The birth of a small pink foal at the SIUC Horse Center is being heralded as a miracle by the group of students and faculty that aided to save her. The filly, which has been given the name Faith, and her mother Kusty, a thoroughly bred mare, were never expected to survive.

When the maternity foal broke at 101 pm, March 24, Nancy Christiansen, Horse Center head, examined the stall to feel the position of the foal and determine if any problems would arise. She found that the foal was positioned completely in the uterus of the mare.

After calling on Sherry King, professor of equine science, and Smart Anderson, a veterinarian from Anna, Christiansen and other students worked to reposition the foal. To complete their attempt, the mare became agitated and increasingly stressed as time went on.

Both Anderson and King arrived within an hour after the mare's water broke and joined in the efforts. Christiansen said because the mare had been in labor so long, they were concerned the foal could be dead.

"When mares are in labor their contractions are extreme," Anderson said. "Usually, foals don't survive after 30 minutes."

It had been more than an hour and because the mare became even more restless, they moved her outside.

The care, with Christiansen's assistance, attempted removing the foal by using a call-jac, a rubber of rhinoceros designed to form the foal from the womb. After an hour and a half of unsuccessful attempts to save the foal and mare, King was concerned with keeping the mare in pain any longer.

Shortly after Anderson left to get the injection to put down the mare, a student noticed the foal's nose begining to emerge from the mare, and that the foal had finally realized the current position and vice chancellor for Academic Affairs position were named by interim Chancellor John Jackson Thursday. The provost position opened in the wake of Tom Guernsey's announcement of his resignation as interim provost in order to devote more time to his position as dean of the SIUC School of Law.

USG votes to increase transit fee

Long debate finally yields a decision to continue support for the Saluki Express

Glenn Shafer

DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

About three hours and two modifications later, University Student Government voted to support the mass transit fee for increase to maintain the Saluki Express system at campus. At Wednesday night's USG meeting.

Senators voted in favor of raising the mass transit fee for 3c percent for fiscal 2002 after lengthy debate. The fee will rise from $23.50 to $24 per semester if approved by the Board of Trustees.

The path for USG to approve the fee increase came earlier in the evening when raising student fees was a non-viable option.

Without student support, the administration has stated that the mass transit service would more than likely not continue.

Senators debated two separate motions regarding the mass transit fee.

The first resolution, written by Evergreen Terrace Senator Chuck Miller, would have been in support of maintaining mass transit on campus, but the administration had asked other options rather than raising student fees for this specific service.

The motion also stated that if "no reasonable solutions are reached," then student should vote on the increase on a student referendum.

Miller also hoped by raising the student referendum, students would have the opportunity to decide for themselves whether they wanted the increase.

"This is an important enough issue that we need to hear from every student body and not just (senators)," he said.

Senator would against the education citing concerns that a decision was needed sooner.

USG President Sean Henry, who sits on the mass transit advisory board, wrote a resolution that was not supported by the administration. The resolution called for: "USG support of mass transit system with the realization that student support is essential to any final decision to the mass transit board.

Government Affairs Commissioner Willis Reynolds, who was also present by a student referendum, said students would have the opportunity to decide for themselves whether they wanted the increase.

"This bill doesn't represent the students, it took the responsibility to a committee of eight people, Reynolds said.

May senators shared Reynolds' concerns and voted against this resolution.

Associate Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Lawrence Julian spoke about the proposed for for about an hour. Julian informed senators that the increase would come after Beck Bus was the only company to make a bid to renew the Saluki Express contract.

Julian told the Senate that by not raising the fee, about half of the Saluki Express money would have to be eliminated. He added that the Board of Trustees had no reason to approve the raise in the fee if USG did not support the miller.

After senators voted down both resolutions, East Side Senator Eric Walther made a motion to vote a student referendum to include on the ballot in the next USG meeting.

Senators took a break to discuss the voting of the referendum. During the break, Henry said Julian spoke several sessions that he would understand any proposals in regard to a referendum.

Henry said he told senators because they wanted to take a strong stand one way or another and not leave it up to the administration. He also added that the Board of Trustees had no reason to approve the raise in the fee if only about 30 percent of the student body votes in USG elections.

