Masaya Eimanishi, a visiting artist from Japan, works on one of the many ceramic pieces he will have on display beginning Oct. 8 at University Museum. Eimanishi's art inspirations include life experience and his love for the outdoors.

Japanese potter interprets environment and nature through works of art ALONE IN A DUSTY STUDIO IN A CREVICE OF PULLIAM HALL, MASAYA EIMANISHI ALLOWS HIS HANDS TO WEAVE A STORY AS HE SMOOTHES AND SHAPES A CERAMIC PIECE. FAR FROM HOME, EIMANISHI FINDS COMFORT IN THE STUDIO DECORATED WITH HIS ART, ENTRANCED BY ITS TRADITIONAL BEAUTY.

Eimanishi, a potter from Japan, will exhibit his collection of cobalt stain on porcelain mugs and platters for display, beginning Oct. 8, in the University Museum.

Navy blue underglaze composed of cobalt forms a picture on the porcelain canvas. The art work is animated with environmental aspects and Eimanishi's journeys through life.

"The art is very much inspired by nature," said Harris Deller, director of the School of Art and Design. "The landscape, trees and flowers inspire him and he, in turn, designs art with his interpretations of these objects."

Eimanishi left his native country of Japan to tour the United States about eight years ago. Deller and Eimanishi met in 1997 at a conference in Fortworth, Texas, where Deller became interested in Eimanishi's art work. The meeting brought Deller to ask Eimanishi to come and lecture to SIUC students.

Eimanishi was born in 1947 in Nava City, Japan. After graduating from the Kyoto City University of Art, Eimanishi he the apprentice to Yuzo Kendo, a nationally known artist specializing in cobalt stain on porcelain.

Eimanishi has done numerous expeditions in the United States and Japan, including shows in museums such as the Everson Museum in New York and the Cleveland Museum in Ohio.

Deller said he is attracted to Eimanishi's art because of the practical uses of the dining ware. Believing the community will be able to relate to the pieces, Deller hopes Eimanishi's art attracts a large population of art lovers.

"Masaya makes utilitarian pieces," he said. "He will bring people into the Museum by giving them something they are familiar with."

"His pieces are subtle, magnificent and eloquent. They are quiet. They don't hit you over the head."

Deller, an artist of 24 years with a specialty in porcelain, recognizes the hours Eimanishi has spent in the studio. Deller said he admires the discipline of Eimanishi's art.

"You can appreciate the pieces in a contemplative way," he said. "He is a mastery of technique and of control."

- SIU announced the imminent arrival of presidential candidate John F. Kennedy on campus. Kennedy appeared at McAndrew Stadium Monday, Oct. 3. Kennedy stopped at the Marion Veteran's Hospital, as well as visiting Harrisburg and Herrin, before he moved on to Springfield.
- Former Saluki athlete Dick Gregory made his national television debut as a comedian. Gregory, who started on Southern's track and cross country teams for four seasons between 1952-56, appeared in John Day's special program, "Cast the First Stone," on WSIL-TV.
- Growing up too fast. Eighteen students faced disciplinary action after records revealed that the youngsters had given false ages when photographed for activity cards. The students were caught when the office of student records checked about 6,500 newly-issued cards with registration information on IBM computers.

Apartment building permit denied

KAREN BLATTER
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Tuesday night, the Carbondale City Council listened to the concerns of citizens and denied a special use permit that would allow an apartment building to be constructed at 900 S. Elizabeth St.

The council voted 4-1 to deny a special permit for the property, which is surrounded by University-owned property. The permit would have changed the use of the property from single-family to multi-family residential. The owner of the property, 900 Elizabeth Land Trust, wanted to build a 10-unit, two-building apartment complex.

When the applicant applied in July, the council denied the special use permit. The applicant was told to downsize the 16-unit, two-building apartment complex applied for at the time.

Several residents from the area signed a petition and came to the meeting to object to the special permit because of the increase of students in the area. Councilman Brad Cole voted against the special permit because the applicant was told to make changes to the building plan when first applied for. After making the requested changes, the council was still against it.

The council also approved a resolution authorizing the submission of a grant application for the Southeast Water Treatment Plant for improvements in design.

Although the city is applying for grants that will lessen the $8 million cost of the improvements, the council voted 4-1 to agree to increase water rates to pay the local share if needed.

According to a city report, the Southeast Water Treatment Plant serves 80 percent of the city's population.

Within two years, the growth of the city would exceed the capacity of the plant. Commercial and residential growth in the area would stop because the plant would not be able to process the waste, according to the city report.

The plant serves most of the city east of Oakland Avenue, including the University.

According to City Manager Jeff Doherty, the worst case scenario of a rate increase would be 89 cents per 1,000 gallons. If this happens, the present rate of $2.33 per 1,000 gallons would increase to $3.22.

The vote does not automatically raise rates, because they will not be increased until all grants have been received.

Because he is in opposition of water rate hikes, Councilman Larry Briggs voted against the resolution.

New position unnecessary

Executive vice president position eliminated after much criticism, restructuring

The reorganization of several positions in SIU President Ted Sanders's office, announced at September's SIU Board of Trustees meeting, eliminates the need for a previously planned executive vice president position.

