Lack of system reason for relocation

Concerns for safety: Remaining residents of Garden Park may get opportunity to move.

By Rob Neff
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Remaining Garden Park residents who are concerned about the lack of a central alarm system in their building may be able to move out of the complex and reside on-campus for the rest of the semester, according to Jean Paratore, Associate Vice President for Student Affairs. "I want to make it clear that if students are concerned about there being no alarm systems in their buildings, they should call University Housing," she said. "Housing may be able to accommodate them on-campus."

Concerns about the lack of a pull station alarm system in Garden Park Apartments were raised after one building in the complex was engulfed in flames and was destroyed Monday. No deaths or injuries were reported in the 4 a.m. blaze, but the fire gutted all 21 apartments in the three-story building and displaced 60 SIUC students. The University has required all sophomore-approved housing to have central alarm systems wired directly to the fire department since 1992. Garden Park is the only sophomore-approved facility that does not have a central alarm system, according to University Housing Director Ed Jones.

Fire Chief Cliff Manis said Tuesday a system of pull station alarms wired directly to the fire department probably would have alerted firefighters to the fire five minutes sooner and they probably could have contained the fire in the apartment where it started. Don Weber, father of one of the blaze victims from Princeton, said he

USG votes to support concert for fire relief

The SIUC Undergraduate Student Government voted to fund advertising for a concert on March 10 at the Pinch Penny Pub that will give money back to the American Red Cross for their donations to the Garden Park fire victims.

others crises such as the Pyramid fires.

USG Senator Scott Pfeiffer said the concert would raise money to give back to the Red Cross. "It is an opportunity for the student body to work together to come up with some money to give back to the Red Cross," he said. USG senator Chris Olsen, who is in charge of raising business donations to aid in advertisement, said USG is asking for small donations of $50. Sawyer said USG will be able to give money earned from the cover charge and profits from food and alcohol sales to the Red Cross. USG will also be collecting donations for the fire victims at fundraising tables set outside the Student Center. USG will also double the amount collected, according to USG Senator Robert Iby. There was also a vote to make the question of whether to close the University for Halloween in a referendum. Students will be able to vote on the issue on April 10. Sawyer said the students have had a voice on the Halloween Task Force and said that he expects SIUC President John Guyon to close the University. "Everyone knows fairly clear the University is going to close for some sort of fall break," he said. There was a student referendum in 1989 in which 1,464 students voted against the closing and 593 voted for it, according to Bill Hall, former USG president. "The students voted against it then, and President Guyon ignored it," he said. He said the University changed

Halloween: Bar owners offer to close

By Stephanie Moletti
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Four local bar owners are volunteering to close their establishments during the weekend before Halloween as part of the city and University-wide effort to end the traditional street party. The owners of Hangar 9, 511 S. Illinois, Gatsby's II, 610 S. Illinois, Sidetracks, 101 W. College, and Stix Bar and Billiards, 517 S. Illinois, submitted a proposal to the Carbondale City Council at its meeting Tuesday. The proposal states that these establishments will close Oct. 27 and 28, acknowledging that "this gesture in and of itself does not solve the entire Halloween problem." The proposal includes eight additional measures to be considered by the council. The eight recommendations include:
■ SIUC cancel classes and close residence halls on Oct. 30

Student candidates consult legal counsel about primary

By Shawna Donovan
DE Governmental Affairs Editor

The State Board of Elections ruled that write-in candidates defeated in the Feb. 28 primary are ineligible for the general election April 4. Patricia Freeman, director of election information at the board, said write-in candidates must win in the primary to run in the general election. Despite the news, the two city council write-in candidates said they are waiting for advice from their legal counsel on whether or not to run in the primary. Candidates Lorenzo Henderson and Anna Helene Lundsteen, both SIUC students, said while they are waiting to consult their attorney Carl Runge of Collinsville, they have write-in applications ready to give Jackson County Clerk Irene Carlton. After a possible loophole that would enable them to run in both the primary and general elections was found last week, candidates turned to Carlton for answers and asked her legally to document their options. However, Carlton said she asked the election board about the possibility of running in both elections. The state board answered Carlton's request on Tuesday. Carlton said only one candidate, Andrew Ensor, who is running for mayor, had filed for write-in status in the April 4 election. Mayoral candidates do not have a primary. The application deadline for the primary is Friday. Henderson said if they do not run in the primary, it would give the student candidates more time to register people to vote in the general election. Carlton said voter registration officially begins March 2 and ends March 6. Henderson said the candidates are cautiously promoting their write-in campaign through literature and pens. "We're going to have educational programs to teach people how to write in," he said. Carlton said absentee ballots will be accepted at the county courthouse starting Saturday from 8 a.m. to noon.

U.N.'S AFGHANISTAN PEACE ACCORD ABORTED — ISLAMABAD, Pakistan—A faltering U.N. peace plan for war-torn Afghanistan was aborted Wednesday after rival militias that have virtually destroyed the capital with rocket attacks could not agree on how to form an interim governing council. U.N. special envoy Mahmoud Mesini, who has conducted a shuttle diplomacy between the militias for more than a year, announced in Kabul that his most recent plan, scheduled to have gone into effect three days ago, was being scrapped. He said a commission will be formed to craft a new proposal to be implemented on March 21.

BOLD PLAN FOR NORTHERN IRELAND PROPOSED — LONDON—Great Britain and Ireland on Wednesday jointly proposed an audacious framework for peace between Protestants and Catholics divided by religious discord, discrimination and violence in Northern Ireland. The framework, intended as a basis for continuing negotiation, envisions novel cross-border decision-making between elected representatives of Northern Ireland and the Irish Republic from which it was partitioned on Irish independence 70 years ago. Britain would restore to the province a Parliament suspended in 1972 amid escalating terrorist violence both in the province and in England by the Irish Republican Army.

