Floats and float competitions have always been part of the Homecoming tradition, and these gentlemen from Sigma Tau Gamma managed a second-place finish for their efforts.

King, queen and pink elephant frolic in Mardi Gras festival

People, prizes and parties dominated the Homecoming '82 celebration. Alumni joined together to recount old memories while students worked on creating their own memories. And a few winners will never forget the 1982 Homecoming.

Judy Mills, 20, and Percy Cordell Smith, 27, were named Homecoming King and Queen Friday night at the Masquerade Ball in the Student Center.

"I feel like Princess Diana," Mills said minutes after she was crowned. "I wish I could quit shaking."

Mills, a junior in public relations and Alpha Gamma Delta member, represented the Greeks. Mills, whose 20th birthday was Friday, said that this was definitely her best birthday ever.

"I can't help but smile," said Smith, a sophomore in computer science. He said he tried to be optimistic through it all, but that he always had a twinge of doubt.

Smith's friends from University Park entered him in the race for Homecoming king without his prior knowledge. He said that when they told him at dinner one night, he thought it was a joke.

Less than 100 people attended the official Homecoming dance, but nearly all those who came were in costume. Arabs and cowboys danced on the same floor with gypsies and witches to the music of the Widespread Jazz Orchestra.

Bob Fisher, who dressed as a pink elephant, won $50 for the most original costume. Fisher, 19, is a sophomore in engineering.

"I didn't know I was going to do this until a friend called and asked if I wanted to wear a pink elephant," he said.

Another $50 prize for the costume most related to theme went to 19-year-old gypsy Gigi Guelocow, a sophomore majoring in German. She said that she plans to spend her prize money on a ticket home for Thanksgiving.

Horse sale most criticized, Somit says

A tight budget, said President Albert Somit, has forced the University to make some tough sacrifices in the name of fiscal austerity.

That was one of the main points in Somit's "State of the University" address to about 200 alumni attending the annual Alumni Recognition Luncheon in the Student Center Saturday.

The 1982 Great Teacher Award and three alumni achievement awards were also presented at the luncheon.

Somit said the University received about the same amount of money this fiscal year as last year, but "allowing for 8 percent inflation, we've lost several thousand dollars."

He said that as a result 60 faculty positions have been left unfilled, 200 other university jobs are unfilled, and the University has had to make some often unpopular cuts in various services and programs.

"We've cut services, reduced library hours, faculty and staff have been rationed on paper clips and pencils and... we've charged fees for laboratory use," Somit said. "We're doing our best to stretch the money we have."

He said SIUC won some national awards for cost reduction programs in recent years, and he said one such project, the installment of turnstiles at the Student Recreation Center, has saved the University about $40,000.

Somit said the program change that has generated the most attention — and criticism — is the reduction of the University's horse program.

The University has accepted bids on 18 of 24 horses used by the School of Agriculture, which had to reduce its budget by $40,000.

"No single issue since I've been president...has caused my phone to ring more after midnight than this horse matter," Somit said. "We have a large number of people who were deeply attached to the horses."

"I've learned in the process that we are the only University in the country that has tenured horses," Somit said jokingly.

Somit also announced that the University is planning to honor the late Deiyte Morris with "a major commemorative ceremony" in April, and that a statue of Morris will be erected somewhere on campus.

Following the address, the 1982 Great Teacher Award was presented to Malvin E. Moore III, professor of educational leadership.

Moore, 64, joined the SIUC faculty in 1968 as an associate professor of higher education and director of the SIUC Teacher Corps. He has been involved in more than 10 federally-funded grant programs concentrating on the development of educational leaders for academic institutions. He is also the secretary-treasurer of the Society for Ethnic and Special Studies.

The 23rd annual award, given for excellence in the classroom, is determined by balloting of the Alumni Association and includes a plaque and a $1,000 check.

Alumni achievement awards were also presented to Florence Crim Robinson of East Point, Ga., who is department of music and division of humanities chairperson at Clark College in Atlanta, Ga.; Roger Gray of Cobden, president of the Bank of Cobden; and James H. Bossert of Los Angeles, Calif., president of California State University.

Gus says the next award for cost reduction will probably go to the administrative wizards who make programs and professors disappear.

Sheriff candidates both want changes

By Jennifer Phillips
Staff Writer

Republican Bill Maurizio wants an open office. Democrat William Kilquist wants an efficient office.

Each candidate for Jackson County sheriff has different proposals, although both agree that change is necessary in the sheriff's office.

Maurizio has proposed an open office where people can come in and talk to the sheriff. "My main goal is to build public relations," he said. "If I can get the people of Jackson County behind the sheriff's office, my other goals will be a little easier to reach."

Maurizio, 60, worked as a state policeman for 24 years, though eight were at a desk handling administrative duties. He left the state police and made an unsuccessful run for sheriff in 1978. He is currently a security officer at the University Mall.

He admits that he has been

out of touch with the sheriff's office for four years, but doesn't think that will present a problem if elected.

"I'm easy to get along with," he said, "and if we have problems, we'll just sit down and talk things out."

Maurizio wants to add eight more deputies. Kilquist has argued against this, stating that the cost would be $1 million over four years.

Maurizio thinks his proposal has received too much bad publicity. He knows it would cost more, he said, but he hasn't given up on the idea.

Maurizio also said public relations is important, but he would rather set aside certain hours, maybe two days a week, when people could come in and talk over problems with the sheriff.

"I think the Jackson County

William Kilquist

Sheriff's office needs a working sheriff," Maurizio said.

Kilquist, 33, said his educational and field experience should be a deciding factor in the election. He has had 13 years of police and investigative experience that includes working nine years with the Carbondale Police Department as a patrolman, crime prevention specialist, juvenile officer, tactical officer and detective. He has been with the state's attorney's office since 1981.

Bill Maurizio

His education encompasses 704 hours of specialized law enforcement and crime prevention training.

One of his major proposals is to "take the politics out of solving major crimes" through a major case squad, which would pool the personnel and equipment of law enforcement agencies in the county to work on homicides, rapes, armed robberies and other major crime cases.

Experts in different crime investigation areas, like interrogation and fingerprinting, would be called upon as needed in order to produce the best results, he said.

This would also help eliminate situations where an officer holds onto certain information until right before an election or his contract is to be renewed, he said.

He has talked to people within the different agencies about the case squad and "everybody likes the idea. There are some changes they want to make... it's not set in stone," Kilquist said.

But there are 11 unsolved murders in Jackson County since 1974, he said, and the time is right for people to say, "Look,

Simon campaign funding power may buy election, Prineas says

By Rob Delaney
Staff Writer

U.S. Rep. Paul Simon continues attacking his opponent's ability to bring jobs into Southern Illinois, but Republican Pete Prineas has thrown a new ingredient into the race — campaign financing.

Prineas has said that Simon, a Democrat, has adequate funding to win re-election by a two-to-one margin, and said Simon is coming near to "buying an election."

Prineas' aides have repeatedly charged that Simon is operating a double standard in the financing of his campaign. Dave Sadler, aide to Prineas, said about 80 percent of Simon's financing has come from outside his district.

Simon criticized ads by the National Conservative Political Action Committee that attacked his record, but at least 112 political action committees have contributed to Simon's campaign, Sadler said.

Simon said after a televised debate between himself and Prineas Thursday that he did not know how many PACs have contributed to his campaign. He said he favored campaign finance reform including limiting total contributions that could be accepted from PACs to $75,000, a measure that is expected to be taken up by the House next year.

Simon's campaign manager, Bill Tapella, said it was very likely that more than 100 PACs have contributed to Simon's campaign. But he called Prineas' charges "ridiculous," saying NCPAC was not contributing to a campaign but running a "negative campaign" against Simon.