"Without the referendum for the referendum, there is no reason we couldn't take a stronger issue on the ballot.

After the senators voted down the motion.

The meeting continued with other items of new business such as Agriculture Senator Maggie

A life of family, city and SIUC
City clerk gains highest honor
Karen Blatter
Students & Faculty Edition

City Clerk Janet Vaught has a side that not many know about. At one time, she had to make a proviso pull competition and still to this day has her motorbike license.

But, what people do know about her is that Vaught is dedicated to her job, family, and SIUC.

She has spent nearly 21 years in this position for the City of Carbondale and this year gained both national and international recognition for being the first Master Municipal Clerk in Illinois.

The first of five Student Orientation, Advisement and Registration sessions will begin next month for students entering SIUC this fall — a change to traditional freshman indoctrination occurring prior to the start of fall classes.

The first, one-day SOAR sessions begin April 14 and continue through May 2 for incoming students and their families. The final two-day sessions will take place June 6 and 7, providing future students with a night in residence.

In these upcoming sessions, new students will be able to register for classes, get student ID cards made, establish email accounts, take tours of the campus and learn what services and opportunities the University offers.

Presentations by various University departments are also designed to ease the transition for future students.

Recycling effort buoyed at Northern Arizona University

The non-profit group, Grass Roots Recycling, has joined a report about how much recycling is benefiting the environment.

According to the report, recycling keeps 28 percent of municipal waste out of landfills.

It's in the fall at Northern Arizona University. An official for the recycling center on the campus said the University has increased its recycling production by about 15 percent every year since beginning its program in 1996.

The year’s report was approved by a law mandating that all state agencies recycle at least half of their waste paper.

In its first year, NAU’s program recycled 48 tons of recyclable material, valued at approximately $1000, the university reported in 1998.

Jazz Ensembles take the stage at Shryock
Travis Moore
Academic Affairs Editor

The premise of that singular American creation which is jazz music is lost on some and embraced by others. To those not on the jazz wavelength, it can seem puzzling and obscure. To musicians like Kevin Choose, jazz can be an expression of one’s soul. Having the two you are able to really express your true self,” said Choose, a graduate student in film performance from Oakland, Calif. “By improvising, a musician is able to represent more of himself and his own personality.”

Like it or not, this art form is invading SIUC this week with the Southern Illinois Jazz Festival, in its second year as a three-day event. As a result, Choose and 11 other student musicians are parting in the Jazz Ensemble. I and II perform Thursday night at Shryock Auditorium.

Kevin Choose, associate professor of music and coordinator of jazz programs, said the performance should appeal to a wide variety of jazz lovers.

“This is a major happening for jazz lovers,” Allison said. “We’ve tried to pick pieces within the ability of the band that also have an educational appeal.”

The performances include contemporary jazz numbers as well as classic pieces by such noted artists as Charlie Parker and dizzy Gillespie.

Tom Call, a freshman trumpeter major from Carbondale, finds Parker’s “Scrapple From The Apple” particularly challenging musically. “I play lead trumpet on that tune and it can be hard,” Call said. “It has a nice groove to it, though.”

Carr said events like this should be used to get awareness about our music program in general.

“Allison said this part of the jazz festival could be a successful recruitment tool for the University.”

“Half of my band came to the festival as high school students,” Allison said. “It’s all about making contacts to attract students to the campus.”

To Shadi Frick, a senior music education major from Carbondale, the entire festival is giving the community something it can never get enough of culture.

“I love classical music, but I personally believe there is more freedom in jazz,” Frick said. “I don’t think the community can get enough of it.”

GROUND CONTROL TO MAJOR DEPALMA

Travis Moore
Academic Affairs Editor

A PG-rated space adventure by the master of science fiction Brian DePalma is sort of like a romantic comedy dressed up by Oliver Stone. Something about it just doesn’t feel quite right.

The scene is newsworthy, and there is no admission price.

With “Mission to Mars,” DePalma strikes in bring the Spielbergian wonder of “Close Encounters of the Third Kind,” but loses his edge in the process.

Too many of the events of the movie come across as too much of a throwaway, and DePalma’s decision to cast a major star in the role of a Martian wastes the opportunity of exploring the surface on Mars.

