USG to consider WIDB funding plans

By Signe K. Skinion
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The amount of funding a campus radio station should receive is causing contention among Undergraduate Student Government members and station officials, USG members say.

In February, WIDB, which broadcasts to buildings on campus including the Student Center, went off the air because of equipment problems. In March, the station asked for monetary help from USG.

Eric Bottom, USG Finance

Committee chairman and College of Business senator, said USG asked in March for WIDB to submit an operating budget with a breakdown of how the money to get the station back on the air and to maintain the station would be spent by April 19. But he said USG never received the budget.

"Without that budget, we (the Finance Committee) weren't able to evaluate their budget request to make an informed recommendation to the senate," he said.

Bottom, who also is the student trustee-elect, said he and the USG Finance Committee wrote a proposal that would give WIDB $15,000 in annual funding. The proposal requests that the administration, USG and WIDB cooperate and decide on a budget that satisfies all three organizations.

However, Andrew Ensor, Southern Hills senator, said he has talked with WIDB staff and the administration and believes a satisfactory operating budget has been created.

He said the station will need at least $82,000 before it can get back on its feet.

Ensor wrote a proposal, to be presented to the USG Senate tonight, that recommends USG fund WIDB the $82,000 to replace faulty broadcast and recording equipment needed to get the station back on the air. Unlike the other proposal, Ensor's plan would not be a yearly allocation of money.

"After I sat down and talked with people from WIDB and the administration, this (the proposal) is the what we came up with," he said.

Ensor's proposal, if passed, would require USG to take out a loan for the $82,000. The loan would be paid back during a five-year period. Ensor said the source of the loan would have to be determined later by USG and could include the SIUC Office of the Chancellor.

Ensor said he is not sure how much the station would need for annual funding in addition to the $82,000.

USG President Kim Clemens said she does not support USG spending as much as Ensor has proposed for WIDB.

"USG will not go in debt for any student organization, no matter who it is," she said.

Clinton, GOP may be near compromise on '96 budget

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—With the fiscal year more than half over, congressional Republican leaders and White House officials Tuesday night reported they were getting close to an agreement on the unresolved spending issues in the 1996 budget, but that they were still at odds over several environmental issues.

Tiring of further conflict with President Clinton over this year's appropriations, Republicans offered to add more than $4 billion sought by the White House for education, job training and environmental protection. GOP leaders also signaled earlier in the day that they were prepared to drop or revise proposals to restrict environmental regulations that in recent weeks have become the chief obstacle for finishing work on the 1996 budget.

But late Tuesday, White House Chief of Staff Leon E. Panetta emerged from a bargaining session at the Capitol saying the administration and the Republicans still couldn't reach a compromise on all the environmental language and would meet again Wednesday.

"There was a sense that we had taken a step forward this morning and now we've taken at least a half a step back," he said.

The White House has demanded that the GOP drop or drastically alter a half-dozen environmental riders as a condition for Clinton to sign the $163 billion bill, providing funding for nine Cabinet departments and dozens of agencies, later this week. With a deal in sight, there were nonetheless enough policy and technical issues still to be worked through that Congress was to vote Wednesday to extend for one day, until Thursday at midnight, a continuing resolution that has kept the

SIUC students relocated after inspection of living quarters

By Brian T. Sutton
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Two SIUC students were relocated from their living quarters in a University building after SIUC officials found the quarters to be unsafe, an administrator says.

Donald Stucky, chairman of the Plant and Soil Science Department, said Tim Murray, a senior in agricultural mechanics from Carbondale, and Bret Scott, a graduate student in plant and soil science from Carbondale, lived in the SIUC Horticulture Research Center greenhouse apartment.

Stucky said Murray and Scott were living there rent-free in exchange for taking care of the plants in the research center during school breaks and weekends.

Stucky said the students were relocated because University architects said the building was a fire hazard.

"They said there was no real separation from the apartment and the facility," he said. "There needed to be a three-hour fire wall. As soon as we learned that the students were at risk we relocated them."

A three-hour fire wall is a safety

SHOOTING, STRAY BULLETS REDUCE ROAD TRAFFIC — WADI ZAIN, Lebanon—Staring grimly at the road, clutching the steering wheel for dear life, the drivers gun their engines and disappear around the bend, stealing themselves for the whistle and blast of Israeli cannon shells. Most of them make it; a few do not. But here at the last safe haven on the main coastal highway 18 miles south of Beirut, the constant threat of shelling from Israeli gunboats in the Mediterranean has reduced traffic to a trickle, interfering with humanitarian relief convoys and complicating the lives of tens of thousands of ordinary Lebanese civilians. The disruption is a reminder that as Secretary of State Warren Christopher shuttles between Jerusalem and Damascus in an effort to resolve the Lebanon crisis, Israel's military offensive against Shiite Muslim guerrillas operating from the orange groves and partly abandoned villages of southern Lebanon continues to paralyze the country.

Nation

WHITE HOUSE ACCUSED OF INVADING PRIVACY — WASHINGTON—A key member of Congress has accused the Clinton administration of invading the privacy of federal workers by agreeing to give their home addresses to unions so they can be sent union-produced pro-White House "propaganda." House Civil Service Committee Chairman John Mica, R-Fla., lashed out Tuesday at an Office of Personnel Management decision last week to give the addresses to the American Federation of Government Employees union. AFGE has exclusive bargaining rights for most OPF staffers, although most are not card-carrying union members. Mica said it is an "indefensible invasion of employees' privacy for purely political reasons." AFGE backed the Clinton-Gore ticket. It has worked with the administration on downsizing and reengineering while denouncing Republican actions — from the Contract With America to minimum wage legislation and recent government shutdowns. Most of the nearly 2.6 million federal workers are represented by unions but are not members.

SLEEP DEPRIVATION DECREASES ENERGY, HAPPINESS — A bad night's sleep not only causes daytime drowsiness but also affects mood, attention span and mental dexterity, a Scottish study suggests. Researchers studied 16 people, half of whom had their sleep disturbed with a pulsing sound every two minutes during the night. The sound was not loud enough to awaken the sleepers, but it was enough to return them to a lighter stage of sleep, as measured by eye movements and electrical activity in the brain. The study, conducted by a team from the University of Edinburgh, took place over two pairs of nights a week apart. The results were reported this month in the American Journal of Respiratory and Critical Care Medicine, published by the American Lung Association. Both energy and happiness declined after a night of disturbed sleep.

Sanders recognized for his 'expertise'

SIU president to sit on the National Research Council's committee on finance and productivity

By Lori D. Clark
DE Assistant Politics Editor

Past experience and knowledge of public education is why SIU President Ted Sanders was chosen to serve on a National Research Council committee, a committee representative says.

Sanders will serve three years on the council's Committee on Education Finance, Equity, Adequacy and Productivity, after being appointed to the group last month.

Alexandra Wigdor, director of the Division of Education, Labor and Human Performance, said the committee selected Sanders based on his expertise that he demonstrated when running school systems in Ohio. She also said

Ted Sanders

Sanders' involvement in education at the federal level with the Department of Education was a factor in his selection.

