Poor ventilation heats up Neckers

By Elizabeth Romanello
Student Writer

Inadequate ventilation and high room temperatures are causing potentially hazardous conditions in research laboratories at the Neckers Building, an SIU-C chemist said.

James Tyrrell, chairman of the Chemistry and Biochemistry Department, said every semester — especially between seasons — several labs are closed because of a lack of ventilation.

Tyrrell said one explosion in the lab last year was related to high temperatures. One girl was injured and received stitches after being hit by a piece of glass from the explosion, he said. All teaching labs were closed the next day so that temperatures could be lowered.

Fumes from the chemicals combined with poor ventilation often make people nauseous and uncomfortable.

"When the temperature gets over 90 degrees, it is too hot and uncomfortable for working conditions," Tyrrell said.

All of the research labs, which are on the second and third floors, have ventilation problems at some time, Tyrrell said. Fumes from the labs also reach the first floor where offices and classrooms are located, he said.

There are about 2,000 undergraduate students who use the labs for chemistry classes every semester, Tyrrell said.

Loan defaulters face new penalties

By Deedra Lawhead
Staff Writer

Paying off your student loan may cause headaches, but failing to do so could cause real migraines.

The federal government has issued a new collection policy for delinquent student loans which differs from the original in two ways, student financial aid administrators say.

If defaulters do not have their accounts paid up by Oct. 1, they will have to pay a collection fee the government usually pays to collection agencies.

The additional fee could increase what they owe by 20 to 25 percent, Dallas Martin, president of the National Association of Student Financial Aid Administrators, said.

On the other hand, the federal government may not get their money if Congress doesn't vote to extend or make permanent the Internal Revenue Service tax refund offset program, which will expire Sept. 30, the end of this fiscal year.

In the program, tax refunds are withheld from people who have not repaid their federally insured student loans.

If the money is not repaid to the states and the federal government, future students won't get the money they need, Jack O'Dell, administrative assistant to Rep. Ken Gray of Illinois, said.

"We have to give tomorrow's kids the same opportunities as yesterday's kids," he said.

"We support an equitable program to put money back so others can use it, but we have to be accommodating so people will be able to pay it back," he said. "We can't bankrupt people."

Illinois has seized 27,940 tax refund checks totaling $95.8 million, Bob Clement, director of agency relations for the Illinois State Scholarship Commission, said. The federal government has seized 9,707 checks totaling $5.4 million.

Illinois Guaranteed Student Loans are insured by the federal government which means banks are guaranteed to receive their money. If a bank can't collect on a loan, it sells the delinquent loan to the scholarship commission. The commission tries to collect. If efforts are unsuccessful, the commission turns the loan — which is considered in default — over to the federal government. The government

Meese: Casey knew nothing of diversion

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Attorney General Edwin Meese said Wednesday he believes William Casey knew nothing about the diversion of Iran arms profits to the Contra rebels despite Oliver North's claim that the CIA chief helped concoct and direct the operation.

The attorney general also reluctantly conceded the Marine lieutenant colonel and other U.S. officials might have lied in the questioning conducted as part of his informal inquiry of the U.S. arms sales to Iran Nov. 21-23, 1986.

During Meese's second day before the select House-Senate committees probing the affair, Sen. George Mitchell, D-Maine, presented him with a stark choice: Whose story about the diversion did he believe — North's or Casey's?

While couching his answer in qualifiers — "I did not see North testify" — Meese said that in a Nov. 23 interview, "North said to me that there were only three people, North, Poindexter and McFarlane, (who knew about the diversion) and so it would seem to me if I had to judge which statement probably has most value, I do believe Mr. Casey's statement to me."

John Poindexter was the national security adviser last year; Robert McFarlane preceded Poindexter in the White House job. North was their staff aide on the National Security Council.

Panel to hear concerns, financial aid woes

By Eric Oestmann
Staff Writer

Student complaints about problems with financial aid will be presented to a joint Illinois State Scholarship Commission-Illinois Board of Higher Education committee on August 11 in Springfield.

Bill Hall, SIU-C's member of the IBHE's student advisory committee, will be given five minutes to testify about students' financial aid concerns.

"The committee will accept as many letters concerning financial aid complaints as I can submit," he said. He added that he encourages more students to submit letters by August 7 to the Undergraduate Student Organization office, 3rd floor Student Center.

"The committee will be re-examining the whole area of financing post-secondary education and the role financial aid plays in that," Robert Clement, director of agency relations for the ISSC, said.

About 350 persons, including college presidents, community organizations and women and ethnic groups, will testify before the joint committee, Clement said.

The committee will get a comprehensive review of financial aid problems and plans to develop recommendations by December or January.

One complaint students have concerns a formula used in financial aid applications to figure how much family contribution students are assumed to receive, regardless of whether they actually get money from their parents or not, Hall said.

French 'protect interests' with fleet in Indian Ocean

By United Press International

France, saying it had to protect its interests, Wednesday ordered a fleet led by an aircraft carrier to sail for the Indian Ocean hours after Iran issued new threats against French Embassy personnel in Tehran. Meanwhile, in the central Persian Gulf, a U.S. naval task force assigned to escort reflagged Kuwaiti tankers was stationed off Bahrain, while the tankers Bridgeton, damaged by a suspected Iranian mine, and the Gas Prince were in Kuwait, to the north, preparing to steam south.

Chernobyl defendants sentenced to hard labor

CHERNOBYL, USSR (UPI) — A Soviet court, harshly condemning the chronic laxity and abuses that caused the world's worst civilian nuclear disaster, Wednesday sentenced six former employees of the Chernobyl atomic power facility to spend up to 10 years in labor camps. After the verdicts, Soviet officials said there would be at least three more trials stemming from the disaster at Chernobyl which could reach much higher levels in government and industry.

Iran, Sri Lanka sign accord to end civil war

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (UPI) — India and Sri Lanka signed an accord Wednesday designed to end the civil war by Tamil rebels, and Sinhalese mobs opposed to the pact stormed police stations and burned buildings in an explosion of anti-government violence. Officials said at least 15 people died and more than 60 were injured. Unconfirmed reports put the countrywide death total at between 35 and 40 people.

34,000 S. African miners continue strike

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — Almost 34,000 black workers were on strike Wednesday in seven separate disputes with white employers and a black miners' union said another 200,000 were ready to stay off the job for better wages. The strikes appeared to follow a trend of increased worker challenges to the authority of white employers and against wages for blacks that are generally about a third of the earnings of white workers.

Chief astronaut reassigned despite protests

SPACE CENTER, Houston (UPI) — Astronaut John Young, a frequent critic of shuttle safety policies, says he was forced to give up his job as chief astronaut, but a top NASA official Wednesday defended the management change. Aaron Cohen, director of the Johnson Space Center, announced April 15 that Young had been reassigned to a new job in which he would act as a special assistant to the director for shuttle engineering and safety.