Sanders announced plans in February to hire an executive vice president to handle the day-to-day operations of the office. The idea behind the position was to give Sanders more time to spend working with state and federal legislators on higher education issues.

The plan was met with criticism from some faculty because of a lack of consultation on the decision and concerns about the cost of a new position.

Both the SIUC faculty association and the Faculty Senate officially expressed their concerns shortly after the announcement.

Scott Kaiser, media coordinator for Sanders, said restructuring several positions in the office eliminated the need for the executive vice president, and the position is "totally off the table."

One of the people moved in the restructuring is Jack Dyer, former media coordinator for Sanders. Dyer, who lives in St. Louis, took a position in media relations for SIU's East St. Louis Center, the Dental School in Alton and a new charter school for high school delinquents operated by SIUC.

Dyer began his new position at SIUC during the first week of September.

Kaiser, who is filling Dyer's duties during the interim, said the move works well for both the University and Dyer, who

It's hard to obey the signs when they aren't there.

SIUC police are strictly enforcing a seemingly unknown rule concerning skateboarding at Faner Hall and other places around campus, although most skateboarders are not aware of the regulation.

The rule, which is included in the SIUC parking regulations, states skateboarders "shall not be operated in any area marked walk bikes" and shall be carried on sidewalks or pathways during heavy pedestrian traffic.

SIU Police Sgt. Brad Barham said the department received five or six complaints per night in the last few weeks about the noise level. Most of the calls were complaints about skateboarders at Faner Hall.

Anthony Kim, an undecided freshman, said if the police want them to stop skateboarding, signs should be posted stating skateboarding is not allowed.

"When we skate here, no one else complains but the cops," Kim said. "It's my sport, just like basketball or baseball."

Volunteers needed for Public Lands Day project

The Shawnee National Forest is asking for SIUC students and other volunteers to participate in its Public Lands Day project. The project will take place Saturday at 9 a.m. at the Shawnee National Forest.

Volunteers will help obliterate a badly eroded 1/2 mile trail that runs through the Russell Cemetery Barrens Ecological Area. The work will include creating dams and waterbars along portions of the trail.

Volunteers should show up with work clothes, boots, food and drink. After a safety session, the group will be taken to the project site.

Those interested in volunteering should meet at the Rim Rock Recreation Area parking lot. For additional information contact Becky Banker 1-800-MY-WOODS.

Web site allows students to bid for college

A new web site is offering students and their families a chance to bid on the price of a college education. The site, eCollegebid.org, made its debut last week. So far, no colleges have agreed to participate, but Tedd D. Kelly, the site's creator, hopes to have 25 to 50 colleges signed up.

Here's how the site works: After providing a variety of information — including standardized test scores, grade-point average and class rank in high school, intended major and desired geographic location — visitors to the site offer to pay a certain amount to attend college. School officials review the bid and determine whether it's a fair offer given the applicant's attributes. Any college accepting a bid promises to assemble a financial-aid package that meets all the applicant's costs for attending college.

On the Web site, Kelly explains the type of schools he's hoping the site will attract. "They are mostly private colleges that are not 'household names,'" he says. "They are, however, colleges that offer challenging academic programs of study, excellent athletic programs, and active student/social activities."

Web-based bidding might be new, but wheeling and dealing for a college education isn't. Discounts for desirable students in the form of scholarships, grants and other forms of financial aid have risen at several colleges and universities.

OUR WORD

Warning, the Strip has been taken

Farmers and pet owners know that if you confine an animal to a small space, they'll stampeed or attempt to claw their way out at all costs. If you look at the number of students spilling out onto the Strip weekend evenings, you'll notice they respond in a similar fashion when attempts are made to constrain them.

Following the logic of this phenomenon, the Carbondale City Council came up with the idea Tuesday night to stop fighting the students, and, in effect, take the Strip before students even get the chance.

The idea is to block off South Illinois Avenue to motor vehicles from Freeman Street to Cherry Street. The council believes this will prevent students from being hit by cars while they stand in the middle of the street and take away the excitement of "taking the Strip." After all, you can't take something if it's already been given to you. Once the thrill is gone, the council hopes the weekend ritual of standing in the middle of the street will go with it.

Whether or not this will work remains to be seen because council members decided not to take any definite action on the issue, even though there was lengthy discussion at their last meeting. The council planned to implement this blockade technique on a month-long experimental basis beginning this weekend.

But there's a problem. Despite Illinois Department of Transportation estimates, the construction on College Street is not complete. We know this because the road is still ripped up and the likelihood of fixing such a mess in one day is very low. This means that if South Illinois Avenue was closed, delivery services from businesses on the Strip would become impossible because of no road access to the actual places of business during the closing. As a result, nothing will change, at least this weekend.

The DAILY EGYPTIAN believes the council made the right decision to not siphon-off delivery services from these businesses. They have just as much right to make their money as community members do to patronize their establishments. But don't abandon a good idea just because the timing is bad. Once the construction on College Street is complete and businesses are able to run their delivery services, the experiment should be given a chance.

The mystique surrounding the "taking of the Strip" has baffled community leaders for a long time. When police forcefully try to prevent it, students respond with rowdy, riotous behavior. The proposed barricade plan is non-confrontational, protects students from being run over and allows for the creation of some of that neighborhood atmosphere for which community members seem to be starving. Once the construction on College Street is finished, give the experiment a try. With students having "taken the Strip" every weekend this fall semester, it's clear this problem won't just go away on its own.