Sanders has worked in education systems in Illinois, Nevada and Ohio. He was the deputy secretary and acting secretary of the U.S. Department of Education and was an elementary school teacher in Idaho.

"He has had to deal with real life financial issues," she said.

The committee Sanders will serve on studies the financing of education in the country, from kindergarten through the 12th grade, Wigdor said.

She said the committee will study how money for education is spent federally, statewide and locally.

Wigdor said the committee will investigate whether or not funds across the nation are spent effectively in educating children and meeting state and school needs.

"It's a very big, broad political study," Wigdor said. "All studies are done by educational experts."

Wigdor said she wanted the committee to consist of people who are recognized and respected by their peers. She said Sanders fits these requirements.

"We have put together a committee of the best of the best," she said. "Each person will bring a different kind of expertise."

The committee will consist of 17 to 18 members, including experts in sociology and economics.

Sanders said he was pleased to be named to the committee.

"It's a very great honor, not only for me personally, but for Southern Illinois University to have someone on the committee," Sanders said.

College Bowl team going to nationals

By Tammy Taylor
Daily Egyptian Reporter

SIUC's College Bowl team will participate in the national tournament for the first time this coming weekend, and team members say they are confident of their abilities though they lack experience on the national level.

Thomas Laase, a graduate student in business from Carbondale and the team's captain, said the competition at the tournament will be formidable. He said the first round on Saturday at Arizona State University in Tempe will probably be tiring because each of the 16 participating teams will have to play 13 games each, which last about 30 minutes.

"How well we do may be a matter of endurance," Laase, who has been on the team for two years and is the only veteran on the team, said.

Competing on the SIUC team will be: Lasse; R. Travis DeNeal, a senior in journalism from Harrisburg; Nathan T. Denny, a senior in mathematics and computer science from Carbondale; and Jonna J. James, a senior in elementary education from De Soto.

Donald Castle, SIUC's coach and coordinator of the College Bowl, said the best two teams will compete on Sunday, and the winner will be awarded the national title.

Castle said the game requires a quick recall of facts about a variety of subjects, such as basic academic knowledge, current events,

University officials celebrate National Secretaries Day

By Melissa Jakubowski
DE Assistant Features Editor

Judy Hopkins holds the business life of SIU President Ted Sanders in her hands. She plans his meetings, makes his travel arrangements, schedules appointments and deals with the public.

"He doesn't schedule a meeting," she said. "He says instead 'Call Judy. I'm the scheduler.'"

Hopkins has been Sanders' executive secretary for 10 years. Today, on National Secretaries Day, she and millions of other secretaries are recognized for their hard work, whether it is a free lunch or just a smile.

Hopkins said last year, the administrators had a luncheon for the support staff. She said the administration donned chef hats and served the staff. She said the University administration always has treated them well.

"It's always nice to be recognized," she said. "We better. We do the same for the bosses for Bosses Day in October."

Harvey Welch, Jr., vice chancellor of Student Affairs, said without his administrative aide, Marilyn McKenzie, his life would be a lot more disorganized.

"If you look at my desk, it doesn't look that organized," he said. "She will come to my cluttered desk, find what she is looking for and put it back without disrupting anything else on the desk."

Welch said the business relationship between him and McKenzie is not based on a boss/worker agreement but more on a team concept.

"Her abilities and skills work as an extension of what I'm trying to do," he said. "She can get things done while I'm paying attention to something else."

McKenzie sorts through mail, takes phone calls, keeps up all his

Spring Discover Days begin at SIUC museum

By Tracy Taylor
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The University Museum, with the help a renowned SIU alumna, kicked off a spring program Tuesday that a museum official says will help children and other community members see positive aspects of the University.

Virginia "the Duchess" Marmaduke, an award-winning retired newspaper and television reporter from Southern Illinois, welcomed museum visitors Tuesday as they came to view the Spring Discovery Days exhibits.

Spring Discovery Days, which runs through Friday, includes extended hours for those people who get off work late and would not regularly be able to come and see the museum, Bob DeHoet, museum education coordinator, said. Now the museum will be open from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. instead of the usual 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. on weekdays.

One of the biggest exhibits in the museum is the 125-Year Exhibit, which includes fossils, gemstones, African masks and artwork. DeHoet said.

"The 125-Year Exhibit has been here since last March, and we've already added five new displays," he said.

Marmaduke said it is pleasing that SIUC can show the things that all of Southern Illinois should be bragging about at a time when many people and their children, who would not otherwise be able to see the exhibits, can visit.

"I think the museum is something for school children of Illinois to enjoy and learn from SIU," she said. "This is the way we must show off this University. Today, more than ever, kids need education."

Fred Sloan, a Carbondale citizen who volunteers his time at the museum, located in Faner Hall, said the spring program can help show the community that there is more to the museum than historical exhibits.

"We provide services and experiences for an extensive audience ranging from adults to children," he said. "Some museums only offer exhibits. We offer training (in museum management), education and exhibits."

Sloan said a lot of museums have

Thompson Woods' future improving

SOMETIMES THINGS JUST SEEM TO fall into place, even if it does take an initial nudge or shove to get them moving. That's what appears to be happening with the restoration of Thompson Woods.

Within the last two weeks there has been a swell of activity that has brightened the woods future.

First, Monsanto, an agricultural chemical company, donated $1,500 worth of herbicide for controlling forest undergrowth. Then a local nursery owner, Jim Jung, offered to spray the herbicide for $1. And now, in a rapid response, the University has accepted Jung's offer after receiving assurances from SIUC Risk Assessment Office and campus unions that there would be no objections to the work being performed.

While the woods are still a long way from being 100 percent healthy, to see this cooperation and action is heartening and worthy of a congratulations to all of the parties involved.

And perhaps now the work that has been talked about for more than 10 years is going to become a reality.

That seems the least that can be done for a stretch of trees that have watched more than 100 years worth of students pass under its branches.

Preparation key to tornado survival

IT'S SPRING IN SOUTHERN ILLINOIS and with warmer weather comes tornadoes. Last weekend's storms reminded us of the damage and destruction they can bring.

For SIUC students, with semester projects coming due, finals week approaching and graduation, for some, just around the corner, the storms should serve as a reminder to be prepared and know what to do in case of a tornado.

To simply ignore the possibility of a tornado is to ignore history. Illinois ranks eighth in the nation for the number of tornadoes since 1950. The most destructive tornado in U.S. history came through Southern Illinois in 1925, killing more than 700 people in Missouri, Illinois and Indiana. Some tips to remember during a tornado include:

- Go to the lowest possible part of a building.
- Do not stay in a car if a tornado is approaching. Get out and find a building or the lowest possible depression in the ground to hide in.
- After a tornado, get out of buildings damaged structurally, beware of gas leaks and downed powerlines, and don't re-enter damaged buildings.

While a tornado is occurring is not the time to prepare. Students should be ready and know how to react before a tornado strikes. To not prepare would be the same as entering a final exam without studying — it invites disaster.

