Jury selection to begin for Berger murder trial

By Diana Penner

Staff Writer

Registration for the trial of Joyce Berger, who has been charged with the murder of her former husband, began at 9 a.m. Monday in Jackson County Court. House.

Mrs. Berger, 27, of Charleston, a former housewife, was released on Aug. 20, 1978, after being charged with the murder of her husband, Gary Berger, in Jackson County. The trial was scheduled for Aug. 1 and was reset until later in the year.

Two of Dunn's children and three of Berger's children were reportedly present in the house on the day of the shooting. The incident was reported to have been preceded by an argument apparently between Mr. and Mrs. Berger.

The Bergers had been separated for some time and were on short notice before the shooting.

The shooting occurred at the time of his death and a Murphysboro native, joined the police force in 1979.

Shortly after the initial court appearance, Judge Judge Edward Richman issued a written order that the case be handled by the police chief of Murphysboro.

Horton 'likely' for Wis.—Milwaukee chancellor post

By Paula Dunner Walter

Frank Horton, SIU-C vice president for academic affairs and provost since 1975, is reported to be one of five candidates being considered for the most likely choice for the position of chancellor at the University of Wisconsin at Milwaukee.

According to a report in the Milwaukee Sentinel, Horton is a finalist for the chancellorship. The final selection process for the chancellorship will be conducted by the Wisconsin Board of Regents.

However, millions of that university's Chancellor Search and Screen Committee, including chairman John Bobby, have refused to comment on the selection process or the identity of the finalists.

The Journal story reported that UW-M faculty believe a secret list of three names has been submitted to University of Wisconsin System President Robert O'Neil and a committee of the system regents. A former system head had originally requested that a list of five candidates be submitted in the final stage of the process, the article said.

Horton was in the Feb. 19 issue of the Milwaukee Sentinel reported Horton to be "the most likely choice, according to one source familiar with the selection process. He said Horton has the broadest range of administrative experience."

The article also said sources report that Horton and another finalist were on the secret list of three candidates submitted to O'Neil and that the new chancellor could be named by March 7.

The four other candidates reported in the two newspapers as being considered for the chancellor position are: Louis Stanosz, director of the Center for Urban Affairs at Northwestern University; Cullen Bull, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences at the University of Wisconsin; Allan Clark, dean of the School of Science and Arts at Purdue University; Robert Green, dean of the College of Urban Development at Michigan State University.

UMW, which has an enrollment of about 20,000 students, has been without a chancellor since last spring when Werner Baur resigned, said Dick Tech, a newspaper editor for the UWM Post. Tech said an economics professor, Leon Schur, has been serving as acting chancellor.

About 125 applications were received for the position and the search process has been "extremely secretive," Tech said. No names are released until the final selection has been made, he added.

Horton declined to comment on the matter.

City Council to discuss fate of groups

By Mary Ann McVatly

Staff Writer

City council members Monday are scheduled to discuss whether to maintain all of the city's 81 boards and commissions or to abolish some of the citizen input groups under the "sunset law."

After spending several months reviewing the various advisory groups, the citizens Advisory Commission is scheduled to recommend that the city Council vote out only one of the groups, the Industrial Building Commission, according to Thomas Leming, a member of the commission.

In January, City Manager George J. Fry, Finance Director Paul Sargent and City Clerk Janet Vaugh reviewed the 27 city boards and committees and recommended abolishing six of them. The council requested that all citizen boards be reviewed. The request for a report of the fiscal year 1989-90.

The council is scheduled to decide on the matter at the March 3 formal meeting. When Illinois passed the "sunset law," any board or commission established by a government body that has not been reconstituted after the law becomes inactive. The commission was originally created to manage public buildings built for an indeterminate purpose. However, the commission was never implemented and those functions were performed by the administration and Carbondale Industrial Corp. according to a memo written by Fry.

Leming, a civil engineer of the CAB, said his committee sent questionnaires to all community members in the city to find out what the members thought of the group. He said the members thought this would be an effective way of reviewing the other groups.