Navy mine-sweepers called to Persian Gulf

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Eight U.S. Navy mine-sweeping helicopters have been ordered to the Persian Gulf to ensure that Navy-escorted convoys of reflagged Kuwaiti tankers will steam through waters free of underwater explosives, Pentagon officials said Wednesday. The RH-53 choppers will be put on the helicopter carrier USS Guadalcanal, an assault ship that will have about 600 Marines aboard, the officials said.

Religious groups call for civil rights reform

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A coalition of 16 Protestant and Jewish religious groups called Wednesday for the passage of civil rights legislation without any abortion-related amendments. The groups, coordinated by the Religious Coalition for Abortion Rights, also made public a 30-second television advertisement in support of the pending legislation they hope local churches and synagogues will place in local television markets.

Highway shootings target of police task force

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A growing fear of roadway gunplay spurred authorities Wednesday to create an inter-agency task force to end a rash of violence by belligerent drivers who have killed three people in 11 shootings this summer. The Sheriff's Department, California Highway Patrol, and 48 independent police departments pledged to work together to halt the spate of freeway and roadway shootings, which began June 18 and have continued through Tuesday night.

Farmers market peak produce

Come early for best picks

By Cara Day
Staff Writer

The Westown Mall parking lot is empty at 7 a.m. Saturday except for one pickup truck.

Two occupants get out and begin unloading and carefully weighing and pricing their homegrown watermelons.

As they continue their work another truck pulls in and begins the same process. Then another. Then more trucks — until only a few reserved spots remain.

BY 8 A.M. the Farmer's Market is bustling with people who've come to buy produce, baked goods, crafts, plants and flowers — or just to socialize.

"The quality of fresh food is superior to what you can find in the stores ... because some of the produce in the stores can be three weeks old," Patrick Sweeney from Carbondale, said. "With the Farmer's Market you're getting things that've been picked the day before."

Sweeney, who's been selling organically grown produce for five years, said the market helps the local economy, but most people don't understand that the produce sold at the market is seasonal and grown locally.

"YOU CAN'T GO there and buy bananas," he noted.

"There's also a big difference in coming early because you get the best selection," Sweeney said. Freshness and quality are the major reasons people are drawn to the market, he said.

A customer, Julie Carman, sophomore in photography, agreed that it's important to go early because there are specialty items, such as lima beans, that only a few people may be selling and that are sold quickly.

She likes to visit the market because she likes the atmosphere, she said.

"SOMETIMES PEOPLE talk about what they're going to make ... they ask Patrick how to make pesto with the basil they buy from him," she said. Pesto is a sauce served over noodles.

One of the first customers at the market Saturday. Mohammed Alam, from Bangladesh, a doctoral student in physics, said he comes every week.

"We have market similar (in Bangladesh) but it's a little different — more crowded, large quantity of products, he said."

He likes the market because it has a lot of fresh produce and he can find things he can't find in a store, such as gourds, bitter melon, yard beans, Chinese okra and oriental egg plant.

RITA, OF Neighbors' Orchards, Alto Pass, said the sellers try to keep prices within the same range so someone doesn't bring a lot of one thing, sell it cheap and drive everyone else out of business.

The market is limited to 30 stands because that's how many the parking lot can accommodate, market manager, said. It's also the number covered by insurance, he added.

Items sold at the market have to be grown locally. The market is in its peak season, he said.

"Now's when everything's coming in: peaches, tomatoes, early apples and just about every type of vegetable."

GREEN BEANS, nectarines, peaches, watermelon, cucumbers, cabbage, okra, squash and oriental egg plant are sold at the market. There's also honey, baked goods, flowers, honeysuckle baskets and other crafts, house plants, herbs such as basil and dill, and occasionally kittens and puppies.

Astin Halterman, from Anna, said the crowd starts to dwindle about 10:30 a.m. when it's hot.

"In decent weather it's like a fair ... We came prepared in case it rained today" — it never did. He's been coming to the market since it started in 1974.

He estimated that between 2,000 and 3,000 people come through the market each Saturday.

The Farmer's Market in Carbondale is open 8 a.m. to noon Saturdays from April to November.

Murphysboro market offers cornucopia

By Cara Day
Staff Writer

A few miles from Carbondale eight farmers peddle their produce. The Murphysboro market, though smaller than the one in Carbondale, also offers a variety of produce.

The farmers at this market sell tomatoes, sweet corn, melons, potatoes, cucumbers, onions, peppers, green beans, peaches and nectarines. And then there's the unusual.

"I guess what it is that I'm a curious gardener," said Carl Underwood, from rural Ava. "I like to grow things that are out of the ordinary."

He sells such items as luffa sponges, rutabaga, kolarabi, garlic and shallots. He also makes grapevine baskets.

Underwood, a retired meat supervisor, said he's been

"What we really need is a pavilion, like at Souldar (Market in St. Louis)."

— Carl Underwood

bringing his wares to market since it started about five years ago.

"What we really need is a pavilion, like at Souldar (Market in St. Louis)," he said, adding that when it rains everything gets wet, but people come carrying umbrellas.

Several hundred people visit the market each day, he said.

Vivian Marks, of Murphysboro, said when she runs out of something she comes to the farmers' market.

If she's in Carbondale she said she likes to stop to see what's been added to their market, but she usually goes to the Murphysboro market.

"I like to give people like this a chance because the produce is good and some of them make their living this way," she said. "I used to live on a farm so I know what it's like."

The farmers' market is open 8 a.m. to noon, Wednesdays and Saturdays, from mid-May to mid-September. The Murphysboro market is located on 11th Street, one block north of Illinois Route 13.

Don't raise fines; raise the entry age

UNDERAGE DRINKING has been plaguing Carbondale for some time now, and recent measures to end it will be ineffective.

Last week, it was reported that the City Council wrote to officials in seven Illinois university towns to get their opinions on a city-supported increase in underage drinking fines.

Five of the towns — Bloomington, Champaign, Charleston, DeKalb and Macomb — approved of the proposed plan. Normal and Urbana declined their support, with Urbana Mayor Jeffrey T. Markland saying that he didn't think a fine increase would stop underage drinking.

Markland is right. The idea for higher fines in Carbondale came about after the pitcher ban, which halted the sales of alcohol in anything larger than 12 ounce containers, was lifted May 11. The ban's intent was to limit underage drinking. It didn't work. And a fine increase won't work either.

INCREASING FINES is the wrong way to go. If the City Council really wants to stop underage drinking, it should do what other towns across the state have been doing for years — limit bar admission to those 21 and over.

That idea won't go over too well in Carbondale. The proposal has been brought up several times in the past, much to the chagrin of bar owners who claim that raising the bar-entry age will hurt their businesses and the under-21 crowd who claim that there's nothing to do in Carbondale other than going to bars.

But like it or not, the City Council has to decide whether it really wants to stop underage drinking. If it decides that it does, raising the bar-entry age is one crucial step toward that end.

