Ho Hum!

University Book Store seemed to be the last place students wanted to frequent Thursday as final exams loomed only a few days hence. Store employees, lacking customers, were able to catch up on some store work--and some gossip, too.

Instructors Told To Use Official Exam Schedule

The Office of the Chancellor has urged SIU faculty members to administer final examinations during times for which they are scheduled.

Numerous reports by students indicate that many instructors are scheduling final exams well ahead of the scheduled exam time.

A memorandum previously issued by the Office of the Vice President for Academic Affairs (now Office of the Chancellor) said that failure to adhere to the exam schedule "creates serious difficulties for students and deviations from it may be effected only with the approval of the chairman of the department and the dean of the school."

While there is no punishment policy for faculty members who give the finals early, those offenders may face reprimand by department chairman and school dean, according to Willis Malone, assistant to Carbondale campus Chancellor Robert MacVicar.

Malone said his office has asked for departmental reports listing faculty who do not comply with the University regulations.

"Those who do not comply with the final exam schedule are called into the dean's or the chairman's office to explain why their final was not given at the scheduled time," Malone said. "Often there was a legitimate reason for not going along with the schedule."

He said that some instructors are not aware that SIU regulations call for administering the final exams at the scheduled time.

School Funds Late

SIU Vets to Get Summer Checks

The long financial drought for SIU service veterans on the GI Education Bill will end in the next few days.

Checks for July were sent Wednesday to the Treasury Department from the Chicago Veterans Bureau for dissemination to the individual recipients. According to the Chicago Bureau, SIU vets eligible for educational financial support from July 1 through 31 will receive their checks within the week.

Checks for the 31 days in August will arrive the 11th or 12th of September, according to the Bureau.

The first checks for the fall quarter will arrive in late October or early November. They will cover the period from the 24th through the 30th of September, the only days certified for payment in that month.

October checks should arrive on time near the 10th of November, according to the Bureau.

The SIU Carbondale campus veterans office said that, to its knowledge, no veterans have received financial support for the summer months except for the period in June not including the term break.

An office spokesman said that numerous tracers have been sent out on checks either long overdue or simply at the veteran's request during the summer term.

Since the summer term at SIU was considered an entirely separate pay period for veterans by the National Veterans Administration, a complete recertification for individual vets was necessary, causing checks for the summer to be held up by paperwork until now.

Speech Area Gets Government Grant

The Department of Speech Pathology and Audiology has received a federal grant of $37,286 from the Vocational Rehabilitation Administration in support of its graduate traineeship program.

Presently eight students in the clinical speech program at the University are being aided by the funds.

Gus Bode

Gus says he doesn't know why instructors are asked not to give final exams early: after all, if you're going to flunk anyhow, why prolong it?

Campaign '68 to Focus On 'Law and Order'

By Dean Rebuffoni

Of the various issues of Campaign '68 is likely to focus upon, that of "law and order" will be, in the opinion of one SIU professor, "number one."

Elmer H. Johnson, assistant director of the Center for the Study of Crime, Delinquency and Corrections, said that he was "disturbed about all the talk of law and order."

"As a sociologist who has devoted his time to criminology," Johnson said, "I'm of the opinion that 'law and order' is being used as a catch-all phrase. I think it will be used as a cover for other important issues."

Johnson said that the racial issue would be one of those "buried" under the "noble-sounding phrase of law and order." He remarked that "everybody is for law and order, but the phrase itself capsulizes many of our domestic issues."

"I think the unrest we're experiencing today is simply a culmination of problems we haven't done anything about. We can substitute action for thought, but we can't simplify the problems of crime, race and other domestic ills under 'law and order'."

Johnson said that he is concerned whether law and order will be used by Richard Nixon as "an excuse to vote for a return to 'peace and quiet'—such as the era of Calvin Coolidge represented." He said the Coolidge era was actually one where important problems were ignored.

"There is a desire to get rid of all dissent today," Johnson said, "and it offers an escape for those who really want peace of mind. But we can't put the genie back in the bottle now; our problems are with us, and we can't withdraw from them into an era such as the one Coolidge's administration represented."

One professor familiar with some of the problems the U.S. Government faces today said that "real marked change" may be hard to bring about in some areas, regardless of who is elected in November.

For New Residents

New Voting Process Begins

Newcomers to Carbondale may begin the first part of a two-step process this week that will allow them to vote for the President and Vice-president of the U.S. in the November 5 election.

A special limited ballot has been established for local residents who will have lived in the state less than one year or in an Illinois county less than 90 days.

The voter must have lived in Illinois at least 60 days prior to November 5 and be at least 21 years old on that date. In the first step, the potential voter must go in person to the county clerk's office in the Jackson County Court House in Murphysboro not later than October 5.

The application is then sent back to the county in which the applicant previously resided for proof of residence. When the residence is verified, the applicant will be notified.

The second step is the actual voting. The new resident may vote by special absentee ballot between October 21 and November 2 at the Jackson County Court House. The ballot is subsequently forwarded in a sealed envelope to the precinct in which the voter currently resides to be tallied on election day.

Last Summer Issue Scheduled Saturday

The last issue of the Daily Egyptian for summer quarter will be Saturday. No issues will be published during finals week. Publication will resume Tuesday, Sept. 24.

However, the business office will remain open during finals week and between quarters. Office hours will be 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Orientation Slated For Internationals

The fourth annual international student orientation to be held at University City Residence Halls Sept. 16 through 21 will be an attempt to acquaint new foreign students with U.S. and SIU life before school begins for the year.

Frank H. Sehnert, foreign student consultant for the SIU International Services Division, said the six-day program will be climaxed by an address by Carbondale campus Chancellor Robert W. MacVicar and attendance at the SIU-Louisville football game.

The schedule for the orientation workshop is: Monday—registration, processing of health certificates at Health Service, and a "welcome" address by a campus administrator.

Tuesday—beginning of actual workshop; briefing by the office of International Student Services; a foreign student panel discussion of on and off campus housing; visitation of housing; a 2-hour English proficiency exam, and an American-style cookout at Evergreen Park.

