Conduct proposals submitted for vote

College of Liberal Arts and Sciences committee member, in an interview in February.

The Faculty Senate will place the finishing touches Tuesday on its Student Conduct Code cheating policy.

A committee, which has reviewed the code since Sept. 28, has prepared a draft of proposed changes for the senate to vote on.

Committee member Frederic Morgan said proposals include:

- Reversing the code's requirement for a written confession of guilt from the student;

- Assigning a grade of incomplete until all legal processes are completed;

- Allowing accused students to remain in the classroom while legal processes are occurring.

In past cases, written confessions have led to charges of departmental coercion, prolonging the judicial process and clouding the issues, said John Jackson, dean of the

The draft also increases a department's involvement in determining whether or not a student has cheated, said Morgan, director of Allied Health and Public Services in the College of Technical Careers.

This proposal would allow the departmental chairperson to review the complaint and determine whether there was a code violation, he said.

Under this proposal, if charges are filed the department chairperson would be responsible for notifying the accused student within five school days.

No formal hearing is conducted at the department level under the current code. Instead the case goes straight to the college's dean, Morgan said.

'Star Wars' mission ready

Discovery to deploy project for testing orbiting nuclear missile defense system

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — Braced for stormy weather, rocket engineers cleared the decks Monday to fuel the shuttle Discovery for blastoff Tuesday on an unclassified "Star Wars" voyage to develop ways of detecting enemy missiles in flight.

Pending a final weather update, engineers planned to start pumping a half-million gallons of rocket fuel into Discovery's external tank at 9:45 p.m., setting the stage for a launch attempt at 6:05 a.m. Tuesday, just 18 days after Atlantis took off on the year's first shuttle mission.

While Discovery's countdown ticked smoothly into its final hours, Air Force meteorologists predicted a 60-percent chance of high winds and thunderstorms at launch time that could delay liftoff. But forecasters called for a 50-50 chance of acceptable weather later in the shuttle's 2 1/2-hour launch period.

"We're enjoying another clean ... countdown," said launch director Robert Sieck. "The team is still on a peak from the previous mission. The enthusiasm's high ... and we're looking forward to another one."

NASA faced a Thursday deadline for getting Discovery off the ground this week before a mandatory five-day delay to top off liquid helium coolant supplies needed by a heat-sensitive infrared telescope mounted in the shuttle's cargo bay.

Betting parlor opponents ready to boycott, picket

By Leslie Colp

A group coordinator opposed to betting says even with some legal problems, he thinks Fairmount Park still will open an off-track betting parlor in Carbondale.

Darrell Dunham, co-coordinator of Citizens for a Better Community, said the Collinsville racetrack has every reason to locate in Carbondale. If it does, however, he said his group will picket and may impose an economic boycott.

"Carbondale is an ideal place," Dunham said. "It has the kind of people (Fairmount Park) targets—teen-agers and young adults."

The question of legality comes from the proposal Fairmount Park made last month.

Fairmount Park would guarantee Carbondale and Jackson County a minimum of $75,000 a year from the 1-percent tax on the amount

Simon: Leaders needs to find solutions to deficit problem

By John Patterson
Staff Writer

The federal deficit will have everyone digging into their pocket books, but solutions can be found, said U.S. Sen. Paul Simon.

If leaders are willing to put the effort into finding new solutions at all levels of government, community development can be enhanced along with reducing the federal deficit, said Simon, D-Makanda.

Simon gave a brief speech about economic development and how the federal deficit will affect society at the 17th annual Masters of Public Affairs program luncheon at the Small Business Incubator.

Simon named four fundamental goals for moving ahead in a community.

Creativity among planners, hard work, taking risks and overall community development are part of a community expansion, he said.

Citing examples such as the Wall Street Journal publishing plant in Highland Park and the World Color Press in Herrin, Simon said it is up to the community and its leaders to make changes.

"If you do something to improve your community, it will pay off," he said.

Standing up for the rights of others also needs to be stressed for a community to fully develop, he said.

"There is a tremendous talent that we haven't tapped," Simon said referring to minorities, women

Guards thwart Marion prison break

MARION (UPI) — An inmate at the federal prison in Marion scaled a fence before being detained Monday in the first reported escape attempt at the maximum-security prison in nine years.

The prisoner suffered cuts to his hands from the barbed wire atop the fence during the attempted breakout, which took place at about 12:25 p. m., said Fred Apple, administrative assistant to Warden John Clark.

Apple said the inmate was in an outdoor exercise yard with eight other inmates when a tower guard noticed the man had climbed over the fence.

"The officer gave orders for him to cease and desist immediately and simultaneously summoned staff via radio and telephone," Apple said. "There were 50-70 staff in that area within seconds."

Apple said the prisoner would have had to climb over two more fences topped with razor wire and get through a barbed wire maze between the two barriers to complete the escape, all under the scrutiny of armed guards in prison watchtowers.

Marion officials would not identify the escapee because their investigation of the incident was still continuing. But they said he had arrived at the prison last June to serve an undisclosed sentence for bank robbery, assault on a federal officer and assaulting or

Salukis still strong after losing streak

By Eric Bugger
Staff Writer

Despite a 2-14 record in the Missouri Valley Conference, Saluki baseball coach Sam Riggleman believes his squad can make a strong showing at the conference tournament.

In order to do that though, Riggleman said the team will have to use every remaining game to improve and build upon what has developed so far this season. Riggleman hopes that improvement will start at 3 p.m. today in a single nine-inning game against St. Louis University at Abe Martin Field.

Riggleman said he still believes his team is improving toward the Valley tournament.

"I particularly feel that way after this weekend," Riggleman said. "We did some things very well last week and we played hard. The key is going to be what we do now. We've got eight ballgames this week and that should tell a lot about us. I'm optimistic we're going to improve."

SIUC will try to improve its 16-9 non-conference record against the 13-29 Billikens. The teams were scheduled to meet April 4 in Saugeit, but rain cancelled the contest.

The Dawgs dropped three games of a four-game series this weekend against nationally-ranked Wichita State, but Riggleman said a hit at the right time in two of the losses could have turned the decision around.

At times the Salukis have showed signs that they could live up to their preseason billing as the No. 24 ranked team in the country. The Dawgs have gotten strong pitching performances from senior pitcher Al Levine, who has worked in starting and relief roles this season. Levine has made 15 appearances in 1991 and posts a 4-3 mark to go along with a 1.85 ERA and three saves.

Junior Mike Van Gilder also has been used as a starter this season and responded well for SIUC. He has a 3-0 record, one save and posts a 4.54 ERA.

Offensively, the Salukis have been inconsistent the entire season. With the absence of senior slugger Mike Kirkpatrick and junior shortstop Brian Heather, SIUC has had to rely on some young talent in one of the toughest conferences in college baseball.

Freshmen Jeff Cwynar and Dan Esplin continue to lead the Saluki hitting attack. Cwynar is hitting .365 while Esplin is at .349.

"I think our young guys are playing well," Riggleman said. "They're still making mistakes at times, but they're still doing a lot of good things well."

"We're getting closer. I don't know if we're going to get it all done this spring or not. But I do think we are going to be a much better and mentally tougher club when this spring is over."

Senior outfielder Jeff Nelson has come on strong at the plate lately, leading the team with six home runs and 25 stolen bases. Also providing some much needed punch to the line-up is senior first baseman Boyd Manne. Although he is still well below the .300-mark, Manne has been hitting the ball hard the last seven ballgames and had four hits against Wichita State.

"I thought in the games Saturday and Sunday we did some things very well," Riggleman said. "I really like our improved approach at the plate, not just this weekend, but over the last week. I think that is a result of what Coach (Ken) Henderson has continued to do with our hitters."

SIUC Athletes honored at Letterwinners Banquet

Sports Information

Chris Gally, an NCAA All American in men's swimming, and Amy Rakers, the school's all-time leading scorer in women's basketball, were named Athletes of the Year for SIUC at the 1991 Saluki Letterwinners Senior Banquet Sunday at the Student Center.

Mary Jo Firnbach, a senior standout on the SIUC softball team, was a triple winner. She received both the Virginia Gordon and Outstanding Leader-Athlete Awards, while being feted as SIUC's institutional winner of the first-ever NCAA Woman of the Year Award.

Six other sports stars were honored. They were: Dirk Mathias (track), men's Outstanding Leader-Athlete, Kevin Kilgallon (football), men's Harry Bobbitt Spirit Award, Margaret Cooney (volleyball) and Sean Morrissey (swimming), Saluki Booster Club's Scholar-Athlete Award and Gina Giacone (golf) and Mark Stuart (track), Alumni Scholar-Athlete Awards.

"We couldn't be prouder of our award winners," SIUC Athletic Director Jim Hart said. "It is an impressive list. They represent a number of different sports in our program and most have excelled academically as well."

Gally, a four-time NCAA All-American in 11 events from Marlton, NJ, helped SIUC to a 24th place finish at NCAA Nationals this season. Individually, he earned All-America accolades with an eighth place finish in the 200-meter butterfly and ninth place finish in the 100-meter fly. His 200 fly time (1:46.1)—swam in the NCAAAs at Austin, Texas—ranks No. 2 at SIUC all-time along with his 200-meter freestyle clocking (1:37.50). Four school records include 47.76 in the 100 fly.