Opinions from elsewhere

St. Petersburg (Fla.) Times

Congressional efforts have failed to protect the federal employees who risk their careers to tell the public about fraud and waste in government. ... Four such whistleblowers told a Senate panel that the special agency that is supposed to support them actually works against them. Their allegations of wrongdoing were either ignored or subverted by the Office of Special Counsel, an agency the Congress established in 1978 to protect workers who expose bureaucratic blunders and misdeeds.

Congressional investigations have found that the agency turned down 99 percent of whistleblower cases without in any disciplinary or corrective action.

The Reagan administration's obsession with secrecy and covert operations such as the Iran-Contra scandal make it more imperative than ever for the Congress to insure that workers of integrity can speak up when they see wrongdoing.

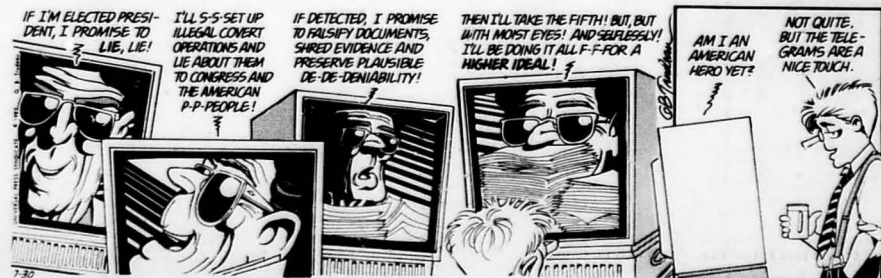

St. Louis Post-Dispatch

A new device is available to political candidates to permit them to learn with apparently fantastic precision what the public thinks of them. ... A personal computer can now measure audience response by means of a device people hold in their hands, twisting knobs to record their reactions to a campaign commercial or a speech.

The new technology gives candidates a chance to dissect audience response to everything from their stands on issues to their voice and hand gestures. But it has limitations. Ellen Globaker, campaign manager for Brock Adams of Washington state in his successful race for senator last year, said: "I think I can tell you if something is horrible or something is wonderful, but I don't think it tells you much in between."

But it is the in-between area that contains the tough questions for candidates, which means, happily, that they can't rely on polls to feed them all the answers. So, there is still room for independent thinking and integrity in campaigns, if only because the audience can't be completely analyzed. Democracy will be the better for it.

Why not sound like a feminist?

Feminism is a topic as vast in opinions as it is in importance. Therefore, I was not surprised with Edward James DeYoung's apprehensiveness to accept feminism as a legitimate movement. But to defame it as a group of "fanatics" who do "silly" things is well beyond credibility. Probably closer to the scales of ignorance. Actually, Mr. DeYoung's comments do bring one worthwhile group to the readers' attention. The fanatics.

Who are the fanatics? They are the men haters, separatists, militants and lesbians who are deeply moved by the history of women's degradation and ongoing struggle. Morally outraged and offended by the behavior of their fellow man, they find little consolation in the go-slow policies of social evolution. They are radicals calling for radical and immediate change.

I don't consider myself a radical feminist, but I do want change now. Not tomorrow. Not next week. Because all women are trapped in the same social contradiction. Because all women have the same high probability of being raped, exploited, degraded and unaccepted (on equal terms) in general. Because I agree with all feminists in spirit and general intent, though perhaps not philosophically or tactically, I will stand with them. If women won't stand up together to demand their rights, who will?

The fanatics are, on the whole, the most highly educated on the women's issue, and the most dedicated to seeing it through. I respect them for their courage and passion.

I do wish, as I may wish it upon any political and radical leader, that they had more patience and political savvy, but accuse them of silliness or malicious intent, never!

That Mr. DeYoung, a seemingly enlightened and fair minded individual, would reject the entire feminist concept outright because of the radicals proves he does not understand the fundamentals of the modern feminist movement. It is built on tolerance.

Discrimination, be it blatant or subtle, infringes too heavily on my ability to attain my capacities. I don't worry about the radicals, I worry about what I know, think and feel, always trying to improve what I find. Feminism is for decency and dignity, for what's fair and right. It is for everyone, especially the children.

Why not sound like a feminist? I haven't the faintest idea. — Nicole Glasser, senior, political science.

Being discriminated against is educational

I have seen the flip side of discrimination. I have always been a "tough cookie" when someone claimed they had been discriminated against. Being a white, Anglo-saxon male, it was easy to take that type of stand.

It seemed to me that people who cried discrimination were just making excuses for their own inadequacies. I do not feel that way any longer and I have intramural sports officials to thank — they gave discrimination a new form.

I was one of three Americans on an otherwise foreign intramural softball team. This being my third year playing intramural softball, I found it interesting and challenging to be on a team of foreign students learning America's game of softball. But some unusual events occurred this softball season that both opened my eyes and turned my stomach.

As the season progressed onward and into the playoffs, I noticed that officiating seemed extremely poor, more than any other. It seemed the chips fell to the other side on close calls more often, or sometimes they were outright bad calls.

I realize mistakes are made when officiating an athletic event. Having been an official before, I have made some bad calls in my day. However there must be a line drawn between bad judgment and biased judgment. Put simply, it was not the destiny of this predominantly foreign softball team to beat an American team at America's game. The officials were going to see to that.

I don't mind losing, as long as I lose a fair game. But I will not be discriminated against because an official cannot put his or her bias aside in making a judgement call.

I feel disgusted and embarrassed at the way our team was treated by intramural sports officials. However, I do owe them thanks for opening my eyes to something I had always tried to ignore. — Rick D. Grovengo, graduate student, administration of justice.

Editorial Policies

Signed articles, including letters. Viewpoints and other commentaries, reflect the opinions of their authors only. Unsigned editorials represent a consensus of the Daily Egyptian Editorial Committee, whose members are the student editor-in-chief, the editorial page editor, a news staff member, the faculty managing editor and a Journalism School faculty member.

Letters to the editor may be submitted by mail or directly to the editorial page editor, Room 1247 Communications Building. Letters should be typewritten, double spaced. All letters are subject to editing and will be limited to 500 words. Letter of less than 250 words will be given preference for publication. Students must identify themselves by class and major. Faculty members by rank and department, non-academic staff by position and department.

Letters submitted by mail should include the author's address and telephone number. Letters for which verification of authorship cannot be made will not be published.

Clinical Center communicates

Offers therapy for speech, hearing impaired

If you could imagine yourself unable to communicate simple words and gestures, or to write a letter or listen to the radio, then you might be able to understand the isolation experienced daily by a speech or hearing impaired person.

These special people require special rehabilitation and therapy centers. One such facility, the Clinical Center located in the Wham Building, provides speech and hearing services to Southern Illinoisans, both student and non-student clients.

"IT'S THE MOST effective way of providing the needed services to the special populations," Dr. Kenneth Ruder, chairman of the Speech Communications Disorders and Sciences Department, said.

"The services we provide at the center are unique to the college setting. We not only serve the immediate area, but we also have clients from all over Illinois and surrounding states as well," he added.

Clients travel to the University to receive therapy from the center. This is done mainly on a referral basis through hospitals, public schools and private individuals.

