Stealth bombers slashed by Cheney

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Defense Secretary Dick Cheney, responding to reduced threats of war and congressional demands for less defense spending, said Thursday he is cutting the B-2 stealth bomber program from 132 to 75 planes.

Cheney, disclosing a major review of aircraft programs, said orders for C-17 cargo plane will be reduced from 210 to 120, a new Navy attack plane will be cut back, and a new Air Force fighter and its Navy version will be stalled for two years.

His presentation on both sides of Capitol Hill was an attempt to finish plans for a 2 percent reduction in defense spending and to keep the Pentagon from being frozen out of the debate on its own 1991 budget as congressional calls intensify for deeper defense cuts.

While Cheney's presentations won praise, Chairman Les Aspin, D-Wis., of the House Armed Services Committee noted that scaling back programs may not be enough.

"I think it's very unlikely that we're going to do the kind of budget he's projecting," said Aspin.

Cheney said 75 stealth bombers, designed to escape radar detection, were enough for two wings of 30 each, plus spares for training, which he said were as few B-2s as could be built and still have a credible combat capability.

He said the Navy's A-12 program is being cut because the Marine Corps will not get the plane, and the estimate of 620 planes, instead of the planned 828, is based on there being 12 aircraft carriers. He emphasized, however, he has not decided to cut the 14-carrier fleet back to 12.

Cheney said production of the new Air Force advanced tactical fighter, the ATF, will not begin until 1996, two years later than planned, and the Navy version will not start until the year 2000, also two years late.

Because the Air Force of the future will be smaller, Cheney said, it is possible he will recommend in future budgets reducing orders for the ATF from the 750 now contemplated.

Cheney said for fiscal 1991 his cuts would save $2.4 billion, and through 1997 the total would be about $34 billion or $35 billion.

Congress is talking about cutting at least $6 billion in actual spending from the $303 billion Cheney has asked for. It is also considering cutting $20 billion or more in long-term spending authority.

New options open to harassed people

By Rob Coné

It may start out subtle and then escalate or it may be a blatant exchange, bartering sex for grades or promotions.

The warning signs are personal and there are virtually no methods available to predict who will be involved or when it will happen.

"The only thing that would make sexual harassment easy to prove is if we have a steady stream of complaints and witnesses," said William Capie, SIU-C executive director of personnel and labor relations. "That doesn't usually happen," he added saying that most harassment incidents are one-on-one.

Like a trial, the burden of proof lies with the complainant. But unlike a legal proceeding, victims have several alternatives at their disposal to halt the harasser's behavior.

Sue A. Davis, one of the personnel office's key managers of the University's sexual harassment policy, said that before March 1989 the campus population had only two avenues: the ombudsman and affirmative action offices, to get information or to try to resolve their predicament. Now, Davis said, there are six additional information centers on campus.

"Education is the key component to our sexual harassment program," Capie said. He said in the first year since the program began, more than 2,000 SIU-C employees and students have been made aware of how to protect themselves in case they're ever confronted.

Davis said the University's proactive approach is now an integral part of new student orientations, adding that this year's freshman class was the first group of stu-

Sproule drops out of trustee election

By Richard Hund
Staff Writer

The ballots for the student trustee re-election on Tuesday will contain one less name than the April 11 ballots.

Previous candidate Lisa Sproule said she submitted a written request Thursday to the Office of Student Affairs to drop out of the race. She said one factor for her decision involved time restrictions in the immediacy of a new election.

"I decided that I didn't have time to prepare for another election," Sproule said. She said with only two weeks of school her schedule was "getting down to the wire."

She also said she will throw all her support toward candidate Craig Jackson and assist him in any way she can.

"I will be helping out with his (Jackson's) campaign," Sproule said. "And if Craig were to get elected, I would be working very closely with him."

"Just because I'm stepping down, that doesn't mean I won't be involved," she said.

Jackson said he feels appreciative of Sproule's support.

"For her to give me that vote of confidence, that shows a lot about her and it shows a lot about me too," he said.

He also said the focus of the election has changed with just two candidates running because voters can look at each person easier.

Illinois toxic emissions down in '88

By Phil Pearson

More than 348 million pounds of toxic chemicals were released into the Illinois environment in 1988, according to a recently released report from the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency.

The Annual Toxic Chemical Report reported that 348,312,021 pounds of toxic chemicals were released by 1,174 facilities throughout the state. Aluminum oxide was the year's most commonly released chemical with 84.4 million pounds, 24 percent of total releases. Hydrochloric acid made up 9 percent of all releases, with a total of 30.8 million pounds released.

According to the report, a total of 805,513 pounds of chemicals were released from the four Jackson County facilities. A county by county report will be released next week, said Will Flower, spokesman for the air pollution control department at the IEPA. The four facilities will be named in that report, he said.

Cook County had the highest figure with more than 105 million pounds released and Ford County, in east-central Illinois, was at the bottom of the list with 509 pounds released.

Flower said the figure for 1988 is down from 440 million pounds in 1987, but, one chemical, sodium sulfate, was deemed to be of little health risk and removed

Thompson releases roads plan

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — The state should spend $5.7 billion in the next five years on highways and bridges in Illinois, with an emphasis on improving existing roads instead of building new ones, Gov. James R. Thompson said Thursday.

The governor said his proposal for fiscal 1991-95 offers something for every region of the state and fulfills the highway commitments made during his 13 years in office.

"The Thompson administration has repaired or maintained two-thirds of the entire highway system or bridge system in Illinois," the governor said. "Most importantly, we've ended political cynicism about transportation."

Salukis race past Murray State 9-6

By Greg Scott
Staff Writer

MURRAY, Ky. — The Saluki baseball team showed why it is ranked 12th in the nation.

SIU-C had to come from behind to defeat a pesky Murray State team 9-6 Thursday at Murray.

The Racers, who have lost seven consecutive games, scored five runs in the bottom of the sixth inning and had a 6-2 advantage.

"We came out lackadaisical and Murray jumped out on top," Saluki coach Richard "Itchy" Jones said. "Everybody is going to try hard to beat you — especially if you're ranked and they're struggling."

The Salukis (34-8) rallied for seven runs in the last three innings to avoid an upset.

Murray State fell to 13-23.

Dale Meyer (5-1) picked up the victory in relief for SIU-C. In 1 1/3 innings pitched, Meyer didn't allow a run and gave up just one hit.

Al Levine shut out Murray in the final two innings and picked up his 11th save of the season. Levine struck out three batters.

Jones is running out of superlatives to describe his ace reliever. "What can you say about Al Levine?" Jones said. "He is just a saver in the late innings."

Rueter yielded only two runs and two hits through the first six innings. He retired 10 consecutive batters before Brad Hollenkamp led off the seventh with a single.

Hollenkamp's single brought the SIU-C lineup to life. Ed Janke singled and Boyd Manne walked to load the bases.

After Rueter struck out Derek Shelton and Mike Kirkpatrick, Jeff Nelson came off the bench to deliver a two-out pinch-hit single scoring Hollenkamp and Janke. The Salukis added another run in the inning and trailed only 6-5.

SIU-C completed its comeback in the eighth. Dave Wrona led off with a double to right center chasing Rueter from the game. Wrona eventually scored on a wild pitch.

Murray reliever Gary Glidewell (2-6) walked Tim Davis and Hollenkamp singled to load the bases.

After Glidewell struck out the next two batters, pinch hitter Matt Giegling delivered a clutch two-run double to right center giving the Salukis an 8-6 lead.

Giegling, who platoons with Shelton behind the plate, says the Salukis keep their poise in tough situations.

Auld's team falls to WSU in Charleston

By Peter Zalewski
Staff Writer

The women's tennis team and coach Judy Auld have not had much luck the last two years in the Gateway Conference Tournament because of injuries. The streak continued Thursday in Charleston.

Last April, the Salukis were one of the favorites for a league title, but injuries to a pair of standouts before the tourney resulted in a sixth-place finish.

"It's all so frustrating," Auld said. "If we were healthy, we would be a top contender. Just once, we'd like to go in at full strength, play our best tennis, and win or lose."

The Salukis were seeded fifth in the ten-team tourney. The seed matched the Salukis against No. 4 seed Wichita State.

For the second time this season, the Salukis lost to the Shockers 5-1 without even needing doubles play. The loss moved the Salukis into the losing bracket of the tourney. The Dawgs are scheduled to play Bradley at 8 a.m. today.

Colleen VanDenHeever defeated Missy Jeffrey in the No. 1 position in straight sets 6-4, 6-4. Jeffrey was forced into the higher position from her No. 2 spot because of Beth Boardman's injury.

Boardman had been the team's No. 1 singles player throughout the season. She finished her season two weeks ago because of a strained ligament in her knee.

The only SIU-C singles-match victory went to No. 4 Michele Toye. She won in straight sets 6-1, 6-1, over Jill Jackard.

The first confrontation also ended in a 5-1 loss to WSU April 13 in St. Louis. The Salukis defaulted the No. 6 position because of a lack of players.