Tapella said he did not consider PAC funding as coming from outside the district because most of the PACs making donations represent persons living inside the district. He said PAC donations comprised between 20 and 25 percent of the nearly $300,000 Simon has raised.

Neither Simon nor Prineas offered much new during Thursday's debate that was televised over WSIU-TV. Prineas repeated his claim that Southern Illinois' blighted economy calls for special attention, and Simon said Prineas would not be effective in Congress while he believes he has proven his own ability at bringing jobs to Southern Illinois.

Prineas said unemployment in Southern Illinois had risen higher than the nation's since Simon was elected to Congress in 1974. Prineas' proposal is to use a district office solely to bring industry and jobs to Southern Illinois.

Simon said he had brought 5,000 jobs to Southern Illinois.

Simon said Prineas had not brought a single job to Southern Illinois and questioned how Prineas would entice business into the region when he has not been able to raise more than $15,000 from among supporters for the race.

Both see education as critical for improving the economy. Simon said close ties were needed between the private sector and SIU-C to bring high technology into the district.

"If you ask the president or chancellor of the University, you'd see we've started already," Simon said.

Prineas, like Simon, said he liked the low-interest loan program for students and saw SIU-C as a hope for bringing high-paying jobs into Southern Illinois.

Prineas, while supporting student loans, said he opposed student grants. He also wanted to get the federal government out of education, saying lower test scores go hand-in-hand with the federal government's involvement in education.

When asked about Social Security, the two candidates argued over the problems plaguing the system and how to rescue it. Prineas said the problem is that people are living longer and putting a strain on the retirement fund.

News Roundup

Lead yields little in cyanide inquiry

CHICAGO (AP) — Authorities may never find the customer believed to have returned a bottle of cyanide-laced Tylenol to a Chicago store, an investigator said Sunday.

Lt. August Locallo of the Chicago police department said there is not even any proof that the bottle — the seventh found to be contaminated — had ever left the store's shelves.

That bottle of Extra-Strength Tylenol was discovered Thursday by a laboratory technician seeking cyanide in bottles taken off store shelves after the deaths of seven people.

The bottle was among a batch turned over by a Dominick's Finer Foods store, and investigators believe it was returned by a customer because it was without its cardboard box.

Court to clarify drug policing laws

WASHINGTON (AP) — As the nation's illicit drug industry booms, the Supreme Court is loading up on cases that will spell out just what police can do to fight back.

In the coming months, the court will define the rules front-line officers must follow in combating drug traffickers and their estimated $60 billion a year business.

The decisions may carry as significant an impact as President Reagan's plans to spend up to $200 million a year to curb the illegal narcotics trade.

Reagan campaigns at official event

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan looked out at his audience of 1,000 veterans in a Columbus, Ohio, hotel recently and declared, "It's good to be back on the campaign trail, even if it does mean the silly season is upon us again."

The president then proceeded to demonstrate what the "silly season" can do to a campaign speech at what ostensibly is an official, non-political event.

Stepping to the side of the campaign trail, Reagan, acknowledging the bipartisan meeting, began to exclaim the virtues of a local Republican candidate.

"But as I say, this isn't a political rally, so I won't say any of those things," he concluded.

West Berlin police battle squatters

BERLIN (AP) — Squatters battled West Berlin police with their fists into the early hours Sunday in an escalating fight over a housing shortage that has become a symbol of German youth protest.

Police said about 100 protesters fought officers hand-to-hand, kicking and punching them in the third night of violence triggered by police eviction of squatters from two dilapidated buildings.

The costumed Homecoming parties left shortly after the coronation of the king and queen, but many reappeared Saturday morning in the parade.

An estimated 5,000 people lined up to watch the bands, floats, marching units, decorated cars and novelty acts which paraded down South Illinois Avenue. Almost everything and everyone marching in the parade was entered in a contest.

In turn, 24 high school marching bands performed in front of the parade reviewing stand. The Carbondale High School Marching Terriers won the competition, while Murphysboro High School, Egyptian High School in Tamm, and Flora High School tied for second. The Carlyle High School marching band took third.

In the float competition, University Park won first prize — $250 and a traveling trophy — while Sigma Tau Gamma took the second prize of $150 and a plaque. The Council of University Scholars won third place for their float. They received $100 and a plaque.

In the car decorating competition, Phi Sigma Kappa members received $40 for their winning entry, and $20 went to the Student Advertising Society for second place. The top banner award, $50, was claimed by the Thompson Point Programming Council.

In the window painting contest, Roses of the Shield took the first prize of $75 for a display at Ruthies.

we don't care about your petty jealousies, we want something done."

Maurizio said the case squad is unnecessary; the resources are already available to the sheriff's office.

"If you can get the cooperation of all the different police departments here then you wouldn't have to really go as far as to set up a major crime squad," he said.

He agrees that competition between departments must stop.

"We're all here for the same purpose . . . to stop crime, hopefully, to prevent crime more than solve it," Maurizio said.

Kilquist wants deputies to receive special training and has proposed sending some to training school and letting them train others upon returning.

Firemen, for example, are trained for disasters, he said, so why must officers receive training on the scene?

Officers must also keep abreast of changing laws and attitudes of society, he said, and training would accomplish this.

Maurizio agrees that deputies must keep up with changing laws but not at the expense of road time.

"You have to keep all the deputies you can on the road," he said.

Deputies who have to testify in court also lose time on the road, he said, by wasting a whole day sitting around the courthouse. Possibly, deputies could be contacted by radio about 10 minutes before they are needed, he said.

Both candidates think the sheriff's office is used as a training ground by deputies, who gather experience then move to better-paying jobs with other departments.

For that reason, they are advocating pay raises for the deputies.

Kilquist has also proposed a new work schedule for deputies, with concentrations on peak-crime periods such as weekend evenings when there are more drunk drivers.

Maurizio said that he will wait until he is in office to study the situation and, if certain times seem to need more heavy patrol, he would schedule deputies accordingly.

Maurizio supports a take-home car policy, enacted by the county board this year, which allows deputies to take home marked squad cars.

Council to discuss crosswalk changes

By Mike Nelson
Staff Writer

Proposed installation of advance warning signs and a two-directional floodlight at the Grand Avenue crosswalk opposite the Student Recreation Center will be discussed Monday by the City Council.

The meeting is at 7 p.m. in the Council Chambers, 607 E.

College St.

The crosswalk's safety concerns first came to council attention during a presentation Aug. 23 by Undergraduate Student Organization President Jerry Cook. Cook said that one accident and "several close calls" between pedestrians and motorists at the crosswalk pointed out the need for changes.

City Manager Carroll Fry has directed Carbondale Police Chief Ed Hogan and Public Works Director Ed Reeder to meet with SIU-C Security Chief Virgil Trummer and write recommendations for changes at the crosswalk.

Council approval of the changes was postponed by Cook, who said he wanted additional time to take the city's report "through the proper channels."

At its meeting Oct. 20, the Student Senate passed a USO-sponsored resolution in support of another safety measure for the crosswalk. The resolution, which will be added to the city's report, proposed a sign that reads "Caution - Hazardous Pedestrian Crosswalk" be installed on both sides of the crossing.

In other business, the council will discuss the proposed annexation of six parcels of land presently outside city limits. The land considered for annexation is located along North Allman Street, North Renolds Street and East Fisher Street.

Vote no to proposal restricting bail right

A PERSON is presumed innocent until proven guilty. Illinois voters will be given the opportunity to reaffirm their faith in this American creed Nov. 2.

They will have the chance to vote "nay" or "yea" to a proposed Constitutional amendment that would deny bail to those who may have committed "offenses for which a sentence of life imprisonment may be imposed as a consequence of conviction where the proof is evident or the presumption great."

VOTERS SHOULD say "no" resoundingly to this amendment to Section 9 of Article I.

