Merlin’s nightclub destroyed by fire

By Monroe Walker

A Tuesday afternoon fire destroyed Merlin’s Bar, Merlin’s Nightclub and Merlin’s Grill, popular Carbondale night spots. DAMAGES originally estimated at $200,000 by Merlin’s manager Neal Smith, were later changed to $550,000 by Carbondale Fire Chief Ulmorn Crawford.

The air was thick with the acrid smell of black smoke spiraling from the bar's rear roof, while firemen and volunteers from Merlin’s staff plus passersby battled to keep the flames from spreading next door.

The fire, which began in the kitchen grill, chased about 25 customers out of The Mall.

The fire injured no one in the grill area, but left behind flooded, soot-covered streets, tumbling walls of a single building shell and smoke-laden firefighters.

Merlin’s — formerly the Golden Gauntlet — at 315 S. Illinois Ave., was ablaze shortly after 3 p.m. The cause of the blaze was not known.

A former bartender at Merlin’s, Larry Bennett, said a french fryer apparatus in the kitchen would have been a “good possibility for a fire to start.”

Warren Preis, former grillman and janitor for Merlin’s, came away from the hose line to explain what happened. He said he was next door in The Mall when the fire began.

“Some guy came in from Merlin’s and said it was a fire in the grill. They wanted my help but we couldn’t get back in the building,” Preis related.

Water dripping out of his face, “There was too much smoke and fire,” he explained. So he climbed to the roof of Bruner Office Supply to help hose down Merlin’s.

Smoke was streaming out windows and holes in the back wall when Preis rejoined the hose team.

Preis said that three fire extinguishers failed to control the grill fire before Carbondale firemen were called to the scene.

William Quinlin, also a janitor at Merlin’s, said the fire spread to the ceiling from the grill area and “across the fire rail into other parts of the building.

More fire photos on pages 3 and 7

“The heat caused the fire to pop and that was the only explosion. It started out as a small fire and they couldn’t stop it,” Quinlin said.

Asked to describe the damage, Quinlin shook his head. “Gone. Completely gone.”

Two fire trucks and a snorekel were called to duty. Before they left, three walls and the roof over the bar and grill were down, water was spilling off adjoining buildings and smoke had damaged shops located in The Mall, just north of Merlin’s Nightclub.

Firemen poured water on the blaze from all sides, also soaking The Mall to prevent the fire from spreading.

City turns down center for women

By Monroe Walker
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The Carbondale City Council Tuesday night denied the request for financial support for a proposed Women’s Center and postponed action on recommendations to continue closing South Illinois Avenue to accommodate “street parties.”

In denying the request for financial support for the proposed Women’s Center, Councilman Hans Fischer pointed out that another organization was opening an 11 bedroom house in Carbondale and would offer services to residents. He recommended that “closer ties should be established between the various groups in the community and already existing social services.”

Rita Moss, chairman of the ad hoc committee for a Women’s Center, said that the other organization was designed to cater to the needs of the emotionally ill and the Women’s Center is not.

“There is no overlapping of services,” she said, “and it will be a day care center when it opens. We plan to fulfill a need that exists which they cannot fulfill.”

Mayor Neal Eckert said not enough money was available to fund all the things that needed to be funded and “we must deal with priorities.”

Councilman George Karnes said that the Women’s Center organization was nowhere near an organization in terms of function as the Carbondale Free Clinic was when it was funded.

The street closing recommendations were presented to the City Council in a report prepared by the South Illinois Avenue Task Force and recommended that South Illinois Avenue be closed for two nights during the fall quarter and three nights during the spring quarter. (Continued on page 3)
Local policemen attending classes at Logan College

By Daryl Stephenson
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The first accredited police training class in Southern Illinois in almost two decades has begun with five Carbondale police officers participating.

Carbondale Police Chief Joe Dakin and City Manager Carroll Fry conducted a tour of the program for news media representatives yesterday. The week-long class is being held at John A. Logan Junior College in Carterville.

Besides Carbondale, six area municipal police departments and four county police departments are participating in the program, making a total of 21.

The 24-hour course is being conducted under the auspices of the University of Illinois Police Training Institute by the University of Illinois.

Eugene W. Irvin, P.TI chairman of planning and development, has been named the program's temporary coordinator. Irvin said the training program includes both classroom and on-the-job experiences. Courses include seminars on criminal law, investigation, writing and proper procedure for conducting searches and seizures.

The class, which originally was to begin eight hours of classroom work each week, is being extended to eight hours available for weekend or emergency work with their local department.

Irvin said that six weekly tests will be given in the course before graduation, Aug. 25.

Trainees also will receive 10 hours of emergency first aid instruction, he said, along with instruction on proper use of firearms and the police fire range in Du Quoin.