JAPANESE SCANDAL RESOLVED AFTER 19 YEARS — TOKYO—A 19-year legal struggle over the biggest scandal to strike post-World War II Japan ended Wednesday when Japan's Supreme Court upheld guilty verdicts against the last two of 16 defendants in the Lockheed bribery case. The ruling also confirmed the guilt of the late Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka for accepting a $1.8 million Lockheed bribe and brought to 11 the number of Lockheed defendants whose convictions were made final. Five others, including Tanaka, died during the slow trial and appeals process. So far, no one has been jailed as a result of the verdicts.

LOBBYISTS WRONG ABOUT SENSOR PAD STATUS — WASHINGTON—The Sensor Pad, designed for women to make self breast examinations easier, has been a powerful weapon for lobbyists who want to rein in the FDA. They claim the device, still unlicensed in this country, was approved for marketing by Canadian authorities in less than 60 days. In fact, the Sensor Pad is banned in Canada until the company provides similar effectiveness information to that demanded by the FDA, said Mary Jane Bell, acting head of the part of Canada's Medical Services Bureau that oversees such projects.

FISH TRACKING TAGS GIVE AWAY BLACK MARKET — One of the biggest black market fish cases on the East Coast was cracked with the help of tiny tracking devices hidden inside the fish. Prosecutors and investigators, who followed the trail of the bass from Toronto to Georgia, say the case involves the alleged sale of more than 40,000 pounds of large-mouth bass caught in the Potomac from 1990 to 1993. According to the court documents and interviews, bass from the Potomac stored in fish farm ponds were identified by their radio signals. Fish in the ponds were tested by the Department of Natural Resource to see if they set off the hand-held box. They did, so agents knew that Potomac bass were being held in the ponds.

EX-INTERIOR SECRETARY FACES PERJURY CHARGES — WASHINGTON—President Reagan's interior secretary James G. Watt was charged Wednesday with lying to Congress and a federal grand jury about his use of political connections at the Department of Housing and Urban Development to help private landlords and developers obtain millions of dollars in low-income housing funds. Watt, 57, the highest-ranking former government official to be charged in the long-running HUD investigation, was charged with lying about his work as a consultant, for which he was paid more than $500,000 in the mid-1980s.

Refund promise issued to victims by Garden Park

By Sean J. Walker
Campus Life Editor

Students displaced by the Garden Park Apartments fire Monday have begun searching for new quarters, and help is on the way from the property manager.

Clyde Swanson, the Garden Park and Stevenson Arms property manager, said the students will be getting a check for their prorated prepaid rents, damage deposits and prepaid water deposits.

Stevenson Arms costs $1675 per semester for room and 20 meals.

"Let's just say for example the lease for the apartment is for $365 for 12 months," Swanson said.

"That means they owe me a dollar a day.

"We ask for the money to be paid by at least the middle of the semester, so if the building burns down after living in it 285 days, I owe them $80," he said. "That is the way this refund will work."

The checks, according to Swanson, are for students to go out in the housing market and find a place to live for the remainder of their stay in Carbondale.

Ed Jones, University Housing Director, said this is a unique situation with students formerly from approved sophomore housing who perhaps may relocate in unapproved sophomore housing.

"I doubt it if there will be a waiver given to students for unapproved housing," Jones said. "I don't want to aggravate people, because our main concern is getting them settled as soon as possible.

"I would like for them to comply with the rules, but if they don't I won't be going after people."

Swanson said while the students are looking for a new place to live they will be given free housing in the Stevenson Arms residence hall at 600 W. Mill.

"Our insurance company has a clause that our lawyer believes allows us to bill the insurance company for the kids to stay here," he said. "They will probably be able to stay here for free until spring break.

After the time is up for no-cost housing in Stevenson Arms, the students may elect to continue to live there.

Swanson said if they do decide to live there, then the students would have to sign a new contract with Stevenson Arms.

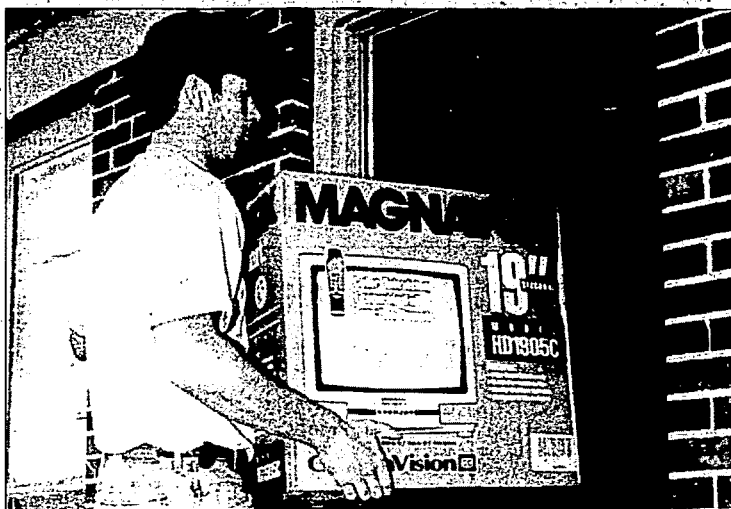

The cost for a semester contract at Stevenson Arms is $1675, according to Swanson, which includes a room and 20 meals a week.

Derrick Ward, a sophomore in microbiology from Jerseyville, said he is trying to find a place to live, but he does not know of any place that will give him a three-month lease.

"We are going to get the refund checks Friday, and that should pay for any place in town. I just have to find one."

Dave Kranz, an undecided sophomore from Beaver Dam, Wisc., said he went to Lewis Park Apartments at 800 E. Grand looking for a place to live and they helped him out.

"We came in here yesterday (Tuesday) morning and they found four of us a room right away," he said.

Reverend: Cash drive for victims could use boost in bank account

By Michael DeFord
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Members of the Carbondale community are concentrating their efforts on finding ways to assist those residents who lost everything in the Garden Park Apartments fire early Monday morning.

According to the Rev. Rob Gray of Our Savior Lutheran Church, money is what the fire victims need the most.