"They (clients) seek us out," Ruder said. "Most often, it's a case of not knowing where else to turn."

ACCORDING TO the center's records, over 1,800 individual clients received one or more of the services in 1986. At the beginning of 1987, the center reported 775 continuing cases from the previous year.

In fact, the center has become so widely known that it is no longer just a community or regional service, Ruder said.

"The waiting list speaks for itself," he said. "We have clients waiting up to six months now to get in."

Some of the more common communication disorders treated by the center include articulation difficulties, socio-communication behaviors, hearing loss, cerebral palsy and stuttering.

THE MOST challenging aspect of his involvement, Ruder said, is having the opportunity to work with hearing-impaired children, especially very young children who appear to hear sounds, but at a very low level.

"If you catch hearing-impaired children at an early age, in some cases you can get them caught up with their peers," he said. "You see fewer academic problems than with those that haven't been worked with."

The center is geared toward adults, but Ruder said he would like to see a children's wing added. However, that addition probably will not be realized in the near future because of what he described as a lack of support and funding from SIU's administration.

THE CENTER also works closely with Carbondale Memorial Hospital in helping to rehabilitate stroke victims, brain-damaged patients and hearing-impaired patients.

Sharon Graves, graduate student in elementary education, works with Keith Dover, 9, in the center's reading section.

Fifty to sixty graduate students and 25 faculty advisors also use the labs for research.

Tyrell said each time a lab closes students lose part of their education because no make-up day can be scheduled because the labs run on a tight schedule. Each lab also requires specific chemicals and equipment, which often have to be prepared ahead of time, he explained.

Budget cuts have caused a lack of manpower at the physical plant so that it reacts to emergencies instead of making routine check-ups, Tyrell said.

Harrel Lerch, superintendent of building maintenance, agreed there are continual problems at Neckers.

"The hot temperatures are prevalent when the seasons change. We try to keep it at a comfortable setting," Lerch said.

"Research is not an eight to five job," Tyrell said. "When the temperature takes several days to adjust between seasons, this completely screws up our results."

Competition among universities for grants requires SIU-C to provide adequate facilities to carry out research, he said.

"We shouldn't have this problem when significant research is being carried out," he said. "That's just fundamental."

"The state wants us (SIU-C) to produce strong research. We need adequate facilities," he said.

Some faculty members said the ventilation problem was not as bad as some other universities. Tyrell said he has been reporting problems for more than ten years.

"There has been no major effort and no money to do it," Tyrell said. "The State of Illinois has not given higher education a high priority. My budget is the same as 10 years ago."

"A reasonable maintenance program could be implemented. It would be ideal to have all building lines and valves checked to minimize problems. As of now there are no resources for regular basic check-ups," he said.

Lerch said building coordinators are assigned to review each building. Coordinators act as mediators for the faculty and physical plant. About three times a year, Lerch said, each building ventilation system is checked for broken belts and valves.

reimburses the commission 70 to 90 percent of the loan amount, depending on the agency's performance.

Since the beginning of the Guaranteed Student Loan program in 1967, the scholarship commission has had $374 million in loan defaults, Clement said.

"Ninety percent of the people are paying off their loans, so the system actually works pretty well," he said. "The ones that make the headlines are those who don't."

The commission works with the Department of Labor,

Secretary of State and the IRS to cross-check names and addresses of loan delinquents so they can collect on delinquent loans

To collect on bad loans, Clement said the commission contacts the person by mail and telephone, but if the person still refuses to pay off the loan, the commission uses other methods. They use private collection agencies, take individuals to court, or attach a portion of state and federal tax returns or the wages of state employees.

"Students should realize a Guaranteed Student Loan is a first attempt at establishing credit," Clement said. "Bad credit can really hurt you down the road."

By working with the Registration and Education Department, the state also refuses to renew the licenses of doctors, nurses, lawyers or other professional people unless they begin making student loan payments.

"We issue a probationary license if the person makes arrangements to pay off the loan, but if they don't make arrangements or fail to adhere to them, their licenses are suspended," Clement said.

who was married with no dependents needed about $9,000 in financial aid. With this formula, this student was assumed to have received $5,600 from his family, when actually he hadn't," he said.

In 1989, the formula will be revised by Congress, Daniel Mann, associate director of student work and financial assistance, said.

"This new change will affect a lot of different student populations and, with independent students, it will probably help some and hurt others," Mann said.

Another problem to be reported to the joint committee is stricter dependency guidelines created in October by the IBHE, Hall said.

If students are under 24 and make less than $4,000 a year, they are not considered independent from their parents. This means their parents' income is added together with their income, usually making them ineligible for financial assistance, Hall said.

The new amendment has caused a great deal of paper work and caused several students to be switched from independent to dependent status, Mann said.

Hall said he also intends to tell the committee that SIU-C has the highest percentage of low-income students in Illinois.

14 to reap grant benefits of $138,000 for research

A $138,000 grant from the U.S. Bureau of Mines will provide nine SIU-C students and five faculty members with scholarships, fellowships and research grants for the 1987-1988 school year.

The five scholarship winners are Penny Thorne of Carbondale, senior majoring in mining and electrical engineering; Philip Moss of Carbondale, junior in geology; Marsha Hilmes of Highland, freshman in geology; Jeffrey Roschky of Makanda and Leonard Liew of Malaysia, seniors in mining engineering. The scholarship provides tuition for two semesters and a $500 to $1,000 cash award. The four fellowship winners are Donald Douglass of North Olmstead, Ohio, graduate student in geology; Gary Thesiera of Malaysia, graduate student in plant and soil science; Sashi Jasty of India, graduate student in physics; and Qing Wang of the People's Republic of China, graduate student in mining.

A fellowship covers tuition and provides a $750 monthly stipend for 12 months. Five faculty researchers will receive grants of $11,600 each to develop research to be submitted to outside agencies for additional support.

The recipients are Richard Fifarek, assistant professor of geology; Shashi Lalvini, assistant professor of mechanical engineering and energy processes; Jack Nawrot, associate scientist with the Cooperative Wildlife Research Laboratory; Hasan Sevim, assistant professor of mining engineering; and Richard Sweigard, assistant professor of mining engineering.

Energetic music highlights Valens' story of success

By Winnie Stones
Staff Writer

"La Bamba" brings to the screen the legacy of Mexican-American rocker Ritchie Valens and his rise from a migrant peach orchard laborer to a 17-year-old rock legend.

Written and directed by Luis Valdez, who shares Valens' Mexican-American heritage, the music in the film is outstanding. The acting and writing, though well done, wasn't outstanding. The energetic music easily overpowered the sometimes sentimentally sappy dialogue.

THE "BUDDY HOLLY Story" has told us about that young rocker's rise to rock 'n' roll fame. "La Bamba" finally tells the story of the youngest passenger on the fated flight that departed from Clear Lake, Iowa, on Feb. 3, 1959. The small two-engine plane crashed in a snowy corn field shortly after take-off, killing Holly, Valens, and J.P. Richardson, popularly known as the "Big Bopper."