Gally copped sixth in the 100 fly at the US Swimming Nationals this season in Seattle, Wash., to become SIUC's first qualifier for the World University Games since 1983. He will swim on the US Team on July 15 through the 21st in Sheffield, England.

"Chris came to us as an accomplished athlete, but has made steady progress each year," SIUC coach Doug Ingram said. "Qualifying for the World University Games capped an outstanding career for him."

"But I am just as proud of him for what he had done in the classroom," Ingram said of his food and nutrition major. "Academics wasn't his strong suit when he began college here, but he will get his degree in May and now he is even considering graduate school."

Netters prepare for Gateway tourney

By Wayne Frazer
Staff Writer

The SIUC women's tennis team is preparing for the Gateway Conference Tournament at Drake University this weekend.

The team is 9-7 this spring with a 2-2 mark in the conference. Saluki head coach Judy Auld said the team should be ranked third coming into the finale in Des Moines, Iowa.

"Drake should be first, Wichita State second and then SIUC," Auld said. "We've lost to those schools and beaten everybody else. I think it's basically a three-way tournament."

The tournament is set up like match play with six singles and three doubles, rather than all players being bracketed by their playing position. Auld said Illinois

State and Western Illinois also have an outside shot.

"Illinois State has a pretty decent team and they might be able to knock off somebody if they are playing really well," Auld said. "They only lost to Wichita State 5-4. Western is also pretty good, but they aren't as strong all the way through the line-up."

Golf team scores low, takes third at Bradley

By Cyndi Oberle
Staff Writer

While many students were having a ball at Springfest, the SIUC men's golf team was hitting them at the Bradley Invitational Saturday and Sunday.

The Salukis are continuing to score low and place high, tying for third in a field of 18 teams with a score of 926. Western Illinois University also placed third with the same score.

In the Dawgs last tournament, the Sixth Missouri Intercollegiate Tournament held on April 8 and 9, they also finished third.

The winner of the Bradley Invitational was Southwest Missouri State with a 914, followed by Drake University (925), SIUC and WIU and in fifth was Bradley University (938).

After the first day of play, the Dawgs were in fifth, but their second day's scores pulled them to the third position.

"In the first two rounds we didn't play as well as I know we could have," Saluki coach Lew Hartzog said. "But I was really pleased with Sunday's play. That was what brought us the third place."

Individually, the Saluki's made a mark on their opponents with junior Sean Leckrone again

Saluki recruit named Missouri's top player

By Paul Pabst
Staff Writer

The future of the Saluki men's basketball team received a ray of sunshine last weekend as one of its recruits, Marcus Timmons, was honored as the top high school basketball player in Missouri.

Timmons, a 6-foot-7 forward out of Scott County High School, was named Mr. Show-Me Basketball at the Missouri High School Basketball Coaches Association's annual meeting in Columbia, Mo.

The Salukis signed Timmons to a national letter of intent during the early signing period in November and he went on to dominate the state as a senior. He averaged 20 points, 14 rebounds and 8 assists last season.

The Salukis are hoping Timmons can bring his winning ways to Carbondale, after leading his team to four consecutive state championships.

Timmons will help offset the loss of graduating seniors Rick Shipley and Sterling Mahan, who helped lead the 1990-91 Salukis to a 19-14 record, including two wins in the National Invitational Tournament.

Guerrilla leaders to avenge missile attack in Afghanistan

ASADABAD, Afghanistan (UPI) — Rescuers Monday searched for more survivors in the rubble of buildings leveled by a missile attack by loyalist troops that killed more than 300 people and wounded more than 700 others, and guerrilla leaders vowed to avenge the assault. "We will avenge our martyrs in whatever way we can. This cannot be forgiven," warned Haji Rozi Khan, the interior minister of the guerrilla-held Kunar Province. At least two and perhaps as many as four long-range missiles were fired Saturday night by Afghan government forces.

Israeli-backed troops fire artillery in Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Israeli-backed Lebanese troops Monday engaged in fierce artillery exchanges with gunmen in southern Lebanon and arrested 10 people in the Israeli-proclaimed "security zone" for allegedly playing a role in guerrilla action, security sources said. Earlier, Israel thrust helicopter-backed troops into a Lebanese border area on a sweeping mission shortly after Israeli forces killed two guerrillas trying to sneak into Israel, the sources said. The violence spread as gunners of the Israeli-backed South Lebanon Army militia fought a heavy artillery battle.

 Guion S. Bluford, the first black American to rocket into orbit, regarded his third space voyage aboard the shuttle Discovery as an important step toward proving the viability of the Strategic Defense Initiative missile defense plan. "I think Congress is recognizing ... the importance of defense against missile attack, and recognizing that not only the Soviet bloc has missiles but other countries are developing missiles as well as nuclear capability," he said in an interview.

Media makes fair trial impossible—lawyers

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Attorneys for four police officers indicted in the videotaped beating of Rodney King asked a judge Monday to move the case out of the county, claiming extensive publicity would make a fair trial impossible. "If there was ever a case that merits a change of venue, it's this one," said attorney Michael Stone, who represents Officer Laurence Powell. Stone argued that — although the beating created a furor of international dimensions, news coverage has been heated in Los Angeles, where the videotape is still seen almost daily on local newscasts.

Edgar proposes $5.5 billion to improve, preserve roads

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — Gov. Jim Edgar Monday unveiled an austere, $5.5 billion road plan for Illinois for the next five years that he said will focus on preserving older roads and easing traffic congestion in Chicago's growing suburbs. The proposal calls for spending $1.1 billion on roads in the fiscal year that begins in July, with 89 percent of that money going to rehabilitation and repair. Even though few new highways will be built, Edgar said three projects linking Springfield to the rest of the state will be completed in the next fiscal year.

Illinois poor pay more taxes than rich—study

CHICAGO (UPI) — A study shows Illinois residents earning less than $15,000 a year pay a much greater percentage of their income in taxes than those earning $900,000. The Citizens for Tax Justice Monday said Illinois is among the 10 worst states when it comes to taxing the poor and that is what makes it so difficult for governmental units to raise needed revenue. David Wilhelm, the director of the Washington, D.C.-based group, said those making about $14,700 annually in Illinois pay about 16.5 percent of their income in taxes while those earning $900,000 pay only 6 percent.

Students urge politicians to vote for tax surcharge

By Amy Cooper
Staff Writer

Students supporting the income tax surcharge will find it easy to tell their legislators about it.

Undergraduate Student Government and University Relations have established a letter writing campaign in the Student Center to urge the Illinois General Assembly to continue the temporary 1-half percent income tax surcharge, which expires June 30.

Legislatures implemented the surcharge in 1989 to provide money for the Education Assistance Fund, half of which went to local government spending and half to education.

A 5-percent tuition increase already has been approved for SIUC, but without the surcharge continuation, tuition could be increased by 24-percent, effective fall semester 1991.

Dorothy Garsky, associate director of University Relations, said the purpose of the letter writing campaign is to avoid further tuition increases.

Tables and computers have been set up at the south end of the Student Center for the campaign.

Students can give their names and addresses and a form letter will be sent to an Illinois representative or senator, asking them to continue the surcharge which provides $15 million for the University.

Garsky said USG and University Relations types and mails the letters. All students have to do is give their names.

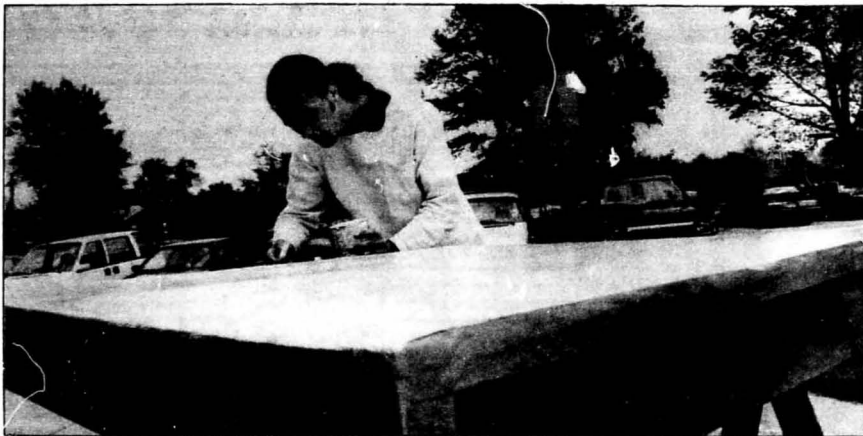

"All we ask is for the student to read the letter and sign it," Garsky said.

Monday was the eighth day the tables have been set up and the campaign will continue until May 3, she said.

Garsky said between 700 and 800 responses have been received so far.

"I encourage people to come out and look at what we're doing," Garsky said. "The more responses we have, the more successful we're going to be."

Jack Dyer, executive director of University Relations, said SIUC has shared the sample letters with other universities and colleges in Illinois and he assumes other schools are participating in similar campaigns.

Simon holds town meeting at SIUC

By John Patterson
Staff Writer

Students and Carbondale residents voiced their concerns about education, the energy plan and other national issues with U.S. Sen. Paul Simon Monday.

