taiwan's ports, Taiwanese troops were on alert, and American aircraft carriers were speeding toward the region.

Today, the waters between China and the island of Taiwan are calmer. China's guns are quiet, Taiwan has announced and called off two sets of military exercises, and the United States has withdrawn its warships. Both China and Taiwan have turned down the volume in their war of words over whether self-governing Taiwan should bow to Beijing, which claims that Taiwan is a wayward Chinese province destined for reunification by one means or another. But a current of tension still runs between China and Taiwan. "This is a lull," said David Shambaugh, editor of the prestigious China Quarterly at the University of London.

There are two months between Lee's March 23 victory in Taiwan's first fully democratic presidential election and his May 20 inauguration. Lee's inaugural address is expected to be the next major opportunity for a significant warming—or worsening—of relations across the Taiwan Strait.

Camcorder Owners!
 Rediscovered after 25 years in storage: shot-by-shot script for a full length amateur movie. Clean old fashion "Monster-On-The Loose" melodrama was written in 1970 to be filmed just for fun by a group of college classmates using home movie cameras. Equal number of Roles for guys and gals. More than 30 character parts in all. Author Willing to sell copies of old movie script to those interested in attempting a video version of the picture with today's modern camcorders.

confidence," she said.
 "What happens is if they don't get a hit, they want to adjust their swing right away. There is no need to adjust their swing. They just faced some good pitching and didn't do that well.

"We're not having any serious problems. We'll get our bats going against Edwardsville."

Senior co-captain Christine Knotts was not affected by neither Drake, nor UNI's pitching.
 Knotts maintained her terror at the plate by hitting a blazing .583 through the weekend. Knotts collected seven hits on 12 trips to the plate, and garnered three RBIs.

Knotts said the team is well aware of the areas that need work, and plans to address those problem areas against the Cougars.

"We know that there are a few things each individual has to work on," she said.

"We talked about that as a team. Some people are dropping their shoulders, but the problems are things that can be corrected.

"We're going to work on getting back to the fundamentals and correct all the little things."

Southern heads into its non-conference contest at Edwardsville with an overall record of 19-14. The Great Lakes Valley Conference Cougars post an overall mark of 32-14.

The Salukis own all the bragging rights in the series' history against SIUE with a dominating 29-6 record.

SIUC hurlers Jamie Schutteck, and Kim Holder each recorded wins during last seasons double-header at Edwardsville.

Although today's contest is a non-conference dual, Brechtelsbauer said the Salukis will go after the Cougars in the same fashion as its Missouri Valley Conference foes.

"They've got some good pitching," she said.

"They have got some good players. It's always a big thing for them to beat a Division I school, so they have a tremendous amount of motivation."

The first game of today's double-header begins at 5 p.m.

Pippen bashes referee after second incident

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Chicago Bulls star forward Scottie Pippen didn't pull any punches when asked Sunday if he has a problem once again with NBA referee Hue Hollins.

Two years ago Hollins called a controversial foul on Pippen with 2.1 seconds left against the New York Knicks, swinging the outcome of Game 5 of a playoff series that the Knicks held on to win. Saturday, Hollins whistled Michael Jordan for a foul with 0.5 seconds left, enabling Indiana to win a game that was apparently headed to overtime. The loss prevented the Bulls from tying the all-time NBA record for home court victories in a season.

"He tries to be dominant with a whistle," Pippen said. "In my mind he solidified himself as (pause) I won't even say. He wants to make the big call, but he's not making it at the right time. He's making calls after the buzzer and trying to put time back on the clock to cover his mistake. That doesn't work.... He put a smirk on his face like he made a great call."

Pippen's comments come at a time when players' enmity toward referees seems to be at an all-time high. Pippen's teammate, forward Dennis Rodman, was suspended for six games last month for head-butting a referee. Los Angeles Lakers guard Nick Van Exel and forward Magic Johnson were suspended for seven games and three games, respectively, this month for shoving referees.