I just can't let this one go, I guess. Tuesday, the Carbondale City Council decided to take no action on whether northbound Highway 51, "the Strip," will be closed on weekend nights to stem late-night destructive behavior by pedestrians.

The Strip is emblematic of a lot of problems swirling around in the University-Carbondale community. There is tension and distrust among students, the University and the city officials who are supposed to serve the entire community.

Former mayoral candidate and SIUC undergraduate Rob Taylor has suggested that Carbondale look to past solutions to solve the problems downtown. On weekends during the 1970s, the city officially closed off the Strip and transformed the area into a festival of sorts. There were free concerts, vendors selling exotic wares and roaming street performers. Families came to see the early evening attractions, had a bit to eat and went home, leaving the students to enjoy themselves. People came from surrounding areas to dine, dance and mingle. A nice co-existence of city and students, I would say.

If Carbondale officials were to institute a seasonal festival, local merchants could have the option of setting up stalls to sell food and non-alcoholic drinks (those who want alcohol could patronize the already licensed bars on the Strip). A weekly festival might open the door for local crafters, artists and artisans to start small businesses. Local bands would garner a larger audience.

Two things would have to happen to make the festival work. One, the city has to make a commitment to creating a welcoming atmosphere for both student traffic and non-student patrons. (I would say they've already made the city a pretty welcoming place for certain businesses.)

The second would require a commitment from both students and local law authorities. Harmful, destructive behavior cannot be tolerated, nor could the students expect it to be tolerated. In turn, the Carbondale police would have to stop seeing students as inherently irresponsible and a threat to all social order. Mutual respect is imperative.

City officials worry that shutting down traffic will negatively affect the businesses in the area, especially the ones who rely on carry-out and delivery clientele. These are worthy logistical concerns. I'll bet there is a way around this obstacle.

The Strip represents the kind of climate, social and educational, we have at SIUC. Tension between students and city folk, as manifested in the actions of the city council and the police, only serves to fuel SIUC's reputation for not being a serious academic institution.

Our population is diverse and interesting. Unless we as a community capitalize on the unique makeup of our city and region, we'll never be known as more than a party school.

Biking to school can truly 'end the gridlock' at SIU

DEAR EDITOR,

I truly appreciated Jeff Howard's column, "End the gridlock and ride a bike instead." I moved here from St. Louis in May to take a job on campus and have ridden my bike to work almost every day. It takes about three minutes less to bike than to drive the 1.5 miles from my home to office.

I love my morning ride. It wakes me up, gets my blood pumping and allows me to see the community in a way that I can't from the driver's seat. I can appreciate beautiful flower gardens and the changing color of the leaves instead of worrying about where I'm going to park.

It galls me to hear people complain about traffic and parking problems and then contribute to the problem themselves by driving when they could easily walk or ride a bike. In the mornings, I watch a constant stream of blue and red SIUC stickers come from my northwest-side neighborhood and drive the short distance to campus.

I moved to Carbondale in part to get away from traffic, pollution and an aggressive car-oriented mentality that is prevalent in St. Louis. I would love to see more people riding their bikes and walking to campus.

Jeff made some excellent points that I hope people will take to heart.

Get in the game and stop complaining

DEAR EDITOR,

All one ever reads in the Daily Egyptian are complaints. New international students spend nights in hotels, the old chancellor was fired without due cause, I can't get a computer, and "Oh my god, they might privatize the bookstore."

The validity of these problems is not at issue. However, it seems the Daily Egyptian and the student community are more than happy to complain about them, yet no student organization is willing to step forward and address these (and other issues) with meaningful action.

The University needs to get out of the book and trinket selling business. This is not high school anymore — higher education comes at a price, and the price at SIUC is quite reasonable, stop complaining. Are Barnes and Noble and Follet's evil, corrupt enterprises? Of course not. If these companies were to come to campus, they would still have to be competitive with the other private bookstores in town.

For argument's sake, let's assume there should be a bookstore on campus that is responsive to the students' needs first and the bottom line second.

At the University of Oregon, the Associated Student Organization runs the only bookstore in town. All money earned by the student-run bookstore goes back into the coffers of the student government. Not only does this give the students a bookstore that is responsive to their needs, it generates income for the student government, and it relieves the taxpayers of Oregon from supporting what should be a private enterprise anyway.

If the students of SIUC do not want a large private company running the bookstore, they need to do something about it. Some smart business majors should get together with the Undergraduate Student Government and the graduate student organization as well as the current bookstore management to develop a business plan that can be submitted to the University administration for consideration, along with the bids of Barnes and Noble, et al. If the plan is strong enough, the University would have to take it seriously.

A student-run bookstore could sell computers on credit to students who are waiting for a supplementary loan. Who knows, in a competitive situation, the student proposal might lose, but then again it might win — and you can only win, if you are in the game.

Costner swings another baseball movie

NATHANIEL PARK
MOVIE CRITIC

Kevin Costner makes a solid breaking pitch keeping audience members reeling from a delicate, yet potent, combination of baseball and love in Universal Pictures' "For Love of the Game."