Leming said the survey asked members how active the commission or board was, whether it performed a service and whether members thought their recommendations were being followed by council members.

"We wanted to find out how people who are giving citizen input feel about that input," Leming said.

Although not all members returned the forms, Leming said overall, commission and board members were pretty happy with the actions the council took.

"Most thought that the council went out of the way to implement their recommendations or suggestions," Leming said of the members' responses.

Leming said that most of the groups also considered their tasks as important to government.

But during the LAC meeting, many of the members questioned the value of the surveys, as well as the review process.

Council members are also scheduled to consider:

- A request from Ira Parrish to rezone 81 acres of land off of Chautauqua Street and Tower Road. Parrish has attempted to get the land rezoned to develop 206 moderately-priced housing units for single or two-family occupancy since July.

- A public hearing on community development needs in the city.

- A presentation from the Illinois Municipal League on its Risk Management Association, an insurance policy the city is considering.

- A presentation by four underwriting firms interested in handling the "Carbondale Plan," a proposal to release $22 million in mortgage revenue bonds.

Man arrested for shotgun threat

By Leonie Waxman
Staff Writer
A manager of Circle Park Apartments in Carbondale allegedly threatened a female resident there with a shotgun late Sunday morning after a bathroom fan in the woman's apartment had apparently infuriated the man, the resident said.

Linda A. Couch, who lives in Apt. 2 of the complex located at 118 E. Walnut, said she was threatened at about 11 a.m. by George Thomas, Leroy at her apartment door after she heard Leroy bang on the floor of his apartment to tell her to turn off the bathroom fan. Leroy, 27, is a manager for the complex and lives in the apartment above Couch's.

"The fan in the bathroom bothers him. I shouldn't have opened the door. As soon as I saw the gun I slammed the door," Couch said.

When police arrived Leroy had locked himself in his apartment. Leroy told police that it didn't "go away" he was going to "do something," Carbondale Police Sergeant William Holmes said.

Police attempted to reason with Leroy through the locked door for about 10 minutes but he would not come out, Holmes said.

"We knew that he meant business. We heard a shotgun bolt slide forward. We tried calling him on the phone but he wouldn't answer," Holmes said.

Police contacted the owners of the complex in an attempt to get Leroy to come out of his apartment. When the owners arrived, they paged Leroy over an intercom system.

Leroy was arrested when he left his apartment to answer the page. He was charged with aggravated assault, obstruction of justice and possession of a firearm with no owners identification card, Holmes said.

Couch told police she would sign a complaint against Leroy.

Wallace campaigns by 'really' working

By Jeffrey Smyth
Staff Writer

Most politicians begin working after they have been elected to office. But Bob Wallace, candidate for the Democratic nomination for U.S. Senator from Illinois, has been working for people as part of his campaign.

Wallace said he tries to work different jobs each week in an attempt to get people to "open up" to him. Said that he was inspired to campaign this way after reading Studs Terkel's book "Working." Last Friday, Wallace spent the day working at the University Cleaners at 717 S. Illinois Ave. He has also worked as a busboy, a gas station attendant and a pizza maker.

"I found that campaigning is a one-way street," Wallace said. "I would shake people's hands, but they wouldn't really respond to me. By working, people start to talk with me on a more personal level. This is the 12th job that I have had."

Wallace has a background in economics. He was an assistant secretary of the treasury for the Kennedy and Johnson administrations. He has also served as president of a Chicago bank. He said that his primary concern is with rising inflation.

I am emphasizing economic stability," he said. "Wallace, who served as assistant secretary of the treasury in the Kennedy and Johnson administrations, said. "The main reason I'm running is because inflation is out of hand. I think that we have to have a balanced budget if we are going to beat inflation."

Wallace said that a balanced budget would mean cutting back unnecessary spending. He criticized the federal revenue sharing program, saying that it is wasting taxpayers' money. He has spent $1 billion in revenue sharing, he said. "A lot of the money is sent to local governments and these governments have no plans to use it. I would reduce this sharing by 10 percent. I would also like to see revenue sharing replaced with grants that would be used for specific purposes."