NBA spokesman Brian McIntyre said the league would not comment on Pippen's remarks.

Rangers' Robitaille looks to get rolling

Newsday

MONTREAL — As a boy, Luc Robitaille skated on park ponds in this city where hockey is everything. When the snow melted, he played in the schoolyards. On Saturday nights, he watched the Canadiens on television because he couldn't afford to attend games at the Forum.

He knows the burden Pierre Turgeon feels. The fans at Moisson Centre are giving the Canadiens captain le Bronx cheer, the one Robitaille has endured at Madison Square Garden. Like Turgeon, the pedigree says Robitaille is supposed to score. And like Turgeon, he has not.

"I was surprised with the reaction in New York," said Vincent Damphousse, who played on youth teams with Robitaille. "I thought they were calling his name."

Coach Colin Campbell said his New York Rangers need more than two or three goals a game to win their best-of-seven first-round series against the Canadiens. They already trail two games to one, with Tuesday night's Game 4 as pivotal as the 2-1 Ranger victory Sunday afternoon.

Adam Graves has contributed three goals, Montreal native Sergio Momesso two and Niklas Sundstrom and Ulf Samuelsson one apiece. With Mark Messier and Brian Leetch at three-quarters speed, the responsibility falls to Alexei Kovalev, Pat Verbeek and Robitaille.

"It's hard anywhere," Robitaille said. "If you're an athlete and you love the game, you want to contribute as much as you can. You don't need the fans or anybody on your back to be hard on you. I'm the hardest on myself. I don't need anyone to push me to tell me I'm playing bad."

But New Yorkers and Quebecers alike reward performance, and for all the digging and mucking along the boards—defensive qualities Jari Kurri sees more of in his former Los Angeles Kings teammate—the most enduring portrait of Robitaille to date is his slamming the stick on the glass after a giveaway led to Ilya Odelein's shorthanded goal in Game 2.

"He's where I am right now. You have to make things happen," Kurri said. "It's a heavy load to carry. When you're not scoring it's crazy some days. I'm positive he'll come around and score big goals for us."

falls in the same time frame as the one in Hawaii, it's unlikely that a person could do both of them," McQuarrie said. "It's much more doable for someone who is, for example, a student who can't afford to take 10 days off, and doesn't have a couple thousand dollars to spend."

McQuarrie added that the distances of the two triathlons are the same.

"It's every bit as hard (as the Hawaii triathlon)," he said. "People think 'well we're going to Florida so it will be flat.' From what I've been told, it's a very hilly course."

"The conditions were not very favorable last year, so it was a pretty tough day," he said.

With its 2.4-mile swim, 112-mile bike, and 26.2-mile run, the Ironman race is perhaps the truest test of athletic ability.

"The purpose of the triathlon team is to give everybody a format for an organization to help them do what they want to do."

*Paul Burton
triathlon team secretary*

Gename completed the course in 11 hours, 8 minutes.

He was not the only team member to have competed in an Ironman event, however. SIUC triathlon team secretary Paul Burton also has a history of Ironman appearances.

Burton, a second year law student at Southern, was ranked fourth in the nation in his age group (50-54) in 1995. His performances have earned him All-American honors three times.

According to Burton, the qualifications to make All-American are high.

"The top five percent in each age group at the end of the season are designated All-American," Burton said.

He added that in his age group, over 300 triathletes compete, and only the top 15 athletes are selected as All-Americans.

Burton is a four-time finisher of the Hawaii Ironman, and currently holds the course record in the SIUC Doc Spackman Triathlon for the 45-49 age group. He will make an attempt to break the 50-54 age group record April 27.

Even though Burton is nationally competitive, he agreed with Gename in that the goal of the team is to keep competition fun.

"The purpose of the triathlon team is to give everybody a format for an organization to help them do what they want to do," Burton said.

Thunell

upon arrival.

