Carbondale businesses lend a hand to University

SCHOLARSHIPS: Area institutions are hoping to strengthen bond between students, businesses.

TRAVIS MORSE
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

"To help foster their relationship with SIUC students, 17 local businesses in the Southern Illinois area are donating $500 each for scholarships to help recruit students to the University.

"Scholarships are one way of showing that the community cares about the students," said George Sheffer, president of Murdale True Value, 1915 W. Main. "This is definitely a college community so it's important to form a bond between businesses and students."

Sheffer organized the Community Care project in cooperation with the Carbondale Chamber of Commerce.

Sheffer said the purpose of the project is to help new students feel more comfortable and appreciated when they arrive at the University.

Aside from the benefits for incoming students, Sheffer said the scholarships also will help the businesses and the University in the long run.

"For one thing, the scholarships are surely a way of encouraging more students to attend SIUC," Sheffer said. "Furthermore, the businesses in and around Carbondale can employ students with special talents and skills, which is always an asset for them."

Each business awarded a scholarship to the college in which they wanted to help the most. Some businesses wanted to help the SIUC School of Journalism, while others concentrated on providing scholarships for students in the College of Business and Administration.

The variety of educational fields touched by these scholarships is what

Whether looking for a tattoo, a used shirt or even a low-fat meal, there are businesses new to downtown Carbondale that can cater to residents' needs while also expanding the city's tax base, according to Carbondale Main Street Director Sally Carter.

Carbondale Main Street, a non-profit organization, strives to fill empty buildings downtown with new businesses. The new business also will give much-needed aid to the Carbondale economy through added tax dollars.

While Carbondale Main Street was not responsible for bringing any of the new businesses to the city, the organization does aid in easing the businesses' transition to the downtown area.

Carter attributes the influx of new business to a "renaissance of shopping" in downtown Carbondale.

"We're just thrilled to see new businesses going in downtown," she said.

Pacific Rim Cafe

The Pacific Rim Cafe, 100 S. Illinois Ave., opened without much fanfare April 12 and seeks to revitalize the downtown area, according to chef Henry Jin.

"I think [the cafe] can help change the whole downtown," Jin said. "If we bring in these specialty stores, small cafes and small shops, it will probably help bring business to the area."

Jin said the cafe is a healthy alternative to regular fast food. The Pacific Rim offers a variety of chicken, rice and noodle dishes, as well as a vegetarian menu. Almost all menu items are low or non-fat.

Another part of what makes the Pacific Rim unique is the art displayed around the cafe. There are not only paintings on the walls but also on the table tops.

The majority of the paintings are by local artist Lyndro McGary, with a few of the tables painted by Pacific Rim Cafe's owner, Margaret Chin.

Jin said the art contributes to the atmosphere of the restaurant through feng-shui.

"Feng-shui — it's like a feeling of balance like yin-yang where you go out there and everything is nice," Jin said.

Chin plans to open an art gallery on the second floor of the building by summer or fall.

"There's a lot of good artists in this town, but they just don't come out," Jin said. "They just don't know what to do with [their art]."

ASSISTANCE

Prospective business owners can search out Carbondale Main Street for assistance in locating their business to the downtown area. Call Sally Carter at 529-6040.

Chicago area students, alumni tour SIUC via 737 jet

FRANK KLIMAS
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Chad Ruff, a pilot with United Airlines, is poised above the DC-10 aircraft's instrument panel while he explains the procedure to start the jet's engines to a group of students crowded around him.

He touches the buttons and moves the throttle levers as he describes how compressed air is forced through turbine blades to start the chain reaction of fuel and air. He is conducting the instruction on SIUC Aviation Department's $1 million DC-10 simulator.

Ruff is one of about 20 SIUC aviation alumni who arrived Saturday at Southern Illinois Airport for the annual SIUC Aviation Career Day with 90 Chicago-area woman and minority high school students aboard a United 737 jet.

The students were selected from 130 applications. David NewMyer, chairperson of the aviation management and flight programs, said the career day "accomplishes" three things: exposes kids to SIUC's three aviation degree programs; allows tours of the SIUC campus; and provides information about aviation careers from people in the industry.

Students spent the morning visiting the aviation facilities. Several aircraft were displayed and some were open for tours, including a U.S. Coast Guard rescue helicopter, a U.S. Army "Huey" helicopter and the 727 airliner donated by United Airlines in March.

Twelve students received introductory flights in SIUC Cessna 152 flight training aircraft. They were selected from 35 other students as winners of an optional essay contest enclosed with the application.

The top two essay winners were able to fly in the airliner's cockpit. One student sat in the "jump seat" between the two pilots on each leg of the 45-minute flight between O'Hare and Southern Illinois airports. NewMyer said these two students have experienced something even he has never done before.

"I've never rode jump seat on an airliner," NewMyer said. "This is the best response we've had [for aviation career day]. The best year."

High school seniors from the Chicago area were optimistic about beginning a career in aviation and were glad that they were able to attend career day at SIUC.

"I'm really interested in being a pilot or a mechanic," said Elyn Ballantyne from Chicago. "[The aviation industry is] a lot more open for women than in the past. There are a lot more opportunities."

Barry Batson, captain of the 737 and class of 1990 alumnus, is proud to be back.

"This is a great opportunity," the 32-year-old captain said. "It's great to come back here. This is where it all started."

Batson's entire flight crew was voluntary. United donated the aircraft and the fuel for the excursion.