INTERNATIONAL

However, without a strong grasp of the language, and no friends or other family members to support them, many international students are often overwhelmed by the American way of life. Yang knows this feeling all to well.

Yang, a 29-year-old graduate student in instructional design, came to the United States in 1998 from China. Pretending to laugh with the rest of her classmate was just one way of dealing with the pressures of living in.

"Sometimes I just kept silent," she said. "I try to concentrate so hard, but you feel like you're stupid because you don't understand." Yang's problems is that her professors and classmates speak too fast for her to comprehend. Yang even took assistance in speech communication.

"One student in my class told the teacher that she gave too much homework," Yang said. "I was shocked. Chinese students dare not speak to a teacher like that. You must keep silent."

Sometimes I just kept silent," she said. "Ttry to concentrate so hard, but you feel like you're stupid because you don't understand." Yang's problems is that her professors and classmates speak too fast for her to comprehend. Yang even took assistance in speech communication.

American's use of "slang" words was also a problem, but some as for her husband Lu Cian Lu, Lu Cian, 31, is a graduate student and teaching assistant in speech communication.

He recalled a situation when he was preparing a class for a mid-term exam, and here the Chinese language and American "slang" clashed.

"I told them, 'don't forget to bring a pencil and a rubber,' which means erase in China. When they told me 'that rubber means in America, I felt so embarrassed," Lu said.

For Alex Tokarev and his wife, Elvira, who are her maiden name of Stamenkova, the transition to the United States has not been helped by certain rules governing their visas.

"They came to SIUC from Bulgaria last August, and were recently married, and viewed their new life here as something of a honeymoon. Tokarev, a 31-year-old graduate student in economics, is covered by SIUC's health insurance policy for students, but his wife is not.

Tokarev said his wife, who was diagnosed with diabetes at age 4, has been refused outside health insurance providers because of her pre-existing medical condition. To sake matters more difficult, they plan to go back to Bulgaria for vacation and because the University requires spouses to be insured. Stamenkova, 29, will have to stay there if she wants to find a provider in America.

"We're some kind of Catch-22," Tokarev said. "The University wants you to have insurance, but they don't offer it. They just outrun the University to find a provider.

She also appreciates what they bring to the University in terms of their life experiences, and says Americans would too, if more interacted with them.

"When you get past the things that are different, you learn to work with them according to what they are, not where they come from," she said.

Life in America does have many upsides, according to the students. Yang has a 10-month-old daughter named Lu Yang, and was very impressed with American nursing and doctors during her pregnancy.

And although she is not yet a student, Stamenkova has allowed her medical situation to stop her from enjoying herself. She was a table-tennis tournament in February at the Recreation Center. She also likes to draw, and enjoys Carbondale's flowers and open spaces.

All agree that America has much to offer international students by way of an education, despite the problems they have encountered. They also maintain close ties to their homeland. Tokarev eventually plans to return to Bulgaria to teach, but said America was the best place to come for educational opportunities.

Yung has grown to like living in American, although she misses her mother country very much. She spoke to the country as "mother," in honor of her homeland. Yang even uses a old Chinese saying to help with that point.

"We say in China, "even if your mother is poor and ugly, she's still your mother." So no matter how good America is, I'll never leave her.

Jefferson made a motion for USG to support the Republican increase. The motion was finally passed about three and a half hours after the beginning of the meeting.

As the meeting continued, senators tried to remove items of legislation from the agenda. Several senators began to leave, as other items of new business were discussed.

Around that time, Miller got up and went to the microphone to announce to the Senate "we're a joke to this University." Senators were speechless as Miller left.

Miller said he left early because he was upset by Henry's earlier comments that he would veto any motion for a referendum that was passed. He also said he never missed a USG meeting and he was frustrated about the meeting not being conducted properly.

If that were nothing that was going to be discussed that was important because the Senate was taking too much time arguing and the meeting wasn't being conducted according to Robert's Rules of Order, Miller said.

Chuck, revenue officer for the City of Carbondale, has always admired Vaught's honesty and integrity.

"She doesn't do one thing for me personally and not for someone else," she said.

