Students voice anger to city

SIUC students Leigh Wolf, Chris Dixon and David Winbush protest outside of Checkers nightclub at 706 E. Grand in Carbondale. Less than 10 people protested the operation of the bar Friday after the death of Jose Waight Feb 5. About 80 students patronized the club Friday.

Special Assignment Writer

Words were put to action as 10 SIUC students protested a Carbondale nightclub this weekend after pledging to do so earlier in the day at an open forum.

The students carried signs and attempted to turn away people from Checkers nightclub, 706 E. Grand Ave., Friday and Saturday night. The protest was organized at a student forum Friday afternoon in the Student Center auditorium.

Checkers opened Wednesday after being closed for a week and a half following the Feb. 5 death of SIUC student Jose Waight. Checkers announced Thursday that the club is for sale. Waight, a 24-year-old freshman from South Holland, died from asphyxiation, according to a coroner's report, after a confrontation at Checkers.

LaShare Edwards, a senior in radio/television from Chicago, said she felt the students were successful in the protest.

"We did turn away a lot of cars, and I think that's a great achievement," she said. "We didn't get as many people to stand out there as we wanted, but that was because of the weather and the short notice."

Edwards said the protesters stood off Checkers' property on the parking lot before the nightclub.

David Winbush, a junior in theater-communications from Champaign, said 10 people protested Friday night from 10 p.m. to 1 a.m. and four came Saturday night from 10 to 12:30.

Winbush said they counted only 30 people in the nightclub Friday and about 60 Saturday.

Edwards said some Checkers' employees approached them with questions of what they were doing but no actions were taken on either part.

Checkers' management had no comment on the protest.

Carbondale Police Chief Don Strom said the protest was peaceful and the police were not involved.

Edwards said there is a possibility of another protest.

Forum allows discussion of Waight death

By Jeremy Finley
Special Assignment Writer

More than 100 students gathered at the Student Center auditorium Friday to voice concerns over the death of an SIUC student and to demand answers from University and Carbondale officials.

The only time the room was quiet was the moment of silence observed in memory of Jose Waight, a 24-year-old freshman from South Holland. Waight died Feb. 5 from asphyxiation, according to a coroner's report, after a confrontation at Checkers nightclub, 706 E. Grand Ave.

The crowd raised questions, often angrily, ranging from the lack of information released about Waight's death to the fact that no one has been charged since the incident.

Kenya Vera, a senior in psychology from Chicago, said she wonders how much city officials are willing to say about the incident.

"You have to consider who pays the coroner, who pays the police — those are all city or state officials, so of course they're going to be biased because they have to consider their jobs and a lot of other things," she said.

Vera said she was not satisfied with the meeting.

"I wasn't impressed, because it still seems like a lot of things are going to go unheard," she said. "It seems like a lot of people are trying to suppress us, trying to say 'Don't be angry; don't take it out on the officials because it's not actually their fault. I don't agree with that at all.'"

New site selected for center

By Tracy Moss
Administration Writer

After the University completes the purchase of the Baptist Student Center, a new student center probably will be built for the campus ministry on property behind the present location.

The Illinois Baptist State Association is negotiating with SIUC to purchase an alternative site to continue the campus ministry.

The SIU Board of Trustees this month approved a $1.25 million purchase of the Baptist Student Center.

Rev. Bill Carter, a member of the IBSA board, said the alternative site is adjacent to the Baptist Student Center at the corner of Mill Street and Forest Avenue.

He said the IBSA board will meet March 9 to vote on the alternative site and possibly make a final decision on the sale.

The Baptist Student Center has been in debt the past few years because a decline in the number of dormitory residents.

IBSA, the owner of the center, decided to get out of the dormitory business but still wanted to continue its ministry on campus by negotiating a sale and exchange with the University.

Purchase plans for the center were approved by the SIUC trustees on Feb. 11 and included the appraised

City council candidates meet with public

By Sanjay Seth
City Writer

What was intended as a meet-the-candidates forum became an exchange of ideas that benefitted the city council candidates as well as the public, an organizer of the forum said.

Susan Hall, president of the Graduate and Professional Student Council, said no matter who wins the two seats up for election, a broader base of ideas and concerns would be represented after the informative forum Friday.

GPSC co-sponsored the nine-candidate forum with the Jackson County League of Women Voters.

Abortion, bar entry age topics of discussion during open forum

The candidates discussed different issues brought up by the crowd of about 60 at the city council chambers.

Topics included the reinstatement of an abortion clinic at the Carbondale Memorial Hospital, the raising of local bar entry age to 21, the increase of local property tax to fund the Northern Connector, recycling in the Carbondale community, the diversity of Carbondale and ways to make it work for the community, and even a critique of the current city council.

Philip Nelson and incumbent John Yow felt abortions should not be allowed in Carbondale.

Nelson said he thought it would be morally wrong to do that and the government should speak for life rather than death.

Not all candidates agreed with the fact that the bar entry age should be raised to 21.

Jerry Stanford disagreed completely, and candidate Roxann Hall, who works part-time at a bar, said 18-year-olds would have no where to go if this idea is implemented.

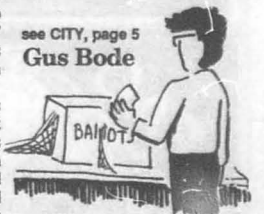

"I have seen 21-year-olds who are mature and those who are not," Hall said. "There are 18-year-olds that behave well and who can control their liquor as well."

Hall agreed with other candidates that alternatives should be thought of for those under 21, such as keeping the Recreation Center open for longer periods of time, planned activities at community centers and perhaps more non-alcoholic establishments.

All candidates said they felt small and locally owned businesses need more emphasis.

Mike Henry said the Carbondale Business Development Corp. is not

Scott leads SIUC to 7th straight win

By Kevin Bergquist
Sports Editor

It was Senior Day at Illinois State's Redbird Arena Sunday, but it was a Saluki senior who stole the show.

SIUC guard Anita Scott erupted for a career-high 30 points, 19 coming in the final 15 minutes, to lift the women's basketball team to a 77-65 win over the Redbirds (10-13, 5-8).

The win enabled the Salukis, 16-8 overall, to hold on to sole possession of second place in the Missouri Valley Conference with an 11-3 mark.

With SIUC clinging to a 64-62 lead, Scott connected twice from 3-point land to forge an 8-point margin.

Another trey by Angie Rougeau, SIUC's third straight after an 0-for-10 dry spell, gave the Salukis a comfortable 11-point lead.

"Anita is tremendously talented, and has taken it upon herself to take this team as far as it can go," SIUC coach Cindy Scott said. "She can do so many things, and is an intense competitor."

In the first half, it appeared as though Redbird senior Cary Brune would lead the way in her last game at home. Brune notched 14 points in the first half on 7-of-11 shooting to power ISU to a 33-32 halftime lead.

The Redbirds shot 62 percent from the field in the first half, but committed 12 turnovers. ISU committed 19 turnovers for the game, due in large part to a full-court press put on by the Salukis.

"Our press really bothered ISU," coach Scott said. "It got them out of synch."

Brune scored six points in 13-2 run in the opening minutes of the second half to help the Redbirds push their lead to 54-47, ISU's biggest, before the Salukis ripped off a 30-11 run over the remainder of the game to pull away.

"We got down by seven (54-47), and the kids turned it up a notch," coach Scott said. "It was a great team effort; I couldn't be more proud of this team."

Rougeau added 17 points for SIUC, while Kelly Firth (16) and Rocky Ransom (10) also hit for double figures.