Tuition for the course is $50 plus a $5 weekly meal charge for each officer. Dakin said. With accredited departments eligible for reimbursements from the state of up to $50 per man, he said.

The last time a course was held in this area was seven years ago at SIU. That program ended in November of 1971, when accreditation was discontinued by the Illinois Local Government's Civil Service Commission.

Waters hosts WSI program

Mike Waters is host for the radio news magazine, "All Things Considered..." each weekday, Thursday and Friday from 4 to 5:30 on WSI (1090). The National Public Radio (NPR) program consists of reports, thoughts, stories and sound pictures as varied and diverse as the people and concepts they describe. NPR was conceived as an entirely unique medium—a non-commercial radio network designed to draw people across the country together with information about themselves, each other, and the world around them.

The show covers the national and international events in depth. Every radio station covers the who, what, when and where. "All Things Considered..." covers the why and how. Waters has the ability to transform common news casts into an entertaining talk show. Magazine format makes the program a different approach to hearing the news.

Irm Adams dies, SIU lawyers' wife

by University News Service

Funeral services will be held at 4 p.m. Thursday at the Van Natta Funeral Home in Carbondale for Mrs. Ivrine W. Adams, SIU legal counsel. Mrs. Adams died Sunday night at St. Joseph's Hospital after an illness of two weeks. A Rosary Service will be held at St. Joseph's Wednesday. Burial will be at Murdale Gardens cemetery.

The Adams family came to SIU in 1962 after Irvine W. Adams, SIU lawyer, was appointed by the Air Force as deputy staff judge advocate.

Eagleton admits hospitalization for nerves, fatigue

CUSTER S. D. (AP) -- Democratic presidential nominee Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton disclosed Tuesday he has voluntarily hospitalized himself three times between 1960 and 1966 for "nervous exhaustion and fatigue," but that since then he has enjoyed "good sound, solid health."

Sen. George M. McGovern, the Democratic presidential nominee, said he had not known about the hospitalizations when he picked Eagleton as his running mate, but added, "I am fully satisfied" by his explanation.

The 42-year-old Missouri senator outlined his medical history after a morning of conferencing with McGovern at his vacation retreat in the Black Hills of South Dakota, saying that doctors had told him he was entitled to the full story about his illness when they were concerning his career and his health.

Eagleton said he had undergone physical examinations last Friday from a Senate physician and Monday from a Mt. Carmel Medical Center. Results are due later in the week but Eagleton said the doctors told him he was overweight and have half a hemorrhoid.

8:30-10:30 a.m. -- Board of Zoning Appeals to South Dakota from Washington last Friday, left after the news conference to fly to California on a campaign swing that also will take him to Hawaii.

Jane Fonda says war prisoners want McGovern

PARIS (AP) — Jane Fonda, back from Hanoi, said Tuesday a group of American war prisoners asked her to tell their parents and friends to work for the victory of Sen. George McGovern because "they fear if Nixon stays in office they will be prisoners forever."

The actress said at a news conference that seven prisoners she met gave her message for scores of people, urging them to defeat President Nixon in the November presidential election.

The actress acknowledged that she had made daily broadcasts over Hand radio aimed at American servicemen, but did not reply directly to a question about the statement by Rep. Fletcher Thompson, R-Ga., that treason charges should be brought against her.

Can McGovern win?

The quadrennial Democratic party brawl is over now, and George McGovern has been chosen to lead the party against Richard Nixon in the November presidential election. The big question has changed from who will be the Democratic nominee to who that sort of a chance does he stand against Nixon in November.

Although the enthusiastic McGovern people maintain the election is merely a foregone conclusion in their favor, most Republicans and indeed some disaffected Democrats are claiming the opposite point of view. The absolutely clear answer is that it is a very complicated situation.

There is no doubt that McGovern has made a strong showing so far in his run for the presidency. To have come from the almost laughable four or five per cent in the Iowa caucus quoted for him last winter to serious contention is quite a feat, even without winning the nomination.

But there is more to winning an election this year than just the jubilant acceptance of the party's nomination. McGovern and his supporters are going to have to face and overcome these obstacles in order to come out ahead on that early November Wednesday morning.

The history of American party politics and their performance in presidential elections give little comfort to McGovern hopes. Since coherent political parties emerged and began nominating candidates for president around 1832, incumbent presidents, seeking re-election and having the nomination of their party, have been defeated in only four of 35 elections. The most recent instance was William H. Taft's defeat by Woodrow Wilson in 1912.

Much of the Democratic party's traditional strength comes from the active support of organized labor, and without it the party could be in trouble. The apparent belligerent neutrality of much of the AFL-CIO, led by George Meany, is going to hurt McGovern in November. The support of Leonard Woodcock and the United Auto Workers could affect some of this, but how much can be done against Meany's hostile indifference remains to be seen.