According to NewMyer, the strength of the career day and the entire aviation program is based on

Almanac

THIS WEEK IN 1984:

• A federal judge in Burton was expected to grant a temporary injunction to prohibit Marion Federal Penitentiary officials from force-feeding three fasting inmates. Inward Peller Support Group spokesman David Baker said the three American Indians would continue their hunger strike until religious freedom is restored at the maximum security facility. The three began their fast by refusing the room each 14 days prior to protest "the refusal to allow them to practice their religion." Religious practices for all of the 250 inmates have been limited since a 23-hour-a-day lockdown of the prison began in October 1983.

• Government scientists had found the virus that probably causes AIDS, a discovery that had led to a blood test for the deadly disease and the possibility of developing a vaccine within two or three years, federal officials announced. Isolating the virus and developing a process to mass produce it led to a test that should detect AIDS in victims even before symptoms arise and tell if donated blood supplies are contaminated with the virus.

Before meditation, Dada Madhuvidyanda, a yoga teacher and monk, and other members of the Yoga House, 402 S. University Ave., play the harmonium and sing songs.

Yoga opens mind, senses

KENDRA THORSON
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

After one month of residence at the Yoga House, Daniel Hurd traveled to Guatemala with a yoga monk on a quest of service and humanity.

"The retreat center helped me to be prepared for the spiritual journey I was about to encounter," said Hurd, a junior in art from Alsip. "In Guatemala we built a free school."

The opportunity offered by the Yoga House, 402 S. Washington St., has helped Hurd to realize many valuable things.

"I have realized the openness of life and to have respect for all life and people of the earth," he said. "I now understand the challenges of everyday life and that we need to get past religion and racism and find the truth of meditation.

"This place has given me a quiet, rational mind and has helped me to get in touch with the divine."

Hurd came to Carbondale from the Army, barely avoiding the Gulf War. He said yoga has given him an increased sense of the world around him.

"I think I started yoga because of the craziness of the Army," he said. "I worked with explosives and was part of the 'killing machine.' I was seeking the truth and on a spiritual path."

In the latter months of 1993, Hurd traveled to India for two months to attend a spiritual gathering. The yoga house was bought by Ananda Marga, a progressive spiritual organization in 1975.

The house was the first real estate organization owned in the U.S. Since then, the residence has been visited by many yoga monks, monks and SIUC students.

Since 1970, Ananda Marga has developed a social service network with branches in 100 countries on every continent.

The house is currently occupied by five residents. Rules of the house include no smoking or drinking and a completely vegetarian kitchen.

Ananda Marga is a non-governmental organization by approval of the United Nations. Ananda Marga, which in the Sanskrit language "Ananda" means bliss and "Marga" means path, is against capitalism and socialism.

"The systems of capitalism and socialism don't fit the need because they do not show a deep respect for the earth," Hurd said.

The house is a place of refuge for those who dwell there, a number of events take place at the house.

"This is a residence not a church, but it has the same function," Hurd said. "We do a lot of singing and chanting."

Adam Schindler, facilitator of the SIUC Yoga Club, organizes vegetarian meals on Friday nights at the house.

Women officers dominate Inter-Greek Council

KAREN BLATTER
ACADEMIC AFFAIRS EDITOR

Executive officers of Inter-Greek Council for the upcoming school year are mostly female, which is something Brienne Cichella has not seen before in her four-year tenure at SIUC.

Cichella, the new Inter-Greek Council president, said she does not think the female dominance will make a change in the way the council runs.

"It shouldn't make a difference," she said. "Each individual has their own qualities and characteristics of a good leader. They were all elected in this position."

On Thursday evening, Greeks elected new Inter-Greek Council executives for the 1999-2000 academic year.

Also elected were: Heather Hanson, vice president; Sarah Nungesser, treasurer; Betsy Hunsley, secretary; Marty Obst, public relations chair; Bree Vetere, special events; Courtney Hammack, Theta Xi chair; and Jeff Henchen, risk avoidance chair.

Each executive member was nominated and gave a speech before a group of

Clough first female to win outstanding student award

KELLY F. HERTLEIN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Jamie Clough donated countless hours to aiding her peers while in pursuit of her own degree. Clough's numerous efforts have earned her the honor of being the first female recipient of the 1998 L.D. Willey Outstanding Student Award.

The award is bestowed in behalf of the late L.D. Willey.

Clough, a 1998 graduate from the Automotive Technologies department, said she was surprised at being the first female to receive such an honor.

"When I received the L.D. Willey Award, I was shocked and pleased," she said. "I knew before it was awarded that no female had received the award before. It was a great honor to be chosen by the faculty for such a prestigious award, and I am very proud to have received it."

Faculty and staff have lovingly coined Willey as the "father of the automotive program." Willey was the Coordinator of the Automotive Technology program from its start in 1953 until his retirement in 1975. The award is an honor that recognizes the outstanding accomplishments of automotive students.

For the past eight years, the faculty and advisory committee for Automotive Technologies has recognized outstanding students by honoring one student per year with the L.D. Willey Outstanding Student Award.

To be a recipient of the award, the student must show exceptional academic performance, positive attitudes toward work, ability to work with peers, motivation to achieve, enthusiasm to learn and class attendance.

Acting Chairman and Assistant Professor in Automotive Technologies Jack Greer said Clough was the type of student to sacrifice for others and still maintain the highest of standards.

"She was always there helping others," Greer said. "She has done so much for us — she kept our computer labs up and running, she tutored students and showed great leadership in the field. We are all proud of her."

