Baggott named assistant to the chancellor

JEFF ENGELHARDT
Daily Egyptian

Baggott has done a little bit of everything at SIUC.

Now Baggott will have to use his 25 years of experience to assist Risa Cheng, the university's next chancellor, who is coming in as an outsider from the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee.

Baggott beat out five other candidates to become the new assistant to the chancellor Monday. The chancellor will take over for Susan Ferry, who retired after 11 years in the position and 30 years at the university — on March 1.

Ted Grace, director of the Student Health Center, said Baggott's vast knowledge of the campus and experience with staff and faculty from all departments makes him a perfect fit for the position.

Grace who came to the university in July 2008, said he named Baggott as his associate director because of Baggott's ability to get him up to speed about campus history and operations.

"I've only been here a year and a half and he's been wonderful in helping me know the ropes, so we've had to see him go, but it's a dream position for him," Grace said.

"His deep history with the campus will be very beneficial for a new chancellor coming from outside the campus.

Baggott said he has enjoyed his time at the Student Health Center, but is excited for the opportunity to tackle the most pressing issues on the campus. Baggott has handled the financial responsibilities for the health center and is a member of the Saluki First Year Experience committee, giving him a wide scope of experiences, he said.

One man's trash, another's treasure

It was all part of the first competition in the Saluki's Healthiest Loser contest Monday at the Recreation Center.

It is the second time the Lifestyle Enhancement Center has put on the program, said Kyle Thompson, chair of the Recreation Committee.

"The participants said the competition is more than just about winning or being weight," Thompson said.

It's about learning a healthier lifestyle and working together as a team, said Eric Hoffman, a senior from Elk Grove Village studying mechanical engineering.

"My teammates are a huge motivation," said Hoffman, who is part of the morning team. "You wake up and the accountability is what makes you show up in the morning."

Alar Beck, a senior from Steelville studying exercise science and a trainer for the morning team, said the weight loss doesn't matter as much as the lessons about living a healthier lifestyle.

"My teammates have been great," Beck said.

"It's an intense competition, but the focus is on taking care of the body and focusing on a healthier lifestyle.

"Winning the competition also helps one vote the students, said Marilyn Ross, a graduate student in education administration from Carbondale.

"I'm excited. I'm a competition. Ross said.

Thompson said some changes have been made to the contest this time around. It has the same concept as the show that inspired it, "The Biggest Loser," but it differs in many ways.
Losers

The students are split into two teams of eight in hopes the competition will inspire them to work as hard as they can, she said.

Last year, students competed in five groups of four participants, and that created many problems for the personal trainers in the Lifestyle Enrichment Center, she said. It was hard to make times for everyone to meet and use up a lot of the trainers’ resources, she said.

Thompson-Cundill said they cut down the number of teams this year in order to keep the competition while encouraging students to lead healthier lives.

“We thought it would give more opportunity and create a competitive edge in different ways instead of only one way,” Thompson-Cundill said. “That way, students can still focus on a healthier lifestyle but want to win at the same time.”

None of the participants got voted off unless they quit, she said, which is unlike a usual TV show.

“Our goal is to help students be more educated about their own personal health and wellness and help put them on a path that will create a healthier lifestyle for them,” Thompson-Cundill said.

She said the next 10 challenges would take place at 6 p.m. every Sunday, except for spring break.

The winners will be chosen based on how their body mass index has changed throughout the competition, who showed up to the most training sessions and which team wins the challenges, Thompson-Cundill said.

Prizes have also changed from the book scholarships awarded last year, she said. Instead, the top three winners will receive massage packages and between eight and 16 additional personal training sessions after the competition is over, Thompson-Cundill said.

She said this way students who worked the hardest will have the largest advantage in keeping up with the healthy lifestyle they learned throughout the competition.

“In theory, those that really work hard throughout the program will be rewarded by being able to continue one-on-one training with a personal trainer after the program is over,” she said.

However, Thompson-Cundill said the goal of the competition is not only have the participants continue their lifestyle changes, but to inspire others to do the same.

“If people have friends or peers or coworkers or students that are participating in the program, I’m sure that’s a motivating factor for them as well,” she said. “It inspil­ration to watch other people work really hard to achieve something.”