Wednesday—meeting with immigration authorities for briefing on new interpretations of immigration regulations; "Education in the U.S." by Elmer J. Clark, dean of the College of Education, and a discussion on preparing for and taking exams. Also on Wednesday will be presented a "Desert Hour," to which southern Illinois families who have extended hospitality to the international students are invited.

Thursday—devoted to student affairs topics. That night, an American-International Student Dance will be held in the University Center Ballrooms, with both American and international students encouraged to attend.

Friday—new international students will go through advisement and sectioning, a tour of Morris Library, and attend the closing banquet of the workshop, at which Chancellor MacVicar will speak.

Saturday—student activities panel schedules, along with an address by student body president Sam Panayotovich. New international students will be invited to attend the first football game of the season—SIU vs. Louisville.

SIU Botanists Publish Papers

Two SIU faculty members have papers published in the August issue of the American Journal of Botany.

Lawrence C. Matten, assistant professor of botany, has an article on Actinonyx banksii, described as a recently discovered gymnosperm plant from the middle Devonian period about 350 million years ago.

Walter H. Schmid, assistant Beach Facilities Open

During Summer Break

Lake-on-the-Campus beach will be open from 1 to 5 p.m. daily during summer break, Sept. 1 through 19.

The boat dock facilities will be closed during this period.

Regular schedule will resume Sept. 20.

Simon Group To Meet

The Paul Simon for Lt. Governor Committee will meet from 3 to 3:30 p.m. today in Room C of the University Center.

Interested students or faculty are invited to attend.

Pulsipher Gets Research Post

Allan G. Pulsipher has been appointed assistant director of research and projects for the SIU Business Research Bureau, according to Dean Robert Hancock of the School of Business. Pulsipher also will teach in the Department of Economics.

Pulsipher, who has been an assistant professor of economics at Texas A. & M. University and also taught at Tulane University, is finishing his dissertation for the Ph.D. in economics from Tulane. He was born in Denver and has his Bachelor's degree from the University of Chicago.

He is a member of the American Economic Association, the American Political Science Association, the American Association of University Professors and Phi Beta Kappa.

The Mansion for Morris

The proposed $250,000 home-reception facility for SIU President Delyte W. Morris to be built with state funds should be smaller in size and expense.

In President Morris' own words, "Our present home, remodeled by Charles Pulley (SIU Architect) is adequate to entertain a substantial group of people, without being a hotel." One can only infer from his use of the word 'hotel' that Morris meant the proposed structure for it does indeed seem to be just that.

Another reason against the new home proposal involves the very purpose of this University which is to educate the students—not provide luxurious living for its administrative hierarchy and guests. There are numerous academic departmental improvements which could be made on this campus with a portion of the $250,000.

Public Forum

The Daily Egyptian encourages free discussion of current issues through editorials and letters. Editorials are written by members of the student news staff and by students enrolled in journalism courses and represent opinions of the authors only. Readers are invited to express their opinions in letters, which must be signed with name, address and telephone number, preferably typewritten, and be no longer than 250 words. Letter writers should respect the generally accepted standards of good taste and are urged to make their points in terms of issues rather than personalities. Acceptance for publication will depend upon the limitations of space and the timeliness and relevance of the material. It is the responsibility of the Daily Egyptian to determine content of the opinion pages. Other material on pages four and five includes editorials and articles reprinted from other newspapers, syndicated columns and articles, and interpretive or opinion articles authored locally.

A new home may be necessary since the current plans call for the President's home to be removed as part of the campus expansion, but there is a very real question as to whether or not the new home should be a $250,000 edifice. A fine home could be built for $50,000 and the remaining $200,000 put to very valuable use in other areas.

Many departments are now housed in World War II barracks. Many natural and applied science laboratories are also in need of new buildings or at least, major renovations. Education and athletic facilities need more improvements for which the students should not have to pay.

A critic of the proposed home for Morris might also mention Illinois governors live in a home and reception facility built in 1856.

Other discrepancies all center around the use of state funds for this new home. Why can't more state funds be used for parking, a new football stadium or for scholarships—athletic or academic? Why must the students of this institution—who must scrape by on meager finances—be charged an additional $10 per person on future tuitions when it is possible that some or all of the $250,000 for the home could be used instead?

If President Morris is sincere in his—up to now—feeble objections to the plan, why doesn't he fight it with the same hard line used in fighting student and faculty protests for the last several years? Unless President Morris desires to be branded a hypocrite he should greatly reduce the expenditures planned for his new home or forget about it altogether.

Civil Service Stickers?

To the Daily Egyptian:

It's about time the administration gave some consideration to the SIU secretaries, clerks, typists, and other office workers who keep this university running.

In spite of the fact that (1) the above mentioned are paid on a scale that may have covered the cost of living 30 years ago, and (2) they are given a $10 or $15 raise once a year (with the exception of a few) of which they net $5, they are asked to hand over $45 for a parking sticker right along with the other staff members who are being paid three or four times their salary.

If we cannot be included in the benefits received by the staff, why must we be counted as one of them at all? Civil Service is a category of its own in everything else; why not when it involves fees, fines, etc? A fee of $45 may not be much to some, but for most of us it's 1/5 of our month's salary. Bicycles and legs may be a good way to travel if you live on or near campus, but most Civil Service people do not.

Would the administration be happy if we stayed off campus? Have a heart men!

$250,000 'Humble Abode'

To the Daily Egyptian:

Soon a humble abode will be built for SIU presidents, present and future. This humble abode costing one quarter of a million dollars will include a small apartment for domestic help. I can't help but think that perhaps if the edifice didn't include six bedrooms plus a 27 x 20 foot living room (that has to be bigger than my entire house including the front porch) plus a few more cozy rooms, that an additional apartment for servants wouldn't be necessary. The state should spend a good portion of that quarter million dollars to lower tuition or to pay for parking facilities which the University is about to make the users pay to the teeth for. Or if the money has been specified for housing, maybe the state should use the money to subsidize rent for those living in rat-infested, condemned buildings.