"So far, we have collected approximately $570, but we definitely need more cash," Gray said yesterday.

According to Laura Herring of

First National Bank of Carbondale, a total of $700 has been collected in the past two days to the Red Cross Relief Fund.

Gray said a yard sale will be held in front of the Lutheran Church on Saturday from 8 a.m. to noon. Students can get clothes being used for the yard sale for free, as long as they pick them up at the church before 5 p.m. on Friday.

Proceeds will go directly to the relief fund.

Gray said a yard sale was also used to help victims of the Pyramids fire and was a big success.

"We will be selling coats and pants for one dollar, shirts for fifty-cents, and all socks and underwear are free," Gray said.

Gray said the yard sale not only benefits victims of the fire, but members of the local community because it will provide an opportunity to buy things at low cost.

On Sunday, Feb. 26 Taco John's will donate half of its entire sales for the day to Our Savior Lutheran Church Fire Victims Fund. Kevin Rodgers, area supervisor for Taco John's, said support for the victims is a community effort.

"We wanted to do all we could for the victims," Rodgers said. "We

Students turn out to meet Red Cross donation need

SIUC is still in the running against Eastern Illinois University in the Red Cross Blood Battle.

SIUC students donated 242 pints of blood Wednesday, while EIU received 247 pints, pushing EIU's lead to 734-713 pints, respectively, according to Blood Drive Coordinator Vivian Ugent.

"Today (Wednesday), has been a constant flow. It's been busy all day," said Martin Grants, the Thompson Point blood drive coordinator and senior in psychology.

The Red Cross will be collecting blood in the Student Center, Ballroom B from 11 a.m.-4 p.m., and at the Delta Chi fraternity house, located on Greck Row, from 3-8 p.m. today. On Friday the blood drive will be in the Recreation Center Alumni Lounge from noon to 8 p.m.

Children get mixed messages on violence

By Dustin Coleman
Daily Egyptian Reporter

In today's fast-paced and hectic society, adults often send children mixed messages about violence, said one of five panel members who lectured on domestic violence Tuesday night at the SIUC School of Law.

"Domestic violence is often neglected in this country and has been neglected," said Carbondale Police Chief Don Strom. "Until recently it has been considered the hidden crime."

'Public Issues Forum' panel looks at home

Strom said abuse which occurs early in a child's life often creates a pattern that reappears later.

"Boys who witness their father as abusive are 10-times more likely to be violent in their home."

Strom said there also is a connection between domestic violence and juvenile crime.

"We should all have interest in this situation as potential victims," he said.

There are many things friends and families can do to aid a victim of domestic violence, said Mike Wepsiec, Jackson County state's attorney.

"Wepsiec said people may help by supplying emotional support, temporary housing, volunteer time or by making donations to the Women's Center.

"Participate and cooperate with our office," Wepsiec said. "Victims need a strong shoulder to lean on."

Children need to be loved and taught to be responsible, said Wepsiec.

"Children need to be taught nonviolence," he said. "Teach them to respect each other."

Though friends and family can help in domestic violence situations, Wepsiec said the law also provides what is called an order of protection.

The order prohibits the abuser from making contact with the victim, orders counseling for victim and abuser, provides physical care for the victim and takes care of custody matters.

Perfection needed in fire-safety issue

WHEN WE ARE STANDING IN LINE AT THE bursar's office, fumbling for proof of age under a bouncer's stern frown or scrambling to find quarters before the parking division finds our cars, it is easy to complain about the bureaucracy that plagues SIUC and the city of Carbondale. However, the efficiency of some local paper-pushing systems was tested and passed with flying colors Monday after an early-morning fire devastated the Garden Park Apartments, displacing 60 SIUC students.

The speed with which local agencies were able to pull together relief efforts is nothing short of spectacular. Within two hours of the fire, members of the Jackson County chapter of the American Red Cross had toiletries, blankets and food ready for the victims so they could have the familiar comfort of a shower and a meal after the crisis. By lunchtime Monday, some victims already were at Wal-mart, using Red Cross vouchers to replace clothes, backpacks and personal items lost in the fire. Other relief efforts also were under way within hours of the blaze.

The effectiveness of this relief effort shows that Carbondale learns from the past. The one blessing that came from the Pyramids apartment complex fire that claimed the lives of five SIUC students in 1992 was that fire-safety awareness increased, so local property owners and relief agencies were better prepared to deal with future crises. Authorities have said that without fire ladders on the outside of the buildings at Garden Park, many tenants could have been seriously injured or even killed as they tried to escape from second and third-story apartments.

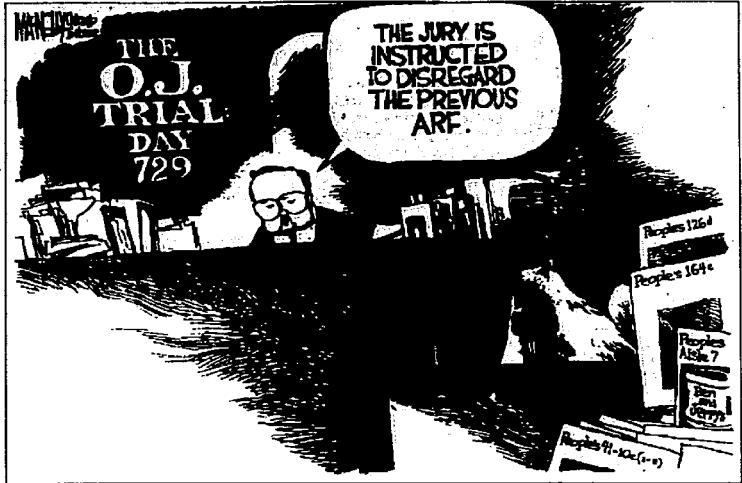

HOWEVER, THERE ARE LESSONS YET TO BE learned. After the Pyramids fire, University officials required all sophomore-approved housing facilities to have a system of alarms wired directly to the fire station to prevent future disasters. However, because of Garden Park's good safety record, University Housing did not demand that the property manager comply with the rule.