Scrap yards turn junk into treasure, recyclables

NICK QUIGLEY
Daily Egyptian

The government may have had its Cash for Clunkers program, but area residents have been turning the recycling of old vehicles upon themselves for years.

Dozens of individuals and several full-sized junkyards in southern Illinois are in the business of recycling junk cars. With the price of scrap metal hovering around $145 per ton, some individuals are in it for the money, while others see scrapping as a way to help those in need or help promote a cleaner environment.

Paul Mace, of Benton, said he has picked up junk cars for more than 10 years and after his mother passed away three years ago he began scrapping as a way to give to charity. Mace began donating a portion of the money made from recycling cars to St. Jude Children’s Hospital through country radio station Z100, he said.

"In December, I had a pretty good month," Mace said. "I donated I think either $200 or $100 to St. Jude’s."

John Clark of Clark & Son, a recycling facility in Cobden, has been in the business about seven years. He said one of his main objectives is to reduce the impact junk cars can have on the environment.

"We pick up anything from Volkswagens to Greysounds," Clark said. "It’s all about cleaning up the environment."

Hauling off the vehicles is only part of the process, according to those in the scrap business. Before it can be crushed and recycled, each car must undergo a process to eliminate possible environmental hazards they might pose. Those in the scrap business say they take special care to be as environmentally friendly as possible.

Mace said most cars he picks up are brought back to his pole barn where he’ll try to salvage the battery or tires if they’re in good condition, before taking the car to the scales to be weighed. The rest of the car is left alone, as he doesn’t want to be responsible for any environmental damage, Mace said.

"I don’t take the radiators or catalytic converters off these cars," Mace said. "Because if I did, the EPA would come down on me hard and I don’t want that.”

Tim Brown, manager of T&T Recycling in Hurst, said it is vital for the scrapping industry to maintain environmentally sound facilities.

Brown said his facility drains the gas tanks, removes batteries and tries to keep the process as easy as possible for the customer. Most of the time the customer will have to do little beyond dropping the car off at the yard, he said.

"If a scrap yard is really wise, they’ll see to it that there aren’t any environmental hazards," Brown said. "Otherwise, when you decide to retire, they’ll take everything you’ve worked for all your life.”

Clark said his business removes the motors, transmissions and drains all the fluids before the cars are crushed.

"We put the cars on concrete, and we have a place we sell the fluids on,” he said.

While many businesses in the junk car industry simply scrap the cars, others store and sell them for parts.

Jim Riggs, an employee of Dan’s Used Auto Parts in Carterville, said their yard deals exclusively with wrecked cars available from insurance claims. He said a car could sit on the lot for up to two years while it is parted out, but after a while, it gets damaged and corroded.

"There’s no environmental hazards that I know of," Riggs said. "We clean that stuff up as we go.”

Nick Quigley can be reached at nquigley@dailyEgyptian.com or 536-3311 ext. 274.

Canada drops medals quest

JAIME ARON
The Associated Press

VANCOUVER, British Columbia - Seeing how their neighbors down south have owned the podium so far, Canadian officials are getting up on their goal of winning the medal count at the Vancouver Olympics.

The concession speech by the leader of Canada's Olympic committee - "I'm not going to live in a fool's paradise and think we're going to win" - is pretty realistic. Canadian athletes had only nine medals as of Monday afternoon, one less than the Americans' bronze medals.

The United States has 24 medals, most all countries Canada was in a three-way tie for fourth.

This white flag is another blow for Canadians still reeling from their hockey team's loss to the United States Sunday. It also stings because of the $117 million and five years invested into an "own The Podium" campaign aimed at earning the most medals at these Winter Olympics.

"I think we did the right thing," COC head Craig Redmond said. "Would I modify (expectations) based on the knowledge that we have now? Sure would.

At least the locals still have some measures of revenge. Their men's cutting team - not as good as the Americans' - is still a source of pride - knocked out the U.S. team Monday, and there's a good chance the Canadians will meet in the hockey finals.

The Americans advanced with a 9-1 victory over Sweden in the semifinals. Canada was playing Finland later Monday to determine the opponent in the gold-medal game. The final is Thursday.

With the U.S. guaranteed no worse than silver, that means the Americans can claim 23 medals, matching their total from the 2002 Turin Games, which had been their record for a Winter Olympics not held in the United States.

