City accepts Complan, but halts Parkway

By Mary Ann McNulty
Staff Writer

University Parkway, a proposed road which would ease traffic flow through the city to Illinois 13, won't be in Carbondale's future. City Council members agreed Monday, in discussing acceptance of the Comprehensive Community Plan for Carbondale.

In other discussion at the informal meeting, council members did decide to implement a checklist to help them determine the social impact of rezoning or special use issues.

University Parkway, which would connect an improved New Era Road to Chautauque Road, was proposed by the Planning Commission in the Complan, a master plan for Carbondale for the next 25 years. Council members discussed the staff's and public's suggestions to the Complan at Monday night's meeting.

Council members agreed to accept the rest of the plan for the city's growth. The council is scheduled to approve the Complan at the Nov. 5 formal meeting.

Councilman Charles Watkins said, "In listening to the reaction to University Parkway, I think that the road will never be built because of the environmental, economic and political reasons."

Councilwoman Helen Westberg agreed with Watkins, saying, "In my own mind, I don't think that road will ever be built in that location."

L. S. Bruno, city planner, told council members, "This is a planning concept that is addressed to a real need. This idea has been considered for the last 20 years and there is really no other alignment or corridor that would address or alleviate our problem."

At the public hearings held on the Complan July 23 and resumed on Sept. 17 and Oct. 1, citizens voiced their opposition to the University Parkway. Citizens complained that the road would:

- cause excess flooding in the area;
- upset the ecology of the area;
- ruin the woods in the area; and
- harm the animals and humans because of the pollution emitted from cars traveling on the road.

Watkins said Monday, "I don't want to spend the money, time and resources for environmental impacts of this road. I don't want to go on with this road that I don't think will go through."

Bruno said Tuesday that he doesn't think there are any alternative that will get the same effect as this one.

"We had looked at the alternatives previously," Bruno said.

The Planning Commission recommended the Complan to

Presidential search rules to be revised

By Paula D. Walter
Staff Writer

In the latest of several efforts to reduce faculty concerns and suspicions concerning the SIU-E presidential search, the SIU-E Faculty Senate has instructed an executive committee to revise the guidelines previously submitted by Chancellor Kenneth Shaw.

According to Arthur Stahnke, a former senate president and member of the executive committee, the committee will draft new procedures and a list of proposed changes and then submit them to the senate for approval. But the changes will also have to be approved by the other constituency groups and Shaw, before they could become part of the guidelines, he said.

"The general agreement is that we're unhappy with things as they are, but I don't know of anyone who is really optimistic about him (Shaw) accepting revisions," Stahnke said.

He said the senate is requesting three major changes in the guidelines. The first concerns Shaw's request from the constituency groups for double the number of nominations as there will be positions on the search committee. A similar concern was aired by the SIU-C Faculty Senate but was later resolved within that group.

"We want to choose the people we want, period, with no alternatives," Stahnke said.

The second change the senate is requesting involves the selection of the chair of the search committee. Shaw's presidential guidelines for SIU-E call for the appointment of a chair by the chancellor, in consultation with constituency heads, prior to the selection of committee members. The search committee guidelines at SIU-C, however, call for the selection of the chair by the appointed committee members.

"The SIU-E search committee wants to elect its own chair," Stahnke said.

The third proposed change, Stahnke said, is that the submission of the names for the position of the president be made public. In addition, the committee has requested that Shaw assure them that he would further consult with the committee if none of the nominees are selected.

"In the event that he couldn't choose from the list submitted by the committee, we hope he would come back to the committee and not select someone not from the list," Stahnke said.

Stahnke said that in the last senate meeting a straw vote was taken to decide if Shaw's guidelines should be accepted as is. "We voted 2-1 against the present guidelines," he said.

Shaw said he would be open for discussion concerning the changes, "but would like to see the suggestions in writing before I make any decisions."

He said the SIU-E presidential search guidelines differed from those at SIU-C because he didn't see any need to have the searches "as exactly alike."

Stahnke said that the underlying concern of the SIU-E faculty is still the "apparent ease with which Shaw is spending money, when the faculty is hurting."

Prison to probe group for security risks

By Karen Goble
Staff Writer

Officials at Marion Federal Penitentiary have begun an investigation of Ananda Marga, an international socio-spiritual organization, concerning possible security risks involving the group, J. J. Clark, an executive assistant at the prison, said Tuesday.

However, Dean Greenberg, Southern Illinois director of Ananda Marga, said earlier this week that prison officials have harassed members of his group, who have been conducting inmate visitation program activities at Marion since 1972.

The Southern Illinois contingent of the group provides instruction in meditation yoga and conducts religious services for prison inmates, Greenberg said.

"The investigation and reduction of Ananda Marga activities inside the prison indicate systematic discrimination and harassment against the religious beliefs and practices of the group," Greenberg said in a letter to Prison Warden George C. Wilkinson.

