Women rally to claim freedom without fear

About 150 women, men and children marched down Illinois Avenue Friday night carrying candles and signs and chanting "Take Back the Night."

They were protesting violence against women in the eighth annual "Take Back the Night March."

"Sexism plus violence equals rape culture," "Sexism kills us" and "Women unite, take back the night" were some of the signs that both men and women carried during the march and at the rally in the Woody Hall courtyard.

Julia Pachoud, assistant to the coordinator of women studies, said that the march was organized by local women to raise the community's awareness of women's safety needs.

"It's an active metaphor for claiming safe space, for literally taking back our streets and stating that as men and women who are committed to safety, we claim our freedom to be in the world without fear," Pachoud said.

The march is a multi-national event that occurs around the world in late September and early October, she said.

"We have a very active and vocal population, we can protest in this country and we do."

Some wore white sashes to indicate they are survivors of violence. Julie Claussen, women's center executive director, said that realizing the difference between being a survivor and a victim is the first step to recovery.

Mayor Neil Dillard said he was impressed to see so many people at the rally,

Tuition hike talked up Panel discusses impact of hike on students

By Brad Bushue
Staff Writer

President John C. Guyon said he does not expect to see a decrease in enrollment because of the tuition increase, but a student trustee said the University would lose students if it does not assist in funding financial aid.

In a panel discussion with University officials Thursday, Student Trustee Darrell Johnson said the 18.3 percent tuition increase, which was approved by the University Oct. 13, will require higher grants for low income students on financial aid programs such as Illinois State Scholarship Commission and Pell Grants.

With the higher tuition, students who previously did not qualify for government assistance will be able to get financial help, Johnson said.

Johnson said the increase in students on financial aid will limit the number of grants distributed.

"If the state is going to refuse to adequately fund the universities, then they should help institutions like ISSC," Johnson said.

If the financial aid institutions lose money, Johnson said the University inevitably will lose students.

The panel also discussed the effects the tuition hike would have on the lives of students.

Graduate and Professional Studies Council President Trudy Hale said students feel the tuition increase will hurt the quality of their lives.

She said some students cannot afford the food for a healthy diet and many do not have telephones.

The difficulty in detecting inefficiencies in the University also was discussed by the panel, but Guyon said he knew

Faner Lab computer virus claims 200 student victims

By Miguel Alba
Staff Writer

About 200 computer science students have fallen victim to a computer virus that has recently been discovered in Faner lab personal computer software.

"We have a Lotus project due soon, but it's not going to be done on time because the kids were using infected Lotus disks," one affected student said. "It can ruin a semester's work if all your files are on one disk."

Ed Morein, a junior in marketing, said about 200 students in his computer classes are having problems getting assignments done because of a computer virus that scrambles data.

A computer virus is a program designed to erase, scramble, or destroy data.

Like a real biological virus, it is contagious. A computer virus is capable of passing from disk to disk without the user's knowledge.

The virus can pass to an uninfected disk if the virus already is in the computer's memory or if the user uses an infected disk to initiate the system.

Woman charged with 2 counts of theft

By Mark Barnett
Staff Writer

While investigating the disappearance of $6,114 from the Jackson County Clerk's Office, charges were brought against a former employee of the office for taking funds on two occasions, Jackson County State's Attorney John Clemons said.

The funds the former employee is charged with taking are not part of the missing

$6,114, Clemons said.

Two misdemeanor counts of theft were filed Oct. 20 against Angela Bullar, a former employee of the Jackson County Circuit Clerk's Office, Clemons said. She is charged with taking less than $300 on both June 24 and July 29, he said.

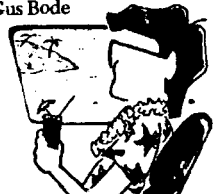

Clemons would not comment on the total amount of money Bullar is charged with stealing, but repeated she is charged with stealing less than $300 on each occasion.

Bullar is scheduled to appear in Jackson County Circuit Court on Nov. 9.

Charges were filed during an investigation of missing funds at the Clerk's Office, Clemons said. While reviewing monthly financial records Jennie Crawshaw, Jackson County Circuit Clerk, reported during

Soviets prepare to launch unmanned space shuttle

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union has begun checking out-board systems for an apparently unmanned test launch of its own space shuttle, called Buran, or "snowstorm" in Russian, the Tass news agency said Sunday. A Western diplomat forecast the launch could be "in the next few days or by the end of the week." A Western expert said it would be "the most ambitious launch in the history of the Soviet space program."

Iranian extremists urge more suicide attacks

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Pro-Iranian extremists Sunday marked the fifth anniversary of the truck-bombing of the U.S. Marine barracks in Beirut that killed 241 American servicemen by promising more suicide attacks, apparently against Israeli targets. One extremist even spoke from beyond the grave. A suicide bomber who died in last Tuesday's bloody car-bomb attack on an Israeli military convoy in southern Lebanon appeared in a videotape distributed to reporters, urging his father to follow his example and "detonate yourself."

Salvadoran guerrillas free 131 prisoners

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) — Leftist guerrillas raided a prison near the capital early Sunday, freeing 131 prisoners in a two-hour attack that left two security guards wounded, military sources said. In their second prison raid in as many weeks, rebels fighting the U.S.-backed Salvadoran government attacked the Ilobasco prison, in Cabanas province about 20 miles from the capital, shortly after midnight Saturday.

Government, Solidarity squabble over talks

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — Solidarity leader Lech Walesa said Sunday he is ready for promised roundtable talks with the government on economic issues and other reforms but both sides accused the other of delaying the crucial meeting. The government and Solidarity late Saturday accused each other for at least the third time of delaying the scheduled talks that were to have begun Monday, and their statements indicated an impasse had emerged.

