Two students win in primary

Incumbents Watkins, Jones elected handily

By Tony Gordon
Staff Writer

Incumbents Charles Watkins and Archie Jones and SIUC students Matt Coulter and Paul Matalonis won places on the April 7 City Council general election ballot in Tuesday's primary.

Candidates David Colombo and Lamar Zabielski were eliminated from contention in the election, which was estimated to have drawn less than 3,900 voters to the polls.

Watkins and Jones won overwhelmingly, drawing about three times as many votes as either Coulter or Matalonis.

With all 24 in-city Carbondale voting precincts reporting to the Jackson County Clerk's Office, the unofficial vote totals were: Watkins, 1,633; Jones, 1,534; Coulter, 555; Matalonis, 402; Colombo, 180; and Zabielski, 134.

Watkins won handily in 13 of the 24 precincts and tied with

Jones in two others.

The 6th through 10th Precincts and the 26th Precinct, all in the northwest and central sections of the city, went into the Watkins column, as did the 12th through 16th Precincts on the city's southwest side. The 19th and 21st Precincts on the southeast side of the city also were carried by Watkins, and he tied with Jones in the 1st and 11th Precincts.

The 2nd, 3rd and 18th Precincts on the southeast side were won by Jones, who also won in the 4th and 5th Precincts in the northeast.

Coulter took the 22nd, 23rd and 25th Precincts, all near or on campus, and Matalonis won the 24th Precinct on the city's southwest side.

Heaviest voter turnout appeared to be on the southwest side, with the 13th Precinct recording 464 total votes, the 14th Precinct registering 446 votes and the 15th Precinct with 468 votes.

Voter participation was lowest in precincts close to the campus, with a total of 61 votes in the 22nd Precinct, 73 votes in the 23rd Precinct and 118 votes in the 25th Precinct.

With 22 of the 24 precincts reporting, Coulter said, "I am very pleased with tonight's results, but know that the incumbents will be hard to beat in April. I do not plan to change any of my stands on the issues, and do not contemplate entering into any type of team with Matalonis."

Matalonis, also contacted after 22 precincts reported, said, "I didn't work as hard as I should have, but I was busy with some other things, primarily the athletics boycott. I'll have to increase my work by something like 800 percent to win in April, like somebody told me tonight."

Watkins also expressed pleasure with the results, saying, "I am very grateful and delighted with all the people who voted for me today. I won't become too complacent over these results, and will redouble my efforts for April."

Jones said, "I hope this vote means that people have been happy with my work on the council. I'm very happy, and highly pleased with the vote."

City report examines effects of proposed HUD budget cuts

By Tony Gordon
Staff Writer

A report has been prepared by Donald Monty, Carbondale assistant city manager for community development, detailing possible fiscal effects on the city as a result of Reagan administration proposed cut-backs in the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

The report, reviewed by the City Council Monday night, analyzes local results of cuts in programs already specifically targeted for reduction and programs that could be cut sometime in the future. The study cautions that although "at first glance, it looks like we may face a few difficult years," the long-term effects of reduced inflation and growth in the private sector that could result from the cuts would benefit the city.

The council also reviewed a proposed revision of the city code prohibiting the use or possession of false identification cards. Assistant City Attorney Elizabeth Byrnes told the council that the current false ID ordinance has been interpreted by courts to specifically prohibit the uses of a false ID to obtain alcohol.

The proposed revision, Byrnes said, would make it a violation to use or possess false IDs, or the ID of another: "with the intent to deceive another in the course of any transaction."

Councilwoman a Helen Westberg, armed with the city report on the funding cuts, will inform members of the Illinois congressional delegation in Washington, DC, next week that "the potential cuts could have considerable impact" on projects in Carbondale that have been supported by federal funds.

Westberg's lobbying trip to Washington will come in conjunction with her representation of the city at the spring conference of the National League of Cities.

Small Cities Community Development Block Grants and Urban Development Action Grants, both HUD funded, are scheduled to be "combined at a funding level 10 percent less than the Carter administration had proposed for fiscal year 1982 and 4.7 percent below this year's combined funding level," the report says.