Another program that Wallace is critical of is the Comprehensive Employment Training Act. He said that he would shake people's hands, but rather it is creating work in unskilled areas.

Of the $9.5 billion spent on CEITA, half of that money goes to the creation of public service jobs, but it doesn't provide for skilled jobs," he said. "The other half of the money used goes to training for skilled jobs but it only allows for 18 months of training. It is not enough training for some jobs. Wallace is opposed to the drafting of either men or women calling it it's a tool only to be used in the event of war. He said that he would not agree to the drafting of women unless the Equal Rights Amendment is passed.

"I have been around," Wallace said that he favors the use of coal. He said money should be spent on pollution control equipment. He said that money should go to training for skilled jobs, but rather it is going to training for skilled jobs. It is not training people for skilled jobs. But Bob Wallace is opposed to the Equal Energy Act. He favors the use of coal. He said that money should be spent on pollution control equipment. Federal project to provide weatherproofing assistance

By Mary Harmon

Rising utility costs, even tightening budgets and poorly insulated homes do not need to leave anyone out in the cold if he can qualify for the Jackson County Action to Save Energy Project.

Carbondale is the first of 18 communities to participate in the federally-funded, nationwide project, Hugh Muldoon of the Shawnee Solar Project said.

They will attempt to improve weatherproof some 2,000 homes of low and moderate-income Jackson County residents, he said.

Though funded by the federal departments of Energy and Housing and Urban Development, the 10-week project is scheduled to begin in March or April, depends on city support and "a good number of volunteers," Muldoon said.

The City Council passed a resolution offering its support Monday night. The project will operate in conjunction with other community organizations.

People who are qualified to participate in the program will do most of their own weatherproofing, Muldoon said. Skilled volunteers will help the elderly or those who are unable to do the work.

Commission will consider ruling in Menard review

By Diana Penner

Staff Writer

The final report of a national prison accreditation commission regarding the Menard Correctional facility will take into consideration a recent court order mandating the appointment of a "master" to oversee the upgrading of medical services at the prison, according to a representative of the commission.

U.S. District Judge James L. Franklin Tuesday ordered a virtual judicial takeover of the facility, citing inadequate medical services and facilities as the cause of the deaths of five inmates between 1974 and 1977. This is the first time that such an order has been issued in Illinois.

The Menard facility was first inspected by the Commission on Accreditation for Corrections in June 1979 and was not recommended for accreditation at that time, according to Sharon Johnson, assistant director of the commission.

Johnson said Friday that when the facility was again inspected in January 1980, the management of Menard was told by the inspection team that the facility would be recommended for accreditation. Johnson said that the second inspection was at the request of the institution substantially improved after the second inspection.

Johnson said both commissioner inspections, the court order, and a self-inspection of the facility will be taken into consideration at the commission.

Excluded candidates denounce Bush

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — After a debate that almost didn’t happen, the Republicans who weren’t allowed to take part spent the last hours before the New Hampshire primary denouncing George Bush.

Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas, one of the seven Republicans on Tuesday’s ballot, fueled the controversy Sunday, declaring that Bush “treated us like dirt under his feet.” Sen. Howard Baker of Tennessee called it the “rarest political act I’ve ever seen... exclusionary politics... bad judgement... inexcusable... a lockout.”

“I was the heavy,” Baker said on NBC’s “Meet the Press.” “And Rep. John Anderson of Illinois, one of the frustrated four, said Bush “shot himself in the leg.” Ronald Reagan, who finally got the face-to-face debate with Bush that he asked for and paid for, called the event “kind of a farce.”

U.N. panel meets with Bani-Sadr

By the Associated Press

The U.N. commission to Tehran to investigate the deposed shah’s regime met Sunday with Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr in talks described as “extremely constructive,” but several high-level Iranian officials insisted the panel’s work was not tied to the release of the American hostages.

Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh said, “The release of the hostages is neither the task of the commission nor their program.”