Although undoubtedly rifts in the regional leadership of the Democratic party will continue, efforts toward unity behind McGovern appear to be going on. Clyde Chaste of Iowa, considered to be a Dukakis man, cast the Illinois votes that nominated McGovern in the name of party unity and loyalty to the ticket. The Wallace delegation from Alabama voted unanimously for Thomas Eagleton. McGovern's choice for the vice-presidential nomination, "as a gesture of unity and conciliation."

McGovern's opposition to the Indo-China war and his identification with the causes of the young, minorities and women has probably helped him among those groups, but has also led to a somewhat radical image among many of the middle-earning voters of the nation. The unfortunate thing about this, from McGovern's standpoint, is that the middle-earning voters who are the highest rate of voting participation of any sector of the population.

Against these very real barriers to his election, McGovern brings a few assets of his own, some pragmatically political, and some a bit more philosophical and theoretical.

No one can doubt the depth and efficiency of McGovern's largely volunteer organization, or the political skill and knowledge of its largely young leadership. If they can carry their primary campaign effectiveness over into the real contest in the fall and manage to combine effectively with the more traditional regular party organization, the Democrats will have a formidable campaign force in 1972. Republicans will have to fight for every precinct.

In addition to the potential organizational strength of the combination of McGovern and regular party forces, the leadership of the national figures, largely assumed to be anti-McGovern, are assuming at least a wait-and-see attitude toward McGovern against him right at the start. Once the Miami Beach balloting was over, most of the major contenders pledged to 1972, with a large number of retreats and of support silence. There appears to be a feeling among political observers that McGovern's unity is more important than factional bickering.

The other major ally McGovern brings to the presidential campaign is the tenous indication—part hypothetical, part real—that he may be able to put together a workable political coalition out of youth, minorities and women. Historically, these groups have had poor returns in political participation, but McGovern's McGovern campaign so far has been a successful challenge to the "facts" of political history.

Smokers share "death fumes"

To the Daily Egyptian:

I had an experience last Saturday that set me wondering. The gist of the event is: before taking an important exam, I noticed the air of the lecture hall was rapidly being ruined by smokers. In affect I asked the exam monitor to enforce the "no smoking" regulation. He refused, saying that if I could not take the smoke, I should "leave the room" and get this, the test, take the exam. It being an important exam, I stayed and was saved by the smokers around me who restrained themselves from lighting their cigarettes. But if I had said nothing, the smokers, I am sure, would not have tried to keep their nicotine addiction under control. As with many others, during important exams, I become very incensed at smoke blowing my concentration. I could care less if a smoker chooses slow death and enslaving habit, but I do care much if he tries to force the misery onto me.

I hope the attitude of the exam monitor is not the embryo of some horrible monster that will grow and dominate the whole human race. It is an attitude which I hope will be aborted. If applied generally it would mean that it is fine to dump sewage into our rivers, great to fill the air with poisonous gases, superb to lace our food with pesticides, and excellent to dump garbage into our neighbors' backyards. If anyone complains, they can "leave the room." But that kind of evil has a tendency to spread. So grey and so vulgar as not to be satisfied by their own negativity, but needing to touch all the living as well.

For the sake of this "earthy tapestry," the doctrine implied by that exam monitor hopefully will die a young death. For if the earth is made unhitable we can not just "leave the room."

Not so funny

To the Daily Egyptian:

As I write this, I hope to employ your news media to think whatever is responsible for me chain smoking. I consumed these cancer sticks at a rate of about 40 times my usual rate—during our eighth fire "alarm" in six days.

And, to whomever thought it was cool to throw marshmallows across the campus, seemingly to have originated by some poor dog in the elevator of Neely Hall, my only possible statement is made to you, and your fellow fire bugs: you aren't worth the powder that you send to hell. Putting 700 persons out in the middle of the night, disrupting whatever was rightfully reviewing their entitled attentions is not funny.

To everyone who is fed up with this, I ask your aid.

Call Housing Business Services as many times as you can fit into your schedule. Blast your discontent and ideas in their ears. If the elevators would lock, allowing riders to get out, soon after the alarm is set, then, whomever is setting the alarm off on the seventeenth floor will be forced to use the stairs. This could, perhaps, add in "catching" the alarmist and putting an end to this mania.

I beseech all of you who could gather the energy, somehow, to orally show your inconvenience with the 5 a.m. alarm, to muster as much energy you have left into action. We cannot allow this to continue. If you like the ugly sound of the alarm, and the ungodly hours, then ignore this.