Richardson, 29 at the time of the crash, was riding the waves of popularity with one hit, "Cantilly Luce," in which he is making a phone call, boorishly reciting the sexist line, "Heelloo Baaby...you know what I like!"

LET'S HOPE we don't have to endure a feature film about the Big Bopper. He had a brief cameo role in "La Bamba" and always managed to slip a "Heelloo Baaby" into all conversations.

On the other hand, a film telling Valens' story — his meteoric rise to fame with a brief eight-month career as a superstar while he was still in high school — has been long overdue. This is shown by the surging popularity of the film sound track's title cut of Valens' arrangement of a Mexican folksong, "La Bamba."

THE FILM makers decided not to use Valens' original recordings because of their poor condition, so they made the logical choice of asking the East Los Angeles band Los Lobos to rerecord Valens' songs.

Los Lobos, also sharing Valens' Mexican-American heritage, felt it was their "spiritual obligation," to participate in the project because their roots are embedded deeply in Valens' music, a press release from Columbia Pictures said. The group appears as a brothel band in the film and the group's lead singer, David Hildago, is Valens' singing voice.

Ritchie Valens, played by Lou Diamond Phillips, realizes his dream of bringing his music to the world in Columbia Pictures' "La Bamba."

MODERN DAY rockers also were logically cast to portray Valens' contemporaries on screen. They not only perform songs of their musical mentors, but play cameo roles based on the characters of Holly, Eddie Cochran and Jackie Wilson.

Marshall Crenshaw, who has long been compared to Holly because of the close ties his own music has with Holly's in terms of overall style and his physical likeness to the rock icon, performs an exciting rendition of "Crying, Waiting, Hoping." Holly chartered the death plane.

ONCE THE leader of the modern-day rockabilly trio, the Stray Cats, Brian Setzer strongly patterns himself after his mentor, rhythm and blues artist Eddie Cochran. Setzer was more than happy to portray Cochran, whose also brief rock career ended when he died in an April 1960 London taxi accident that also injured the late Gene ("Be Bop a Lu La") Vincent.

"It's important that a musician who was influenced by him (Cochran) play him, not an actor who doesn't play guitar," Setzer said in the press release.

SELTZER COULD have been referring to actor Lou Diamond Phillips, who takes the lead role of Valens. Phillips, who had never touched a guitar until he started working on the film, gave a pretty routine performance as Valens, an energetic, bright, friendly teen-ager.

The role of Valens called for more acting than actual guitar playing and with Los Lobos backing the lip-synch and the guitar, the combination of good acting and good music was very effective.

Airlines propose safety, air traffic recommendations

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The nation's airlines and other major users of aviation announced Wednesday that they have agreed on a list of recommendations to the administration and Congress to improve safety and reduce air traffic delays.

In a rare show of unity, the six major aviation user groups — often at odds with each other in the past — said the key success to their proposals is the release of $6 billion from the federal aviation trust fund.

The trust fund gets its revenues from special taxes on airline passengers, shippers and business and personal aircraft operators. The administration has refused to allocate all the monies collected.

Prof's works on display in Chicago

Drawings and watercolors by Herbert L. Fink, a professor of art are on display at the State of Illinois Art Gallery in Chicago.

The collection, titled "Herb Fink: Watercolors and Drawings 1978-1982," focuses on the human figure.

The exhibit was organized by the Mitchell Museum in Mount Vernon through the Illinois Arts Council.

Also on display is an exhibit titled "Chicago Vicinity Clay VI," which features works by ceramic artists.

Both exhibits will run through Sept. 11 at the gallery, which is open from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday. Admission is free.

Amy Carter to help dad after suffering 'burn out'

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI) — Amy Carter, who dropped out of Brown University because she was "burned out," will join former President Jimmy Carter to help build houses for the poor in 90-degree heat, her mother said Wednesday.

"She's a good worker," said her mother, Rosalynn Carter, her head wrapped in a tan scarf. "She worked for a week in Chicago," where the Carters also helped build homes for the poor.

Mrs. Carter said Amy, 19, didn't feel up to wielding a hammer and saw immediately but would be on the job Thursday.

The former president and first lady began work Monday with scores of volunteers for Habitat for Humanity to complete 14 houses in five days in an old baseball field called Optimist Park.

Officials said Amy was resting up Wednesday from a short illness and a long bus ride from Atlanta.

Mrs. Carter said Amy would take a year off from Brown University, where she was dismissed recently for academic reasons, apparently for failure to keep up with her course work while joining activist causes.

Adviser says students are ag-cellent ambassadors

By Gina Evans
Student Writer

Students are taking an active part to help increase enrollment in the School of Agriculture.

SIU-C Agassadors is a new student organization designed to increase enrollments in agriculture programs.

The group, advised by associate dean of instruction Donald Elkins, helps the school with recruitment activities. Ten students were selected this year as the charter group.

"I thought the program would be effective, but I never dreamed it would be this successful," Elkins said. "It's exceeding everyone's expectations."

Average enrollment in the School of Agriculture is 627 undergraduates and 134 graduate students.

The Agassadors have given more than 50 presentations to high school and community college groups this year and have spoken at banquets.

Members of the group greet prospective students and their families as they visit campus or attend open houses. They answer questions on a student-to-student basis.

"We've found that prospective students tend to listen more closely to current students of the school than they do faculty," Elkins said.

"One student called me after he got my letter and said he thought it was a very nice personal touch. It meant a lot to him that a current ag student would write to him."

— Laura Jakastas

"They also believe them more. It just seems to be more personal."

Besides giving presentations and speaking at banquets, Agassadors are responsible for writing and publishing AgriFocus, a new quarterly newsletter about the School of Agriculture for prospective students.

They also write personal letters to each high school or community college student admitted to the school and periodically telephone prospective students to talk about concerns they may have and remind them of upcoming events and admission deadlines.

"Even though it takes a lot of time to write each letter, I think they're very worthwhile," said Agassador Laura Jakastas, a senior majoring in food and nutrition.

"In fact, one student called me after he got my letter and said he thought it was a very nice, personal touch. It meant a lot to him that a current ag student would write to him," she said.

"There's been a lot more work than I originally thought, but it's really fun," said Dan Zinck, a senior majoring in plant and soil science.

He said he would join the organization all over again because, "The program is well directed, it's for a good cause, and I know it's going to pay off."

"For the first time in several years we are looking at a possible admissions increase for the fall," Elkins said. "I truly believe the Agassadors are directly responsible."

President praises trade secretary

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan praised the late Commerce Secretary and cowboy Malcolm Baldrige Wednesday as a man who lived the cowboy's creed of honesty and integrity and thus embodied the best of America.

Reagan and his wife, Nancy, joined Baldrige's family and 1,600 other people in a memorial service at National Cathedral for Baldrige, who died Saturday of injuries suffered when a horse flipped backward onto him while he was practicing for a calf-roping competition at a California rodeo. He was 64.