Track team to host own invite

By Peter Zalewski
Staff Writer

The Saluki Invitational Saturday will feature 15 men's track teams from around the country. The meet originally was an exclusive women's-team invitational before the uniting three years ago.

SIU-C coach Bill Cornell said each team will be represented in most events.

There will be 25 races in the Saluki Invitational, the first starting at 9:45 a.m. with the male/female 10,000-meter run. The first jumping event is scheduled for 11 a.m., while the field athletes will start at 9 a.m. in the open area south of the University Courts.

Cornell said the team is starting to practice better because of recent success.

"When you have good performances the practices come easier," Cornell said. "When you see results from your work it makes the work a whole lot easier."

The confident Salukis could be caught by surprise from the competition.

"Naturally we're hoping to have some good individual performances," Cornell said, "but I have to admit that we're not placing a great deal of importance to Conference championships are what college softball is all about and this weekend's action could very well determine the Gateway Conference outcome.

The Saluki softball team, 10-0 in the conference, travels to Western Illinois and Bradley this weekend, hoping to improve its winning streak to 20 games. The 25-6 Dawgs are on the verge of conquering their 30th win to tie the school season record.

Western won't play dead for the Salukis, though. The preseason conference favorite Westerwinds are 24-12 overall and 5-1 in Gateway Conference play. They are on a seven-game winning streak.

The Salukis are 14-30 lifetime against Western and dropped two to the Westerwinds last year, 11-3 and 4-1.

"Western is a legitimate preseason pick," Brechtelsbauer said. "They're an excellent ballclub. They've got some pitching strength coming back. They're a good hitting ballclub and their defense is one of the best in the country. We'll have to earn our victories, they won't give anything away."

"Western doesn't beat themselves. We'll have to play head-up ball from the first pitch to the last pitch."

Western is led by senior shortstop Jenn Jackson, who sports a .376 batting average. Jackson is a preseason all-Gateway pick.

Saturday the Dawgs battle Bradley, a team that is struggling with a 9-20-1 overall record and an 0-4 mark in the Gateway. The Salukis came from behind to beat the Braves 3-2 in the Saluki

Softball Salukis gain first-ever Top 20 ranking

For the first time in the history of SIU-C softball, the Salukis are ranked in the Top 20 in the NCAA Division I Softball Poll. The Salukis share the 18th spot with Oregon as each team received 26 votes.

"We're really excited to be in the rankings," SIU-C coach Kay Brechtelsbauer said. "Our team has worked hard. We're having a good season and I feel we're deserving."

The Salukis post a 29-6 record and are in the midst of a 16-game winning streak.

The Salukis received national recognition partially because of their success against other ranked teams.

The Dawgs upset Connecticut and Louisiana Tech and they split with Missouri and Indiana.

"We've won against some ranked teams this spring," Brechtelsbauer said. "It's exciting for our program and our University. We'll just keep playing the way we have and take things one at a time. We want to keep things in perspective but if we want to stay in the poll we'll have to keep winning."

The Salukis are on a trip this weekend to battle conference foes Western Illinois and Bradley. Tuesday the Dawgs are pitted against Austin Peay.

Court awards America's Cup to San Diego club

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — New York's highest court Thursday awarded the United States the prestigious 1988 America's Cup, ruling the San Diego Yacht Club did not cheat by entering a catamaran against New Zealand.

The Court of Appeals ruled 5-2 the 1887 deed establishing the America's Cup did not require yachts entering the contest to be equally matched.

The court's sole yachtsman was one dissenter.

The decision ended a stormy dispute between the San Diego Yacht Club and the Mercury Bay Boat Club of New Zealand — losers of the race — over whether the United States entry cheated to win the oldest trophy in all of sports.

"Nowhere in the deed of gift have the donors (of the Cup) expressed an intention to prohibit the use of multihull vessels or to require the defender of the Cup to race a vessel of the same type as the vessel to be used by the challenger," the court ruled in a 55-page decision.

"Such a requirement that the vessels be 'evenly matched' is antithetical to the consent provisions of the deed," the court said.

The decision clears the way for a multinational America's Cup race off California in May 1992, said Tom Mitchell, spokesman for the America's Cup Organizing Committee.

Tom Ehman, general manager of the America's Cup Organizing Committee, said at a news conference in San Diego that challengers would be allowed to enter the 1992 event through May 26.

Ehman said there were 14 challengers from seven nations committed with another seven prospective challengers, including two from New Zealand. He said 10 prospective defenders were also expected.

"We have learned a lot about how not to do it and out of this have come the rules that will prevent this from ever happening again," Ehman said.

Officials of the San Diego Yacht Club were jubilant at the court decision.

"We were not happy with the challenge by (New Zealand's Michael) Fay obviously," said Vice Commodore Sandy Purdon, "but I think this now goes in the record book as a correct action that San Diego took."

"We are absolutely delighted," said Harold Tyler, attorney for the San Diego Yacht Club.

Fay, organizer of New Zealand's challenge, said of the ruling, "We accept it. Unfortunately, we did not win the day."

"It's time to move forward. We look forward to competing off Point Loma" in San Diego where the 1992 race will be held.

Controversy mars Chamorro's first day as president

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — President Violeta Chamorro's decision to name her vanquished opponent's brother to lead the armed forces angered political allies Thursday and Contra rebel leaders said they would "wait and see" whether to abide by their disarmament agreement. Anti-Sandinistas within the National Opposition Union (UNO) have opposed retaining Humberto Ortega, brother of former President Daniel Ortega, saying it would give the Sandinistas too much control over the largely Sandinista army.

Frat rolls keg for Special Olympics

St. Louis to Carbondale—the hard way

By Wayne Wallace
Staff Writer

Anyone who would go to St. Louis for a keg and then roll it 112 miles back home to Carbondale, running every step of the way, is either desperately thirsty or the biggest bunthead on the face of the earth.

Members of the Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity were neither drunk nor crazy Wednesday night when they rolled a keg down I-57 to raise money for Special Olympics.

Fourteen TKE fraternity brothers started their long journey at 8 p.m. Wednesday on the Martin Luther King Jr. Bridge in St. Louis and rolled into Carbondale at 11:30 a.m. Thursday, in time to present their keg roll donations to Special Olympics coordinators during the olympic games at McAndrew Stadium.

"This is the ninth year we've done it," said John Kutsch, keg roll chairman and a senior in industrial design.

"It took 14 hours and 14 of us to do it," Kutsch added, noting that the TKE runners ran in shifts, one at a time, pushing an empty 30-pound keg in front of them.

"Each runner ran two miles at a time," he said. "Most of them ran four or five times during the trip. I was driving so I only ran twice."

"It's a love-hate kind of thing," Kutsch said. "It gets really tiring, but it's something you can brag about later, and say, 'I rolled a keg from St. Louis to Carbondale.'"

"No one else does anything like it," he said. "We never have any trouble getting guys to run."

"We took two vans," Kutsch

—John Kutsch

said. "The runner is sandwiched between the lead van and chase van. There's a sign, 'Caution: Runner,' on the chase van."

Kutsch said the keg roll raised nearly $300 for Special Olympics. Tau Kappa Epsilon has donated nearly $5,000 to charity over the past nine years, he added.

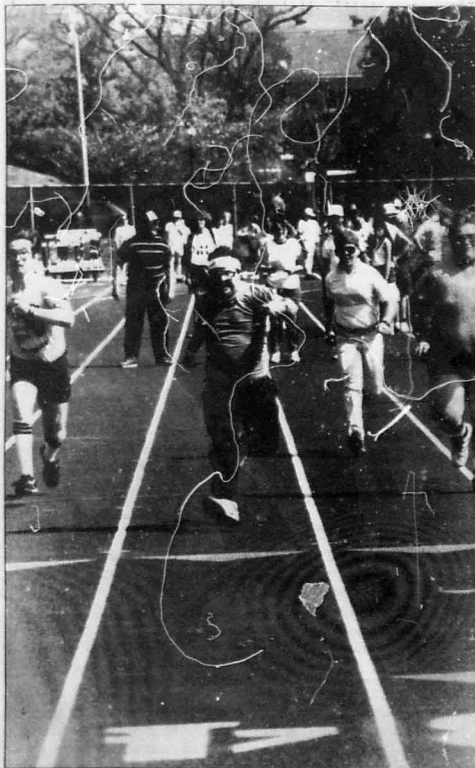

"For the past eight years, our national chapter had us donate the money to St. Jude's. This year they told us we were giving to Special Olympics, which is great because we have that (at SIU-C), too," he said.

"We're not making any money off this," Kutsch said. "In fact, we're losing money. All money goes to Special Olympics."

Another major change in the structure of the keg roll is funding, Kutsch said. Because of the administration's alcohol ban on campus, beer distributors were not allowed to sponsor the keg roll.

"We only got permission from the University a week and a half ago for us to do this," Kutsch said.

"We went around to every business on the strip and got them to donate a flat fee," he said.

Regatta fun commences Saturday

Michelle R. Walker
Staff Writer

The 17th Annual Great Cardboard Boat Regatta plunges off from the shores of Campus Lake Saturday at noon.