According to Carbondale Fire Chief Cliff Manis, a direct hookup to the fire station could have taken five minutes off the response time. If firefighters had known about the blaze sooner, it might have been confined to the apartment where it started. Although no one was killed or even seriously injured in the fire, the value of the destroyed building was between $500,000 and $750,000 — a hefty price to pay for something that could have been avoided with a little preparation.

DESPITE THE HIGH COST OF DAMAGES, THE property manager said in interviews after the fire that he is not sure whether the owners will install new alarms in the remaining buildings.

Knowing the potential for harm, it is unconscionable for Garden Park owners and managers to ignore methods of improving residents' safety. If the company that owns this complex does not install the necessary alarms, SIUC should cancel its contract with Garden Park and any other University-approved property owned by this company. It is good that tenants had ladders to use when they climbed out of their third-story windows, but if the owners had been made to comply with the University regulation, the tenants might never have needed those ladders.

IF SIUC STUDENTS RECEIVE A "B" ON A TEST, they know that they must change the way they prepare for future tests if they expect to be rewarded with an "A." Garden Park's owner, S & J Enterprises, should not be rewarded with University support without a similar change in preparation. When it comes to fire safety, there is no such thing as a "B" or a "C" — it's all pass/fail, and failing the next test could be tragic.

Letters to the Editor

SIUC parking is fair service

I read with interest Thursday's letter from Milton Wildermann complaining about inadequate parking.

While it may be true that the most convenient spaces are taken — by students willing to get to school early — there is always adequate space in, say, the Arena lot.

A complaint about waiting 20 minutes for a space to open up seems frivolous when you consider this lot is at most a 15-minute walk to class.

Still, since convenient spaces are limited, the only other solutions would be parking garages (Warning: these are very expensive and a large increase in fees would be required to finance them) or, probably most efficient, a shuttle bus system between campus and common student living quarters.

I do not think Mr. Wildermann's "solutions" would be as successful. For example, "I deny them their elitist, fascist policies" does not strike me as particularly constructive. By the way, in denying "them their elitist, fascist policies," Mr. Wildermann seems to ignore 1.) that faculty pay two to three times as much as students for their parking, and 2.) if a faculty member is late to class, the whole class waits. By the way, tuition fees pay for students' education — not for parking.

I have been a faculty member at three universities now, and SIUC's student parking fees are by far the lowest, and the facilities are perhaps the best.

One of the other schools offered convenient student parking — at almost $300 for nine months! Some other schools make no provision for student parking at all.

In addition, I cannot understand the complaint that "they (SIUC Police) give an inordinate amount of tickets because of illegal parking. They know full well how the parking situation is at SIUC."

If Mr. Wildermann doesn't like the rules, he should do his best to change them. Nevertheless, one of the main functions of the police is to enforce these rules as written. Whether one likes the rules or not is completely irrelevant to this function. If I thought my taxes were too high and decided to evade them, no one would or should have any sympathy if I defended myself with, "The IRS spends an inordinate amount of time catching tax evaders. They know full well how high taxes are."

How is Mr. Wildermann's argument different?

On the days I don't arrive around 8 a.m. so I can get a good space, I often have to park in a remote lot because many of the spaces in my regular lot are filled with cars with red stickers or no stickers at all.

This rampant disobedience of the rules (whether one likes these rules or not) indicates that either they are too laxly enforced or the $15 penalty is too small. Many universities simply tow all illegally parked vehicles. And given the illegal parking problem at SIUC, I would strongly recommend such a policy here.

Bipartisan representation poor

The National Lawyers Guild chapter at the SIUC School of Law would like to dispel some of the recent myths that are plaguing the mass media and the politicians of this country.

Contrary to the myth that Americans sent a loud and clear message last November by voting for the Republican party's agenda, the real message sent was that Americans, by and large, are disenchanted with the political process.

A whopping 21 percent of voting-age Americans voted for Republican candidates. There was no mandate for the Republicans' "Contract on America."

Most of the electorate opted to stay at home and chose not to vote for any party. Who can blame them, considering that both major parties essentially serve the interest of the corporate elite, albeit in a slightly different fashion, and neither party serves the interests of the working class or poor.

Another myth that should be dispelled is that President Clinton has a "left-wing" agenda. As proponents of a genuine left perspective, we wish to make clear that Clinton is "not one of ours."

His greatest "victories" were the passage of GATT, NAFTA and a draconian crime bill, all of which were bitterly opposed by the true left.

Meanwhile, he did not lift a finger to aid labor's fight to outlaw the permanent replacement of strikers, and he made a shambles of the health care fight by dismissing the single-payer proposal and attempting to appease the insurance lobby. Now he is trying to play the "good cop" to Republicans' "bad cop" as both try to see who can cut subsidies to the poor the quickest.

In that regard, we would like to dispel the myth that welfare recipients are a burden on the U.S. economy.

The average stay on welfare for families is two years or less, while Lockheed Inc., McDonnell Douglas Inc., and other military-industrial corporations have become permanent fixtures on the federal payrolls.

is not happy with the way the University handled Garden Park's approval.

"I think these landlords should come in compliance," he said. "Criteria are criteria."

Jones said University Housing did not push the property manager of Garden Park to install central alarms when the regulation went into effect in 1992 because the complex seemed to have a good track record.

"This was not a conscious decision," he said. "We informed them of the regulations when we conducted the inspections, but we did not push the issue because they put in the ladders and they seemed to be trying."

Assistant Fire Chief John Manis said emergency ladders installed on the balconies of the second- and third-floor apartments prevented injuries that might have resulted from residents jumping to escape the flames and may have saved lives.

Facilities applying for sophomore-approved status must pass annual inspections by the University. Jones said the last University inspection of Garden Park was held on March 16, 1994.

Paratore defended the decision to exempt Garden Park from the alarm regulation, but said the blaze may force the University to reconsider the decision.