Mansour Farhang, Iranian ambassador to the United Nations, said in a broadcast interview in New York, “There was no linkage between the formation of the commission and release of the hostages.”

Bush took no immediate action.

Union forces in Chicago passed for some political reconstituting within their union after William Lee, the president of the Chicago Federation of Labor, apparently shut the door on the fire union when he suddenly cancelled a meeting he had promised to union negotiators.

WASHINGTON—The day the United Nations announced the commission of inquiry, the wire press carried an interesting photograph from Iran. A shopkeeper "accused" of "profiteering" was straddling a small horse. One of his shoulders on the pavement, while some dispersers of "revolutionary journalistic" tactics lashed his feet. If the commission has some spare time, it will want to inquire about jurisprudence and penology in Baghdad.

It is, the U.N. stresses, a "commission of inquiry," not "trial." It is concerned with "findings," not "judgments." But Americans should not take comfort from such scholasticisms. The day's events were not without reward terrorists. Now it is negotiating the release of the hostages in return for the abandoning the sanctions it made such a show of wanting. Thus, it is paying political ransom to political kidnappers.

The forming of the commission may be the only difference. "We may have nothing right nothing," a Washington Post headline of Feb. 19. But remember Stalin, as described by such American diplomats as Cordell Hull ("Stalin is a 'great' man. He himself is our U.S. Senate") and Averell Harriman (Stalin is "a strong man, we want a man who could run this country, like Mayor Hague"), I am not suggesting that Bani-Sadr is a Stalin. I am suggesting that America's proclivity for whimsical thinking should be reserved when "moderation" is ascribed to Iran's new pres'dent, who says of Iran's "terrorists," "They are brothers and we love them."

It is periodically said that the United States must conclude with Iran a treaty. Surely in Germany, with its Kremlin hawks devour Kremlin doves. Now it is said the United States must make concessions to Iran's Bani-Sadr, "a sound" in dealing with "extremists." Already the United States has retreated from its pledge that it would not even discuss an investigatory commission until the hostages were released. In November, Bani-Sadr for an investigation, but President Carter said "only after the hostages are released will we be willing to address Iran's concerns." Next, the United States retreated from the position that the hostages would have to be released before the commissions begin. What good has the treating done? As recently as last weekend, Bani-Sadr endorsed the hostage seizure. He said it was deplorable from "humanitarian" and "legal" standpoints, but not from the "political point of view" and that "the political aspect of the problem is predominant." This is written, Bear-Shank's demand that the hostages be held until the commission completes its work and the United States concludes "that a commission is an appropriate vehicle for resolving the hostage crisis."

To start at the top, the first four movies listed in the article did not come from the jointing you by WSIU and WJSI and no one else. Next in line was "Son of Frankenstein." "Son of Frankenstein" was shown on "First Word". The reviewer was "Ghost of Frankenstein" which was to be "something of a loser." The reviewer obviously has not seen the movie. While Lon Chaney, Jr. does play a monster, Bela Lugosi forms the nucleus of the show with his portrayal of Igor. There are those who would say that the movie is the best place for a writer who wrote what was written about Orson Welles by a "political standpoints" but not from the "political point of view" and that "the political aspect of the problem is predominant." This is written by Bear-Shank's demand that the hostages be held until the commission completes its work and the United States concludes "that a commission is an appropriate vehicle for resolving the hostage crisis."

As a nine-year reader of the Daily Egyptian, I have seen editors come and go while the quality varies from year to year. One thing editors in the college pages of movie and play reviews. That has been before the first two weeks ago, before the importance of the Hollywood Russians sending them underneath their beds.

It is plain to see that the first demonstration the controversy was, it's said to say, a "triumph." It is a "triumph" reinforced by memories of "Go home, Averell Harriman" signs that have been seen across campus. These students missed the real cruze of the situation when they revered to bigotry that was in itself a "triumph." They were once students who wanted "Kill the camel!" who said "I'm going to demonstrate, sing "America the Beautiful.""