Perhaps visitors to SIU should be put in student housing or the homes of Carbondale citizens and see how life is in Carbondale and not the illusion that some would like to make of it. Perhaps the president of SIU could slum it in a $100,000 cottage.

Grades Are 'Lifeline'

To the Daily Egyptian:

When in a class of 166 students only 8.4 per cent of them can pass a test with a "C" or better and over 63 per cent of them can't pass the same exam, some investigation is needed.

First is the actual grade distribution. It was:

Grade	Number	%	Cumulative %
A	1	0.6	0.6
B	1	0.6	1.2
C	12	7.2	8.4
D	47	28.1	36.5
E	105	63.5	100.0

A logical question to ask here is who was the test administered to. Was it a class of Freshmen who didn't expect to be around in the Fall, or perhaps students who hadn't taken the course yet? The answer to both is no. The test was given to juniors and seniors, taking a 300 level course who supposedly had shown they were capable of doing college work. In fact, looking at several of the students shows that these students are capable of the work. One student who barely made a "D" has taken 19 hours for the past five quarters and has a 4.0 average this period. A teacher doing summer work also received a "D." One student who failed the test spent some 30 hours just reading the material for the test.

Perhaps the material was too much for a test covering four weeks and worth one-third of the grade. If 500 pages of reading and 40 pages of notes are not too much, then the fact that these covered 9 reserve readings of which there were no more than four copies of any one, only one of some, and one copy, only one copy, was missing for slightly more than a week, just might prove to be.

This when coupled with the fact that the instructor tested on insignificant points "to make sure we had done the reading," could be the straw that broke the camel's back. One of these questions asked what animal was referred to in an article. A student remarked that he had read the article, but remembered as important that there weren't enough Federal Inspectors to enforce the law and other such trivial detail.

Perhaps the answer to this is to make a course in "memorization-regurgitation" a prerequisite to the course, Conservation, GSA 312. Or perhaps it is as the instructor said when I asked, "Am I to neglect my other courses (which I have done)?" He replied that this was the choice he had to make when he was in college. The answer here would be a footnote in the catalog saying to take no other courses concurrently.

Somewhere in this and a mass of other facts lies the answer. I personally refuse to believe that a class of juniors and seniors—some of them needing this course to graduate this quarter—are so stupid or suddenly decided not to study. Is the content of the course so great or the quality of the instructor so poor to cause this? For the instructor it makes no difference because he will neither be at SIU this Fall, nor be hurt by the grade. For the student, however, grades are his lifeline. He fails or succeeds by grades; learning must become a secondary concern. I, and I am sure others, took the course among several alternatives because of a genuine desire to learn about a subject that affects us.

Something must be done and done now. When 63.5 per cent of a class composed of upper classmen fail an exam, questions must be asked to determine the cause.

Parking Garage Fees

To the Daily Egyptian:

All employees of the University, from the janitorial to the executive branches, are asked to contribute their fare share ($25 and $45) to be used to build an underground parking garage for the president and his staff. This garage will enable the president and his staff to park within a few feet of the office door. Naturally, as soon as the garage is paid for in full, we will no longer ask for this yearly contribution.

Chancellor MacVicar states that he would like to see more people ride bicycles or walk, and since we "aim to please," whip out your trusty old bicycle or your dirty old sneakers. Oh, and if you have an extra pair of sneakers or bicycle, perhaps you would be so kind as to lend it to Chancellor MacVicar. For those of you who live five or so miles from campus, you should leave approximately 6 a.m., and if you live 10 or more miles from campus, we suggest you set up a pup-tent outside the city limits and remain there until Friday evening. This will avoid spending so much time in traveling back and forth.

Rules Don't Change For Soviet Satellites

By Antero-Pietila

"The liberalization movement of Czechoslovakia and Poland are not doomed to failure because of their criticism. What they have to remember is that in a communist country you are not allowed to criticize or doubt the basic virtues of the socialist system. If this is not understood by the young student reformers they may still face the very same fate as their predecessors in Hungary, in 1956, when the Soviets saw the Nagy regime endangering the continuity of the socialist system and decided to crush the uprising in their merciless way.

"Much has changed in Eastern Europe since 1956 but you still must choose between obeying the basic rules of the game or perishing."

This writer does not want to repeat these passages that were printed in the Daily Egyptian in March to prove that he had foresight to predict anything. No, he knows too well how he, after the Cierna meeting, began accusing himself of misjudgment of the situation and his understanding of the change in Eastern Europe. Therefore, the preceding passages are there only to show that the rules of the game did not change, after all.

Now we know what the Soviet leaders talked about in the Kremlin Tuesday after they had suddenly interrupted their vacation. The same day, incidentally, the communist party newspaper Pravda published a dispatch by Victor Mayevsky and Vasily Zburovsky. These leading Soviet commentators charged that Czech workers were being hounded for a letter they had sent to Moscow. According to Pravda the letter contained this paragraph:

"Believe us that we feel shame and disgrace from the bottom of our souls for those people who, on the one hand, hypocritically pose as friends of the Soviet Union and, on the other, engage in incitement and demand an immediate removal of the troops."

What we know today is that the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia was based on a similar letter from "Czechoslovak party officials." In both cases, however, the Russians have failed to identify the signers of these alleged letters.

The circumstances that in Czechoslovakia led to the Soviet invasion are quite different from those in Hungary in 1956. In Hungary the Russians crushed the uprising after an intense week of fighting, and then there was rejoicing, over which the Imre Nagy regime had only nominal control.

In Czechoslovakia, the Novotny leadership had retained full control all the time. The reformist movement had been at work for three months during which it had established its position and earned the support of a clear majority of the Czechs.

During this time of liberalization the United States refrained from doing anything that could even vaguely be interpreted as interfering with the affairs of the Prague government. So careful indeed was Washington in this policy that it did not even want to begin discussion about the $20-million which the Czechs claim the U.S. owes them as compensation for gold that has been held in this country since the communist takeover in 1948.