Clough was one of only seven

Student killed Friday in automobile accident

An SIUC student was killed Friday in an automobile crash in Waterloo.

Tara Schramm, a freshman in German from Columbia, was on her way to Columbia when a car crossed into the oncoming lane of Route 3 about a mile south of Illinois Route 156 and collided into Schramm's car and then into a van. The 18-year-old was on her way to visit some friends leaving on an exchange trip to Germany.

The driver of the other car, 14-year-old Jamie Quinn, also was killed. Quinn was being pursued by Waterloo police for stealing his parents' car when the two cars collided.

The eighth-grader, who was carrying a shotgun and a rifle, was fleeing from police after brandishing a weapon at a Waterloo theater.

The Waterloo police and the Illinois State Police would not comment.

Schramm and Quinn were both pronounced dead at the scene by the Monroe County coroner. Schramm's mother Vinita, who accompanied Schramm from Carbondale, was listed in critical condition at St. Louis University Hospital.

The van's occupants were treated and released from Memorial Hospital in Belleville.

Preliminary trial for accused killer today

The man accused of killing SIUC student Mike Sasso April 3 will appear in Williamson County Court today for a preliminary hearing.

Steven Crutchfield, 30, has been charged with three counts of first-degree murder in relation to the stabbing death of Sasso.

Crutchfield allegedly broke into a home in Herrin and killed Sasso, 20, who was an acquaintance of Crutchfield's estranged wife, Tracey.

Sasso, who was a sophomore in administration of justice, died of his wounds early April 4 at Herrin Hospital.

Crutchfield is being held in Williamson County Jail without bond.

Knocking on wood

LUCKY #13: Students turn to superstitions for good luck as finals week quickly approaches.

MEKISHA NEAL
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

While walking down the street, a couple holding hands split a pole that stood between them.

The girl reminds her boyfriend, who was preoccupied with picking up a penny lying face up on the ground for good luck, to say "bread and butter" to avoid bad luck for splitting the pole.

Superstitions such as this example have been around for centuries. Most people who practice them probably don't know where they came from. No doubt they began from rumors and common misunderstandings.

Yet there is a certain mysteriousness involved with superstitions that makes a person wonder whether there is any truth to them. Some people chalk superstitions up as only old wives' tales and pay them no attention at all.

With finals and research papers approaching, you'd be amazed at the kinds of rituals students follow to ensure good luck.

Carrying around a rabbit's foot, not changing your socks and only using a "lucky" pencil, are just a few of the things some students hold to be the bearers of fate.

Leslie René says that she has been using superstitious rules for so long she does so unconsciously.

"I don't split poles, I cross my fingers for good luck, and I knock on wood," said René, a senior in public relations from Chicago. "Before a test, I cross my fingers and hope that all of my studying will pay off."

"It's just stuff that started when I was a kid and now I do it without even thinking about it," she said.

Perhaps one of the most well-known superstitions is the myth about the black cat. The folklore surrounding the black cat began in the Middle Ages when it was associated with witches. It was said that the black cat was the pet of a woman accused of being a witch. It was rumored that the cat had the ability to change shape and help the witch cast spells. Since then, black cats have been associated with luck — good or bad.

A black cat crossing your path is said to cause you bad luck before your journey is over. If this occurs, take 12 steps backwards to ward off the bad luck. There is a twist to this belief that most people don't know — if a black cat walks toward you it brings good luck.

Many students rely on good luck charms to determine the outcome of their endeavors. Traditionally, the rabbit's foot is considered to be good luck. This tradition also started in the Middle Ages and is associated with witchcraft.

It was believed that a witch could transform herself into a hare when being pursued. Some people use other things as a method of bringing good luck.

Knocking on wood is done to prevent bad luck. This comes from ancient Celts who worshiped the tree as a representation of the gods. Knocking on wood also is noted for warding off punishment for bragging.

Some students use a certain routine to ensure good luck.

Stan Moore, a senior in engineering from Chicago, says he only takes tests with Beroil No. 2 pencils. "I swear every time I use one of those pencils I ace my tests, and when I don't use one I never do as good," said Moore.

Sometimes even if a person does not consider themselves to be superstitious, certain beliefs can rub off on them.

Arnesha Jones, a senior in workforce education from East St. Louis, says she comes from a religious background and doesn't really believe in superstitions.

"I'm really not a superstitious person because my family is really religious," Jones said. "But I never put my purse on the floor because I was told by a friend that it will make your money run away."

Laryngitis forces Miller to cancel show

DAVID FERRARA
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Steve Miller canceled Saturday's SIU Arena concert, forcing Arena officials to provide refunds to those who purchased tickets for the show.

Miller's manager told officials Saturday that Miller performed while sick in Madison, Wis., Friday, but could not sing in Carbondale because of laryngitis.

Miller's manager also said the band will not reschedule the concert anytime soon.

Anyone who bought tickets for the concert must refund them at the SIU Arena.

If the tickets were purchased with cash or a check, bring them to the SIU Arena special events ticket office between Tuesday and May 11 during the hours of 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. for a refund.

Tickets also can be mailed to the SIU Arena, Room 117, in care of "Steve Miller Band Refund." Anyone who bought the tickets with a credit card must bring the tickets to the office or mail them with a receipt to be refunded.

Refunds will not be given for complementary, lost or stolen tickets.

The number of tickets sold for the show was unavailable Sunday.

the loyalty of its alumni. Perhaps that loyalty starts when they are still students.