On Oct. 1, the Ananda Marga program was removed from the prison's chaplain services and moved to education services. The program was cut from weekly visits to two meetings per month, and the number of the group's volunteers participating in the services was reduced from eight to one.

Clark denies any harassment or discriminatory practices by prison officials against the group. He said the reduction of services provided by Ananda Marga was typical of action taken against anyone who poses a possible security risk at the prison.

"We felt that since the group is not a religion, it should be switched to educational services. The group's own literature says it is not a religion," Clark said. "I sent a letter to Greenberg on Oct. 18 where I outlined the incidents that prompted the investigation."

Clark would not elaborate on the incidents, saying he and Associate Warden M. C. Lenson consider it Greenberg's responsibility to make public the allegations against the group.

Greenberg said the charges against Ananda Marga are "vague and unsubstantiated," but he refused to reveal any specific charges included in the letter sent to him by Clark. Any statement made concerning allegations will incriminate Ananda Marga, he added.

Greenberg's lawyer, Jim Roberts agreed.

"If the prison officials want the allegations made public, they should take that responsibility on themselves," Roberts said. "There's no reason why Mr. Greenberg should have to make charges against himself and his group."

Greenberg alleges that "a long history of harassment" by prison officials against his group exists, including "disruption of religious services."

Lawsuit names bar, city, firm

Second Chance, the city of Carbondale and E.T. Simons Construction Co. have been named as defendants in a lawsuit filed by a Murphysboro woman who contends she three contributed to a car accident she was involved in.

The woman, Curia Jean Huges, was a passenger in a car that skidded in a construction area, hit an unfinished curb and flipped over on East Park Street near East Logan Drive. The accident occurred Oct. 24, 1978.

Huges is suing the Carbondale "R" Inc., which owns Second Chance, a bar on Main Street, for allegedly selling alcoholic beverages to the driver of the car, and according to the suit, "making him intoxicated in whole or in part" to the degree that it caused him to fail to reduce the speed of his car.

E. T. Simons Construction Co. is charged by Huges with failing to barricade or to warn drivers of the dangerous condition of the road and failing to build up the curb to prevent vehicles from "catching their wheels and flipping over."

Huges also charges the city of Carbondale with failing to erect barricades or warnings of the dangerous condition of the road, failing to keep the road in safe condition and failing to adequately supervise the construction company.

Huges is asking for a judgment of more than $15,000 from each defendant. She charges that she has suffered serious, permanent injuries to her face, a compound fracture of her left arm, a dislocated left shoulder and nerve damage in her left arm. The suit further claims that Huges has suffered "great pain and mental anguish and is greatly in debt for medical expenses."

Man alleges contamination of heating system; files suits

By Ella Reilly
Staff Writer

Hollis E. Merritt, acting assistant dean of the School of Technical Careers, and his wife, Judy, are suing a Southern Illinois exterminator for more than $15,000 for allegedly putting a toxic chemical into their home's heating system. In addition to the Merritts' suit against Southern Illinois Termitox International, Inc.; Cook Industries; and the Velisical Chemical Co., for more than $15,000 each.

The suit charges that on Oct. 11, 1978, Southern Illinois Termitox drilled into heating ducts while drilling holes through the slab of the Merritt house to apply a chemical solution of chlordane to rid the house of termites.

The Merritts have charged the company with using chlordane in a manner inconsistent with its label, failing to warn the plaintiffs of the danger to their health and property, giving a false guarantee of safety, and failing to supervise employees applying the chemical.

Termitox International, Inc., and Cook Industries are charged with failing to warn the public of the adverse effects that the chemical has on humans, and selling an unreasonably dangerous product.

Velisical Chemical Co., manufacturer of the chlordane, is charged with failing to warn the public of the harmful effects of the chemical, not specifying remedies for misapplication of it, and selling the chemical without prior adequate research.

U.S. 51 shooting yields no suspects

By Bill Crowe
Staff Writer

Three weeks after the shooting of Daniel Boone—the father of an SIUC student—Jackson County authorities have not yet established a motive or any suspect in the crime.

Jackson County Sheriff Don White has characterized the shooting—which occurred Oct. 3 on U.S. Route 51 about two miles south of Carbondale—as "senseless" and "very, very strange."

Boone, 62, was shot once in the face at about 1:15 a.m. after approaching a blue pickup truck to ask for directions at the intersection of old and new U.S. 51, about two miles south of Carbondale. The pickup truck has been described by police as a 1979 to 1975 Ford model with a six-inch bumper on the bed.

White had requested that anyone knowing of a truck with a similar description call his office. He said Tuesday that Sheriff's Police have received between 50 and 75 such calls. Police are still investigating every call they receive and urge anyone else sighting a truck of a similar description to call the department at 684-2177.

This particular type of shooting is tough to solve because of a lack of evidence, White said. The only real evidence in this case is the description of the truck and the accounts of the crime by two witnesses. The license number of the truck was not seen by either witness.