The event, which originated in 1974 as part of a class design project, includes more than 150 participants this year.

Last year, 15,000 observers attended the event. Richard Archer, assistant professor and creator of the race, is optimistic about this year's turnout.

"If the weather's good we'll see a lot more," he said.

Cable Network News will broadcast along with Nippon, a Japanese sports network that will re-broadcast the event in Japan.

Boats from as far away as Oklahoma and Michigan will take part in the event.

Boats fit into one of three categories. Class I is for boats made entirely of corrugated cardboard except the oars and paddles. Class II boats are propelled by all other devices such as sails and paddlewheels. Class III is for the spectator who turns participant and uses a secret boat building kit available at the regatta.

McDonald's and the Environment

From the Managers and Crew at your Carbondale McDonald's

Dear McDonald's Customer:

McDonald's has always been committed to environmentally sound business policies. In fact, our commitment goes way back to day one - when our founder, Ray Kroc, would pick up litter in the parking lot of his first McDonald's. And he always made sure crew members went on a daily neighborhood litter patrol.

Building on this tradition, McDonald's continues to conduct its business in a manner that respects the environment, and we base our policies and procedures on the most sound environmental information available.

McDonald's business is hamburgers. We are not experts on the environment. And that is why we continually consult with environmental experts and the scientific community to ensure that we have the best information possible upon which to base our decisions.

McDonald's prides itself on being an industry leader and responsible community citizen, and this ad is intended to let you and your family know where McDonald's stands on important environmental concerns such as managing solid waste, protecting tropical rain forests and preventing ozone depletion. We're proud of our initiatives in these areas - proud because it's a record of action and leadership, and a continuing commitment to do what's right to make this world a better, healthier place for all our families.

McDonald's Packaging

The packaging McDonald's uses today is the result of years of study. Up until the mid-1970s, we used paper and paperboard packaging for all of our products. But because of serious concerns at that time from environmentalists about the destruction of trees, water pollution and the high use of energy involved in manufacturing paper, we began to re-evaluate our paper packaging choice.

In 1976, we commissioned the Stanford Research Institute (SRI) to do an environmental impact study comparing paperboard packaging to polystyrene. The study concluded that, considering all aspects, including manufacturing through disposal, polystyrene may, in fact, be superior to paper from an environmental standpoint. And that's even more true today with the pioneering efforts that have been made in polystyrene recycling. When using paper or paperboard for food use, it is necessarily coated, which makes it a "mixed material" and therefore virtually unrecyclable. Polystyrene, however, is following in the footsteps of highly recyclable materials such as glass and aluminum. It is the only foodservice packaging available that is 100% recyclable and is being recycled.

McDonald's uses polystyrene foam packaging for the same reason: hospitals, schools, grocery stores and other restaurants. It provides the safest, most sanitary, portable way to serve hot, fresh food. The manufacture of polystyrene is an energy-efficient process that is safe for the environment. And McDonald's polystyrene foam packaging is made without fully halogenated chlorofluorocarbons (CFCs). And when disposed of, polystyrene can be recycled and is completely safe in landfills because it is chemically inert.

McDonald's and its packaging suppliers continue to search for new packaging materials as they are developed. If research comes up with better, safer packaging alternatives, you can bet we'll use them.

Protecting the Ozone

In 1987, as scientists generally agree that fully halogenated chlorofluorocarbons contributed to depletion of the ozone layer, McDonald's became the first company in the restaurant industry to require our packaging suppliers to stop using these fully halogenated chlorofluorocarbons (CFCs) in the manufacturing of our foam packaging.

Our foam packaging now is produced using only hydrogen-based blowing agents which have been endorsed by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, the United Nations Montreal Protocol and leading environmental organizations as part of the solution to ozone depletion. The Montreal Protocol is the international agreement that identifies which chemicals should be regulated in order to protect the ozone.

Protection Rain Forests

McDonald's has not, and does not, purchase beef from rain forests or recently deforested rain forest land. This fact has been substantiated by:

- Dr. Tom Lovejoy of the Smithsonian Institution
- Dr. Gillian Prantz, The Director of Royal Botanical Gardens, The World's Foremost Authority on Rain Forests
- Bill Curtis of CBS News upon his study of rain forests commissioned by Conservation International
- Dr. Mark Plotkin, V.P. of Conservation International, a Washington D.C. based organization devoted to the preservation of the world's natural resources

Tropical rain forests play a critical role in the earth's ecology and the well-being of the entire planet.

Nowhere in the world does McDonald's purchase beef from rain forest land.

In fact, we have a strict corporate policy that states nowhere in the world will McDonald's permit the destruction of the rain forest for our beef supply. In the United States we use only 100% pure U.S. beef. In Canada, we use only 100% pure Canadian beef, and in Europe, we use only EEC-grown and approved beef.

Our policy states: McDonald's is committed to establishing and enforcing responsible environmental practices in all aspects of our business.

As part of its commitment, it is McDonald's policy to use only locally produced and processed beef in every country where we have restaurants. In those isolated areas where domestic beef is not available, it is imported from approved McDonald's suppliers in other countries. In all cases, however, McDonald's does not, has not and will not permit the destruction of tropical rain forests for our beef supply. We do not, have not and will not purchase beef from rain forest (or recently deforested rain forest) land.

If any McDonald's supplier is found to deviate from this policy - or cannot prove compliance with it - their relationship with McDonald's will be immediately terminated.

This policy is strictly enforced and closely monitored.

Environmental Education

At McDonald's, we feel one of the most important ways we can make a positive impact on the environment is through educating our customers, our employees and families about the urgent need to protect and preserve the environment. In our restaurants, we make available to customers and employees environmental information on such as this brochure, our booklet "McDonald's Packaging: The Facts" and various environmental trailers and table tents. In the McDonald's restaurants that are recycling polystyrene, our customers are learning how to separate recyclable products and experiencing first-hand the value of recycling.

Because good environmental practices should start with young people, we have developed a teacher's guide called the "Environmental Action Pack" to encourage teachers to incorporate environmental lessons into their curriculum. And we're also working with the World Wildlife Fund to produce "Wecology," a booklet on the environment for students.

As an industry leader, McDonald's has always known the importance and responsibility of being a good corporate citizen. We care about the people and communities we serve, and the environment in which we live. We will continue to pursue the environmentally sound operating practices and procedures possible to protect the global environment on which we all depend.

If you have any questions about McDonald's and the Environment please write:

Mt. Vernon campus not the ticket for SIU

SIU-MV?

That's what we probably would have to use to refer to a new proposed branch of the Southern Illinois University system in Mount Vernon. All the rest of the good letters are taken. We have C for Carbondale, E for Edwardsville, N for Nakajo, not to mention all the letters connected with the affiliated off-campus programs.

BUT THAT'S JUST the problem. All these letters stand for the individual parts of the complex infrastructure we know as SIU. This system encompasses undergraduate and graduate education; a law school; a medical school; a Japanese campus; and adjunct campuses on 16 military bases across the country. Why do we need another campus? Especially one with a $25 million price tag. This figure is especially important, because it represents roughly one-fifth of the education budget for fiscal 1991 that was appropriated by Gov. James R. Thompson. Not only that, for, although the funding for SIU was increased $5.4 million—or 2.4 percent—the increase did not offset inflation, which is at 4 percent. Technically, we have more money, but when it comes to spending power, our dollars are drastically shrinking.

SEN. RALPH DUNN, R-Du Quoin, said the funds for such an enormous project are just not there in the General Assembly this year. After studying the budget, we agree.

In this era of perennially dwindling educational allotments, the General Assembly isn't going to buy yet another institution to support. Or, if it does, it's sure to drastically affect the amount of money available to the other branches of higher education in Illinois. We can hardly afford to pay for the existing universities and educational programs as it is in our state. Why would we want to spread ourselves so fiscally thin when we're already complaining about decreasing quality of and a lack of funding for education?

AND WHAT ABOUT geography? Mount Vernon is a scant hour away from Carbondale and an hour and half from Edwardsville. Rep. Larry Hicks, D-Mount Vernon, the sponsor of the bill to build the Mount Vernon campus, said the branch would be an institution for juniors, seniors and graduate students comparable to Sangamon State University in Springfield. Both downstate SIU campuses cater to both undergraduate and graduate students. It might be a little bit of a commute, but if it were necessary to preserve the quality of education in the SIU system, then it would be well worth it.

University Chancellor Lawrence K. Pettit's 21st Century plan must be considered in the decision, too. This carefully drafted strategic plan was not written with the Mount Vernon campus in mind. If we are going to use the document to carry us into the next century as Pettit hopes, we will not build an additional campus. Thompson's budget could go through many amendments by busy legislators between now and its final approval date, June 30. However, we don't think that building a campus in Mount Vernon should be one of them. Maybe this idea could be shelved until Illinois is in better economic shape and can give education the time it so desperately deserves.