Bail has been a major way to guarantee the presumption of innocence. Pretrial release permits people to lead somewhat normal lives, while bail is designed to ensure that defendants will show at their trials.

Perhaps more importantly, release on bail provides the accused with time to prepare a defense, an opportunity which the individual might not have when incarcerated.

But proponents of the proposal believe that people facing life sentences are likely to skip town before their trials. Similarly, it has always been assumed that people facing the death sentence are not likely to show at their trials. Therefore, since 1818, the right to bail has existed in Illinois with one exception—for crimes carrying the death penalty.

EXPERIENCE DEMONSTRATES, however, that a majority of accused persons released on bail appear for trial regardless of the severity of the punishment they would face.

Courts have always had the right to determine an accused's suitability for pretrial release. This amendment, however, ties the issuance of bail improperly to the crime, not to more reliable measures such as family and community ties, reputation for honesty, job history and prior criminal record.

Furthermore, what defines evident proof or great presumption? Life sentences may be imposed for a variety of crimes subject to a judge's interpretation, including second convictions for murder, for murders of more than one victim, for murders committed in an exceptionally brutal manner or where other aggravating factors are present. Life sentences may also result from third convictions of such felonies as murder, rape, deviate sexual assault, armed robbery, home invasion or certain very large volume drug offenses.

Proponents argue that the amendment will protect the public against dangerous persons who otherwise would be released on bail. But judges already have the discretion, within bounds, to not grant bail to those likely to commit further crimes while free on bail.

This proposed amendment is unnecessary. The small ground that could be gained would result in a serious erosion of civil liberties.

Vote to protect an American constitutional foundation. Vote "no" to this proposed amendment Nov. 2.

When will rest of Thompson Point be able to receive WIDB signal?

About ten years ago, WIDB purchased transmitters with the aid of student council funds to service three of 11 residence halls in Thompson Point (Steagall, Warren and Baldwin), enabling residents in those halls to listen to WIDB, a student-run cable radio station.

Not much has changed in ten years. Thompson Point still wants to listen to WIDB, but eight residence halls still don't have transmitters in their buildings. Here is a brief summary for those residents in the eight other Thompson Point halls who feel they deserve an explanation:

A transmitter is a wireless device that boosts a station's audio signal, and changes that signal into an electrical signal that is, in turn, sent through the building's electrical system. The estimated cost of one transmitter is approximately $500, which does not include the high cost of coaxial cable, a special cable wire that can withstand temperatures as high as 212 degrees, needed to wire each building.

Sam Rinella, director of University Housing, explained that the responsibility to provide transmitters for Thompson Point lies strictly with WIDB. Rinella said Housing will "not give them (WIDB) money for transmitters," but they will supply electricians to assist WIDB with the installation as a safety precaution when dealing with the extremely high voltage in each residence hall.

Jim Hagerty, general manager of WIDB, was openly sympathetic and aware of Thompson Point's transmitter problem. He spoke briefly of WIDB's past and present financial status, concluding that "lack of funds" is the main source of the problem. The high cost of maintenance and equipment, along with past loans and salaries that had to be repaid in 1980, left the station financially floating in red. Recovery is in WIDB's future, and Hagerty said installing transmitters in Thompson Point is definitely possible, but "not until we become solvent."

Present solutions are available to those Thompson Point residents who retain some hope of tuning in WIDB. Option one is to wait out another ten years of red tape and money problems. Option two is to move off campus and buy a cable line and/or relocate in areas where WIDB is heard daily, such as Brush Towers, the Student Center, the Student Recreation Center, Burt's Sandwich Shop or Gatsby's on Friday nights.

Finally, both Rinella and Hagerty suggested that residents in halls who want WIDB go through their hall councils and organize fundraisers to buy transmitters that could be installed immediately upon purchase with the help of WIDB and University Housing.

Those are the answers, T.P. residents. Transmitters are expensive, and no one has money. So, if you want to listen to WIDB like so many of us do, then you'll have to scare up the funds for your own transmitter or wait it out — again. — Shelli Von Boeckman, Freshman, Radio and Television.

Move Science Library to vacant Law Library

So much about the library problems, the Bracing Building deal, the pre-engineered storage facilities, the confusion and frustration...All the alternatives are not alternatives at all, either lack of money to build or too far away from campus.

To solve the library space problem, why don't we consider moving the entire Science

Library to the vacant Law Library in the Small Group Housing. The attorneys can do it on their own. I am sure the scientists can do it in a scientific way. Besides, it only costs a fraction of the $1.6 million. By doing so, more space can be allocated to the other Divisional Libraries and reading space can be restored. — Antony Man, Molecular Science.

New video game should be boycotted

Once again, minority degradation and violence toward women have come to the forefront of national news. "Custer's Revenge," a new video game marketed by American Multiple Industries, has quickly gained national and international attention as being the most racist and sexist game to ever hit the American market.

Briefly, the scenario for this game is the military conquest of the American Southwest during the late 1870s. The object of the game is to cross the desert and rape an "Indian" (Native American) woman who is tied to a stake. This violent act constitutes "scoring."

Although American Multiple Industries has intended this to be released as an adult video game, one must wonder who the actual audience for this new "game" will be, and what affect these racist and chauvinistic attitudes will have on the psychological development of the player.

The largest user of video games in the United States is the teen-age male. Are we as a society so naive to think that there is no correlation between viewed aggression and actual physical violence? Do we need to teach more individuals to become brutal and sadistic rapists? I think not.

It is my purpose to appeal to the readers of the DE and urge them to become involved in fighting sexism, racism and discrimination wherever and whenever it may occur. For 200 years this nation has been burdened with the issues of human rights, slavery, women's suffrage and the extermination of the Red race have hung over this country like a dark cloud since its birth the beginning.

If ideals of freedom and equality are ever to be truly reached, we must stop industries' exploitation of humankind. I urge concerned persons to write: Mr. Stewart Reston, President, American Multiple Industries, 18911 Nordhoff Road, Northridge, CA, 91324.

Demand the immediate withdrawal of "Custer's Revenge" from the American and foreign market. — Steven Haldeman, Senior, Agriculture Education.

Set facts straight on 'Jewish massacres'

By Abraham Aamidor
Graduate Student, Journalism

KHALID SULEIMAN'S anti-Israel Viepoint (Sept. 23) requires informed response.

Mr. Suleiman makes the charge that Israel has followed a policy of genocide against Palestinian Arabs for 34 years and he offers as proof of this an alleged record of massacres "too numerous to count." He makes this charge against Jews, the very people who have suffered the greatest genocide in history in World War II.

In promoting this thesis Mr. Suleiman begins by rewriting recent history in Beirut. He claims, for example, 1,800 casualties at the two refugee camps in Beirut last month instead of the 300-600 maximum counted; he has already labelled the deaths as "Zionist massacres" even though there is no evidence that Israel's were killing anybody in these camps. This is no time to rationalize the massacres, but is not the time to allow the Big Lie to be initiated so badly, either.

Mr. Suleiman also refers to "massacres" at Qubya and al-Sammou. I went to Morris Library to check these allegations and found in "The Arab-Israeli Dilemma" by Fred Khoury (Syracuse University Press) the following information: Three civilians (and not Mr. Suleiman's 200) and fifteen soldiers were killed at al-Sammou (Mr. Suleiman of course fails to acknowledge any military targets); 53 people are counted dead at Qubya, close enough to Mr. Suleiman's 60, and no breakdown is given as to military-civilian casualties.

AS EXPECTED, both events were reprisal raids against terrorist (or guerilla, if you will) cells operating from these areas, but Mr. Suleiman appears to not really want to acknowledge this - it couldn't look like "massacre" then.

One presumes, too, that the "numerous" other "massacres" that go unnamed by Mr. Suleiman, real or imagined, were reprisal raids directed against armed targets.