Already during the Hungarian uprising the Americans learned something the Eisenhower Administration had known long ago: they could not do anything in a clash between the Soviets and some of the satellites in Eastern Europe.

Whatever talk there had been about "captivated peoples" and "rolling back the Iron Curtain" was silenced after Budapest. As a result, even "Radio Liberation," an American-owned and operated private station in Munich, that broadcasts to Russian in several Soviet languages, soon after the Hungarian crisis quietly changed its name to "Radio Liberty."

When this article was written on Wednesday it was still too early to predict the effects of the Soviet invasion on the Eastern Europe communist world and on Western Europe public opinion. It is probable, however, that what happened, especially in France, in the aftermath of the Hungarian revolution, will take place again and many disillusioned intellectuals will leave the communist party. In France, this would further weaken the left that is already gravely smattered after the unprecedented Gaullist victory last June. But as this writer has said earlier, Machiavellian acts usually breed Machiavellian justification: most of the Western European communist parties have been too independent anyway. From Moscow's point of view a purge may be good, as the cooperation with the bourgeois governments is likely to produce many more fruits than with local parties.

Some of this writer's friends have been vacationing in Czechoslovakia this summer. One of them offered this account on the Czechoslovak liberalization in a letter written during the Cierna talks. He began by comparing two cities, Budapest and Prague:

"Budapest is a beautiful and fascinating city. The Danube and the Buda hills offer a fine site for it. The standard of living is clearly higher than in the Soviet Union, for instance. People are nice and very helpful. But about politics they don't talk with a stranger as enthusiastically as here in Prague, where you just don't need to look for an opportunity.

"For those interested in cultural history Prague is a real treasure. The city itself is not yet too big; so everything worth seeing is in a small area. The architecture of Prague alone justifies a visit: you can find Gothic, lots of baroque and even some buildings of Romanic style. Otherwise Prague would be more expensive than Budapest, but the prices in the black market for the marks and dollars are high. By the way, it is funny that a mark is valued here higher than dollar.

"Because of the talks between the Czechs and the Soviets the sentiment is somewhat tense. People here are optimistic, although no information about the outcome of the talks has been disclosed yet. Dubcek's popularity is apparent. Mugs are raised in taverns for his honor and youth are graffitiing the walls with 'Vive Dubcek and his boys.'"

"His opponents are apparently silent, but there must be quite a lot of those people too. The atmosphere is clearly free. People are discussing eagerly, long-haired youth write supermodern poetry (this information is from author, who yesterday gladly presented his works in a Weinstube and made me even buy the organ of his poetry club for three kronas). Jazz is in fad too, but the quality is another matter. Even the best art stores sell modernistic paintings (what a difference with the rest of Eastern Europe), but again the quality varies.

"But to eat you shouldn't come here! The cuisine is German and the best Czechoslovak beer is more easily available in Budapest than here." The letter was dated July 31. On August 20 the Russian troops crossed the Czechoslovak borders and everything that was in that letter was from a dream in the past.

Vietnam Furlough With 'Tokyo Rose'

By John Durbin

TOKYO—A 22-year-old GI sauntered into a small shabby night club in the Akasaka section of Tokyo.

The young man slithered into a booth and was quickly accompanied by an attractive young Japanese girl. He ordered himself a bottle of beer and offered the young girl a drink. She refused.

Unlike most girls working in Tokyo night clubs, this girl's business was not to serve as this GI's hostess for the evening. She had a much more personal arrangement in mind.

The GI had just arrived in the "Land of the Rising Sun" a few hours earlier. He was visiting Tokyo from Vietnam on a three-day rest and recuperation (R & R) leave.

Both the young man and the young lady each had one goal in mind. But their motives differed.

The GI had been stationed in Vietnam for about five months without having as much as laid eyes on a pretty young lady—or maybe any young lady for that matter. His sole thought was to wager a deal allowing him the companionship of this female for at least one evening and possibly the full three-day period he would be in Tokyo. To him, like many GIs on R & R, money was no object.

As for the young lady, money was the prime object—the only object. Her coal black eyes had quickly turned to dollar signs when this young GI entered the club. She was not concerned with his name, where he was from or when he was leaving. There had been many like him before and there would be many like him to follow.

Her only thought was getting 20,000 yen

(about $70) from this GI in return for fulfilling his sexual desires. (The majority of the young girls charge 20,000 yen but some GIs and other foreigners have been known to work the price down to as low as 10,000.)

Running through her mind was the question "How much can I drain from this GI loaded with all that money he has saved while serving in Vietnam?" The question tossed at the GI by this young business girl were no different than those asked of previous customers. And all of the questions revolved around the main and ultimate question "How much can you give me?"

This GI was a bit more anxious than most and before his future evening companion posed the question of money to him, he quickly pulled out his wallet and produced 50,000 yen (about $130) to assure the young girl that his financial status was adequate.

Since any further conversation was unnecessary, the GI gulped down the remainder of his beer and he and his "lady for the evening" left the club arm in arm to carry out each one's end of the bargain. For him it would be sexually satisfying. But to her it was only another business agreement. Only a job.

Although the patrons change constantly and the business girls periodically, the place remains the same dark shabby self-Reggies International Club. It is a 24-hour dive where, if a GI's wallet can meet the bill, getting a girl for an evening is as easy as buying a bottle of beer.

Reggies bends over backwards to make its United States customers feel as much at home as possible. It serves American food (hamburgers, cheeseburgers, hot dogs) with menus printed in English. The owner (Reggie, there actually is a fellow by that name) is an Australian while all of his help are Japanese who can speak and understand English quite well.

To make it even easier for the GIs, the business girls who cavort around in the hopes of attracting customers speak English often times as well as a native American.

With few exceptions, the business girls working in Reggies earn their living by lying on their backs for one stranger after another. Many of them are over 20 years old (the legal age in Japan) and have their own apartments where they conduct their business. And many of their apartments are more lavish than any respectable middle-income family's mother could ever hope to afford.