Gina Koestner graduated with a bachelor's degree in aviation management in December but attended to help the students because of her positive career day experience in 1994. Although she did not begin her non-aviation degree here, she returned to SIUC after two years to enter the program.

"I just fell in love with the campus," Koestner said. "The program was highly ranked, and Dr.

NewMyer was very helpful."

Dave Ringwalt, managing director for United's line operations who represented United Airlines for the event, said the dedication of the SIUC alumni makes this happen.

"Very strong SIUC alumni at United," Ringwalt said. "Every division we have at United has SIUC grads."

Batson said he runs into so many SIUC grads in the operations center that "at times I feel I'm still in school."

Ringwalt said SIUC gives students early exposure to the aviation industry. This is evident because the "highest percentage of new pilots are hired from SIUC, according to Ringwalt.

United hired 115 interns from SIUC in 1998. Of those, 100 received interviews, and 54 were hired as pilots.

"This program is one of the best aviation programs in the country," Batson said. "United hires a lot of [SIUC] grads."

Charles Davis was active in the Minority Aviation Council before he graduated in December. He said that SIUC prepared him for his United Parcel Service co-op.

Davis said that one of the most important things about the Aviation Career Day program is networking.

"This whole industry is about meeting people," he said. "Everybody knows each other."

Loving forever the greek way

RHONDA SCIARRA
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

After buying a small gold charm with his greek letters on it Super Bowl Sunday, Matt Friedman could not wait until Valentine's Day to give the lavalier to his girlfriend.

"There was no way I could hang on to it for another two weeks," he said. "I just went ahead and gave it to her that night."

He took the charm out of its case and put it into his pocket.

Later that day, before the football game, he reached into his pocket to pull out the charm, only to find that it wasn't there.

Caught on the spot, he instead gave Bree Vetere, his girlfriend, a replica of the charm by forming the two greek letters out of plastic twist ties used to secure garbage bags.

"He has a habit of making me twist-tie rings when we go to the grocery store," said Vetere, a sophomore in advertising from Antioch. "Since he lost the lavalier itself, he made me a lavalier out of two of the rings and he told me he had lost the real one — it was kind of funny."

Friedman, a senior in public relations from Northbrook, later discovered the lavalier had fallen into his asthma inhaler in his pocket.

He and Vetere then went to the Sigma Pi house to finish watching the rest of the game, keeping quiet about the episode.

Later that night, Vetere's secret slipped to her best friend.

The following Monday night, her best friend wrote a small poem mentioning "something wonderful has happened to my best friend ... a candlelight tonight."

She left the note, referring to a candle-passing ceremony, on a table in the Sigma Kappa house before their chapter meeting.

Vetere and her sisters sat in a circle and passed a lit candle from one girl to another. In the circle, the candle is passed once around for friendship.

On the second pass around, a girl blows out the candle to announce that she has been lavaliered. When a girl has been pinned, she blows out the candle in the third pass and when she is engaged in the fourth pass.

Before the candle came to Vetere the second time around, another one of her sisters blew out the candle first, announcing her own lavalier experience.

The candle continued and when Vetere blew it out, she was overwhelmed with her sisters' joy and encouragement.

Friedman also received response from his fraternity brothers that week but in a more humorous manner. One of his brothers, who knew about the event, announced it at their chapter meeting despite Friedman's attempts to keep it under wraps.

"I tried to keep it as quiet as possible," Friedman said. "I knew what was about to happen."

Later that week after a pinning ceremony of the house's new members, Friedman was escorted out to the backyard of the house for a traditional brotherhood activity.

Leaning up against a tree, he was doused in ketchup, mustard, maple syrup, eggs and flour by his fraternity brothers. As the tradition goes, he remained against the tree until Vetere came and kissed him.

"Any guy that commits himself to a relationship is going to get a lot of slack," Friedman said. "Once they realized that is important to me and to her, they supported me."

He said in the end, the event was a reflection of the amount of respect that his fraternity brothers have for him.

They said the experience brought together two significant aspects in both of their lives — each other and their greek houses.

"For me it was combining two of the most important things in my life," Friedman said. "It is a symbol of my love for her."

Vetere said she is honored to wear the letters of her boyfriend's house.

"I am really proud to wear his letters because his house means so much to him," Vetere said.

"It is definitely a sign of how much we care for each other."

After graduation, Friedman will leave Carbondale for Vincennes, Ind., working for Sigma Pi National Headquarters. He said the lavalier is a tie between himself and Vetere.

"While I am gone, the lavalier shows that we're staying together, and we are thinking of each other," he said.

females in the nation to graduate in 1998 with a bachelor's of science in automotive technology.

Clough is continuing to bend the odds in her favor. She is currently employed by General Motors as a Service Readiness Engineer. Clough writes the electrical portion of the technical service manuals for the Performance Car Team, which includes the Chevrolet Corvette and the new Cadillac Evoq.

Despite Clough's performances, she said that she did experience hostility from her male classmates in and outside of her classes.

But her hard work and dedication to the field allowed for her male peers to become accepting of her work.

"Because the automotive field is predominantly male, I did find some wariness at first from my male counterparts as to my ability," Clough said.

"But once I proved to them that I could do what was placed before me, they accepted me."

"The same thing happened with tutoring. Once we got started in the subject, and they gained some faith in my knowledge of the subject, they had no problems receiving help from me."

Clough said she is fortunate to have been accepted into a predominantly male profession. She also adds there is not enough female representation throughout the industry.