Although the combination of the programs would not affect Carbondale's present UDAG project, the report says that it could affect any future proposals for funding and "there could be a problem with Small Cities CDBG funding."

Monty recommends that the city "press to keep the allocation of Small Cities CDBG funds up to current levels. If funds are cut, our three-year grant hope could be reduced." The city recently applied for three years of funding under CDBG, but the application has not been approved.

Another HUD program threatened by the Reagan cuts is the Section 312 housing rehabilitation low-interest loan program. Monty's report says the city has about $100,000 of Section 312 money, loaned by HUD to homeowners at 3 percent interest.

Monty's report says that the city could make up the loss of Section 312 funds by loaning some of the CDBG funds but notes, "however, that would cut out some grants."

Councilwoman Susan Mitchell said that if the Section 312 program is terminated, the effect "would hit hardest at the low and middle-income families, those who are just above the income limit for grants."

Councilman Charles Watkins said the Section 312 loans were crucial to the city because "with a major withdrawal in the business of building homes, we must maintain the housing we have, so we don't go into a housing deficit."

Areas of potential cuts identified in Monty's report included Social Security Administration Title XX funds and the U.S. Department of Agriculture Food Program.

Gus says Ronnie told 'em in November they'd have to give up some CDBG and UDAG if they wanted to have BOMBS.

Library proposal passes by overwhelming margin

A $1.7 million bond issue for the building and equipping of a new, expanded public library was overwhelmingly approved in a city-wide referendum Tuesday.

The referendum carried by a three-to-one margin and passed in all 24 voting precincts. Unofficial vote totals Tuesday night showed 1,295 votes in approval and 388 votes to reject the proposal.

The bond issue, to be financed by an increase in property taxes, will mean an increase of about $27 a year on property taxes of a $30,000 home. There will be no direct tax cost to students living in Carbondale, according to Betty Mitchell, president of the Library Board.

The new library is scheduled to be built on the Brush School site across from Carbondale Memorial Hospital. The new building is planned to accommodate 100,000 volumes, with room for more programs, meetings and storage. Parking space for 77 cars is included in the plans.

Spain coup attempt fails after 18 hours

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Denounced by their king and most military commanders, rebel officers surrendered Tuesday after holding government leaders and members of Parliament hostage for 18 hours in a dramatic attempt to overthrow Spain's fledgling democracy.

Lt. Col. Antonio Tejero Molina of the paramilitary Civil Guard gave up the coup attempt at noon after a night-long standoff. Deserted by many of the 200 men who had stormed the ornate Spanish Cortes (Parliament), he agreed to formally surrender — symbolically in the former office of Spain's late dictator Generalissimo Francisco Franco.

There were no casualties, although Tejero Molina fired his heavy army pistol six times into the air during the takeover and other rebels sprayed the rotunda of the Cortes with submachine gun fire, raining down plaster on the lawmakers who dove for cover.

It was not immediately clear whether Tejero Molina was promised the safe conduct out of the country that army negotiators offered him during the siege. He was quoted as saying just before giving up, "I will have to pay with 30 or 40 years in prison."

Government ministers and the 350 members of Parliament forced at gunpoint to sit at their desks through the night, filed out of the building to cheers of "democracy, democracy" from a crowd of thousands of jubilant Spaniards.

"We were tranquil, we were calm, because calm is the fundamental element in situations like this," said Deputy Pedro Bofill, his shirt rumpled and his tie askew after the long ordeal.

The end really came 11 hours earlier when King Juan Carlos went on national television and ordered military commanders to "take all necessary measures to keep the constitutional order."

The army obeyed and Juan Carlos had passed the most crucial test of his five-year reign.

Pentagon proposes additional military aid for El Salvador

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pentagon planners have proposed sending additional U.S. military training teams to El Salvador to try and transform that country's ill-prepared army into an effective anti-guerrilla force.

Officials who said this on Tuesday stressed that there is no proposal under study within the Reagan administration to commit U.S. advisers for field duty with Salvadoran units operating against rebels.