Iran forging bonds with communist countries

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In a push to end its isolation, Iran has stepped up diplomatic and commercial contacts with communist nations such as the Soviet Union and China, while relations with the United States remain frozen, U.S. officials say. Since the war between Iran and Iraq ended two months ago, the government of the Ayatollah Khomeini has expanded links with more than 20 countries on six continents in a campaign to attract foreign investments, State Department officials and Iran specialists said last week.

Cartoonists address issue of homelessness

WASHINGTON (UPI) — One hundred of the nation's leading comic strip and editorial cartoonists will address the problem of homelessness today, highlighting the plight of hungry and homeless people in their cartoons. Cartoonists ranging from "Doonesbury" creator Garry Trudeau to Johnny Hart, drawer of the "Wizard of Id," will underscore "the national disgrace of homelessness," an organizer of the project said.

Two trapped gray whales halfway to freedom

BARROW, Alaska (UPI) — Eskimos using a low-tech approach Sunday carved a path of air holes halfway to freedom for two trapped California gray whales, while the oil industry readied another high-tech assault with an ice-crushing tractor delivered by an Air Force plane. Ron Morris, rescue coordinator and biologist with the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, predicted the two surviving whales could be free from the arctic ice by Wednesday.

$3 million kept Mississippi River navigable

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — The U.S. Coast Guard spent about $3 million this summer to keep the Mississippi River navigable through the drought of 1968, the head of the service said. Adm. Paul Yoat Jr. said the extra expenses amounted to about 1 percent of the Coast Guard's original budget of $300 million. But in February, the administration cut that budget by $103 million. However, $60 million was later restored by Congress.

MYTHS ABOUT RAPE

- DO YOU THINK: Only young attractive women are raped?
THEY AREN'T. Females who have been sexually assaulted range in years from infancy to old age. Men, both straight and gay, are sexually assaulted too, by other men; primarily, women are the targets.
- DO YOU THINK: Women are usually raped by strangers?
THEY AREN'T. Studies show that the majority of women who have been sexually assaulted are acquainted with the men who assault them. Rapists are not always strangers. They can be acquaintances, friends, neighbors, or relatives.
- DO YOU THINK: Rapes are unplanned acts and rapists are men who have uncontrollable sex drives?
THEY AREN'T. Most sexual assaults are planned in advance. The rapist has it in his mind to rape a woman - any woman - or he has a specific woman in mind. Sexual assault is an act of physical and emotional violence, not of sexual gratification. Sex is involved in sexual assault only as the means the rapist uses to express his anger or violence, but it is not the primary motivating factor.
- DO YOU THINK: Most rapes are interracial?
THEY AREN'T. Statistical evidence shows that most sexual assaults are committed by men against women of the same race.
- DO YOU THINK: Some rapes are justified or excusable?
THEY AREN'T. It's never okay to force sex on a woman, regardless of what she's wearing, where she is, or how she's acting.
- DO YOU THINK: Men don't have to be concerned about rape; it only affects women?
NOT TRUE. Neither men nor women can be proud nor can live safely in a culture that in any way encourages or condones acts of sexual violence toward others. In addition, men, too are victimized by sexual assault; and men have wives, friends, mothers and daughters who may be assaulted. Rape will not cease until men stop raping.

Quartet intensely classic

Tokyo String Quartet delights Shryock audience

By Curtis Winston
Staff Writer

Intense.

That word best describes the virtuosic sounds of the Tokyo String Quartet.

Playing for a packed Shryock Auditorium Friday evening, the quartet presented the classical works of Beethoven and Schubert and the contemporary sounds of 20th century composer Leos Janacek.

A Review

The three-quarter Japanese, one-quarter Canadian quartet, hailed by critics as the best string quartet in the world, was indeed intense as it opened the concert with Beethoven's "Quartet No. 4 in C minor."

The audience received a quick lesson in concert etiquette as it persisted in applauding between the movements of the Beethoven. The first time this happened the quartet politely sat and waited for the unwanted applause to cease.

On the second break, Canadian lead violinist Peter Oundjian simply held up his hand, wordlessly telling the ignorant, yet eager concertgoers that applause between movements, the different sections of a work, is a no-no.

All the emotion and intensity of Ludwig Van Beethoven's music came to life under the bows of the quartet. Most of his compositions are built on one reoccurring melodic theme. In the hands of the quartet, this theme sounded new and refreshing each time it came up.

Switching gears to music composed about 100 years later, the foursome played Czechoslovakian composer Janacek's "String Quartet No. 1" from 1923. The change in musical periods was a 180-degree-turn from Beethoven, but was effective in keeping with the concert's intensity.

Modern string quartet literature differs from works by such classicists as Beethoven and Schubert in its tonal quality and overall harmony. It reflects the emotions of a modern era, just as Beethoven's and Schubert's music reflected their era of the middle 1800s.

Mainstream culture surely is familiar with Samuel Barber's "Adagio for Strings," which was used prominently in the "Platoon" soundtrack. This sweeping, picturesque sound is typical of 20th century string music.

Janacek's string quartet had much of the same sounds, though it is much more active than Barber's depressingly complacent "Adagio."

The piece was started by cellist Sadao Harada who played a short riff that sounded like, dare it be said, bluegrass. This little riff was repeated consecutively by violinist Kazuhide Isomura and the two violinists Oundjian and Kikuei Ikeda.

However, the light, happy bluegrass mood soon gave way to a dark, foreboding one that stayed dominant throughout the work.