Vaught has always put family as a priority in her life by being active in her daughter's lives. Her oldest daughter, Patty, 19, is a freshman at SIUC, and her other daughter, Jenny, 15, is a sophomore at Carbondale Community High School.

Both of her daughters are active in softball and volleyball, and Vaught never misses a game.

"The best thing in my life is my kids," she said. "I'm just one of those mommies who goes to everything. Fortunlly, although Vaught is not a Carbondale native, she has lived here since she was 8 years old and considers herself a 'University Kid.'

Her father, Clifford Hurges, was the budget director for the Office of the President of SIUC. Hurges was recruited by SIUC President Debra Morris and Vaught has stayed close to the University since. She went to high school on campus, as well as gaining two of her higher education degrees from the University.

Morris was known for his 20-year tenure at the University and all she changes he made that ensured the institution SIUC is today.

Vaught remembers playing in Men's office when she was a little girl. She said she used to be on her lap and he would put her on the head.

Vaught is also active in organizations related to her profession and community groups, including the Campus Council for the Undergraduate Experience at SIUC.

"I was raised with the University," she said. "I can't imagine not having the University somewhere in my life."

The actress manages a few memorable moments, especially Strine, who I've come to believe can act his way out of any situation. His character is filled with deep regret for the loss of his astronaut wife, played by Kim Delaney, and Strine pulls off a difficult performance balancing grief and guilt without ever going over the top.

In the end, though, the ball is in DePaola's court and he sets up a film with a great set-up and a mood beginning and a gimmicky "2001"-like ending. Maybe the veteran filmmaker is tired of always being the violent outsider trying to ward his way into public acclaim and recognizability. Well, to quote the old Faith No More tune, "You want it all, but you just can't have it." It may be hard being such a rebellious filmmaker, Mr. DePaola, but what you do best.

In the end, more than 34 people had gathered to help watch the delivery, and they were all in awe when it was over.

"We had everyone here, from the people who fit the roof, to students, to the department chair," Christiansen said. "For the first six hours, everyone couldn't believe it. Then we were walking around here with their jaws on the ground."

Laura Grimes was on her way to the barn to work with one of the horses that afternoon. The junior from Chicago walked in five minutes after the horse's water broke. She ended up spending the next two hours with mom and baby.

It was very traumatic, but at the same time it was very rewarding," Christiansen said. "It's incredible to get to put them roost and see how they are doing today."

Now a week later, the doctor is doing well, spending longer and longer increments of time out to pasture and learning how to move for the next two years. She was just fine when she came home, the vet said. "The take-home lesson is, 'Don't ever give up.'"

Women’s tennis cruises against Illinois-Chicago

Salukis get quality production throughout the line-up

Andy Gehres

DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

If this does not give them a boost of confidence, nothing will.

The SIU women’s tennis team cruised to an 8-0 victory against the University of Illinois-Chicago Thursday afternoon at the University Courts.

The Salukis (7-3) had quality performances throughout the line-up and, perhaps most importantly, appear to have their top two layers back on track.

No. 1 player Simona Petrusi, and No. 2 player Pamela Flor, who have struggled largely, came through their matches with ease and look to be playing like their old selves again.

SIU coach Judy Auld said the number should give everyone a boost of confidence, especially Petruisi and Flor.

“They have their games back,” Auld said. “I think it’s going to boost both of their confidence. The fact that they played well I think that is a real big thing.”

Petrusi, who won 6-1, 6-1, was more than ready to break out of the rut she has been in.

“I think this has been a really good match, and from now on, hopefully my game will come back quickly,” Petruisi said.

Auld stressed that if she is going to play from the whole match, not just the top players on the team. The entire singles line-up won in convincing fashion with no player needing a third set.

“It’s good to see how good they have from everybody. Everyone is equally important,” Auld said. “Everybody has their role and has to know how to fit into it.”

Men’s golf team travels to South for four-day tournament

The SIU men’s golf team will try to rebound from some sluggish early season performances when it competes in the Arkansas State University Classic this weekend starting Saturday. The tournament, held in Jonesboro, Ark., continues through Tuesday.

Men’s tennis face Illinois-Chicago Saturday

The SIU men’s tennis team will play its first home match of the season against the University of Illinois-Chicago at 1 p.m. Saturday on the University Courts.