In the case of the demonstration against the draft, the students are merely being to be freely. Unfortunately freedom comes with a rather high price. A peace-time draft, can be easily be criticized as a depriving of Constitutional Rights or evil as slavery, but a war-time draft is a capital punishment in an attempt to protect itself.

I propose that in the future students of this University, as they did with "son of Frankenstein," think more carefully before they take action. They should ask themselves: "What exactly am I my ideals and opinion on this matter," and then ask themselves: "Is this action going to support my ideals and opinions or those of someone else?"

When these two questions are answered then the individual is ready to use his constitutional right of freedom. The democratic right is your most valuable democratic right. A non-witness to this process is to Steven G. Rassens, Freshman, Geology.

Letters

Think before taking action

Students at this institution seem to support any sort of idea that will provide them with their own personal needs and desires. The day after they come in campus is the time when they start to question authority. The anti-draft demonstrations tend to breed hypocrisy as was the case with the anti-war demonstrations. Some of the same students who paint murals on the side of a building and say "War is murder!" today were yelling "Wake em!" and "Blood's thicker than hair!" a few weeks ago, before the importance of the Hollywood Russians sending them underneath their beds.

Hypocrisy is never to stand at either the extreme left or right. This way one's views are not limited as to be termed bigoted. A rational and non-bigoted student would not have participated in either demonstration, though it is easy to see that their protests are being reinforced by memories of "Go home, Averell Harriman" signs that have been seen across campus. These students missed the real cruze of the situation when they revered to bigotry that was in itself a "triumph." They were once students who wanted "Kill the camel!" who said "I'm going to demonstrate, sing "America the Beautiful.""

Frey review, headline miss point

The reviewer of the lecture by Dr. Peter Frey (Feb. 12 DE) missed his most important points and the headline writer to came to a conclusion quite different from the reviewer's.

In his opinion Dr. Frey's most telling points were student ratings of teacher effectiveness and his notion of an association between an intimation that mathematics and music and his or her teaching effectiveness. Not only was considerable, these conclusions are qualified. The first was based on findings of insti­ tutions' organization and presentation skills by students in calculus classes and the second on a study of full professors at Northwestern University.

The challenge to the traditional view that creativity is really not whether we can measure creativity is, but whether we are willing to devote the resources necessary to measure creativity. And it may be measured. In light of the range of constructs which the research of our faculty is presently being generated, it may maintain otherwise is either c- or egregious. Firefighter applicants seek job for its good pay

By Leanne Waxman
Staff Writer

Some little boys may want to be firemen because they are attracted by the shiny red firemen’s helmets or the excitement of battling big flames. However, the consensus of 35 people who took the city’s written test this month, which is the first in a four step hiring process for firefighters in Carbondale, was that they had unaltering aspirations to battle flames but rather that they heard fire fighters are paid well in the city or that they simply needed a job.

When asked why fight fires? Why risk your life? one applicant just smiled and said, “I need a job. And besides, the money is right for one out of three days work.”

Carbondale fire fighters work 24 hours and then have the next two days off. A score of 75 percent was necessary for an applicant to pass the exam and move on to the next step, which is an oral interview conducted by the three-member Carbondale Board of Fire and Police Commission. Nine of the 35 applicants passed the exam compared to three of 18 applicants who passed the exam when it was given in October. “We’re real pleased with the applicants. It’s not a hard test; it just takes a little thinking,” Carbondale Fire Chief Joe McCaughan said.

After I located my pencil from underneath a pile of instruction sheets, various sized envelopes, and after filling out a biographical data card asking if I minded being referred to as a white male caucasian, I broke the little white seal on my exam and began the exam, which I told I would have two hours to complete.

The content of the 84-question exam is kept confidential. The exam is a general knowledge aptitude exam. It covers everything from fire extinguishers to the mechanics of a pumper truck. Some of the questions were unnecessarily wordy and lengthy. Other questions were accompanied by diagrams and sketches that were amateurishly designed and executed on paper.

The exam is usually given once every 12 months but since only one of the three applicants who passed the written exam in October showed up for the oral interview—and flunked—the city was forced to give the exam again because they did not have any applicants from which to establish a hiring list. McCaughan said.