Brune led ISU with 20 points. Sherri McNamara added 17 for the Redbirds.

Provision mark, jump battle highlight open

By Jeff McIntire
Sports Writer

An SIUC athlete qualified for the NCAA provisional list, and a Saluki alumnus returned to Carbondale as the Saluki men's track and field team played host to the USA Track and Field Open Saturday at the Student Recreation Center.

Brian Miller achieved a personal record in the shot put, notching a first-place mark of 57-11 3/4, and qualifying for the NCAA provisional list.

Miller achieved the mark in the preliminaries, and was unable to improve on it during the finals.

"I had trouble warming up for the finals," he said.

In a battle for supremacy between a former national champion from SIUC and a current Saluki ranked third in the nation, Darrin Plab faced off with Cameron Wright in the high jump.

Wright won the battle, but failed to win the event, placing second with a jump of 7-3, behind Kenny Banks.

Both Wright and Plab struggled early, with Wright clearing 7-1 1/2 on his third try.

"What Darrin said helped me a lot, but I feel I should've gotten 7-4 1/4," Wright said.

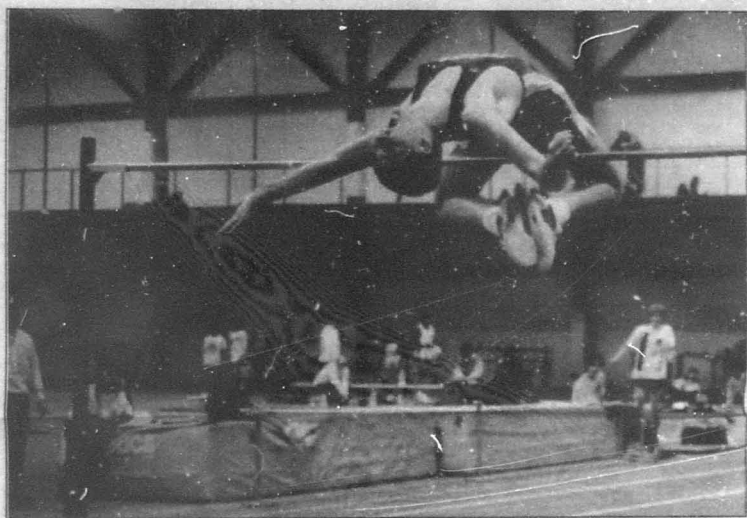

Plab's return to his old school did not help his performance, as he failed to clear 7-1 1/2.

"When you don't jump well, it doesn't matter where you're at," he said.

Garth Akal won the 1,000 meters in 2:29.15, one hundredth of a second in front of the second-place finisher, James McCracken of Southeast Missouri (2:29.16).

Other top finishes in the meet included a second-through fourth-place sweep in the 35-pound weight throw by Jonathan Hirsh, Mark Goodheart and Torry King, a season-best performance by

Salukis overcome 27-30 Shocker free-throw shooting for 85-76 win

By Karyn Viverito
Sports Writer

The Dawgs came upon a 'Shock Attack' when they faced Wichita State Saturday night, but were able to hold off the Shockers to win 85-76 in their last Missouri Valley Conference road game.

A second-half Shocker surge brought WSU to within five points with 3:12 left to play in the game, but the Salukis came through in free-throw shooting, making 9 of 10 to help secure the victory.

Saluki head coach Rich Herrin said he was pleased with the way the Salukis responded.

"They were tough down the stretch, but we were just as tough and we really came together and played well," he said.

While the Salukis made 16 of 25 free throws in the second half, the Shockers made 18 of 20 shots from the charity stripe to give them a .900 percentage. WSU was 27-30 from the line for the game.

Herrin said he was amazed at the WSU's performance from the line. "I thought they were never going to miss down there at the end," he said.

"We kept sending them to the line and they kept making their shots."

"When you win a game on the road with the home team making 27 of 30 from the free throw line, you know you played a good game," he said.

The Salukis went on an offensive surge in the first half, as the Dawgs put on a show of defense along with offense from the perimeter.

Freshman guard Jo Jo Johnson could not find a shot from 3-point land that he did not like, as his two consecutive 3-pointers put the Dawgs ahead, 30-11, with 7:55 left to play in the first half.

Johnson hit 3 of 4 from the perimeter for the night to go along with four field goals and six free throws to give him a season-high 17 points in 23 minutes of play. Johnson also led the team with two steals.

Herrin said he couldn't have asked for any more from Johnson's play.

The Salukis also had three other players joining Johnson in double digits as the Dawgs got big scoring from junior guard Chris Lowery (19 points), senior forward Ashraf Amaya (13) and junior forward Mirko Pavlovic (11).

Lowery was a perfect 3 of 3 from the 3-point line and was 6 for 10 from field goal range to lead the Salukis. Amaya hit four field goals, one trey, and was a perfect 4 of 4 from the charity stripe to go along with a team-high eight rebounds.

SIUC to face St. Louis in non-conference duel

Even though the Salukis have finished their journey on the Missouri Valley Conference road, they will have to venture out on the road one last time to play St. Louis University tonight.

SIUC will play St. Louis at the Arena, the same floor they will play on in the MVC tournament.

Last time the two teams faced each other, St. Louis played the slow-down tempo, but the Salukis came out on top in the end, 57-44.

Swimming and diving team falls to Hawkeyes, 138-104

By Dan Leahy
Sports Writer

The SIUC men's swimming and diving team gave a solid performance Saturday, but came up short in a 138-104 loss to the University of Iowa.

The 12th-ranked Hawkeyes showed why they are one of the top teams in the country, as they took first place in 10 of the 13 events.

Despite the lack of first-place finishes, SIUC head coach Rick Walker said the meet was just what he was looking for.

"If you look at the times Iowa won with, and then look at where our guys finished, you'll notice we weren't that far behind," Walker said. "I think we're right where we want to be heading into the conference championships."

SIUC divers Rob Sircusano and Travis Niemeier continued to shine for the Salukis. Sircusano finished first on the 3-meter board with 363.52 points, and placed second on the 1-meter board with 193 points.

Niemeier grabbed first on the 1-meter with 193.70 points, and placed third on the 3-meter board with 298.42 points.

Walker was quick to point out what a luxury it is to have two divers like Sircusano and Niemeier.

"The two have done a great job for us all year," Walker said. "It's great from a swim coach's perspective to know that your divers are going to get you some points."

The Salukis also got quality performances from V-Meng Tan, who finished second in the 200-meter fly and the 200-meter individual medley, and Randy Roberts, who had fifth-place finishes in the 200-meter individual medley and the 200-meter backstroke, in addition to helping the 400 medley relay team to a second-place finish.

The Salukis will use the next two weeks to prepare mentally and physically for the conference finals. According to Walker, the focus of practice will be limited to specifics such as starts and turns, with the remainder of the time devoted to resting.

"We are at the point in the season where the least amount of time spent in the pool is better," Walker said. "The kids

Costello looks at Clinton plan

By Shawna Donovan
General Assignment Writer

A local congressman said most people he has talked to in Southern Illinois support President Clinton's plan to raise taxes to reduce the deficit.

U.S. Rep. Jerry Costello, D-Belleville, made his way through 12 town meetings in Southern Illinois this weekend to discuss the tax increase and Social Security details of Clinton's economic proposal with people in his district.

"The feedback I have gotten from the meetings was positive towards the plan," Costello said. "They are supportive if there are federal cutbacks and reduced spending."