Simon, D-Makanda, was at SIUC to give his first town meeting on a college campus. The event was arranged and set up by an SIUC political science honors class under the instruction of Barbara Brown.

The meeting had no agenda and audience members took turns voicing their opinions.

Simon answered questions on education and how upcoming Congressional changes will influence students.

Current education plans and the talks of improvement are nice but not nearly enough, he said.

"We need something more than speeches. We need resources," he said.

President George Bush's education plan was compared to his energy plan, both of which Simon said were "non-plans".

A good test of how dedicated Congress is to education will be the re-authorization of the Higher Education Act this summer.

The energy plan was criticized by Simon who said alternative energy sources need to be stressed.

The Persian Gulf war was an example of why the United States needs an effective energy plan using coal technology and ethanol.

"No state in the nation has more coal and coal reserves than Illinois," he said.

Conservation methods and solar power were other alternatives Simon said needed to be used to reduce the country's dependence on oil.

Questions on the amount of money spent on the military in comparison to education brought up the Persian Gulf war.

Simon said he believes in a strong and flexible military, but current military spending needs to be re-prioritized.

A large part of military spending goes toward the threat of the Soviet Union invading Western Europe—an action Simon said is unlikely to occur.

U.S. policy on arms sales and allied countries selling arms to its enemies brought up the issue of who the United States should support in foreign wars.

"When Iraq was fighting Iran, we embraced Saddam Hussein," he said. "We have to stop being too cozy with dictators."

A Middle East solution needs to be addressed, but current efforts don't concentrate on the area, he said.

Simon has proposed designating a "roving ambassador" to stay in the Middle East to work with the countries during negotiations.

He suggested former Secretary of State George Schultz or former President Jimmy Carter.

With a conflict of political interest existing between Carter and Bush, Simon said Schultz would "be a natural."

Secretary of State James Baker has made several trips to the Middle East to try to arrange peace negotiations, but Simon said problems still exist.

Alternatives ease prison overcrowding

INSTEAD OF JUST PATCHING UP the problems of prison overcrowding, the Department of Corrections must push harder to fully repair Illinois prisons.

State prisons currently operate at 143 percent of capacity. In other words, the 23 minimum and medium security prisons and nine community correction centers are meant to hold 20,000 inmates; instead, nearly 28,500 inmates are being confined in the state.

The suggestion to build more prisons is the most immediate reaction.

In fact, four prison-work camps in Du Quoin, Clayton, Paris and White Wall, as well as the Big Muddy River medium security prison near Rend Lake, are in various stages of completion.

UNFORTUNATELY, THE TIGHT $562.7 million budget currently allotted to the Department of Corrections will prevent these facilities from opening upon completion. The money to actually operate these prisons simply does not exist.

Although these facilities could be opened as temporary solutions, more permanent solutions must be sought out.

Electronic monitoring systems have been used more and more in recent years.

Under such a system, offenders of nonviolent crimes wear a bracelet that officials monitor 24 hours a day while the criminals serve sentences in their own homes.

THIS PLAN PROVES TO BE an economical benefit by cutting down on the number of prison inmates. According to the Department of Corrections, this plan saves $2.25 million a year. The plan has largely been considered a success since its inception in Jackson County in 1984.

The system addresses nonviolent offenders, but other measures must be taken to directly take on the problem of overcrowding. One solution involves letting prisoners out on parole earlier.

Programs such as Meritorious Good Time (MGT) award prisoners for good behavior at regular intervals during their incarceration.

This provides incentives to prisoners to behave in positive ways in order to get out earlier as well as creating a more balanced "in-out" flow of prisoners.

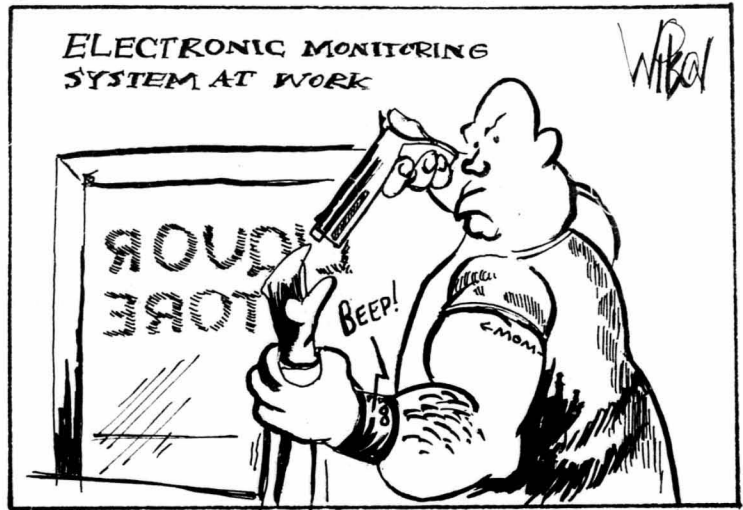

ALSO, PROGRAMS SUCH AS THOSE proposed by the Islamic Correctional Reunion Association can provide prisoners with better vocational and financial training. This can deter prisoners from violating their paroles by training them for the "outside" world.

Without the tools to adequately adapt outside the prison once they are released, ex-prisoners may return to crime and again to prison. Unfortunately, tighter budgets can prevent such programs from gaining their potential.

In a "band-aid" society such as ours, in which symptoms of problems are treated more frequently than the causes, building more prisons seems like the best answer.

In reality, this solution only works in the short-term, especially when the state budget prevents even these temporary measures.

More permanent and workable solutions exist. They must now be examined and implemented.

Interest in special school honorable but expensive

In Wednesday's DE, a meeting of those interested in the formation of a "Christian High School" was reported.

I realize that this undertaking requires huge investments of both time and wealth.

These Christians are to be applauded for their commitment to their children.

We're all familiar that public education is funded by real estate taxes, and available to all.

Because residents are already paying, through taxes, for both primary and secondary education, it would seem redundant to establish privately-funded schools also.

Paying twice for something is an example of poor stewardship. It will be argued that the public school doesn't meet the quality standards demanded by responsible Christian parents.

Well, get involved in your public school system and make it better.

Emmanuel advocates will argue, I'm sure, that school has a big influence on their children, and as responsible parents, they must make sure that influence is a good one.

There's also the risk, should this be the first in a series of private schools, that eventually those with the means will all send their offspring to parochial schools—either religious or secular, while those with less will be forced to settle for public education.

One of the virtues of universally available public education is that it opens opportunity to children from lower socio-economic strata.

If people of any means all send their children to parochial schools, interest in and commitment to public education will decline, and eventually, funding will dry up.

After all, if your Joe and my Sally are both out of public schools, is it really necessary to spend so much money there?

Jesus once told Believers that they're "the salt of the earth."

Salt is used to season, to preserve, and to activate leaven. A small amount of salt can make a great deal of difference, but only if it's mixed with or applied to something.

If all the "salt" leaves our public school, we'll all be the poorer for it.—Linda Davis, volunteer tutor, Carbondale.

School of music overlooked by Daily Egyptian

I am writing to comment on the article by Doug Toole in the April 17 DE titled "CCFA students value recognition of honors."

In this article, the sentence "Seven CCFA student received a total of $2,900 in college-wide awards on Honors Day April 7" specifically excludes scholarships given by the School of Music.

Maybe more students would feel honored if the DE would acknowledge them in some way.

The School of Music honors many students with scholarships throughout the school year. It is understandable that the paper cannot name everyone that received honors for the 1990-91 school year, but the least that can be expected is to mention each department in the CCFA that did give scholarships.

Your paper mentioned a few of the departments within the CCFA, but excluded others. It is frustrating to stand by and watch not only the DE but the administration as well overlook the School of Music.

Just because we are not housed in the CCFA building does not mean we are not part of the college.

The students who worked hard and received honors get a "thumbs up" from everyone here at the School of Music. To the Daily Egyptian goes a "thumbs down" for their inaccuracy and insensitivity.—Paula A. Noor, graduate, opera.

World is full of 'ignorant babies'

This letter is in response to Mr. Lofgren's letter on no more facts cited.

Mr. Lofgren, thank you for your letter. I liked it. I think we're on the same wavelength. Like me, you showed how car world works.

It demonstrated that we are ignorant babies.

We deal with things in the past. Who cares? It's over. Why don't we deal with things in the future like the ozone, the homeless, the Kurds, or even maybe the mess in the Middle East so we don't have to make stupid decisions that kill people? (I do agree with you, this war was for a very stupid reason)

It also proves we're babies, because like I am doing right now, and like you did to me in your letter, when we can't think of any more facts, we become name-callers.

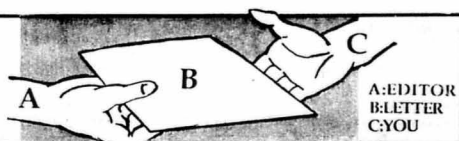

Observe our beloved Congress in action one time and you will see.

You're right, I'm no rocket scientist or lawyer, but I'm right and you're wrong.—Scott Bolger, junior, aviation management.

Discovery was scheduled to rocket into a 160-mile-high orbit to kick off the second decade of shuttle operations, the 40th flight since launches began on April 12, 1981.