Carbondale fire fighters must establish eligibility once every year. The eligibility determination requirements were changed from two years by the Carbondale City Council last year, Carbondale City Clerk Janet Vaught explained.

The eligibility list was

going low. We wanted people who scored in the 90s and we were getting people who scored in the 80s," Vaughn said.

Serry, Janet, the highest score for the written exam was an 86.90 percent. The lowest score was 28 percent.

According to the city's equal opportunity officers, five black men and two white women, took the exam. No black woman filled out the general information application to take the exam.

Ann Ducey, who is a recent SIUC graduate in elementary education, scored a 72 percent on the written exam.

"I really wanted to be a fire fighter. It seems interesting, exciting and challenging. I like that kind of work. Since there are no women fire fighters in Carbondale I thought it would be nice to try for," Ducey said.

The city employs 23 fire fighters and eight fire department officers. McCaughan said.

The nine applicants that passed the written exam are competing for one job opening, one that has been vacant since August when fire fighter William Youngblood, who was off duty at the time, crossed a medium on Route 13 near Carterville and hit an oncoming car, according to McCaughan. Youngblood died in the accident.

The board of commissioners usually discusses who will conduct the oral interview. A primary reason the oral interview is conducted is to "find out what kind of a person" an applicant is, McCaughan said. Once an applicant passes the oral exam, which usually lasts between 20 and 30 minutes, an applicant will be assigned a rating on a 100-point scale that is added to an applicant's written exam score. The composite score is an applicant's eligibility rating and is placed on a hiring list, board chairman Harvey Welch said. The board interviews applicants on an individual basis.

From the hiring list the board recommends three applicants for every job opening to Carbondale City Manager Carroll Fry, Welch said. Although Fry, who is responsible for the hiring and firing of all city employees, usually discusses fire department applicants with McCaughan, by law he does not have to include the fire chief in the hiring process. McCaughan said.

The city employs one black fire department officer and one black fire fighter. The city does not employ any women fire fighters or fire department officers, E00 Cleveland Matthews said.

After an applicant in interviewed by the board, and after the board makes its recommendations to Fry, an applicant is required to take a physical agility exam. An applicant who has gone this far in the hiring process, which usually takes about one month, is required to perform deep knee bends, chin-ups and push-ups to determine if he or she is physically fit to meet the requirements of the job, McCaughan said.

Starting salary for a fire fighter in Carbondale is $14,318. The highest paid fire fighter in the city makes $16,836.

The University Theater's production of William Wycherley's "The Country Wife" was an effective sex comedy highlighted by fine performances, but somewhat marred by the script's Old English dialect.

Directed by Christian Joe, the play was about a sophisticated casanova. Horner (played by Paul Meier), who attempted to seduce the wives of suspicious husbands. With the help of a quack doctor, Horner spread a rumor that he was impotent so that the men would trust him alone with their wives.

The play was set in 17th Century London during the period of the Restoration. The attempts to mirror the actions, manners and speech of the time were, for the most part, successful. However, when the play began, the Old English language was difficult to understand. Because Horner outlined his plan during the opening scene, it was important for the audience to comprehend what he was saying. Several audience members expressed confusion because they didn't grasp those opening lines.

The problem was not with Meier's accent—he is a professional actor from England—but rather with the lines themselves. Words such as "cuckold" may have confused theatergoers who are not well-versed in Shakespearean English.

Nader: Test service claims 'a specialized kind of fraud'

By Andrew Zinner
Staff Writer

The Educational Testing Service, as the Scholastic Aptitude Test, the Graduate Record Exam and the Law School Admissions Test, was criticized in a recent report by Nader who charged that ETS's claims of measuring aptitude and predicting success can be described as "a specialized kind of fraud." The report said claims made by ETS about the tests were "false and unsubstantiated." Another charge leveled at the largest producer of standardized tests used in colleges and universities is that the tests are biased against minority and low-income students, thereby excluding disproportionate numbers of those students from chances to advance in education.