The Salukis (3-7) hope to bounce back after losing a five-game losing streak when they defeated Saint Louis University March 22.

Saluki coach Brad Ritter’s team will play its next four matches at home before returning to the road.

Play baseball professionally. In his 151 games with the Aces, Molina had a batting average of .314 with 17 home runs and 115 RBIs.

Not unexpectedly, Molina’s number have dropped off some this year. So far, Molina is batting .242 with two home runs and 10 RBIs, and he has been struggling of late. However, Molina remains among the leaders on his team in slugging percentage (.357), walks (11) and hits.

“I want to come back and show I’m still good, that I can still hit,” Molina said.

Brewster said the reason Molina has been able to overtake the traumatic hearing incident is simple.

“His a hard-nosed individual and he loves baseball,” Brewster said.

As Molina and the Aces visit Carbondale, California’s team will be forced to temporarily brush their respect for Molina aside and prepare to play ball.

“I didn’t think that he not only wanted to come back, but that he’s made a heck of an effort to come back,” Callahan said.

Callahan said that he can’t do much of anything, but in the back of his mind, he would have to approach the at-bat like any other.

“I think this has been a very difficult year for us,” Callahan said. “But in the back of my mind, I think about what he’s gone through.”

“I told [Tracy] I was going to put her out there for as long as she could go,” Flaherty said. “We have enough chances that we can get a couple people on base and not be afraid, so I think Tracy did a great job.”

In game two of Wednesday’s doubleheader against Eastern Illinois University at Charleston, the Salukis down-2, 10-separated by a five-run fifth inning, highlighted by junior center fielder Maria Virhauw’s game-breaking grand slam.

Virhauw, SIU’s all-time home run leader (20), had not hit a home run yet this season before the slam.

In the seventh inning, Virhauw smashed another home run, a two-run shot to push the final score to 7-2. Virhauw was 3-for-4 in the game with two home runs and six RBIs.

Winters (11-2) pitched a complete game, striking out nine, while yielding no earned runs and only two hits.

In game two, a pair of solo home runs by Hallahan and senior second baseman Lori Greiner provided enough run support for Stremsterfer, who held the Panthers (8-20) to one run in the 2-1 Saluki victory.

Hallahan now leads the team with five home runs on the season, while it was Greiner’s second round-tripper of the year.

Stremsterfer (7-4), who took a no-hitter into the fifth inning, finished with 10 strikeouts and allowed only four hits.

Like routine, Flor dominated her opponent, winning 6-3, 6-1 and putting the pushback into the top of the Saluki lineup.

“I felt a lot better,” Flor said. “I think everyone did a lot better today, which is good, so hopefully we will keep going towards the conference tournament.”

Molina refuses to give in

Jay Scherer Sports Editor

After having his face smashed in by a speeding fastball and becoming consumed in a national controversy, Anthony Molina is moving on with his life by doing something that comes natural to him — playing baseball.

Molina, a senior for the University of Evansville, is well-known across the country for being brutally beaten in the eye by Wichita State University pitcher Ben Christensen during warm-ups of a game between Wichita State and Evansville on April 23 of last season.

Most assumed Molina would never resume his baseball career. They were wrong.

Molina, who never saw the ball coming, will be in uniform when his Purple Aces take the field for a four-game series against SIU at Abe Martin Field beginning today. "Some people might give up," Molina told the Evansville Courier & Press prior to the start of the season. "I won’t ever give up."

Doctor said the patch could have killed Molina if he had landed slightly more to the right, and predicted he may recover in six months.

But Molina underwent off-season surgery, and has managed to return for his senior season. He had follow-up laser surgery earlier this month, but the vision in his left eye will never return.

Christensen, who was suspended for the rest of the season after hitting Molina, has since been drafted in the first round by the Chicago Cubs. I was reportedly upset that Molina was making his pitches from the on-deck circle.

Christensen claims he was not attempting to hit Molina. "I was just trying to send a message to him in accordance with team policy regarding opposing hitting batters," Christensen said.

SIU baseball head coach Dan Callahan said Molina’s return "is a good thing for our competition. Whatever happened to Molina was a shame."