For as long as Billy Chapel (Kevin Costner) can remember, baseball has been a part of his life. Signed as a pitcher out of high school by the Detroit Tigers, Chapel's pride swells for the Tiger organization as he endures a solid Hall of Fame-level career, which spans almost two decades with the same club.

After awaking in his New York hotel room to news of the Tigers ball club being sold, Chapel is forced to make a decision — retire or accept being traded. Chapel's choice to quit or continue to play is compounded as his feelings begin to shift and his passion moves from baseball to the woman he needs.

Jane Aubrey (Kelly Preston) is a journalist from New York City and Chapel's on-again, off-again girlfriend. The combination of having her daughter Heather (Jena Malone) at age 16 and numerous failed relationships makes Aubrey reluctant to fall for Chapel. The couple's five-year relationship is conflicting to Chapel's heart, but ultimately, it allows him to cope with an uncertain future after the game.

The film is shot during the course of one game in Yankee Stadium with Chapel on the ground for the Tigers. The use of back fill jump cuts allows the audience to see in retrospect Chapel's turbulent past five years with Aubrey and the Detroit Tigers.

"For Love of the Game" is the third film Costner entangles himself in with the theme of a romantic/baseball genre, yet the script maintains an original quality by keeping the plot realistic. Unlike "Field of Dreams" and "Bull Durham," Costner's character in "For Love of the Game" is believable. His role is never over-the-top or forced, and the emotion Costner displays after the realization of his final baseball game can be felt.

Director Sam Raimi's use of bright colors and tight camera shots in the baseball sequences pull the viewer into the game. The loud abusive rants of Yankee fans add an extra element of uneasiness to the adversity that Costner's character is forced to overcome.

With Costner's age-wreaking havoc on his future believability as a stud ballplayer, "For Love of the Game" may be his last chance to explore this type of character. "For Love of the Game" is a solid showing of what may be his final day in the sun.

"Every car in our school parking lot was blaring Lynyrd Skynyrd," Patterson said. "I was more of a punk rocker back then, and I thought I was a little too cool for that."

"But the rednecks in the parking lot had a good point."

The Drive-by Truckers play at 10 p.m. Sunday at Boo Jr. and Co., 827 1/2 E. Main St.

In promoting its two upcoming CDs, the Athens, Ga., based band, Drive-By Truckers, is starting fall 1999 with its largest national tour ever. One of the band's first tour stops will be at 10 p.m. Sunday at Boo Jr. and Co., 827 1/2 E. Main St.

A redneck rock opera titled "Betamax Guillotine" will be recorded in January and released next summer. Hood said the rock opera album will delve into the disillusion of quality in modern music. It is based on modern

Southern Rock and the influence it has given to the band — focusing especially on Lynyrd Skynyrd. "Back then (late '70s), being in a band meant something," Hood said. "Lynyrd Skynyrd came from the nowhere swamps of Florida."

"They built a band and ended up playing at festivals with bands like The Who and the Stones. It's a pretty incredible story."

Hood said that although the band has not revealed much of the rock opera, it plans to play a couple tracks from it Sunday.

Lisa Pangburn, owner of Pang Productions, said she met the band last November after its show at Hangar 9, 511 S. Illinois Ave. She scheduled the band's visit to Boo Jr. and Co., and said she is elated

'Ricky Williams: Dreadlocks to Ditka' gets tackled at Barnes and Noble

STORY BY NATHANIEL PARK

LOCAL BOOKSELLERS BARNES AND NOBLE WILL GIVE FOOTBALL FANS THE OPPORTUNITY TO MEET STEVE RICHARDSON, NOTED SPORTSWRITER AND DIRECTOR OF THE FOOTBALL WRITER'S ASSOCIATION OF AMERICA, FOR A BOOK SIGNING OF HIS LATEST WORK, "RICKY WILLIAMS: DREADLOCKS TO DITKA."

The book signing is one of the many events Barnes and Noble, 1300 E. Main St., schedules throughout the year for its customers.

Richardson is the first author to tackle the Heisman Trophy winning running back, Ricky Williams, in print. The book covers Williams' life in football beginning from his prep days in San Diego to his record-breaking career with the Texas Longhorns and his transition to the National Football League.

Richardson's sports-oriented book is an interesting change for Barnes & Noble, allowing the bookseller to appeal to a more diverse audience, Bauman said.

Community Relations Manager William Bauman said Barnes & Noble features authors regularly for book signings as a way of bringing the writer closer to the book-buying community.

"This particular book is good in context because it's in the sports arena," Bauman said. "We don't do as many sports book [signings] as we do fiction."

A book signing with Steve Richardson, author of "Ricky Williams: Dreadlocks to Ditka," is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Saturday at Barnes and Noble, 1300 E. Main St. The event is free and open to the public.

'The Phish Book' takes you Phish-ing

STORY BY ERIN FAFOGLIA

PHISH-HEADS AND NEW FANS ALIKE WILL BE ABSORBED INTO THE HUMOROUS AND SPONTANEOUS WORLD OF TREY ANASTASIO, JON FISHMAN, MIKE GORDON AND PAGE MCCONNELL IN THE FIRST, AND ONLY, AUTHORIZED PHISH BIOGRAPHY, "THE PHISH BOOK."

Written by Richard Gehr with roundtable discussions from the band, "The Phish Book" takes readers on a journey from the band's early college days in Burlington, Vt., to the icon it is known as today.