The U.S. Olympic Committee didn't offer any targets for Vancouver, but it seems safe to say the delegation has met or even surpassed its pre-Olympic goals.

To appreciate how well Americans have done, consider that with 27 events left, they are: closing in on their record for most medals at any Winter Games (34, at the 2002 Salt Lake City Games). In position to win the overall medal count for only the second time. The other was the 1932 Lake Placid Olympics. That was the third Winter Olympics and it featured just 14 events.

Yet the medals race certainly isn't over.

Germany tied the Americans for the most gold (seven) and upped its total to 21 with a big haul Monday. But Germany's women's cross-country team sprint and silver in the men's team sprint and in ski jumping.

"Women's hockey What a day to remember for U.S. coach Mark Johnson.

On the 10th anniversary of the "Miracle on Ice" - in which he scored two goals - Johnson saw his team average its Olympic shootout loss to Sweden.

The Americans jumped ahead 4-0, then put the game away with four goals early in the third period, all against Kim Martin, the same goalie who stunned them in Turin.

Monique Lamoureux scored three goals. Angela Ruggiero, a four-time Olympian playing in her record 250th game, also scored.

Curiously Skip John Shuster's team got an early lead over Canada, but wound up losing 7-2 in a shortened match.

A USA fan has Old Glory pulled down by a Canadian fan before the first period of a men's hockey preliminary round match Sunday at Canada Hockey Place in Vancouver, British Columbia. The Americans won 5-3, Canadian officials have given up on winning the medal counts at this year's Games.

ERIC WERNER RICARDO ALONSO-ZALDIVAR
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Starting over on health care, President Barack Obama knows his chances aren't looking much more promising.

A year after he called for a far-reaching overhaul, Obama unveiled his most detailed plan yet on Monday. Realization is setting in that he'll just have to win a bigger enough slice to silence the talk of a failing presidency.

The 10-year, 31 trillion plan, like the current limited push for amending the Senate, would bring health insurance to more than 31 million Americans who now lack it. Government insurance wouldn't be included, a problem for Democrat supporters. Republicans are skeptical about where the money would come from - and about Obama's claim that the plan wouldn't raise the federal deficit.

Striking out in one fresh direction that would have widespread appeal, Obama would give federal regulators new powers over the insurance industry, a reaction to a rash of double-digit premium hikes that have infuriated policy holders in California and other states.

The plan is supposed to be the starting point for Obama's televised, bipartisan health care summit Thursday - a new beginning after a year of wrangling and letting Congress take the lead. Yet Republicans were quick to dismiss it as a mélange of two Democratic bills the public doesn't want. Democrats, while reassured their commitment to major changes, reacted cautiously, mindful that Obama is asking them to stoke their political fortunes in the fall elections.

In the end, Americans who have listened to a year of talk about big changes in their health care may see much smaller changes, if any. The president is likely to have to settle for much less than he wants - small, piecemeal legislation that would whittled the rough edges of today's system but stop well short of coverage for nearly everyone.

Still, any kind of win on health care would be good for Obama right now. For a president, victory often begins victory, defeat spares defeat.

A modest achievement would allow Obama to move on to other pressing issues, claiming credit for getting something done despite the bumbling partisan environment in years.

White House spokesman Dan Pfeiffer called the proposal "an opening bid for Thursday's summit.

"One thing I want to be very clear about - namely that the president expects and believes the American people deserve an up-or-down vote on health reform," he said.

But privately, a senior White House official said to look for a "package" that would include caps on medical malpractice liability.

Liberal Rep. Anthony Weiner, D-N.Y., one of the rank-and-file lawmakers who would have to close ranks to pass Obama's proposal, questioned what's left in it for him after the president decided to dump a government insurance option backed by progressives.

Outlook no brighter for Obama's new health plan

"General says he has backup plan after timing of combat exit WASHINGTON - The top U.S. general in Afghanistan insists the U.S. war in Afghanistan is "in the homestretch," though there will be combat forces there for a year or more after a war in the region is formally declared over.

"Army Gen. David Petraeus, who has been in Afghanistan for more than seven years, said he has a plan B and he isn't sure he wants to be there anymore. There is a "75 percent chance" that the U.S. will hold onto bases in eastern Afghanistan, he said.