SIUC Center for Environmental Health and Safety, 453-1639.

Disaster and Resources Coordinator, Department of Public Safety, 453-8617.

Religious beliefs not shared by all

Christine Mize believes it is our civic duty to elect legislators who place her religious beliefs at the top of their legislative priority list. She also claims that, since her beliefs prevent her from respecting certain life choices, each of us should feel similarly restricted. Excuse me, Ms. Mize, but I do not.

For instance, I have decided not to believe that homosexuality is an abomination, or is similar to any crime, or that homosexual marriages are any less deserving of respect under the law than heterosexual marriages. Perhaps you are correct when you warn that the difference between our beliefs will desiccate us to spend eternity in different worlds. That might not be a bad idea. I think we might prefer that space once eternity rolls around. In the meantime, we do share this world, and we should make a deal: Let's respect each other's beliefs. You can believe that each of the many people who are in loving, committed, long-term, same-sex relationships will be brutally tortured for all eternity. It's a creative, passionate belief, and I respect your resourcefulness in finding one that is consistent with your view of the world. But mine is different. So let's also agree not to repeatedly attempt to teach and change each other, especially through appeals to fear. Forgive me Ms. Mize, but the truth is such appeals are not scary, only disrespectful.

Finally, I don't share your voting priorities. If everyone voted based on their religious beliefs, what would happen if the majority religion one day held that women must be subservient, silent and uninvolved in non-household affairs? Constitutional amendments consistent with such beliefs could prevent you from voting on newspapers. Would you favor that? If this sounds far-fetched, we might be reading different history books and newspapers. But that's O.K. with me. Read whatever you choose. Live and let live, Ms. Mize. Live and let live.

Freaknic in Atlanta not handled properly

At a time when state and local governments bid and bargain for revenue generating events (i.e. the Olympics), it's frustrating to see the city of Atlanta continue to take Freaknic for granted.

There was a stronger police presence for the event this year than in Los Angeles during the riots. There were more police than freaks! The police strategy for the entire weekend was to rid the city of people attending the event. One popular method used by law enforcement officials was barricading expressway ramps into the city. Could you imagine the city of New Orleans closing the entrances to visitors during Mardi Gras? Had the city of Atlanta prepared for Freaknic any more conservatively, police dogs and water hoses would have been used.

Aside from the city's actions being disrespectful, it also was a display of bad business practices. The flood of people into the city for Freaknic brings thousands, if not millions, of dollars for local businesses. Somebody in Atlanta is probably struggling right now to calculate the total revenue from liquor sales alone!

Instead of preparing for Freaknic with reinforcements of mace, bullets and billy clubs, the city government should have creatively tried to organize and promote the annual event. City-sponsored activities would have yielded higher profits for the city, while at the same time ensuring more order and safety to the festivities. If embraced and accepted by the government, Freaknic would be more beneficial to all.

Judging others gives Christians a bad image

I am seriously concerned about the image of Christians that has been revealed in the comments in the Daily Egyptian during the past couple of weeks. A number of people have lashed out against homosexuals, claiming that they are embarrassing and intense sinners.

I am a Christian and take the bible as complete truth, but I am ashamed to be associated with people who belittle others who live by different standards.

I would personally like to apologize to Erika Kohoutek and Kris Bein for the actions occurring on their April 11 wedding. There is no excuse for actions that only brought negativity and rash judgment to a day that should have been the most important of their lives. Derrick McDonald, one of the preachers at the wedding, stated that he was there to "educate." If Mr. McDonald and the others who have verbally bashed and belittled homosexuals seriously believe that anyone looked at their actions and thought, "They are very knowledgeable and want to teach me about a loving God," they definitely have another thing coming.

The bible says to do unto others as you would have done unto you. So if you don't mind people verbally bashing Christianity and picketing your wedding, so be it. But if you want people to understand where we are coming from as believers, we need to respect and understand others' points of view.

I have been witness to people shutting out Christians because they feel Christians are "judgmental" and "self-righteous." I cannot blame them for forming this assumption. But I want them to know that there are Christians who will respect their views and lifestyle choices.

This is a simple matter of respect for others' values, and through nothing else will anyone engage in a meaningful discussion.

Knowledge can prevent sexual abuse

Child sexual abuse occurs when a child is fooled or forced into having sexual contact. Children between the ages of 8 and 11 make up the group that is most likely to be abused, but older and younger children also are at high risk. Approximately one of every three girls and one of every six boys will be sexually abused before they are 18.

Many people are unaware of the strategies sex offenders use when selecting a potential victim. Sexual abusers tend to go for children who lack confidence and have low self-esteem. Offenders usually know their victim through friends and family. They gain trust through the child's family to make it easier to abuse the child. In 95 percent of reported sexual abuse cases, the children know the abuser.

Offenders use many different techniques to get their victims to comply such as bribes, gifts and threats. They play games or teach sports in order to get closer to children whom they plan to sexually abuse. Many victims are abused in their own homes or the homes of the abusers.

When a child says they have been sexually abused, the reaction of the adult is very important. You should remain calm and believe the child because the child would not lie about something like this. You should listen to the child and use language the child understands. You should also reassure the child and seek professional help.

Child sexual abuse is a growing problem in our society and since this week is the Week of the Young Child (WOYC), the topic of child sexual abuse should be discussed to make people more aware of the problem.

For more information on this or to report child sexual abuse, you should call the child abuse hot line at (800) 252-2873.

government running in the absence of permanent appropriations.

While the two sides moved to try to finish their budget business for this year, their differences over the larger question of how to eliminate the deficit in seven years remained as sharp as ever.

Clinton launched what advisers promised would be a sustained public relations campaign designed to pressure Republicans into returning to negotiations on a seven-year balanced budget.

The push to revive the talks that collapsed three months ago was an effort to take advantage of what Republicans have acknowledged is their disarray over how to proceed on budget issues this election year. Once confident they could bend Clinton to their will, many Republicans now acknowledge that Clinton's criticism of them as reckless foes of government has hurt politically.

The inability to forge agreement on either a long-term budget plan or appropriations for this fiscal year prompted two partial government shutdowns late last year. A dozen times, Congress had to pass short-term spending resolutions in the absence of an agreement.

Lately, the dispute has centered not just on spending levels but on legislative language — known as "riders" — designed to scale back environmental enforcement.

Tuesday night, Republicans and Democrats discussed a "win-win" compromise in which the riders would be kept in the legislation but Clinton would have the authority to waive their implementation.

USG

Albert Harper, WIDB general manager, said he does not think USG will be significantly affected if Ensor's proposal is passed by the senate. He said he does not want USG in debt, but he would like the senate to listen to what WIDB is asking for.

"We're asking USG to help us get our equipment up to date for the people who come here to get the experience they need to get a job in the real world," he said.

Harper said Ensor's proposal is not unreasonable.

"We could ask for $141,000 to become the Cadillac of radio stations so we can transmit off campus," he said. "We're not asking for that right now. We just want a successfully operating radio station."