Containing more than 200 previously unpublished artwork and photography pieces from the band's archives, "The Phish Book" candidly examines a group of four improvisational artists from the East Coast.

Reading a copy of "The Phish Book" is like a combination of scanning classified information and sitting in on a therapy session. At least one paragraph per page contains jaw-dropping information. Among the dirty secrets, the band talks about amusing situations (too many to count), hijinks pulled both on and off stage (nudity, secret languages and a "Children of the Corn" gag) and what truly inspires a great number of Phish tunes (mushroom ingestion and Anastasio's mom).

The book is full of hilarious anecdotes provided by the band, but Phish also talks in depth of musical influences James Brown, The Grateful Dead and Frank Zappa.

The photography is vivid and entertaining. Vintage grade school photos of the band members and appropriate fish-lens psychedelics are scattered throughout.

The sincere discussions among the four band members clue readers into connections as musicians and companions. No member keeps a detail back, and the true human aspect of four musical symbols is refreshing.

Phish expresses the band's need to have a conversation with the audience

Who exactly is Gus Bode?

Dear Gus Bode,
Since my career here at the University, I have seen your comments plastered within the pages of the "DAILY EGYPTIAN," and to my dismay I do not know who "Gus Bode" is, why your comments appear daily or how long you have been a representative of the average student for the paper.

Pluck Gus

Gus Bode's column appears every Friday. He welcomes you to pick his brain with your mind-boggling questions.

editor@siu.edu

The avid DAILY EGYPTIAN reader may note I have not always maintained a trim figure and styled hair. In fact, I began as a simple voice, letters to the madness if you will.

My first appearance in Southern Illinois came about in 1955 after Dee Alexander and Jim Stumpf created my character. Alexander and Stumpf named me after Philip August Bode, a church janitor in Valmeyer, who wore flat, snap-billed hats and was a respectable man.

It was Charlie Clayton who gave me my front page berth at THE EGYPTIAN. Clayton, faculty adviser for the newspaper in 1956, thought my witty commentary would spice up the editorial page and provide an outlet for diverse opinions.

My first quote appeared in the DAILY EGYPTIAN April 13, 1956, at the bottom of the front page. No body or face was included, just the words "Gus Bode Says — We hear the recruiter had slim pickings this year. The grades must have been better than expected." I was simply a block of text, but through time I evolved into a manly character.

one year after I was given eyes, I was transformed into a fully animated figure, and it was at this time that I made the fatal mistake of referring to women as "chicks" and said "If God had meant women to be equal, he'd have made 'em men."

To show me the error of my ways, a group of women released a live chicken in the newsroom and flopped raw pieces of meat onto the tops of desks. I learned my lesson and began to set a few guidelines for my strategies.

I now stick to a dash of sarcasm based on current events, common sense and mature thinking. My attacks, as many call them, are directed toward actions rather than people. But truth be warned — any group or institution is fair game. I stray far from religion or personal tragedy, but I do recall a moment of silence when the Pyramid fires of 1995 left a devastating wound on my heart.

For all of you intrigued to know more about who I am, remember, 35 years of experience allows me insightful knowledge of the University and its surroundings.

Department, said his 6 p.m. history course is often disrupted by the skateboarders. He said the last couple of weeks have been the worst.

"I think they know not to skateboard there because the patrol tells them not to," Snyder said.

"But that seems to be the whole part of that culture and the skateboarding slacker mentality — to ignore authority."

Snyder said he called the SIU Police Department Wednesday after his class endured the racket skateboarders were causing. Snyder's classroom is located above the Faner Hall breezeway.

Although SIU police responded to numerous complaints in the last few weeks, the slaters are often gone by the time they arrive.

The ones who are caught, however, are warned or written up to Student Judicial Affairs.

Barham said there was a problem with skateboarding on campus about four or five years ago, but he does not know why it is picking up again now.

Faner Hall and Morris Library are the two most popular skateboarding areas.

Faner Hall is even featured in a website, www.skater.net, dedicated to the most popular skateboarding areas in the nation.

Included in one website user's description of Faner Hall is, "waxed ledges, low rails, steps, high rails, watch out for the Saluki Patrol!"

While SIUC students should be aware of the skateboarding regulations, SIU Police officials say part of the problem is that high school students are not aware of the regulations.

"It's not that we hate skateboarders, but we're getting complaints," Barham said. "We don't care if people use skateboards — just use them responsibly."

Meanwhile, Snyder said teachers and professors must endure the noise until skateboarders read the regulations.

"There's nothing to do," Snyder said. "You just try to ignore it and go on."

Filter

Title Of Record

Four years after the release of the platinum-selling debut album — "Short Bus," Filter makes a solid return to the fold with its sophomore effort "Title Of Record."

Filter is the brainchild of Richard Patrick, former guitarist for Nine Inch Nails, and has been a dominate force in the industrial metal genre.

The combination of heavy low-end guitar and bass lines, digital programming and Patrick's smooth vocal arrangements have created a sound similar bands like Orgy and Powerman 5000 have tried desperately to mimic.

A 37-second introduction of droning keyboard and guitar welcomes listeners into "Sand" (Track 1). The second cut, "Welcome To The Fold," kicks the album into high gear.