As for Deir Yassin, this is the sole event in the history of the modern Arab-Israeli conflict generally, though not universally, alluded to as a massacre by Jews of Arabs.

SOME FACTS THAT Mr. Suleiman does not reveal: The Jewish militia held responsible for this event, the Irgun Zvai Leumi (known in Israel by its initials, IZL), was not part of the Israeli Army in April, 1948. Indeed, there was no Israeli Army in April, 1948 and the State was not declared until May, 1948.

The IZL was, in effect, a renegade militia formed during World War II to fight the British occupation in Palestine (the British, after all, had banned land sales to Jews and had restricted Jewish immigration to a meager 15,000 per year - during the Holocaust!) The IZL had refused, too, on occasion, discipline from the much larger Jewish defense organization, the Hagana, (once, the IZL was betrayed to the British by the Hagana because of opposition to IZL programs) and, during Israel's War of Independence, and IZL arms supply ship, the Altalena, was ordered sunk by David Ben Gurion, first Prime Minister of Israel, because he suspected an IZL insurrection against the new Jewish authority in the land.

IN BRIEF, the IZL, which is specifically held responsible for the events at Deir Yassin was not associated with any official Jewish combat units in April, 1948, nor was it representative of Jewish combat units either before, during or after the 1948 War, and neither the Israel Army nor past Israeli governments were implicated in those events.

Actually, the best refutation of Mr. Suleiman's charge of genocide comes from an inspection of facts on the ground in Israel. Three hundred thousand Arabs did not flee Israel in 1948 and they remained as Israeli citizens; today, there are close to 800,000 Israeli Arab citizens. At least 35,000 Arab refugees who did flee were repatriated by 1956, largely on the basis of reunification with head-of-household. Almost 10 percent of the Jerusalem police force and seven percent of the enrollment at the Hebrew University is Arab; there are Arab members in the Israeli parliament and Druze Arab soldiers and officers in the army. About 20 percent of all adult television programming in Israel is in the Arabic language, and most of the rest subtitled.

The Temple Mount area in Jerusalem - the sight of the al-Aska Mosque - is not only totally open to Muslim Arabs and Muslim prayer, it is policed by Arabs, in complete contradistinction to the extremely deceitful posters seen around campus that depict the Temple Mount area as locked and chained by a Jewish Star of David.

FRANKLY, I have been more disappointed than angered by Mr. Suleiman's Viewpoints. He comes from the Hebron area of the West Bank and he should know, better than others, what is and is not true about the Israelis and the status of Arabs living in Israel, yet he leads the chorus of hate and the basest Arab propaganda against Arabs. He could be a bridge for conciliation and understanding but instead he reinforces all the hate and lies that Arab students from other countries have been exposed to and destroys those bridges of peace and understanding.

Help Beirut's children; give to UNICEF this week

Have you wondered what it is like to be an eight year old today in Beirut, Lebanon? Their schools are not in session so there is plenty of time to play outside, if you dare. Imagine the child running down to the market for Mother, if he can find one. Maybe the child could be playing with his or her home video game, if they had electricity.

Think about your children or brothers and sisters. Think about what it would be like for them to live in such a time and place as Beirut, today. When you were a child did you face as many confusing and terrifying days as the children of Beirut have this year? I am sure the days of your youth were much more ordered and calm.

moved into Beirut, also. UNICEF is there hoping to bring about peace for the children. UNICEF workers are starting schools in the refugee camps, improving sanitary conditions, and bringing in food, water, and medicine. Through the efforts of UNICEF, the children should experience a calmer more ordered life.

Let us appeal to the world's leaders to think of the children. Their parents may be Moslem, Christian, or Jew, but the children are just children. The Children of Carbondale are helping the children of Beirut by trick or treating for UNICEF donations on Halloween. Please help with your donations or time. Call 457-2029 in the evening to find out how you can help.

More than anyone else, children deserve peace! — Al Parr, Carbondale.

The United Nations has moved into Beirut, now, in hopes of sustaining a peace. The United Nations Children Fund (UNICEF) workers have

'May God have mercy on him'

In the DE of Sept. 28, Imam Alauddin Shabazz responds to the horror we all feel as human beings at the recent atrocities in Lebanon. Unfortunately, his religious sect, his lack of a sense of history, his political naivete, and the limitations on resources available to him as an inmate of Graham Correctional Center, lead to embarrassing conclusions. In his blatant misuse of biblical literature, and in his linguistic sophistry, and in his intellectual hysteria he has diminished substantially any meaningful communication he may have offered us.

During his recent eloquent comments as part of the Ramadan Holy Feast of ID UL FITR he called upon his fellow Muslims to "show the world our dignity."

Dignity, indeed! His comment in the DE, "No wonder the Nazi government of Germany rose up against negative Jews under Hitler," reveals his failure to understand the dignity that has led the Jewish people for thousands of years to withstand oppression and to survive the inhuman behavior of Nazi Germany. Probably no single group in human history has struggled to maintain its human dignity in the face of political aggression and bigotry than have the Jewish people. In his article in the September issue of "Telegram", the Graham Correctional Institution publication, Mr. Shabazz, in speaking of the oppression of the Bilalian people, says, "When a spring is held down, the oppression of it only causes it to shoot up higher."

Certainly Jews are among the last to condone the wholesale massacre and terrorism that appalls us all. This is clear from the demands of hundreds of thousands of Israelis asking for a thorough investigation and dismissal of Begin and Sharon (N.Y. Times, Sept. 24). And to suggest that the United States either contributes to or condones such behavior is to ignore the fact that a whole generation of Americans put its lives on the line to combat the German Nazi massacre of the 1930s and 1940s, behavior which Mr. Shabazz clearly condones in his public statement. May God have mercy on him. — Jewell A. Friend, Dean, General Academic Programs.

Darlene Williams took the $400, the crown and the recognition as Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity's 1982 Miss Eboness Saturday in Shryock Auditorium.

Williams is a 19 year-old sophomore in Radio-TV who works as hostess on WSIU's Dimensions talk show.

Patricia Hamilton, Rutha Lawrence and Cynthia Felker placed respectively as first, second and third runners-up.

The 13 contestants were judged on poise, talent, grace and personality during interviews with the judges. Community activities and scholastic achievements were also considered.

Pageant Coordinator David Pompey said that the women this year showed a lot of love and support for each other.

The nine other competitors were Angela Henry, Michelle Barnette, Corless Douglas, Avis Heard, Kim Jackson, Matrina Saffold, Rebecca Williams, Wyvonia Williams and Marlette Wilson.

Williams portrayed a drunk in a two-part act before she stormed into the gatsby "Ain't Nobody's Business If I Do" tune from Broadway play "Ain't Misbehavin'."

Williams said she thinks the contest was one of the better ones. "Everybody was really Miss Eboness 1982 Darlene Williams receives her trophy. There is a bond between all of us.

"We had a group prayer session before the pageant started and we rooted for each other during each act," she said.

Each candidate gave a brief performance and answered an impromptu question. Williams was asked, "What qualities do you possess that would make you a successful black woman?"

"I possess independency, self-motivation, and self-assurance because it helps me to compete with others," she answered.

Four Illinois poets grace Calipre Stage

By Cynthia Rector
Staff Writer

Each poet took to the stage to unleash his own captive images to a small but receptive group.

Ron Pelias, faculty member in the Department of Speech Communication was one of four poets to present his writings during an Evening on Illinois Poets at the Calipre Stage Friday night.

Pelias, the first reader, said the topic of human relationships has always been his favorite, and consequently would be central in his repertoire.

Three of Pelias' five poems dealt with romantic love. Possibly the most powerful concerned a married couple and an intruding man, the latter being the voice of the poem.

On a postcard to the intruder, the husband gave his reaction to the affair. Comparing the mating process of humans to that of wolves, he wrote "Wolves mate for life," and the two support each other, putting each other's needs paramount.