And the officials pointedly drew a distinction between U.S.

advisers who accompanied South Vietnamese troops into battle during the Southeast Asian war and the kind of American military specialists assigned to teach Salvadoran officers and enlisted men in rear areas.

A total of 19 U.S. Army specialists have been in El Salvador for weeks. Most are involved in training Salvadoran military personnel to maintain six U.S.-supplied helicopters and teaching Salvadoran pilots how to fly them, although some are working with the Salvadoran command on operations planning.

The new proposals would expand U.S. training activities and probably would involve provision of equipment, including communications gear and possibly some coastal patrol boats and relatively simple planes to support Salvadoran ground units.

Lt. Col. Jerry Grohowski acknowledged that proposals for additional training teams "are under active consideration."

Rockford murder suspect charged

ROCKFORD (AP) — A 29-year-old former Rockford factory worker, paroled in 1978 after serving an armed robbery sentence, has been charged with six slayings that terrorized Rockford and nearby Beloit, Wis.

Authorities said Monday that Ray L. Stewart, formerly of Beloit, had already been transferred to Rockford. However he is still being held in Greensboro, N.C., where he was arrested Saturday on a charge of armed robbery of a Rockford apartment rental agency on Dec. 12 and a federal charge of unlawful flight to avoid prosecution.

'Scarsdale' trial ends in conviction

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — Jean Harris was convicted Tuesday of intentionally murdering Scarsdale Diet author Dr. Herman Tarnower, her lover of 14 years who had jilted her for a younger woman.

The charge carries a mandatory minimum sentence of 15 years to life in prison and a maximum of 25 years to life.

Education dean nominations closing

By Randy Roguski Staff Writer

More than 50 persons have applied for the job of dean of the College of Education, and more applications are expected, according to Don Boydston, chairman of the search committee charged with filling the position.

The deadline for applications was Friday. Boydston said the committee will continue to accept application letters as long as they are postmarked before Saturday.

Boydston predicted that 60 candidates will be considered for the dean's post. The search committee will meet Monday to narrow the field to about 12 candidates, Boydston said.

Boydston said he hopes students will be involved in screening applicants for the job. He said students would provide a viewpoint which administrators often overlook.

"I would hope that the committee will think that this is necessary," Boydston said.

The dean's post will open Aug. 15 when Elmer Clark will step down and return to teaching duties in the Department of Educational Leadership and Research. Clark has served as dean since 1964.

Simon holds education hearings

By Scott Canon
Staff Writer

Witnesses testifying to a congressional subcommittee Tuesday urged representatives to be cautious before cutting back programs that provide financial aid to college students.

Chairman of the House subcommittee on post-secondary education, U.S. Rep. Paul Simon, D-Carbondale, said witnesses warned that cutbacks in student financial aid programs would endanger the educational opportunities of students from low-income families.

Simon said the hearings were motivated by President Ronald Reagan's proposed cutbacks in both Basic Educational Opportunity Grants and the Guaranteed Student Loan Program. The hearings will continue through Thursday.

The subcommittee will eventually give its recommendation on Reagan's proposals to the Education and Labor Committee, which will make a recommendation to the entire House.

Much of the testimony centered around the loan program. "They just pointed out that we need to have supplemental appropriations to make the program work," Simon said. "There's no way banks are going to loan out that money if the federal government doesn't help pay for some of the interest."

U.S. Senator Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., testified that a reduction in the amount of BEOG aid students can receive, from the current rate of $1,800 down to $1,100, could have a drastic effect on thousands of students across the nation. He said it could also cripple the financial stability of colleges and universities.

"We have to make sure this doesn't happen," Pell said.

Also testifying to the subcommittee was Joseph Cronin, former Illinois superintendent of schools. Cronin cautioned the congressmen against cutting any of the programs.

ASU considers Darling for business dean post

By Randy Roguski
Staff Writer

The dean of the SIU-C College of Business could be the next dean of the business school at Arizona State University in Tempe.

John Darling is one of four finalists for the dean's position at Arizona State. The school's next dean will begin the job June 30.

Darling said Tuesday that he visited Arizona State last week and was the first of the four finalists to be interviewed at the school. The remaining candidates will be interviewed before March 4.