David Vingren, Finance Committee member and Thompson Point senator, said before USG gives $82,000 to WIDB, Ensor's proposal needs to fit in more details. He said the proposal needs to explain how the money would be spent and where the loan would come from.

Vingren, who is also the USG vice president-elect, said the Finance Committee's proposal requests members of USG, WIDB and the administration to work on answering those questions and come up with specific plans for the funding.

"There needs to be a plan to maintain WIDB's equipment on a yearly basis," he said. "WIDB needs this money because of equipment failure, and we need to make sure that after five years of USG paying back this loan, WIDB doesn't come back because of more equipment problems."

USG is scheduled to meet at 7 p.m. in Ballroom B of the Student Center.

precaution to protect residents for at least three hours if a fire were to break out on the outside of their apartment. Stucky said residents in the apartment would not have been adequately protected if hazardous materials in the research center had caught fire.

University architects could not be reached for comment Tuesday.

Stucky said the apartment arrangement for student workers in the research center was in place before he came to SIUC in 1970.

Murray said the College of Agriculture is providing housing for he and his roommate in the Hospitality Annex, 800 E. Main, until the end of the spring semester.

"We felt obligated to house them since they were to stay in the apartment until the end of the spring semester," Stucky said.

Murray said he also is in a class that is making repairs on the apartment as part of the group's course work.

He said the class, agriculture education and mechanics #02b, is making minor electrical and drywall repairs to the apartment.

Stucky said Murray and Scott approached him about making repairs to the apartment to learn skills for their class.

He said he put them in touch with Robert Wolff, professor of agriculture education and Mechanics 402b.

In February, SIUC union representatives inspected the class work being done on the apartment to ensure there were no violations with the University's labor agreement.

Rick Hampton, an SIUC Human Resource representative, said he did not think the class work violated any agreements, and no union has filed any grievances since the inspection.

Stucky said after the union came in to inspect the class work, some SIUC officials also inspected the building and found it unfit to live in.

Stucky said the class can finish the work it started to receive a grade for the class, but no one can live in the apartment.

Murray said he was not upset about being relocated, but he said he does have one concern.

"I am concerned that the department will not be able to find anyone to take care of the plants now," Murray said.

sports and popular trivia. Laase said the team does not lack experience, but he said it lacks specialization in certain areas of knowledge. "For example, no one on the team is a soap opera junkie, and there will definitely be some questions about soap operas," Laase said.

DeNeal said SIUC will compete against top teams including the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

"Although SIUC will not be the most prestigious school at the tournament, we will not give up," he said. "We are hoping to make a good showing."

DeNeal said there was an SIUC College Bowl tournament earlier this semester, and players for the national team for the University were selected from several of the top teams.

He said the four players selected from the campus tour-namment competed in a regional tournament in February at Bradley University in Peoria. He said the team qualified for the national tournament by winning at regionals.

DeNeal said he participated in the Scholastic Bowl competition in high school and was in the College Bowl for two years at Southeastern Illinois University before coming to SIUC. He said his experience helps him combat stage fright and makes it easier for him to focus on the game.

"Our team is a loose and fun-loving team, and I think that quality helps them perform better," he said.

"I believe they will represent the University well."

correspondence and keeps a calendar. She said she and the other secretaries appreciate the special attention on Secretaries Day.

"Every year, Student Affairs has a Spring Celebration breakfast buffet for the support staff," she said. "It's nice to be told we are doing well and get recognized."

Departmental secretaries still get recognized by their peers on Secretaries Day, but on a smaller scale.

Christi McGee, graduate secretary in the anthropology department, said all the secretaries get taken to lunch by the department chair. She said the faculty may not go out of their way to celebrate the day, but they still acknowledge it by giving cards or flowers.

"If they don't get us something, they usually at least say 'Happy Secretary Day' or 'Happy Secretary Week,'" she said. "It irritates us to know that there has to be one certain day for people to say something. People can do it all year round."

Lakebia Kenner, theater department secretary, said the real reward comes from the job and not from the recognition.

Kenner, a sophomore in administration of justice and psychology from Carbondale, has worked as the secretary for two years. She said she did not receive anything last year, but the department chair asked her to lunch.

"I had to turn him down because I had a final," she said. "I don't really expect anything. Working here is a treat enough."

Since 1986, Hopkins has served three different top University administrators. She said the way a secretary gets treated really depends on the boss.

"Some bosses have a lot of secretaries to deal with," she said.

"Some secretaries get taken out to eat, some get flowers. But all secretaries get the same sweet attitude all day."

AMA urges doctors to dump stock in tobacco companies

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—The American Medical Association, which dumped all tobacco stocks from its portfolio a decade ago, is now urging America's investors to do the same.

Unveiling the latest edition of the Journal of the American Medical Association (JAMA), which is devoted almost entirely to issues of tobacco cessation and the political fight over tobacco regulation, the AMA urged doctors, institutional investors and others to divest themselves of stock in 13 companies that make tobacco products and the 1,474 mutual funds that hold tobacco-related stocks and bonds.

The AMA said that about one in five mutual funds held stock in at least one of the companies between May 1993 and January 1996.

Special Olympians to go for the gold at McAndrew

By Mary Beth Arimond and Lisa M. Pangburn
Daily Egyptian Reporters

More than 500 registered athletes with mental or physical disabilities will compete for the gold during the 29th annual Special Olympics at SIUC's McAndrew Stadium Thursday, a public relations director says.

Jo Juliet Ancell, public relations director for area 15 Special Olympics, which includes eight Southern Illinois counties, said the opening ceremonies will start at 9 a.m., and the games will begin at 10 a.m.

Ancell said the majority of volunteers are SIUC students. She said volunteering gives the students, most of whom are majoring in special education, recreation and health education programs, hands-on experience in working with a specialized population.

Amy Cook, a graduate student in therapeutic recreation from Laurel, Md., said she is volunteering for the second time in Special Olympics at McAndrew Stadium.

"I volunteer because I want to see the athletes do well," she said. "It's a very special thing because we get to volunteer one-on-one with the athletes."

Ancell said there will be a combined effort between volunteers and participants in Special Olympics this year.

"About 500 athletes, which are part of eight counties, are registered to participate," she said. "There also will be about 500 pre-registered volunteers."

Fran Miley, an intern with Sahki Volunteer Corps, said this is the 29th annual track-and-field competition for the Southern Illinois area.

Ancell said the gifted athletes will perform in events such as the 50-meter run, the softball throw and the standing long jump. She said Illinois has been actively involved with Special Olympics since the 1960s.

Ancell said that in 1968, Eunice Kennedy Shriver organized the international Special Olympic competition at Soldier Field in Chicago.

They had more than 1,000 athletes competing. She said Special Olympics currently is held in 70 nations.

She said it is funded by international, national, state and local contributions. The government does not provide any funding.

Vicki Censheean, regional director of the Southern Illinois Special Olympics, said the event provides positive reinforcement to the participants and the volunteers. "This event makes the athletes realize they are capable of accomplishing great things," she said. "If you are a little different, it sometimes makes it hard to fit in, but the athletes are socially accepted."