"Certainly with the situation that occurred, we will have to reconsider that," she said. "Any students planning to sign contracts with Garden Park Apartments should wait to find out whether they will be sophomore-approved."

Paratore said University Housing has not received an application to renew Garden Park's sophomore approval and was unsure whether they plan to apply or not.

Clyde Swanson, property manager of Garden Park Apartments, could not be reached to comment on whether or not he will apply.

However, Swanson said Tuesday he was not aware of the regulation requiring him to install the alarms.

its Halloween policy three years later after the constituency groups voted against it.

The resolution will be sent to Senator Paul Simon, Senator Carol Moseley-Braun and congressional representative Jerry Costello.

and 31, Monday and Tuesday:

- SIUC maintain its policy on restricting overnight guests in residence halls and on parking lots during the weekend;

- SIUC enforce existing code of conduct;

- SIUC not schedule events that attract out-of-town visitors; and
- the city institute a keg ban for the weekend.

The owners also suggested in the proposal that other businesses along South Illinois Avenue join them in closing. Other ideas concerning future Halloweens will be presented at a later date.

Linda Parrish, owner of Gatsby's II, said the four owners made the decision to close as a group. Parrish said she did not wish to comment further on the group's actions.

Patrick Kelley, chairman of the Mayor/Presidential Task Force on Halloween, said he welcomes the bar owners' support to end the party.

"I think this shows their responsibility, recognizing the seriousness of Halloween in Carbondale," Kelley, an SIU law professor, said.

The Halloween Task Force has been meeting since December and consists of members of the community and University appointed by SIUC President John Guyon and Mayor Neil Dillard.

The committee's purpose is to come up with solutions to the Halloween party problem. Its final report should be approved by members this week. The recommendations will then be delivered to Guyon and Dillard.

Dillard said he thought the owners' proposal was interesting.

"It is something we, the council, will consider and look at closely," Dillard said. "I think by (the four bar owners) going public it might have an impact on like businesses."

However, Dillard said it is too soon to tell what the impact, if any, will be.

Kelley said he was happy to see that others support many of the recommendations the task force has discussed.

The bar owners' proposal differs in several ways from the final draft of the task force's report. The owners' proposal does not include raising the bar entry age to 21, closing the city parking lots in the downtown area, or committing city and University resources to effective publicity before and after Halloween telling the public that the party is over.

Each of these three proposals appear on the task force report.

The task force did not give specific dates for closing the University, whereas the owners specified the dates of closure.

The task force also recommended closing the bars on South Illinois Avenue and prohibiting the sale of alcohol in restaurants on the Strip during Halloween. It did not specify the dates of the closings.

Undergraduate Student Government leaders could not be reached for comment.

Sally Carter, owner of Hangar 9 and a member of the Halloween Task Force, said she did not wish to comment on the proposal at this time.

The owners of Six and Sideltrucks were not available for comment.

Designer of Stone House dies

By Benjamin Golshahr
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Thomas Graman, who designed several SIUC buildings and made several contributions to his community, died Tuesday at the age of 69.

In 1972, Graman designed the Stone Center, originally known as the University House, which served as the home of several SIUC presidents. He also designed the 15 buildings on the west side of campus that make up Small Group Housing. Completed in 1962, these units served as the home for the University's fraternities and sororities, and in 1983 were formally designated Greek Row.

From 1965 to 1972 Graman served on the SIU Foundation Board of Directors. He also designed a summer home at Kentucky Lake for the late Delyte Morris, a former SIUC president. Graman was born in Schilo, Ohio, June 29, 1943. He moved to Metropolis in 1928 and graduated from Metropolis Community High School in 1943. He earned his bachelor's in architecture from the University of Illinois in 1950.

He then served as a Naval Air Cadet from 1943 to 1945 during World War II, and when he returned to the United States he married the woman who would remain by his side for the remainder of his life — Irene Jones Graman.

In 1954, Graman began a private architecture practice which operated for 20 years.

Kevin Graman, one of his three sons, said his father closed his private practice to move on to bigger projects.

"He closed his office in 1974 to become corporate director of architecture for Marshall Erdman, a firm in Madison, Wis., where he oversaw the design and production of over 200 medical buildings throughout 43 states," he said. "In 1979 he became chief architect of Drury Industries, Inc., in Cape Girardeau, where he designed and constructed Drury Inn Hotels across the country."

After his professional endeavors were completed, he returned home to Metropolis and became president of the Metropolis City of Commerce, Rotary Club and Metropolis Community High School Board.

James Foreman, a U.S. district judge for Southern Illinois and a close friend of Graman, said he will be missed.

Victims who feel the need to stay in a motel until they can find adequate housing can take advantage of lowered rates at Carbondale's Super Eight Motel, at 1180 E. Main. Up to five students can stay in a Rodgers said they will continue to provide the service until victims of the fire no longer need it.

"We want to help out," Rodgers said. "We will do all we can to help out in this tragedy until the need is gone."

Flowin' to the music

The Suede Chain creates its harmony by linking diversity

By Benjamin Golshahr
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The Suede Chain blends ethereal, moody harmonies that glide like a slow bird through an inky current with tight, tense accents that leap out of the music.

"Ripplemark," the band's first LP, plays like rain washing through street gutters. Much of the music contains cascading rhythms that bend, snap and reform again. The CD contains such liquid gems as "Mississippi," "The Slow One," and "Rainfall Down."

Singer Matt Docter said songs are written in basically two ways, either one person writes a song and everyone else contributes to it (like "Radiance") or everyone collaborates on a song together from no fixed point. "We get together and everyone in the band has very different ideas about what they like or don't like," he said. "Me and my brother, being twins, are polar opposites, he's positive and I'm negative, we're like Republicans and Democrats — they both want the same thing ultimately, but they go about it totally different ways. Hopefully we try to meet in the middle. The music doesn't lean one way or the other, it's a combination of everyone's different tastes."

Docter composed a song, "Radiance" based on his interpretation of an aspect of a poem.