"I feel that there are not enough women in the automotive field right now, although there are more today than even in the recent past," she said.

"It is becoming acceptable for women to enter male-dominated fields. Qualified women need to be welcome in areas that were not open to them before."

delegates. Each delegate represents their chapter and votes on who they would like in office.

As president, Cichella said her goals for the semester are to get better relationships between Inter-Greek Council chapters, increase the memberships in chapters and increase greek involvement on campus.

Cichella said she will be a voice for the greek students on all issues, including Select 2000.

She said she will be working on the Select 2000 task force and will represent what students want from the task force.

Along with Select 2000 issues, Cichella said she will try and make better relationships between all the sub-councils of Inter-Greek Council.

"I plan to work closely with the rest of the councils so we can better our greek system," she said.

Prior to this election, presidents for each sub-council were elected by members. New presidents were elected for all three councils: including Matt Arnold for Interfraternity Council and Donna Seerey for Panhellenic Council.

YOGA

Ron Maruszcz, faculty adviser of the Ananda Marga RSO, found true love dwelling in the yoga house. Maruszcz met his wife, Joyce, upon taking a free meditation class at the yoga house.

Maruszcz thanks the house for the unification of him and his wife.

"I don't think we would have ever crossed paths if it weren't for the house," Maruszcz said. "We really had different interests, but we were brought together in the house."

Maruszcz said yoga associations are not uncommon in college towns. He believes many college students are on a spiritual quest.

"I think people who are searching for spiritual development and truth come to the house," he said. "They are looking to discuss these things with other people."

Maruszcz, who has been faculty adviser for six years, has been involved with the house since 1975 and said the house has been through many transitions.

"We've gone through a lot of changes," he said. "I guess it all depends on the people living there — sometimes residents are more strict than others."

Maruszcz believes the residents of the house have learned more about themselves through association with other people.

"I've met a lot of people, college students and community members," he said. "I have found that people are different but intrinsically the same.

"The house provides people who are interested in living a vegetarian lifestyle," Maruszcz said. "Besides being a collective meeting environment we are a place for people who want to learn about spiritual development."

Patrick Postowait, an alumnus from Paris, said there are always new faces at the house searching for themselves.

Postowait does not plan on leaving the house now that he has finished his bachelor's degree. He says the house is the right place for him at this time.

"It is a nice place for a young bachelor — there is an incredible rent deal," Postowait said. "It is nice to live with a bunch of spiritually minded people."

'Go' and see this movie

From the two films he has made so far, one thing is certain about cinematographer/director Doug Liman — he loves Los Angeles. He loves the energy of it, the absurdity and insanity of the town. To get to the point — Liman loves the nightlife of L.A.

That love is the driving force behind "Go," a frantic, madcap romp through L.A. entwined in three stories occurring on one wild night.

MOVIE CRITIC
Tim Sanger

Here's the basic setup: Cashier Ronna (Sarah Polley) can't make her rent, even with the extra 'shift' given to her by Simon (Desmond Askw), her co-worker who's going away to Vegas with his friends. In Simon's place, Ronna takes a request for a batch of ecstasy from two actors (Jay Mohr and Scott Wolf) while trying to keep the drug supplier (Timothy Olyphant) out of the deal. That's about all you need to know since most of the stories jump from this point. Trust me — the less you know going in, the more you'll enjoy it.

Arthouse films are a tough sell since you usually end up nit-picking the bad stories from the good. "Pulp Fiction" solved this by weaving each tale within itself and "Go" uses a similar method. The first story with Ronna is good, and I guess if a bad story has to be picked it would be the plight of the two actors.

Mohr and Wolf pretty much go through the motions being upstaged by William Fichtner's great performance as an odd cop but once he leaves, the story falls flat. Where the film really kicks into high gear is the Vegas trip, a blazing mix of sexual Zen, pissed-off bouncers and stolen cars, making it the most frantic and funniest part of the film.

Yet one can't help but look at John August's screenplay as standing in the shadow of "Pulp Fiction," almost gleefully so. The dialogue, rife with pop culture reference and kooky philosophy, is sharp and humorous but still seems prose-aspiring to Tarantino's carefree edge.

What saves all of this from becoming routine is Doug Liman's animated direction. He moves the camera documentary-like, following the characters around like some drunken cohort. His first film, "Swingers," showed that such a style might have relied on low budget ingenuity, but "Go" uses it as an adrenal shot, giving the film a full-tilt pace all the way through.

Few directors right now can integrate music into a film as effectively as Liman can. "Go" eschewing the Neo-Swing sounds of "Swingers" for the pounding techno of the rave scene. No one right now shoots and edits quite like Liman does.

But what exactly is the point of "Go?" I don't think it has one other than to hurl you from nightfall to daybreak and that's probably a good thing. It's a celebration of that one crazy night — one that is just as hilarious as it is harrowing. "Go" is funny, energized filmmaking, i.e., a night out on the L.A. town at its finest.

Document shows Western Kentucky's delay in action

CAUGHT: Internal report details numerous sexual harassment accusations.

COLLEGE PRESS EXCHANGE

Officials at Western Kentucky University are running for cover in light of a recently publicized bombshell of a report detailing numerous accusations of sexual harassment lodged against a former administrator by female students and employees.

A local newspaper, "The Park

City Daily News," obtained a copy of the 340-page internal report, which concluded that C. Wayne Jones, director of the university's Glasgow campus, had been sexually harassing female students and employees for years. The report also concluded that the university's efforts to reprimand Jones weren't strong enough to prevent him from repeating the objectionable behavior.