Censheean said Special Olympics provides training and competition to people with some form of mental retardation.

Censheean said she became involved with Special Olympics in the 1960s.

"I can remember standing at the SIUC Student Center and hearing something going on at McAndrew Stadium. So I walked over, and people asked me if I wanted to help," she said. "It was a great experience."

Ancell said participants who are 8 years of age and older have been trained by certified coaches for a year to compete in Special Olympics.

She said that in 1981, Special Olympics developed a training and certification program for coaches.

In essence, any athlete who wants to be trained for the event can be trained by a certified coach.

"When athletes are trained, they know what their times and rules are for each event through their coaches," she said. "The athletes are divisioned to their ability according to their times provided by coaches."

■ A 22-year-old woman reported that sometime between 9:50 a.m. and 10:30 a.m. on April 19, someone stole her book bag and purse from a table in Morris Library.

The book bag and purse were later recovered, but missing from the purse and bag was property valued at $533.

■ Andrea R. Washington, 23, and Thomitha L. Simmons, 20, both of Carbondale, were arrested on charges of fighting by agreement after they were allegedly involved in a physical confrontation on campus.

They were released on recognition bonds.

■ James G. Gullett II, 24, of Carbondale, was arrested on a Jackson County warrant for failure to appear in court on an original charge of driving with a suspended driver's license.

He posted $250 bond and was released.

■ On April 22, Rashid H. Riggins, 20, and Octavious R. Wilson, 19, both of Carbondale, were arrested for unlawful possession of cannabis with the intent to deliver and possession of drug paraphernalia.

Wilson also was charged with theft under $300.

Both were still at the Jackson County Jail as of Tuesday in lieu of posting bond.

Politics:
<http://www.essential.org/EI.html>

Ralph Nader and some of his friends have created a place on the Web where consumers can check out the real story on some of the capitalist conspiracies against them. Called "Essential Information," this site will go as far as sponsoring independent investigations of topics neglected by mainstream media and the government, if that is what it takes to keep you, the consumer, informed. A navigation system helps visitors sort through the understandably vast collection of information available here.

Entertainment:
<http://pubweb.acns.nyu/~bil874/comedy/comedy.html>

Who cares if the Mole Hole Comedy Page serves no useful purpose? It's a comedy page. Nothing but humor is available here, but it's categorized, so at least you can feel like you have a direction as you browse philosophical humor (If nothing sticks to Teflon, how do they get Teflon to stick to the pan?) and deep thoughts (It takes a big man to cry. It takes an even bigger man to laugh at that man.)

Science:
<http://www.calacademy.org>

This is the California Academy of Sciences' online natural history museum. The site offers a nice preview of the museum for those who want to visit the real thing (it's in San Francisco), but it is also interesting on its own. Whole exhibits have been cataloged, photographed and are available online. Visitors to the site can see the frogs of the Arabuko-Sokoko Forest in Kenya, complete with recorded sounds of the forest itself. Native American art is featured on the site, including a collection of Eskimo paintings. A digitized map of the museum makes navigating from collection to collection easy.

Sports:
<http://www.golfweb.com>

GolfWeb .s another one of those specialty sports sites. It has all the usual product sales and audience-specific advertising, and it claims to be the ultimate site for its particular sport. To anyone who doesn't play golf this would be obnoxious, but to a net-surfing golfer, it's heaven. Golf ads, golf stars, golf tips, golf courses and golf news — but thankfully, no golf pants.

Counterculture:
<http://earth.patn.net/osho>

Friends of Osho, the Indian mystic who introduced dynamic meditation to the West, maintain this site as an archive of the teacher's works and as a guide to centers dedicated to preserving his teachings. The real attractions here are the writings of Osho, an impressive thinker who was comfortable in both the mystical and academic world. Author Tom Robbins called him "the most dangerous man since Jesus Christ." See for yourself if Osho's meditation techniques can find the "answer within."

Mutilation victims may get asylum

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Immigration and Naturalization Service plans to argue in court next week that female genital mutilation (FGM), an operation performed on millions of women in Africa and Asia, can be grounds for political asylum in this country, especially if the woman is forced to undergo the procedure against her will.

"FGM shocks the conscience because it amounts to an extreme bodily invasion, an extreme that is compounded when it is imposed under crude and unsanitary conditions," wrote David A. Martin, general counsel for the INS, in a legal brief made public Tuesday in the case of Fauziya Kasinga, 20, a woman from Togo who fled to the United States in 1994.

Kasinga requested asylum, saying she feared being forced to undergo mutilation to please her husband. Her claim was denied by an immigration judge in Philadelphia last August, who said he did not believe her story. Under Clinton administration policies that have increased the number of asylum applicants held in detention while their claims are pending, she has been in prison virtually since arriving in this country.

The woman's case has attracted wide attention to FGM, a practice that has been condemned as political persecution by some immigration judges, but accepted as tribal custom by others. The Board of Immigration Appeals will hear her case next Thursday, and INS officials hope the board will establish clear guidelines for all immigration judges.

Oil-for-food deal stalled by U.S.

UNITED NATIONS—Objections by the United States and Britain to what they regard as inadequately defined restrictions on Iraq have stalled progress toward United Nations-Iraqi agreement on an oil-for-food deal and are likely to send the negotiations into another round, diplomatic sources said Tuesday.

Despite Iraqi charges that the negotiations are in danger of collapse, the sources said they did not believe that would happen at this time.

Instead, the sources, who followed customary diplomatic practice of refusing to be identified, said negotiations probably will be recessed within the next few days with a possible resumption next month.

At issue are efforts to agree on a plan that would partially lift the U.N. embargo imposed on Iraq in 1990 and allow President Saddam Hussein's government to sell $2 billion worth of oil—about 700,000 barrels a day—over six months. The proceeds would have to be monitored closely by the United Nations to ensure that they are used solely to provide food, medicine and humanitarian supplies to the hard-pressed Iraqi people.

The current negotiations between Iraqi diplomats and U.N. secretariat officials are aimed at working out a technical plan for achieving this goal. The plan then would have to be accepted by the Baghdad government and approved by the Security Council before it can be implemented. One sticking point has been Iraq's insistence that any arrangements for distributing food to the secessionist-minded Kurds in northern Iraq not infringe on Iraqi sovereignty.

Fragrance not always sensuous

Newsday

As people become more aware of environmental irritants, fragrance is becoming something of an issue.

Of course, you can't compare perfume to cigarette smoke, bus fumes or the like. After all, the scent of a woman — or a man, for that matter — can pleasantly stir our senses. But as is often the case, too much of a good thing can cause exactly the opposite reaction. All you have to do is ride an elevator with someone who's been a bit too liberal with the toilet water or after-shave to sympathize. For those who are especially sensitive, even the slightest hint of fragrance in the air can aggravate sinusitis, headache, runny nose or asthma.

Though a small group of activists has tried to compare secondhand fragrance to secondhand smoke, the fragrance industry and allergists say there is no scientific basis for a comparison.