The concert ended with a third selection, Franz Peter Schubert's "String Quartet in D minor," subtitled "Death and The Maiden." All of the quartet's hard training paid off in this piece, which, with its sheer length, was a test of endurance as well as overall technique.

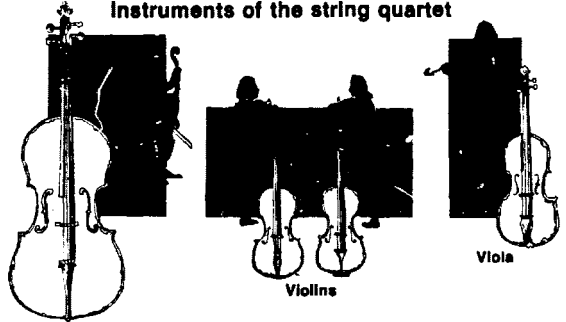

Oundjian, who studied with renowned violin virtuoso Itzhak Perlman, and his Japanese colleagues, who were trained in a strict Samurai-like discipline at Japan's Toho Academy of Music, concentrated on each nuance of the long piece's dynamics, keeping the audience on the edge of its seats during the entire performance.

Instruments of the string quartet

Cello

The cello sounds the lowest of the quartet instruments. Its principle role in the quartet is rhythmic accompaniment.

Violins

The two violins play the highest notes. One violinist plays a lead melody and the other plays a counter melody.

Viola

The viola plays in the medium range and its sound is broader and mellower than the violins. It also plays a rhythmic, as well as a harmonic role.

The Trail of Tears; a lesson, a reminder

THE TRAIL OF TEARS wagon train that rolled through the area last week teaches more than history. Though the wagon train commemorates a sad era in American history, history does not have to repeat itself.

The 4,000 Indians that died during the march from Georgia to Oklahoma would have been saved had Indians been seen as humans, not savages.

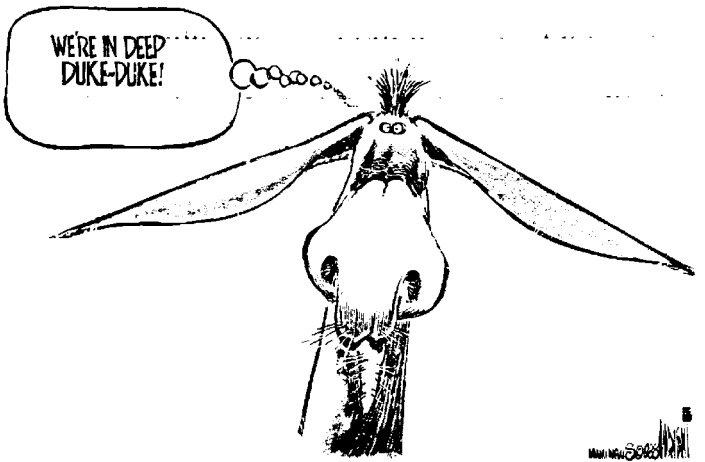

THE DEATH of that misconception was slow in coming. Only in recent times have we begun to re-evaluate the American Indian's legacy. This is the first commemorative wagon train to roll along the Trail of Tears; 150 years elapsed between the event and its commemoration.

EVERYDAY WE SEE evidence that forces at work in today's society are similar to those that created the society that tolerated the Trail of Tears in 1838. Racial prejudice, sexual harassment and other forms of social injustice set the stage for modern tragedies similar to the Trail of Tears.

WE CAN ONLY speculate on whether some citizens watched in silent outrage as the Cherokee Indians were marched to Oklahoma during a harsh winter. We know today, though, that some of those outraged by social injustice remain silent.

WE ENCOURAGE everyone to become involved in the fight to eliminate discrimination, whether it is because of sex, race, age, ethnic origin or religion. This is not a battle to be waged by solitary warriors. The numbers must be on the side of those opposing discrimination.

THOSE WHO remain still, run the risk of becoming silent partners in the kinds of atrocities being remembered on the Trail of Tears. We cannot erase the terrible memory of the Trail of Tears march. We can, however, join the fight that similar tragedies do not occur in our lifetimes.

It ain't easy being rich and famous, just ask the poor Henry Ford family

IT'S NOT easy being poor, and by "poor" I mean not rich. Even if you're doing pretty well it's not the Winnebago in the driveway that defines your life, it's the wolf at the door, that gnawing anxiety that comes with the knowledge that if you don't get out and hustle you'll wind up sleeping on the streets, at the mercy of strangers.

Rich people never know that feeling. When the wolf comes howling at the door, they throw him a lamb chop and he goes away. But, you know, rich people have problems too, problems which are just as real to them as survival is to you and me. Inheritance, for example. Remember when your grandmother or maybe your great-aunt died, and you and your sister-in-law got in a fight over who got the dining room set? Imagine that problem multiplied 300 million times. Imagine, for example, the Henry Ford family.

WHEN HENRY Ford II, the grandson of THE Henry Ford, died a year ago he left almost all of his $350 million estate in a trust. The chief immediate beneficiary was Kathleen DuRosa Ford, Henry Deuce's third and final wife and, in the eyes of the little Fords, a gold-digging bimbo who married their father for their money. The trust provided her with a minimum of $1.5 million a year, more if the trustees agreed she needed it. She was the only one authorized to skim from the pot but, upon her death, the principal would go to the six Ford grandchildren.

That strikes me as the will of a man who got considerably more pleasure from his third wife than he did from his children, but it was his grandfather's money and he could do what he wanted with it. More or less. Sad to say, the arrangement is now in the hands of lawyers.