"We're checking everything (any leads) out," White said. "We are looking for a pickup truck but we haven't found the right one yet."

Sheriff's Police are still working on the theory that Boone's killer was a local resident. White said that U.S. 51 is usually used only by local traffic at that time of the morning.

Boone had left a bicycle and a few other items with his daughter and was trying to find Interstate 57 to continue on to West Memphis, Tenn. when the shooting occurred, White said.

Lock, dam project OK'd despite controversies

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge gave the green light Tuesday for construction of the controversial Lock and Dam 26 project in the Mississippi River at Alton, Ill.

Judge Charles R. Richey of U.S. District Court refused to grant an injunction against the project that had been sought by 21 railroads, including the Santa Fe, and two environmental groups, the Isaac Walton League and the Sierra Club.

The decision meant that the U.S. Army Corp of Engineers could immediately begin work toward construction of the $470 million project.

But those opposing the new lock and dam are expected to appeal his decision.

They said Havel, 43, was sentenced to 4½ years and Peter Uhl, a 38-year-old Trotskyite, was given five years at the end of the two-day trial that ended Czechoslovakia's biggest dissident trial since 1972.

Drive to shorten work week begins

WASHINGTON (AP) — A drive was launched in Congress on Tuesday to shorten the 40-hour work week as a way to solve the nation's nagging unemployment problems and increase worker productivity.

A House subcommittee opened three days of hearings on a bill that would cut the work week from 40 to 35 hours by 1993, ban compulsory overtime assignments and boost overtime rates from time-and-a-half to double time.

A coalition of labor unions and other supporters of the bill said it, in effect, would spread available work around to more people by encouraging employers to hire more people instead of scheduling more overtime.

House should say 'no' to veto override

THE INTRACTABLE ISSUE of abortion has not yet been settled by the legislation considered by the General Assembly thus far this year. But it appears that the Legislature may make another attempt to entangle itself in a courtroom battle—one which is not likely to bring any satisfactory result.

A few months back, a group of legislators rammed through a package of cruel prohibitions on abortion under the guise of "regulation."

The bill, which forces on both sides of the abortion issue labeled as clearly unconstitutional, was promptly vetoed by Gov. Jim Thompson who said the legislation was "replete with defects."

THOUGH NONE OF THE BILL'S flaws have been altered since its passage: in June, the Illinois Senate surprised most Springfield observers last week by voting to override Thompson's veto. The House is scheduled to consider an override by the end of October.

In their eagerness to show opposition to the 1973 Supreme Court ruling leaving the decision to abort during the first three months of pregnancy up to the patient and her physician, the Legislature has embarked on an ill-fated journey that will most assuredly lead to the courtroom. Unfortunately, our legislators seem to have forgotten the futility of the State's previous battles with the courts over abortion legislation.

Sen. Don Wooten, D-Rock Island, had the right idea when he told the Associated Press that, "I don't see the value of passing one unconstitutional law after another on this subject."

BUT THE COLLECTIVE emotions of abortion foes might be summed up by a statement made by one of the principal proponents of the override drive. Sen. Mark Rhoads, R-Western Springs, said, "I don't care if we spend the next 10 to 20 years in the courts."

That attitude is unfortunate for it will not help to resolve the issue. Rather, such statements reflect an inability to come to grips with the complex emotional and legal issues raised by abortion.

The House should not follow the Senate's lead. The "Amendments to the Illinois Abortion Law of 1973" was a bad piece of legislation in June and it is a bad piece of legislation now. Neither the pro-life forces nor the pro-choice forces will be served by the legal wrangling that will surely result if the House votes for an override.

Overly-long baseball season detracts from play, enjoyment

The baseball season is finally over. The Pittsburgh Pirates are the champs, and I doff my White Sox cap to them for their terrific comeback against the weak-hitting Baltimore Orioles. The World Series was great but it came too late in the year because the baseball season is too long.

The season starts too early and ends too late. It begins in the cold and often snowy beginning of April, and ends in the cold and often snowy middle of October. This year's World Series, the grand finale of the sport, was hampered by snow and rain, and the quality of play suffered. Players wore gloves and bulky sweatshirts; pitchers constantly blew on their hands and licked their fingers to warm them in order to hold the ball. Fans resembled those at a Green Bay Packer game in December.

All these inconveniences resulted because of the overly-long season. Not only the end of the baseball year suffers, but also the beginning. Regular season play starts in early April. There is often snow on the ground in April, especially in northern cities. I vividly recall a Cubs game I attended a few years back. It was part of the opening series of the year, against Philadelphia. On the day of the game, it snowed all morning. The snow stopped in time for the game to be played, and my youthful exuberance forced me to go. I sat in the grandstands, behind home plate. Too young to know about whiskey, I froze my butt off. Hardly a way to enjoy the national pastime.