An anthem for anti-establishment movements everywhere, "Welcome To The Fold" is the grittiest, down-and-dirty rock Filter has ever produced.

Patrick and company attack the cut with the signature power that Filter fans are accustomed too.

The album keeps its focus as "Captain Bligh" (Track 3) continues to deliver the goods. The title alludes to the failed relationship between Patrick and Brian Liesegang, original co-founder of Filter.

The chorus of "Captain Bligh" hints at the remorse Patrick's has as he sings of the guilt he feels toward his rocky past.

"It's Gonna Kill Me" fills the fourth spot on the record and uses a solid combination of electronic programming and driving guitars. The hook has a smooth melody that pulls the segmented and programmed verses together.

"Title Of Record," four years in the making, is worth the wait. The sequel to the debut album, "Short Bus," is more refined and shows signs of a band on the rise.

Richard Patrick is convincing playing the rock star, a feat which is difficult to accomplish these days with the multitude of no-talent acts cluttering the radio. "Title Of Record" pulls Filter up by the boot straps and makes it a true contender in the modern rock arena.

Manage your time over the internet

KENDRA THORSON
DAILY EGYPTIAN

A lonely student finds himself at a quiet table in Morris Library with an enormous stack of books staring at him. Instead of studying through the semester, he waited until the night before his first exam to hit the books.

The Internet offers a number of websites to help college students, administrators and business people manage their time more effectively.

Instead of fretting the night before a test or lecture, students and professors alike may be able to sit back and prepare for challenges in a more relaxing way.

Time management for university students

www.yorku.ca/admin/col/tp/tm/time.html

This site offers students a chance to prioritize and minimize their work loads by giving tips on how to set goals, time perspectives and planning.

Time Management for University Students suggests a summary of time management principles. These include motivation, problem areas, reading effectiveness, and a section on how to gain and strengthen a better memory.

The site is geared toward the typical college student dealing with issues such as studying and lengthy papers. The website's philosophy may help the mediocre college student reach academic success.

Time management and personal productivity seminars

www.balancerime.com

Time management and personal productivity seminars are geared toward the benefits of time management through assistance and coaching.

Users may retrieve the schedule of seminars and register through the site. The Productivity Institute also offers on-site seminars and keynotes.

The site also offers a stress test for those who feel rundown and burned out. The test asks a series of questions the user should answer truthfully. After finishing the test, the site calculates the user's score and gives suggestions if stress levels are too high.

This site focuses on those in the business world, but may be helpful for students as well.

Improve your studying skills

www.unc.edu/depts/uc/TenTraps.html

Improving Studying Skills informs students of 10 traps of studying, helps students recognize and maintain good study habits and provides tips to prepare for exams.

The information base also gives students eight tips on what to study and information on when to take study breaks. The site also suggests studying with a friend and more.

Next, the site presents tips on preparing for exams. The web page explains the steps needed for how to get the grades from the day the exam is announced to the stress which factors into any major test.

Finally, the site issues the 10 traps of studying. The 10 traps also involve comprehending study material, retaining information and studying in bed.

Improving Study Skills offers a wide variety of common college situations. A student may easily identify with this site and find it beneficial.

Personal counseling services and resources

- Tactics for Managing Stress and Anxiety

www.coun.uvic.ca/personal/stress.html

Along with tests comes stress and possibly anxiety. Personal Counseling Services and Resources offers a solution to this plague by giving students a bit of web counseling.

Many students have experienced some kind of anxiety in their academic careers. This site helps to identify the problem of test anxiety and offer possible solutions.

The site submits a section on goal setting and anticipatory planning of goals. The user is given information on how to put tasks into an order of importance and how to successfully execute those tasks.

This site helps the user to realize they are not alone in the test-taking world, and others experience stress too.

mental standards and insurance.

Wilson is also planning to retire in the near future.

Some of the financial duties of Wilson's old position have shifted to Elaine Hyden, vice president for financial services.

Hyden's position, which was formerly vice president for planning and budgeting, was expanded and renamed in light of her expanded responsibilities.

Hyden oversaw the operating budget for SIU in her former position, which is the money the system spends on vital functions at the SIU campuses, such as salaries, utilities and library materials. Now, Hyden will also supervise the budgeting for SIU capital projects such as deferred maintenance and new construction.

Corey Bradford, budget coordinator and Hyden's assistant, also has expanded duties, and both received pay increases for the additional responsibilities they now have. Hyden's salary is now $137,844, a 16 percent increase, and Bradford's annual pay is $65,280, an 18 percent increase.

The planned retirements in the office aided the restructuring process, Kaiser said, and will allow for an easier transition once Dyer and Wilson retire.

plans to retire in the near future.

"It's a better fit for him personally, and it works well for the University in bringing some attention to our East St. Louis Center," Kaiser said.

The restructuring also eliminated the vice president for University Services position, formerly Don Wilson's post. Wilson is now the executive director for risk management and compliance, which includes many of his former duties involving University compliance with govern-

Eimanishi said he often misses his wife and son. The distance allows only for long phone calls and lengthy letters.

"I have a phone so I make many phone calls home," Eimanishi said.

Eimanishi made the decision to change his drawing techniques nearly 10 years ago. The inspiration for the change, from traditional Japanese art to placing the focus on nature, was brought on by a workshop and a love for the outdoors.