The husband's sentiment did not dim the adulter's passion. "Home for the Holidays" involved a discourse from a divorced father to his young son concerning a gathering with their "once-a-year relatives." For the first few lines of the poem, the listener probably envisioned a trivial meeting of distant family members.

Yet there was no cynicism. The father's message, instead, was one of praise to the communion of like blood, comparing such family meetings to holy sacraments. This is especially touching since the father doesn't have a constant spatial relationship with his son, and must be referring as much to their paternal link as anything.

Pelias' last poem was a tribute to and parody of a certain "ing" style, which generated laughter in those who were familiar with the playful poet.

Duane Taylor, president of Illinois Writers, Inc., and faculty member at Carl Sandburg College, was the second reader.

Taylor's first poem, "The Art of Poetry and Wife," depicted the filament which he finds connecting the dominant relationships in his life: between himself and his art; himself and his wife; and, between his art and his wife.

"Everything Tries to be Round," his next poem, was refreshing in title and approach. If shedding light on connections between seemingly unrelated elements is the high ground of poetry, then high ground was gained in this poem.

A found poem consists of a message discovered by the poet, borrowed and used for art's sake. Sometimes the message is shortened or lengthened, and sometimes it remains in tact, as did Taylor's found poem, which he garnered directly from a post card his mother-in-law sent.

The short found poem was disquieting as it told in a matter-of-fact way of a man who died in his truck, and remained there for a few days, until someone finally glanced inside his window.

His following poems were fast-paced dramatic narratives, which are his current direction. During these, Taylor looked and read in a style reminiscent of poet Allan Ginsberg, in a ranting, longwinded way. Yet every stroke was necessary in the coloring of his characters.

The third poet, Steve Tietz, faculty member at Rend Lake Community College, donned earthy clothes and an unpretentious manner.

A recurring theme of his poetry was the artist's desperate search for inspiration. "The Addict" depicted a word addict who prayed to Webster for advice and insatiably craved new meanings and pronunciations. Along the same lines was "Skydiving for New Perspectives."

"Lunch with an Old Girlfriend" was a witty look at the aftermath of a burned-out affair from a lustful man's point of view. As the couple progressed through dinner, the man could only focus on her loss of sexual appetite. "When she left I lusted for the check," he said, morosely.

The poem "Nightrider on the Carousel" exposed Tietz' more contemplative side. His metaphor was of an "empty roller" spinning directionless, amid a screaming crowd. The poet's sarcastic angle came when he described the rider as spinning toward the "ever-present romp of a hollow horse."

The last poet, Bill Johnston, came to the podium with the largest collection of material.

If there was a common image within the poems Johnston shared, it was nuclear holocaust. His first work was a five-sided poem called "Pentagon." The lines "War breaks out" were repeated with varying amounts of emphasis, as a typical family was pictured going through the preparatory motions for post-attack in a fallout shelter.

Johnson also read a few poems highlighting the lives of construction workers. One such poem told of a routine incident when a worker's leg came in gory contact with a chainsaw.

'Quilt Pieces' captures flavor of Southern Illinois region

By Abigail Kimmel
Entertainment Editor

Lanford Wilson and Sam Shepherd have written plays about the Midwest and about Illinois in particular, but their unusual plays have been about the central or northern part of the state.

The south has not been forgotten.

Thanks to Pam Billingsley, who was raised in the hills of Southern Illinois, the land between the rivers replete with farmland, orchards, mines, quarries, and small-town life reminiscent of Norman Rockwell, and her play "Quilt Pieces," the area known as "Little Egypt" now has its place in American theater.

"Quilt Pieces," a set of five vignettes about a family in the area and the interaction that is caused by making quilt blocks for an "Album Patch" quilt, caught the flavor and especially the language peculiar to Southern Illinois.

Much of the audience in McLeod Theater Saturday night found parts of the performance humorous. But many of the best lines went unnoticed, largely because of the slow pace which pulled the show down at times and due to the one-level approach apparently taken.

Much of the script seemed to have been written with two levels in mind — the serious undertone and the funny lines, characterizations and attitudes which accompanied it. The strongest scenes were the ones in which the humor was allowed to come through the most.

"Baby Block" dealt with a young married family and their adjustment or lack of it to their 6-month-old son. The performances by Lars Timpa as the neglected, jealous husband and Laura Jean Everingham as his neglectful, doting-new-mother wife made the most of their parts in possibly the most realistic scene. Their argumentative antics received the most applause and side-nudging 'ahs' of the production.

"Wedding Ring" portrayed three women in a dress shop comparing notes on how to keep a man happy and interested in them in the "autumn years." Nema, the straight woman for the scene, well played by Linda Russell, is the upset wife whose mechanic husband suddenly decides to sell his shop and go on a long vacation with his wife. As Nema agonizes over whether she really knows her husband, her friend Georgia tells her to stay at home and entice him into staying with her. But the shop owner, Lorraine, advises her to travel with him, as her own late husband had longed for them to do.

Alice Jane Davenport gave a wonderfully comic portrayal of the friend who suggests Nema wrap herself in Saran Wrap and Lynn Stevenson was droll as the proprietor who Georgia insists sleeps with married men and who sells dresses marked sizes smaller than they are.

There were amusing lines in other scenes, but in general they lacked the spark to which the script lent itself. Director Eelin Stewart-Harrison produced a warm, realistic show in theme if not in final execution.

All in all, the performance was a delightful evening full of unusual, movable sets and realistic, effective costumes by Devra Chernick and Danielle Lindheimer respectively, wonderful characters by Billingsley and apt performances by all — in a true reflection of Southern Illinois.

A Review

What happens when you take a group of slightly off-center performers with varied backgrounds and lifestyles and shove them together on one stage?

What happens if you also subject them to the added stress of almost non-stop touring and performing in everything from high school gymnasiums to plush theatres?

Whether you're in Chicago or Carbondale, you get a very funny show by a group known as The Second City.

Thursday night, this comedy troupe lived up to the expectations of the 500-plus audience. The touring version consists of six comic players and a pianist, who, according to Manager Rob Bronstein, have driven over 8,000 miles in the past 10 days crammed into a battered rental van with over 100 props and bits of clothing.

Does this sound like the kind of situation that inspires humor? According to Bronstein, the group is just like a family on a driving vacation... they bicker and complain - but all feel that the experience they receive is well worth the effort.

The Chicago-based unit has spawned such well-known comics as Dan Aykroyd, John Belushi, Bill Murray, Gilda Radner, Bob Newhart, Alan Arkin, and Valerie Harper. Performers come and go and the faces change often as performers get a break and a new member is selected for auditions.

In fact, the promotional material forwarded by the troupe was out-dated by the time they performed in Ballroom D of the Student Center. One featured member is now a regular on "Saturday Night Live," one has joined the home troupe in Chicago and a third switched to the other touring group for a change of pace. This constant shifting hasn't affected the comedy, though. Thursday's performers worked so well together that it was difficult to believe that they hadn't worked together for years.

The troupe was made up of members Bekka Eaton of Cincinnati, Bill Wronsky of Berwyn, Jeff Michaels of Chicago, Bill Applebaugh of Cleveland, Jane Morris of Quincy and the pianist, Ruby Streak of "somewhere in New Jersey," who added a nice touch to the madcap onstage.

The essence of Second City's appeal is the interplay between characters taking stereotypical situations and pointing out, indirectly, the more absurd aspects of them.

In the opening sketch the lights came up on a stereotypical "nerd" playing with an imaginary video game on an imaginary T.V. Three of his friends strolled in with a gift, a dating conversation game. What followed were uproarious exchanges between the on-stage group of a four friends and a sexy female voice from offstage as they attempted "Dating Conversation, level one." The object was to score by not committing any faux pas.