"I feel all the respect in the world," Callahan said. "It’s a tragedy what happened to him."

The story made national headlines, with a broadcast-quality topic on talk radio in and in newspapers for weeks.

Evansville head baseball coach Billikens' leg was broken by an industrial machine, but said he's expected to be healthy enough to throw ball after the game.

"It’s not 100 percent, but he’s getting it out the best he can," Bowerman said. "He’s doing it in a professional way and he’s trying to get through it." Before that life-altering April day in Wichita, Kansas, Molina was considered a preps to fall his high school team and

SIU tries to break defensive slumber this weekend

Salukis will need to bring bats and gloves against talented Aces

Andy Eckenrode Daily Egyptian reporter

The Salukis (11-12, 3-5 MVC) have been missing in action defensively at late, with several errors occurring from pedestrian lapses.

There have been plenty technique-related. "I didn’t know at this level that you would shy away from bunts," Callahan said in regards to the left-side of the infield in Tuesday’s game against the University of Illinois.

SIU faces the University of Evansville in a four-game series this weekend starting today at 2 p.m.

In the 15-5 loss to the Fighting Illini, things looked bad. Callahan was not sure how to approach the problem.

I sat down with his staff Wednesday morning to collaborate on ideas to find out the proper solution to the defensive downfall against Illinois, when SIU committed four errors, but had several other plays that should have been handled.

Callahan gave some thought and decided the mistakes needed to be addressed so the problem does not become a long-term curse.

"For what we went through in the conference in team defense, and we are still third," Callahan said.

"I don’t know if that’s the way we’ve played the last week to 10 days. We have to get better."

The Salukis will need to improve quickly as Evansville (18-15, 4-3), which has won seven games in a row, comes to town for the four-game set this weekend.

The Aces will have Preston Larson (4-2, 2.72) on Friday, who could be a first- or second-round pick in next year’s draft.

The Salukis will need to improve quickly as Evansville (18-15, 4-3), which has won seven games in a row, comes to town for the four-game set this weekend.

But SIU has a couple of hot bats that could be a factor in the game.

Saluki right fielder Stacie Mazzola and utility player Amanda Boyce have been key offensive weapons for SIU in the last couple of games. Schulz leads all Saluki hitters in average. 15.7 on the season, while Mazzola has hit .440 in the last 10 games.

But this particular series involves more than just baseball in the world, she didn’t love to play. But before the game and after the game we all sit down and talk as civil human beings.

Sluggish start does not stop sweep of SLU

Softball wins seven straight, sweeping Eastern, Saint Louis

Corey Cusick Daily Egyptian reporter

Although Saluki coach Ken Blacklock will take the victory the Salukis were not pleased after the game and did not stay away from hitting team members as the Salukis conducted a series talk with their buildup in between games.

"I told them we’re very strong team that I am going to push them to be better and that they need to be able to play all the time," we are," we and I don’t know what is going to happen to them.

"We did not come out prepared to play with the bats. There is no reason in the world we shouldn’t be able to hit the ball better than we did."

As the Salukis offense struggled, the pitching did its job to keep the Billikens scoreless. The Billikens (2-11) did little to help themselves, as they committed six errors in the ballgame.

Prosecutor Judd McElroy posted 4-1 innings, striking out four to improve his record to 2-4 on the year. Junior pitcher/designated player was a twin-terminator with a solid job in relief, going out, striking out five and allowing on him to earn his third win of the season.

In game two, the Salukis bats finally broke out for a third time in a row. Salukis were far away from a complete game, but Blacklock elected to bring in junior Cardio to close the final two innings, which were in the ballgame to complete the doubleheader with Bradley.

Lordan, who has had some injuries in his shoulder, was only two runs away from a complete game, but Blacklock decided to bring in junior lefty Brett Hanley. But the Billikens scored two runs in the ninth inning to push the game into extra innings.

In the extra, the Billikens scored two runs to even the series at one game apiece.

The two teams will play four games this weekend at the Abe Martin Field starting with a game Friday at 2 p.m.

The Billikens will take the field with a 6-10 overall record and 3-3 in the Valley. The Salukis are riding a seven-game winning streak and are 14-11 overall and 4-2 in the Valley.