At FIU last season, Thunell started 18 games, while playing in 28, and averaged 23 minutes per game. In those 23 minutes, he averaged 7.5 points and 4.8 rebounds per appearance.

For being 6-9 and 230 lbs.,

Thunell shot the ball well last season with a .477 shooting percentage from the floor, a .369 mark from three-point range and an impressive .837 from the free throw line.

As a freshman at FIU last season, Thunell set his career highs against Columbia University with 20 points, and had 11 rebounds against Southwest Louisiana.

While Thunell will have three years of eligibility at SIUC after sitting out next season, Saluki basketball coach Rich Herrin wishes his new recruit could join the team next season.

"We're excited about having Chris join our program," he said.

"We just wish he was eligible immediately as he could help us next season."

"He was a fine player as a prep, but one who developed late in his senior season after having signed early with Florida International."

on a competitive level for six years, leads the team with a 77.4 stroke average, and is ranked 20th in the Missouri Valley Conference.

He has shot in the 70s 13 times, and his lowest score was a 71 at the Sports Technologies Invitational Nov. 12-14.

Eaker played golf throughout his four years at Altus High School in Oklahoma, and competed in 13 tournaments during the school year and 10 during the summer.

Eaker, a Altus, Oklahoma native, said he came to SIUC because the opportunity was available to play in a Division I program as a freshman.

"I wanted to play for a Division I program, and I wanted to be able to play right away as a freshman," Eaker said.

Eaker said the turning point in his golfing career was when he began taking golf lessons at Hank Hancy's golf program in Dallas, Tx. three years ago.

"It totally turned around my game because I was actually a below average player," he said. "They taught me how to swing the golf club properly."

Eaker said learning the proper method of swinging the golf club is emphasized at Hancy's program.

"What they teach you down there is when you swing the club you have to be in certain positions through the course of the swing," he said.

"They put you in those positions, and that enhances your chances of hitting the ball better."

Eaker said participating in tournaments is the most difficult aspect of playing golf.

"When you're playing competition it is so much more different than playing on a Saturday afternoon by yourself because people are watching," he said. "You get nervous, and you don't do the same things you do when you're by yourself."

Eaker said his skills have evolved on the greens from experience and continuous competitive play.

"I've matured a lot, especially in the fall semester playing college golf," he said. "You're jumping a big level from high school to college, better competition, better courses and you learn how to score better and play better."

Eaker said golf requires an individual to focus and concentrate, and once a person develops their physical game, it all boils down to the mental game.

The short game is one of the tougher parts of golf, and Eaker said he stays focus on the greens by thinking about the shot and blocking everything else out of his mind.

"When you get over a shot you just have to shut the brain down and visualize and think about that shot," he said.

"You have to know exactly what you want it to do, and you've got to have total confidence that you can execute the shot. If you don't, your chances of not executing are greater."

Eaker said although he is leading the team in scoring, he does not consider himself a team leader, but as a motivator for the other players to perform better.

"I'm just a freshman, trying to do the best that I can," he said. "I'm just trying to get the other guys to step it up a little bit."

Salukis to attempt to heat cool bats

By Michael DeFord
DE Assistant Sports Editor

Judging by the nets hanging from the ceiling of Davies Gymnasium, the pitching machine, and the array of bats, it was easy to assume that the focus of the SIUC softball team's practice Monday afternoon was on hitting.

Known for its strong hitting throughout the season, Southern's bats were shutdown in its weekend series on the road against the University of Northern Iowa and Drake University.

As a team, Southern only averaged .218 from the plate in its series of doubleheaders against the Panthers and the Bulldogs.

When comparing that to its solid .300-plus season average, it's easy to see why the Salukis dropped three of the four games — hence the focus on the bats in practice.

Although there is no immediate cause for alarm, SIUC coach Kay Brechtelsbauer is hoping the extra effort toward hitting during practice will pay off in today's doubleheader against Division II SIUE.