Immediately as the stage-lights went out, another member of the cast dashed on stage and did a transition piece featuring Nancy Reagan's solution of what to do with the poor - shoot them.

This set the mood for the evening. The audience never knew what to expect and never had time to recover. The show was incredibly fast paced and pulled no punches. There was even a sketch featuring Mary and Joseph of Nazareth visiting a marriage counselor in which Joseph questions Mary's "virgin birth." Mary says, "He's special" to which Joseph counters, "Yeah, his head glows."

All of the featured pieces were not quite so off-the-wall.

The majority featured SC's version of everyday happenings - A Chicago policeman chasing a criminal, a couple discussing birth control and a meeting of the Uppers Grove PTA which featured stereotyped parents discussing sex education.

The sketches that received the most applause, however were the three improvisational pieces involving the entire cast.

The first piece featured two members starting a scene centerstage. Each time a cast member yelled "freeze," they had to replace one of the two in the exact position they were frozen in and say whatever came to mind.

The second involved Eaton being taken outside of the ballrooms and a phrase, in this case, "What's good for the goose is good for the gander," being solicited from the audience. Eaton, with input from the rest of the cast then had to guess the phrase. The bit worked well with the cast going to great lengths to come up with a clue for her.

The final improv also worked well and involved five members of the cast being lined up on stage and assigned the names of famous authors solicited from the crowd. The cast then had to tell a story in the style of their respective authors with the sixth member directing.

One member of the cast, Jim Fay of Joliet, excelled at the improvisational portions of the program.

However, the evening was not entirely golden. Interspersed throughout the evening were songs, which were always too garbled to understand, much less laugh at. The audience picked up a few of the funny phrases, but most of each song was unintelligible.

campus.

Wayman is president of the College Republicans. During the summer he lived in Springfield and helped coordinate Secretary of State Jim Edgar's campaign in Southern Illinois.

Wayman has been active in Southern Illinois and slowly is making a name for himself. He made instant headlines this year when he said he would seek to bring the Richard Nixon library to Southern Illinois.

Schaffer is another College Republican. She said politics filled a niche in her spare time. "The best political workers are students because they have the most spare time," she said. "They're generally not tied up in work."

She said while students are effective campaign workers, she said their voting record is terrible.

Ward is a student who paid little attention to politics until 1980 when he and a roommate decided to give it a try. He has had little spare time since. After he hitchhiked to Democratic Headquarters in Marion, Bill Tapella, who now is Simon's manager, put him right to work. He worked sometimes up to 40 hours each week on Jimmy Carter's 1980 campaign, which pushed back his graduation.

The Democratic Majority that Ward worked for this summer, asked him to help on Richmond's campaign this fall.

Ward says he is considering more work with political campaigns after graduation.

Marie Harrell has used students to run Democratic Headquarters in Jackson County the past 16 years. She said more than half of the 60 volunteers at headquarters this year are students at Carbondale Community High School or SIU-C. Many just walked in off the street, she said.

Politicians benefit from the efforts of students who are working for course credit this year. Wayman said SIU-C Professor Ron Mason teaches a campaign class which provides workers during campaigns.

Some students don't have the time to be politically apathetic. They're busy registering voters, stuffing envelopes or running congressional and gubernatorial campaigns.

While politicians shrug off talk of student "bloes" in elections, they eye high school and college campuses as plum trees with students to be plucked as volunteer workers or campaigners.

However, not all students take the partisan route of political activism. More than 30 students acted as registrars during a recent voter registration drive at SIU-C. The Black Affairs Council contributed 12 members to be registrars, the most of any campus organization.

Student Trustee Stan Irvin has spent much of his time trying to raise political consciousness among students, but said that other than interest shown by blacks and older students, it is difficult to get students interested in campaigns. He said he does not know why students do not get involved when politicians are debating the future of education and student financial aid.

Irvin said U.S. Rep. Paul Simon, D-24th District, had been the best known candidate among students and had been the most successful at attracting volunteers.

A Simon aide said there were more than 30 SIU-C students spending time on the congressional campaign.

At least three students are heading campaign efforts. Graduate student Gordon Wayman is managing Pete Prineas' campaign for Congress. Bill Ward, senior in public relations, is coordinating Democrat Bruce Richmond's bid for re-election to the Illinois House. Kim Schaffer has been directing Gov. James Thompson's campaign efforts on

Carbondale Halloween
 film to be presented

By Cynthia Rector
 Staff Writer

Students and faculty who participated in The Strip's
 Halloween festivities in 1979
 may have a chance to view themselves and their friends on film.

"Twas Brillig...A Halloween Memory" will be shown at 7 p.m. and 8 p.m. Monday in the Student Center Auditorium.

Brian Olson, then a senior in cinema and photography, was the initiator of the documenta-tary, which he hoped would be "a multi-media examination of this Mardi Gras happening which is becoming legendary."

The film, 15 minutes long, is partly in black and white and partly in color, according to Michael Dawson, who helped produce the film.

The film was made in a "cinema verite" style in which the photographers paced Illinois Avenue and "let the cameras roll. We tried to capture all elements of Halloween," said Dawson.

 Dawson thinks the film
 "demonstrates some of the more disquieting elements of Halloween."

Dawson said the prints of
 "Twas Brillig" were as
 "spooked" as their subject matter, and he jokes that a kind of "supernatural interference" nearly barred the film's completion.

He said at one point the film prints became mysteriously damaged. "So much so that two laboratories said they couldn't process it," Dawson explained.

Suddenly, months later, when the makers took their film to a different laboratory they were told there was "no damage" and the film was finally printed.

Several other original short films made by the two will be shown in conjunction with "Twas Brillig." The group of films will run for forty-five minutes.

Salazar takes N.Y. Marathon

By Bert Rosenthal
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Alberto Salazar, conserving his energy, powered past Mexico's Rodolfo Gomez in the stretch Sunday and won the New York City Marathon for the third consecutive year in a dramatic finish, in 2 hours, 9 minutes, 29 seconds.

"I was saving it (energy) for my last surge," said the confident Salazar, who is unbeaten in four marathons, including last April's Boston Marathon. The 24-year-old Cuban-born Salazar, who now lives and trains in Eugene, Ore., needed every ounce of energy to outlast the dogged Gomez, 31, undefeated in three previous marathons this year.

The 1-2 finish by Salazar and Gomez matched their positions in the 1980 New York City Marathon. But two years ago, Salazar won handily. This time, Gomez gave him a fight to the finish.

Starting about the 21-mile mark of the 26-mile, 385-yard trek through the city's five boroughs, the two ran side-by-side, never more than a step or two apart until they headed for the finish line in Central Park.

Then, the bigger and stronger Salazar made his winning surge through a cloud of dirt, finally putting away the gritty Gomez, who was clocked in a personal best of 2:09:33.

After the two crossed the finish line, they embraced warmly, knowing they had produced a scintillating "Duel in the Sun," before a huge national television audience and a crowd estimated at three million spectators along the route.

Another embrace at the finish line took place between Jack Waitz and her husband, Jack, after the 29-year-old Norwegian had won the women's race for the fourth time in five years. In the first time since winning the New York City event for the third straight time in 1980, she was timed in 2:27:14.

Both winners were short of the world-bests, set in this race last year — 2:08:13 by Salazar and 2:25:29 by New Zealander

Allison Roe, who was unable to defend her title this time because of an Achilles tendon injury.

The men's race was expected to be reminiscent of the Boston Marathon, where Salazar outkicked Dick Beardsley by two seconds. But Beardsley suffered a leg cramp about the nine-mile mark and finished 30th.

"I'm sorry I didn't give Al a better race," Beardsley said. "I felt very prepared and confident, but I just didn't have it today."

Instead, it was Gomez who fought it out with the favored Salazar.