Baldrige will be buried Thursday.

Tyson, Tucker await clash, 2 unbeaten records on line

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Mike Tyson said Wednesday he is fully prepared to fight Tony Tucker Saturday night despite a training camp interrupted by news of an assault charge and a four-day leave.

Tyson, the World Boxing Council and World Boxing Association heavyweight champion, will meet International Boxing Federation champion Tucker for the unified heavyweight championship.

"I'm sorry to disappoint most people, but the rumors are not true about having trouble with my camp," said Tyson, an overwhelming favorite against Tucker. "I'm in the best shape of my life."

Tyson admits leaving his Las Vegas training camp for four days from July 17-20. He said he went home to Catskill, N.Y., to visit Camille Ewald, who owns the house where Tyson has lived since he was 13, and has been ill. Ewald shared the house with Cus D'Amato, the trainer who adopted Tyson and groomed him as a fighter until he died in November 1985.

Jim Jacobs, Tyson's co-manager, said the fighter was allowed to go home because he already was in excellent shape.

Tyson's absence led to speculation he was unhappy with his management, especially trainer Kevin Rooney. Tyson Wednesday said he is satisfied working with Rooney.

The most trouble Tyson has had since he arrived in Las Vegas goes back to an incident in Los Angeles June 21 that led to Tyson being charged with assault and battery against a security guard at a concert. Charges were filed July 6 and Tyson is due in court in August for a hearing.

Tyson said his lawyer told him not to discuss the case, but people close to him say he has a different version than that of plaintiff Jonathan Casares. Casares charges Tyson slapped him three times after he intervened in a struggle between the champion and a female security worker.

"Anything that I do, I think about the circumstances," Tyson said. "I won't do anything I can't control. I'm not going to do anything that will get me off the track and interfere with my career."

Jacobs said the incident is an example of the "downside" of being heavyweight champion. Tyson, 21, is the youngest heavyweight champ ever.

"Even though I'm champion, I'm human and I'm young," he said. "Everybody makes mistakes. I try not to do anything derogatory. It comes down to how you handle it: if you step on a banana peel. If I can't handle it, I'll find a way to avoid it.

"Cus told me these things happen, the best thing to do is walk away. But if somebody hits you, it's different. You have to defend yourself."

Tyson has had little trouble defending himself in the ring. He is 30-0 with 27 knockouts entering the scheduled 15-round bout. Tucker, 28, is 35-0 with 30 knockouts.

Tucker seems to believe the talk about Tyson. He said Tyson's fairy tale rise to fame is over.

"I don't think he conducted himself as a gentleman or a champion," Tucker said. "I doubt his mind has been in the right places the last few weeks."

"I think he's had a story to tell... a young kid who grew up in New York, in a rough environment, was adopted by a known trainer (D'Amato), it was an American fairy tale. How many kids get that chance. He was blessed. But that's over now. I want to show the world how a real champion's supposed to conduct himself."

The bout, scheduled for 15 rounds, will be held at the Las Vegas Hilton and telecast by HBO.

Superdome agenda crammed: Pope, Saints, Tulane in 24 hours

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — The Louisiana Superdome will host the pope, a college football game and the New Orleans Saints 1987 debut in a 24-hour period in September, but officials of the world's largest indoor arena see no problems.

"I think we're pretty well geared up for it," said Bill Curl, vice president of marketing and public relations for the Superdome. "We're obviously keeping a close eye on it."

The Dome agenda for Saturday, Sept. 12, includes a massive rally that is expected to draw up to 73,000 youths and Pope John Paul II between 11:45 a.m. and 1:30 p.m., and Tulane's home opener against Iowa State at 7:30 p.m. before an estimated crowd of 40,000.

"It's too bad they're (Tulane) not playing Notre Dame that night," Curl joked.

"It's going to be an interesting combination," said Jeff Seal, Tulane sports information director.

The Saints then host the Cleveland Browns at noon Sunday, Sept. 13.

"It'll be a great weekend — for the city and the Superdome," Curl said. "It'll be a long day for our security people, but I'm sure they can hack it. We'll have no problems getting the football game off on schedule."

Curl said preparations for the hectic weekend began about 18 months ago when the Archdiocese of New Orleans learned the pontiff was considering making the Crescent City part of his nine-city U.S. tour.

"We've been in virtually dozens of meetings already," Curl said. "It consumes a lot of time, but it's time well spent. These things never get to be routine, but drastic changes are not new to us and big events are not new to us."

The Dome next year will be the site of the Republican National Convention.

"The real key to the thing was the cooperation of the Tulane people," Curl said.

Tulane moved back the starting time of the Iowa State game from 7 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. to accommodate the Dome's transformation.

Seal said a tarp will cover half the playing field. Folding chairs will be placed on the tarp for additional seating for the pope's visit.

Seal said the pope's rally should be over by 1:30 p.m., and both teams will arrive about four hours later. The entire stadium will be cleared before the squads arrive, he said.

Viking players net 4 DWIs in 8 months, coach hopes it kicks people 'back in line'

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — Minnesota Coach Jerry Burns said Tuesday he hopes drunken-driving charges against four Viking players in recent months helps others avoid the same problems.

Quarterback Tommy Kramer, tight end Steve Jordan, nose tackle Tim Newton and cornerback Issiac Holt all have been charged in the past eight months with drunk driving.

"Perhaps it's a good thing," Burns said of the media attention to the players' cases. "There is great public concern over the drunken-driving situation. Maybe it will kick some people back in line."

Holt, whose court appearance for a July 4 charge of aggravated driving while intoxicated was postponed from Tuesday until Thursday, disclosed in a statement issued by a Vikings spokesman that he, like Kramer, has voluntarily entered an alcohol-abuse treatment center.

"I would like, at this time, to acknowledge that I admitted myself voluntarily, into treatment for an alcohol problem two weeks ago," Holt said. "I felt that incidents in the past few months indicated I was having a problem with my drinking. I expect to be out of treatment within the next few weeks and ready for the Minnesota Vikings' first preseason game."

Kramer, who also will miss part of the preseason, had been arrested last weekend for driving under the influence. It is the second time Kramer is seeking help for alcohol abuse.

Jordan was ticketed last November and Newton spent two days in a workhouse in January.

"Everything's a problem," Burns said. "With 80 guys, you have 80 different problems. It's a minor distraction. It may be a blessing in disguise."

From the perspective of getting his team ready, Burns said he would be more concerned if Kramer was out with a shoulder injury, which would have left doubt whether he would be 100 percent when he returns.

Vikings General Manager Mike Lynn has said he considers alcohol more of a problem in the NFL than drugs.

Diving rivals fight for gold; underdog Louganis leading (BARTLESVILLE, Okla. (UPI) — Greg Louganis breezed to his second preliminary victory Wednesday at the U.S. Outdoor Diving Championships, taking a 10-point lead over long-time rival Bruce Kimball in the 10-meter platform.

In a later event Wednesday, 36 women were scheduled to compete in the finals of the 1-meter springboard.