Though only four women filed formal complaints about Jones, an affirmative-action officer who testified before internal investigators said that if she had tallied all of the calls she had received from women complaining about Jones, there would have been at least 50.

The Daily News also reported that Western Kentucky pressured Jones to resign after one of the women challenged the school's reprimand and appealed to the university's president, Gary A. Ransdall, for help.

An internal appellate committee charged with hearing the woman's grievance ruled in her favor. The committee's report stated that several complainants had been ill advised by university officials, that administrators had interfered with the initial investigations into Jones' behavior, that appropriate punishments had been ignored and that no one monitored Jones after his reprimand.

The report also stated that university officials waited too long before looking into the women's allegations against Jones. The first harassment complaint against him was made in 1996, but the university waited until 1998 to investigate.

Efforts to reach Jones were unsuccessful. The report also stated that Jones said he was a "toucher" and a "hugger" who often made contact with students "to boost their self esteem" and to let them know they were appreciated.

SCHOLARSHIPS

Sheffer thinks makes the project so unique in the area.

"We want to help as many students as we can because by helping others we also help ourselves," Sheffer said. "This is the first year for these type of scholarships, and I think they're a great way to show how much we appreciate what SIUC brings to the community."

Donald Jugenheimer, director of the Sch. of Journalism, said the scholarships represent an example of the symbiotic relationship that exists between the community and the University.

"Certainly, the scholarships are sizable enough to be a strong incentive for students to enroll at SIUC," Jugenheimer said. "It's wonderful to see the school and the community work together in this way."

In the future, Sheffer hopes more local businesses will consider donating time and money to SIUC students.

"We'd like to have more businesses give to the college because it's not just a donation, it's an investment in the future of this community," Sheffer said.

BUSINESS

Golgotha Tattoos

Golgotha Tattoos, although not a newcomer, opened April 1 in downtown Carbondale after two and a half years of business south of town on Giant City Road.

Darren Ashbaugh, owner of Golgotha Tattoos, 703 S. Illinois Ave., said business has nearly doubled since Golgotha opened at its downtown location and appointments for tattoos are booked through mid-May.

Ashbaugh is one of three tattoo artists at the business. He said there were a number of reasons for the move of the business to the Strip, including the fact that his new location helps him save money.

Ashbaugh said that after overhead costs like basic supplies and utilities, it was less expensive to operate his business on the Strip. When the opportunity to open downtown presented itself, he decided to move.

"There's a lot better business downtown, and plus, it's actually a lot cheaper," Ashbaugh said.

B & M Beauty Supplies and Active Wear

A business offering a less-permanent fashion accessory is B & M Beauty Supplies and Active Wear, 106 E. Jackson St., owned by Baron Bancrom and Camille Evans.

B & M offers a variety of fashion products, ranging from wigs and hair supplies to hats and clothing.

"We've got a little bit of everything, and we try and keep it at a low price," said Evans, a five-year resident of Carbondale.

B & M opened at its current location Feb. 8 after spending a couple of months at the corner of South Illinois Avenue and Walnut Street. Evans said the former building was a good location but too small for the business. The draw of a larger building still in the downtown area attracted Evans and Bancrom to the new location.

"I believe the majority of our customers have followed us over here," she said. "The clientele is still there and constantly building."

The main reason B & M originally opened was because Evans said there was a niche that needed to be filled.

"This town was pretty much screaming for this," she said. "The black community was really ready for this."

Salvation Army Thrift Store

Another business that offers clothing as well as a variety of other items is the Salvation Army Thrift Store, 118 S. Illinois Ave., which opened April 19 in the former location of Henry Printing.

Terry Wilds, who is in charge of 22 counties in Southern Illinois for the Salvation Army, said citizen interest had a lot to do with opening a Carbondale location.

"We had a lot of individuals [from Carbondale] that would call the Marion thrift store wanting to donate," Wilds said. "Then their last question was, 'How come there isn't a thrift store in Carbondale?'"

Wilds said the money spent at the Carbondale location remains in Carbondale. The Salvation Army provides a quarterly budget to the Catholic Social Service, 216 S. University Ave., which helps people in need of emergency assistance.

"Money that's raised from the thrift store here is just an actual continuation of providing extra money for their budget," Wilds said.

The Salvation Army Thrift Store carries much more than just clothing. Donated items being sold at the Carbondale location include toys, figurines, dishes and furniture.

"A lot of people are interested in our furniture because they can't believe the prices on the furniture," Wilds said. "It's donated and we don't have much room, so we sell it cheap and get it out of here."

Wilds said the store will have two paid positions, but volunteers and donations are always welcome.

"It's not run just by volunteers," he said. "But, of course, volunteers are needed and wanted as well."

Chow House Restaurant

The Chow House Restaurant, 809 1/2 S. Illinois Ave., offers traditional fare like hamburgers and hot dogs but also offers patrons something else — a chance to worship.

The restaurant, which opened in late February, is owned by the Rev. Dave Frederick and his wife Theresa. Frederick manages Brand New Life Ministries in addition to the Chow House and closes the business on Sundays in order to conduct a worship service in the afternoon.

"With college kids, if you're too churchy it's hard to get them to come in," Frederick said. "We're trying to downscale the service a little bit to make them more comfortable."

Chow House employee Carey Sullivan said the Strip location was important to Frederick in choosing a venue, especially to help bring in students.

"I think he basically just wanted to have a place where the college kids could hang out," Sullivan said.