More than 40 people attended the Jackson County Courthouse meeting Saturday with Costello.

Costello said he will not vote on anything until he considers the consequences for his district.

"I have study the proposal first and then decide," Costello said. "There are a lot of issues out there that I will have to vote on."

"I will not vote on anything until I have thought about the people first," he said. "That is why I am here."

Costello discussed tax increases for the wealthy, an energy tax and a Social Security tax.

Costello said the wealthy will get a 5-percent tax increase.

"About 98.8 percent of the country will not feel a big pinch," Costello said. "People that make over $100,000 to $140,000 will. The wealthy, who had a 31-percent tax rate now will now have a 36-percent rate."

"I think that is fair," he said. "It is time for those who made out in the 1980s to pay."

The proposed energy tax, if passed, will put an increased burden on utilities that burn fossil fuels and other resources that hold the most heating units.

Costello said the energy tax will hit everyone.

"It is a concern for everyone, but we have to start to conserve our resources," Costello said. "If you conserve more then you pay less of a tax."

A concern for senior citizens is the Social Security tax.

Under Clinton's proposal, those already on social security will pay a tax.

"Individuals who are about to go on social security will see a tax put on their checks," Costello said.

Radio station tunes to country

By Christian Kennerly
Entertainment Writer

A Carbondale radio station's decision to change music formats may have been prompted by the increasing popularity of country music.

Kevin Boucher, operations manager for Z100, said the change in format began many months ago as grass roots research in the Carbondale area.

He said the research involved asking Carbondale residents what music they listened to most.

"We found that the Carbondale market was tired of oldies," he said.

"Our research showed that country was hot. We're just trying to give the people what asked for."

Z100's primary competition in the area is WDDD of Marion, which has been in the country format for more than 20 years, but Boucher said he is confident there is room for both stations in the market.

Boucher said WDDD's programming is influenced more by the country artists of the '60s and '70s, and Z100 will appeal more to the younger listeners of today's modern country music.

"People still think that country music is the stuff that WDDD is playing," he said. "The country music of today is a lot more positive and uplifting than the music of 15 years ago."

Dutch Doelitzsch, general manager of WDDD, said he is glad that country music finally is being recognized as good music by the rest of the nation.

"We're very glad country is as popular as it is. We've been doing it for 22 years," he said. "WDDD is, was, and always will be the best in the country."

Boucher said the initial response to the change is encouraging, and listeners are offering positive, enthusiastic comments.

Michael Starr, acting chairman of SIUC's radio and television department, said the spectrum of modern country music is broad enough to allow Z100's entrance into the market.

"I think it was an intelligent thing for Z100 to do," Starr said.

However, he said Z100 will have to aggressively market itself if the station is to compete with WDDD.

Gender equity needs enforcement at SIUC

A UNIVERSITY HAS THE distinctive reputation for promoting an atmosphere that encourages people to aspire to their highest goals.

As such, men and women who enter intercollegiate athletics should expect the same access to resources and opportunities — whether it be as student-athletes, coaches or athletic administrators.

But at SIUC, like at many other colleges across the nation, the notion of gender equity has been placed on the back burner as athletic administrations continue to divide money between men's and women's sports unequally. Simply put, the men obtain more and the women less.

University funds should be distributed fairly. If any other student fees were proposed on a gender basis, the discrepancy would not be tolerated. The disparity of funds between men's and women's sports must be corrected for it clearly violates standards of equality.

UNDER THE 20-YEAR-OLD law called Title IX, high schools and colleges that receive federal funds cannot discriminate on the basis of sex. The law applies to scholarships, equipment, scheduling of games and practices, travel, coaching, locker rooms, housing, dining, publicity and recruitment.

It also calls for athletic fees to mirror the ratio of females and males in the student body. However, The NCAA released a study in March showing that the nation was in violation of Title XI, specifically with operational and recruiting budgets.

The 1990-91 study showed that at a typical Division I school, 69.4 percent of the athletes were men and 30.6 percent were women. Male athletes received 69.5 percent of the scholarships, and 30.5 percent went to women athletes.

Men's sports received 77.4 percent of the athletic department's operating expenses and 22.6 percent went to women; 82.8 percent of the recruiting budget went to male athletes and 17.2 percent to women.

LIKE THE NATION, the breakdown of resources at SIUC also shows disparity between men's and women's sports. SIUC's male-to-female undergraduate ratio for the 1991-92 school year was 58.1-to-41.9 percent whereas the male-to-female student-athlete ratio was 65.6-to-34.4 percent.

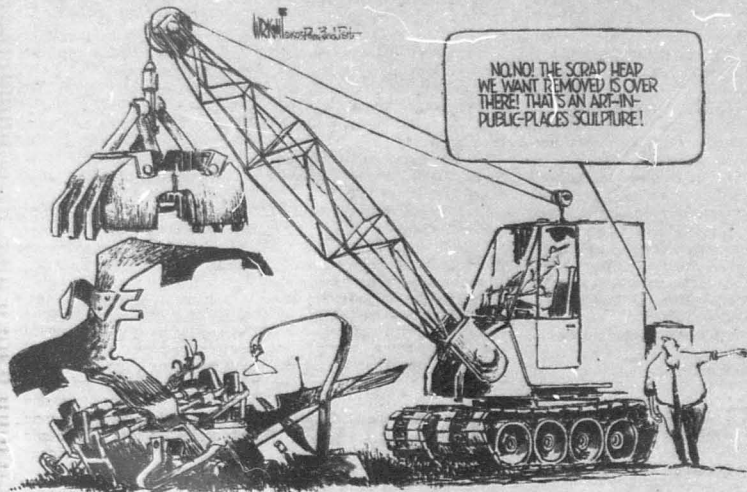

While the proportion of tuition waivers was 60.1 percent for males and 39.9 percent for females in 91-92, the proportion of scholarship funding for male athletes was 63.9 percent to 36.1 percent for female athletes. In addition, men received 66.5 percent of the operational budgets and 67 percent of recruitment dollars in 91-92, compared to 33.5 percent and 33 percent for women.

SIUC's committee on gender equity recommends proposals to help the University match resources to the student population, and many of them include cost-saving techniques affecting men's and women's sports.

Some of those that would help redirect funds to women's programs include limiting overnight lodging out of town, reducing the number of preseason practices allowed and limiting the number of paid personnel that schools can take with them to postseason events, said Charlotte West, SIUC's associate athletic director.

AS THE UNIVERSITY STRUGGLES with funds, redistributing them is all the more burdensome. But this should not be an excuse to justify discrimination as women's programs continue to be shortsighted. The committee has proposed a plan that would bring SIUC in line with Title IX. It's time the athletic administration meet those goals.

Anything less is not only in violation of the law but incongruent with a university's message that all individuals are entitled to equal opportunities.

Letters to the Editor

Bouncers must use brains, not biceps

This is in regard to the violent death of Jose Wright on the morning of Feb. 5 at Checkers nightclub.

Anyone who has watched the way most bouncers at most Carbondale bars act would had to have seen this coming.

For three years now I have been at Carbondale bars when some big bulky bouncer tries to play Mr. "I Use Steroids" as he uses ridiculous and unjust force to drag a half comatosed drunk out of the bar.

If they are truly being unrelenting and a disturbance then by all means, get them out. Once they are outside of the bar, however, they are no longer your responsibility.

What makes you think you have the right to beat someone when even policemen do not? No one should have that right. Who do bouncers think they are anyway?