Louganis, the 1984 Olympic gold medalist in the platform, built a 30-point lead on the first four required dives, but had to hold off Kimball at the end, finishing with 587 points to Kimball's 576 on 10 dives.

Kimball was the 1984 Olympic silver medalist in the event and battled Louganis earlier this month at the Olympic Festival, where Louganis won the platform and 3-meter events. Louganis also took the preliminary lead at 3-meters on Tuesday.

"I felt very consistent today," Louganis, from Baton Rouge, La., said. "I was pleased, because it is just the prelims. I was very pleased with my required list and made some corrections on my reverse twists."

Louganis, who labeled himself the underdog at the outdoor meet because he finished second in all three events at the indoor championships in April, said he was less nervous Wednesday than on the first day of the meet.

"Yesterday, I was a little bit apprehensive because everybody was bringing up the past about me not being a returning national champion," he said.

Kimball, from Ann Arbor, Mich., also said he was happy with his performance.

"I've been going fairly well lately," said Kimball, the son of former Olympic medalist Dick Kimball, who also is his son's coach. "I think I did a solid job, but what really counts is Saturday (when the finals of the event will be held)."

Ron Meyer of Baton Rouge, La., who finished second to Louganis in the 3-meter on Tuesday, was in third place. Matt Scoggin of Austin, Texas, who defeated Louganis in the platform in April, was fourth.

The preliminaries take on extra meaning in the platform and 3-meter because half of the preliminary point total is added to the final standings to determine the diving entries for the Pan American Games next month. Two men and two women divers in those two events will make the Pan Am team. The 1-meter springboard is a non-Olympic event.

Pennsylvania teenager topples own record in 400-meter swim

CLOVIS, Calif. (UPI) — David Wharton, an 18-year-old from Warmminster, Pa., and a freshman at the University of Southern California, broke his own American record in the 400-meter individual medley Wednesday during qualifying heats of the U.S. Swimming Long Course Nationals.

It was the fifth American record to fall since the five-day meet began Monday in a pool competitors say is built for speed. One world record also fell Monday when Janet Evans, 15, of Placentia, Calif., won the women's 800-meter freestyle in 8:22.44.

Wharton's time of 4:18.45 beat his old mark of 4:18.77, which he set last year in Florida.

Californians Amy Shaw, 15, and Steve Bentley each broke an American record Tuesday in the 200-meter breaststroke.

Shaw, of Mission Viejo, eclipsed the American record twice in one day when she won the final in 2:29.78, erasing the mark she set by qualifying for the event in 2:30.77. The previous mark of 2:31.15 was set at the 1984 Summer Olympics by silver medalist Susan Rapp.

Bentley, 22, a USC student from Fountain Valley, captured the event in 2:15.30, lowering the mark of 2:15.38 set by Steve Lundquist in 1983.

below-par .263 average at Beloit, Wis. in the Midwest League. But he did record 52 RBI, 35 runs scored, 17 doubles and nine home runs in 320 at-bats.

Dan Chapman, assistant general manager of the Ports, said Jones' move to Stockton wasn't a great jump up but it was upward movement.

"The California League is considered to be a better league than the Midwest League," Chapman said. "Robert does have the talent to play for us — in fact, he's been quite a welcome addition after the first two games."

And the Ports, Chapman said, are the cream of the California League. The team already qualified for the league playoffs in September by winning the first half of the league's split season. The Ports posted the best record in professional baseball during that span, going 49-22.

Chapman said more than 100 players from the California League, including 20 players from the Ports, now play in the professional ranks.

Jones hopes his next move up will be with the Brewers' double A squad in El Paso, Tex., or the triple A team in Denver.

Chapman says Jones is "a good bet to be with the double A team in El Paso next spring. I'd be a little surprised if he doesn't make double A next season."

Last summer, his first in the minors, Jones hit .283 at Helena, where Brewer draft picks attend before moving up.

Jones, who holds SIU-C all-time career records for home runs with 36 and RBI with 176, said the step from Saluki superstar to "just another player" at Helena was difficult to deal with at first, but was an adjustment he made with little problem.

The centerfielder said he hopes to be back at SIU-C this fall, and he'd like to play winter ball after that. But a chance to play in the Brewer's fall instructional league would postpone his homecoming plans.

"If I get the chance to play instructional ball, I'll definitely go," he said. "I think that'd be a big boost to my career. The same with winter ball — I'd like to play in Mexico or somewhere."

As a first-round draft choice out of high school, Jones declined an offer to sign with the Cincinnati Reds in order to attend college. At SIU-C, where he had hoped to play both baseball and football, Jones went on to become the Saluki's all-time career home run hitter.

As a senior, he was named SIU-C's male athlete of the year. By the time he left the confines of Abe Martin Field, he ranked in nine of the 10 offensive categories kept by the SIU-C sports information department.

Dallas Cowboys blaze AIDS trail in NFL

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (UPI) — The Dallas Cowboys have become the first NFL team to offer voluntary AIDS testing to its players, and apparently most of them have consented to the procedure.

Team spokesman Doug Todd said Wednesday the testing is confidential under California state law, and the results must go directly to a designated physician, in this case Dr. J.R. Zamarano, a team doctor.

"The (AIDS) test is made available with the physicals, which are still going on," Todd said.

"The first round was with the rookies on July 19 (the date rookies reported to training camp). The first batch of veterans were tested last Sunday and the last bunch will be tested this Friday morning."

A spokeswoman for the National Football League Players Association said Wednesday the Cowboys are the first NFL team to test for AIDS.

About 95 percent of the veteran players who have reported to camp have agreed to be tested for AIDS, and about 80 percent of the rookies have been tested, the Dallas Times Herald reported Wednesday.

Todd said the test requires a consent form signed by the player before the training-camp physical.

Acquired immune deficiency syndrome is a fatal affliction that destroys the body's ability to fight disease.

NFL teams were encouraged to conduct voluntary AIDS testing at a recent league meeting of trainers, the Times Herald reported. Zamarano said the team's medical staff met and decided to propose the testing plan to Cowboys president Tex Schramm.

This year Cowboy doctors and trainers will be wearing rubber gloves when dealing with blood-related injuries. Members of the equipment staff will wear the gloves when handling bloody uniforms or equipment.

Anti-Castro faction ready

FBI agents to set up camp at Pan Am Games

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — FBI agents and members of a group opposed to Cuban President Fidel Castro will be at the 10th Pan American Games to aid potential defectors, a situation Cuban officials have protested.

The Cuban American National Federation, an anti-Castro group with offices in Washington and Miami, will have a temporary office two blocks from the Games' media headquarters for the duration of competition, which runs Aug. 8-23.

More than 4,500 athletes from 38 Western Hemisphere nations, including more than 500 Cubans, will compete in 30 sports at the Games. Federal officials are prepared for any attempts at defection.