In case the schedule-makers haven't noticed, there are two Canadian teams in the majors, Toronto and Montreal. I'll bet they know all about whiskey up there. In the frigid early season, many games are cancelled and must be made up later in the year. These problems could be alleviated if the season started one month

Andrew Zinner

later. If it started around the first of May, snow would be gone and the temperatures more balmy. Play on opening day would resemble baseball instead of hockey. Players could be loose and happy, fans warm and comfortable.

Opening day is traditionally a great American event. Kids and adults alike yearn for that first "play ball." Everything would be much more enjoyable for all concerned if winter clothes and shivering weren't needed.

But not only should the season start later, it should end earlier, too. I'd like to see the regular season end on Labor Day. If that were the case, the World Series would end by mid-September. Chances of snow and cold weather, both of which detracted from the season-ending spectacle this year, would be greatly reduced. The past fall classic was great, but future ones could be even better with improved weather conditions. By finishing before the first snow, baseball would have to compete only with pro football, not basketball and hockey, too.

This season's weather-endangered World Series should have shocked the schedule-makers into deep thought about the length of the season. I hope they realize that bad weather nearly wrecked baseball's grand finale. I hope they consider those fans who pay the salaries and ballpark upkeep (who must freeze while watching early- and late-season games, when interest is highest. I hope they consider the players who slip and slide and risk injury. I hope they shorten the season for the good of all.

Letters

Handgun control coalition formed

Students, when mobilized, can be a powerful force. Mobilizing students, however, is a sometimes difficult task, unless the blockage of a present and ever increasing danger depends on that mobilization. The proliferation of handguns in the United States is such a danger. The number of handguns produced in the United States is increasing at an alarming rate and with it, the number of handgun-related tragedies. Last year 12,000 people died due to gun accidents and intentional shootings. Handguns are used as the weapon in 51 percent of the murders, compared to only 18 percent by cutting or stabbing, the next most frequently used method of murder. Clearly, there is a need for handgun control.

Through a well financed and well organized lobby, the National Rifle Association has managed to stop many gun control proposals although a Gallup poll has indicated that a majority of Americans favor handgun control. This "silent majority," however, will get another chance. Senator Edward Kennedy is sponsoring legislation which would ban the production and sale of "Saturday Night Specials" and tighten restrictions on the sale of other weapons. This bill would not involve the confiscation of presently owned handguns nor would it involve the banning of guns used for sporting purposes. The thrust of this bill is aimed at the availability of the type of handgun most commonly used in crime.

Therefore, we, the Student Coalition for Control of Handguns (SCCH), would like to mobilize your support behind Senator Kennedy's proposal. The SCCH will hold an organizational meeting on Thursday, October 25 from 7:00 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. in the Student Center Mississippi Room. The public is invited to discuss the issues. We urge all interested parties to attend.

Bicycles need lights

Two weeks ago a cyclist traveling across campus without a light on her bike caused the near destruction of my brand new bicycle. Because she had no light I was unable to see her until she was upon me. In order to avoid a head on collision, I was forced to steer my bike to the left—right into a bike rack. Other than being badly bruised and very frightened, I was not hurt. My week old $250 Schwinn was damaged to the point of being unrideable, and it's going to cost me $25 dollars to get it fixed. While my bike was being repaired, I was keen to look for bicyclist riding around without lights. I noticed dozens of people neglecting to use a light after dark.

I was lucky, but someone's going to get hurt; someone's going to lose more than $25. Accidents like this can be easily avoided. The cost and effort of getting a light for your bike is well worth it.

If but one person takes this letter to heart and gets a light for their bike, then my efforts will not have been in vain, but I sure hope it's the girl that ran me off the road.

GSC passes resolution in jest

By Charity Gould
Staff Writer

In order to poke fun at the proposed late registration fee, a resolution supporting a $10 rebate to graduate students who register early has been passed by the Graduate Student Council.

However, the GSC previously voted to support a late registration fee.

The rebate resolution was made "tongue in cheek," according to Burt Hancock, who introduced the resolution. He said he realizes that a rebate will never take place, but the resolution was made to show that there would be more incentive to register early if students could have money returned for processing their class schedules early instead of being charged an additional fee for registering late. Currently, the University has no policy requiring a late registration fee. The University registration policy only states that "students are strongly encouraged to complete their registration before the beginning of classes."

The Educational Policies Committee of the Graduate Council recommended that a late registration fee be established for graduate students. According to the council's recommendation, the size of the fee would be determined by representatives from the Graduate School, the Office of Admissions and Records, the vice president for academic affairs and the president.

In a report to the council, the committee cited that 10-day enrollment figures are the University's "official" enrollment count. As a result, anyone who registers after that date is lost in head counts. The committee said that both programmatic and financial considerations are thus potentially affected by this loss in head counts.

Hancock said, "the late registration fee is to provide an incentive to preregister." He said the Graduate Council's Educational Policy Committee found that 400 graduate students registered late during the spring 1979 semester.

If approved, the fee will be given a trial period of three semesters. If the number of student who register late remains about the same, the fee will probably be dropped, he said.

the City Council in January 1979, after considering a number of alternative for the city's growth, according to Bruno.