"Secondhand fragrance is absolutely not a health threat and not at all like cigarette smoke, which has been proven to cause cancer, heart disease, emphysema," said Dr. Abba Terr, a San Francisco-based allergist who is a member of the American Academy of Allergy and Immunology.

Fire near Chernobyl sends up radioactive smoke

The Washington Post

KIEV, Ukraine—A grass and forest fire ignited in the irradiated lands near the Chernobyl nuclear power plant Tuesday, sending up radioactive smoke that threatened to spread contamination to populated areas.

The fire started about noon in grassland at the village of Tolstiy Lis, 14 miles west of the Chernobyl plant, and raised airborne radiation levels in the immediate vicinity, according to firefighters there quoted by the Reuters news agency. The village lies within a closed, depopulated zone that stretches in a 20-mile radius around the plant.

There was no immediate evidence that radiation had drifted beyond the zone, and firefighters were continuing to battle the blaze this evening to prevent that. Mykola Urupa, an administrator for the Tolstiy Lis district, said by telephone this evening that the fire had been contained. But a firefighter reached by telephone in the nearby town of Chernobyl said shortly afterward that "everyone is still working hard. It's not finished yet."

The fire underscored the problems of containing radiation left over from the explosion that destroyed Chernobyl's Reactor No. 4 10 years ago Friday. That accident spewed tons of radioactive dust into the air, most of which settled into the grasslands, forests and rivers surrounding the plant.

Please Be Sure To Check Your Classified Advertisement For Errors On The First Day Of Publication

The Daily Egyptian cannot be responsible for more than one day's incorrect insertion. Advertisers are responsible for checking their advertisements for errors on the first day they appear. Errors not the fault of the advertiser which lessen the value of the advertisement will be adjusted.

All classified advertising must be processed before 12:00 Noon to appear in the next day's publication. Anything processed after 12:00 Noon will go in the following day's publication. Classified advertising must be paid in advance except for those accounts with established credit. A 12c charge will be added to billed classified advertising. A service charge of $15.00 will be added to the advertiser's account for every check returned to the Daily Egyptian unpaid by the advertiser's bank. Early cancellation of a classified advertisement will be charged a $2.00 service fee. Any refund under $2.00 will be forfeited due to the cost of processing.

All advertising submitted to the Daily Egyptian is subject to approval and may be revised, rejected, or cancelled at any time.

The Daily Egyptian assumes no liability if for any reason it becomes necessary to omit an advertisement.

A sample of all mail-order items must be submitted and approved prior to deadline for publication.

No ads will be mis-classified.

Run

conference schedule at eighth-place Illinois State (6-15) May 10-12.

"I'd feel better if we were in first or second right now, but as far as looking at things on paper, we've played the three best teams in the league," Callahan said. "So, I still like our chances of finishing in the top three, but we can't take for granted that we'll walk into the tournament in the upper division because of who we play the last three weekends. We've still got a lot of work to do, and we have to play better than we did this past weekend."

While potential may be the most overused word in sports, and this year's club is much improved from last year's 8-21 mark in the MVC, this year's Salukis are yet to demonstrate their full potential in the victory column. It has notched victories over the University of San Diego, the University of Illinois, Indiana University and pounded 26th-ranked Missouri, 18-4.

Callahan said he has believed through the entire season that his club is better than a seventh-place team, and cites the off-season recruiting as the key to the success this season.

"I thought we were definitely better than we were picked to finish," he said. "I thought we were much better due to the recruiting process than we were a year ago, but the pollsters didn't seem to think so."

The team's series at Wichita State may seem unfruitful, but the Salukis were in every game until the late innings, and watched a clearly dominant Shockers team, ranked third in the nation, pull away in the late goings.

Aride from the series at WSU, Southern has held its own against other top competition in the Valley this season. Against Southwest Missouri State, SIUC split the series 2-2, and came within one run of taking three of four from the Bears. Against Bradley, the Salukis dominated, taking three of the four games, and split the series 2-2 with Evansville, which was picked to finish fourth in the conference ahead of Southern.

"Our biggest problem seems to be consistency, and I think this week-end (at WSU) is a perfect example," Callahan said. "At times we showed the ability to be a great offensive ball club, namely in the first game (Friday when SIUC defeated WSU 10-9), and the last three games it seemed it was one phase of the game where we didn't execute well."

A second-place finish is within Southern's grasp, but at the same time, the Salukis can only control their own games and not the games of other teams. Wichita State will play a major role in deciding the Salukis placement in the standings.

"It's very realistic, but we need some help from Wichita State," he said. "I know Southwest still has to play there, and so does Evansville. I'd like to see Wichita win it because it does nothing but help us since we've already played them, and from our own perspective I'd like to see them do a number on Evansville and Southwest."

The most deciding factor in the Salukis' immediate future could be its pitching, namely its relief pitching. After a major reconstruction of the starting rotation early this season, the bullpen has been by committee, and Southern has not had a go-to guy in the late innings. Callahan said he thought his top four hurlers were going to be junior Tory Hatten, junior Brad Blumenstock, senior David Farrow and either sophomore David Piazza or junior Mike McConnell, but that rotation proved ineffective quickly, and Callahan was forced to call upon his less experienced pitchers to fill the holes — which they have done well.

"We thought we had four quality conference starters because of what they'd done in either the pre-season, on the spring trip, or a combination of the two," he said. "We're looking at a situation right now where our two best pitchers are a freshman and a sophomore."

Junior pitcher Chris Schullian has been "on again, off again," as Callahan put it. Blumenstock has been unable to get started this season after trying out for the Olympic squad and Hatten started out dominating, but faded quickly.

What has been good for the Salukis is the ability of three freshman, pitcher Jason Fraser, third baseman Jerry Heinson and center fielder Joe Schley, to adjust quickly from high school to the college level.

Another plus has been senior Tim Kratochvil's successful transition from catching to left field.

"He needs to pick it up even more because these are the games that really count," Callahan said. "The more he plays in leftfield, the better he gets. When we opened up the season down a Stetson, at that time he definitely didn't look like any kind of a candidate for any gold-glove awards, but he's gotten better and he's done an adequate job."

The MVC Tournament, May 15-18 at WSU, looms closer and closer each day, and SIUC must put itself in the top three spot in the standings to clinch a top division spot in the bracket containing six teams.

"Wichita State is pretty much in the driver's seat, that's something they control, and we can control what we do over the next few weeks as far as finishing in the upper division," Callahan said. "Because of the improvement we've made I'd be disappointed if we didn't finish second or third. I'd like to come out the next three weekends, and show some people how we're capable of playing."

Southern's never say die attitude has supplied the club with many come from behind victories this season, and Callahan said that attitude will be a prime factor in the late stages of this season.

"Overall, the attitude is much better, and we have guys that believe in themselves more than what I saw last year," he said. "It's definitely a plus because there are some many close games in this conference."

Atlanta Games to enhance performance of drug tests

Olympic committee to step up detection technology

The Washington Post

The most competitive athletes in the world will converge on Atlanta in July, many eager to use every advantage to win a medal.