Newspaper theft points to recycling

I am writing in regard to the recent article on "Newspaper Theft." I think the Daily Egyptian should be recycled and there are a lot of reasons why.

The first is by recycling paper and making new paper from old we use 30 to 55 percent less energy than making paper from trees.

Second, by recycling old paper we can reduce air pollution by 95 percent.

Third, there is no real difference in the quality of the paper.

Fourth, and definitely not least of all, recycling paper will help save trees. An estimated 850 million trees are used to make paper annually. Statistics show that if everyone in America recycled even one-tenth of their newspapers (this includes the DE) we would save about 25 million trees a year. So there should be no question as to whether or not the DE should be recycled—only when and how it should go about doing it.

I think raising awareness is important. No one may have known (myself included) that the DE is not recycled or printed on recycled paper. People may not have given much thought to the matter previously, or cared one way or another about it. Now they know that recycling is important to our community in lots of ways and that by recycling the DE we are conserving our natural resources for the future, and that's something we all should care about.

An idea as to how we could start recycling the DE is by returning the papers back to the paper bins after reading them. Not all the papers will be returned but every little bit helps. How many times do you go to a class and find discarded DEs lying on the floor? They could just as easily be picked up and returned to the bin for recycling if people would just care enough to do it.

I would like to encourage the DE production superintendent, Gary Buckles, to consider recycling when negotiating the future paper contracts. Recycling the DE is a wonderful idea. I wonder why no one came up with it sooner.

It is really a shame that such a stunt as collecting all the DEs and leaving them at the recycling center was necessary even if it did get people's attention. I think the issue should have been handled differently, maybe by putting signs up by the paper bins stating that the DE is not recycled and what that means to its readers, not by taking the papers away.—Sarah A. Bowman, junior, theater.

Omission of student activities in DE thoughtless

Well it's Wednesday morning, and as I read the latest edition of the Daily Egyptian, I once again find no mention of the air show at the Williamson County airport. I know this was a busy weekend here at SIU—Springfest, the Whitesnake concert and all. However by now I thought the crew at the DE would have been caught up. To be left out of the Monday paper, maybe. To be left out by the Wednesday paper—I find this amazing.

The airshow at the Williamson County airport was sponsored by the airport authority, but was organized and orchestrated by the Rotor and Wing Association of America. This is a registered student organization here at the University. Faculty sponsor Charlie Rodriguez, group president George Vicks and the rest of the RWAA folks spent many months in preparation for this event. Arranging for flying acts and the ground support that they require takes many hours of careful preparation. This type of event requires the professionalism that our students must take with them when they leave us and go to the real world. The show was a success, as was noted in the Southern Illinoisian and the Marion Daily Republican.

I feel very unfortunate that our University newspaper has not seen fit to publish an article about this positive and worthwhile student activity. Too many times the negative aspect of students at this University is publicized, while the good things are ignored. The young men and women of the RWAA and their faculty sponsor put forth a lot of effort to provide not only several afternoons worth of entertainment, but a good positive image of what our students can do.

Hopefully in the future, the staff of the DE will see their way clear to publish articles on student activities that promote a positive image of student organization functions. The good students here by far outweigh the minority of trouble makers.—Robert Sanders, assistant professor, aviation maintenance technology.

Athletes are not 'slaves'—just ask a taxpayer

It was real thoughtful of you to include "white" in your article Mr. Burrell. However, I don't think Abraham Lincoln will be able to see the next NCAA tournament. I'm going to make this short and nice.

Number one: Players of any sport at this particular University are not denied access to college. If they don't have the money, (and if that was your intention) let them get a job to pay for their tuition. Further more, taxpayers are already overburdened for supporting the "Economically Unsound Families" of Illinois and every other state—black or white!

Number two: For the player's who do make it pro, do they ever pay back their four years of free college tuition and publicity. Oh, I'm sorry, I guess it was a scholarship. One might say it was a "free ride."

Number three: What kind of car would you like, Mr. Burrell? Maybe if you write a letter to Brent Mussburger he'll give you his limo for you and all the players to ride in while you're riding the taxpayers. I'll bet you any amount that Brent Mussburger paid his own way through college. Who paid yours?

Let me explain in my view what you "slaves" receive for playing: A free college education—I didn't have that; free publicity—I've never had that either, unless they print this letter. And last but not least, free room and board—again, something I never had except when I was living at home.

Lord help us all, don't give them cars! Who will be stuck paying the insurance! Oh, I forgot. Just send the bill to Springfield; they'll take it out of my next paycheck.—Michael D. Nalley, administration of justice.

The Stone House, the official residence of the SIU chancellor, stretches 11,000 square feet on the southwest corner of the University campus.

Pettits' house home to many

By Tony Mancuso
Staff Writer

The Pettits don't do weddings or conventions and no more Easter sunrise services.

But Chancellor Lawrence K. Pettit and his family, who live in the Stone House, the official residence of the chancellor, do host guests from all walks of life, including princes and generals.

PETTIT SAID a number of faculty, student, departmental and administrative groups have used the mansion as a place to hold their meetings and parties.

"We also have guests from the army and air force, as well as foreign delegations," he said.

The Stone House is a 11,000 square-foot, two story mansion on the southwest corner of the University campus.

The Pettits are the fourth family to inhabit the house, which was completed in 1971 as a result of a $1 million donation from Chicago philanthropist W. Clement Stone.

THE STONE House became the official residence of SIU-C Presidents David R. Derge, 1972-1974, Warren W. Brandt, 1974-1980, and Albert Somit, 1980-1987, before becoming the official residence of the chancellor.

Pettit said his family hosts the events held in the house, but most of the events are set up by Joni Mecum, Stone House public functions supervisor.

Mecum, formerly a student worker at the house, was hired prior to her graduation to work as a secretary. She also is a chef and prepares some of the smaller, non-catered affairs at the house.

"We do not initiate the majority of the functions, but sometimes we are invited to a function, and we offer to hold it here at the house (pending approval)," Pettit said.

There is, however, one event the Pettits will not have in their home.

He said the house, with its large dining room that seats 36 and accommodates 80 for buffet dinners, has been misunderstood by some of the organizations using it.

"One non-University group asked to use the house for a meeting. (Members) did not realize it was a residence," Pettit said. "They wanted to use it like a hotel and break off into little rooms for small group meetings."

HE SAID one member of the group showed up early for the event to "look at the facility." It was quickly explained that people lived there, and Pettit "welcomed them to our home" at the dinner.

"After groups have something here, they usually enjoy themselves and want to come back," he said.

The Pettits said one party that was particularly successful was an octogenarians party they hosted three years ago.

THE GUEST list included many elderly people who were donors or otherwise connected with the University, and each guest was given a brick from the recently demolished Old Main.

"We had so much fun watching old people who hadn't seen each other for 15 or 20 years get together and have a ball," Mrs. Pettit said.

The Pettits are now able to have three overnight guests at Stone House. Their daughter Allison graduated with a degree in early childhood education last spring, enabling the Pettits to host another guest in the family wing of the house.

Their son Ned, a senior in geography, still lives in Stone House, but when he decides to leave home, the entire family wing will be available for guests, he said.

Mrs. Pettit said the children have had an interesting experience living in Stone House, because they have had to learn to live there with other people.

"They have learned to be very patient and tolerant," she said. "It is also a benefit for them because they get to meet interesting people from all over the world."

PETTIT SAID most of the overnight guests don't know each other either, which makes it a dividend for the guests as well.

"We have hosted everything from army generals to Saudi Arabian princes," he said.

The Pettits recently hosted Jane Goodall, known for her 30-year

No more boondoggle for the Stone House

By Tony Mancuso
Staff Writer

Stone House, long considered a boondoggle, has become increasingly important to the University since Lawrence K. Pettit became chancellor in 1987.

"We have tried since the start to make the house a financial asset instead of a liability," Pettit said. "I think we have been successful."

When Pettit took over the University, he was requested to live in Stone House as part of his job. Before he moved in, however, he asked that more stringent regulations be set up for the financing of the residence.

Upon Pettit's urging, Vice Chancellor for Financial Affairs Donald Wilson, who is also the SIU Board of Trustees treasurer, was put in charge of expenditures for the structure.

"That way, I don't make any final decisions on spending for the place," Pettit said.

Wilson said he goes to the board for the annual budget, and he makes quarterly reports to the board on Stone House—not mandated, but something he considers the right thing to do.

"The new board policy is working very well," Wilson said. "We have much better control than before."

He said he more frugal hold on money has practically turned the financial outlook of the house around.

"Over the past couple of years, we have been able to cut costs considerably, while at the same time increasing the number of uses for the house," Wilson said. In fiscal year 1986, running Stone House cost the University $194,000. Since that time, the costs have steadily decreased despite a typical 5-percent inflation rate each year, he said.

He said figures for fiscal year 1989 and 1990 (which ends June 30) were similar, with $186,000 for 1989 and $182,000 for 1990. The cost breakdown includes:

"Gig Street is self supporting, that is it pays for all its expenses," Wilson said. "We figured if we could make money as a student group, why not make money professionally."