"One song I wrote was inspired by T.S. Elliot's poem 'The Waste Land,'" he said. "It was my interpretation of just one aspect of the poem — by no means all of it."

Sometimes it takes years of cruising down the runway before a band even begins to lift its wings off the ground, but once it does it jets right through the stratosphere. Such was the case with The Suede Chain.

The band's four founding members, Matt (lead vocals, guitars), his twin brother Jason Docter (drums), Brian Krumm (lead guitar) and Brian Hunt (bass), have been jamming together since their junior high years in Champaign.

They continued to play while attending University of Illinois in Champaign-Urbana while pursuing degrees. Matt and Jason earned B.A.s in English and minors in art, and Krumm earned a B.A. in journalism.

The Suede Chain

Matt Docter said throughout college they always maintained a commitment to the band.

Russian Seasons

Troupe combines folk art, dance

By James J. Fares
DE Entertainment Editor

Russian Seasons

SIUC students will have the chance to experience a little bit of Russia for a very little price.

Russian Seasons, a dance troupe of sixteen, will perform for the Southern Illinois Concert series tonight in Shryock Auditorium.

Formed in March of 1991 by former soloist of the Moiseyev Folk Dance Company, the troupe, led by Nikolai Androsov, chief choreographer and artistic director, will make its first Carbondale debut as part of its American tour.

Nancy Gillespie, associated with Community Concert Association, said this performance is a great way for students and community members to witness Russian dance culture.

"The dancers will combine their ballet dancing with folk art," she said. "This is a Community Concert Organization membership campaign."

Joanne Yantis, also a member of the Community Concert Organization, said students should come out and see the show because there are not many times they will be able to see a production like this for so cheap.

"We are able to have students see the show for $3," she said. "It's a real deal."

"Russian Seasons" refers to the seasons of Russian ballet arranged by Diaghilev in Paris at the turn of the century, in which folk arts were coupled with the academic disciplines of classical ballet. In the same way, Androsov brings together "everything from the simplest, ancient Russian folk dances to neo-classic and modern styles," including folk, ballet, tango, hora, syrtaki, czardas, hopak, classical, new classical and modern.

Gillespie said she thought it would be a good idea for Southern Illinois to experience Russian culture.

"It sounded like a good fun thing to have," she said. "The costumes and dances seemed interesting."

"Our members are paying for the students to see this production for just $3," Gillespie said. "They (students) can get a package of the dinner and the concert for $12. I heard the dinner is great."

The concert will be preceded by a buffet dinner, open to concertgoers, served from 6 to 7:45 p.m. in the Old Main Room of the SIUC Student Center.

"It is an excellent opportunity for students to see a performance at a reasonable price," Yantis said. "If you were to go to Chicago it would probably cost $25."

SIUC students may buy tickets to the concert at the door or at the Student Center ticket office for $3. "Russian Seasons" will perform at 8 p.m. in Shryock Auditorium tonight.

"We always wanted the band to be important, but when you're pursuing a serious degree it makes it hard."

Matt Docter singer, The Suede Chain

"We always wanted the band to be important, but when you're pursuing a serious degree it makes it hard," he said.

Three years ago the band experimented with a project called "Rust," which featured video, slide photography and two new members to the band, Mary Weingartner, who earned a philosophy degree from Northwestern University, on violin and Jake Brookman, from St. Louis, on cello.

Weingartner and Brookman fit in so well with The Suede Chain that they became permanent members.

"We liked what was happening with the band so we asked Mary and Jake to join," Matt Docter said. "We don't consider them a string section — their parts are woven into the band's sound, just like any other instrument."

With the release of "Ripplemark," radio airplay in St. Louis and Champaign and constant touring under the Digsters (an established Irish-alternative band from Chicago), The Suede Chain is rapidly emerging from the local circuits they were once confined to.

Matt Docter said their music is quickly reaching more audiences than ever before.

"Since we did the CD everything has completely picked up speed," he said. "We play all over the mid-west, and we're going to tour the East and West Coast over the summer. We're also going to record another record over the summer, which will be out in the fall."

He said the band's music is constantly improving and exploring other areas, and this will show on their upcoming CD.

"We never wanted to sound like other bands we saw that all sounded like each other, we wanted to sound different," he said. "Over the years we've all grown as songwriters and we're still learning as we go. It's always evolving, always changing — just being the people we are, we don't want to become stagnant. When we play Carbondale, we'll play quite a few new songs."

The Suede Chain will appear tonight at the Hangar 9, Yellow Afternoon will open and admission is $2.

"The abuser cannot violate the order," he said. "If they do, victims can have them arrested."

Often the order of protection is only effective if both sides obey it, said Paul Brinker of the Illinois Department of Children and Family Services.

"If an order of protection were a curtain of steel, they would do what they say they do," he said.

Brinker said in many cases victims let abusers back into their lives even after an order of protection is filed.

Brinker said informants often tell authorities about would-be abusive relations, but do not want to get involved.

"In cases like this, we can't do anything until after the fact," he said. "This country is good at building reaction systems which help after damage has been done," he said.

Much progress is being made in ending domestic violence, said Debbie Letarte from SIUC Women's Services.

"We are taking big steps," she said. "But we still have far to go."

Letarte said society needs to learn to recognize the signs of domestic violence in relationships, including male-supremacy, blaming others for actions, jealousy, low-self esteem, mood changes and emotional abuse. "Abuse seems to be in relationships when both have come from traditional family roles," she said. She said these roles included a female marrying at an early age, caring for the needs of others in the household first and the male is head of the household.

"It would be helpful to improve the situation for women in general," she said. "We need to let people know that you care about their recovery."

Rebecca Payne, director of the Women's Center, said one key to ending domestic violence is to promote education and break down long-held stereotypes and traditions.

"Don't tolerate sexist jokes," she said. "If a friend tells a sexist joke, tell them it offends you."

It used to be legal in Britain to beat your wife with a rod which was no bigger round than the thumb, Payne said, and abuse has been socially tolerated up till recent times.