Navy Capt. Coats, 45, Air Force Lt. Col. Hammond, 39, Gregory Harbaugh, 35, Charles Lacy Veach, 46, Air Force Col. Guion Bluford, 48, Richard Hieb, 35, and Air Force Lt. Col. Donald McMonagle, 38, plan to spend eight days in orbit before gliding to a landing next week at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif.

NASA originally planned to launch Discovery on Feb. 26, but the flight was delayed twice, first by leaky rocket thrusters and then by cracks in the hinges of fuel line doors in the belly of the orbiter that must close properly in space to allow a safe re-entry.

The goal of the flight is to carry out a smorgasbord of unclassified "Star Wars" experiments to learn how an enemy missile's fiery exhaust plume appears against the deep black of space and the brilliant blues and whites of planet Earth.

The results will be used by Strategic Defense Initiative engineers to design sensors that can locate, identify and track enemy missiles in flight so future SDI battlestars can blast them out of space before impact in the United States.

"What do our targets look like against deep black sky, against the aurora, against the Earth background, how does that change in summer and winter, night and day?" asked Michael Griffin, a scientist with the Strategic Defense Initiative Office.

"This mission attempts to look at a range of (data) going from what we call cold bodies all the way up through very representative rocket plumes ... to try to get very, very highly refined data on what our targets look like."

While critics charge such a "Star Wars" system would not be able to stop an all-out Soviet attack, supporters say it could, in fact, shoot down missiles fired by smaller nations.

"I've heard estimates that by the turn of the century we'll have 15 Third World countries that'll have intercontinental ballistic missile capability," Coats said in an interview. "So we're not safe over here and the nightmare of having to worry about your children being terrorized is a real one to me."

In one of the most complicated shuttle flights ever attempted, Discovery's astronauts plan to launch and later retrieve a high-tech satellite that will study scores of shuttle rocket firings from up to 6 miles away in an intricate orbital ballet that leaves little room for error.

The astronauts also plan to dump several rocket-related chemicals into space and to launch three small satellites that will release fuel into orbit that will be studied by a battery of sensors on the shuttle, on the ground and on board the retrievable satellite.

In the meantime, an infrared telescope in Discovery's cargo bay will be used to study the appearance of Earth's atmosphere, the aurora and the limb of the planet where the atmosphere merges with the black of space.

Harbaugh said, "The theory is that we'll be able to build sensors that'll be able to filter out those things that are naturally occurring and focus on those things that are not."

wagered. The city must agree, however, not to charge an entry fee for the first five years of operation and rebate any revenue in excess of $75,000 to Fairmont Park or the developers of the project.

If the amount wagered exceeds $11 million, the city and the county will receive 1 percent of the revenue.

In addition to revenue generated from the amount wagered, Carbondale will receive taxes from activities associated with the parlor, including a 1-percent food and beverage tax and a 4-percent hotel/motel tax.

City Attorney Michael Wepsiec said the proposal is "not illegal, it is just not allowed by law. It is inconsistent with the statute."

Wepsiec was referring to the Illinois Revised Statute of 1989, which includes the Horse Racing Act of 1975 and states cities and counties are not allowed to waive money entitled to them.

The city and Jackson County are entitled to one percent of the amount wagered at the parlor.

The city is entitled to the money, Wepsiec said. There is no provision for a rebate in the statute.

City staff and officials from Fairmont Park are planning a meeting in the near future, Wepsiec said. But he would not disclose the time of the meeting or what changes in the proposal might be considered.

Dunham said CBC is planning a meeting this week to determine further action. CBC will picket the parlor and may decide not to patronize some businesses if the parlor opens in Carbondale.

"An economic boycott, if done properly, can be effective," he said.

and the disabled.

The main problem in the United States is the growing deficit, he said.

With the deficit expected to reach nearly $290 billion in the next year, Simon said it is squeezing out the government's ability to respond to education and health care needs along with other domestic problems.

Although there has been public criticism for not imposing strict trading regulations with Japan, Simon said it is hard to cut back on a country that is funding our government.

He said the U.S. government borrows up to $13 billion a month to keep itself operating.

If changes aren't made soon, Simon said the government will have only three alternatives: cutting Social Security payments, increasing taxes or printing more money.

The first two choices are political suicide, Simon said and increasing the amount of money in circulation is the easy way out but also the most dangerous.

"We need to face these problems now," he said. "It's not a question of resources, it's a question of will."

The focus of questions turned to the presidential election race for 1992, and what it will take for the Democratic Party to make a strong showing.

"I hope we come up with a good candidate, but I don't know who it will be. I know who it won't be," Simon said.

In 1988, Simon was unsuccessful in his campaign for president.

Simon said he predicts a strong race on both sides, with domestic issues taking the forefront now that the war is over.

The Senator stood by his early decision that sending troops to the gulf may have been premature and sanctions should have been given time to work.

"We are facing a variety of problems through the use of force," he said. "Once you use force, you never know where the ball is going to bounce."

NOTICE TO CUT GRASS AND WEEDS

It is a violation of the Revised Code of the City of Carbondale for any person to permit grass or weeds to grow in excess of six (6) inches in height on property. The property owner, person in control or agents of such owner or person in control have the responsibility to see that grass and weeds are kept cut on such properties owned or controlled by them.

THE BASIC PROVISIONS ARE:

- (1) Weeds and grass are to be kept cut to less than 6-inch height.
- (2) Property owners and/or persons in control of land are responsible for keeping grass and weeds cut up to the curb or edge of pavement or ditchline of adjoining streets and alleys.
- (3) If a person fails to keep weeds and grass properly mowed, the City can issue a court citation and post the property. Failure to mow the premises results in the City having a contractor mow the property and bill the owner. If the bill is not paid within 60 days of mowing, a Notice of Lien is placed on the property as shown by the Office of the Recorder of Deeds of Jackson County, Illinois.

THE MINIMUM MOWING FEE CHARGED BY THE CITY OF CARBONDALE IS $57.75 PER LOT.

The complete requirements and limited exceptions that apply in some cases to lands zoned "Forestry" and zoned and used for agricultural purposes are found in Chapter 11 of the Revised City Code. Any complaints concerning high grass or weeds and/or obnoxious plant growth may be phoned in to the Code Enforcement Division at 549-5302, between the hours of 8:00 a.m. and 5:00 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Quake hits Costa Rica; four killed

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (UPI) — A powerful earthquake measuring 7.2 on the Richter scale rocked central Costa Rica Monday, killing at least four people, collapsing buildings and severing electrical service, officials said.

The quake, centered 26 miles southwest of Puerto de Limon on the Atlantic Coast, struck about 4 p.m. and seismographs at the University of California recorded shock waves of 7.2 on the Richter scale, officials said.

Two adults and a child were killed when the International Hotel in downtown Puerto de Limon collapsed, authorities said.

A blaze erupted at the Moin oil refinery, owned by the state-run Costa Rican Oil Refinery, damaging two storage tanks and injuring three workers, officials said.

Scores of buildings and a sea wall were damaged in Puerto de Limon, about 85 miles east of the capital of San Jose. Roads connecting Puerto de Limon to the capital city to the coast were rendered impassable, officials said.

One death was reported in Bataan, where more than 50 houses were destroyed and railroad tracks were twisted, officials said.

In Cartago, 15 miles southeast of the capital, authorities reported widespread damage to buildings and the Church of St. Virgin of Los Angeles, patron Saint of Costa Rica.

Newman Center bids farewell to priest departing for India

By Jefferson Robbins
Staff Writer

The Newman Catholic Student Center will say farewell to a longtime friend Saturday, three months early.

A potluck dinner and a dance, beginning after the 6:30 p.m. International Mass, are Newman's way of saying goodbye to Father Joe Van Leeuwen, a six-year Newman staff member who will be posted to India in August.

Van Leeuwen

Van Leeuwen said the decision to hold a going-away party before August was his own.

"I wanted to have a get-together before the semester was out, while all the students and everybody were still here," he said.

Van Leeuwen's new station, a newly founded Passionist community on India's southern coast, is his sixth posting since his ordainment in 1964. Now 55, Van Leeuwen said this posting may be unique in his career.

"I'm very excited and am looking forward to India," he said. "I think that's going to be a fantastic experience."

"But it's probably going to be just long enough to start enjoying myself and get to know the people, and then I'll be somewhere else again," he added.

Van Leeuwen, born in Walnut, Kan., made his final decision to join the Catholic priesthood in his senior year of high school.

"I think it was an evolving kind of thing," he said. "I'd always wanted to do something special with people. I was always very much people oriented."

He said he was influenced by the example of Passionist monks in his childhood community.

"I saw that they were very much involved with people's lives," he said. "But they also lived that life in the monastery, which seemed to me very peaceful, very close to God."

The 20 years after his ordainment took Van Leeuwen to posts in Detroit, Chicago and Cincinnati before he joined the Newman staff in 1985. He said a distinct difference exists between ministering to a residential parish community and a college community such as Newman.

"I've liked both," he said. "I've enjoyed this more in the sense that I'm concentrating more on one age group, which is a lot different from a parish."

Van Leeuwen praised his college-age parishioners at Newman for their openness and positive attitudes.

"Just to be a part of their lives at this time...which I think is a very critical time, especially faithwise — kind of going from a childhood faith to a more adult faith — to me that's really special."

He said his years at Newman have been special because of the variety of students.