The group tours from late August to May, visiting college campuses around the country.

- $58,000 for utilities in 1989; $53,000 in 1990.

- $46,000 for house operations in 1989; $49,000 in 1990.

- $40,000 for repair and maintenance in 1989; $38,000 in 1990.

- $30,000 for grounds work in 1989; $30,000 in 1990.

- $12,000 for building maintenance in 1989; $12,000 in 1990.

Wilson said costs have been right on budget for 1990, and he expects similar figures to be recommended for fiscal year 1991.

"We need one more year of large repair expenses to get Stone House back to its original beauty," Wilson said.

He said over the past couple of years, the roof and flooring has needed repair. The kitchen has also needed extensive remodeling to make it more convenient for caterers that serve at big events.

The fiscal year 1992 budget, however, should be considerably smaller because major repairs will be completed and repair expenses will be greatly reduced, he said.

Pettit said part of the costs are salaries of public functions supervisor Joni Mecum, a housekeeper, part-time groundworkers and student workers.

He said the student workers—hotel and restaurant management majors—do a variety of jobs, including helping the housekeeper, answering phones, sending invitations and helping Mecum, who caters the small events.

Elizabeth Pettit also does a great deal of work at the house, Pettit said.

"One reason we have been successful is that Libby is willing to work full-time without pay here," he said. "She does a lot of work during each day, and she has to get up at 5 a.m. each morning to see if everything is ready for the day."

The second part of Pettit's plan for Stone House is to increase the usefulness of the 11,000-square-foot structure.

"Over the past year, about 4,000 people have been to the house for various functions," Mecum said.

She said many of the overnight guests are guests of the army or air force units, various academic departments or fundraising organizations at the University.

The SiU Alumni Association and the SIU Foundation host many of the individuals who donate large amounts of money at Stone House.

"It is definitely an advantage to host major donors and potential major donors at such a nice place," Wilson said.

"We were thinking about putting up a sign saying 'Jane Goodall slept here,'" Mrs. Pettit said. "It was a privilege to have someone like her stay with us."

"I live here as one part of my job specifications," Pettit said, adding that he and his family have grown to enjoy the large structure. "I think we are the first residents who have actually enjoyed living here."

Mrs. Pettit said she enjoys the calming atmosphere of the atrium, a small, outdoor garden located in the middle of the house.

"The sound of water and the sight of the greenery are comforting," she said, adding that she also gets attached to the great quantity of artwork displayed throughout the house.

GPSC passes docket, but no quorum reached

By Rob Coné
Staff Writer

Every measure on the Graduate and Professional Student Council docket passed with little or no opposition Wednesday evening, but because the council failed to reach a quorum, the resolutions will have to wait until June to be ratified.

Falling one short of the 35 members needed to conduct business, the representatives present opted to at least state their position by voicing their support for a tuition freeze and the Illinois Board of Higher Education fiscal year 1991 budget request.

The resolution supporting a tuition freeze generated some opposition from several council members. Fearing the state funding level may be substantially lower than the IBHE request, Ron Smith, vice president-elect for graduate affairs, said, "If the money is not there, it may have to come from tuition increases."

IBHE is proposing a 6-percent salary increase, a 4-percent increase for general costs and a 10-percent increase to be shared between the library and new or expanded programs. Gov. James R. Thompson has rejected these recommendations and proposed a 3-percent salary increase for SIUC. The governor has offered no additional funding increases for the University.

Smith said he was afraid a no-growth budget would result in some departments or programs being hit harder than others rather than an across the board cut.

Darrell Johnson, graduate council representative, said he believed that any tuition increase would "go straight to faculty salaries" anyway. He pointed out that it takes a 6-percent tuition increase to generate a 1-percent pay increase. Johnson also said he believed tuition increases should not be used to compensate for a state funding shortfall.

The tuition-freeze proposal passed 20 to 6 with two abstentions, reaffirming the Undergraduate Student Government's passing of a similar bill last week.

Support for the IBHE appropriations proposal was approved unanimously.

In other business, four new members were elected to the graduate council. They are Collette D'Crux-Endeley, Jean Dee, Scott Delinger and Deborah Fleener-Oscarson.

The next meeting of the GPSC is slated for June 27. At that time, GPSC President Charles Ramsey hopes to have a quorum so his 68-member council can ratify each of the measures.

New computer components delay registration process

Academic advisers remain pleased with the overall system

By Brian Gross
Staff Writer

Adding two components to SIU-C's new student information computer system has interrupted registration processes recently, but academic advisers say they are happy with the system's efficiency.

The financial aid and billing and receivables components were added to the Student Information System four weeks ago, which delayed the tuning of the system and caused it to go off-line several times, Roland Keim, associate director for records and registration said.

"We ran into a tough period about four weeks ago," Keim said. "We completed (the component additions) about a week or 10 days ago, and it seems to have leveled out now. The system is tuned and is running quite well now."

The financial aid component of SIS will allow students to know their current, up-to-date financial status instead of looking at week-old microfiche, Bea Mueller, SIS coordinator, said.

"The information is on-line, not a week old," Mueller said. "We'll be able to tell by looking at a screen the financial aid picture and notify students what we need from them."

Mueller said all 1990-1991 financial aid information will be processed in the system.

"It is a storage area for all financial aid information on students," she said. "It has all the same functions we were doing, but we're holding it on a different data base."

The billing and receivables component will not be going on-line until the first week of July, Keim said.

"All the transactions of the billing system students are familiar with now will be converted into the system," Keim said.

Class registration was added to the system Feb. 20, ending the old process of sending students back and forth between adviser and Woody Hall, known as the "Woody Shuffle."

Will Travistead, adviser for the theater department, said he thinks students appreciate the new system a great deal because they do not have to run around so much.

"The system is going to take

Earth Day's organizers criticized

DURHAM, N.H. (UPI) — Hype surrounding the recent Earth Day observance hampers the cleanup of the environment and encourages confrontations between conservationists and industry, an environmental consultant said Thursday.

"Earth Day organizers did a good job raising public awareness to some very serious problems, but they were wrong to exclude industry...especially since it's industry that is devoting resources to improvement," said Alan John Borner.

Speaking at the 18th-century home that serves as headquarters of the nonprofit Environmental Hazards Management Institute, Borner complained that legitimate issues got lost in Earth Day hype.

some getting used to," Travelstead said. "We've got some problems with down time, but you're going to have that with any new system. I think it's fine so far."

Registration of students in the College of Engineering and Technology is way ahead of last year, Roger Missavage, director of the college's computer center, said.

"It's hard to say, because we also started (registering) earlier," Missavage said. "Students seem to like it better. They don't have to go back and forth to Woody."

Wanda Oakey, chief academic adviser for the College of Liberal Arts, said the system is a great advantage to students.

"When the system works, it's marvelous," Oakey said. "I don't find fault with it. I think it's going great, but it's still new. It's frustrating when the system goes down, but I see some really nice things in the future for it."

Students coming in for advisement appointments in the College of Education know exactly what they have signed up for when they leave which cuts down on their trips to Woody, Jacquelyn Bailey, chief academic adviser for the college said.

"I would still have to say the College of Education is extremely positive about the entire system," Bailey said. "Most of all, the College of Education's students are better served."

Bailey said she would like to see large terminals placed around campus, on which students could view the status on open and closed classes.

"It could be kind of like an airport," she said. "The open classes could keep rolling across the screens. I think it would be even more efficient."

Two components of the system, the grading and transcripts and degree audit components, remain to be added, Keim said.

The grading and transcripts component, which will process grades and publish report cards, will be completed around the end of the semester, he said.

"The degree audit component will check students records and measure it against the inventory of requirements of their major," Keim said.

Students entering the University fall 1990 will be the first to ones using the audit component, he said.

Accused begins trial for slaying of student

By Chris Walka
Staff Writer

Dennis Harris faced his first day of trial Thursday for allegedly murdering SIU-C student Jason A. Jackson.

Harris is charged with three counts of first degree murder for the Oct. 14 shooting death of Jackson. Jackson was employed at Jeremiah's restaurant, 201 N. Washington St., and was leaving work when the shooting occurred.

A spokesperson for the Jackson County state's attorney's office said the death penalty will be requested if Harris is found guilty of the charges.

The spokesperson said nine witnesses were called to testify, and the trial will resume today at 9 a.m. at courtroom C at the Jackson County Courthouse, Murphysboro.

Judge David W. Watt is presiding over the proceedings.

According to published reports, several employees of the restaurant were walking across a parking lot southeast of the restaurant, when they were approached by a black male brandishing a pistol who demanded money.

After taking the money, the black man fled and Jackson gave chase to him. The suspect then turned and fired at Jackson, the bullet hitting him in the chest and piercing his heart.

Residents plant white pines

Earth day is over, but local residents want the awareness to continue.

In cooperation with the Carbondale Park District, the Shawnee Earth Day committee will plant two white pine trees today at 12:30 in Turley Park.

Though today happens to be Arbor Day, Gary Wolf, media coordinator for the Shawnee Earth day committee, said this is an effort to commemorate Earth Day 1990.