Most of the GIs point out that paying a pretty young girl to show them a good time during their brief stay in the "Land of the Rising Sun" is "the only way to do it." Although the GIs chief objective is working out a business agreement for a girl to sleep with, many also pay additional sums of money to live with the girl and have her take him on tours of Tokyo and maybe even the countryside.

Many GIs contend there is no other better way of spending money they have saved during their duty in Vietnam.

"I have been stationed in Vietnam totting a gun for the past three months and when I arrived here in Tokyo I wanted to find a girl (something he had not seen for months) and I didn't waste any time doing it," one GI said in explaining his reasons for venturing into Reggies.

"There is only one reason a young guy comes here," he added.

Finals Week Activities To Include Bogart, W.C. Fields Films

Final Exam Week activities are now in effect or will be beginning Aug. 26.

Women's hours were extended until 2 a.m. Aug. 19 and will continue in effect until Aug. 30.

The Magnolia Lounge, Roman Room and Oasis of the University Center are now open until 2 a.m. These hours will remain in effect until Aug. 23 and again Aug. 28-29.

Beginning Aug. 26, free film festivals will be presented in the University Center Ballrooms. On that day, the W.C. Fields festival will feature "Tillie and Gus" at 8:30 p.m. and "International House" at 10 p.m. The Marx Brothers Festival, Aug. 27, will offer "Horse Feathers" at 8:30 p.m. and "Cocoanuts" at 10 p.m. Scheduled for Aug. 28, the Bogart festival, are "Casablanca" at 8:30 p.m. and "Treasure of Sierra Madre" at 10:30 p.m.

The pool, weight room and gym of the University School will be open from 6:30 p.m. to midnight Aug. 26-29.

Recreation equipment may be secured from the Intramural Office, Room 128 of the Arena, from 8 a.m. to 8:30 p.m. all next week.

In Campaign '68

Faculty Examines Issues

On the subject of business and Campaign '68, Robert Schellenberger, chairman of the Department of Business Management, said that "a president's degree of freedom to influence is more restricted than popularly believed."

Schellenberger recently returned from Washington, D.C., where he acted as a consultant on the implementation of planning, programming, and budgeting for the Civil Service Commission and the Bureau of the Budget. Concerning the total budget, Schellenberger said that, once launched, a domestic or foreign program cannot be radically changed by a new president.

"The President can, of course, exert some directional influence on a program, but to modify pre-existing programs financially is only possible to a relatively small degree," he said.

Concerning the business community itself, Schellenberger said that it underwent a "significant reappraisal of its political role" during the Kennedy and Johnson administrations.

"I think the business community will still support the Republican Party," he said, "but not to the extent it did in the Eisenhower years. The Kennedy-Johnson years have been very good years for the American businessman as a whole, and I think they've been perceived of as such by the business community. The real question is whether the business community sees Kennedy and Johnson as being the forces responsible for this."

One issue particularly important to the state of Illinois is that of agriculture. Herman M. Haag, professor of agriculture economics, said, however, that "the candidates won't give much attention to the farm vote since farmers represent only about six per cent of the electorate."

Haag, who teaches courses in farm policy, emphasized that the balance of political power in many states, Illinois included, often does depend on the farm vote, however.

He said that he didn't believe that the Republican Party was "the farmer's sole choice any more," and added that the farmer's traditional voting behavior "might be changing for certain groups of farmer."

"For instance," Haag said, "the smaller farmers -- those with gross farm sales of less than $25,000 a year -- feel they need the help of government to gain a decent price. They are generally in favor of the farm programs now in effect or pending in Congress, but the larger and more commercial farmers are not."

Eisenhower Plagued By Irregular Heartbeats

WASHINGTON (AP)—A new outbreak of irregular heartbeats described by Army doctors as very serious plagued former President Dwight D. Eisenhower Thursday as he continued his fight to recover from his seventh heart attack.

Despite the setback, which came after a period in which the disturbances in Eisenhower's heart rhythm appeared to be declining, doctors said the over-all condition of the 77-year-old general remained unchanged.

Eisenhower has been in critical condition since he was stricken last Friday with his seventh heart attack—his fourth in three months.

His condition remained stable through the afternoon hours and at 4:15 p.m. bulletin said only:

"There is no basic change in Gen. Eisenhower's condition since the bulletin this morning."

The episodes of irregularity in his heart action since Friday's attack have been the major concern of the team of doctors treating him and they have resorted to electrical devices and new drugs in an effort to stop them.

Medical dictionaries describe heart irritability as a condition caused by a weakening of the nerves that stimulate the heart muscles. The effect is to cause extra beats and irregular rhythm in the heart action.

Grand Jury To Investigate Rumored Plot

CHICAGO (AP)—The federal grand jury will begin an investigation today of a rumored plot to assassinate prominent Democratic officials during next week's convention, U.S. Attorney Thomas A. Foran said Thursday.

Foran said that several subpoenas were issued Thursday for South Side gang members and others who participated in last October's peace march on the Pentagon.

The grand jury will begin hearing testimony today from 16 persons subpoenaed.

The rumors of plans to assassinate Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey, Sen. John J. McClellan, D-Ark., and other officials originated in Cook County Jail last week, Foran said.

Czechs to Defy Invaders

General Strike Called

PRAGUE (AP)—Defying the Soviet-led invaders, the Communist party called on Czechoslovaks Thursday night to begin a general strike at noon today in protest against occupation of the country and arrest of the reformist leaders, clandestine broadcasts reported. Sporadic shooting and demonstrations were reported during the day.

The party issued the strike call as the Russian command still failed to announce formation of a Soviet-line government 48 hours after Soviet-bloc troops took over the country.

But pro-Soviet Czechoslovak

Communists were reported meeting at the Soviet embassy to form such a regime.

An unconfirmed report said Alexander Dubcek, reformist Communist party chief, and some of his colleagues, had been flown to the Soviet Union. They were seized Wednesday and taken to an unknown destination.

After the shooting and demonstrations by 20,000 defiant Prague residents Thursday, the Soviet-led occupiers were progressively stifling opposition voices.