In my opinion some of you are a bunch of guys with egos bigger than life and biceps bigger than your brains.

Are you not able to see that these are people that you are treating this way?

If that is too complex for you to comprehend then can't you at least, in some way, relate to the fact that the people in these bars are all your age, doing what you are attempting to do — getting an education and making a life for yourselves?

I sincerely hope that acting like Mr. Ego is enough of a reward to compensate for the loss of a young and prosperous life.

Maybe from now on you will think with your brains before your biceps. — Liza Roscetti, junior, biological sciences

Gays need legal protection along with equal treatment

Professor Wayne Helmer missed the boat in his Feb. 10 letter to the DE by claiming that the boycott of Colorado "centers around whether or not homosexuals are a legitimate minority and therefore require special privileges."

Colorado's Amendment Two does not simply deny homosexuals special privileges, it specifically denies any "claim to discrimination," therefore denying equal protection of the law to about 10 percent of our nation's population.

Suppose one of our top students at SIUC is denied a job regardless of an excellent GPA and good recommendations because he/she is openly homosexual.

With laws like Amendment Two, even if that student was by far the most qualified for the position, he/she would have no legal claim of discrimination.

Professor Helmer, are you willing to come into my classrooms and explain to my students why some of them might legally be denied jobs, regardless of their qualifications, because they are homosexual?

Will you also explain to them that homosexual professors in Colorado could be denied tenure, regardless of their teaching and research records, without hope of challenging that discrimination in the courts?

Your letter may convince them that they do not qualify your minority status, but are you also prepared to justify their lack of legal protection?

The perception that gays and lesbians are looking for something extra is false.

Most homosexuals are not asking for hiring quotas, or pay raises, or any other type of special privileges; they are asking for equal treatment.

By eliminating any claim of discrimination, the Colorado legislature is not only denying privileges, but denying the right to due process guaranteed in the 14th amendment.

You do not have to believe homosexuals should be granted special treatment to see that the law is wrong. — Susan Plant, lecturer, administration of justice

Community wants more on inquiries

Within the last three months, the University and the community as a whole has been hit with two tragedies.

There was the fire at The Pyramids that claimed five lives and more recently the death of Jose Wright.

Both cases have an appearance of foul play. Yet the Carbondale Police and other officials have kept us in the dark.

The alleged arson seemed to have been forgotten. Now the investigation of Mr. Wright's death seems to be very slow.

The Carbondale Police is being perceived as ineffective by some and biased by others.

Those perceptions do nothing to bring me a sense of security.

I am sure that some information could be released that would not jeopardize the investigations but yet would squelch the score of rumors and speculations floating around.

I hope that sincere efforts are being made to uncover the truth in both matters. — Stephan Toussaint, senior, finance targeting large businesses, but rather businesses with 50 to 75 employees.

Henry, who owns Henry's Printing near the town square, said that a "go between" was needed between the small businesses and the city.

"I have seen 21-year-olds that are mature and those who are not...there are 18 year-olds who behave well and who can control their liquor as well."

—Roxann Hall

Both Maggie Flanagan and incumbent Keith Tuxhorn said long-range planning was needed for the future economic development of Carbondale.

Flanagan said the city should attempt to tailor the bigger businesses that do come to Carbondale, especially businesses that would be based on recycling. She said these businesses are exactly the one's that should be built upon.

Tuxhorn said a downtown business manager was needed, which he has been fighting for the last five years. Its purpose would be promoting and improving downtown and locally owned businesses.

Barry Ancell, in a critique of the city council, said what Carbondale needed was a proactive, rather than a reactive council.

Ancell said an example was the council did not closing a local nightclub when an SIUC student died after a confrontation at the bar.

about police involvement and the lack information distributed about Waight death.

Joanna McGinty, a senior in zoology from Rockford, said all the information known about the incident should be released to the public.

"Every detail known to (police) should be known to us," she said. "If not, the Grand Jury will be brainwashed by rumors."

Police Chief Don Strom said he will not try to ease in the media and supports the actions of his officers.

"I'm a little disappointed at this point that we can't share all the facts, and some of the fog seemed to switch to that the police might have done something wrong," he said. "I stake my reputation on the fact that our officers responded appropriately. I don't think this incident is about the Carbondale Police department."

Carbondale City Manager Jeff Doherty said if students have complaints about police, they should come to him, and his office will investigate.

Doherty said the city is looking into the possibility of regulating the price of pitchers of beer and raising the bar entry age.

Stephan Toussaint, a member of the Undergraduate Student Government, said he attended one of the two closed meetings about the incident and was pleased with the meeting Friday because it allowed students to ask questions directly to city officials.

"I think a lot of people were angry, but I think most of the people on the podium had dealt with the anger already," he said. "This was the reason why they wanted to organize something orderly; not something that would've been violent."

William Hall, vice president of USG, said he thought the meeting was more productive than he thought it would be.

"I went much better than I thought," he said. "We were afraid that people would be unnecessarily upset. I think the reason we wanted this meeting is that students had contributions to make and would help the leadership take the direction that we needed to go and find out exactly what went wrong that resulted in Jose's death and make sure that it never happens again."

Strom said a peaceful discussion about the incident was needed for the students.

"Think it's always beneficial when people can have an open dialogue and when people can vent their emotions in this manner as opposed through some violent act," he said.

Hell said another forum is a possibility in the near future.

value of an alternative site to be deducted from the $1.25 million the University offered for the center.

The University would receive three buildings and 1.7 acres of land for the purchase of the center.

James Tweedy, vice president for administration, said the $1.25 million was based on a 1991 appraisal of the property that determined the value to be $1.375 million.

He said the University offered IBSA less than the appraised value because the association will retain office space in the center until they relocate on the alternative site, and the center needs extensive renovations.

The IBSA board approved this offered price at a meeting Jan. 26.

Renovations include rebuilding the electrical system, the fire alarm system and adding handicapped access to the upper floors.

Tweedy said three pieces of University property were considered for relocation of the IBSA ministry, but the property adjacent to the center is the most likely to be exchanged.

Two houses sit on the property and are used by the music department as a place for students to practice their music.

Tweedy said an independent, certified appraiser will be hired by the University and IBSA to determine the value of the alternative property and the appraised value will be deducted from the price the University will pay for the center.

The SIU trustees approved the sale of revenue bonds to fund the purchase of the center.

Tweedy said revenue bonds may not be used because funding of the purchase will depend on negotiations with the IBSA.

He said if the IBSA wants the money outright then the University would pay by selling revenue bonds, but if they want to lease purchase the land then the University will make a down payment and then make yearly payments after that.

The downpayment would come from the University budget, Tweedy said.

Drug lords battle for power in Mexico; kill family, friends

Los Angeles Times

MEXICO CITY—When nine mutilated bodies of relatives and employees of jailed drug lord Miguel Angel Felix Gallardo turned up near a highway in Guerrero state last fall, Mexican officials faced two ugly facts: Despite his imprisonment, the one-time godfather of cocaine trafficking was still a power, and someone was challenging his power in a big way.

Officials first suspected that the killings were the personal revenge of Hector Luis "El Guero" Palma, a notoriously violent trafficker who had blamed Felix Gallardo for the 1989 murders of his wife and two small children.

But as police looked deeper into the Guerrero killings, they discovered several safe houses that belonged, it turned out, not to Palma, but to Joaquin "El Chapo" Guzman. Palma, they discovered, had a senior partner, and he was fighting to take over Felix Gallardo's business. Two of Felix Gallardo's lawyers and a half-brother who oversaw his investments were among the dead.