Bruno said he wasn't sure that the advocacy of the project was given equal time at the public hearings.

"I am not sure the merits of the road were brought to the full attention of the City Council," Bruno said.

Councilwoman Susan Mitchell said she wasn't satisfied with how the Complan addressed public transportation. "I don't think the Complan addresses public transportation," Mitchell said. "I think the public in general is beginning to realize that they cannot spend their lives revolving around the automobile. People are becoming concerned about the quality of life."

'And Justice for All' succeeds

By Craig DeVries
Staff Writer

Norman Jewison's "And Justice for All" is an ambitious film that takes on the mangled criminal justice system of the U.S. and, for the most part, succeeds. Done in a "MASH" style, it is both a comedy and drama—but never both at the same time.

Jewison succeeds because he is able to encompass every inept and unjust aspect of our court and penal systems in a framework of two hours.

The film details the plight of the innocent presumed guilty, the guilty who are overly penalized for one mistake and the lawyer who is honor-bound to successfully defend his clients regardless of their guilt or innocence.

Primarily it deals with a conscientious lawyer who tries to remain honest in a system that doesn't necessarily allow for that. Al Pacino plays that part to perfection.

The film also stars John Forsythe as a sadistic judge, Jack Warden as a pistol-packing justice with suicidal tendencies and Lee Strasberg as Pacino's aging grandfather.

The film moves quickly, intertwining plots and characters freely and mixing comedy and drama at will. Still Jewison manages to keep things in order, even though quite frequently order isn't called for.

Pacino seems consistently caught in web of disarray, trying desperately to cope with the busy nature of his job and the unscrupulous aspects of the system he's part of.

Jewison covers as much ground in two hours as is cinematically possible. As both producer and director of "And Justice for All," the noted filmmaker left no stone unturned in attacking the justice system. This alone would have qualified this film as a great one and Pacino's performance adds to its stature.

The style Jewison uses damages the integrity of "And Justice for All." "MASH" worked because war stinks, always has and always will. And it will always be around, so you may as well laugh if you can. Comedy and drama can work together in that vein. But the same doesn't hold true for criminal justice. Though our penal system is unfair now and has been in the past, it doesn't have to be and shouldn't be.

Pacino delivers a correct and moving indictment of the court system in the film's climactic scene. Had the movie ended that way, it's statement would have been emphatic. But Jewison tacks a chuckle on the end, sending the viewer home smiling rather than enraged.

Anyone who's been entangled in the U.S. justice system knows that it isn't a laugh a minute. And though "And Justice for All" isn't either, there are one or two laughs too many.

Jordan Gold Staff Writer
 Photographers in Carbondale have been given a chance to show off their wares and they're taking advantage of it. The new film gallery at Agape Film Company, 701A S. Illinois, has been swamped with photographers eager to show off their work.
 "We're booked up until February," Jim Barr, owner of Agape Film Company, said. The gallery, which has a capacity of about eight to 10 at a time, shows the works of one photographer per week. Barr said that anyone is eligible to participate.

 "A person doesn't have to be a photography major to show off his pictures," Barr said. He added, though, that most of the people who have signed up are cinema and photography majors.
 "That's because they are the ones who know about this," Barr said. "I know most of the people over in the department. Hopefully, other photographers will want to do this also."
 Barr hopes to keep the gallery growing, maybe through the means of a traveling exhibit.

Coltrane, a photo shop in Chicago, wants to get the pictures that we run and show them for a week up there," Barr said. This would give photographers an opportunity to have their work shown in a big city, he added.

SIU-C orchestra concert set

The SIU-C Symphony Orchestra will give its first concert of the year at 8 p.m. Thursday in Shryock Auditorium. Admission is free. Conducted by Robert Bergt, the 55-member orchestra will play such selections as Mozart's symphony Number 35, Tchaikovsky's "The Nutcracker, Opus 71a" and Copland's "Fanfare for the Common Man."

 The latter selection will be performed by the orchestra's brass and percussion sections. It is known by Saluki football fans as it is played by the Marching Salukis every year at Homecoming.

Ninth Arena yard sale attracts record crowd

By Cindy Peper
Staff Writer

Despite gusty winds and threatening rain clouds, the Carbondale Chamber of Commerce's Ninth Annual Yard Sale and Auction attracted the largest crowd ever a chamber official said.

The event, which took place Saturday in the Arena parking lot, is the chamber's major fund-raising project of the year.

"This was our most profitable yard sale and auction thus far," Ruth Altekruze, president of the Chamber of Commerce, said. "The proceeds account for approximately 13 percent of the chamber's annual operating funds."

It was not only profitable for the Chamber of Commerce but also for the more than 355 individuals and organizations who rented booth space. Several of the participants were waiting for chamber officials, who arrived at 5 a.m.

Hand-crafted articles, plants, antiques, cloths, toys and various other items were available.