Diplomacy lesson from Bobby Fischer

By Arthur Hopper
Chronicle Features

Bobby Fischer's tactics at the World Chess Championship in Iceland have won him the undying admiration of thousands of Americans—all of them, as it so happens, officials of the U.S. State Department.

"Now, there's a chap who really knows how to deal with the Russians," said young Under-Assistant Associate Secretary Bagworth at the Department's regular Tuesday High Level Policy Determination and Two Million Luncheon Session.

"I'll have to admit that on several occasions he had that Boris Spassky climbing the wall," grudgingly conceded partly Homer T. Pettibone, the distinguished Deputy Under-Secretary for Negotiations. White Papers and Bar Chits. "But I'm not sure he can hold a candle to us."

"Look at his record, sir," exclaimed young Bagworth. "First, he announced he could outmaneuver Spassky face-to-face across the table with one hand tied behind his back. And when the challenge is accepted, he managed to delay selection of a site for the meeting for a good six months."

"You're forgetting, Bagworth," replied Pettibone proudly, "that we did better than that when it came to picking a spot for the SALT talks."

"I didn't mean to tarnish the Department's image," said Bagworth apologetically. "But you must agree that when it came down to stalling on conditions for the meeting, Fischer showed true genius—the lighting, the table, the...

"Hold on there, Bagworth," said Pettibone stiffly.

"Perhaps you're too young to remember the negotiations we held on the shape of the table at the Paris Peace Talks. It was one of the greatest triumphs in negotiating in the Department's annals."

"Oh, I fully concur, sir," Bagworth said. "But look at the fuss Fischer put up not only over the table, but the chairs. He finally flew his own in from New York."

Pettibone frowned thoughtfully. "Yes, you might draw up a White Paper on that. Bagworth. A full study on the necessary shape of the chairs might be helpful in our future dealings with the Soviet bloc."

"And then when it was all set, he announced he wouldn't come because there wasn't enough in it for him."

"Tut, tut. Bagworth. That's been Department policy for years."

"But he forced the British to sweeten the pot, as it were, sir, and...

"I hope you're not suggesting we ever turn to the British for help," said Pettibone scowling. "Have you forgotten the War of 1812 already?"

"No, sir, but you can't overlook his accomplishments. First, he so insults Spassky by his delays that Spassky threatens to withdraw. Then he finally shows up, holds one public session and withdraws himself. Next he doesn't show up at all. Then he demands a private session in another room and forces Spassky to withdraw on the 41st move. After that...

"Please, Bagworth. When you've been with the Department as long as I have, you'll realize this is all old hat."

"Perhaps so, sir. But I can't help feeling we could use a man like that at the Paris Peace Talks."

"Really, Bagworth. Your ignorance is appalling."

"Bag pardon, sir?"

"Where," said Pettibone, dumping his second martini, "do you think Fischer has been training these past three years?"

Statement retracted

To the Daily Egyptian:

In the Egyptian of July 14, I stated that the University's tear gas report "seems to establish clearly" that "either the Carbondale City or Jackson County police or both were guilty of lawless behavior. I now retract that statement, for I no longer believe it.

I also urged the City Council on July 18 to conduct a further investigation of this incident. With further information and reflection, I now conclude the council's rejection of my proposal was sensible. I am now convinced Mr. Dakin's investigation did not involve any automatic acceptance of the veracity of statements taken from his officers, and was a thoroughly conscientious, tough-minded, and professional investigation. I am also impressed by Sheriff Hoffman's accounting.

There is strong indication that tear gas was thrown into Schneider Tower—by someone, and Acting City Attorney Brocton Lockwood shares this conclusion.

Carbondale police testified that, while they used tear gas in the Brush Towers area, tear gas was already in the air when they arrived in that area.

The University's report assures us that non-campus police were not involved in the Brush Towers area—an assurance that has focused attention and suspicion outward upon the local non-campus police departments. Yet there is indication, which I am inclined to believe, that the SIU security police did, in fact, request outside police to come to several parts of the campus on the night of May 11-12, including the Brush Towers area, and that this fact has been covered up.

The University, having submitted such a report to the city manager, is surely obligated now to investigate further into the operation of its own security force.

Merlin's destroyed by fire

Firemen on The Mall roof used a power hacksaw to cut two openings in the roof of The Mall, according to Bill Grainger, an onlooker. Water was sprayed inside to cool the building, which suffered only heat and smoke damage.

Smith said reconstruction would begin Wednesday. However, State Fire Marshal Norman Hilton, contacted at his Cobden home, said he won't make an official inspection until Thursday morning.

Lowell Summers, owner of the Buzzerby, ice cream and games shop in The Mall, said he first saw smoke seeping through the bricks by the front entranceway of the grill.