"When I was in the U.S. I took a drawing class," he said. "When I was drawing I learned about techniques and how I could express energy."

"I realized that I was interested in nature. I have to explain more in nature, so I draw trees."

"They're very energetic and funny on stage," Pangburn said.

"Their music goes beyond new country hits."

"It's like mixing the Misfits with Willie Nelson and David Allan Coe."

The band also is finishing the recording of a live album titled, "Alabama Asswhoopin'" to be released at the beginning of the year.

Drive-By Truckers released the CD "Pizza Deliverance" in June. Hood said people think the band is jumping the gun by releasing three albums so close in date, but the Truckers could not resist producing languages.

The spectacle and confusion of Phish concerts are explained by each band member.

Phish discusses its struggle opposite most musicians — to capture live performances into studio recordings.

Peering into Eimanishi's office, Thomas expressed his admiration for the porcelain artist. Thomas said he frequently sees Eimanishi in the office after all other artists have gone home.

"He is dedicated," Thomas said. "It is wonderful. The more one works, the more successful he becomes."

Thomas said he would describe Eimanishi as diverse and extremely skilled in his field.

"He is not just a potter or a painter," he said. "He uses his work as a canvas."

Eimanishi, a lover of the outdoors, plans to step outside his clay covered studio shortly after the exhibition to gain further appreciation for the natural art he loves.

"I'm always in the studio," Eimanishi said. "After my show I think I want to try going outside."

"I've been writing songs for over 25 years," Hood said.

"With the two other songwriters in the band, we've got over 3,000 songs written."

"We're eager to get them out there."

Three members of the Drive-By Truckers come from Muscle Shoals, Ala., where Hood said many low-budget studios produced big hits in the '60s.

"Back in the '60s, musicians like Aretha Franklin and Percy Sledge were making records at studios in my home town," Hood said.

The times have changed, and Athens, Ga., now provides the band with a positive musical atmosphere, Hood said.

"There's a different mind set in Muscle Shoals now," he said:

Not 100 percent, Petrutiu leads Salukis to Indiana

Hampered by flu, sophomore tennis player still hopes for positive outcome in Bloomington

PAUL WLEKUNSKI
DAILY EGYPTIAN

The Intercollegiate Tennis Association individual rankings polls are not empathetic by any means. You win, you get ranked. You lose, and you are bumped out of the rankings.

A player's health is not taken into consideration when determining rankings. That's why SIU sophomore tennis player Simora Petrutiu, who is ranked 100th in the nation and 13th in the region, will be battling more than just her opponents at this weekend's tournament at Indiana University in Bloomington, Ind.

Petrutiu suffered an uncharacteristic 2-2 singles mark last weekend in the Saluki Invitational, but a touch of the flu hampered her usual dominant game.

"I think [she feels] better, but still not 100 percent," Auld said about Petrutiu's health. "This is going to be like a mini-regional tournament, especially with Notre Dame and Marquette there, but it's going to be a really tough tournament."

The Salukis will not only have to repeat their performance of a year ago, but will need to exceed that to get an early start at this season's primary objective — to earn regional recognition via the ITA regional rankings.

The goal has hinged on the success of the Salukis' top player, Petrutiu. She was ranked as high as 41st in the nation giving the Salukis a glimpse of the national spotlight. Petrutiu is clearly in the driver's seat to not only shine the light on herself, but on her team as well.

"I couldn't move or run last weekend, and that's why I couldn't play well last weekend," Petrutiu said. "I'm feeling better, but I'm not in the shape that I should be."

Petrutiu will not have much time to get in shape, as her Saluki team faces nationally ranked Notre Dame (12), the University of Marquette (26) and the University of Kansas (36) this weekend.

HIT THE COURT

The SIU women's team travels to Indiana University in Bloomington, Ind., for a tournament that features three of the nation's top-100 teams as ranked by the Intercollegiate Tennis Association.

"I don't like to focus on that," Auld said about Petrutiu's opportunity to climb the ITA rankings individually, and with sophomore teammate Pamela Floro. Together, Petrutiu and Floro combined talents resulting in a first-place finish at last year's tournament.

"I definitely don't want them to go in with that pressure," Auld said. "They're still unknown. It's still just a good, strong tournament. But they kind of proved themselves, and they've got the respect now. It's just going and playing really solid tennis again."

NFC Central coaches make history

DON BANKS
KNIGHT-RIDDER NEWSPAPERS

ST. PAUL, MINN. — Whatever the outcome of Sunday's Vikings-Packers game at Green Bay's Lambeau Field, history will be in the offing. A quiet sort of history. The kind better left noted rather than trumpeted, but history nonetheless.

For the first time in the 80-year existence of the National Football League, a game will be played in which five of the six top-ranking coaches involved are African-American: Vikings head coach Dennis Green and his offensive coordinator, Ray Sherman, as well as first-year Packers head coach Ray Rhodes and his two coordinators, Sherman Lewis on offense and Emmitt Thomas on defense.

For a league that has taken some well-deserved hits in recent years on the topic of minority hiring among its head-coaching ranks, Sunday's sideline majority in terms of African-American decision-makers is a nice twist.

this season, but Barr has attained the most comfort from Noel's presence.

"I think it's very important this year, because we are so young, and we're not having a good season like we're accustomed to having," Barr said.