Payne said she is speaking from experience; her first marriage was abusive.

"Many times women are told they are stupid, they're ugly, and no one else will love them," she said. "It takes a long time to get out of that mind set."

"There is a need to help them along to believe they can move on."

The panel discussion was the third part of a four-part series called "Public Issues" Forum, in which issues of public interest are discussed.

Dull trap defense wastes fans' dollars

The Sporting News

Newspaper entertainment sections provide content warnings for movies available to the public. They should do the same for National Hockey League games, which cost fans more than $30 in many cities.

When you spend that kind of money, you understandably expect to be entertained. But it's not happening every night with so many teams playing the entertainment-choking neutral-zone trap.

Last season, five or six teams relied on the trap defense. This season, 18 are using it. And that's why there are so many low-scoring games.

In a 4-2 St. Louis Blues-Calgary Flames game last week, there were plenty of scoring opportunities and some pretty good defense. Brett Hull led the decision for St. Louis with an empty-net goal.

"Now that's the way hockey was meant to be played," former Quebec Nordiques general manager Pierre Page said, a huge smile on his face. "Good hard offense and defense, nobody playing that boring trap defense."

"Watching a game with two teams that play the trap is like watching paint dry. The NBA didn't get so excited by allowing a zone defense, forcing teams to shoot three-pointers all night. "If playing a zone defense in the NBA is illegal, then the neutral-zone trap should be illegal in the NHL."

If the NHL is to become the game of the '90s, the Jaromir Jagrs, Sergei Fedorovs and Pavel Bures should be allowed to play their styles, uninhibited by the constant interference of the trap defense.

"The trouble is most coaches would rather take the easy way out, play a trap defense and wait for the other team to make a mistake," Page says. "It's getting to be just like Italian soccer, where there were so many 0-0 and 1-0 games the fans put on a rebellion, saying they were not being entertained."

The trap defense is effective. It's better than man-to-man because it takes less work and less talent to play.

But it's about as entertaining as going to the theater to see Al Gore do Shakespeare. "The only way to avoid the trap is if you get the puck out of your zone quickly, don't give the other team a chance to get organized," New York Rangers Coach Colin Campbell says.

"You've got to recognize it and know how to play against it. You can't let it totally control your game."

Until the NHL rules the trap defense illegal, here is our warning — our list of teams that are rated "G" because they do not play the trap: the Rangers, Blues, Pittsburgh Penguins, Chicago Blackhawks, Boston Bruins, Detroit Red Wings, San Jose Sharks and Los Angeles Kings.

Going to an arena to see any other teams should be viewed as a gamble for your hard-earned entertainment dollar.

Johnson continued her perfection in doubles play with partner Berksoy. The tandem compiled the tournament's best doubles record, coming in at 3-0 for the tournament, taking down all opponents in straight sets.

The Saluki netters are slated to compete in three dual matches Feb. 24-25. The Salukis go up against Louisville, DePaul, and Ohio State at Louisville, Ky. in a three-way dual meet.

Auld is not able to predict a winner for next weekend, as a lot of matches could go either way.

"Of course, we are looking to get as many wins as possible," Auld said. "I will be looking for steady progress and improvement in my players, as well as mental focus. I feel that mental focus is 90-percent of the game."

Gardner is looking to win, especially against rivals Louisville and DePaul.

"We're building up each weekend and getting stronger and stronger with more experience."

"If we go out there and compete to the best of our ability, we'll have a shot at winning."
 "We can do it if they all come out with personal bests. I've seen it before. We were once a 30 point dog and we came out with a win at one meet."
 The Salukis are just one of four teams, including Indiana State, Illinois State, and WSU, whose thoughts are on the same path since the favorite Northern Iowa is not a prohibited one.
 "The conference is very tight," Cornell said.
 "We could be anywhere from first to fifth."
 Cornell said in potentially close meets like this weekend's, the difference may not be each event's top finishers, but rather

"We've got to squeeze all the points out of this meet that we can. Fourth-, fifth- and sixth-place really count."

 Neil Emberton will also be a key as he has the potential to rack up 20 points by himself, competing in three events.
 Emberton will run the 1,000-meter race, in which he is first place in the MVC. He will also take part in the mile race, where he is 11 seconds out of first, and the distance medley relay.

meet," DeNoon said. "Only four of the 17 events are not dominated by top teams."
 "What helps these three teams is that we (Indiana SL) have depth," Sycamore coach John Gartland said.
 "We're probably going to score in every event. Other teams just don't have that depth."
 Gartland is not buying into the argument that the Redbirds are out of the Saluki's reach and also believes that his team will be looking up at the maroon and white going into the meet.
 "We think Illinois State and Southern are better than us in this type of scored meet. I think Southern could challenge for the title if they have a good meet and Illinois State has problems," Gartland said.

 "The same pretty much goes for us."
 With every point being a huge one for the Salukis, the loss of Raina Larsen to a stress fracture injury is a big loss.
 The absence of Larsen, who acquired the injury at Tuesday's practice, means she will not be able to run with SIUC's distance medley relay team, which could have qualified for first with the freshman.
 With the relay team's potential output of points significantly lowered without Larsen, DeNoon said he will not run the remaining top three relay runners in order to rest them for their other events.
 On the brighter side, for the Salukis, Homer will be contending for the conference MVP this weekend as she is favored to win the mile and the 1,000-meter run.
 Homer has also decided to stretch her endurance as far as she can by running the 3,000-meter race as well in order to score more individual points.

 "Sometimes you have to score in at least two and maybe even three events to win MVP," Homer said.
 "If I ran another race, I'd have a better chance."
 The meet begins Friday morning with the Pentathlon at 9 a.m. and finishes up late Saturday afternoon.

SALUKI TRACK

Women try to keep pace

By David Vingren
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Do not get the wrong idea about the strength of the SIUC women's track team — this is a good squad.