"Then it roared out the front door," Summers said. When the fire broke through the roof, he began moving equipment out of his small shop located in The Mall front. Other owners of Mall shops were able to get portions of their belongings outside before the fire marshalls "ran us out," Summers said.

Bob Wagner, of Ruby's Shoe Repair in The Mall, said employees were able to get all the shoes out of the building. The shoes may be picked up at the Junction Stop at 715 S. Illinois.

Police blocked all entrances to Illinois Avenue between Walnut Street to the north and College Street to the south of Merlin's.

"Tired, smoking firemen and volunteers battled the blaze for more than two hours, leaving smoldering timbers and smoking bricks lying near what used to be east, south and partial front walls of the building.

Crowds milling about on the Illinois Central Railroad tracks, watching firemen struggle with three hoses on the back walls. Other groups of people, roped off both north and south of Merlin’s by police watched from the west side of Illinois Avenue. Onlookers posed no problems for police.

Ashes and sooty water drifted over the onlookers during the height of the blaze while owner from Off-the-Wall nearby north of The Mall and Mall shops carried away what belongings they had salvaged before being required to vacate.

Derge to respond to four resolutions

By Monroe Walker
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

A "State of the Campus" address scheduled to be delivered by President David R. Derge Wednesday in Siyour Auditorium could be an excellent opportunity for the president to respond to four resolutions presented to him by the Nonacademic Employees Council, Lee Hester, vice president of the Nonacademic Employees Council, said Monday.

Hester said that as many as 1,900 civil service employees are expected to attend the president's address and "we are not asking any more, nor any less, than any other civil service employees at other institutions. "If the people in Edwardsville make a certain amount of money," he said, "then the same should go for Carbondale."

The council unanimously adopted the resolutions during its regular meeting on June 7 and submitted them to Derge for "consideration and action."

The first resolution is in support of the Personnel Office and states that the council appreciates the efforts of that office as well as others "involved in attaining affirmative action goals during the past three years."

The second resolution solicits President Derge's support and requests that he "take positive action to cause the salary structure of the civil service employees to be raised to the level of others in Illinois state universities and colleges."

The third resolution requests Derge's approval and states that "when the present parking decals expire, new decals will be issued to all civil service employees at no charge. This procedure will continue until such time that the $1,500,000-plus reserve fund is exhausted. When the reserve fund is exhausted, a fee structure then be established to cover the cost of administering decal distribution and keeping existing lots in good repair."

The fourth resolution asks Derge's approval and requests that "no more Civil Service positions will be eliminated or layoffs continued until an investigation is completed by concerned persons and recommendations made regarding layoffs in particular areas."

Wage controls lifted for about 10 million

WASHINGTON (AP) — Acting after an adverse court decision, the Cost of Living Council Tuesday exempted all workers making $1.75 per hour or less from wage controls, an increase from the previous $1.90.

The decision removed from direct controls about 10 million private nonfarm workers, council director Donald Rumsfeld told newsmen. The new low-wage exemption is retroactive to July 15.

A U.S. District Court Judge in Washington had struck down the $1.90 per hour figure as too low in a decision on a suit filed by an electrical workers union.

Fan Hao Kung, assistant professor of forestry at SIU, will be on the program of the Western Forest Genetics Association meetings July 30-Aug. 4 at Oregon State University at Corvallis.

Kung will discuss "Tree Selection for Black Walnut Trees" in reporting on research. During his stay at Corvallis he will also be attending symposiums of the North American Forest Biology Workshop and meetings of the Quantitative Forest Genetics Group.

Kung came to the SIU faculty in 1970 from Cheyenne, Wyo., where he had been an inventory forester for the Commissioner of Public Land in the Wyoming Division of Forestry. He received his Ph.D. degree at Michigan State University, majoring in forest genetics.

An article on "Vandalism at State Parks in Southern Illinois," in the July-August issue of Illinois Park and Recreation magazine is by Dwight R. McCurdy, associate professor, and Harold E. Johnson, former graduate assistant, in the forestry department.

The article reports on surveys by McCurdy in state parks as part of a variety of studies of forest recreational developments in Southern Illinois and their public use.

John D. Barnes, coordinator and administrative assistant of Student Work and Financial Assistance, has been appointed a member of the legislation committee of the Illinois Association of Financial Aid Administrators.

Barnes will represent four-year public institutions on the committee, along with Vincent Chiara of Sangamon State and Ed Sanford of the University of Illinois.

The Married Students Activities Council of Southern Illinois University at Carbondale is sponsoring a bus trip for married students to the St. Louis Zoo Saturday, Aug. 5. Buses will leave from the Technology Building parking lot at 8 a.m. and arrive back on campus at 4 p.m.