In Vienna, monitors said clandestine transmitters were getting harder to hear and some were being jammed. The Czechoslovak news agency Ceteka was cut off Wednesday night and remained silent Thursday.

A curfew was imposed on Prague for the second straight night, effective until 5 a.m., one broadcast said. Several east Slovak towns, including Kosice and Proscov, were reported under martial law.

The Communist party's strike calls for the general walkout to begin unless the invaders have left by today and released the arrested leaders—something that was hardly expected to happen.

LBJ, Cabinet Review
Czechoslovakian Crisis

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Johnson reviewed the Czech crisis with his Cabinet Thursday and Secretary of State Dean Rusk said afterward that the Soviet military intervention could only damage efforts to forge closer East-West ties.

Rusk, holding a news conference in the White House driveway, said the Cabinet was heartened by "extraordinary unanimity" throughout the world—"including important elements in the Communist world"—in condemnation of the invasion of Czechoslovakia.

Rusk said the administration hopes that the reaction of responsible world leaders may prompt the Soviets and their allies to review their thinking, moderate their actions, forego punitive measures against the seized liberal leaders of Czechoslovakia and, finally, withdraw the invading troops.

Asked if he had any evidence to sustain such hope, Rusk replied, "I would say no, as of today."

Rusk said that, certainly at this point, the United States has given no consideration to retaliations or sanctions against the invaders.

Earlier, White House press secretary George Christian said it would be a fair assumption that the Czech crisis in no way alters Johnson's oft-stated pledge to go anywhere—even to Moscow—at any time to promote peace, if his presence were required.

Rusk said he knows of no plans for Johnson to visit the Soviet Union, though he cautioned that he would not want to limit, even in theory, the President's freedom of action to do anything he thought wise to foster peace.

United States Asks U.N.
To Rebuke Soviet Invasion

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—Anticipating a Soviet veto, the United States, Britain, France and four other countries pressed Thursday to have a big majority of the U.N. Security Council rebuke the Soviet Union and its hard-line allies for invading Czechoslovakia.

Canada, Denmark, Brazil and Paraguay joined the Western Big Three permanent members of the council in submitting a strongly worded resolution condemning the invasion and demanding quick troop withdrawal without violence or reprisals.

Nine affirmative votes were needed for approval of the resolution but any of the five permanent members could veto it. The five are the Western Big Three, the Soviet Union and Nationalist China.

The resolution was regarded as certain to be killed by Soviet veto but the Western powers hoped a strong majority would have a telling impact on world opinion and perhaps on the Soviet Union as well.

The Western move came amid heated U.S.-Soviet exchanges and an obvious attempt by the Soviets to stall debate until representatives of a new Czechoslovak regime, installed by Moscow, could reach New York.

By a 10-0 vote with 5 abstentions the Council decided to convene at 5 p.m. EDT. But later the delegates agreed informally to delay the session until 9 p.m. Diplomatic sources said some delegations said they needed additional time to receive instructions on how to vote on the seven-nation resolution.

The Soviets claimed the council was meddling in the internal affairs of a sovereign state—the same charge that was being leveled against it and Poland, East Germany, Bulgaria and Hungary for their armed occupation of Czechoslovakia.

During morning debate, U.S. Ambassador George W. Ball and Soviet Ambassador Jacob Malik continued a hostile exchange that reflected increased East-West tension over the Czechoslovak situation.

Policemen Ordered
To Shoot Snipers
In East St. Louis

EAST ST. LOUIS, ILL. (AP)—The East St. Louis police commission said Thursday that police have been ordered to treat snipers as "murderers and mad dogs" by shooting them.

Commissioner Russell T. Beebe said that extra men including some riding in their own cars, have been put on especially to watch for snipers.

There have been 18 mysterious shootings in East St. Louis in the past two weeks with 10 persons wounded.

Beebe said, "Our men will be carrying riot guns. These snipers are mad dogs and there is only one thing to do with a mad dog—destroy it."

World View Encouraged For SIU Students

Intercul Promotes Study of International Cultures

By Robert L. Carter

The education of an SIU student is not restricted to the classroom in Carbondale. His classroom may be in Mexico, India, Vietnam or even Afghanistan.

In January, 1968, a new concept in education came into being on the Carbondale Campus of SIU. A program was formed whereby any undergraduate student would be able to study cultures other than his own to as great a depth as he desires, whether major or minor. The name of the program is Intercul (International and Intercultural Studies).

Offering literally hundreds of courses, the Intercul program hopes to enable the student to view himself and his society in relation to the rest of the world. By encouraging this world view, the Intercul program desires to make the student's life and thought more meaningful.

Many of the academic offerings of the Intercul program are in the General Studies area. By enrolling in these General Studies courses, the student may prepare himself for the more advanced course work in one of the four area studies programs: Africa, Asia, East Europe and Russia, and Latin America.

For Intercul students interested in acquiring knowledge in areas not now offered in formal classroom situations, individual study programs may be arranged under the special major program. Under the program, any student may petition to undertake a major program of studies not set forth in the requirements of the standard majors or minors offered by the University.

Currently, Intercul offers courses in anthropology, geography, economics, government, history, philosophy, and the humanities in the following areas: Asia (Southeast, South-west); Africa (Central, South); Latin America (Mexico, Central, South, Caribbean); Russia and East Europe.

In addition to the academic coursework, Intercul offers opportunities for travel and study abroad. This summer,

Examine Artifacts

Frederick Schmid, curator of interpretation of the University Museum, (right) shows Mike Hammond and Sari Unger, Intercul students, a spear from the exhibit "The Art of Melanesia." Beginning this fall, Intercul students will assist the museum in setting up intercultural displays.

23 Intercul students returning from Mexico and one from India will meet with Intercul staff members to discuss their experiences. These students also will present slides taken during their travels. (All Intercul students traveling abroad are required to write their reflections.)

Study trips abroad are available not only to Intercul students, but also to any interested student (including graduate students). Intercul will work with and assist any student interested in study abroad.

Intercul, in addition to coursework and foreign study opportunities, also has plans which he intends to specialize. The American student would then be able to discuss his area of interest with someone from that area.