Approximately 176 merchants from Carbondale and surrounding communities donated auction items.

"We were overwhelmed at the support we received from Southern Illinois merchants," Altekruze said.

Dick Hunter was the caller for the auction that featured items such as airline tickets, bicycles, a moped, a barbecue grill, a case of champagne and dinners for two. Hunter also auctioned off an autographed St. Louis Cardinal football for $42.50.

Higher education offers free classes in leadership skills

Academic credit may be received for participation in student activities, organizations and governance through the Higher Education 402 program that begins Wednesday.

The tuition-free program includes three eight-week leadership courses worth one credit each, as well as a practicum section.

The leadership development training course for fraternity and sorority members will meet from 2 to 4 p.m. on Wednesday in Activity Room C. Special two-hour seminar sections are offered for each Greek chapter.

Leadership skills, communication models, and problem-solving techniques will be studied. Interpersonal skills related to the small group setting will also be developed.

The leadership development training course for new student leaders will meet from 1 to 3 p.m. on Wednesday in Activity Room D. Course assignments will help students better understand the orientation philosophy and process.

The student governance section of the program will provide a historical background to the developing concepts of college student government, as well as a practical exploration of SIU-C's student government.

The section will also deal with issues such as fee-allocation, relationships with the administration, and the political decision-making process.

Miss Eboness contestants to compete for scholarships

City to hold seminar on disaster plans

How to handle a disaster situation in Carbondale is the topic of a seminar scheduled from 1 to 5 p.m. Wednesday in the Council Chambers, 607 E. College St.

Randy Jackson, the city's emergency services disaster agency coordinator, scheduled the seminar to help areas that contain a large number of people plan for disaster situations.

Representatives from schools, hospitals, nursing homes, SIU-C and other areas that contain a large concentration of people have been invited to attend the seminar, Jackson said.

Jackson and others will discuss the effects of planning for situations that may occur from severe winter weather, bomb scares, tornadoes or other disasters. Those interested can attend the seminar, according to Jackson.

According to Roland Keim, associate director of admissions and records, a $15 late registration fee may be imposed on all students. However, Kirby Browning, director of admissions and records, said earlier that the fee is still in the planning stages. He said a late registration fee proposal made by the Ad Hoc Registration Activity Review Committee will be submitted to the Undergraduate Student Government and the Graduate Student Council for input.

John Jackson, associate dean of the Graduate School, said that graduate students will not have to pay both late registration fees. He said both the Graduate Council's and the Admission's office proposal will be reviewed by Frank Herton, vice president for academic affairs, and only one alternative, effective fall semester 1980, will be chosen.

Cyclist sets sights on Olympics

By Richard ...
Student Writer

Dan Casebeer, a junior with a special major in industrial sports fitness, is the individual state bicycling champion of Illinois.

Casebeer has won the title three times, along with every time trial record the state has to offer. He is No. 1 in Illinois, and is preparing to challenge the world.

Casebeer, 21, and a native of Carbondale, has been racing for seven years. He is sponsored by Phoenix Bicycle Shop in his quest to represent the United States in the 1980 Olympics on his $1,200, 20-pound, 12-gear Nolan Racer.

SIU controls fate in MVC grid race

Dave Callahan, Tom Piha, Walter Poole, Neal Furlong, John Cernak, Vic Harrison, James Woodward and Jim Farley all would have been hampered by injuries had the Salukis played last week. Dempsey now says his club is about as healthy as a football team could expect to be at this point in the season.

This is the second season for the five teams which have a shot at winning the conference title. Each will play the others standing in the way of a title. The one that wins the most will take the crown.

It is important for the Salukis to have a good game at Northern Illinois. SIU would like to enter the stretch of conference games on a winning note.

There are a few good signs about the Salukis' possible success. The infirmary is a little less crowded. The team has won its last two games, outscoring opponents 38-7. Two of the three conference games are at home, including the final one if the race comes to a must-win situation.

But those are the signs. The Salukis will determine their future. The destiny is in their hands.

"I'm an alternate on the National Team, the training team of the Olympics," Casebeer said. "I think my chances are pretty good. Hopefully they are reviewing me now. My biggest qualification is my past record."

Casebeer said he hopes that his time in the 100-kilometer trial on Nov. 3 in Colorado will help him.

Casebeer's racing season runs from March to October. He logs 300 miles a week during training. At present, he has peddled more than 47,000 miles in his seven years of training.

This year, Casebeer set the 25-mile state record at the Illinois Championships in a time of 56 minutes, averaging a little over 27 mph.

"In the nationals, with drafts from other riders, it's not uncommon to hit 50 mph.

"You don't have to race to enjoy cycling," Casebeer said. "It's an exciting way to see the country. I ride all over Southern Illinois."

Casebeer said that he has traveled all over the country, and once went on a 2,200-mile trip to the Smokey Mountains that only took him eleven days. He also said that cycling was a good way to burn off calories and to stay in shape.