Tickets, 50 cents per person, may be purchased at the Married and Graduate Student Office, Washington Square "A" building. Richard J. Kalima, coordinator of Married and Graduate Student Programs, said tickets are limited and will be sold on a first come, first served basis. Further information can be obtained by calling 655-2479.

Teacher bargaining speech scheduled

Jonathan Selchin, a member of the Carbondale Federation of University Teachers (CFUT), will talk on "The American Federation of Teachers' AFT, focuses on Collective Bargaining" at 11:30 a.m. Thursday in the Missouri River Room.

Selchin said that the AFT philosophy is that the faculty is a distinct group, with different interests than the administration of a university.

As such, he said, the faculty needs to have an organization to represent their interests.

Theater group has first CCHS student

By Pat Naumann
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

In the words of Terry Richison, a 16-year-old Carbondale high school student—"I had no chance whatsoever of getting in here."

"Here" is in the music company of the Summer Theater.

The Summer Theater is a group of actors and technicians from all over the United States chosen to participate in the six-play summer season at SIU. Members are chosen by their applications and tape or personal auditions.

Richison is the only high school student ever chosen for the theater. Richison read about the auditions and asked his acting instructor, Carolee Richmond (now Summer Theater publicity director), about trying out for the summer season.

"She said it would be good experience to try out, but not to get my hopes up..." he said.

"I almost fainted when I saw the letter of acceptance," he said. "She (Ms. Richmond) was surprised. I think, but she never said anything."

Richison has been in all the high school plays but one since he was a freshman. He said, and as a CCHS children's play directed by W. Grant Gray.

"I hadn't really had any experience," he said, "except for walking in and out of classes in high school under Ms. Richmond."

The lack of experience does make things harder for Richison, since directors don't take this into account.

"I think that they think since you're in the company you should be experienced," he said. "So I have to work a little bit harder than most. Especially the dancing, because I had not had any dancing experience."

"But I pick it up in a reasonable amount of time."

The Summer Theater, however, is not really much harder than the high school plays, according to Richison.

"It's probably easier," he said. "At high school actors had to do technical work as well, which Summer Theater actors don't have to do."

The hours are long at the theater, he said—but he enjoys it.

"I had a good part—well, what I consider a good part in "Wonderful Town," considering my age," he commented. "I was glad to get a speaking role in "Wonderful Town." It wasn't much but it was there."

Richison likes his work at the Summer Theater so much that he said he may go into theater as a profession. He probably study at SIU—as much for monetary reasons as anything.

In the meantime—"It's just exciting to come here every day. I'm glad to be involved in something I'll probably study at SIU—and as much for monetary reasons as anything."
Sadam: Egypt will confront Israel alone if necessary.

CAIRO (AP)—President Anwar Sadat told Egyptians they must, if necessary, confront Israel alone because the Soviet Union refuses to give Cairo military support.

"We must give our argument, and we shall not ask for others to do the battle for us," Sadat said while addressing each of four personal visits to Moscow last week, in his first public speech since he announced last week he had severed commitments to Soviet military experts and advisers from Egypt. He spoke at Cairo University.

"On each visit I told them if you accept the unilateral withdrawal of the dangerous occupation as a solution to the problem will never be solved," he said, referring to differences in strategy. If we had waited, would not mean we had nothing to do but keep on waiting and accept Israeli occupation as a fact through.

"This we rejected. No national leader can accept.

"Egypt and Arab nationalism must stand side by side, alone, if we need be, on the battlefield. We shall not fear to fight in the open.

"Egypt's position has not changed, the president went on. He stressed the intention of sitting down at the same negotiating table with Israel, as long as Israeli troops occupy part of Egypt. Such a move, he said, amounts to suicide. Sadat devoted an hour to claiming his version of the events which led him down repeatedly in efforts to get peaceful solution in the Middle East. He stressed considerably what he called the "failure" of the United States to give pressure on Israel to make some favorable response to Egyptian peace gestures, to offer to open the Suez Canal as a step toward a settlement.

"He said the United States is the reason for the trouble in the region and accused former President Lyndon B. Johnson of personally approached in that plan prior to the 1967 war.

"The Soviets had led his frustrations over the Soviet attitude. Sadat called Moscow "the only friend that has always helped us and stressed the need for continued Soviet friendship in the economic field.

Calley exhibit set for Fuller's designs

"The Design Science of R. Buckminster Fuller," a title of an exhibit by the former University professor at SFU, and which is to be opened by the Chicago Museum of Science and Industry for four more months.

The National Endowment of the Arts and the Chicago museum both have contributed $5,000 each to show the first comprehensive exhibit of the engineering, architectural, and humanitarian contributions of the noted American innovator, according to museum president Daniel M. MacMaster.