They will be greeted by modern venues, streamlined stadiums and living quarters, technology of the highest order.

And nowhere will that high-tech equipment be more in evidence than in the drug-testing laboratory.

John Cantwell, chief medical officer for the 1996 Olympic Games, estimates that as many as 20 athletes out of more than 10,000 competitors might be detected with steroids because of technological advances.

That's compared with five or six drug users detected at Barcelona in 1992.

The International Olympic Committee is bringing to Atlanta three high-resolution mass spectrometers at a total rental cost of about $300,000 to enable them to detect lower levels of drugs in athletes.

A medal winner who might be using performance-enhancing drugs likely would have to be drug-free for two months or more to beat the hyper-sensitive machine.

At least that's the hope of the IOC, although history has shown some athletes will try to beat the test.

"They'll try to get around it," said Don Catlin, director of the UCLA Olympic Analytical Laboratory and a member of the IOC medical commission, who believes the new detection device will cut the number of athletes seeking to use drugs to help them win a medal.

Still, others fear it still will be possible for a cheater to walk off the victory platform with a medal and smile.

"There are huge gaps you could drive through," said Charles E. Yesalis, a professor of health and human development at Penn State

"They'll (athletes) try to get around it (drug testing)."

Laboratory

Others use steroids during training but stop days before an event, allowing the drugs to leave their system.

Others use diuretics, which increase urine production and thereby cleanse drugs from their bodies.

Once injected, steroids are absorbed into the bloodstream and distributed to muscle tissue, where they promote or develop stronger muscles.

Although the IOC has begun preliminary research on installing human growth hormone testing at the Olympics, it will not be available for the 1996 Games since the IOC found the testing to be far from foolproof.

Cases such as that of U.S. swimmer Jessica Foschi point up some of the difficulties of drug testing at the same time the United States is taking a lead role in banning competitors with a history of performance-enhancing drugs.

U.S. sports officials last year led an effort to kick the Chinese out of the Pan Pacific Championships in Atlanta because of documented drug use.

The same officials found themselves in a difficult spot after Foschi tested positive for the anabolic steroid mesterolone at the national championships in Pasadena, Calif., in August.

Every U.S. Olympic athlete is tested by the U.S. Olympic Committee at its Olympic trials and Pan American Games trials, or within 120 days of the Olympics.

A urine sample is taken from each competitor at the event, according to the USOC.

The national governing bodies of the nation's 40 Olympic sports also get funds from the USOC to test at other competitions, which are mutually agreed upon between the sport's national governing body and the USOC.

University and a critic of drug-testing methods.

Yesalis said there are no satisfactory tests for several drugs that help athletes get an edge on the competition.

And, because of the threat of wrongly labeling someone a cheater, the thresholds have been placed so high for drugs such as testosterone that users can escape detection by staying underneath those levels.

Athletes buy the drugs through what experts call the "underground," an informal system of drug sellers at gyms and other places that cater to competitive athletes and muscle-builders.

Catlin said steroids and other drugs can be obtained by hanging around many local gyms.

Athletes take testosterone by injecting it into the muscle, using skin patches or even inhaling it through nasal spray.

The performance-enhancers erythropoietin (EPO) and human growth hormone are injected by needle under the skin after being mixed with a water solution.

Catlin said some clever cheaters use testosterone patches to keep drug levels in a range they hope will avoid detection.

"two shots short," Daugherty said. "Two shots when you're counting up 670 is not very many. Everyone of them is kicking themselves in the rear end right now because of the two shots they threw away in the last two days."

Although Hudgins was disappointed about the team not winning the conference, she is pleased with what the team has accomplished this season.

"I'm a little disappointed overall, because one of my goals was for our team to place well in our tournament and bring home some hardware, and we didn't do that," Hudgins said. "My personal performance, I really think I could have played better today, and maybe finished higher in the placing. But I'm very honored to make the all-conference team, and I'm pretty satisfied with the performance for the year."

Although Hudgins was satisfied, Daugherty said she was disappointed with her team's performance.

"I don't know whether we got caught up in the fact that we paired with Illinois State and we were behind them, and we let Wichita sneak in and beat us," Daugherty said. "I'm disappointed. I think we could have shot better than 330. If we shot 327, we win second, and that's what we were shooting for."

Senior co-captain Kriston Oglesby, who played in her last collegiate golf tournament, said she believes her career ended on a positive note.

"I think it was overall pretty good, but under tough conditions," Oglesby said. "I'm satisfied, but it could have been better."

Daugherty said although Tulsa is a dominating team, it adds prestige to the conference.

Iowa, Indiana State University and Western Illinois University, who have all proven in the past to be a thorn in SIUC's.

Southern lost to all three conference foes on the road last season.

With the help of UNI, ISU and WIU at home next fall, a confident Watson said, "we have a chance to compete for the league title."

For the second year in a row, SIUC does not have a returning quarterback with impressive stats from a four-year school.

In contention for the job is sophomore Chris Schulliar, who is currently playing for the baseball Salukis, senior Jeff Brune, junior Marcus Capone, and senior Phil Snelhazas.

Watson and his staff has yet to resolve Southern's quarterback situation. But then again, a decision was not made until the last minute last season.

Given the talent, Watson said he is pleased with what he has to choose from and remains content with what he has seen so far.

"Our quarterback situation is a healthy and good situation right now," Watson said. "We don't really have what you call a (starter). We've kept everything kind of even, and with one more week left it will be interesting to see what happens in that spot."

The spring session will come to an end under a game-like condition scrimmage Saturday, and Watson hopes to end the session on a positive note.

"Saturday's scrimmage is going to be the same kind of test situation that we have developed," Watson said. "We're just going to lineup and see them execute the offense, defense, and their fundamentals."

"It has been a very fundamental spring."

"... they showed up out here and I sent them home to get more clothes because it was colder than they expected. It shouldn't have been a factor if it was."

Diane Daugherty
Women's golf coach

"There is a great deal of parity in our conference, except for Tulsa, and they are way out ahead of us," Daugherty said.

Daugherty said playing in the rain and the two starting delays should not have affected the players performance.

"They're home, they're in their own cars, they showed up out here and I sent them home to get more clothes because it was colder than they expected," she said. "It shouldn't have been a factor if it was."

Although the Salukis were on their home turf, Hudgins said her performance was affected by the rain and wind on both days.

"It's tough to play a wet golf course," she said. "It's tough to hit the shots you normally hit. I think it would have been a lot of lower scores if the weather cooperated a little better."

Orioles should start producing wins after 11-for-13 beginning

By John Eisenberg
The Baltimore Sun

CLEVELAND — The Baltimore Orioles' season should start for real any day now.

Eleven wins in the first 13 games? That wasn't real. Or did you expect them to keep playing .846 ball for the rest of the season?

A losing streak that reached five games Monday night at Jacobs Field and includes the remarkable lost weekend in Texas—that isn't real, either, as anyone who watched the Rangers' 16-run eighth inning last Friday night can attest.

Is that iming over yet, by the way?