EDSEL FORD II, Henry II's son, has accused Step-Mommy

Donald Kaul

Tribune Media Services

Dearest of being spendthrift of his children's inheritance and is trying to limit her spending to the measly mill-and-a-half. In a meeting of the trustees, he said that Mrs. Ford had bought terrycloth furniture covers and charged it to the trust rather than paying the bill herself. She replied that she was having a hard time making ends meet and that the covers were a necessity because the furniture was so tacky. My goodness, what will they do when the yacht needs an oil change?

In the meantime, Cristina Ford, the second Mrs. Henry II, has filed a suit asking for $5 million in back alimony. See what I mean about the problems of the rich? At least a poor man has the satisfaction of knowing when he's dead, he's dead.

THE FORDS come by their lack of class honestly; it runs in the family. I visited the Ford ancestral home, "Fair Lane," in Dearborn, Mich., last summer. It's a big house but not grand, certainly not a patch on one of the Robber Baron palaces along the Hudson Valley in New York. It has the feeling of a place people wanted to make comfortable to live in but didn't know how, because they had too much money.

It is chiefly remarkable for the technological gadgets the old man had installed in the '20s, when it was built, some of which are Egyptian in scope. (When the family wished to cross the Rouge River which flowed by the house, Mr. Ford was able to throw a switch and turn it off like a faucet, then walk across.)

The house, now a Ford museum of sorts, has a lovely library room but not many books and the most of the ones on the shelves look like cheap Book-of-the-Month Club editions, not what you'd expect from the world's first billionaire. I asked about it.

WELL, IT seems that the library once boasted a fine collection of rare books, leather-bound, gold-leafed, but when the old man died the kids — this being Henry II and his siblings — sold off everything in the house; all the furniture, all the books, all the memorabilia. Such was their sense of devotion to family tradition. Such is it now. Another anecdote makes me think it comes from their grandmother's side of the family.

The major rooms of the stone house are paneled in imported, carved walnut — great, dark glowing caverns of opulence — except for one room, which is painted in a blandly unattractive vanilla.

ON CLOSER examination, however, it becomes obvious that this room too is paneled in burl walnut, its exquisite carvings clogged with paint. The old Mrs. Ford, the real Henry's wife, decided that all that wood made the room too dreary so she had it painted over to brighten it up. It is said that when Henry came home that night he looked at the room, opened his mouth in dismay, then shut it tight.

As he went up the stairway to his room he was heard to mutter: "Peace at any price."

So cheer up, you poor people out there. No matter how bad things get, you're not going to have problems like the Fords. I promise you.

Letters

Bush a supporter of life

To begin with, I would like to respond to Vicki Aponte's first inaccurate statement in her letter to the editor of the Daily Egyptian. Bush does not oppose abortion so that he, or the government, can have heavier control over individual decision. Bush opposes abortion because the "right" of a woman to kill her baby infringes upon the alienable rights of that baby. Pro-abortionists often speak of rights. A woman's right to her body, her privacy, her choice. What they seem to forget about is the rights of the unborn child.

Also, it would be interesting to know what "unwanted" children Aponte is referring to. There are thousands of couples in this and other countries who try every technique of medicine to have a child; couples on waiting lists a mile long at adoption agencies; couples with want ads in this paper, desperately pleading for a child to love. It is these thousands of couples who will feed "unwanted" babies' mouths. Of course, all of this is irrelevant. Even if some babies are unwanted, it does make them any less of a living, important human being. Inconvenience can never be a justification for murder.

I will vote for Bush, based on this one issue, because this issue will have far greater implications than the infringement of unborn children's rights. If the law is not reversed, the children of the future — those given the privilege of birth — will grow up in a society which does not value life, but rather, destroys life. — Chris Vincent, freshman, psychology.

DE, leave protestors alone

Say editor, what's your problem? In your Sept. 26 editorial, you label the "Black Thursday" demonstrators as "cowards; hecklers in a crowd." Where do you get off with this nonsense!

First, I didn't see you or anyone else raising a tuition question that day. Who else has made such an impact as these commendable students. Where... are... others... public... awareness campaigns?

Secondly, who heckled? There were no words spoken by the demonstrators. The Board of Trustees ignored the demonstrators until they left. Then the board commented, had a good laugh and went on with their discussions.

Stop labeling viable efforts with badly uncalled for journalism. Let the "Black Thursday" demonstrators protest as they see fit! — Bjck Nelson, Carbondale.

Former student makes court date in death of newborn

By Richard Goldstein
Staff Writer

A former University student was formally charged in Jackson County Court with three counts of first degree murder for the death of a newborn baby, thought to be a girl, found in a dumpster in May.

Veronica L. April, 23, a senior in computer science last year made her first court appearance Friday in front of Judge David W. Watt.

Police allege April, who lives in Joliet, drowned her own baby in a toilet bowl on April 7, possibly the day of the baby's birth. Police also allege April admitted that the dead baby was her own.

The baby was found in a purse inside a dumpster behind 305 1/2 E. Freeman St. on May 15. April's residence last spring was 304 E. Hester St. If convicted, April could be sentenced to between 20 and 60 years in prison, or life in prison if aggravating circumstances are found to be involved, Watt said.

Watt also said the death penalty could result from a first degree murder conviction but State's Attorney John Clemons said he will not ask for the death penalty in the case.

A preliminary hearing will be held Nov. 2.

Two alleged kidnappers arrested

Two of the three men accused of kidnapping a Creal Springs woman are in the custody of Broward County, Florida officials.

The Williamson County Sheriff's Department said Kenneth D. Gravatt, 23, and Michael W. Gravatt, 19, both of the Marion, were taken into custody between Saturday night and Sunday morning. They are charged with aggravated kidnapping and armed robbery.