The exhibit, which is scheduled for March 31 and will cover three major periods in the controversial 78-year-old inventor's career.

- The Dymaxion Period (1934-1947) featuring an ultra-modern house, advanced "bubblemobile," and a balloon and unique map;
- The Ecological-Synthetic Geometry Period (1944-1964) covering the geodesic dome and ten-segment sphere;
- The World Resources Management Period (1964-1970) pertaining to Fuller's World Game, an inventory of Earth's present population, and Comprehensive Anticipatory design.

MacMaster said Fuller was a boyhood friend of his, and since his invention, the geodesic dome is now used throughout the world and the geodesic dome covers more land without the least amount of material and greatest structural integrity of any construction system.

For 17 years, Fuller has devoted his time to developing the world game and world resources into a venture. The formation of an international Design Science Institute to promote his ideas and designs was announced this month in Washington, D.C.

Fuller moved his offices to EDH in early July, ending his association with SFU-Carbondale.

"New Politics" results please buzzing Buzbee

Carbondale is getting a taste of "New Politics" this week.

Ken Buzbee, a legislative candidate for the 58th District, has been buzzing in and out of business places, civic clubs, walking up and down streets, rings doors, and knocking on doors.

Buzbee, 34, a tall Marine Corps veteran and an SIU grad, is now in the seventh week of his unique "living-in-person" to-person campaigning now dubbed New Politics.

Buzbee is the Democratic candidate for state senator from the 58th District, which includes three townships in Saline County and twelve rural townships in St. Clair County. "I am a reporter, pretty, Randolph, Monroe and Washington Counties (except two townships)."

Tracks of Buzbee's footsteps have been found in Steilville, Carbondale, Carterville, Anna, Alto Pass, Mattoon, Marissa, Waterloo and Columbia.

Buzbee stopped in Carbondale until Saturday before heading west for Murphyboro and another week of "living in" with the local people.

"The reception I have been getting from people has been tremendous," the Anna native said.

We started trying to woo as many people as possible. We are trying to get to know what people are thinking about, meanwhile making myself known to the public," Buzbee said.

"All through my campaign trail, I felt something I had never anticipated before. I got this deep feeling for the people of Southern Illinois just by going to the factories, clubs and walking the streets," he admitted.

Buzbee's "living in" idea originated from Dan Walker's campaign style. Walker is the Democratic candidate for governor.

"This is not a gimmick kind of thing," Buzbee cautioned. "We didn't have any money, and a people-to-people campaign is the only way you can go about getting known.

He said he has been very well in the communities he has lived in.

"The response I keep getting is that people feel that we politicians come into town just before the election, and then we forget us, and after we got elected they can't see us anymore."

"I kept thinking about this, and finally I started the idea of visiting

Leo quits, Lockman takes over Cub reins

By Jerry Liska
Associated Press Staff Writer

CHICAGO (AP) -- Leo The Lip Durocher's last hurrah was surprisingly muffled, if hardly unexpected. Baseball's Lion for nearly a half century as fiery player and then flamboyant manager, Durocher went out lamb-like last night in resigning as his seventh Cub season unpromisingly reached its halfway mark.

"Leo was not fired," said owner Phil Wrigley after a three-hour huddle with Durocher, who turns 66 Thursday when his former protege, Whitey Lockman, takes Cub command at Philadelphia.

Wrigley, who has staunchly defended Durocher against mounting media criticism since 1965, said Leo "agreed with me it was best for his own sake and the club's best interest that he step aside at this halfway mark. If Leo was fired, he still wouldn't be on the payroll as coaches.

Wrigley said he summoned Durocher for the conference "before we got into another huddle, and then I was calling Leo a disturbing influence, and with letters and phone calls telling me our Cub players are just putting in a day's work."

Thus Wrigley threw the gauntlet to Cub players, who last season openly rebelled at Durocher in a clubhouse shouting match and this season reportedly were indifferent to Leo's directive.

"I'll sit back and see what the boys do," said Wrigley. "If there has been any friction between Leo and the players this year, then Leo's decision will allow the players to find out for themselves if they are pennant contenders.

Referring to Lockman, a Cub organization man since Durocher's arrival in 1965, Wrigley said: "I told Leo, let's put a man in charge who has been looking at all the talent we have in our system."

Lockman, who celebrated his 46th birthday Tuesday, has spent the last season and a half as director of Cub player development after five seasons of managing Cub farm teams at Dallas-Fort Worth and Tacoma.

Durocher, who leaves the Cubs with a current 46-44 record, 10 games behind the Pittsburgh Pirates in the National League East, was unreachable Tuesday.