"Our plan now is to have a combat exit this year, but if the political process doesn't move quickly, we have a backup plan," he said.

Anti-obesity campaign adds to SIUC's shame culture

VIRGINIA DICKEN

Yes, SIUC has a weight problem, but it isn't the fat people. It's fat-phobia. While pleasurable activity and nourishing foods can improve everyone's well-being, Obama's anti-fat campaign is unnecessary here.

"You should stop eating at DQ." A Facebook group exists for thin people declaring "I'm Not the Reason SIUC is the 4th Fattest School." Illustrated with a shaming "faceless fatty" picture. "Obesity" is discussed in classes without any critique, forcing me as a TA to grade papers filled with calls to do away with the 12007. "Obesity" is discussed in classes without any critique, forcing me as a TA to grade papers filled with calls to do away with fat-positivity and a "Healthiest Loser" competition, implying I am a failure of PE. I ignites the fact that many people can change behaviors and remain the same before, and weight fluctuations are often short-term. It ignores how decreased stigma and increased acceptance promote longer-lasting health improvements.

In a month full of horrible movies, "Shutter Island" represents an opportunity for movie lovers the return of one of America's greatest directors, Martin Scorsese. Leonardo DiCaprio stars as Teddy Daniels, a U.S. Marshal who is investigating a disappearance at Shutter Island, a mental institution for the criminally insane. However, he and his partner Chuck (Mark Ruffalo) begin to suspect there is more than meets the eye as they meet the facility's former patients.

The institution's doctors, Dr. Cawley (Ben Kingsley) and Dr. Nachaev (Max Von Sydow), refuse to answer Daniels' questions and seem to have concealed pieces of the truth. On top of everything, Daniels continually has hallucinations of his dead wife Dolores (Michelle Williams) and begins to lose his mind.

A master of the crime drama, Scorsese has only touched on the psychological thriller a handful of times, most notably with "Cape Fear." While these films are not as deep as his masterpieces, such as "Taxi Driver" or "Goodfellas," Scorsese shows he is careful with his script selections because his thrillers are better than most of the competition.

Many thrillers tend to be elaborate and details are rarely revealed. Unfortunately, sometimes certain details do not connect and the twists make no sense. With "Shutter Island," some major details are questionable, but the overall plot connects well and all major questions are answered. The movie keeps the viewer guessing until the end. While the story line is engaging, the emotion is missing. Why is Teddy's situation worse than most of the competition?

What deeper connections can be made? The audience only gets a limited view of Teddy's past and he never connects with down. There is never a dull moment in Scorsese's skillful films, with constantly changing angles and fast moving shots. As some point, however, it proves to be too much. The attention is taken away from the story and the context of conversations can be lost. It is much more apparent in the first half of the movie, but it calms down as the plot progresses. Appearing in three other Scorsese films, DiCaprio brings out his best with the famed director. He basically plays two characters: a hard-nosed detective and a vulnerable man slowly losing his sanity. Ruffalo is also impressive as the always-cool partner who acts as Teddy's reasonable voice.

Sydow and Kingsley are extremely effective as the creepy doctors with a secret and always seem to steal the scene. The movie's greatest strength is its ability to disturb the viewer. As slick as it sounds, there is nothing profound in Scorsese's ability to make one's jaw drop and cringe at certain scenes. These scenes are important for the audience to understand Teddy psychologically.

Despite being 68 years old, Scorsese continues to make movies outside his comfort zone. While it is not the next "Silence of the Lambs," "Shutter Island" is an adequate thriller that will not disappoint.

"This is a diverse opportunity to have an impact in a helpful way because the institution is facing a lot of challenges," Baggott said. "There's no doubt it's going to be a busy start, but I'm encouraged and excited about it." Both Grace and Chancellor Sam Goldman said Baggott's initiative has stood out.

After a severe storm on May 8, 2009, caused damage around campus, Grace said Baggott took the lead in discussions involving Goldman and SIU President Glenn Poshard to start a cleanup process as soon as possible. Goldman led Baggott also showed the same leadership qualities when the university started a nursing program. He said Baggott was key in finding the right space and people to get the program running.

"Jake has strong leadership planning and decision making that he developed early on through his military career and here on this campus," Goldman said. "He and I have worked on several projects and he can hit the ground running."

Ferry said the position does not offer any other option but to hit the ground running.