"That has been a really enriching experience — every day meeting people from all over the world," he said.

"I have very deep roots here in six and a half years," he said. "I've become very attached to the community and the people here. I'm going to miss that a lot."

LSAT format changes increase test difficulty

Kylie Robertson
Staff Writer

Recent changes in the Law School Admissions Test means students hoping to study law in the future will be taking a more difficult test.

In the past, many people have scored well and schools were finding it very difficult to choose between candidates, said Betty Blumenthal, co-administrator of Stanley Kaplan, a test-prep center.

In 1990, 136,000 students took the test, an 18-percent increase from the previous year, she said. The harder the test gets, fewer students will be admitted into law schools, she said.

universities like Harvard, Yale and Stanford, it won't have a major impact on all students.

The test indicates how likely students are to do well in their first year of study.

It does not indicate how students will continue to perform or whether they will be good lawyers when they get out, Nichols said.

"Students have to remember that the test is only one aspect of the credentials used for law school admission," he said. "I know at SIUC we aim to have a diverse entering class in terms of age, experience and region of the country."

Undergraduate grade point average, the student's personal statement, letters of recommendation and the difficulty of their curriculum determine whether a student is admitted, Nichols said.

The Law School Admissions Council has increased the number of sections in the test and decreased the amount of time allowed to complete each section.

The number of subjects has been narrowed and the point spread has been widened, said Blumenthal.

"The aim is to weed out the cream of the crop," she said.

Steve Nichols, assistant dean and director of administration for the SIUC School of Law, said the law services responsible for the change are hoping to get a larger discrepancy in scores.

The old scale rated people from 10 to 48 with 32 being the national average, Nichols said. The new score range is from 120 to 180 and 150 is the expected average.

The old format saw a great deal of upper-range scores, Nichols said. Although this new test may limit entrance into the more elite

It is possible for candidates to take the test many times, but like SIUC, most schools take the average score, if more than one test is completed by a candidate.

"It is advisable that students be well-prepared for the first test. A low mark can pull down other higher marks considerably," Nichols said.

The Stanley Kaplan Education Center will be holding a free law school information forum at 5:30 p.m. Wednesday in the Orient Room of the Student Center.

The forum will include alumni from the University of Illinois at Champaign-Urbana.

Reservations are necessary at (314) 997-7791 or (618) 529-2440.

Bengali students celebrate holiday after month of fasting

By Chyrese Wolf
Staff Writer

SIUC Bengali students ushered in their new year, celebrated the Bangladesh Independence Day, and Eid-ul Fitr with an evening of festivities Saturday.

The evening consisted of speeches, a culture show, and a buffet.

Guest of honor was Mahbubul Alam, ambassador at large in charge of education and press for the United Nations.

Bangladesh became an independent state in 1971 after several months of war, Alam said.

Bangladesh is the eighth most populous country in the world with more than 110 million people, he said.

The Bangladesh Parliament has 330 members of which 30 seats are reserved for women, Alam said. It is the only country in the world in which women hold the two highest offices in the land—prime minister and president.

Alam said in reference to the event, "your initiative in organizing such a function on your campus thousands of miles away from home speaks eloquently of your love for your country, the culture, tradition, its language and respect for the struggle of our people."

The Bangladesh students in

Mahbubul Alam

Carbondale are not only active in academic pursuits but also are culturally active, Alam said.

The Eid-ul Fitr holiday, the day after the Muslims fast for a month, "conveys a message of unity, brotherhood, and virtue," he said.

Alam said a struggle was taking place in Bangladesh during the gulf crisis.

When people were paying attention to the gulf crisis, Bangladesh was going through a revolution, he said.

Although Bangladesh was involved in its own war, it sent more than 2,000 soldiers to Saudi Arabia and was part of the international coalition, Alam said.

The gulf crisis had an enormous impact on the Bengali economy, he said. The economy has been very bad because of the Persian Gulf war.

This is because more than 100,000 Bangladesh people were working in Iraq and Kuwait before the conflict began, Alam said. These people were forced to give up their jobs and take refuge in Jordan.

Other guests include Benjamin Shepherd, vice president for academic affairs and research; Charles Klasek, executive assistant; the president; and Nabarun Ghose, president of the International Student Association.

Shepherd said international students on campus enrich other students and faculty academically as well as culturally.

"I hope we (SIUC) can give some small part back," he said.

Klasek said the observance of Ramadan, the Moslem month of fasting, "is simply to remember that there are people who are less fortunate than we are."

"There is so much work we all have to do to help those people all over the world," he said.

The culture show was composed of traditional Bengali songs, a Bengali poetry recitation translated into English, and a flute solo.

A classical dance was performed by Dominic Gomes, senior in business administration.

Africa Week features United Nations official

By Chyrese Wolf
Staff Writer

The African Student Association will sponsor its annual Africa Week festivities this week.

This year's events include an African artifact display window in the Student Center, a guest speaker, a banquet featuring African cuisine and a dance.

Charles Mwambula, president of the African Student Association from Zambia, said the purpose of the event is to educate people about Africa.

D. Abugarskall Kai, program coordinator from Liberia, said the event promotes African cordialness, tradition, and heritage throughout SIUC and Carbondale.

The association will sponsor a guest speaker, Dr. F. Lwanyantika Marsha, director of public information at the United Nations in the office of the Secretary General.

Marsha will speak on "Ethnicity vs. Democracy: The Future of Political Pluralism in Africa" from 7:30 to 10 p.m. Wednesday in the Student Center Auditorium.

A panel discussion will be held Friday at 7 p.m. in the Student Center Video Lounge.

The panel will be composed of four African-Americans and four Africans who were selected on the basis of knowledge, awareness and interest in African events and history, Kai said.

Bridging the gap between African-Americans and Africans will be the topic of discussion, Mwambula said.

Mwambula said the purpose of the panel is to allow people to interrelate and learn from each other.

"We need to work together in unity to build a common understanding between us," he said.

A buffet featuring African dishes will be from 1 to 4 p.m. Saturday at Quigley Hall. The buffet will be followed by a dance; time and location are to be announced, Mwambula said.

Violent demonstrations mark Hitler's 102nd birthday bash

BERLIN (UPI) — Small groups of neo-Nazis staged violent demonstrations in Germany Saturday to celebrate the 102nd anniversary of Adolf Hitler's birthday, and one right-wing group attacked Kurds staging a hunger strike to protest Iraqi oppression.

In Dresden an estimated 150 right-wing extremist youths shouting "Sieg Heil" were surrounded by riot police and crack federal border troops to prevent clashes with several thousand participants at an anti-racism rally held in the city center. Police made more than 40 arrests

Saturday evening, after left-wing protesters fought with neo-Nazis in Dresden's historic center.

Observers said far fewer neo-Nazis took to the streets in Dresden than expected.

The call for celebrating Hitler's birthday was even broadcast on German cable television. Logan Evans, an American neo-Nazi, appeared for nearly an hour on Berlin's "Open Station", a cable station reserved for amateur television producers and public service announcements Thursday. "Allah is great, Heil Hitler," Evans said in his broadcast.

Anti-government protesters march through Sofia

SOFIA, Bulgaria (UPI) — More than 5,000 opposition protesters chanting, "Red Garbage!" marched peacefully through the streets of the capital Monday evening in what has become a regular outpouring of support for Bulgaria's embattled democratic reforms.

The protesters waved blue flags to show their support for the "Blues" as the 17-party Union of Democratic Forces (UDF) alliance, the largest Bulgarian opposition group, is popularly known.

Some marchers even carried American flags as they chanted "UDF!" and "Red Garbage!" slogans directed against the ruling Bulgarian Socialist Party, the renamed Communist Party which controls Parliament and the government.

At an hourlong rally in Prince Battenberg Square, radical speakers called for the dissolution of Parliament and the holding of new elections in June because of alleged ruling party-inspired delays in the enactment of Western-style economic reforms.

Petar Dertliev, a UDF co-chairman, urged restraint on the crowd, saying: "I too support early elections, but first Parliament should adopt the (new) Constitution and the basic economic laws."

On Sunday night President Zhelev Zhelev warned Parliament in a nationwide television broadcast that its delays in approving a new Constitution and basic reform legislation were endangering Bulgaria.

Feuding fraternity members shoot it out at apartments

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (UPI) — Members of two feuding University of Florida fraternities were involved in a weekend shootout at an off-campus housing complex, police said Monday.

The incident occurred about 3 a.m. Sunday at the Hawaiian Village apartment complex in Gainesville, police spokesman Sadie Darnell said.

"According to witnesses, approximately 10 to 12 individuals attempted to force their way into an apartment. Gunfire came from the apartment, directed at the people at the front door. Gunfire was returned.

"No one was hurt. No one was identified as being the shooters for either side—no one has been arrested," Darnell said.

"We notified University of Florida officials because some witnesses indicated there may be two fraternities involved."

The Gainesville Sun said the men attempting to break into the apartment were associated with the Phi Beta Sigma fraternity at the University of Florida.

Police identified the apartment resident as John Kincaide, 20. The newspaper said Kincaide was a member of the rival Kappa Alpha Psi fraternity.

The incident was triggered by an argument earlier in the evening at a fraternity dance.