"Defectors are always a possibility. We will have teams to deal with that in town, including language specialists," said Lee Quick, assistant agent in charge of the FBI's Indianapolis office. "After the first attempt to defect, the State Department is brought into it. The final decisions are made in Washington."

Cuban officials fear an incident such as the 1980 defection of former weightlifting world-record holder Roberto Urrutia. He escaped Cuban officials at a Mexico City competition by tying sheets together and lowering himself from a fourth-floor hotel window. Urrutia climbed over a U.S. Embassy wall, requested political asylum, became a U.S. citizen and this year will compete for the U.S. Pan Am team.

Officials of the Cuban American group, established five years ago, plan to bring noted Cuban refugees to Indianapolis to speak. They also said no attempts will be made to lure Cubans into defecting, a claim doubted by Manuel Guerra, president of the Cuban Olympic Committee.

"This is not a good situation for us. This should not be happening. It is clear they are going to try and take Cubans," Guerra said.

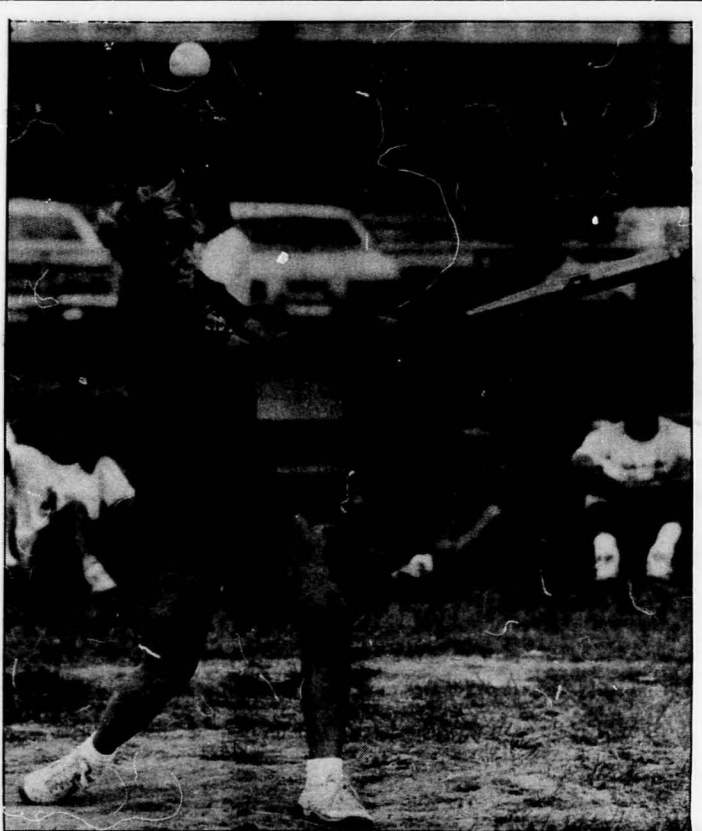

He said any athlete who wished to stay in the United States could do so.

"Everyone must think out in their own head what they want to do," Guerra said. "If someone wants to stay, they can stay."

Jose Antonio Font, executive director of the foundation, said Cubans would not be enticed into defections by his group.

"That is obviously absurd. We are not there to encourage anyone to defect. We go there to welcome Cuban athletes and those from many other nations," he said, adding his group would provide aid to anyone seeking to defect.

The foundation also wants to counter any pro-Cuban political messages that might be made at the Games.

Saluki round-tripper king moving up in bush leagues

By Steve Merritt
Staff Writer

Editor's note: This is the third of four articles on Salukis who are playing professional baseball.

Former Saluki slugger Robert Jones is moving up the ranks of professional baseball.

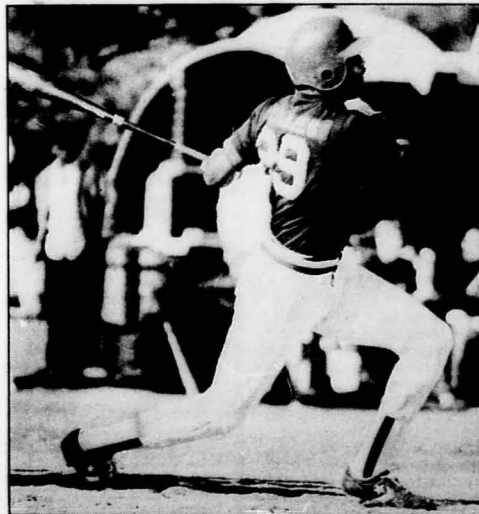

After a year in the minor leagues he's gone from a rookie league in Helena, Mont. to his second class A team in Stockton, Calif., with plans to continue moving up.

"I don't want to be in the minors forever, but I'm going to be patient," Jones, a 1986 draft choice of the Milwaukee Brewers, said. "Right now, I just want to play and continue to move up."

Jones is a starting centerfielder for the Stockton Ports.

In 10 games, he boasts a seven-game hitting streak with a .364 average. Included in his statistics are nine RBI, eight runs scored, two home runs, a triple and five stolen bases in five attempts.

"I was a little nervous at first," Jones said. "I went hitless the first two nights as a leadoff batter, but then I got moved down in the lineup where I felt more comfortable. Then I started doing what I knew I was capable of."

Former Saluki Robert Jones already attracted the attention of pro scouts before collecting 176 RBI and 36 home runs at SIU.

He followed up by going 2-for-3 the next night, and gave multiple hit performances the next five games.

Before going to California, Jones hit for what he calls a

Vaughn magic returns in youth hoops clinic

By Darren Richardson
Staff Writer

The second Charlie "Chico" Vaughn basketball camp for youths in grades four through nine is slated for Aug. 10-14 at Davies Gymnasium.

SIU-C greets from the past will lend their knowledge of the game to help the all-time Saluki scoring leader conduct the clinic.

Coaches include Seymour Bryson, Harold Bardo and Harvey Welch, SIU-C hoop heroes from the 1950s, and current administrators at the University. Also assisting Vaughn will be 1987 SIU-C graduate Brian Welch, current Illini star Steve Bardo, Larry Baldwin, junior high coach at Cairo and Milton Vaughn, Chico's brother and coach at Egyptian High School.

Welch coordinates the free camp, which features five sessions that run 5 to 8 p.m.

"I guess it's a way for me to give something back in return for what basketball has given me," Welch said. He expressed hope that the camp will give participants a good start on basketball skills but at the same time help them understand there's "life after basketball."

"It's geared to development beyond athletics," Welch said. "It's important to help the kids get going in the right direction."

Although fundamentals are a big part of the program, about an hour each night will be devoted to discussion of such topics as Proposition 48 and academics, nutrition, stress management, drugs and alcohol and career development.

Basketball drills will highlight teamwork, shooting, rebounding and playing defense. "Hardest worker" and leadership awards will be given throughout the week.

Sponsors of the camp are the Coordinated Youth Program in Carbondale, the Community Human Service Center, SIU-C Student Health Service, the city of Carbondale and the Jackson County Health Department. About 80 youngsters attended last year and Welch expects about 100 this year.