"The trees will act as a reminder. We hope to keep Earth Day going on," Wolf said.

"The trees will be here for a long time, just like our awareness will have to stay on long after Earth Day is over."

Ground controllers put scope in action after fixing glitches

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — The Discovery astronauts tracked the Hubble Space Telescope Thursday, while ground controllers scrambled to overcome an unexpected number of glitches that interrupted communications and slowed the satellite's activation.

With the shuttle crew concentrating on Earth photography and on-board experiments, anxious engineers at the Goddard Space Flight Center in Greenbelt, Md., spent the morning struggling to establish a link between the telescope's high-speed science antennas and a NASA data relay satellite.

The communications link is crucial to the successful operation of the complex $1.5 billion observatory, and after hours of troubleshooting and work to re-align the "high gain" antennas, contact was finally established.

Later controllers had problems with the slower "low-gain" antenna system.

Two thousand ballots mailed for annual civil service vote

By Tony Mancuso
Staff Writer

SIU-C's Civil Service Employees Council has sent out 2,000 ballots today for its annual election of 12 new representatives.

Twenty-two people in five sectors have been nominated to the positions, and eight people are running for re-election. Kitty Mabus, election commissioner, said.

Mabus said the deadline for returning ballots at campus mail is May 9 at 4:30 p.m.

"Last year, we had a 41-percent return. I hope we get at least 50 percent this year," she said.

She said members of the 20-member committee, each representing 100 people from particular areas of expertise, are elected to two-year terms. The newly elected people will take office June 1.

Four new council members will be elected from the academic affairs sector. Frances J. Gilman, Graduate School, and Jacqueline J. Goepfert, crime studies center, both will be seeking re-election.

Other academic affairs nominees include: Susan M. Beaulieu, library services and library storage facility; William E. Byrnes, library services and reserve section; Vern Cornell, library services; Patrick Drazen, Broadcasting Service; Lisa K. Hitt, Learning Resources; Pansy D. Jones, College of Communications and Fine Arts; and Carole Ann Young, Division of Continuing Education.

Three new members will be elected to represent Campus Services. They include Roger Hines, Physical Plant, and Max Waldron, Physical Plant, both running for re-election, William O. Cook, Arena Director's Office, and Norma Ditto, University Police.

Two members from the student affairs sector will be elected for two-year terms and one member will be elected for a one-year term. Running for re-election are Muriel D. Narve, student health service, and Ron Mahoney, housing.

Also running for positions are Sharon E. Broadnax, Trueblood Hall Food Service, Steven La Brier, East Campus University Housing, and LaVerne Simon, Student Health Program Office.

Financial affairs will elect one representative. Incumbent Kay Schwartz, general accounting, is running against Pat Orr, personnel services.

The Presidential Reporting area will elect one representative for the final position. Incumbent Donna C. Barbre, School of Medicine Administration Office, is running against Cynthia L. Miller, SIU Foundation.

Annual scholarships given by SIU-C Alumni Association

Students awarded for grades, service

By Omonpee O. Whitfield
Staff Writer

SIU Alumni Association Board of Directors proved that there is a such thing as a free lunch—with scholarships as the main course.

The Board held its annual luncheon Saturday. Each year during the luncheon, the Alumni Association gives awards and scholarships to students on the basis of grades and amount of service given to the community and to the Alumni Association.

At the luncheon, awards given included two Scholar Athlete awards, two Military awards, the Stevenson Arms Award, the Super Student Award, and awards for the Moot Court Team.

The Scholar Athlete Awards are given to a male and a female participant in SIU-C sports. Recipients must have a grade point average of 3.0 or higher.

This year's recipients of the Scholar Athlete Awards were Maribeth Ruder of Cartersville and John Manley of Lockport.

Ruder, who participated on the SIU swim team, is a junior in the College of Communications and Fine Arts and currently has a GPA of 3.95. Ruder held a 4.0 average six of seven semesters at SIU-C.

Manley, who participated in SIU football, is a junior in the College of Engineering and Technology, and currently has a GPA of 3.95. Like Ruder, Manley also held a 4.0 GPA for six of seven semesters at SIU-C.

Military Awards, given for exceptional military and academic performance, were presented to John E. J. Box, Jr. and Joseph A. Dyja. Box is an Army ROTC cadet and a senior in the College of Business and Administration. Dyja is an Air Force ROTC cadet and is a senior in the College of Liberal Arts.

Awards were presented to the Moot Court Team, students in the School of Law who recently won national and international awards for their presentations in mock trials, in recognition of their success and hard work.

Moot Court Team members include Diane L. Hoadley, Patricia Parker, Christy Wyrostek Solverson, David VandeBurgt and Daniel Varnals.

The Stevenson Arms Scholarships, donated by the Stevenson Arms dorm, was awarded to Margaret O'Boyle, a freshman in the College of Engineering. O'Boyle will receive room and board for the 1990-91 fall and spring semesters.

The Super Student Award was given to David E. Hartley, a senior in the College of Business and Administration with a current grade point average of 3.8.

To qualify for a Super Student Award, a student must have a 3.0 GPA or higher and must work for at least 20 hours a week. In addition, the student also must be active in at least two registered organizations.

Money for the awards and scholarships comes from sales sponsored by the Alumni Association, as well as from donations from alumni and other sources.

Patricia McNeil, SIU Alumni Association assistant director, said she is pleased with the luncheon and with the recipients.

Ha! Ha! Ha!: Student group does improv

By Tracy Sargeant
Staff Writer

Students making people laugh. That's what Gig Street, a student improvisational comedy group, is all about.

Gig Street, which consists of about 15 members, performs improvisational comedy by taking suggestions from the audience about places, situations, objects and just about anything.

Carolyn Wilson, SIU-C graduate and one of Gig Street's original founders, said she and some other people decided it would be interesting to get a group together.

"In the fall term of 1986, we first began playing a 20 minutes Sunday spot at Alexander Cole's (a now-closed bar)," Wilson said. "We got a lot of outside support from theater faculty and students. By the spring term, we had moved out into the community."

Originally the group, which is a branch of the Student Theater Guild, was named Student Theater Guild Improvisational Group (or ST GIG for short).

Because of the long name and so as not to be directly confused with the theater guild, Wilson said it was suggested the name be switched to Gig Street, and the name stuck.

Jeff Lewis, a senior who has been with Gig Street since the group started, said to become a member of Gig Street, one must first join the Student Theater Guild. Lewis said there is no tryout or auditions to become part of the improv group, just STG membership is required.

In the fall, the STG accepts memberships which cost $5 per year.

"There are a lot of members from the radio and television, theater, and photography programs," Lewis said. "But we have members from all over campus. They just like to get away from whatever they are doing and act crazy."

Lewis said the skills learned through improvisation help students when they run into problems in other performances.

"If something goes wrong on stage, they are more likely to pick up on something and not panic," Lewis said. "When you do improv, you are in a more relaxed atmosphere, and less inhibited on stage (to let a character come through)."

Lewis said the Gig Street group is truly unique to SIU-C theater program.

"We have looked at different college groups, and it is rare that they would have an improv group," Lewis said. "There is nothing like this at other colleges."

Wilson said Gig Street is kind of a "good will ambassador" for the theater department.

"This group has the potential to reach a lot of people," Wilson said. "This makes people interested in what the theater department has to offer and they are interested in seeing other productions at the University."

Michele Dimaso, business manager for Gig Street, said the troupe adjusts their act to the level of the audience.

"We do gigs from children's fairy tales to different improvisational games with the audience," Dimaso said. "Every act is unique and it reflects the audience's personality."

Lewis said the group learns how to relate to people on a one-to-one basis.

"We perform to all kinds of people. From elderly people, small children to drunk college students, we done it all," Lewis said.

Past members of Gig Street have used their experiences from the group to move on to bigger and better things. Five of the founders of Gig Street have reformed into a professional touring group called Authorized Personnel. "Gig Street is self supporting, that is it pays for all its expenses," Wilson said. "We figured if we could make money as a student group, why not make money professionally."

however, will be contingent on the desires of the General Assembly and the new governor, who takes office in January.

Some key elements of the plan:
■ $1.3 billion for repairing 565 miles of interstate highway and 324 bridges on the interstate system.
■ $920 million for Operation Green Light, designed to attack urban and suburban traffic congestion in northeastern Illinois.
■ $926 million for resurfacing and widening improvements on nearly 3,800 miles of U.S. and Illinois routes and other state highways.

■ $656 million for repairing or replacing 848 bridges.
Eight-eight percent of the money in the five-year plan would go toward preserving and improving the existing road system, said state Transportation Secretary Michael Lane.

"Most every region of the state has had several of their needs and many of their desires expressed in this program," Lane said.

He also said all the improvements could not have been proposed without the 6-cent-per-gallon gas tax increase that began taking effect last year. That tax will raise about $300 million annually, much of which will go to local governments.