"These interviews give the school and the candidates a chance to get a mutual look at each other," Darling said. "They look at you, and you look at them."

Darling said, however, that he is not "actively seeking" the dean's post at Arizona State. "I'm a long way from packing my bags," he said. "If I was selected, I'd have to take another look at it. SIU-C is still an exciting place to be."

The four finalists in Arizona State's search were selected from 116 applicants from throughout the country. Darling said he does not know who nominated him for the position, but he said he accepted the nomination because he was attracted by the size of the school's business program.

Arizona State, a school with about 37,500 students, has one of the largest business departments in the country, according to Darling. About 250 faculty members teach nearly 11,000 business students at Arizona State, Darling said.

Darling said the position at Arizona State would involve more interaction with state agencies than does the dean's job at SIU-C. He said the business school at Arizona State is often called upon to conduct government studies because the school is located near Phoenix, the state capital.

Arizona State's search is scheduled to conclude in mid-March when the school's president, John Schwab, will make the final selection. The university's current dean, Glenn Overman, is retiring after heading Arizona State's business school for 25 years.

longer than any other current dean at SIU-C.

Boydston said the search committee will not release candidates' names because "it could endanger their present positions." He said John Guyon, acting vice president for academic affairs and research, will decide whether to release names when he begins interviewing final candidates recommended by the search committee.

The search committee will submit three to six recommendations to Guyon in about four weeks. Guyon will make the final selection.

Committee members include: Boydston, chairman of the Department of Health Education; Marcia Anderson, assistant professor of vocational educational studies; Harold Bardo, associate professor of guidance and educational psychology; Doris Dale, professor of curriculum, instruction and media; Margaret Hollis, assistant superintendent of Carbondale High School; Ronald Knowlton, professor of physical education; Margaret Lawler, student representative in recreation; James Parker, associate professor of educational leadership; and Ed Wiggins, student representative in special education.

United States now stands by its friends

FOUR YEARS AGO THE CARTER ADMINISTRATION had just hit the ground stumbling, and in Geneva its representative at the U.N. Human Rights Commission unburdened himself: "Our delegation would be less than candid and untrue to ourselves and our people if we did not express our profound regrets for the role some government officials, agencies and private groups played in the subversion of the previous, democratically elected Chilean government that was overthrown by the coup of Sept. 11, 1973." But, he said happily, "the policies and persons responsible have been rejected by the American people."

The tone was to become familiar: An obnoxious mixture of guilt and smugness. Disregard the tendentious characterization of the Chilean uprising that stopped Salvador Allende from consolidating a Marxist and Anti-American dictatorship. But note that the Carter administration representative was, as so many were, self-absorbed and self-congratulatory: He used an international forum to be "true" to himself, and to be oh! so marvelously, amazingly "candid."

The American people have rejected such cloying, complacent guilt-mongering, and now Reaganism has reverberated 'round Geneva. President Reagan's representative to the commission, Michael Novak—scholar, theologian, writer—is a civilized spirit, so his sensibilities are shocked by the routine U.N. slanders of Israel. He recently unburdened himself, saying he was appalled at "so much hatred, so many lies, such squalid racism, such despicable anti-Semitism," and "murderous hatred" reminiscent of the Nazi era.

VARIOUS REPRESENTATIVES OF THE dictatorialships that dominate the United Nations probably were briefly shocked into wonderful speechlessness by the spectacle of the United States actually defending its friends, values and interests. Then they fell to denouncing Novak for having the temerity to talk back. He responded by repeating his altogether warranted reference to the Nazi era, and adding: It is as though this chamber has retrogressed by 40 years—as though this is not 1981 but 1941, and not in Geneva but along the Hitler-Stalin Axis."

George F. Will

The Human Rights Commission, like the United Nations itself, is full of the spirit of Goebbels and Vishinsky, so it has convicted Israel of war crimes. Such lies are, fellow Americans, your tax dollars—a lot of them—at work. But at least the United States has changed sides within the United Nations. Until recently, the United States collaborated with the jackals.