The two men and Joe S. Johnston, also a Marion resident, are accused of robbing the Lake of Egypt supermarket, Route 4, Marion, and forcing Michelle Sisk, 28, of Route 2, Creal Springs, to drive the men away from the area on Oct. 18.

Sisk returned to Marion on a Greyhound bus at 11:55 p.m. Oct. 20. Police said the men put Sisk on the bus at 6:20 p.m. that day in Memphis, Tenn.

Johnston is still at large, while Federal authorities and Illinois and other state police agencies are searching for him, police said.

Jeff Crehan, a student lab worker, said all the lab disks are considered to be contaminated by the virus, although no one is sure exactly how many have actually been contaminated.

"Right now we're not handing out any software. But hopefully some software will be available by Monday or later in the week," he said.

Crehan said the lab is passing out information on the virus, including instructions on how to find out if a particular disk has been infected and how to cure an infected disk.

Thomas Hazel, graduate student in computer science, said the virus hides in the information on the disk that tells the system what to do, "the boot record," or in the information on the disk that operates the system, the "command.com."

Hazel said this particular virus appears with the file name "(c) Brain," after the virus has been transferred an unspecified number of times. What makes the file appear is not known. When opening the file, the user will see, "Welcome to the dungeon. Contact Basit & Amjad, Ltd. for the vaccine." A vaccine is the computer program that erases a virus.

The virus was created in 1986 by two Pakistani brothers, Amjad and Basit Farooq, who wanted to discourage the practice of selling illegally copied software programs. They sold copies of infected Lotus and Word Star programs to American tourists for as little as $1.50, since Lotus 1-2-3 usually sells for several hundred dollars in the United States.

This particular virus, named The Pakistani Virus for its place of origin, scrambles data. Fanner lab officials were alerted to the situation last week after several disks were returned with all the information on them destroyed.

"The virus activates itself after the program has been booted (started operating) a certain number of times," he said. "It's like a time bomb."

However, not all disks can be fixed. If the virus' file name ends with .COM or .EXE, the program cannot be removed.

There is a high probability that copying any file from such a disk also will copy the virus, infecting yet another disk.

A disk so infected must be erased by passing the disk under a magnet. The magnet erases everything on the disk, including the virus. All the data also will be lost.

A way to protect disks from infection is to write-protect them. To do this, a plastic tab is placed on the notch at the top of all standard five-and-a-quarter inch disks. This makes it impossible for anything to be written onto the disk.

No information has yet been released concerning the possibility of the University mainframe being contaminated by the virus. Personal computers can interact with the mainframe through a telephone line that hooks the computer to the mainframe.

William Baron, computing affairs director, said the matter is under investigation.

of no way to determine where inefficiencies exist.

Vice Chancellor James Brown said there is some discrepancy in the perception of an inefficiency. What looks like waste may actually be essential to the operation of the University, he said.

Panel member Susan Ford, director of graduate studies in anthropology said the University is losing professors because a lack of raises, the quality of the institution and University research facilities.

The raise in tuition will help upgrade the library and retain professors who rely on the institution for their research studies, she said.

Mike Comerford, freshman in the SIU School of Medicine, questioned the panel on the medical school's 43 percent tuition increase that will cost students an additional $2,149 per academic school year.

Comerford said the majority of medical students will have to take out the Health Education Assistance Loan, which has a higher interest rate and is compounded from the day taken out.

Comerford said medical students will have to deal with the increase, but the enrollment for medical school will not diminish, he said.

Guyon said the SIU's medical school will still be a bargain.

the first week in August to Clemons that $6,114 was missing.

Clemons said money collected from the office on five occasions did not reflect bank statements. The funds were collected from fines, fees and surcharges. Funds collected on four different occasions in July and one in August were missing and totaled $6,114.

"We have no substantial, prosecutable evidence" that links anyone to the missing funds, Clemons said. None of the $6,114 has been found, he said.

The continuing investigation is being conducted by the Illinois State Police Division of Criminal Investigation.

and that he spoke at the rally to recognize the importance of the group.

"This rally demonstrates a sincere concern about violence against women," councilman John Yow said.

Many sat silently during the speeches, dramatic readings and music while others called out their support.

Maureen Madden, a graduate student in community development, said she attends the march because "it's important for people to get together, especially women, to empower themselves."

"Lots of the issues they're talking about have touched my life. It makes me feel stronger and more confident to be around all these people that are healing," Madden said.

Rob Hurst, a doctoral student in speech communications, said "I'm marching for those who aren't here and for those who may not understand what it's all about. It's a way of supporting women friends in my life and empowering myself as a man."

Economic views lead grocer to support Bush

Defense issues, interest rates also influences

Editor's note: The St. Louis Post-Dispatch recently sent its reporters around the country to gather interviews with ordinary voters who will help choose the next president. This is one story in a series.

By Robert L. Joiner
St. Louis Post Dispatch

When J.W. Little bought the Bi-Rite grocery in this two-stoplight hamlet in 1962, some of the locals couldn't help but question his business judgement.

And why not? Tiny Spring Hill, situated about 30 miles south of Nashville, wasn't exactly a growing community. Even now, you can fit all its telephone numbers into about four pages and still have plenty of room left for a three-quarter page advertisement.

But Little was even more convinced that he had made the right decision when in 1985 General Motors announced it would build a $1.7 billion plant in Spring Hill to manufacture its Saturn automobile. When the plant opens, probably in 1990, and the community's work force swells by at least 3,000, Little figures his business will begin reaping the benefits.