Quiet Earth

Commitment, not commotion marks 21st annual Earth Day

United Press International

The 21st annual observance of Earth Day may be quieter than last year's celebrations but that shouldn't be taken as a letdown in commitment, Illinois environmentalists said Monday.

In fact, more Illinoisans are probably committed to environmental causes in 1991 than last year, when the 20th anniversary of the anti-pollution holiday brought a cascade of national publicity, said Kevin Greene of Citizens for a Better Environment.

"This year's Earth Day people are going to be more active, doing things in their communities instead of buying T-shirts," Greene said. "People are trying to make changes in their lives that are going to make a difference to the environment."

Thousands of conservationists, schoolchildren and ordinary Illinoisans observed Earth Day with rallies, demonstrations and tree-planting ceremonies statewide.

Environmentalists said the so-called "Green" movement has made modest gains nationwide since the 1990 hoopla spotlighted two decades of work to clean America's air, land and water.

Lynne Padovan of the Illinois Environmental Council, which is a coalition of community environmental groups, said she is especially pleased by children's increased environmental awareness and the growing number of homeowners who recycle their household garbage.

"It's a dedicated interest, a deep-seated interest," she said. "The hoopla is great but after that we still need the foot soldiers to get the work done."

But Greene and Padovan said the environmental lobby made little progress in the Illinois General Assembly last year, where lawmakers are still wrestling with a comprehensive rewrite of the state's solid waste law.

Greene said his group's only major legislative success last year was its successful effort to block a proposed version of the law (H6) environmentalists said would have taken local governments out of the landfill siting process.

A coalition of local officials, business leaders and environmentalists sat down last year to change solid waste guidelines in an effort to ease Illinois' growing shortage of landfill space.

Court lets asbestos suit proceed; 32,000 school districts involved

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court Monday let proceed a class action suit on behalf of more than 30,000 school districts nationwide against companies that used asbestos in building materials.

The court, without comment, refused to halt a class-action suit against some 50 companies scheduled to begin later this year in federal district court in Pennsylvania.

The suit, filed in 1984, seeks to recover damages for the cost school districts have incurred or will incur in removing roofing material, tile and dozens of other asbestos-containing materials.

Asbestos fibers, used for decades in hundreds of building products requiring insulation or fireproofing, have been linked to cancer.

The suit seeks to recover damages for the costs of removing asbestos Companies facing the massive class-action suit contend school districts should be required to file suit individually, because the rights of specific companies cannot properly be protected in such an all-encompassing suit.

The firms claim the ultimate recovery for the estimated 32,000 school districts still involved in the suit could be "potentially billions" of dollars.

"Substantial trial experience (has) demonstrated that asbestos-in-buildings claim requires proof that airborne asbestos fibers have emanated at hazardous levels," wrote an attorney for the companies. "Since that issue ... (is) inherently individual to each plaintiff, asbestos-in-buildings claims are clearly unsuitable for class-action treatment."

In 1984, the district court certified a nationwide opt-out class of school districts to recover damages from the companies, requiring school districts not wishing to become involved in the class-action litigation to inform the court they should not be covered. Several thousand school districts have done so, reserving their right to sue individually.

One point of this and most class-action suits is to save the judicial system from relitigating essentially the same issue thousands of times in different courts.

Prostitute carrying HIV virus arrested in Edwardsville

EDWARDSVILLE (UPI) — Prosecutors prepared Monday to charge a prostitute carrying the AIDS virus with knowingly trying to transmit the deadly disease or quarantine her under an old Illinois law once used to isolate tuberculosis patients.

The woman, described only as black and in her early 20s, was arrested in Alton Sunday night and was being held at an undisclosed location while Madison County authorities deliberated over how to keep her off the streets.

"At this point, we have two options," said Mark Von Nida, administrative assistant to Madison County State's Attorney William Haine. "We have an option of charging her of knowingly transmitting the AIDS virus. The other option allows for quarantine, which is a civil process that will allow us to isolate this individual until the time that she can assure the authorities that she is willing to act reasonably and cease from endangering the public by plying her trade."

Public health officials pressed police to make the arrest after learning about the woman's story from a police caseworker. The caseworker learned the suspect was HIV-positive when she was jailed in March on prostitution charges, Von Nida said.

Von Nida said if authorities choose the quarantine option, it would be the first time in Illinois history that the law was exercised in the case of an AIDS carrier.

The law was last used to quarantine infectious TB patients.

U.N. commission to oversee destruction of Iraqi weapons

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar appointed a Swede and an American Monday to head a special commission that will supervise the destruction of Iraq's chemical and biological weapons.

He named Swedish Ambassador Rolf Ekeus as the commission's executive chairman and Robert Gallucci, who served in the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, as Ekeus' deputy.

The 25-member commission was set up by the U.N. Security Council to rid Iraq of weapons of mass destruction, including Soviet-made Scud missiles and nuclear-weapons capabilities. The destruction of Iraq's heavy weapons is one numerous tough conditions imposed on that country in a cease-fire pact with allied forces in the Persian Gulf.

Perez de Cuellar informed the 15-nation Security Council Monday that he wants "efficient and effective" executives in order for the commission to carry out its task of destroying the weapons in 90 days beginning April 3 when the council adopted cease-fire resolution 687.

The commission will be assisted by a number of experts serving as inspectors, disposal teams and field support experts to monitor the destruction of the weapons.

The Iraqi government provided the Security Council and the International Atomic Energy Agency in Vienna last Friday an inventory of its heavy weapons.

But the United States said the list was incomplete in the area of nuclear, chemical and biological weapons and ballistic missiles, their development and support facilities.

"The council and the IAEA have not yet commented on Iraq's inventory list.

Meantime, Kuwait complained to the Security Council Monday that Iraq has not complied with cease-fire terms that demanded the release of Kuwaiti POWs and civilian detainees. Kuwait said 5,433 of its citizens are still detained by Iraq.

Kuwait's U.N. Ambassador Mohammad Abulhassan said also the Baghdad government has not returned properties seized by Iraqi troops during their 210-day occupation of the tiny emirate beginning Aug. 2, 1990.

The Iraqi News Agency reported Monday that Baghdad's permanent representative at the United Nations, Abdul Amir Al-Anbari, sent protest notes to Perez de Cuellar, accusing Iran of military incursions into Iraqi territory.

INA said two memorandums sent to the U.N. leader said "units sneaking from Iran fired rocket-propelled grenades against Iraqi soldiers near the long (Tawilah) island in the southern province."

"Other forces that infiltrated from Iran fired mortars, heavy and light machine guns against Iraqi military in the south" earlier this month, INA said.

Al-Anbari accused Iran of violating Security Council resolution 598, which called for a cease-fire between the two countries in 1988.

Museum censors art exhibit during tour for fourth-graders

By Annette Holder
Staff Writer

An art student who said she was not looking for controversy has found it.

Maria Casasola, graduate student in sculpture, created two art pieces titled "Cock Fight" that were displayed in the University Museum as part of the Master of Fine Arts exhibit from April 12-18.

"Cock Fight" is an exhibit of two roosters and both roosters have male genitalia. Robert DeHoet, museum educator, detached the genitalia from the larger rooster.

DeHoet said on the last day of the exhibit fourth-grade students were touring the museum and he had 10 to 15 minutes to teach them about the exhibits.

"I didn't have time to prepare this group for male and female sexual politics in art, which is a form of art Maria does very well," DeHoet said.

Casasola said she has mixed feelings about the censorship. She can understand the reasoning for censorship, but she wishes she had been consulted.

Casasola described her art as whimsical and silly and thinks many people view "Cock Fight" as a humorous way of looking at a male-dominated society.

"A lot of my work deals with women in society," she said. "We are living in a patriarchy (male-dominated society) and my work is a funny answer to that."

Casasola said that a statue of a naked woman is part of the museum's permanent collection, yet her piece that contained male genitalia was censored.

DeHoet said he intended for the penis to be detached only for the 45 minutes the students were in the museum.

He agreed he should not have censored Casasola's work.

"First of all, it was a mistake on my part," he said. "Maria is right. I should never have touched her work."

DeHoet said censorship is not an attitude of the museum and described what he did as one misguided act.

Casasola said she does not want to be remembered by controversy.

"Cock Fight," as well as art by other students, is on display in the theater department.

Additional drive helps Red Cross reach blood goal

By Brandi Tipps
Staff Writer

The American Red Cross obtained its goal of 1,050 units of blood Monday.

Vivian Ugent, coordinator of blood drives in Southern Illinois, said 130 units were collected at the Recreation Center for a total of 1,058.

The make-up blood drive was held because the first blood drive fell short of its goal by 127 units of blood, she said.

The goal is based on the minimum needs for all regional hospitals to maintain an adequate blood supply. Without the minimum number of units, hospitals run the risk of not having enough supplies for patients needing the blood, she said.

The first blood drive ran only three days last week and many people did not get a chance to donate, Ugent said.

"There were a lot of people coming in who appreciated that we had a make-up day, that they had wanted to give and couldn't make it in or they were deferred," Ugent said. "You just can't give up on students. They're our future. We really feel the students came through for the patients."

The next drive is in June.

Trace levels of herbicides recorded in rainwater throughout Midwest

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Trace levels of herbicides have been detected in rainwater throughout the Midwest and Northeast, with the highest concentrations occurring in a five-state region including Illinois, Iowa, Indiana, Kansas and Nebraska, scientists reported Monday.