"The calories burned are as high, or higher than running," Casebeer said. "Running bothers me though, because it's so abusive compared to riding."

"If you need to rest when cycling, you just coast. You make it as easy or as hard as you want. I expend 640 calories an hour at 20-mph or upwards, depending on my speed."

The self-trained, self-coached Casebeer hopes to compete in the Pan Am Games in 1984 and in the Red Zingler. The Red Zingler is the longest race in the United States.

"The Zingler is 700 miles long, and is held in Colo. every spring," Casebeer said. "But my main goal, if I am chosen, is to contribute to the team effort of the United States in Moscow."

Two gymnasts to face Chinese

By Jeffrey Smyth
Staff Writer

Two members of the SIU men's gymnastics team have been invited to compete in friendly competition against the Peoples Republic of China's National Team at 7:30 p.m. on Thursday at the Checkerdome in St. Louis.

Dan Muenz, 1979 silver medalist in the parallel bars at the Pan-American Games, and Brian Babcock, 1978 Olympic Sports Festival pommel horse champion, will perform with three members of the University of Oklahoma gymnastics team against the Chinese in an exhibition in which no team score will be kept.

The Chinese team, which has been touring the U.S. in preparation for the upcoming World Gymnastics Championships in December, is very strong in all events and uses high risk factors in its routines, SIU Coach Bill Meade said.

Meade said that he is pleased that Muenz and Babcock were invited and said that he feels the pressure of competing at an international level will be good for his two gymnasts. "They are practically new comers to international competition and I think that working out with the Chinese will help them," Meade said. "They will be able to impress some of the American officials with this exposure also."

The coach said that he is impressed with the Chinese and feels that they are very similar to the World Champion Japanese team in their style of performing.

Both Muenz and Babcock agree that competing against the Chinese will be an experience in which they will learn more about the style of international teams. Also they said that even though no scores will be tallied that there will be some pressure on them.

"It's nice that it is a friendly meet but whenever you are competing there is going to be pressure," Babcock said. "You always want to do better than someone else."

Muenz, who will be competing in the Olympic Extravaganza at Atlantic City, N.J. on Saturday, said that the experience will be good for him because he learned so much when he competed at San Juan, Puerto Rico over the summer. "International competition is great," Muenz said. "I had a good time and I learned a lot from other teams at the Pan-American games. I think that I'll learn something from the Chinese also."

Northwestern wins state net meet

By Scott Stahmer
Staff Writer

Northwestern's Wildcats are pussycats in most sports, but that obviously isn't the case in women's tennis. NU easily won the state women's tennis tournament at DeKalb last weekend, defeating SIU, 9-0, in the process.

"Northwestern is a good team, with good depth," Saluki Coach Judy Auld said. "But part of the problem is that everyone in Illinois thinks they are unbeatable. If someone in the state beat them, they could lose a few."

After an 8-1 quarterfinal win over Western Illinois, the Salukis were eliminated in the semifinals by NU. The Wildcats went on to overwhelm Illinois State, 4-1, in the championship match.

Despite the loss to Northwestern, Auld was happy with the Salukis' performance. She pointed out that three of the four SIU singles players, and both doubles teams, advanced past the first round in individual competition.

"I'm extremely happy with the way we finished," Auld said. "The girls figured out that if individual matches had been used in the standings like they were last year, we would have finished second. Our meet record was only 6-12, but we play the toughest schedule of all the state schools."

Only Carol Foss did not advance past the first round of individual competition, as she was defeated by Illinois' Lisa Buchanan 7-5, 6-3. Mauri Kohler won her first-round match over Sue Boldenbuch of Western Illinois before being eliminated, and Jeannie Jones and Lisa Warren both advanced to the third round.

Jones topped Northern Illinois' Jenae Granham, 7-5, 6-3, in her opening match, and zipped past Gayathrie Desjardis of Illinois, 6-3, 6-3, in the second round. Jones lost her third-round match, 6-3, 6-1 to Northwestern's Mary Boyer.

Warren, seeded sixth in singles competition, earned a first round bye. She wipped Illinois' Sherry Burgess, 6-0, 6-2, in the second round but was eliminated by Northwestern's Almee Conlan, 6-7, 6-1, in the third round.

In doubles, Jones and Kohler topped a team from NIU, 4-6, 7-5, and defeated fourth-seeded Janice Maschio and Katie Waters of Illinois State, 6-4, 6-2, in the second round. However, Conlan and Cindy Brightfield of NU beat Jones and Kohler in the third round, 7-5, 6-2. Foss and Debbie Martin also won their first-round match, but lost to Boyer and Cathy Romano of NU in the second round, 6-3, 6-2.

"I was really happy with the people involved in both singles and doubles," Auld said. "And I'm pleased with the way we did in team competition, even though we lost to Northwestern."

Auld said that if the Salukis had been paired against Illinois State rather than Northwestern in the semifinals, "it would have been a close match."