HIS HART of going against the grain extends to his politics as well. In a community where many residents say they are lifelong Democrats, he is independent and is leaning toward Republican candidate George Bush for president over Democrat Michael S. Dukakis. Little says a Republican is more likely to provide a climate in which businesses can thrive. His worry is that the "wrong" man will move into the White House next year and burst the economic bubble.

"When I borrowed money to buy this business six years ago," he recalls, "interest rates were around 21 percent. If they had remained that high, I wouldn't be here today."

"NOT ONLY are the rates a lot lower now, inflation is way down and more people are working. We need somebody who'll continue the policies that have made these things happen. I think Bush is more likely to do that than Dukakis."

Little took his business risk out of necessity. Six years ago he had to find something else to do because the company for which he worked as an agricultural chemical salesman merged with another firm and forced him into early retirement.

Although he's 65 now, he has no plans to give himself a pink slip. He looks forward to the day when his cash registers sing right along with Saturn's production line.

A FORMER Marine sergeant, Little takes a keen interest in U.S. defense matters. His aim is to vote for the man who is less likely to shift from the defense policies of President Reagan.

"Let's put it this way: If you and I got in a fight down the road a piece and I had a pistol and you had nothing, who'd win? I would. It's as simple as that. The defense issue will work in Bush's favor. We've made a lot of progress by driving hard bargains with the Soviets. We need somebody who's going to keep the pressure on, continue our strong posture."

Although Little seems to think that what's good for General Motors might be excellent for Spring Hill, he worries the plant might alter the character of his hometown, which was settled in the late 1700s by Revolutionary War veterans from North Carolina.

THE PLACE hasn't changed much. Rolling hills continue to dominate the landscape, and the green pastures are full of Holstein and Jersey cattle. The school principal doubles as chief of the volunteer fire department, and some residents still churn butter and can vegetables for the winter.

Although the question of foreign ownership of U.S. businesses has been an issue in the campaign, it doesn't stir much opposition here. That's partly because Japanese companies already have a foothold in Tennessee, with 35 manufacturing plants and 25 sales or distribution sites that employ about 10,000 people.

elevated office booth, Little sits and looks through the front window at the automobile traffic. More motorists come this way now - mainly, it seems, to see the 2,400 acre GM site where thousands of construction workers are building the plant. The drivers seem to stop in the main business district only long enough to obey the traffic lights.

"Traffic." Little quips, "it's about the only thing that has picked up here."

He then adjusts his glasses and browses at some store sales figures. His thoughts then turn to the federal deficit and the budget. He says Dukakis can't be counted on to balance the budget and cut spending on social programs as a way of controlling the deficit.

"I HAVE to balance mine, so why shouldn't they be required to balance theirs?" he asks. "Dukakis has gotten himself in a lot of trouble by talking about cutting defense spending and giving the money to domestic programs. We have too many of them now. Some are good, but a lot of them are bad. I'm bitterly opposed to giving away anything. I think a man ought to work for everything he gets, just like I do."

'Memories of Me' hits home despite its predictable plot

By Kathleen DeBo
Staff Writer

"Memories of Me" tugs at the heart strings despite its predictable plot.

A doctor, played by Billy Crystal, has a heart attack and decides to reconcile with his estranged father, an actor, played by Alan King.

At the start of the film, neither character is very admirable. The father is so busy hamming it up at a piano that he does not listen to his son. The son criticizes his father for not being anything more than an extra. Only the son's girlfriend, played by Jo Beth Williams, sees both of their good sides.

The performances are strong. Probably the best emotional scene is in a roadway tunnel when the father and son confront each other. The anger is sharp and familiar to anyone who ever had problems getting along with parents.

The jokes are humorous, too. The film is filled with King's patented sarcasm.

On the downside, the plot devices are very cliché.

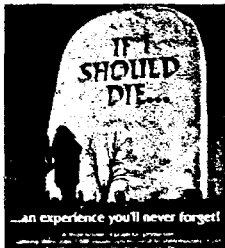

Naturally, the son is a lot like the father he hates. At one point, a crowd of movie extras, in costume, comes over a hill to attend a funeral. At that point, the film tries to forsake reality for emotional impact but does not succeed very well because the attempt is so sappy and obvious.

To make things more heart-wrenching, of course, just when things start to look good between the father and son, illness strikes.

Personal tragedy leading to a re-evaluation of father-son relationships is a theme used in "Nothing in Common," and many other films. "Memories of Me" is not the best example of the genre, but it is an acceptable attempt.

Movie-goers may not want to pay $4 for this movie, but it is worth about $2.

Annual Ms. Eboness pageant crowns freshman

By Wayne Wallace
Staff Writer

After bringing the crowd to its feet with a rendition of "You Make Me Feel Good All Over," Amanda Osler was crowned 1988 Ms. Eboness.

The 18-year-old pre-law freshman was one of 12 pageant hopefuls competing for the 17th annual Ms. Eboness title Saturday night at Shryock Auditorium.

The contest, sponsored by the black fraternity Alpha Phi Alpha, is open to all black female undergraduates.

Contestants are judged in three categories: evening gown competition, talent and interview evaluation.

When selected as a finalist, Osler was asked by the judges which charity she would donate to if she was given $1000. Osler said she would give the money to the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People to set up a workshop toward better communication between Afro-Americans.

Osler was awarded a $500 academic scholarship as part of her Ms. Eboness honors.

Kara Burrell, a sophomore in radio-TV, was named first runner-up. Burrell's performance in the talent competition was a vocal on "God Bless the Child."

Second runner-up was Acquinetta Hayes, a senior in marketing.

Sonia Phelix, a senior in speech communications rounded out the top four finalists as the third runner-up.

The Deborah Shepard Award, given to the young lady who sold the most ads for the program, went to Motise Jones, a sophomore in electrical engineering, she won a Honda Spree scooter.