"It makes things a lot easier for me just to know I have her support out there as a leader."

The Salukis and Chicago State will have one thing in common when they meet Saturday: both recently snapped losing streaks.

SIU lost eight straight matches to start the season, but that is nothing compared to the Cougars' woeful streak.

Chicago State snapped its NCAA record 159-match losing streak.

The Cougars have not won since Oct. 5, 1993, but defeating Sacred Heart University, 3-2, Sept. 18, ended the streak.

Despite the Cougars lack of success over much of this decade, Locke wants to remain focused on her young players' continuing to gain confidence and working on all phases of their game.

"I'm not expecting any more; I'm just expecting consistency," Locke said.

Softball team prepares to play in National Invitational

CO-NEY CUSICK
DAILY EGYPTIAN

The SIU softball team is taking part in a three-step program this fall. With two of the steps completed, the most daunting task remains.

The Salukis (9-1) will play in the National Invitational Championship today through Sunday in Moline to finish the fall season, or that third step.

"There was our tournament, then the Bradley Invitational was a little tougher, and now the NIC is going to be tougher than that," Saluki head coach Kerri Blaylock said of the three fall tournaments.

The Salukis finished 5-0 in the Saluki Invitational Sept. 11 and 12 and went 4-1 at the Bradley Invitational last weekend in Orland Park.

The Salukis are eager to face the challenge of playing against a core of more talented teams and pitchers.

The NIC, which the Salukis won last season, has six pools with three teams in each pool.

After pool play, they split up into three brackets: gold, silver and bronze for the first, second and third place finishers of each pool.

The Salukis are in Pool A with the University of Iowa and Eastern Illinois University.

Last year, the tournament was single elimination, but Blaylock is unsure of whether the change will affect her squad.

"I don't know if [the brackets] will be better or worse," Blaylock said. "When you're facing someone in your pool like Iowa, to get first place you're going to have to go 2-0. That means [we have to] beat Iowa and Eastern [Illinois]."

To compete with some of the best schools in the Midwest, the Salukis will rely on their solid pitching staff, which has yielded only six earned runs in 67 innings this fall (0.63 team ERA).

Both senior pitcher Carisa Winters (4-1) and freshman hurler Katie Kloss (2-0) have unblemished ERAs after two tournaments. Junior Erin Stremsterfer (2-0) has allowed only one earned run, while senior Tracy Remspecher (1-0) also posts a solid 3.09 ERA and has yet to walk a batter after 11.1 innings.

The Saluki bats are also contributing for Blaylock this fall. Stremsterfer has hit everything in sight as her .559 avg. (19-34) speaks for itself.

SWING

• The SIU softball team will compete at the National Invitational Championship today through Sunday in Moline.

Sophomore catcher Andrea Harris .353 avg. (6-17) and junior center fielder Marla Viehaus .348 (8-23) have also provided some pop with the bat.

Harris, who was unable to swing a bat all summer after shoulder surgery in May, credited first-year assistant coach Charles "Buddy" Foster for her fall performance.

"He focused on different parts of my hitting, and that's really helped me," Harris said. "I'm totally thinking in a different way going to the plate."

Harris' boost of confidence should play a factor this weekend when her offensive skills will be tested against some of the better pitchers in the Midwest region.

"The pitching up there is going to be a big step up [from previous fall tournaments]," Harris said. "We're not looking at it as a problem; we just look at it as an opportunity to be able to adjust to new pitching."

Blaylock would like to finish the fall season on a promising note, and that third step could be completed with a shot at the gold.

"I would love to be in the gold bracket, but if we're not, the silver bracket is going to be tough too, because you figure the second place teams out of some of those pools are going to be outstanding," Blaylock said.

FOOTBALL NOTES

SOUTHERN ILLINOIS:

• The Salukis are hoping to buck an ominous historical trend, as SIU is 9-32 versus ranked conference opponents.

• The SIU offense has converted 80 percent of their trips inside the opponents 20 yard line, with 10 touchdowns and six field goals in 20 attempts.

• Saluki junior defensive tackle Tavita Tovia hopes to continue his good work, corning off the Eastern game in which he registered six tackles, a sack, a tackle for a loss and two hurries.

• Freshman kicker Scott Everhart has been solid, going 6-for-8 on field goals and 13-for-14 on extra points.

• With a catch against the Panthers, Craig will have a reception in 31 straight games — two away from the all-time Gateway record of 33.

• A pair of linebackers — Marvin Mullins and Luther Claxton — lead SIU in tackles with 20 apiece.

NORTHERN IOWA:

• UNI has set the standard for excellence in the Gateway, as the Panthers are 66-16 in league games and 122-49-1 overall since they entered the league in 1985.

• The Panthers have been particularly tough to beat in the UNI-Dome, recording a dominating 35-5 mark.

• UNI will have revenge on its mind, as SIU upset the then-No. 6 Panthers 27-20 last season in Carbondale.

• Wide receiver Mike Furry fractured his left shoulder scapula during a 36-21 UNI win over I-A Ohio University Sept. 11, but has recovered quickly and is ready for action.

• Third-year Panther coach Mike Dunbar has led his first two years to 7-4 records, but hopes this year's squad will be the one to return UNI to its customary post-season berth.