So far, Intercul has made tentative arrangements for the use of the facilities of University City Residence Halls and is trying to establish international floors in the various dorms on campus.

Other plans include the formation of a dialogue discussion group beginning in the fall quarter. This discussion group, consisting of foreign and American students, would hold informal get-togethers in which students would share interests and ideas.

At the end of August, Intercul, now located in the President's Scholars House at 807 S. Oakland, will move to the new International Center in the South Wing of Woody Hall. Cooperating with Intercul in the International Center will be the International Student Center, the Latin American Institute, the African, European and Russian, and the Asian Studies Committees.

Any student desiring further information concerning the coursework and/or the foreign travel/study programs of Intercul may contact the Intercul office at 453-5165.

Novick Satisfied With Terms of Return

By Brian Treusch

A record number of students is expected at SIU this Fall, but probably none of them will have worked as hard to be here as Stuart Novick.

Last Spring the University "barred" Novick from the campus after he allegedly used "inflammatory" language at a student rights' coalition meeting on May 6 in Browne Auditorium.

On June 3, Novick appeared at a Student Government banquet in the University Center and subsequently was arrested by police and charged with criminal trespass by State's Attorney Richard E. Richman. He was later notified by the University that he would not be allowed to re-enter school for at least one year.

Following that notification, Novick initiated a Federal Civil Rights suit against SIU to allow him back into school. Novick was represented by the Chicago office of the American Civil Liberties Union.

That suit was settled out of court last Saturday when the University agreed to allow Novick to re-enter school Fall Quarter in a status of "special probation," the terms of which are being withheld by a mutual agreement between Novick and SIU legal counsel, C. Richard Gruney.

In addition, the University said it will ask "local officials," presumably Richman, to drop the criminal trespass charges still standing against Novick. The charges against Novick could still be prosecuted despite the University request.

Novick described the terms of the settlement as "entirely satisfactory" because he said all the redress which the court suit asked was granted by the University. He said the special probationary conditions are outside the normal jurisdiction of the courts and, under present laws, still are the prerogatives of SIU. He noted that his special probationary status is neither academic nor disciplinary but that it will last for an indefinite period.

"The conditions of the settlement will not abridge my First Amendment freedoms in any way," Novick said.

He described the settlement as "an indication of their (the SIU administration) willingness to adapt to the needed changes within the University structure."

Novick said he would never have been allowed back into school without the help of the ACLU, numerous students, faculty members and even administrators. "I'd like to thank them all," he said.

Concerning students' rights, Novick stated that "students should not be placed in separate categories from the rest of society. Students should live under the same laws and enjoy the same rights as everyone else, and vice versa. If students have to live in dormitories, everybody should have to live in dormitories."

When asked about the possibility of future student protests and demonstrations at SIU, Novick said: "This year there won't need to be any last resort tactics by students because Chancellor Mac Viccar's new administration will be acting quickly and favorably to suggestions for improvement."

Novick said that representatives from the ACLU told him that the suit was a great success because it educated University officials here about what they can and cannot do to students in the future. He said the ACLU will continue to maintain a strong interest in SIU and its policies towards students.

Novick seemed very happy and talkative as he discussed his ordeal with other students in the University Center Wednesday, which also happened to be his 24th birthday. Many students and faculty members congratulated him on his "victory."

When asked why he initiated the case, Novick said he did it "because some of my basic rights had been violated by the University." He noted that he was glad to be able to return to the campus because the University "has some excellent resources in its faculty and library."

"Besides that," he added humorously, "the snackbar in the Center makes the best chocolate cokes in the world."

Novick could be correct about the cokes. He has traveled extensively with his father, a former colonel in the U.S. Army. His father recently retired from the service to become director of the SIU Transportation Service.

"Travel was the most important thing in developing my life," Novick confided. "I think my basic attitudes towards other ideas and cultures are very flexible, while most persons in our society tend to have very rigid attitudes towards these things."

Novick explained that since he was always traveling around the world, he never really felt he belonged to any one community or religion. "I've always been an outsider looking in," he said.

Novick came to SIU last fall after having gone to Stanford University for three years. He said he completed a history major there, but left because "it was too expensive, and my family settled in Carbondale; so it was a natural place to come."

Novick is engaged to Kathi Hale, 21, a junior from Charleston. They are planning to be married September 22. In addition, Novick is planning a new magazine using an unusual format. He described it as a "poster magazine," which would not be bound but the pages will be rolled up like a collection of posters. He said this approach is an attempt to bridge what Marshall McLuhan has described as the gap between "cool" and "hot" media.

Cards' Schofield 'Jack of All Trades'

By Chuck Wanning
Copley News Service

CHICAGO—Dick Schofield came skipping out of the Cardinals' dugout, hopping on first one foot and then the other, a grin plastered from ear to ear. When he got near the batting cage, he took one last leap and landing next to home plate in a bizarre contortion of a batting stance.

"I'm going to ride this pitch out of here," he promised coach Dick Sisler, the batting practice pitcher. Sisler didn't seem awed, perhaps in view of Schofield's 17 homers in 16 major league seasons. "Yes sir, I'm really going to jump on this next one and hit it out of sight," said Schofield again. Sisler pitched. Schofield swung. The ball took off like a rocket, reaching high into the sky where the Wrigley Field jet stream could get hold of it.

The ball dropped just behind the infield.

"I'll get the next one out," warned Schofield, skipping out of the cage, where he immediately started to jibe his Cardinal teammates.

Although this is Schofield's 16th season and his sixth major league team, the versatile utility man is only 33 years old.

"Boy, I hope I've got a lot more years left," he said in an interview. "I feel real good, and think that I am making a contribution here."

When the Cardinals clinch the pennant this year, it will make the third pennant winner for Schofield. "But we haven't won it yet," he said. "We've got to win the games, because they aren't going to hand it to us."

Schofield has always been a clutch performer.

In 1960, when he was a member of the Pittsburgh Pirates, Schofield subbed for the ailing Dick Groat most of the month of September. He hit .333 in 65 games that year, and the Pirates captured the National League flag and the World Series.