Freshman Kara Davenport won the cooperation and dedication award.

The panel of five judges was comprised mostly of black faculty and staff members. E.L. "Pav" Pavledes, Student Center building manager, was honored as the first Caucasian to serve as a Ms. Eboness judge.

Comedian Gary Heflin and admissions faculty member Brenda Major, served as emcees for the evening's festivities.

ball against each other — Ivanic at Rock Island Alleman and Bookout at John Hersey in Arlington Heights.

Ivanic, a sophomore touting All-America status, said he was impressed with his counterpart's poise and his ability.

"He was very positive after the game," Ivanic said. "I knew how much the loss hurt him. He had a great day and there's nothing I could say to make him feel good."

Even so, the pair shared a laugh. Ivanic added a new perspective to Bookout's kick in the first quarter that was inspirational in character for the Salukis.

Bookout's first field goal had been a 40-yard boot that tumbled end-over-end, struck the goal post crossbar, and took a gambler's bounce through for three points.

"We were laughing," Bookout said, "because one of John's 47-yarders in practice hit the pole (and went in) yesterday."

Bookout was unsure if his version of the kick motivated the Salukis to eventually to take the 9-7 lead that lasted until Ivanic got a second opportunity to correct an earlier miss from 39.

"It might have been,"

Bookout said. "It hung up there and no one was sure if it would go through."

But it did go through, almost as if the 13,000 in attendance for McAndrew Stadium's 50th birthday willed past the uprights. As for the kick's motivational quality, there can be no doubt.

The Salukis' offense went into high gear. Piling up a 17-7 advantage in first downs and an edge in total offense of 272 yards to 163 by halftime.

Back at McAndrew, Ivanic was assured Bookout would bounce forward, just like his first-quarter kick. "He's too good a kicker to let a loss like that get him down."

Bookout will bounce back. His conviction was evident as he prepared to leave.

Chicago Bears to face San Fran

CHICAGO (UPI) — The NFL's top offensive team meets pro football's top defensive team when the Chicago Bears host the San Francisco 49ers in Monday night's nationally televised game.

The 49ers, 5-2, who have racked up 2,910 yards for a 415.7 per game average, will be trying to make history when they visit Soldier Field by winning their 12th consecutive road game.

But the Bears, 6-1, who have given up 1,715 yards — 245 a game — and allowed an NFL-low 74 points through seven contests, hope to extend their own winning streak.

weekend's conference championships.

Paul Burkinshaw, Paul Glanville and Mark Stuart all sat out. They, along with Jon Dennis, David Beauchem, Mike Kershaw and Vaughn Harry are the seven runners Cornell said will compete this Saturday.

"Even though Jobie Kelly finished ahead of Kershaw this race," Cornell said, "I feel Mike (Kershaw) has been more consistent throughout the season and he will run conference for us."

The other team finishes were Troy State with 59 points, Mississippi State with 73 points, Ole Miss with 89 points, and Memphis State with 103.

The conference championships will be held on campus.

how much mentally it will affect us though, because we know we played well."

For the Saluki offense, it was rough going much of the afternoon, enhanced when Gibson went down with a knee injury on the sixth play of the Salukis' first drive of the second half.

Gibson came back to take some snaps in the Salukis' next drive, but said he didn't feel up to par.

"I really got stiff and decided I wouldn't be effective," Gibson said.

The Huskies started the game quickly, as they had the ball in the end zone just 1:10 after the opening kickoff.

Defensive coordinator Jim Tompkins said the sudden attack threw the young defenders for a loop.

"We've got some inexperienced secondary people and it takes a while when we only work out with the scout team, because they're not at full speed. The tempo caught us off guard a bit.

"We let them get some drives, but I'm really proud of the way they came back after a disastrous start. We got adjusted to their scheme."

out a 10-9 victory.

Ivanic earlier missed a 47-yard field goal attempt with 5:12 left in the fourth quarter.

"Luckily I had time to think about this one," Ivanic said. "It's a mind game. Their time out gave me time to get it set in my mind that I was going to take it."

Ivanic, who kicked the winning field goal from the right side of the field, said the angle of the kick didn't bother him.

"We worked all week in practice from the hash marks. I hardly ever take kicks from the middle. It would have been easier, but I'm used to it.

"One good thing about the team is that everyone feels very confident. I'm not perfect, though. I'm not going to make all of them."

Cornell's runners dominate for Ole Miss victory

By Robert Baxter
Staff Writer

The men's cross country team ran its best meet of the season Saturday, finishing five runners in the top ten and capturing first-place at the Ole Miss Invitational in Oxford, Miss.

The Salukis finished with 23 points, far and away their lowest point total of the season. Coach Bill Cornell said that with the victory, the team appears to be peaking just in time for the Missouri Valley Conference championships this weekend.

"It appears the team is clicking at the right time," Cornell said. "This was a good tune-up for the conference coming up this weekend."

Freshman Jon Dennis continued his winning ways as he led the team with his third victory of the season. He finished first with a time of 25:57.

"Dennis really didn't have to push himself that hard," Cornell said, adding that Dennis was never really seriously challenged.

"It was a difficult course with a lot of hills and I feel as a team we ran a tough race," Cornell said.

Senior team captain David

Beauchem came in a strong second for the Salukis as he finished with a time of 26:04.

"Anytime you can finish five runners in the top 10, you have to consider it a good race," Cornell said.

The Salukis put five runners in the top 10 for the first time this season with freshman Vaughn Harry finishing fifth in 26:25, senior Jobie Kelly sixth in 26:36, and sophomore Mike Kershaw ninth in 26:50.