"Felix Gallardo is in jail, Guzman is trying to cut him off at the roots," said a Mexican official.

Today, Mexican officials place the 42-year-old Guzman among Mexico's top traffickers, a small group of outlaws whose organizations move the majority of South American cocaine through Mexico to the United States.

The coca plant from which cocaine is derived does not grow in Mexico, but U.S. officials estimate that the country is used to transship about 70 percent of the cocaine that is consumed in the United States.

Case to test church, state boundaries

The Washington Post

Sandra and Larry Zobrest wanted the best education for their deaf son, Jim. With the aid of a sign-language interpreter, he kept pace with students in public school through the eighth grade.

But when Jim chose a Catholic high school and the public-school district denied his parents' request to pay for an interpreter, the stage was set for a major First Amendment case and one of the more important Supreme Court cases this term.

The significance of Zobrest v. Catalina Foothills School District surpasses the human drama of a deaf student trying to lead a normal life.

During a term when church-state cases dominate the high court's docket, this dispute gives the justices a chance to clarify First Amendment doctrine — a tangle of rules that have confounded lower courts, legal scholars and governments trying to operate lawfully.

The tension arises from the First Amendment's mandates: government may not support religion nor suppress its free exercise.

The question the justices will face Wednesday is whether states may provide, under a federal disability law, a sign-language interpreter for a student who attends a religious school.

If the court says yes, it could open the door for greater government involvement in religious affairs.

Doctors to perform gene therapy test

The Baltimore Sun

Within weeks, two Maryland doctors will provide a peek at 21st-century medicine.

A girl whose short life has been consumed by the struggle against a fatal illness will get an infusion of genetically altered cells, in a treatment so painless that she probably will be watching one of her favorite videos, maybe "The Little Mermaid," during the procedure.

If the treatment works, the girl will be cured in a matter of months.

The idea is radically simple: Halt illness at its very core, the genetic code that tells the body how to function.

Turning that idea into reality has become the life's work of two doctors at the girl's bedside, R. Michael Blaese and Kenneth W. Culver.

Success in this, one of the world's first gene therapy experiments, would help usher in a new medicine with the potential to cure some of the world's worst scourges — cancer, AIDS, cystic fibrosis, muscular dystrophy and hemophilia.

As a beginning, the National Institutes of Health doctors are trying to cure a little-known hereditary disorder called adenosine deaminase, or ADA, deficiency, which has threatened the girl's life since she was born.

Like David, the famous "bubble boy" forced to live in a sterile world in the 1970s, the 6-year-old girl — and an 11-year-old who will be treated soon after — have no ADA gene, and therefore, barely functioning immune systems.

Until her first gene therapy treatments in 1990, the younger girl rarely left her house except to go to the doctor.

Her parents even kept her sister home from school, for fear that she would carry germs into the house.

Success also would bring personal triumph for Blaese and Culver, the culmination of a decadelong quest to cure just one rare disease

Blaese is chief of NIH's Immunology branch.

His office is not much bigger than a large walk-in closet.

And his laboratory is a hodgepodge of computers, microscopes, glassware and notebooks.

Refrigerators line the hallways, and there is barely enough space to turn around.

He has been trying to develop a gene therapy treatment since the mid-1980s, when he worked with W. French Anderson, a pioneer in the field who has since left NIH.

They wanted to make real what had been imagined since the first advances in the biotechnology revolution.

Essentially, they wanted to insert genes into a human to treat an illness or, the most basic molecular level. Initial attempts would focus on a patient with a hereditary, genetic defect.

The broader goal: to manipulate a person's genes to treat all kinds of diseases.

They chose to work with ADA-deficient children, although only 10 babies are born each year in North America with the disorder.

The illness seemed a reasonable choice because it would require the insertion of only one gene.

The concept was to draw blood from a child, pick out certain cells and grow them in the laboratory.

As the cells divided, the researchers would insert the ADA gene — a gene that is easily cloned in the laboratory.

Mind can heal body with potential power

By Andy Greenham
Entertainment Writer

The mind contains great capacity for healing the body, but until recently this new science has not been taken seriously.

The possible uses of the mind surpass meditation and other relaxation techniques. There is much to be learned about the potential physiological healing powers of the mind.

To increase local awareness of this science, WSIU-TV will broadcast a three-part documentary series, "Healing and the Mind," which will begin tonight at 9 p.m. on Channel 9 and run Tuesday and Wednesday.

A group of interested people in the community are responsible for getting the grant and setting up committees to get the program off the ground.

WSIU is one of only 20 stations to receive a special grant to fund community involvement in the study of this field. More than 250 schools in the Southern Illinois area will be recipients of teaching materials provided by the program's producers and the Fetzer Institute, sponsor of the program.

"It began when 50 interested people from the area had a teleconference with the documentary's producers in order to get the grant to get local participation," said Sharon Walters, executive director of the Fetzer Institute. "We're now in the production phase and we're looking for more interested people."

Bill Moyers will be the host of the series and investigate new insights into the connection between the mind and body.

Moyers will meet with professionals in the field, including those from medical schools, research institutes and hospitals who are involved in mind-body research.

The series only is the beginning of a mind healing revolution. Most of the work will be done after the series is over in the form of discussion groups and meetings.

The Fetzer Institute is an educational organization devoted to research in the field of mind-body healing. Fetzer is interested in the impact of the mind and body on health, Walters said.

"The purpose of the program is to bring these kinds of ideas that are not flaky, but based on legitimate research," she said. "It is the principles and theories that so many people are interested in, but are not given access to."

WSIU-TV also has established a telephone hotline that will be open tonight and Wednesday from 9:30 p.m. to 10:30 p.m. and Tuesday from 9 p.m. to 10 p.m. so people can call to get involved with discussion groups in the area.

The study groups are set up to investigate their individual feelings about health care and the mind. WSIU will provide study guides for the program to be used at study groups, Walters said.

"As a patient, this kind of healing helped me and it helped me work with my doctor better," she said. "This program is not here to give answers, just raise questions."

Many students find the scurrying of a young lizard or the slithering of a snake calming to watch, but this life may be quite stressful for a new pet, area pet store owners said.

Vicki Davenport, owner of Fish Net, said students are intrigued by reptiles.

"They may see college as a good time to have an exotic pet, she said.

"Students may buy them because they're on their own and mom's not around to tell them they can't have one," she said.

Without parents around to forbid the ownership of certain pets, students only have to deal with restrictions caused by their income and the rules of landlords and the city council.

The Carbondale City Council adopted an ordinance Feb. 16 forbidding the possession of snakes or lizards longer than five feet.

The ordinance previously limited the size of exotic animals to those under two feet.

Davenport said the council's fears about non-poisonous reptiles posing a threat to the community was unfounded.

The expense involved in purchasing a pet of this size would lead to more attention being paid to providing proper care and habitat for the animals, she said.

But all animals, regardless of size, require specific care, Davenport said.

"One thing you have to realize when you're buying an animal is that it's young and it has needs like any other baby would," she said.

If a pet is subjected to extremes in temperature, delays in eating or over handling, it probably will not survive long, she said.

Chad Allen, manager of the Pettin' Place, said disease, a lack of food and stress are common causes of death in new pets.

"We can't really offer a guarantee on reptiles because they go down so fast," Allen said.

"They may seem perfectly healthy at night, but the next morning they'll be dead."

Davenport said it is important to make the transition as easy as possible for a new pet.