Pat Moynihan, a former U.N. ambassador, rightly says that for the United States to abstain on a Security Council resolution concerning Israel is the equivalent of acquiescing. Repeatedly between January, 1979 and December, 1980, the Carter administration either acquiesced by abstention, or actively supported assaults on Israel.

The vainest moralizers ever to serve in American government collaborated with the U.N. campaign to brand Israel an outlaw state, to pronounce Israel's capital (Jerusalem) "occupied territory," even to compare Israel with Nazi Germany. The Carter administration acquiesced in finding Israel in "flagrant violation of the Fourth Geneva Convention."

SOME OF CARTER'S CLOSEST AIDES, and perhaps Carter himself, believe he may have lost the election because of the "mistaken" U.N. vote of March 1, 1980, when U.N. Ambassador Donald McHenry voted (by mistake, the administration tried to suggest) for a vicious anti-Israel resolution. That vote probably did give Ted Kennedy an otherwise impossible victory in New York's primary, and so prevented Carter from knocking Kennedy from the race in March.

The Carter administration was especially proud of its courtship of the "Third World," particularly at the United Nations under Andrew Young and McHenry. The latter first became prominent in the summer of 1979, when he conducted negotiations at Kennedy airport. Soviet thugs had hustled a potential defector, a ballerina, aboard a Soviet aircraft. The Carter administration accorded the aircraft something like the status of an embassy, instead of boarding it and expelling the thugs and releasing the woman.

That media melodrama, and the public's enjoyment of it, was a foretaste of the behavior of the American government, media and public when Iranian thugs assaulted the U.S. embassy.

But the world turns. When some of the gray-clad, gray-souled permanent people in the State Department saw Michael Novak's spirited language, they said to a Reagan appointee, in effect: We do not approve of language such as Novak's. The Reagan appointee said, in effect: We do now.—(c) 1981, The Washington Post Company.

Letters — Short shots

Tough talk a prelude to war?

When Michael Monson's apology for the official American perspective on Central America was rather thoroughly trounced in two letters printed Feb. 19, he responded with an unsigned paragraph (a so-called quotable quote) purporting to bolster the official line that things are not well in Nicaragua. Unlike the rest of us, when the editorial page editor loses an argument he has recourse to insinuating remarks in the margins of the paper.

Still, Monson is well tuned to the government's rhetoric, seeming to parrot Gen. Haig who declares that the worst form of human rights violation is terrorism, when terrorism is pretty much the same thing as social reform and open displays of anti-American sentiment. Monson's mistake was to imagine that such statements were meant to represent a description of Central American political reality. He has not noticed that this government, much like that of the Soviets, appears to find such siren sounding prerequisite to "military action."

Sadly, governments are considerably more flexible at sidestepping cogent reasoning which refutes its propaganda than is even the wily DE editor. Sadder still, as America chooses to sidestep reason in Central America and lubricate the death machine in El Salvador, it serves both to perpetuate human suffering there, and drain the small stock of goodwill towards this country still found among countries of the Third World.—R.B. Somit faces dilemma over athletics fee, bike

AFTER MONTHS OF DELAY, zero hour for the SIU-C athletics program has finally arrived. President Albert Somit appears ready to tackle the intractable funding crisis facing Saluki athletics (note—Somit is expected to address the Undergraduate Student Organization on athletics Wednesday at 8:30 p.m. in Ballroom A of the Student Center).

Whatever Somit's decision (and it is a very good sign for fee increase opponents that he is making his announcement before a student group), one should not minimize the number of agonizing dilemmas SIU-C's president has faced in making his as yet unannounced decision. John King, chairman of the Ad Hoc Commission on Intercollegiate Athletics, described the pressures well in an interview last summer, saying, "You must remember we have been an athletic culture for generations in this country. It is almost impossible for us to withdraw quietly from these issues."

PERHAPS THE MAIN PROBLEM Somit will have difficulty withdrawing quietly from is the one of public relations. Few would suggest that intercollegiate athletics is central to the academic mission of the University, but Saluki sports may be one of the only links alumni, the surrounding community and even the nation has with SIU-C. To dismantle the athletics program may be to destroy the best and most cost-effective public relations tool the University has.