Water quality experts with the U.S. Geological Survey said herbicide residues were found in rainwater samples collected at 81 sites in 23 states, encompassing an area from Kansas to Virginia to the Canadian border.

The scientists said average herbicide concentrations for all 23 states were well below levels considered hazardous in drinking water. They said average concentrations were no higher than 1 part per billion, about one-third of the proposed federal drinking water limit on atrazine, one of the herbicides studied.

However, the study found herbicide contamination of rainwater was widespread, with residues detected in all 23 states and at all but two of the 81 collection sites over the period April to July 1990.

The most prevalent chemicals were atrazine, alachlor and metolachlor, all suspected cancer-causing agents in humans.

Donald Goolsby, lead author of the study, said while the survey did not find health-threatening chemical levels in rainwater, it was important in that it showed how herbicides can be widely distributed in the environment.

"The findings confirm a potentially important pathway — airborne transportation — for the migration of agricultural chemicals," said Goolsby, a water quality expert in the geological survey's Denver office.

The potential for long-range transport of agricultural chemicals was first discovered in the 1970s when scientists detected trace levels of toxaphene — a pesticide used on cotton fields in the Southwest — in the water of a lake on remote Isle Royale, an island in Lake Superior near the Canadian border.

Goolsby said his study found herbicide contamination of rain was most pronounced in the main Farm Belt states of the Midwest, where pesticides are used extensively in the production of corn.

Lee Smith carrying load in Cardinals' bullpen

St. Louis flame-thrower not wasting opportunities so far in 1991

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — When the St. Louis Cardinals need help in the late innings, the ball gets tossed to Lee Smith.

Of the first seven victories this season by the Cardinals, Smith has one win and five saves in five opportunities.

Going into Monday's game against Chicago, the Cardinals, picked last by most experts, are 7-6.

"I don't think he can pitch in '95 games," Manager Joe Torre said in mock seriousness.

Catcher Tom Pagnozzi replied, "You mean we're only going to win 95?"

Smith does not think he would be a candidate for 90 games either.

"I'm getting too old for that," he said.

But Smith, 33, says he doesn't feel overused.

"I haven't thrown too many pitches," he said. "For some strange reason, I like this weather."

Smith is from Jamestown, La., but he's adapted to the cold of April.

"I guess I got used to this weather the few years I was in Chicago," he said. "I had to."

Through much of his 11-season career, Smith has not considered himself a fast starter.

"But ever since I've been training in Florida—with Boston and the Cardinals—I've had good springs," he said. "In Arizona (with the Cubs), I used to get killed. I think it's the humidity in Florida. I like to sweat."

Smith hasn't been used more than two straight days, although he said he once pitched seven games in succession in 1984.

"I'll let Torre know when I can't go," Smith said. "I'm not going to go out there half speed. I've done that too many times and gotten buried. I know my limitations."

But chances are Smith will pitch in at least 60 games. He has done that the last nine seasons. In the first of those seasons, 1982, Smith pitched in 72 games, even starting five.

He ascribes much of his success with the Cardinals to pitching home games in a large ballpark.

"It's a little easier 2-0 throwing one right down the middle and taking your chances," he said. "But, trust me, it will go out of there."

There is the possibility the Cardinals will move the fences in next year. Smith, needless to say, isn't enthralled by the prospect.

"I don't know what it is with baseball," he said. "Everybody wants to see the pitcher get his butt kicked. People don't want to see 1-0 games. I guess I'll have to start throwing more forekicks and be a ground-ball pitcher."

Players attempt to heal for conference finals

The Portland Trail Blazers and Chicago Bulls have the healthiest chance of making it to the NBA finals. Everybody else is just trying to stay healthy.

Isiah Thomas has a tender wrist. Larry Bird and Dale Ellis have injured backs. Charles Barkley has a sore knee. Kenny Smith has a twisted ankle. And the Utah Jazz has a damaged ego.

The Trail Blazers and Bulls, each holding the home-court advantage through the conference finals, are rolling entering the playoffs, which begin Thursday night with the best-of-five first round.

Portland won 16 straight games before losing Sunday to Phoenix in a meaningless finale. The Bulls, 61-21, won 7 of their last 10.

"We wanted to get the best record in the East," said Chicago's Michael Jordan, whose team meets New York in the first round. "We proved the advantage of the home court in the playoffs last year when we won all our home games."

The Trail Blazers, who face Seattle, figure to have the tougher road of the two top contenders. The Western Conference features six teams with at least 52 victories.

Only three clubs won as many as 50 in the East, and two of those—Detroit and Boston—have injury problems.

The Pistons, seeking to become the first team to "three-peat" since the 1966 Celtics won the last of seven straight championships, are worried about Thomas, who missed 32 games after wrist surgery. He had X-rays Monday and was deemed fit to play against Atlanta.

But what about the psychological fitness of the other Pistons? Thomas recently blasted his teammates for having a poor attitude.

"I think the problem is everybody has become accustomed to losing," said the MVP of last year's finals between Detroit and Portland. "Nobody gives a darn around here, and that includes the coaches."

Atlantic Division champion Boston faded down the stretch. Not coincidentally, Bird was sidelined for seven games with his inflamed disc during that span.

"For the last three or four weeks we've been playing terrible basketball," said Coach Chris Ford, whose team plays Indiana. "We're going to have to go back and start doing the things that got us here."

Baseball card case called on account of compromise

WHEATON, Ill. (UPI) — Was it right for teenager Bryan Wrzesinski of Addison to keep a Nolan Ryan baseball card he bought for $12, knowing it was worth far more?

Was Itasca shop owner Joe Irmen entitled to return of the card or another $1,188 to make up the rest of the $1,200 purchase price he said a fill-in clerk misread?

Those will remain baseball trivia questions without answers. After weeks of debate and court hearings, the parties settled the case Monday just before DuPage County Associate Judge Ann Jorgensen was to issue a ruling.

"It's the bottom of the ninth, three balls, two strikes, two outs and this game has been called on account of compromise," said Karen Delveaux, Irmen's lawyer.

The agreement reached by the lawyers calls for selling the card at a public auction, with the proceeds being split by the two sides' favorite charities, a court spokeswoman said.

Judge Jorgensen then dismissed the court action that drew nationwide media attention.

Outside the courtroom, the store owner and the teenager insisted they were fighting over moral issues — not money.

"If this was about money, I would have quit a long time ago," Irmen said.

"You always bargain for the best price you can get," Wrzesinski said.

Irmen had filed suit asking that the 14-year-old either return the card or repay the remaining money. He said a clerk who was filling at the store sold the card to the youth after misreading the price tag.

In earlier testimony, the youth said he knew the card was worth at least $600 the day in April 1990 he bought it but said he thought he had simply gotten a great deal for the valuable 1968 rookie card of the pitching great.

Irmen, who had the card on consignment from an owner who wanted at least $1,000, at first tried to persuade the youth to take cash or other items to return it. But Wrzesinski refused, prompting Irmen to turn to the courts for a solution.

Jorgensen angrily ordered all the parties out of the west suburban Chicago courtroom and into her chambers earlier in the legal tug-of-war when the youth revealed he had traded the Ryan baseball card for rookie cards of pitcher Tom Seaver and football great Joe Namath.

The lawyers said that deal may be voided because Wrzesinski is a minor.

Under terms of the settlement, the youth's lawyer, Walter Maksym, will keep the Nolan Ryan card until the auction, which both sides say may be held in June.

Draft picks negotiate better deals

NEW YORK (UPI) — Raghib "Rocket" Ismail might be gone from the NFL, but he will not be forgotten when contracts are negotiated by the rest of the league's 1991 draft picks.

Bob Woolf, the agent who represents two of the top five picks, said he and his fellow agents will use Ismail's $3 million asking price as the market value for the first pick. Ismail signed a four-year deal worth between $18 million and $26 million with Toronto of the Canadian Football League after the Dallas Cowboys would go no higher than $10 million over five years for the No. 1 pick.

Dallas instead signed defensive tackle Russell Maryland for about $8.6 million over five years, a contract Woolf called "an accommodation" because Maryland may not have gone until the fifth pick if the Cowboys signed Ismail.

"Three million dollars sets a new market value, that's what we go by," said Woolf, who represents No. 4 pick Mike Croel and No. 5 Todd Lyght. "The true second pick is Eric Turner, there is not a true No. 1 pick."

Agent Leigh Steinberg represents Maryland and safety Turner, who was chosen by Cleveland with the No. 2 pick.

"Between the two of us," Woolf said of him and Steinberg, "we'll keep the market up there."

The top pick in 1990, quarterback Jeff George, received $13 million over six years from Indianapolis. Neither the New England Patriots, who originally had the No. 1 pick and traded it to Dallas, nor the Cowboys was willing to give Ismail double that.

"Any time someone is throwing around $26 million, that's way out of proportion," Patriots CEO Sam Jankovich said.

Despite Ismail's record pay, no other first-round draft picks said they were envious of him.

"I think I'd have stayed in the United States because he's going to miss out playing against the best," said Herman Moore, who was the first wide receiver picked when Detroit selected him 10th. "(The NFL) is more of a challenge; and you'll stay in the eye of the public here."