10,000-meter run.
"Our biggest surprise was Jeremy," Cornell said. "He ran a personal best (of 30 minutes, 20.55 seconds) and had the eighth-highest time in SIU history. I'm really impressed with that."
Jeremy Parks picked up the slack for twin brother Joseph, who bowed out of the steeplechase, in which he was among the favorites, after four laps. Parks complained of heart palpitations, and he will be examined by a doctor this week.

"I think it was probably just a big case of nerves, but I'm not a doctor," Cornell said of Parks' problem. "He's running out of chances to qualify for nationals, so hopefully we can get him out there next week in Missouri."

At Murray State, Cornell was pleased with some performances in the lower-pressure meet.

Junior Jerlando Henry was victorious in the triple jump (48-10 1/2), and freshman Chad Harris' pole vault of 15-6 earned him third place.

SIUC placed three high jumpers in the top four, as senior Nephytos Kalogerou's 6-6 jump placed him second. He was followed by Ron Hunter and Joe Hill, who each cleared 6-4 for a third-place tie.

Junior Eric Rushing took third in the 5,000-meter run (15:29.75) in the Twilight.

The women's team also sent its top runners to Drake, but aside from the consistent junior Joy Cutrano, little success was seen in Iowa.

Cutrano finished seventh in the 3,000-meter run at 10:04.29, continuing her string of weekly top-five performances.

At the Twilight, the Salukis saw a few high finishes but fewer individual highs considering the weaker field.

"I don't think we accomplished much in either trip," said a somber Don DeNoon, the women's coach.

Sophomore Drosso Lavithi was the standout, running a 14.89 in the 100-meter hurdles to finish a close second.

Sophomore throwers Tawnjai Ames and Caryn Poliquin added to their award collections with victories in the shot put and discus, respectively, but weren't able to deliver the performances they'll need in conference.

Ames threw 43-9 to win the shot, while Poliquin's heave of 129-4 was good enough for the discus title.

"Those were certainly not the performances we would have expected from Caryn and Tawnjai," DeNoon said. "They were disappointed and their coach (Kevin Robinson) was disappointed."

DeNoon said the time is now for his athletes to make their move toward a successful season.

"We need to get it done next week," DeNoon firmly stated referring to the Missouri Invitational in Columbia, Mo.

"We just need to have them be true SIU athletes and perform like they know how to do it."

Another weekend at the office

OVERTIME: Winters pitches in all four games for softball team during weekend.

COREY CUSICK
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

SIUC junior softball pitcher Carisa Winters knew it would be a long weekend just one pitch into Saturday afternoon's first ballgame against Indiana State University. And she didn't even throw the pitch.

Winters was the workhorse for the Salukis this weekend in a pair of Missouri Valley Conference doubleheaders leading the Salukis (35-17, 9-3) past Indiana State Saturday in Terre Haute, Ind., 5-4, 4-2 before falling to MVC leader Illinois State University (27-15, 12-2) Sunday in Normal 2-1, 1-0.

A line-drive shot plunked sophomore pitcher Erin Stremsterfer (15-7) in the hand on the first pitch of game one of the doubleheader against Indiana State Saturday, sidelining her from any pitching opportunities this weekend.

To make matters worse, junior pitcher Tracy Rempescher (5-0) did not travel with the team this weekend because of the death of her grandfather.

Therefore, Winters (15-10) received pitching duties in all four games to try to keep the Salukis' conference championship hopes afloat.

Unfortunately, the Salukis ran into one of the most impressive young pitchers in the Valley Sunday — Illinois State freshman Corey Harris.

After already falling to the Redbirds 2-1 in game one, the Salukis came across Harris, who was almost perfect.

Harris, who is 5-0 in Valley contests, had a perfect game going into the seventh inning of game two, only to have Saluki senior right fielder Jen Feldmeier single to break her shot at perfection.
"We just didn't handle her very well," Saluki head softball coach Kay Brechtelsbauer said of Harris in a phone interview.

Despite losing two games on Sunday, Brechtelsbauer was pleased with Winters' efforts in enduring four-game performance this weekend.

"Carisa pitched really well this weekend," Brechtelsbauer said. "Our hitting just didn't come through enough."

"I think her strongest game may have been that last one."

For the weekend, Winters pitched 28 innings, giving up only four earned runs.

"I thought we should have come away with a win," Brechtelsbauer said of the Illinois State doubleheader. "If you want to win a conference championship you have to win these games."

Against Indiana State Winters gave up only one earned run in 14 innings, while striking out 19.

Winters received support from seniors Jaymie Cowell and Nikki Beard in the game one 5-4 come-from-behind victory Saturday.

Cowell hit her sixth home run of the season, a two-run shot in the fourth inning, while Beard went 2-2 with an RBI double in the sixth to move the Salukis ahead for good.

"We needed to do that," Brechtelsbauer said of the sweep into the Sycamores (10-32, 1-11). "Especially after considering what happened in (Sunday's) games."

The losses to Illinois State hurt the Salukis' chances of a regular season conference championship, but with four conference games remaining (doubleheaders with the University of Northern Iowa Saturday and Bradley University Sunday) the Salukis are not out of it yet.

"What we need to do now is come home and take care of these last two conference games, and then we need to get some help," Brechtelsbauer said. "We're not out of (the conference race), but we need some help. We had the opportunity to take care of it ourselves, but we just didn't do it."

On a positive note, Stremsterfer returned to bat Sunday, but her status is day-to-day concerning when she will return to the mound.