Ferry, who was working with multiple administrators in Atho-ny Hall since 1982, said it is a challenging job but offers something new every day. "It is very busy, you have to do a lot of multitasking and you are doing something different every day, which I like," Ferry said. "It really this job requires you to find solutions and do what is best for the university."

Goldman said Baggott also has the most important qualification for the position — the trust and support of the incoming chancellor.

Throughout the search process, Goldman said Cheng interviewed and met with the final finalists to help make a final decision. He said, the relationship he had with Ferry was vital to the decisions he made and the same would apply for Baggot and Cheng.

"When I met with Dr. Cheng I made it clear to her that I understand how important the relationship is between the president and the chancellor," Baggott said. "I'm excited about working with her."

I think it's a great opportunity for the institution and I'm glad to be a part of it."

Baggott's appointment is pending approval from the Board of Trustees.

As Baggott prepares to leave his associate post at the Student Health Center, Grace said his staff would look for ways to dispense Baggott's responsibilities without having to find a replacement at his position.

But that does not change the fact that this is still the biggest rivalry in the Missouri Valley Conference. The win against the Bluejays won’t change the fact that, up until this point, the Salukis are 15-12 overall and 6-10 in the MVC, though season-ending losses to the Hoyas and Buckeyes may have taken their toll.

As of now, it looks as though Southern will have to win four consecutive games in the MVC Tournament to get an automatic bid to the NCAA Tournament. But no change of scenery and the loss of Stinnett, who has been a spark plug for the Salukis this season, could swing things in SU’s favor.

Be sure to wear maroon all the way tonight to the SIU Arena and show how much you hate Creighton.

Senior Kendra Deck and junior Katherine Burton took second and third in the women’s 400-meter dash, respectively.

Senior Nadier Williams took third place in the women’s 400-meter run.

The women’s long jump team had a top-five finisher in each event. Freshman Kenedi McDaniel had the fastest finish of the season in the 400-meter dash.

"There were some really good performances, especially in the throw," said head coach Dana Altman.

Sophomore Mercedez Dunn was the highest finisher in the long jump, taking fourth place. Freshman Kasey Ogegwa took fifth in the high jump.

Sophomore Brandon Deloney took fifth place for the men in the 60-meter dash, and fellow sophomore Quincy Shadron received a sixth-place finish in the 400-meter dash.

"We are right where we want to be going into conference," said Altman.

A few top athletes were missing from the Friday Night Special.

Sophomore Jeneva McCall sat out from the meet to rest up for the upcoming Missouri Valley Conference Championships. Meredith Higgins did not compete in her normal sprinting events and opted for hurdles.

Sophomore Malakiah Love did not compete in the long and triple jump events, choosing to race in the 60-meter dash.

Lambert hits first provisional mark

TIMOTHY HEHN
Daily Egyptian

The SIU track and field teams returned from their short trip to Charleston, with four first-place finishes, two NCAA provisional marks and two personal records in the Friday Night Special held at Eastern Illinois' Lantz Indoor Fieldhouse.

Coming up big for the Salukis again were both the men and women's weight throw teams, grabbing three of the Salukis four first-place finishes.

Sophomore J.C. Lambert took first-place victories in both the men's weight throw and shot put events, earning his first NCAA provisional mark of the season in the latter. His winning mark of 88-09.50 not only gave him a personal record, but now ranks eighth highest in SIU history.

Lambert's winning throw of 66-00.50 in the weight throw event crushed a throw by Brandon Pounds of Illinois State by more than six feet.

"The throwers are really strong right now," threw coach John Smith said. "J.C. (Lambert) throwing far in both the weight and shot, and Gwen (Berry) throwing far in the shot is a good indicator of our physical strength."

Senior Ryan Shumaker and sophomore Matt Eader and Brad Foot all finished in the top 10 as well for the weight throw, with Shumaker taking fourth, Eader and Foot grabbing seventh and 10th, respectively.

Following Lambert in the shot put, Shumaker, Eader and senior Joe Paradiso placed third through fifth, respectively.

Junior Gwen Berry continued her success for the women's team by winning the shot put event with a throw of 58-09.50, setting a personal record and earning an NCAA provisional mark. A fact she has accomplished in two straight meets.