Some of the specific elements could improve transportation from upstate to Carbondale and around Southern Illinois, including:

■ Nearly $130 million for building sections of U.S. 67 between the Quad Cities and the East St. Louis area.

■ $90.9 million to complete the section of U.S. 51 from LaSalle-Peru to Bloomington-Normal.

■ $84 million for construction of a new cable bridge for U.S. 67 over the Mississippi River in Alton.

■ $57 million to replace the MacArthur bridge over the Mississippi River at Gulfport/Burlington.

■ $56 million to start major work on the Alton Bypass.

■ $19.3 million for upgrading Illinois 3 from I-25 at Columbia to Waterloo.

■ $17.2 million for engineering and construction work on U.S. 51 between Decatur and Pana.

■ $16.6 million for highway and bridge improvements on U.S. 50 in Marion, Clay and Richland counties.

■ $15.8 million for I-57 in Jefferson, Marion, Fayette and Effingham counties.

■ $15.3 million for resurfacing 39 miles of I-57 in Cumberland, Coles, Douglas and Champaign

IBHE student advisement group to meet Saturday in Carbondale

By Tony Mancuso Staff Writer

The Illinois Board of Higher Education's Student Advisement Committee will meet in the Carbondale area Saturday to elect new officers and discuss items on the board's May 1 agenda.

Susan Hall, the committee's public university member at large, said more than 50 people, representing 17 public four-year universities, 18 community colleges and nine private colleges, are expected to attend the meeting in the Sledgefoot Lounge at Touch of Nature.

"Many of the students work closely with their campuses before coming to the meeting so they will be representative of their institution," Hall said.

She said her husband,

Student Trustee Bill Hall, will run for an unprecedented third term as student board member, a voting position representative of the committee on IBHE.

"The committee also will elect a chairperson, vice chairperson, secretary and alternative board member," she said, adding that the committee chairperson attends IBHE meetings to give reports and give the committee's input on the agenda's issues.

The committee will discuss items on the board agenda, but the bulk of the concentration will be on a recently submitted report on the scope structure and productivity of higher education, she said.

"We are going to discuss the report and formulate a response for the board," she said.

She said the other board business, which includes discussions and action on degree-granting authority and grant program rules, does not directly involve students, so it will not be discussed as thoroughly.

"The student advisory committee meets 10 times a year to advise the board on issues and also to have the ability to formulate proposals of our own," Hall said.

She said the committee's two standing subcommittees are the budget subcommittee and the policy subcommittee.

"The budget subcommittee gives the students' input for IBHE's recommended budgets for higher education," she said.

"The policy committee discusses financial aid, articulation in transfer and other student-related issues."

dents to receive the training.

Sixteen faculty members have volunteered to help educate their colleagues. "I can tell you that it has offended a lot of people," said Capie. "This is a very sensitive issue (because) it's hard to define. Many people we deal with are scientists and they want facts and I can't give them facts. This is not a black-white issue, it's a whole area of gray."

Lynn Connelly, associate ombudsman, added sexual harassment issues are "difficult in an enlightened atmosphere—particularly in a university. People don't like to have their academic freedoms stepped on."

The new policy also calls for mandatory training of all top-level administrators and deans, department heads, resident assistants and student life advisers. Davis said the training is mandatory for these individuals because they are most likely to be the first persons contacted, provided the individual is willing to be exposed to possible reprisal, during the initial stages of a sexual harassment complaint.

But, Davis advised, "You don't have to start with direct confrontation. Under the new policy, complainants have 120 days from the last incident (in which to file their complaint). She explained since a semester is about 120 days, students could wait to file their complaint until after their "tests are taken and the grades are filed."

However, Davis advises anyone who might be delaying the filing of a complaint should protect themselves by keeping detailed records describing the incidents surrounding the complaint.

Nancy Bandy, author of a study on sexual harassment at SIU-C, warned harassment victims that it has been her experience "the farther you go the greater the retaliation you're going to face. I wouldn't go very far without a lawyer," she said.

Another revision to the University's sexual harassment policy is the addition of the voluntary conciliation process.

"Typically the only resolution sought is for the behavior to stop," Capie said. He said voluntary conciliation is designed to resolve the victim's dilemma without a delay involving filing a formal complaint.

Voluntary conciliation is handled through the ombudsman or affirmative action. Trained staff members at both offices serve as mediators, Connelly said, but conciliation is only possible if the other party is in agreement.

Often times she said the accused isn't aware that his behavior is offensive. "How do I know I'm being offensive without someone telling me?" is a question Connelly says she often hears and attributes the harasser's bewilderment to the power differential that prevents many victims from confronting the offender openly.

She said approaching the harasser will often resolve the problem, but added the victim is under no obligation to do so.

Connelly said her office takes a team approach. She said by tapping the various experiences and resources of the ombudsman office staff, they are better able to resolve the crisis.

"Typically the person who has made the advances will deny it," Capie said. "In some cases the problem will go away because the person realizes you're serious."

In situations where there is no agreement between the parties, the victim has the option to file a formal grievance with the Office of Personnel Services and Capie.

Capie said a person who files a formal written statement should know that type of grievance is followed by a hearing.

He said the hearing process is set up so plaintiff and defendant each get to choose one member of the hearing committee.

"Those two (victim and accused) will select a third person to serve as the chair on the committee. If they can't reach an agreement...I would appoint that person," said Capie.

The industries required to file a report on toxic chemical emissions must do so by July 1, or face fines of up to $25,000 a day from the Federal government and $1,000 a day as well as an initial $10,000 fine from the IEPA.

He also added that periodic inspections, both announced and unannounced, are made to facilities required to file each year.

from the list.

Information provided by the IEPA states that though the amounts seem quite large, there is no threat to human or environmental health.

Despite this information, Flower said a greater reduction in toxic chemical releases is needed.

"I think something needs to be done to reduce the amount of toxins released into the environment," Flower said.

He said this could happen in two ways. First, voluntary implementation of techniques to protect the environment can be done by industry and is being done by some. Secondly, federal regulation is needed to force some companies to reduce chemical emissions.

compared to Jackson's 755 votes, also said the election has changed.

"(The reduction of candidates) will have a significant effect in that no undergraduate students (like Sproule) are running," he said.

"I'm sure everyone's tired of hearing about the (election) problems," Jackson said, "but the fact is the job's not done yet."

Jackson's appeal of the April 11 election results argued that an undetermined number of students were turned away from at least three polling places ran out of student trustee ballots.

An ad hoc committee of the Student Conduct Review Board nullified the results Monday, and another committee ruled Wednesday a new election would be held May 1.

Chargers release McMahon because of contract dispute

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Jim McMahon, the charismatic quarterback who led the Chicago Bears to victory in Super Bowl XX, was released by the San Diego Chargers Thursday in a contract dispute.

McMahon, who joined the Chargers amid much fanfare last August, could not reach agreement with the team on a new contract. His release was a mutual decision, according to Charger coach Dan Henning.

"It's apparent that Jim's contract situation could become a distraction," Henning said. "Jim has asked to be released immediately so he can negotiate with other teams. We wish him well."

McMahon, 30, started 11 games for the Chargers last season before being replaced by rookie Billy Joe Tolleriver for the final four games. He completed 176 of 318 passes for 2,132 yards, 10 touchdowns and 10 interceptions.

In addition to McMahon and Tolleriver, the Chargers have three other quarterbacks — Mark Vlasic, who joined the team in 1987; David Archer, a free agent signed last year; and John Friesz, a University of Idaho star picked up in last Sunday's draft.

Henning said Thursday the contract offered to McMahon contained "possibly a reduction or the same salary with escalation through incentives that he could make a lot more money."

Henning emphasized that the Chargers did not want to re-live their experience with running back Gary Anderson, who sat out last season over salary demands and was recently traded to the Tampa Bay Buccaneers.

"We're not interested in another drawn-out contract dispute as we had last year with Gary Anderson," Henning said.

"We had players worrying about their jobs because Gary Anderson wouldn't come in. Players were thinking, 'Am I going to be the one kept or am I going to be the one cut?' I would like to eliminate that from our team."

Henning said the Chargers' new general manager Bobby Beathard "didn't think that it would be possible" to reach an agreement with McMahon. Henning added, "I've talked to Jim but that conversation is between him and me."

Asked about McMahon's performance, Henning said, "We were disappointed in our season last year and he was only part of it."

"He did a credible job. His statistics were good. ... I wouldn't say he was a disappointment."

McMahon led Chicago to victory over the New England Patriots in Super Bowl XX. But injuries plagued him in successive seasons and he was sidelined for 23 of the next 47 games.

McMahon's controversial performances off the field became a problem for him in San Diego. Last season, he blew his nose on a reporter who persisted in asking him questions after a disappointing game. McMahon refused after that point to talk to any reporters.

Henning said McMahon's unpopularity was not a factor in the decision to release him. However, the coach added, "Certainly, the perceptions that the media and the fans had at certain times was a distraction."

San Francisco 0-for-Candlestick in 1990 season

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The once friendly confines of Candlestick Park have turned as frigid as a June breeze for the defending National League champion San Francisco Giants.