"The last three miles I had pains in my stomach," said Gomez. "When Salazar changed the pace (with a rapid 4:31 mile from the 23th to the 26th mile), I couldn't follow him. I was surprised when he increased the tempo drastically."

"At that point, we entered a dust storm. I couldn't keep up with him, and that was the margin of victory."

NFL reps discuss options

By Ira Rosenfeld
AP Sports Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Player representatives from the National Football League's 28 teams met Sunday with leaders of the striking players' association to discuss the stalled negotiations.

The talks in the now 34-day old strike were suspended indefinitely Saturday following 12 days of negotiations at a site just north of Baltimore, Md. Among the items to be discussed Sunday were management's withdrawal of $54 million from its original $1.6 billion financial offering.

Jack Inman, negotiator for the NFL Management Council, the league's bargaining agent, reduced the owners' original offer to reflect losses sustained by the club owners during the strike.

push Texas ahead of the Salukis in the polls.

"They really had a home court advantage," said Pedersen. "They had enthusiastic fans, a band and cheerleaders at the match. That really pumps the home team up. I would have to say if we were to play them at home, the outcome of the match may have been different."

Even with the two losses, the SIU-C coaching staff was pleased with the weekend as a whole. The Salukis did beat Lamar and Houston, two tough teams, at the outset of the road trip. They finished the Texas swing with an 18-10 record.

Pedersen said the set selection has to be good all the time when facing top-flight competition such as Texas A&M and Texas. In the Salukis' case this weekend, it wasn't.

"That was the difference in the Texas loss," Pedersen said. "We used some different personnel this weekend, such as Linda Sanders, who needs to be set a higher ball because she jumps so darn high. That was a problem as well."

But Sanders wasn't a problem, coming off the bench and adding punch to the Salukis' offense all weekend long, according to Pedersen. He said that Bonnie Norrenberns also had a strong weekend as well. Sonya Locke, the Salukis' All-American, may have been trying to do too much in the last match.

"She's trying a little too hard out there," he said. "She needs to just play."

Pedersen said the competition the Salukis faced this weekend will be good preparation for their match with Illinois State next weekend. That match should decide the No. 1 seedling for the Conference championship.

Hopes dim as fielders lose two

JoAnn Marciszewski
Societe Sports Editor

The chances for an NCAA bid are dim over the weekend when the field hockey team lost two of three games in the Iowa tourney.

The 18-4 fielders needed at least one win over a top-ranked team to be among the teams considered for the 12-team playoffs. Games against undefeated and No. 1 ranked Iowa and No. 9 Northwestern provided the opportunity. Even though the Salukis played extremely well, they fell short both times.

The Salukis lost to Iowa 4-1 on Friday, defeated St. Louis 2-0 Saturday morning and lost to Northwestern 2-0.

Ellen Massey scored the lone goal against Iowa at 19:19 of the second half. She scored her 20th of the year against St. Louis, with an assist by Cindy Clausen at 15:13 of the second half. Clausen scored her second goal of the season a few minutes later at 19:55, with a good stop and hit off a corner shot.

The Salukis had to have all elements of their game together to come away with victories and better their chances for an NCAA bid. They did have a good performance this weekend, but the competition was just too strong, according to Saluki Coach Julee Illner.

With defeats coming in all four of the games against top-ranked teams, the season for the Salukis may be ending after a game against Western Illinois next weekend and the Conference tournament in two weeks.

"With only 12 teams being picked, realistically we probably won't get one," Illner said. "We haven't played the strong teams of the East and West."

Iowa, still undefeated, should be a strong contender in the NCAA final round.

During its games, Iowa exhibited the strong passing and corner work that has been its strengths throughout the season. Against Northwestern, the Hawkeyes performed one corner that rivaled the play of men's teams.

"I've never seen a woman's team execute a corner so perfectly, and I've seen national and international teams."

Illner said. "Even Kenda (assistant coach Cunningham), who's seen three national championships, was saying she never has seen anything like it."

The Salukis were not overwhelmed as much as other opponents of the Hawkeyes have been. SIU-C is only one of three teams to score against them this year, and did manage to hold them scoreless for the first 27 minutes of the game.

"Our defense did an outstanding job, especially on their corners," Illner said. "The stats didn't show any domination. With this kind of loss against a top-ranked team, we can't be ashamed. I think we gave both of them good games."

Big Ten race tightens

By Joe Mooshil
AP Sports Writer

Michigan Coach Bo Schembechler has the Big Ten football race all figured out. "If we win our last four games, we'll win it all."

True, since Michigan is the only team without a Big Ten defeat but it isn't going to be easy and Schembechler knows it. That's why he yanked his regulars after the first half against Northwestern when the Wolverines took a 42-0 lead on their way to a 49-14 triumph and a 6-0 mark in the conference.

But right on Michigan's heels are Illinois at 5-1 and defending co-champions Ohio State and Iowa at 3-1.

Illinois rallied for a 29-28 victory at Wisconsin on Mike Bass' 46-yard field goal on the last play of the game. Ohio State picked up added momentum with a 49-25 triumph at Indiana and Iowa slipped past Minnesota 21-16.

In the only game without championship or Rose Bowl hearings, Purdue dropped winless Michigan State 24-21, further placing spartan Coach Muddy Waters' position in jeopardy.

Quarterback Steve Smith was the driving force in Michigan's victory over Northwestern. Smith did everything in a 35-point second quarter when he scored two touchdowns and passed for three more including scoring strikes of 34 and 29 yards to All-American Anthony Carter.

Northwestern's freshman quarterback Sandy Schwab then went on a passing spree, shattering NCAA and Big Ten records by finishing with 45 completions in 71 attempts for 436 yards. Jon Harvey caught 17 of the passes to tie an NCAA mark.

Schembechler's appraisal of the game was "It's over" and his assessment of the second half was "boring."

Such was not the case at Wisconsin, where Illinois kept alive its championship and Rose Bowl hopes on Bass' fifth field goal of the game after Wisconsin had apparently won it on a trick play.

Cagers show glimpses of potential

By Dan Devine
Staff Writer

Basketball coach Allen Van Winkle felt good, sort of, about his team's first intra-squad game.

"It was okay," he said. "It wasn't anything for these guys to go over to the phone and call home about."

Van Winkle divided his team into a maroon squad and a white squad and watched them play four 10 minute quarters of frequently sloppy, and sometimes encouraging basketball.

Led by Ken Byrd, Johnny Fayne and James Copeland, the White team broke the game open in the final quarter with tight defense and a clicking fastbreak. Byrd put together a 30 point outburst to pace a 66-51 White victory.

The Maroon squad had taken a 40-36 lead in the third quarter, but then Byrd, who had 22 points in the second half, put the game away.

A crowd of several hundred, few of them students, were on hand for the exhibition, played Saturday morning at the Arena. They watched quietly and then gave the team a brief round of polite applause when it was over.

"The guys that look the best are the guys who were here last year," said Van Winkle. "The difference was that Byrd, Fayne, and Copeland have played together."

Darnall Jones led the losing Maroon team with 14 points. Roy Birch and Pie Walker added ten for the losers.

Mainly the scrimmage highlighted the numerous Saluki guards. With Birch, Derris Goins, Brian Welch, Fayne, Copeland and Byrd, Van Winkle has an endless line of starting possibilities. "Nobody's got a spot," he said. "It's too early. We were looking at people at a lot of different positions. We're all getting used to each other."

Van Winkle wasn't surprised by Byrd's offensive output.

"Byrd scored a lot in the scrimmages last year too," he said.

Byrd got assists from Fayne, Copeland and Charles Nance, who were frequent starters last year.

"That was the big factor," said Van Winkle. "I think the fact that those guys had played together showed. They were getting Byrd wide open all the time."

Ken Perry, who will be red shirted this season, led everybody with 13 rebounds. Harry Hunter had seven points and eight rebounds.