But according to Philip Harvey, ETS director of ad

No. 12 Missouri stumps wrestlers

By Dave Kane
Staff Writer

Washington.

The Big Ten basketball race was reduced to three teams with Ohio State and Indiana tied for the lead and Purdue a game behind. But if all goes to form, Coach Bobby Knight and his Indiana Hoosiers should capture the undisputed title.

Ohio State plays its final two games at Purdue Thursday night and at Indiana next Sunday afternoon. For the record, neither Indiana nor Purdue has lost a Big Ten game at home this season.

Ohio State must win both games for an undisputed title. Purdue can only hope for a share of the title and that can come about if the Boilermakers defeat Iowa and Michigan. Iowa and Michigan State have Ohio State win at Indiana Sunday.

Indiana hosts Wisconsin Thursday night before taking on Ohio State the following weekend. All three teams were victorious Saturday with Ohio State defeating Iowa 89-49 on a basket by Herb Williams with seconds left. Indiana squandered a 17-point lead at Michigan but had enough to capture a 63-61 victory and Purdue scored a 72-69 triumph at Illinois.

Wisconsin knocked Minnesota 70-69 at the race 70-62 and Northwestern had to go through three overtime periods for a 72-73 triumph at Michigan State.

Northwestern's first Big Ten victory over Iowa, a 70-69 win, coupled with the triumphs noted by Indiana and Purdue helped visiting team the Hoosiers.

"The matches at 119 pounds, 156, and 167 all were close," Long said. "But Jack and Jack were too good." Long felt the Tigers were only the second-best team they had battled this season. Hatch. Oregon State squandered a 17-point lead at Michigan State it has rated 12th in the nation, it makes it even easier.

Last Thursday night, the University of Missouri wrestlers, now 13-3, defeated SIU, 44-0. Chalk one up for standard rating procedures. It was the final dual meet of the season for the Salukis, who closed with a 4-10 mark. The NCAA Western Regional awards were given at Missouri this Friday and Saturday in Las Vegas.

Despite the magnitude of the final score at Missouri, Long felt the Tigers were only the second-best team the Salukis had battled this season. Oklahoma State, another Big Eight Conference powerhouse, got Long's vote as SIU's toughest opponent this year. The Cowboys defeated SIU earlier this season at the Arena.

At Missouri, it was hard to find many bright spots for the Salukis, but Long felt several matches could have gone either way.

Lady gymnast to be honored

By Rick Klaft / Staff Writer

Monday night will be "Mommy's Night" at the arena as the Lady Saluki gymnasts host the University of Illinois-Chicago Circle in their final home dual meet of the season. Opening time is 7:30 p.m.

The night is in honor of senior team captain Maureen Hennessy. The Essex Junction, Vt., native transferred to SIU midway through her sophomore year at Connecticut and has become, according to Coach Herb Vogel, "one of the most beloved gymnasts to ever wear the Maroon-and-white.

Trev had 8.3 and 8.5 marks in the vaulting and floor. "It was important for those two to do well," Vogel said. "Pam Conklin cannot score as high as Val does in the all-around, so if we can get the good scores from the specialists, it will limit the loss of Pantoia dramatically."

Blue Demons win 25th game in row; Aguierre hits 41

By The Associated Press

Aguierre scored nine of his career-high 41 points in a two-minute span late in the second half, leading DePaul over Loyola, 94-87. Aguierre's total came within two points of the Alumni Hall mark of 43 set by DePaul's Howie Carl in 1968.

Mark Radford and Ray Blume each scored 23 points in Oregon State's rout of Stanford. The game was a sharp contrast to the Beavers' blowout 18-16 victory over the Cardinals at P&J Alto earlier this season.

North Carolina routed Duke with a balanced attack that included 18 points by Mike O'Koren and by John Virgil.

Greg Manning and Ernest Graham scored 13 points apiece in the second half, breaking open a tight game and leading Maryland past Virginia.