"We'll just have to take it on a day-to-day basis," Brechtelsbauer said. "She hit in the (Illinois State) game, but she couldn't pitch, and we'll just have to wait and see when she'll be able to."

errors on the weekend. Steve Ruggieri (2), Joe Meeks (2), Brian Phelan, and Donnie Chester all made miscues against the Braves.

In the first game Sunday, the Salukis allowed the Braves to score 12 runs in the first three innings.

Senior pitcher Jason Frasor (4-3), who struggled in the victory against SEMO, allowed six runs to cross the plate in the Braves' second inning.

Senior Donnie Chester relieved Frasor in the third inning only to have similar luck. Chester gave up the next six runs to Bradley and SIUC's offense faltered again to an unlikely victim.

Braves' pitcher Craig Hawkins entered the game with a 2-4 record and a 11.03 ERA, only to shut down the Salukis with a complete game victory. Hawkins pitched eight innings, only giving up one run on seven hits.

Seniors Adam Biggs (5-5) and Brad Heuring (3-3) took the losses Saturday to the Braves.

On Saturday, the only hitter to have more than two hits on the afternoon was former MVC hitting leader Marty Worsley, who went 3-for-7.

Patrick Ewing, unhappy that his role in the offense was being downsized, was one of the big reasons the New York Knicks fired Don Nelson. But the Knicks' center and the Dallas Mavericks coach/general manager have this much in common: Both are lousy prognosticators.

Just as Ewing's annual prediction that the Knicks will win the championship or be serious contenders has become a league-wide joke, so has the notion that Nelson has a true sense of his Mavericks' — or his own — capabilities.

Nelson said he felt burned out when the Knicks fired him March 8, 1996 — 59 games into his first season in New York. He had just sold his house in the San Francisco Bay area and finished building one in Hawaii. There, Nelson said he and his wife would relax, then do some traveling.

But money is an irresistible lure, especially to a man who grew up working-class poor on a farm. Nelson's father was so tight with a buck that he refused to pay for painkillers when young Don needed dental work.

Nelson couldn't stand the thought of passing up a big payday, even if his competitive fire had been doused. So when the Mavericks asked Nelson to become the general manager and rebuild their franchise at the 1997 All-Star break, Nelson didn't hesitate.

Contrary to the opinion of nearly every other NBA general manager, Nelson declared the Mavericks playoff material, and when they showed no signs of getting there, he fired Coach Jim Cleamons and named himself coach.

This season, after again declaring his team playoff caliber, Nelson is blaming himself. As well he should. Nelson's coaching record in Dallas (31-78) is as bad as Cleamons' record (28-70) when he was fired.

Bradley University sweeps four-game set from baseball Salukis during weekend

MIKE BJORKLUND
 DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

For the SIUC baseball team the unthinkable has become a reality, as the Salukis have gone from first to worst in just a matter of 25 days.

At 20-4 and 7-1 in the Missouri Valley Conference April 1, the Salukis have fallen to a season-low 22-20 and 7-16 following a four-game sweep by Bradley University this weekend in Peoria.

NEXT UP:

• The baseball team returns to action Wednesday in St. Louis against the Billikens in a non-conference game starting at 3 p.m.

Girardeau, Mo., the Salukis found a Braves' team (17-22, 9-16 in the MVC) waiting for an opportunity to leave the Valley basement, and SIUC relieved BU of that duty.

Losing by the scores of 9-7, 12-1, 9-3 and 3-2, the Salukis have now proclaimed last place as their own. SIUC has lost a school-record 15 straight MVC games and ensured the Salukis a losing season in the Valley with eight games remaining.

Like in previous weekends for SIUC, the entire team fell apart at the seams.

Scoring 13 runs against the Braves' 33, SIUC managed to pound-out 33 hits only to come up short in the victory column during the weekend.

The Salukis had a chance to win Sunday's second game stranding 12 men on base. With runners on first and second with one out in the ninth inning trailing 9-7, Ben Arbeiter hit a bloop fly ball to center field. Unfortunately, Jeff Houston, who was on second base, was forced out before he could reach third.

Pinch-hitter Dave Pohlman ended the game with a fly ball to the left fielder. On the afternoon, the Salukis had two home runs — Arbeiter and Jeff Stanek.

Senior center fielder Joe Schley managed to pull the Salukis within two in the fourth inning with a three-run triple, and in the fifth the Salukis pulled within one.

That same inning, Braves' first baseman Nelson Correa became the Bradley all-time home run king with a solo home run giving BU a 7-5 lead.

The Salukis committed six

One last chance

CONTEND: Track and field teams have limited opportunities before championships.

Opportunity won't be knocking much longer for the SIUC track and field teams.

With only one meet left before the Missouri Valley Conference Championships, Saluki coaches Bill Cornell and Don DeNoon are still looking for the combination of consistency and health needed to contend May 15 in Carbondale.

Last weekend, the squads sent their top performers to the Drake Relays in Des Moines, Iowa, and other competitors to the Murray State Twilight Invite in Murray, Ky.

The men's team saw four individuals thrive among the tough competition at the 90th running of the Drake Relays.

Senior Peter Juszczak finished third in the javelin with a toss of 213 feet and eight inches, while junior Loren King was fourth in the 400-meter hurdles in 52.62 seconds. Junior Brad Bowers leaped 23-7 1/2 for sixth place in the long jump.

Men's coach Bill Cornell was most happy with senior Jeremy Parks, who finished fourth in the