Timberwolves wean Musselman

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — Bill Musselman, whose insistence on playing veterans put him at odds with ownership, Monday was fired as coach of the Minnesota Timberwolves.

The Timberwolves won 29 games this season, seven more than last year's initial NBA campaign. They enjoyed a 21-20 home record and ended the season Sunday by rallying from a 20-point deficit to beat Washington, their sixth victory in eight games.

But club owners Marv Wolfenson and Harvey Ratner nonetheless dismissed Musselman with a year remaining on his contract, a move that had been expected. Tom Thiboudeau, an assistant coach, also was fired.

"We felt at this time it is in the best interests of the team to make a change and head into a new direction," Bob Stein, the club's president, said at a news conference at the team's arena.

"We wish Bill Musselman well. However, major differences in philosophy necessitated a change."

Stein said Musselman was fired for two reasons: player development and communication.

"It boils down to really two issues," he said. "We talked about them before Bill was hired, and they are things that he agreed to address, but for whatever reason had a tough time doing."

Stein said Musselman wasn't willing to let young players develop.

"That's above and beyond winning any particular game at all costs," he said. "That is our top priority, and we think it's appropriate for an expansion team."

Stein also said Musselman wasn't good at telling players "what their roles are, how they're doing, why someone is promoted or demoted."

Auld said while the overall talent and competition in the Gateway is down from previous years, the Salukis can't look past the first round.

"I never like looking past the first match," Auld said. "We can't look ahead to the finals and playing Wichita State or Drake. I think there are some good teams out there."

While the Salukis are underdogs, Auld said it is not a bad position to be in.

"You don't have the pressure on the team to win," Auld said. "Everybody expects Drake to win, but I know they were scared of us a couple of weeks ago. We were 3-3 coming out of the singles and we could have won a couple of other matches."

Auld said the Salukis' success has been a mixture of senior leadership and consistency from the entire team.

"Lori Gallagher has been playing the most consistently for us," Auld said. "She has an outstanding record and has beaten some very good individual players, but I think the reason we've done well as a team is we've been getting consistent performances from everybody."

"Missy Jeffery has been struggling, but she has really come into her own in the last couple of weeks. She's a real competitor. She really wants to win the conference title because she's a senior. She's kind of a silent leader. She has much more influence on the team than sometimes the other players or I realize. Michelle Toye is also a senior and she has been up and down throughout the season, but if they both come on strong, we should be in good shape."

The semi-final match-ups are determined by coin toss. Auld said the difference could be in which team the Salukis play in the second round.

"If we play Wichita State, we have to stay even with them in singles because we have better doubles teams than they do," she said. "With Drake, we'll have to play all the way through the line-up to have a chance. We have a very good chance of reaching the finals and if we're playing well, we have a chance to win the tournament."

finishing first from the team and placing fourth overall in the invitational with a score of 227. In his last match, the Sixth Missouri Intercollegiate, Leckrone was the tournament medalist, finishing with the lowest individual score.

Freshman Sam Scheibald placed eighth in the Bradley Invite with a 230. A Southwest Missouri State player was the medalist with a score of 224.

Junior Sean English finished third in the Saluki's own line-up with a 235, followed by senior Brit Pavelonis with a 236 and senior Greg Mullican (253).

The Dawgs next match is Thursday and Friday when they will travel to Des Moines, Iowa, to defend their title in the Drake Relays Golf Classic.

"We are the defending champions, so I am really looking forward to this match," Hartzog said, "and we are going to be playing with a new line-up, bringing freshman Chris Pytell instead of Mullican."

"Greg is having some problems right now with his play and I think he needs a rest. We will just have to wait and see how this new line-up works for us."

Athlete of the Year to repeat. A two-time Kodak All-District pick and All-Gateway Conference honoree, Rakers led the Salukis in scoring and rebounding her junior and senior seasons. Career totals show her tops all-time at SIUC in scoring (1538), No. 3 in rebounding (945), No. 3 in blocks (79), No. 6 in steals (116) and No. 9 in assists (191).

In 111 games, she shot .537 from the field and .757 from the stripe, canning double figures in 76 contests, including 58 consecutive outings and 50 double-doubles. Her nine school records include career scoring average (13.9 ppg.), and single season scoring (643) and rebounding (325) marks, set her junior season when she was named the 1990 Gateway Conference Player of the Year and Tourney MVP.

During 1990-91, Rakers led the Gateway in rebounding and blocks, was No. 3 in scoring, No. 4 in field goal percentage (.535) and No. 6 in free throw shooting (.798). She was named to the All-Tournament Team at the UNLV Desert Classic.

"She is most deserving," Saluki coach Cindy Scott said. "To be selected two years in a row is a great tribute to a great athlete."

Firnback, a 1991 pre-season All-Gateway honoree and community health major with a 3.32 grade point average from Wonder Lake, will be remembered as one of SIUC's all-time softball greats. Career-wise, she has started all 163 games while batting .316 with 81 runs and 80 RBI. A .416 slugging percentage includes 13 triples—one shy of the school record. Described by Saluki coach Kay Brechtelsbauer as SIUC's finest fielding third baseman ever, she has only 11 errors in 587 total chances and she has had but two bobbles in her last 70 games.

This season Firnback has sparked SIUC to a 25-3 record, while batting .347. Last year, she was chosen All-Gateway and 2nd Team All-Midwest Regional, as well as a 2nd TE, GTE Academic All-American.

Firnback won the Gordon Award for the second consecutive year. She is only the third SIUC female athlete ever to be a multiple winner of that award, which serves as a memorial tribute to the versatile Saluki great of the late 1960s, who excelled in five sports at SIUC before dying in 1974 of cancer.

"Having coached both Virginia (Gordon) and Mary Jo, I can say firsthand that there was a remarkable resemblance," Brechtelsbauer said. "Mary Jo has been a positive and inspiring role model. She is a caring, hard working person who has led by example from the first day she entered our program. Virginia had those same special qualities. She always placed the needs of her teammates above her own."

As SIUC's NCAA Woman of the Year nominee, Firnback becomes eligible for state competition in a national awards program sponsored by Hanes Her Way, a division of the Sarah Lee Corporation, which is investing $6 million in the promotion of women's sports at NCAA-member institutions.

If Firnback is selected one of 52 state winners on August 15, SIUC women's sports receives $5000. If she further advances to become one of 10 national finalists in mid-October, a second $5000 check would come SIUC's way. The rating process takes into account athletic excellence, academic achievement and service and leadership. Media panels will select the winners.

"The NCAA Woman of the Year Award could develop into the Heisman Trophy for women's sports," SIUC's Associate Athletic Director and former NCAA Council member Charlotte West said. "As SIUC's nominee, Mary Jo will be in the running against the top female athletes in the country. Our university is fortunate to have such a solid candidate."

Matthias, the other Outstanding Leader-Athlete who is from Carbondale, is a two-year track letterman and this year's weight captain, who ranks among SIUC's Top 10 in the 35-pound weight throw indoors. Outdoors, Matthias competes in the shot put, discus and hammer throw. An elementary education major who had a 3.28 GPA fall term, he has been described by Coach Bill Cornell as a constant leader for SIUC's younger athletes with his dedication and work ethic.

Both Firnback and Matthias were voted upon by fellow athletes who represent all SIUC men and women's sports as members of the school's Student-Advisory Board (SAAB).

Golfers say Nicklaus gets better with age

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. (UPI) — Jack Nicklaus, king of the seniors tour, doesn't have to worry. The other players still want him around.

"Just to have Jack's name associated with the senior tour is a plus for us guys," Bruce Crampton said. "It adds excitement. It's an honor that he even considers playing."

Sunday, Crampton shot a 68, the low round of the day, but still finished six shots behind Nicklaus in the 52nd PGA Seniors' Championship. Lee Trevino finished 16 strokes back.

"I like to see Jack out here," Trevino said. "He did just what I thought he would do. He's playing awfully well."

When Nicklaus turned 50, there was even some resentment he didn't plan on playing more events than he did. The feeling is that the more Nicklaus plays the bigger the galleries will be, the bigger the television contracts and the bigger the purses. But resentment is nowhere in sight.

"People couldn't be nicer to me," Nicklaus said.

Nicklaus has entered six official tournaments since turning 50 15 months ago and won four of them.

He also added the senior skins title earlier this year.

Only three players have finished ahead of Nicklaus on the tour: Gary Player and Chi Chi Rodriguez, when Nicklaus finished third in the Seniors' Championship and Lee Trevino at the Senior Open, both last year.

Nicklaus was never more dominant than he was at this year's championship. He opened with two 66s and when he followed with a 69 Saturday that gave him an eight-shot lead over Crampton.

He coasted in with a play-it-safe 71 Sunday and finished at 7-under 271, three short of the tournament record set in 1973 by Sam Snead.

It was a tournament record for the nine years the event has been played on the PGA National Golf Club's National Course at Palm Beach Gardens.

Nicklaus said he was more worried about looking bad on the senior tour than he was about dominating.

"Turning 50 was the best thing that has happened to me," he said. "I had to come out on this tour and I didn't want to embarrass myself. So I worked hard on my game. Now I'm starting to feel like I really want to play some more."