She said Southern's aluminum bats may be a little bent, but are far from broken.

"What happens sometimes — and it's not unusual for either baseball or softball — strong pitching tends to shut down strong hitting," she said. "That was the case on Saturday. Drake's pitching was very strong, and we didn't respond very well.

"We were a little off stride and a little bit behind."

By no means does Brechtelsbauer believe Southern will not rebound from its weekend hitting slump.

Nor does she believe the cold bats are a long-term problem. But she has expressed some concern over her players changing their normal routine at the plate.

She said Southern's bats will be fine, and is expressing the adage "if it isn't broke, don't fix it," to her players.

"Some of them have lost a little bit of

Dawgs sign another big man to pack

In the middle of college basketball's signing period, the Salukis added former O'Fallon prep-star Chris Thunell to its roster for the 1997-98 season.

Thunell will transfer from Florida International University to SIUC this fall, but will have to complete a full academic year before he can join the team due to NCAA transfer rules.

A player who transfers from the same level, or a higher level program must sit out a year, but those transferring from a lower level, such as Division II, III, or a junior college, are allowed to join their new team

SIUC Triathlon Team

Triathlon team provides opportunity to triple fun

By Jared Driskill
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Participating in a triathlon requires the combination of three sporting events rolled into one, and for some SIUC students, competing in a triathlon has become a serious form of competition, while others compete for fun.

As the 1996 SIUC triathlon team's season begins, the team will compete in the SIUC Doc Spackman Triathlon. It will take place April 27, and several local triathletes will participate in the event.

According to SIUC triathlon team president Brian Gename, the goal of his team is to have fun while competing.

"For a lot of members on the team,

"My main thing is, even though I set my standards high, I still want to keep it all fun."

Brian Gename
triathlon team captain

it's just going out and doing something that's a challenge," Gename said. "My main thing is, even though I set my standards high, I still want to keep it all fun. That's the goal of the team, and there's a lot of people on the team who are out there to have fun."

Gename added that a standard week of training for him consists of 20-30 hours, and said the season will consist of 12-15 triathlons.

In 1995, Gename, a junior in Dietetics, won his age group six times in area triathlons.

Oct. 21 of last year, he added to his list of accomplishments as he competed in the Florida Ironman, has several victories in area triathlons as well.

According to team member Keith McQuarrie, the Florida Ironman is the same as the Hawaii Ironman Triathlon Championship, which is a highly publicized event.

Saluki golfer gave up hoops to take chance on the links

By William C. Phillips III
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Even though freshman Todd Eaker comes from a strong family golf background, he never thought when he picked up a golf club at the age of 8 he would one day be competing at a NCAA Division I school.

"When I was 15, I was playing basketball and golf, and I decided to drop basketball and devote all my time to golf," Eaker said. "I wanted to play a sport in college, and golf presented me the best chance to do that."

Between the Lines

The SIUC baseball team travels to Cape Girardeau, Mo. today to make up a game which was originally scheduled for Feb. 28.

The Salukis lost three of four at Wichita State last weekend, and are looking to rebound before hosting St. Louis University Wednesday and Indiana State this upcoming weekend.

Southern is currently 21-19 overall and 11-9 in the Missouri Valley Conference, which puts the club in fourth place in the Valley.

The Dawgs dropped from third place to fourth with their losses at WSU, and now trail third-place Bradley (10-8) by a half game and second-place Southwest Missouri (13-6) by two and a half games.

Wichita State leads the Valley with a 12-3 conference record.

SIUC's men's soccer club defeated the University of Tennessee — Martin Sunday, 2-1.

The two SIUC goals were scored by Brian Gleason and Taro Montebon, with goalie Jon Scheafer contributing 15 saves.

The team travels to Wichita, Kan. April 26-28 to participate in a tournament containing NCAA Division II and III schools.

The team played its way to the quarter-finals last year, and hopes to improve upon that this year.