"I threw far. It feels great," Berry said. "Shot put is not my favorite, but I try to make it to Nationals in the event would be a big accomplishment for me."

Junior Richard Roach took sixth place in the event, and freshman Kim Fortney came in 10th.

The women fared similarly well in the weight throw event, with senior Sasha Leeth gaining the highest finish for the Salukis at second, and Roach close behind in third. Junior Olga Glava and Fortney rounded out the Salukis' top-10 finishes, placing fifth and ninth, respectively.

Junior Meredith Hayes, senior Terri Counts, junior Miracle Thompson and freshman LaQuisha Bejolje dominated the 60-meter hurdles event, with Hayes taking first, and Counts, Thompson and Bejolje taking third through fifth, respectively.

Saluki women soar past Golden Eagles

RYAN SIMONIN
Daily Egyptian

Intensity was high as the women's tennis team watched teammate and senior Jessica Flannery grind out a tiebreaker against Katie Barnhill of Tennessee Tech University.

Flannery started strong, finishing the first set 6-3, stumbled 2-6 in the second but returned to the third set with dominance as she won the match with a 10-3 second-set victory.

Flannery's win solidified the SIU women's tennis team's dominant play against the Golden Eagles as they won by an final score of 6-1, while the men's team lost by a score of 6-1 Saturday at Sports Blast in Carbondale.

Womens tennis head coach Audra Nothwrb said some of the players got into tough situations, but came back by playing to the opponents' weaknesses.

"They really did well at having a plan and sticking to it," Nothwrb said. "They did a good job of finding what the opponent didn't like and sticking to that plan."

The women's team showed its talent early as it won two of its three doubles matches, which gave the Salukis an early one-point lead.

The team comprised of freshman Malania Delart, sophomore Martina Vanna and junior Dinara Delart.

Ce beat Tennessee Tech's Katie Barnhill and Lylei Zora by a score of 8-6,5, while freshman Jennifer Dien and senior Jessica Flannery won their match by a score of 8-4 against Diana Woodcock and Laura Porras of the Golden Eagles.

The Salukis carried their success into the singles competition as the team won five of its six singles matches.

Dien captured a win in straight sets as she beat the Golden Eagles' Lylei Zora by a score of 6-1,6-1, while sophomore Martina Vanna won a second-round victory against Tennessee Tech's Alina Kuznetsova by a score of 6-4,6-0.

Sophomore Emily Whitney posted a win in straight sets as well as, as best Tennessee Tech's Laura Porras 7-5,6-3.

Dien defeated Frederick Kuhl by a score of 6-0,6-3.

"I felt like I could have done better, but I was able to adjust to their style of play," Dien said. "I was a bit over-aggressive."

Nothwrb said the team played well in some areas, but there is still work to be done.

"Not everybody played well, which means we still have a lot to work on," Nothwrb said. "We need to work on our return we've just been going for too much and missing."

On the men's side, junior Falk De Beenhouwer recorded his only win for the Salukis in a singles match against the Golden Eagles' Owen Pachon in three sets 7-6,3-6,10-6.

The men's team lost all three of its doubles matches, but two of the three matches were decided by two or less games.

"We need to play better in doubles play," mens tennis head coach Dan Nelson said. "Technology, we were playing pretty good but we need to capitalize on big points like break and game points."

Saturday wasn't a complete loss for the men as senior Arturo Leonenko played his first singles match since being hampered by injuries throughout most of the fall and spring seasons. Leonenko's return to the court was not a memorable one, though, as he lost to Tennessee Tech's Arturo Sartiz 6-2,6-7.

"The good things were that Falk De Beenhouwer played strong and got a win and Leonenko was able to finally come back and play," Nelson said.

Nelson said despite the loss, he continues to see improvement from the team.

"They are getting better each time they look out on the court and I think with time we will start to convert those big points," Nelson said.

No, this isn't Kent Williams against Kyle Kurver, or even Jamal Team against Nate Funk. The Salukis and Bluejays no longer run the Missouri Valley Conference as they did for most of the last decade.

SIU is in ninth place in the MVC at 6-10, while Creighton is tied for fourth place with Indiana State and Bradley at 8-8.

It is easy to see this season has been a disappointment for both teams. Creighton was picked to finish second in the MVC preseason rankings, while the Salukis were tabbed to finish fourth.