Eight times this season the Giants have taken the field searching for their first home victory. And eight times they walked off the diamond on the losing end. The latest setback came Thursday as the Pittsburgh Pirates topped San Francisco, 2-1.

"I just don't know what it's going to take to turn us around," said San Francisco third baseman Matt Williams. "Maybe it will be a key hit in the 11th or 12th inning, or maybe a shutout from our pitching staff. Who knows, once we start winning we may never lose again."

To make matters worse, the Giants may have lost Mike LaCoss — their most consist pitcher — with an injured knee.

With the score 1-1 in the eighth, Jay Bell singled to left. One out later, Bobby Bonilla hit a bouncer to the mound. LaCoss, 3-1, speared the ball and trapped Bell off second. Bonilla reached second during the ensuing run-down in which LaCoss strained his left knee while stumbling over Bell.

Eric Gunderson replaced LaCoss and Sid Bream greeted him with a single to right, scoring Bonilla with the winning run.

"What can happen next," said Giants manager Roger Craig. "LaCoss has been pitching as good as anyone in the league and now he goes down. I don't think it's serious, but he still may miss a turn in the rotation."

Craig held a team meeting before Thursday game, hoping it would shake the club from its current slump.

Hershiser to undergo arthroscopic surgery

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Former Cy Young Award winner Orel Hershiser, who has not missed a start since entering the Los Angeles Dodgers' rotation in 1984, will undergo arthroscopic surgery on his right shoulder, the team announced Thursday.

The procedure will be performed Friday by Dr. Frank Jobe, one of the team's physicians.

Hershiser allowed five runs and four walks Wednesday night in losing 5-1 to St. Louis at Dodger Stadium. The right-hander, who won the Cy Young Award in the team's World Championship season of 1988, is 1-1 with a 4.26 ERA in four games this year. He has struck out 16 batters in 25 1-3 innings.

The team said it did not know how long Hershiser would be sidelined.

The Los Angeles pitching staff, considered one of baseball's best, is now without its best starter and reliever. Bullpen ace Jay Howell underwent arthroscopic knee surgery Monday to repair torn cartilage, was placed on the 21-day disabled list and is expected to be lost for a month.

Hershiser, 31, was trying for his 100th career victory when he struggled against the Cardinals.

"I just can't seem to get over that sixth and seventh-inning hump," he said after the game. "Hopefully, this is just something short. We don't want any little slumps here."

Third baseman Lenny Harris said he could tell Hershiser was uncomfortable on the mound.

"Any time Orel makes a bad pitch, you know it, because he yells, 'Gosh,' or 'Damn,' or something else on the mound," Harris said. "I've never heard him yell like I heard him tonight."

Hershiser was 23-8 with a 2.26 ERA in 1988.

ACC finds shoe to fit tighter when it is on their own foot

By Keith Drum
UPI College Basketball Writer

The Atlantic Coast Conference continued to take it on the chin from the NCAA when two interesting appeals were denied this week.

Avie Lester, a senior at North Carolina State, was deprived another season of eligibility, and Maryland's request for a quick hearing on its appeal of stiff sanctions also was turned down.

The Terrapins wanted an early hearing because their top basketball players are expected to exit if a two-year ban on postseason play stands. Instead, the NCAA said it will hear Maryland's appeal in August as scheduled. By then, the transfer damage may be done.

While each case had its points, the NCAA's rulings were equally justified. Innocent parties are going to suffer, and that's unfair. But had the appeals been granted, the schools would have benefited and neither deserves to at this point.

Lester's case is a sympathetic one because he's a true victim of the 15-month long mess at N.C. State.

Though eligible by all the usual standards — NCAA, ACC, and school — Lester was held out last season because he didn't measure up to belated team standards pushed through by then coach Jim Valvano, who was making a futile bid to keep his job.

Valvano never intended the "tougher" standards to apply to seniors, so he played Lester in the Wolfpack's first exhibition game. But school officials, assuming the standards applied to all, questioned Valvano about Lester's status. Valvano then sat Lester, pending further grades.

Lester isn't at fault in any way. His academic record was more than satisfactory under past standards. Valvano and his bosses should have gotten their acts together and never played Lester at the start, or allowed him to play later in the year.

It's now too late. WF's giving back his senior year would be right for Lester, it would excuse the mindless bungling by Valvano and others. They showed last season that Lester's interests weren't foremost in their thinking.

Maryland's situation also has victims. Head Coach Gary Williams and his players weren't involved in the violations that drew a two-year postseason ban and one-season TV blackout.

Maryland and many others thought the sanctions too severe since those directly involved have left or been fired. But two factors are critical.

One, Athletic Director Lew Perkins was in charge during the final two years of Bob Wade's tenure as coach when the violations were occurring. While he eventually fired Wade, he also should be held accountable for not completely supervising Wade.

Two, it is becoming too much of a copout when schools fire their cheaters, then ask for leniency. Individuals may commit the acts, but administrations and boosters often provide messages that aren't clear enough.

That's the irony of the ACC's situation. For years, the league was smug and skeptical when others bemoaned NCAA get-tough policies against them.

The ACC wanted no leniency for the likes of Kentucky, Oklahoma, SMU and others. Now, its members are finding out how tight the shoe fits when they have to wear it.

Giegling said. "It's a good situation. When we're down, we feel like we'll come back."

Giegling was happy to contribute in a clutch situation. "Even when I'm not playing, I try to stay in the game in case I'm needed," Giegling said. "It's exciting to come in like that."

The Salukis closed out the scoring with another tally in the ninth.

A two-run home run by Wrona gave the Salukis a 2-0 lead in the first. Senior right-hander Chris Bend pitched the first five innings for the Salukis. He yielded one earned run and four hits. He struck out two and walked none. Bend left the game with a 2-1 lead, but Murray rallied off Saluki reliever George Joseph in the sixth.

The Racers scored five runs on five hits. The big blow was a three-run triple by Benjamin Garland that dropped in front of a diving Hollenkamp in right field.

Murray added two more tallies in the inning and had a surprising 6-2 lead over SIU-C. The Salukis play Missouri Valley for Illinois State Saturday and Sunday at Normal.

Club won only because it entered a catamaran, which is inherently faster than the traditional yacht raced by New Zealand.

Backing New Zealand were several former America's Cup skippers and the New York Yacht Club, which had defended the silver trophy since its founding until 1983.

In a dissent, the court's sole yachtsman — Judge Stewart Hancock Jr. — also backed Mercury Bay's attempt to win on land the race they had lost on water. He was joined by Judge Vito Titone.

Invitational earlier this year, with Saluki senior pitcher Jennifer Brown going the distance for SIU-C.

"They have been struggling some, but they are much better team than their record shows," Brockelbauer said. "they've lost a lot of one-run ballgames and we had to come from behind to beat them in our tournament, so they're not a team to overlook."

The Salukis were 2-1 against the Braves last year and are 9-9 against them lifetime.

The Salukis can throw a wide range of artillery at Western and Bradley this weekend.

Five Saluki starters are hitting above the magic .300 mark. Senior second baseman Shelly Gibbs leads the Dawgs with a .412 batting average, which ranks her among the best in the NCAA.

The Saluki pitching staff posts a 1.35 ERA and has held opponents to a weak .202 batting average.

the meet. We want to peak in two weeks when we'll be hosting the Missouri Valley Conference meet here (May 11-13). That is important to us."

The keys to the meet may be the McAndrew Stadium track and the spectator turnout.

The team hopes to get spectators in the stands, Cornell said. An athlete likes to do well in front of his peers and McAndrew's reconditioned surface may produce some national qualifying times.

The Salukis should be favored in the the 4 x 100-meter relay event with a team composed of Guy Sikora, Donnell Williams, Ed Williams and Garrett Hines. The 4 x 400-meter relay team of John John Stinson, Bernard Henry, Donnell Williams and Eric Pegues have a season-best time of 3:09.85 going into the meet.

In addition, the sprinting events will include the 100-meter dash with Marlon Gallimore, Dwight Gunn, Sikora and Hines. The 200-meter dash team includes Hines, Sikora, Gallimore and Pegues.

Cornell has high expectations for his distance teams. The 5,000-meter run will put Mark Stuart, Evan Taylor and Mike Danner in the spotlight, while Nick Schwartz will be the lone Saluki in the 1,500-meter run.

In the dissent, Hancock wrote San Diego purposefully chose to race a boat that by design would be faster than New Zealand's "for one reason: to be certain that there could be no reasonable possibility of losing."

Hancock and Titone called for nullifying the September 1988 America's Cup race and holding a rematch.

But the court's majority ruled the deed's call for a "match" and a "friendly competition between foreign countries" did not constitute a requirement that the race be fair.

In strong language, the judges blasted both yacht clubs for bringing the dispute to court, saying they should have settled it according to International Yacht Racing Union rules.

"It would be most inappropriate and counterproductive for the courts to attempt to fix the rules and standards of competition of any particular sport," said the majority opinion written by Judge Fritz Alexander.