"One thing people don't realize is that the animals are going from an environment they're used to and people they know to an environment that is new, strange and completely different," Davenport said.

Davenport said her employees answer questions and provide informational flyers to try to help customers learn as much as possible about their new pets.

"One of the best ways to sell pets is to let customers know the care that will be expected," she said. "We don't just sell animals without letting people know how to care for them correctly."

There's no guarantee that people will. All we can do is sell the animal with the information and hope people will continue to educate themselves about it."

Seminars offer lessons on discrimination

By Michael T. Kuciak
Administration Writer

A presentation on racism, sexism and homophobia will give people a chance to hear some ideas on how to deal with discrimination.

Kesho Scott, a professor of black american studies at Grinnell University in Iowa, will give free presentations on discrimination Tuesday at 9 a.m. and 7 p.m.

Kathryn Ward, coordinator of Women's Studies, which is sponsoring the seminars, said people should register for the event by calling 453-5141.

"We had an overflow crowd last year," she said. "People need to call as soon as possible, because it is filling up fast."

Ward said the presentations last about three hours, and people should prepare to be active.

"(Scott) will have everybody up and moving around," she said. "The presentations will be dealing with racism, sexism and homophobia. The people who went last year really spread the word, saying it was one of the best lectures on discrimination they had ever seen."

Antonio Washington, coordinator of the Big Brother/Big Sister program, said Scott's presentation last year was a powerful workshop.

"It's about addressing stereotypes of racism and your feelings as an individual on what racism is," he said. "It's a power pack seminar that allows you to see what racism is. It will make you think, it may make you laugh, and it may even make you cry."

Scott, author of "Habit of Surviving," about survival strategies for women, has been on the Oprah Winfrey show and has a doctorate in American studies.

Scott will be joined by her colleague James Lincoln, an actor, playwright and professor at Grinnell University. Lincoln will give a free enactment of his performance art presentation "Little Piece of God" at 7 p.m. today in Room 1027 of the Communications Building.

Ward said "Little Piece of God" focuses on racism.

"It deals with the various concepts of racism, like guilt and depression," she said. "It includes several short pieces of speeches from prominent African-Americans."

Ward said the two presentations are part of an important whole.

"They are part of Women's Studies' commitment to Black History Month," she said. "It is a valuable opportunity for the campus community."

Clinton to meet with jeopardized Boeing workers

The Washington Post

SEATTLE—When President Clinton approaches the Boeing Co.'s cavernous 747 manufacturing plant in suburban Everett Monday, he will see symbols of one of the great success stories of U.S. industry.

He will drive past gleaming white aircraft with the black and red lettering of Air China that, along with other planes streaming from Boeing assembly lines, will add millions of export dollars to the nation's coffers.

He will see the world's biggest manufacturing facility under one roof being made even larger in preparation for work on a totally new airplane, a multibillion-dollar gamble the company is making on its 777, a 300-plus seat plane designed to compete head on with the new A330/340 series of Europe's Airbus and U.S. rival McDonnell Douglas Corp.'s MD-11.

But when he talks and takes questions from some 3,000 Boeing workers, there is a good possibility several of them will have received "warning notices" on Friday that they are among the 28,000 workers Boeing plans to shed from its rolls over the next year and a half as it adjusts to the rapid drop in orders from the nation's and world's struggling airlines.

And when he moves on to a meeting room inside the plant, he will hear from top executives of 11 airlines and four airframe and engine manufacturers about why they have cumulatively announced cuts of some 60,000 highly paid workers in the past year or so, adding to the impact the country already was feeling from defense industry shrinkage.

This "summit meeting" of airline and aerospace executives, put in motion only this past Friday, is meant to be a "listening session" for Clinton both on the problems of the two industries and on the executives' responses to his economic stimulus package, according to administration officials.

The executives likely will agree with Boeing's chairman and chief executive officer, Frank Shrontz, and his McDonnell Douglas counterpart, John McDonnell.

Both of whom said in recent interviews the key to stemming the loss of high-tech jobs at the manufacturers is a return to profitability by the airlines that buy the planes they usually manufacture.

Airline executives, however, remain split on how to do that, except for a focus on the taxes the industry has to pay.

After that, they say they are counting on the high-level emergency commission announced last week to wade through the strains that pit the big air carriers like United, American and Delta against the middle tier of USAir, Northwest, Continental and TWA.

If he probes deeply enough, Clinton also will hear that some of the jobs being trimmed by Boeing may never come back as the company gets itself into shape for the 21st century challenge of remaining atop the aerospace industry.

McDonnell Douglas is going through a similar process to ensure that it will survive into the 2000s.

Boeing, in effect, is finally acknowledging that it is becoming a victim of its own successes.

Especially having built planes that last longer and longer while newer aircraft have become so sophisticated that they are too expensive.

Democrats dreading GOP House seatings

The Washington Post

Democrats say they are worried that both their party and the new Democratic administration could be hurt in four special elections to fill vacated House seats.

Three of the four seats were held by Democrats President Clinton appointed to the Cabinet, and at least two of the three could go to Republicans.

The fourth seat was held by Rep. Willis D. Gradison Jr., R-Ohio, who resigned to become president of the Health Insurance Association of America, and it is considered likely to remain in GOP control.

The House races, along with the special Senate election in Texas to fill the seat formerly held by Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen, could be interpreted—especially on Capitol Hill, where the president is trying to win approval for tax increases and spending cuts—as early tests of Clinton's strength among voters.

Democrats say Republicans have their best chance of gaining a seat in a southern Wisconsin district previously represented by Les Aspin, who is now defense secretary.

The two parties must pick nominees on April 6. The likely Democrats include state Rep. Peter Barca, a former teacher with labor support; Jeffrey S. Neubauer, the party chairman who has strong financial backing; and state Rep. Judith B. Robson, who may get the backing of women's groups.

On the Republican side, the likely candidates include businessman Mark Neumann, who ran against Aspin in 1992, and state Rep. Charles W. Coleman.

The other election worrying Democrats is the contest to fill the Mississippi Delta seat that had been held by Mike Espy, who is the first black to head the Agriculture Department.

The voting-age population is 58 percent black, and in normal circumstances the district probably would elect an African-American candidate.

Perot offering feedback to Clinton deficit plans

Zapnews

PENSACOLA, Fla. — Ross Perot jetted to Florida on Friday to discuss the economic plan Clinton unveiled before Congress on Wednesday and to promote United We Stand, America, his volunteer citizens' group.

"Mr. Perot will talk to Floridians about political reform and the serious economic issues facing Americans," said a statement by Patricia Muth, the Florida state coordinator for United We Stand, America.

"He will discuss ways in which we can work together to make certain there are elected officials who address these challenges."

Perot, who was recruiting volunteers for United We Stand, has called Clinton's speech Wednesday "positive" but questioned whether he and Congress would be unduly influenced by "special interests."

"That's why all of us are joining together across the country - to make sure we have a voice in this, because we'll have to pay for it," Perot said this week on ABC's "Good Morning America."

In his recent appearances, Perot offered conditional support for Clinton's program, which relies on tax hikes and spending cuts to reduce the budget deficit, and public works and education programs to stimulate the economy.

"It's a good artist's sketch of a building, but now we're going to go to Congress," Perot said on "Good Morning America." "Please remember Congress passes the laws, and we've got to make sure these laws are passed properly for our country."

Perot has advocated some proposals that Clinton did not include in his package, particularly a constitutional amendment requiring a balanced federal budget and a line-item veto law that would permit the president to cut specific programs out of the budget.