"I thought that Harry Hunter took the ball to the hole hard several times," said Van Winkle.

Van Winkle also lauded Birch, who was first in the Saluki quickness tests and first in long distance running.

The next Saluki scrimmage will be at Century High School at 7:30 on Wednesday.

pletion record during it. He was 12 of 23 for 93 yards and had one interception.

The Saluki defense limited the Sycamores to 224 yards of total offense, and had 10 tackles for losses. Granville Butler had another big day, and blitzes helped stifle the Sycamore passing game.

After the game Dempsey ticked off numerous examples of bad Saluki execution. Ware caught a pass out of bounds while wide open. Wrenn let a punt brush off his leg and the Sycamores recovered. Allen

Leslie kicked the ball to the wrong spot on the field on the opening kickoff, allowing ISU to run it back 37 yards. Ware ran out of bounds late in the game while SIU-C was trying to kill the clock.

"I still think we're on the way up but we're making too many errors," said Dempsey.

Salukis manage a sloppy victory

By Dan Devine
Staff Writer

Rumor has it that McAndrew Stadium is in danger of falling down every time fans stamp their feet for more than 10 seconds.

Those stands were safe Saturday, as a crowd of 14,200 dully watched the Salukis win a torpid, sloppy game. They beat Indiana State 21-9 to break a four game losing streak.

The SIU-C locker room was safe too, even though the Salukis had rained hell on it in earlier victories. This time the players were quiet. A visitor might have suspected he was looking at a losing team.

"No question we're happy to win," said Coach Rey Dempsey. "I just feel bad that it was so sloppy."

Dempsey had to remind his team of that in a closed door speech that lasted about 15 minutes.

"That's not Rey Dempsey football," said the Saluki coach. "It's not my style. We are precision, we are sharp, we don't make any mistakes."

The Salukis made quite a few mistakes Saturday, primarily offensive, but had enough to beat a team playing without its two regular running backs. Sycamore quarterback Jeff Miller did come off the bench and play, bad ribs and all, but a fierce Saluki pass rush, charged with blitzing linebackers and safeties, made sure he wasn't a threat.

SIU-C won it with three second half touchdowns and a defense that kept them in the game until then. Those 21 points matched the Salukis' offensive output of the last three weeks.

"We all knew we didn't play a good game," said running back Jeff Ware, who scored two touchdowns and rushed for 80 yards on 22 carries.

The diminutive tailback keyed the touchdown drive that put SIU-C up 7-3, and had a big part in the drive that made it 21-3. In between, Donnell Daniel blocked a punt that Adrian White ran into the endzone. Indiana State scored a late touchdown after Tony Wrenn let a punt bounce off his leg to be recovered by a Sycamore player at the SIU-C 37.

The Sycamores had another long drive after that, which didn't make Dempsey all that happy. "When you have a team buried, you don't let them get another first down," he said. "We should have put them away."

Indiana State Coach Dennis Raetz felt his team should have put the Salukis away in the first half. The first two quarters were played almost exclusively in Saluki territory.

"We should have been ahead by two touchdowns in the first half," said Raetz.

On one occasion the SIU-C defense stopped the Sycamores on a fourth and one situation at the Saluki 15. Another time safety Gregg Shipp sacked quarterback Keith Bonney for a 10-yard loss, forcing a 44-yard field attempt, which ISU missed.

Dennis Teagarden later kicked a 39-yard field goal for the only scoring in the half.

In the second half SIU-C managed to fashion a pair of respectable drives.

With Ware running four straight times at one point, the Salukis ground out a 64-yard 10 play drive to take the lead. The longest play was Ware's 12-yard touchdown run.

Moments later, from the ISU 28, the Salukis widened their lead with their first blocked punt of the season. Daniel broke through from the right side and cleanly blocked the kick of the left-footed Mike Johanness. White kicked the ball out of the air and ran seven yards into the endzone.

"Our first four years we averaged six (blocked kicks) a year, and we'd get as many as four touchdowns off blocked punts," said Dempsey.

A 27-yard pass to Ware was the big play of the final Saluki scoring drive. It moved the ball to the Sycamore five, and four plays later, Ware scored again on a one yard plunge on fourth and goal.

For only the second time this year, SIU-C ran the ball more often than it passed. The running game generated 131 yards in 38 carries.

Quarterback Rick Johnson played, and said an injured shoulder didn't bother him. Johnson met with Jim Hart before the game and then broke the ex-Saluki's career tom-

Hart hangs on in NFL

By Brian Higgins
Staff Writer

Cheers, beers and general insanity epitomized the attitude in the streets of St. Louis this week as the local faithful celebrated their Cardinals' "suds series" world championship title. But when the baseball Cards walked off the Busch Stadium turf last Monday night, there were no grid Cardinals to take their place. The Gateway City's biggest sports complex, like 27 others around the country, remained conspicuously dormant on Sunday.

For the first time in his 17-year career, Jim Hart found himself unemployed this fall, thanks to the NFL's first player strike. And while he couldn't suit up himself this weekend, he did manage to pay a visit to his alma mater and join in the homecoming festivities at SIU-C.

The Cardinal quarterback was the guest speaker at the Alumni Association's annual awards luncheon, where he received a long-overdue plaque for his role as an outstanding alumnus.

Hart, who quarterbacked the Salukis for three years from 1963-65, found himself in an unusual position when the Cards' camp opened this summer. Hart knew coming in that he was not going to be St. Louis' starting quarterback this year. In fact, Neil Lomax, a second-year hurler out of Portland State, won the job that Hart had held for so many years. And as the possibility of any more games being played this year decreases with every passing weekend, Hart's future in professional football remains up in the air.

"I've been hanging in there one year at a time for the last few years," said the four-time Pro Bowler. "I'd like to play one more year, but I don't know if they'll let me do that. I feel I'm still capable of playing. It depends on rather they want to keep me around on my salary."

If the strike is not resolved within a few weeks, the 1982 NFL season will have probably reached the point of no return. If the Cardinals opt to palce

Hart on waivers rather than keep him on the roster, there is a strong possibility that his career may now be over.

Hart, however, is solidified with his NFL Players Association colleagues in carrying out the now five-week-old walkout. And while terms such as wage scales, medical benefits and player compensation are being thrown around in the stalemated owner's-player's negotiations, Hart noted that the bottom line is money.

Hart emphasized the players demand for "more money individually."

"Ours is one of the worst going (in player compensations), as far as sports go," he said. "If they'd just give us more money up front, none of this would've happened."

Hart was optimistic that football fans won't hold a grudge against the striking players once the issue is resolved.

"I think when we come back they'll all support us," he said.

Long matches lead to spikers' split

Life at the top ain't easy. That's one lesson the SIU-C volleyball team learned this weekend on its four-day swing through Texas. The Salukis split the road trip, but those two losses came at the hands of other Top 20 teams.

SIU-C started the trip with the news that it had entered the Top 20 for the first time ever. It may have ended the trip falling out of the Top 20.

"That's possible, but not necessarily," said assistant Coach Niles Pedersen. "They (the NCAA) will take into consideration that the losses were to a team rated above us and a team just a notch below us."

The team rated above the Salukis, Texas A&M, handed SIU-C the only one-sided match of the weekend Friday night, 15-10, 15-8, 15-10. The Aggies were rated No. 15 going into the SIU-C match, and had little trouble dispensing the Salukis. Pedersen said the Salukis may have been a bit drained mentally in lieu of their two-hour plus matches the two previous nights.

"We played pretty bad," Pedersen admitted. He said that poor setting and passing led to the Salukis' downfall.

The Salukis engaged in another marathon match Saturday night, but came short against Texas, the team that raised a notch below. The two hour and 46 minute match ended in a 2-15, 15-13, 10-15, 15-12, 10-15 victory which should