Herb Williams' basket with eight seconds left led Ohio State past Iowa. The Buckeyes survived a second-half goal attempt by the Hawkeyes' Kenny Arnold. Billy Williams scored 12 points as Clemson defeated UNC-Asheville in the Tigers' lowest-scoring game in 10 seasons. John Sundvold's 13 points paced Missouri over Kansas State.

Joe Barry Carroll collected a game-high 28 points, leading Purdue past Illinois. Carroll scored 13 points in the second half, when the Boilermakers pulled away.

Missouri defeats lady cagers in final regular season contest

By Rick Seymour
Staff Writer

Trying to end its regular season on a victory, the Saluki women's basketball team took the trip out of the University of Iowa on Friday night in the hopes of giving themselves a conference record of 7-3.

Before Saidi Sugiki's game, the Salukis had 7-3-1 at the arena in front of an enthusiastic crowd.

With six seconds showing on the clock and the Salukis leading 32-30, Missouri attempted to inbound the ball against tough Saluki pressure. The ball was hit to guard Joann Hurlington and she was forced to inbound the ball to tie the game.

As the Saluki attempt to inbound their own play with only one second left, Joann Hurlington and with Vicki Salkos were hung up on a couple of players. The ball shot hit the side of the backboard as the buzzer sounded.

The Salukis then had a 1-3 record to take into the Iowa State Tournament. The Salukis have a 58-53 loss, but in 1979, SIU rebounded to a 62-60 win.

The Salukis had one game left to play in the 1979 season.

Despite the slow start by both teams, the offense came together as the first half progressed. SIU managed to stay with the Tigers through the first 20 minutes.

Mary Boyer, who played well against Missouri, laid the right hand, laid in a soft basket from the baseline to tie the game at 32-32 with 3:41 left to play in the first half. It was the first half point ever possible with a well-timed pass.

Missouri then put a smaller team in the game with the Tigers a 40-34 halftime lead. The Salukis then rallied back to try and terrorize the Salukis from all over the court.

The Salukis then knocked out points in the first half. For the game, Saluki fans were loaded into the gym.

The second half did not look good for the Salukis as the Tigers, they lost lead point with less than six minutes to play. But SIU managed to pull back and grab the Michigan of its score. It is easy to see why the U.S. won in a three-point loss within three points with less than a minute to play, setting up St. Louis to save the Salukis from a win.

"I thought we played a very good game," Smith said about the second half. "I don't disapprove with the loss at all, we played well.

"If we play like we way we played tonight in the state tournament, we should be able to win the title," Smith said optimistically.

At the state tournament, SIU could face Northwestern in the quarterfinals. Northwestern is an Illinois State-three teams the Salukis have lost to this season.

Salukis topple ISU but lose coin flip

By Mark Pahle
Staff Writer

The Saluki basketball team just had defeated Illinois State 64-53, at Hultman Center for the first time this season. The players had been hurried into the locker room excited with the victory, but there was no time to celebrate.

The Salukis were too busy playing one of the kind of game—a waiting game. Despite SIU's victory over the Sycamores, which put the Salukis' Missouri Valley Conference record at 5-4, the hopes for a spot in the conference tournament still were up in the air.

Tulsa, because of a time zone difference, still was playing Wichita State when the Salukis finished. Wichita had needed to defeat the Golden Hurricane if the Salukis were to gear up in the past season tournament.

Joe Smith, who finished the night with 24 points, hitting an incredible 11 of 12 shots from the line, was pleased with the Salukis' performance, but like the others, he was disappointed with Tulsa's game.

"We did everything right tonight," Smith said. "We showed intensity when we had to. This was just a continuation of a season we've been playing so far.

"The Tulsa game is the big thing for us. We just hope Gene Smithson Wichita's coach will have a good game," Smith said. "SIU and Tulsa both went into Saturday's games with identical records. We are a great team, a coin flip would decide who received the tournament. The Salukis lost the flip, and the championship."

Coach Jake Gottfriedson said: "Bad luck has been on us all season. We've been the flip of the coin. We lost better than some of the other teams in the Valley right now," he said. "But if we play like we're really playing, we won't have to worry about that."