In 1966, Schofield went to the Los Angeles Dodgers in September, and his clutch hitting helped the Dodgers to the pennant. Since he joined the club after the September 1 deadline, Schofield was not eligible to play in the series that year.

He'll play this year. He has been valuable to the Cardinals all year long, filling in at second base and shortstop, pinch-hitting, pinch-running and hustling all the way.

"I don't know if I'll be protected or not," he said, referring to the upcoming expansion draft. "You know, you hear so much talk that you don't really know what to think."

Schofield said he didn't think he would be protected on the first round, but that he could be after that. "I don't know if the expansion clubs would want me or not," he said. "I certainly would prefer to stay in St. Louis," he continued. "I like it there. It's close to home, and it's better for my family. I guess it's better all the way around."

The 5-9, 165-pound Cardinal darted away from the interview and into the batting cage. When you're not a regular, whose swings in the cage are a luxury. When he came out, he picked up the interview as if it had never been interrupted.

"I would rather be here doing what I am than playing regularly for some expansion club," he said. The dollar signs sparkled in his blue eyes, and he finally admitted that the coming World Series check was one of the main reasons.

"There's a pretty good chance of some extra money if I can stick with this club," he said.

Schofield looked out at his teammates scattered all over the field. Pitcher Bob Gibson was at third base, fielding grounders between his legs.

Seniors to Spark 1968 Gridiron Team

By Dave Palermo

The return of 25 lettermen, 10 of them seniors, form the nucleus for the 1968 football squad. While any definite lineup predictions for the season are speculative, Head Coach Dick Towers is expecting a lot from his last-year men.

"We're counting heavily on the seniors to provide team leadership," said Towers. "They've got to assume it, because our sophomores can't."

Towers' main concern when training begins Aug. 30 will be the building of an offensive line. The graduation of Isaac Brigham and Ralph Galoway, who both joined the professional ranks, considerably weakened the right side of the interior offensive line.

Two seniors who may be counted on to solve the offensive line woes are Bob Hudspeth and Carl Mauck. Hudspeth, who was touted by the coaching staff as a possible All-American last season, was waylaid by injuries after the first three games. Fast for his 6-4, 270-pound frame, Hudspeth is a bright spot in an otherwise weak area.

Mauck, the blue ribbon player on the team, is normally a linebacker but he could be finding himself playing both ways this season. Towers hinted that he might see some action at offensive tackle.

The offensive center spot is secure with junior Jim Malone and senior letterman Mike Barry expecting to share the duties.

Other seniors expected to bolster the team's chances this season are Roger Kuba, Tom Wirth, John Quillen and Doug Hollinger.

Kuba, Wirth and Quillen combined to give the Salukis a formidable and experienced offensive backfield.

Built like a fireplug at 6-0, 205 pounds, Kuba excels as a blocker but has proven he can also run with the ball. He gained 191 yards via the ground route last season in 69 attempts. Kuba will play wing back.

Wirth, small for a fullback at 6-1, 190 pounds, started at the position last season before being sidelined with an arm injury. Before the injury Wirth carried the ball 23 times for 93 yards and a 3.9 average.

Quillen, the runningback, came on strong against Tulsa last year and finished the season with 114 net yards on the ground in 36 carries for a 3.2 average.

Last but not least among the promising seniors is Doug Hollinger. He played all the backfield positions last season and is being shifted to split end in Southern's new pro-style offense.

Last season Hollinger was one of the leading punt and kickoff return specialists in the country with a 14.9 average for punt returns and 22.0 for kickoff returns.

Hollinger, who stands 5-10 and weighs 160 pounds, has good speed and hands. Chances are he will also see duty as a defensive safety. Before coming to SIU he was the outstanding Junior College Back of the Year at Nebraska Junior College.

Rounding out the seniors are

Bill Patrick, Ronald Morse and Dale Dickhut.

Patrick and Dickhut will work out at the guard spots with Morse probably seeing action at the fullback slot behind Wirth and newcomer Wilbur Lanier.

Paula Smith Meets Best In St. Louis Tourney

SIU woman golfer Paula Smith mixed with some of the best women professional golfers last weekend when she was invited to participate in the St. Louis Women's Open.

In first round play on Friday, Paula was matched with Carol Mann, this year's highest money winner in the LPGA and Susie Maxwell Berning, winner of this year's U.S. Open.

"It was quite an experience," Paula said. "I learned a lot from watching them. They are quite some people. It was a lot of fun."

Against the two professionals, Paula scored an 82 compared with 69 for Miss Mann and a 75 for Mrs. Berning.

"On the 15th hole I scored a four and they both scored a five," Paula said. "So it was my honor to tee off for the 16th hole. Through habit, Miss Mann began to get ready to tee off and then she remembered very graciously that it was my honor."

In second and third round play of the tournament, Paula scored a 78 and an 84 for a total of 244. She was ranked fourth out of the five amateurs playing in the tournament.

Miss Mann, who led the tournament for one day, placed second in the final standings with a 69-70-73 for a 212 total. Mrs. Berning placed 26th with a 75-74-75 for a 224 total.

"This summer I have been averaging in the high 70's," Paula said. "I really feel bad when I get scores in the 80's. I didn't do as well as I thought I could have done in the tournament, but it was an honor to be invited to play with all of the professionals."

Paula, who received her bachelor's degree in elementary education in June, plans to attend the University of Illinois in Champaign this fall to continue her education.

Philadelphia Tops St. Louis Cards

PHILADELPHIA (AP) —Richie Allen smashed two homers to back Chris Short's pitching as Philadelphia upended St. Louis' National League leaders 7-3 Thursday night.

Allen's first homer, with none on to left center in the third, helped the Phils to a 4-2 lead. He hit his 27th homer of the season in the ninth after Roberto Pena singled.

Don Lock singled in a run for the Phils in the first. They added two more in the second on Cookie Rojas' sacrifice fly and a throwing error by Ron Davis. Rojas singled in another in the ninth.