However, vice president John Holland, who announced the managerial change at Atlanta Monday night, said Durocher intended to personally bid farewell to his players prior to Saturday's game here with the visiting St. Louis Cardinals and described his stay with the Cubs as "a wonderful partnership."

Thus a final controversial chapter ends for Durocher for whom Wrigley last September took out large ads in Chicago's four newspapers defending Leo against the "dump Durocher clique."

Last November, however, Wrigley significantly rehired Durocher for only the 1972 season in what was regarded a final thrust in defiance of sharp anti-Durocher media criticism.

Wrigley himself apparently finally yielded to increasing clamor against Durocher, whose troubles with the press began with the famed "Camp Ojibwa" visit by Leo in 1969. That season the sailing Cubs swooned in September to finish behind the New York Mets.

However, Wrigley's statement Tuesday noted that, "after just one year, 1966 Leo managed a contending team every season, and that is why he always had 100 per cent support from me."

When Durocher replaced the Cubs' ill-fated "college of coaches" in 1966, the Cubs stumbled from eighth to last place in the then-18 club National League.

But in 1967, the Cubs were guided by Leo to third place, at Northwestern finish in 21 years. Durocher brought the Cubs in third again in 1968.

Then came 1969 and the big Cub swoon, accentuated by Leo's weekend departure during a series with the Los Angeles Dodgers in July to visit his stepson at Camp Ojibwa in Eagle River, Wis.

From Sept. to Sept. 23 in 1969, the Cubs blew a five-game lead over the Mets to fall six games behind.

The honeymoon definitely was over between Durocher and media covering the Cubs in 1970, although the Cubs finished second behind the Pirates. Last season, Leo produced another third place finish with the critics howling for his scalp the latter half of the season.

Wrigley's reluctance to hasten the departure of the take-charge dynamo, who produced two pennants for the New York Giants and one for the Brooklyn Dodgers in his 23-year managerial career, could stem from Cub attendance during the Durocher era.

In 1965, the year before Durocher's arrival, the Cubs drew only 641,361. In 1970, after the Cubs had spent 1.6 million with another 1 million plus expected this season.

Leo's departure was announced Wednesday. "This is by far the best club team I have fielded," following the acquisition of fleet outfielders Jose Cardenal and Rick Monday.

It also has proved his last.

Gibron has hopes for Antoine

By Elliot Tompkin
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Abe Gibron likes Lionel Antoine. So does that make Antoine happy, because Gibron is going to be his manager starting Saturday. Gibron is the head coach of the Chicago Bears. Antoine is a four-year senior, the team that thought enough of Antoine's talents to select him first in the 1972 pro football draft.

In a recent phone interview from the Bear's training camp, Gibron admitted that he really didn't know where Antoine was going to be playing college ball and that he really didn't know Antoine at all. "We drafted him for offensive line purposes, but that's a hard place for a rookie to break in. If he doesn't make it right away, you can be sure he'll be playing on the defensive line," Gibron said.

If Antoine does make it as an offensive lineman, that's fine with Gibron. Antoine is presently training with the College All-Stars for Friday's encounter at the Chicago Bears' training camp.

The Bears are going to be without their quarterback. Gibron said: "Sure we would have liked to have seen more of him, but we feel pretty safe in considering him a good prospect. That's why we drafted him.

"He's a big bear, Anthony. We need him. The Bears plan to train him at center, but it's too early to say if he'll be the starter or not."

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (AP) -- Champion Boris Spassky made an aggressive bid Tuesday night to catch surging Bobby Fischer in the world championship chess match. The seventh game, a pattern of sawing advantages, was a miniatures match after 40 moves and experts said Spassky had a good chance at a draw.

But the Russians faces a severe time deficit when play resumes Wednesday. He will have only 20 minutes to make 16 moves; the American challenger will have 1½ hours. Match rules say each player must complete 40 moves in 2½ hours and 16 moves in every hour thereafter.

Fischer is a crucial pawn up. Most grandmasters said, however, that a poor endgame had cost him a possible win. That would have given the 29-year-old Brooklyn chess genius a commanding two-point lead in the 24-game series.

Fischer then leads the match 3½-2½. He needs 12½ points to take the world chess crown out of the Soviet Union for the first time since 1948. Spassky needs only 12 points to retain his title.

Fischer, who was on the defensive much of the game, appeared to be going for a win when he refused a queen swap on the 19th move. What's position appeared poor. He was a pawn down and his knights were on the queenside, tempered用品 away a threatened Fischer attack down the kingside. But blacks' squares were lighted up, right back, bringing a knight back into play and mounting an attack on Fischer's black squares.

A delicately balanced endgame dragged on past the five-hour mark. Then Spassky, having thought for almost 45 minutes, sealed his 41st move in an exchange in intense heat at Reykjavik.