The Dallas billionaire said both measures were necessary because he doubts Congress can make the spending cuts necessary to reduce the federal debt, which now exceeds $4 trillion. He questioned the wisdom of submitting spending programs to Congress, saying it's like "getting a friend who's trying to stop drinking a liquor store."

Professor receives recognition for contributions to black history

By Thomas Gibson
Minorities Writer

Because of all of his contributions to black history, Carter G. Woodson should be known as the father of Black History Month, an SIUC historian said.

Julius Thompson, assistant professor in black american studies, said Woodson firmly believed his achievements to promote awareness of African Americans would crown him as a factor in early human progress and as a maker of modern civilization.

Black history was not recognized until 1915 when Woodson, a former coal miner and school teacher, organized the Association for the Study of Negro Life and History.

Thompson said Negro history week began in 1926 and in the early 1970s it was changed to Black History Month.

"Black History is important because of America's lack of treatment of black life in books, radio, TV and publications," he said.

COSTELLO, from page 3 —

"If you are not taxed now, then you do not have to pay the tax," Costello said.

Audience members got the chance to talk to Costello and express their feelings on topics.

Lawrence Aken, the Jackson County Coordinator for United We Stand, Ross Perot's party, said the foreign lobbyists issue should be looked at.

"I am concerned about the foreign lobbyists," Aken said. "I hope Congress will do something about it."

Costello credited Ross Perot for getting people involved.

"I think Perot did a great service to this country," Costello said. "I think he emphasizes the foreign lobbyists issue too much."

"In 1937, Woodson established the Negro History bulletin as a journal especially for black youth devoted to the black life, history and culture," Thompson said.

Woodson also is the author of 10 books, his most famous being the "Miseducation of the Negro" published in 1933.

"He was able to promote the publication of books about black life and history," Thompson said.

Thompson said Woodson made many sacrifices and devoted time and energy in an effort to promote black history.

He graduated from Harvard with a doctoral degree in philosophy in 1912. Woodson taught at Howard University and was a lecturer on the college circuit.

Woodson died in 1950, but he paved the way for others to celebrate black history, Thompson said.

"The work of Woodson is relevant to contemporary students and the public because the major issues which he promoted are still needed in the '90s," he said.

"Although Americans have made progress in promoting the study and appreciation of black life and culture in the America and abroad, such efforts have not been enough to enhance the total picture of the black experience," he said.

Thompson said in too many places, black life and culture are still too invisible.

"Woodson's challenge to all of us is to continue the struggle to promote black history, as well as the experiences of all Americans," he said.

Clinton summons senior citizens to sacrifice their social security

Zapnews

President Bill Clinton took an unusual risk this week in calling for sacrifice from retirees.

Under Clinton's plan, retired couples with more than $32,000 in annual income would pay more taxes next year on their Social Security benefits - on average, $665.

About 1 million retirees would have their benefits taxed for the first time.

Nearly 6 million would face increases.

For example, a retired husband and wife who take in $40,000 a year, including $12,000 in Social Security benefits, would pay an additional $600 to the federal treasury - a 26 percent increase in their federal taxes.

Social Security, the brainchild of Francis Townsend, a California socialist and political crusader, was born under President Franklin Roosevelt in 1935 and vastly enlarged after Lyndon Johnson took the White House.

The $302-billion-a-year retirement program pays up to $1,088 a month in benefits to millions of people.

Clinton now wants some of that money back, to help stem the tide of federal red ink.

Some retirees would pay as little as $82 in higher taxes, while the wealthiest would pay nearly $1,400 a year, according to Citizens for Tax Justice, a Washington think tank.

Presidents since Jimmy Carter have been struggling for ways to control Social Security.

In 1977 it almost went bankrupt, prompting a historic increase in payroll taxes to cover the cost of benefits to retirees.

But Carter, the last Democrat in the White House before Clinton, was careful not to touch benefits.

Social Security constituents had become a potent political force, able to muster an avalanche of phone calls, telegrams and other resources to ba-gger Congress when their monthly checks were threatened.

When Republicans won the presidency under Ronald Reagan, they tried to trim benefits. Congress, controlled by Democrats, refused to go along.

After a few years of tangling, Reagan and Capitol leaders reached a deal in 1983: they made benefits taxable for high-income recipients. And they raised payroll taxes again.

Social Security has been solvent each year, raising $60 billion more each year in payroll taxes than it needs to cover monthly payments to retirees.

But now the pool of wealthy retirees collecting checks offers a tempting target for reducing the deficit, the $300-billion-a-year shortfall between what Washington takes in and what it spends.

But there will be a fight.

"This is the most inflammatory issue in politics today," economist Neil Howe told Congressional Quarterly.

"It's putting the drill right on the nerve."

Already, the lobbyists for retirees are aiming their fax-phone-and-mailgram artillery at Capitol Hill.

In the next few weeks, the political verdict could be in for Clinton's risky plan.

Baseball Salukis drop opener, 9-6

By Karyn Viverito
Sports Writer

The SIUC baseball team was ready to play with the best as it faced No. 5 ranked Oklahoma State, but the Cowboys pulled out their guns to beat the Salukis 9-6 in the opener of the series between the two teams Sunday.

Weather problems delayed the Salukis' opener, originally scheduled for Friday, until Saturday.

The game was tied 6-6 when OSU's Sal Bando Jr. hit a two-run homer off Saluki hurler Mike VanGilder to cap off a three-run inning that put the Cowboys ahead for good at 9-6.

After the next batter, VanGilder was taken out, and for the rest of the game was relieved by pitchers John Newkirk and Mike McArdle, who pitched scoreless relief innings.

All pitchers had to deal with weather conditions of 45 degrees and 25 mph winds.

Saluki head coach Sam Riggleson said he was very encouraged by the way his team played against the fifth-ranked team in the nation.

"Except for control problems here and there, we did many things to show that we have the ability to play with anyone," he said.

SIUC jumped out to a 3-0 lead in the top of the first, highlighted by a two-run double to right-center by Chris Sauritch to drive in Jason Smith who had a lead-off single and Scott DeNoyer who walked.

Sauritch later scored on an infield out.

Oklahoma State came back in the bottom of the first to tie at 3-3 and went up 6-3 in the bottom of the second, getting three hits in the inning.

The Salukis tied it at 6-6 in the top of the third, getting help from OSU as the Cowboys walked the first three Saluki batters to load the bases.

SIUC will face OSU again today at 1 p.m. with Saluki Mike Blang as the starting pitcher.

The Salukis remain on the road until March 6-7 when they will play host to the SIUC/Best Inns Classic at Abe Martin Field.

Cheaney hopes to beat NBA curse

The Sporting News

BLOOMINGTON, Ind.—"You're scaring me," Calbert Cheaney says. He is hearing how Indiana players have fared lately in the NBA, the litany of names in all its macabre glory. Steve Downing. Steve Green. Ray Tolbert. All-somethings at Indiana, highly publicized national stars, early draft picks—and, for one reason or another, NBA flops. Steve Alford. Keith Smart. Who could have known?

Cheaney is an Indiana native and a longtime Hoosiers fan, but he never thought to look at what happens beyond Bloomington. "I had no idea," he says.

The NBA doesn't, either. Every year some team drafts an Indiana player simply because he has mastered basketball's fundamentals, having endured and eventually flourished under Coach Bob Knight. A minimum level of competency is as certain as a college degree, and there won't be drug problems or bad attitudes. What could be better?