Freshmen Mike Danner and Edwin Taylor finished 17th and 20th respectively with times of 27:41 and 27:50.

Cornell said the team's performance was even more impressive because it competed without three of its top seven runners, all of whom were being rested for this

Huskie field goal ruins Homecoming

Rhoades said loss is letdown after week of good practice

By David Gaillanetti

It will go down in the books as McAndrew Stadium's 50th birthday. Unfortunately, Northern Illinois' kicker John Ivanic had to crash the party.

The honorable mention All-America nailed a 32-yard field goal with 12 seconds left in the fourth quarter to pull out a 10-9 heartstopper over the Salukis, spoiling Homecoming.

"This is probably the toughest loss I have ever been associated with," said nose tackle Brad Crouse. "We played as hard as we could; played our hearts out."

Crouse said all that was on his mind during the field goal attempt was getting a hand on the ball.

"I just wanted to block it. We had our max-block on and all I pictured, all I dreamed, was blocking that kick."

Saluki coach Rick Rhoades said the loss hurts twice as much, considering the progress the team made during last week's practices.

"This isn't fun at all," Rhoades said. "They matured a lot this week, and it showed on the field, but some of our mistakes were very costly to us."

The Salukis controlled the ball for 34:46 of the contest, but relied on freshman John Bookout, who hit three of four field goals, for all their points.

Bookout's performance ties him with seven other players in SIU-C history who have hit three field goals in a game.

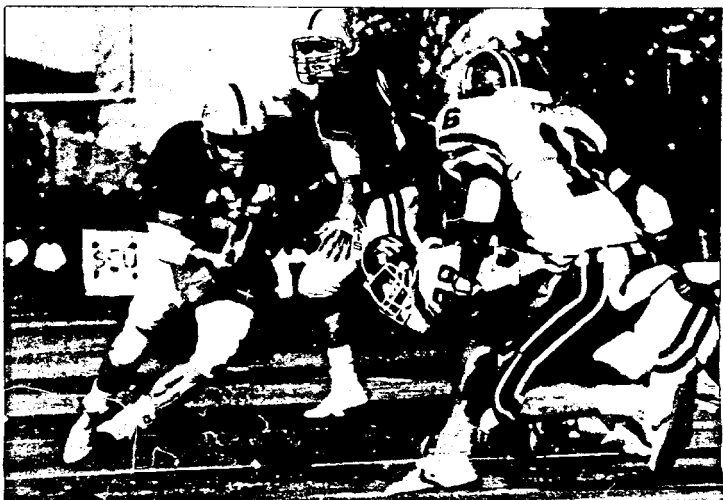

"John did a great job," Rhoades said. "He hit three of four in pressure situations. You can't ask for much more from a freshman. He probably feels bad about that last one, but that's ridiculous."

The offense went without a touchdown for the second time in three games.

"We had some breaks that set us up to put it away but we were not able to get the job done," Rhoades said. "I have no complaints about the players. I know they played hard."

Quarterback Fred Gibson said execution is the key to the Salukis' breaking their scoring drought.

"I would say we would probably have to execute better. We have got to realize if we go that far we have to have the punch to put it in."

The Salukis were plagued by penalties early, having six at the half including three on their first drive of the game.

Penalties also hurt SIU-C late in the game, as the Salukis were called for interference with a Huskie receiver after a Troy Gutierrez punt with 2:19 left in the fourth quarter. Northern Illinois ended up with the ball on the 26-yard line instead of the 6.

Rhoades said he questioned the interference call which, along with an illegal participation call against the Salukis in the ensuing Huskie drive, set up Ivanic's game-winner.

"The interference with the fair catch I still don't understand. I thought he moved into the path of our guy. We did hit some of their guys at times though, and that is bad."

Defensive tackle Shannon Ferbrache said losing the rivalry for a year is hard to swallow.

"What's tough about this is it's against a team we wanted to beat so bad and then just lose by the fraction of a point," Ferbrache said. "I don't know

Ivanic claims Saluki timeout didn't hurt him

Northern Illinois fans might have thought their team had the Salukis beat, but Huskie coach Jerry Pettibone was far from being convinced.

"Yeah, never a doubt, right?" Pettibone said to a fan congratulating him after the victory. "Had that one in the sack right away."

Pettibone had reason to be sarcastic. Northern Illinois trailed by two points until the last minute of the game. Then came a 15-yard penalty against SIU-C, a Saluki time out and Northern Illinois' John Ivanic.

With less than 2:19 remaining in the fourth quarter, Huskie quarterback Marshall Taylor completed a

Bookout's miss haunts his memory despite dominating Salukis' point total

John Bookout, the Salukis' place kicker, was hurting inside. The team had lost 10-9 to Northern Illinois — on homecoming, no less — and he couldn't shake the image of his fourth field goal attempt that failed short and to the left.

Strange how kickers think. No one in their right mind would lay any type of blame on Bookout for that third-quarter miss. His three previous field goals of 47, 21 and 25 yards had been true, and they had single-handedly kept the Salukis in the game.

But try and tell that to Bookout.

"Yeah, I had a good game," Bookout said. "But that fourth one is the one that counts, so I can't be too pleased."

For a freshman, Bookout shouldered responsibility well. He could've mentioned that the offense stalled five times within the Northern Illinois 30-yard line and failed to get a touchdown each time. But he didn't, couldn't say that. He was too mature for such a rationalization.

He also exhibited quality sportsmanship, offering postgame congratulations to Northern Illinois kicker John Ivanic, whose 32-yard field goal at 12 seconds was the clincher.

Ivanic and Bookout met at midfield for the second time in their young careers. They had previously played high school