But the Salukis believe they are coming down to earth when they realize that they may not be good enough and might need a miracle to win the conference championship this weekend.

The host of Friday and Saturday's Missouri Valley Conference Championships, Illinois State, is favored over defending champion Indiana State and the Salukis, with the latter two teams fighting it out for second. "I'd be totally surprised if we were to win this championship," Saluki head coach Don DeNoon

"We're going to have to be better than perfect."

*Jennie Horner
Saluki distance runner*

said. "Illinois State's just too strong."

"We're going to have to be better than perfect," Saluki distance runner Jennie Horner said. "I don't even know if it's possible (to win). It would definitely be a miracle."

If the Salukis pull off the miracle, it will be their first conference title since their three-peat reign in the Gateway Conference from 1987-1989. But in order to do so, they cannot slip an inch.

"In every individual event that is decided by a quarter of an inch or one-tenth of a second or one-one-hundredth of a second, we need our athletes to be on the positive side," DeNoon said. "We can't be beat by a fraction. Whether it be for first place or fifth place, we need to be on top."

Even if first place is a hefty climb for the Salukis, finishing anywhere below third place will take quite a fall as the remainder of the MVC competition, outside of Indiana State and Illinois State, will most likely just take up space. "This is pretty much a triangle

Men's fate still up in air

By David Vingren
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The Saluki men's track athletes have been on the up as of late, but if there is any room left in their balloon for more helium, they had better fill it if they plan to rise above their conference rivals this weekend.

SIUC will be vying for their 13th championship in just 19 years of competing in the Missouri Valley Conference Championship, but this year's first-place trophy could belong to Northern Iowa or Indiana State for the first time in either school's history.

"Northern Iowa and Indiana State will be the favorites with Illinois State behind them, then us (SIUC) with Wichita State right on our tails," Saluki coach Bill Cornell said.

A win by the Panthers or the Sycamores at this year's MVC Championship, which begins Friday at Illinois State, would be only the second time in the meet's history a team, other than the Salukis or Redbirds, won.

"It's a credit to Southern and Illinois State that they have dominated like they have," Sycamore coach John McNichols said. "Southern has a great tradition and great coaches and Illinois State has great coaches and is building a tradition.

"People talk about the MVC as being a basketball conference, but we (the men's track teams) have guys who are NCAA Champions and All-Americans. This is just as much of a track conference."

The Salukis have the potential to win their first MVC title since 1992, but may have to be near perfect to do so since they are the underdogs.

"It will take a total effort if we're going to win," Cornell said.

SIUC netters begin season on high note

By Cynthia Sheets
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The traditional opening tournament at Eastern Kentucky University proved a success for the youngest SIUC women's tennis squad in school history.

The Salukis took on Eastern Kentucky, Tennessee Tech and University of Louisville during the two day competition.

SIUC women's tennis coach Judy Auld said that this opening tournament was a good weekend of competition for the team.

"We have a lot of depth this season," Auld said. "At this time of the year, I was pleasantly surprised with our performances. The team has been practicing for five weeks, and I think they were ready to play against other schools."

Freshmen Molly Card and Helen Johnson proved that statement by completing superb records of the event, each finishing 3-0 in individual tournament action. Card and Johnson both won easily over their opponents in straight sets.

"It was a great experience to play these three schools in competition," Card said. "During the matches, I was able to adjust my play according to the strengths and weaknesses of my opponents."

As the no. 1 seed, Saluki netter Patricia Zihler had strong competition, compiling a 1-2 record for the day.

"... I was pleasantly surprised with our performances."

*Judy Auld
women's tennis coach*

Sophomore Liz Gardner racked up a 2-1 record, defeating Eastern's Jenni McGinnis, 6-2, 6-0, and Ginny Rucka of Louisville, 6-0, 6-1. Gardner is the top Saluki returnee this season, and competed in the flight two bracket.

"The competition at the tournament was pretty strong," Gardner said. "I did have to play a lower ranked player, so that made a difference in the final results."

In flight four action, Sanem Berksoy beat EKV's Oliveria Nichols and Tennessee Tech's Tania Gonzales in straight sets. Berksoy, who holds the team-best record of 15 wins in a season, recorded her lone loss to Leslie Mehlerbauer of Louisville, 1-6, 6-4, 7-5.

Lucy Steele, the only junior on this season's Saluki squad, rounded out the tournament going 2-1 for the weekend.

Saluki women begin crucial stretch run

By Doug Durso
Daily Egyptian Reporter

This is it.

Four games left and the SIUC women's basketball team is in the heat of a four-way Missouri Valley Conference title hunt.

The Saluki women take on Drake tonight and Creighton Saturday. Both teams are tied with Southern at the top of the league standings.

SIUC women's head coach Cindy Scott said the importance of this week's games cannot be understated.

"It's amazing what's at stake here," she said. "We play the four top teams in the conference to end the season, but I keep saying they have to play us."

SIUC controls its own destiny, because if the Salukis win the rest of their remaining games the team holds the tie-breaker advantage.

Drake and Creighton both beat SIUC the first time the teams met, but Scott said her squad has changed since then.

On Jan. 28, SIUC lost at Drake 92-70 and then the Saluki women traveled to Creighton and lost to the Lady Jays two days later, 73-60.

However, after that game Scott inserted Christel Jefferson into the lineup, replacing Kelly Geistler, and the Salukis have been riding a five-game winning streak ever since.

"I think we are a vastly different team now and it started after we came back from that road trip and changed our lineup," she said. "Both teams played well on that road trip and handled fairly easily."

Thursday's game against Drake features the inside-outside duo of 5-11 senior forward Kristi Kinne and 5-6 senior guard Julie Ritters.

"Drake has a very, very balanced attack with Kinne and Ritters," Scott said. "Kinne is one of the most potent inside players in the league and Ritters can really shoot the ball from three."

"They are a well-coached team that plays with great composure."

Creighton comes to the Arena Saturday, and Scott said that the Lady Jays play a different type of game than Drake does.