Warren, Foss, Kohler, Martin and Fran Watson all won singles matches in the opener against Western Illinois. Jones and Kohler, Foss and Martin, and Watson and Thea Breite were victorious in doubles.

But none of the Salukis could win against Northwestern, although Kohler and the Martin-Foss doubles team came close. Kohler lost, 3-6, 6-2, 6-2, and Martin and lost, 5-6, 7-6, 6-0.

The state meet marked the end of the Salukis' fall season. Auld said she feels SIU ended the season on the upswing.

"You have to reach a peak, and I think we did it," she said.

Salukis control destiny in race for Valley title

Biorythmic charts, horoscope signs, crystal balls and other forecasting paraphernalia again are being dragged out of the dusty closet to help predict who will win the Missouri Valley Conference football crown.

Why not? Everything seems to be in strange order. West Texas State is leading the Valley with a 2-0 mark. Never mind that the Buffaloes have yet to win a nonconference game, and are 2-5-1 overall. Indiana State is 3-1, and stands second in the conference standings. The Sycamores have the best overall record of any Valley team, 6-2. Trick or treat, indeed!

The Salukis, meanwhile, are lodged in third place with a 1-1 conference record. SIU, the pre-season favorite to win the Valley title, has struggled through the season.

Stars and cheaters aside, there is a better and more accurate way of predicting who will win the title. Quite simply, the team that plays the best football will win it. The statement is as good as gold for the Salukis. They control their own destiny.

After this weekend's game at Northern Illinois, SIU closes the season with three consecutive games against Valley foes. Indiana State plays at McAndrew Stadium Nov. 3. The Salukis travel to Drake the following week, and then come home to close the season against New Mexico State Nov. 17.

At least four other teams face similar situations. Drake's final two games are against conference foes SIU and West Texas State, an away game. The Bulldogs are 1-2 this season. Indiana State has only one conference game left. Yes, you guessed it. It's against the boys in Maroon and White.

New Mexico State, since 1-2 in conference play, has two Valley games left. The Aggies play West Texas at home, and SIU.

West Texas State, which beat SIU 14-6 in the conference opener Sept. 1, has three consecutive Valley games left. The Buffaloes play away games at Wichita State and New Mexico State, have a week of rest, and then play Drake.

The combinations of wins and losses and what they may do to the Valley standings are mind-boggling. It's a good bet that West Texas State will drop at least one of their remaining conference games. The question, however, is not how many the Buffs will lose, but if SIU, Drake, Indiana State and New Mexico State each can avoid losing another conference game.

This is the question that concerns Saluki Head Coach Rey Dempsey most. SIU was idle last week. The rest presumably gave the injured a chance to recover from the bumps and bruises that accumulated as the season progressed, and a chance to work on fundamentals such as pass blocking and rushing and preventing fumbles.

St. Louis No. 2 in country

Billikens rough on hockey team

By Jeffrey Smyth
Staff Writer

The women's field hockey team knew that play was going to get rough last Sunday. Some of the team members described the game against second-ranked St. Louis University as "the Survival of the Fittest." If that was true then the Billikens were the fittest, as they defeated SIU 4-1 to give the Salukis their only loss in a four game weekend.

The Salukis started the weekend with a 6-0 win against the University of Missouri. Cindy Davis scored three of the Salukis' goals. SIU then beat Southwest Missouri State 2-1 in a match that exceeded two scoreless overtime periods. Mary Gilbert scored the winning goal on the last shot of a shoot-out in which each team is allowed seven free shots against its opponent's goalie. In its last game, SIU combined its junior varsity and varsity to defeat southeastern Missouri State 1-5. At St. Louis, SIU scored first on a goal by Ellen Massey, giving the Salukis a 1-0 lead at the end of the first half. In the second half, the Billikens dominated play by putting pressure on SIU's defense and goalie Kenda Cunningham. Tammy Suvematou and Karie Shearn each had two goals for St. Louis.

"They were too fast and their stickwork was too good," Coach Julee Illner said. "We played very well and have nothing to be ashamed of. I think that they do play rough and because of their speed and stickwork they shouldn't have to. They go after the ball even when they are not in position to do so."

St. Louis Coach Will VanBeaumont doesn't agree with Illner that his team plays aggressively rough and says it is St. Louis' skill that forces other teams to make mistakes.

"I think that this roughness thing is a lot of baloney," VanBeaumont, an assistant coach to the U.S. Men's National Team, said. "Our success is because we use men's skills. Our wrist work is superior and is something that most women's coaches don't stress. We also know how to force the game and by doing this we make other teams make mistakes."

VanBeaumont said that he felt SIU is a good team and that they have a good chance to return to the nationals. Last year, St. Louis eliminated the Salukis in the nationals. VanBeaumont said that Massey and Cunningham were standouts for the Salukis. He said also that SIU will have a tougher regional than St. Louis, but felt that SIU's forward line was stronger than most teams in the Midwest.