And did you hear the one about the shrewd speculator who got rich investing in the Orioles' team ERA ... just before last weekend? Talk about instant inflation!

Anyway, as horrifying as this losing streak is (combined score: 59-26), it has provided a clarifying polar opposite to the Orioles' fast start.

They weren't as proficient as that 11-2 record suggested; no team is. But nor are they as deficient as the past five games suggest.

They're somewhere in between those two extremes, probably closer to the positive indicator than the negative. (If their pitching holds up, which doesn't seem quite the certainty that it did a week ago, huh?)

One of these days they'll get away from these crazy highs and lows and settle into the placid rhythm of which all seasons are made—win, lose, win or lose, just try to beat the other guys a little more often than they beat you.

In such small fluctuations are winning and losing seasons built over 162 games.

Such will be the case with the Orioles, who have either swept or been swept in three of their first six series. That pace won't continue.

If it does, Pat Gillick and the rest of the front office will require counseling. Baseball isn't meant to be so operatic.

As it was, Gillick felt compelled to convene a personnel meeting here Monday in the wake of the lost weekend.

The Orioles brought a two-game lead over the New York Yankees and baseball's third-best record into Monday night's game, but they were worried.

Call it the curse of the $48 million payroll.

Just a guess, but the small-market

Millwaukee Brewers and Kansas City Royals probably aren't too sympathetic.

Not that there weren't plenty of items for Gillick, manager Davey Johnson and the coaches to discuss, beginning with the fourth and fifth spots in the rotation, currently manned by Kent Mercker and Jimmy Haynes.

Haynes is probably not long for the rotation, or for the major leagues. That's fine. He is 23. There is lots of time to get him straightened out.

The guess here is the club will bring Arthur Rhodes out of the bullpen to replace Haynes, marking Rhodes' 923rd chance to make it as a starter with the Orioles.

The safer alternative would be to bring up the functional Rick Krivda to start and keep Rhodes in the bullpen, out of which he is finally pitching up to expectations as a long reliever. Why tamper with Rhodes when he is finally producing?

Dawgs Football

Watson preparing for 'promising' year

Saluki football coach pleased with intensity, improvement during practices

By Michael DeFord
DE Assistant Sports Editor

SIUC football coach Shawn Watson could not be more pleased with the progress the Dawgs have made during this year's spring workout, and judging from what he had to say at a press conference Tuesday, next season appears to be a promising one.

Now in his third year at the helm of Saluki football, Watson said he has seen a significant amount of progress from both his offense, and defense during this spring's workout.

"It has been a good spring thus far," Watson said. "We've got a lot of things accomplished, and I think we have made some strides as an offense and also as a defense."

Offensively, Watson said he is especially pleased with his receivers.

"Our receivers are playing at a level that you would expect them to play at," he said. "I'm very pleased with the progress that our receiving corps has made."

Defensively, Watson said he is excited about the depth, and the potential of his defenders.

"We've had really good scrimmages where both teams have gotten after each other," he said. "I'm really excited about our defense. We've got people all over the place who have the talent and the abilities to make us a real good defense."

This spring's workout, which began April 1, consists of Monday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday sessions. Saturday will mark the last session of the spring outing.

Although the workout lasts only 15 days, Watson said it has provided him and his staff with a good indication of the type of team he will put on the field next fall.

"Given the fact that everybody is coming back, I think we have the opportunity to be a very good football team," he said. "We feel pretty good about the people we have coming back and I'm expecting us to line up, get after it and have a winning season."

Ever the optimist, Watson said a record of 7-4 is "very realistic."

The Dawgs made a huge turnaround last season by posting a 5-6 record.

This season's schedule will play a major factor in Watson's bid to bring the Salukis to the top of the Gateway Conference.

This fall, Southern will host the University of Northern

Saluki Baseball

Callahan, Salukis prepare to make run at top-three conference finish

By Chad Anderson
DE Sports Editor

While the baseball Salukis may have been picked to finish seventh in the Missouri Valley Conference pre-season poll, and have proven themselves better than that, head coach Dan Callahan believes there are some concerns going into the final stretch of the conference season.

There are only 12 conference games remaining this season, and the Salukis (11-9) have dropped from their third-place position in the Valley to fourth by dropping three of four at Wichita State last weekend.

In front of the Dawgs are Wichita State, which is in firm command of the MVC with a conference record of 12-3, Southwest Missouri State (13-6) in second place and Bradley University (10-8) in the third slot.

While the top-spot in the conference seems to be pretty well solidified, Southern is only out of the number two slot by two and a half games, and could make up some ground in the remaining games.

The final three four-game, weekend series for SIUC are against the three weakest clubs in the Valley. The Salukis host Indiana State (5-13) April 26-28, which is in last place, seventh-place Creighton University (7-11) May 3-5, and take the road to close out the

Women's Golf

Host Salukis finish in third place at MVC tournament

By William C. Phillips III
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The SIUC women's golf team just missed claiming second place in the Missouri Valley Conference by two strokes Tuesday at Hickory Ridge Golf Course.

Last year's conference champions, the University of Tulsa, came in first again with a score of 608. Wichita State University placed second with 655, and SIUC rounded out the top three with 657.

Illinois State University finished fourth through eighth place.

Saluki junior co-captain Molly Hudgins shot a team low 79, and finished in 10th place overall with 162, while sophomore Jami Smith finished in 8th place with 160. Freshman Jami Zimmermann finished 16th for SIUC with 168.

SIUC women's golf coach Diane Daugherty said the team came into the conference tournament realizing it was playing for second place, due to the presence of Tulsa.

"We came into this realizing we were playing for second and we were

Between the Lines

Katrina Daniels, a senior on the SIUC women's track and field team received the Missouri Valley Conference Most Valuable Track Athlete award for her performance in the Sycamore Invitational April 20th.

Daniels won the 400-meter dash with a time of 55.18 as well as anchoring the winning 4x400-meter relay team.

Dave Anderson, a left-handed pitcher from Meramec Community College in St. Louis, Mo., has signed a national-letter-of-intent to play for SIUC. Anderson, a hard-throwing sophomore, will hopefully fill an immediate need on next year's Saluki pitching staff.

Anderson is currently 2-2 for the 31-10 Warriors, with more strikeouts than innings pitched.

The SIUC baseball team will host the Billikens of St. Louis University today at the friendly confines of Abe Martin Field. The non-conference battle begins at 3 p.m.

Darryl Strawberry has agreed to pay nearly $300,000 in overdue child and spousal support by June 24 to avoid criminal prosecution.

Under the agreement, the former baseball star will pay $10,000 a month after June 24 to make up an additional $194,912 he owes to his former wife and their two children.

University of Connecticut junior basketball star Ray Allen made it official Monday that he is making himself eligible for this season's NBA draft.

The Chicago Bears have signed former Northwestern cornerback Chris Martin to a free agent contract Monday.

Despite the Wildcats' Cinderella Big Ten championship season and Rose Bowl appearance against the USC Trojans on New Year's Day, not one NFL team drafted a player off the 1995 Northwestern roster.