Just about anything, it turns out. Of the 21 Hoosiers who have been drafted in the first or second round during Knight's tenure, which began in the 1971-72 season, only one has played in an NBA All-Star Game. That was Isaiah Thomas, who stopped in at college for two seasons on his way to professional stardom and high-profile sneaker endorsements. Other than that you have three or four sizable but unremarkable pro careers, maybe eight drifters who assembled a formidable collection of team logo luggage and then disappeared, and a surprising number who barely passed through the league at all. Kent Benson. Wayne Radford. Uwe Blab. Hey, you'd be scared, too.

Now there is Cheaney, college basketball's finest senior and a possible player of the year. In 12 games against ranked opponents he is averaging close to 26 points a game. If he takes the Hoosiers to another national championship, nobody would be too surprised. Intelligent, articulate and disciplined, Cheaney is the prototypical Indiana star. And yet he seems a different type of Indiana player than has come before: more athletic, creative with the ball, a lanky 6-foot-7 forward with a deft shooting touch and rebounding savvy, talents that dare scouts to tell him they won't get fooled again.

"Of all the best players I've seen in the Big Ten, and we've had some terrific players, he has a style all his own," says Iowa Coach Tom Davis, who watched Cheaney hit 12 of 15 shots Feb. 6 in leading Indiana to a 73-66 victory. "He can hurt you in a zone, but he can hurt you man-to-man, too, and he's tough off the dribble. He's obviously going to do well in the NBA." Iowa's Kenyon Murray, who actually had to guard Cheaney for much of that night, rested a head on his shoulder and shrugged, his postgame frustration turning slowly to resignation. "He goes inside, outside, posts up, shoots the trey," Murray says. "He just does so many different things that it's almost impossible to defend him."

Perhaps many of the Indiana players didn't succeed in the NBA because they simply weren't that good. Knight recruits exactly the type of prospects he needs to perpetuate Indiana's winning tradition, and they do exactly that. They're fine shooters, these rural Midwestern kids, having spent all those hours alone with a ball and a hoop. Give them room and they'll hit 20-footers until the dinner bell rings, but that doesn't make them NBA players. The necessary attributes to play for Indiana and to play in the NBA do not naturally align. Playing in Knight's system demands a level of discipline that probably will not be matched in a player's life unless he opts for a military career.

And playing for Knight demands a commitment to academics, which is something NBA players don't have to worry about. Nobody has ever flunked their way off the Spurs.

DAWGS, from page 16

half showed signs of another run that mirrored the 30-2 run the Dawgs pulled on the Shockers in Carbondale, but big performances from WSU's Chad Elstun and Jimmy Bolden kept the Shockers in the game.

Elstun scored a team-high 23 points, followed by Bolden, who bucketed 20 points. Center John Smith rounded out the Shocker scoring in double digits with 19 points.

SIUC is now third place in the MVC at 10-6, with upsets of Tulsa and Drake Saturday night pushing the Dawgs higher in the standings.

Wichita State, now 6-9, stands at sixth place in the MVC. SIUC is at St. Louis tonight.

(21-8 1/4). SIUC coach Bill Cornell said the meet served the purpose for his team.

"The meet has served its purpose for us...it has been a tune-up meet for conference," he said.

"I was elated about Brian Miller's performance, and it was good to see Cameron Wright repeat last week's performance."

are trying to eat right, get proper rest and catch up on their school before we take off for the conference championships."

Beyond the conference finals, the Salukis look to send anywhere from two to six athletes to the NCAA finals. Once in the NCAA finals, swimmers and divers try to earn points for final team rankings. The Salukis finished 25th in the country last year and are looking to improve. "If we get some individuals or relay teams into the finals along with our divers, we should move up from last year's ranking," Walker said.

Saluki women strong at track competition

By Jeff McIntire
Sports Writer

The SIUC women's track and field team had nine first-place finishers, four top five all-time school bests, and 11 career-best performances Saturday it played host to the USA Track and Field Open at the Student Recreation Center.

The meet also featured a new Recreation Center record set by Heather Lucas in the mile run with a time of 4:53.5. Lucas is also a volunteer on the SIUC women's cross country coaching staff.

SIUC first-place finishes came in the 4x400 relay, the 4x800 relay, the shot put, the high jump, the 1,000 meters, the 800 meters, the 600 meters, the 400 meters, and the 55-meter hurdles.

The 4x400 relay team, comprised of Crystallia Constantinou, Katrina Daniels, Danielle Melton and Shuraac Winfield, won with a time of 3:59.81.

The 4x800 A relay team, comprised of Dawn Barefoot, Christina Gabler, Kelly Elliot and Jennie Homer, won the race with a time of 9:34.5, beating out the second-place B team B of Laura Batsie, Leann Reed, Tiernee Jefferis and Jennifer Kostelny (9:35.17).

April Cokely won the shot put with a career-best of 44-5 1/2, fourth all-time at SIUC.

Gretchen Daniels won the high jump with 5-6 1/2, tying her own fourth all-time mark of last week.

"My goal for next week is to get at least 5-8 1/2," she said.

Barefoot won the 800 meters with a career-best, fourth all-time mark of 2:18.73. Elliot won the 600 meters with a personal record of 1:39.39. Winfield won the 400 meters with a personal record of 59.18.

"I really felt good, but I could've used more of a push," Winfield said.

Reed won the 1,000 meters with a time of 3:01.53, and Rebecca Coyne won the 55-meter hurdles with a time of 8.34.

In addition to finishing in the first-place 4x400 relay team, Daniels finished second in the 400 meters with a time of 1:00.12.

"I'm excited...this doesn't happen very often," she said.

Reed complemented her finish in the relay team and her win in the 1,000 meters with a second-place finish in the mile (5:04.71).

Jennifer Kostelny added a third-place career-best finish in the 1,000 meters (3:05.17) to her performance on the 4x800 relay B team.

Horner's leg of the 4x800 A relay team followed a second-place finish in the 800 meters (2:19.33). Deborah Daehler placed third in the mile with a personal-best time of 5:12.65. Stacy McCormack placed second in the 3,000 meters in 10:45.30, and Nacolia Moore placed third in the triple jump, jumping 37 1/2.

Stephanie Smith tied Gretchen Daniels' fourth all-time high jump of 5-6 1/2, placing second in the event because she only cleared the mark on her second try.

Annette Klett placed third in the high jump (5-4 1/2), completing a sweep of the top three places in the event. Cynthia Grammer and

SIUC coach sets mark for race walking

SIUC women's track and field coach Don DeNoon got the opportunity to compete in an event himself at the USA Track and Field Open, breaking the American and World Master's record in the 3,000-meter race walk.

DeNoon broke his record of 13 minutes set at the TAC Master Championship with a time of 12:38.71 Saturday.

DeNoon started race walking at the age of 19, while serving in the Air Force. He continued to walk competitively until 1968, when he retired from the competition.

He continued to walk competitively, however, when the opportunity arose, including the 1972 Olympic trials and race walking with the U.S. team in the Soviet Union in 1974.

After 1974, he stopped going to such competitions, due to time considerations.

In 1991, he resumed race walking when the opportunities presented themselves, during meets at which the Saluki women participated.

DeNoon won first place in the 1992 TAC National Master 10,000-meter Race Walk Championships in 45:00.

Yolanda Cawthon completed a top three-sweep of the shot put, placing second (41-4 1/2) and third (career-best 43-7 1/2), respectively.