The public relations aspect of athletics is a double-edged sword, however. Should Somit opt for the $30 per semester athletics fee without student approval in a referendum, he faces the likelihood of a soured relationship with SIU-C's student body. While students probably wouldn't take to the streets, it's a sure bet that student leaders would vociferously protest such a decision.

AND STUDENTS WOULD HAVE plenty of moral ammunition in such a protest—a raging inflation rate, tuition and fee increases, probable cutbacks in federal student loan and grant programs and Somit's own promise to carefully consider student opinion.

But allowing the fee increase to expire in July or calling for a student referendum offers no panacea to Somit either. Many faculty members and area civic leaders are strong athletics boosters and would not favor a sharp pruning of athletics. Athletics boosters could be expected to argue that Somit would be setting a horrible precedent by allowing students to vote on a fee increase. "He caved in to the students," might become a commonly repeated phrase.

Thus Somit is in a tough position; he's likely to catch flak for his decision no matter which way he goes. Somit's honeymoon with the University community may be in for a cooling-off period. But perhaps Somit is a skillful enough politician to wrangle his way out of this one yet.

We need a new 'Student Advocate'

Once again our wonderful USO "Student Advocate," Kurt Boyle, is outraged. No, it's not about the athletic fee increase, the student housing problems or tuition hikes, he is upset because someone has criticized his home: "the strin."

Mr. Boyle, you were a joke last year when you were a candidate for USO President and you're a joke this year as the "Student Advocate."

The time has come to relieve Mr. Boyle of his position as "Student Advocate." This position should be given to a student of SIU not a student of "the strin."

Who can get rid of Boyle? USO President Paul Matalonis, he appointed Boyle.—Robert Fee, Junior, Business

Transportation tops city's energy expenses, study says

By Melody Cook
Staff Writer

The largest part of the $30 million Carbondale spends annually on energy is for transportation, according to an energy impact analysis presented to the Carbondale City Council Monday night.

The study, done by the SIUC Department of Comprehensive Planning and Design in cooperation with the city's energy division, will be used by the energy futures task force to help them develop a comprehensive energy plan for the city.

The task force will also consider the ideas generated by the public forums held on developing energy use and conservation ideas. The third and last forum will be held Thursday at 7 p.m. at the Carbondale Community Center, 607 E. College.

The energy impact study presented to the council by Richard Archer, assistant professor in the Design Department, showed preliminary figures for Carbondale's heating oil, gas, gasoline produced electricity, natural gas and liquefied petroleum gases. Archer said that up to an extra $4 million could still be unaccounted for due to some unavailable data.

The study showed that Carbondale spends $11,481,751 on transportation, the majority at gas stations, and $8,075,730 on residential energy such as heating and lighting. It also showed $5,620,622 used by the University annually, $3,614,968 in the commercial sector and $1,226,443 in the industrial sector.

The average citizen's energy budget increased 150 percent in the last three years, much more than the average salary increase, Archer said. These figures show that conservation efforts which save even 10 percent of Carbondale's energy use will show a substantial savings in cost, he said. Currently, there are solar and conservative techniques available that can reduce space-heating costs alone by about 60 percent, he added.

The analysis was done by a fall design class, using data gathering techniques such as reading meters and interviewing businessmen. Most of the businessmen were very cooperative, Archer said, except for the service stations owners who "weren't the least bit interested" in telling how much gas they sell. The class finally resorted to reading the gallon-counting dials on pumps at night and concluded that an average pump expels about 7,500 gallons per day, he said.

About 85 percent of the money spent on energy is exported outside of the community and never comes back to Carbondale's tax base, Archer continued.

The information from this study will be added to that gathered at the three public energy forums. The last forum, a citywide conference for the purpose of summarizing public opinion on energy issues, will feature two key speakers and a presentation by Carbondale Energy Coordinator Robert Pauls on the ideas from the other two energy forums.

Speaking will be Randy Shick, an attorney experienced in energy legislation. He will discuss financial incentives for investing in energy conservation, energy end-use efficiency and renewable energy resources. Following him will be David Morris, executive director of the Institute for Local Self-Reliance in Washington, D.C., who will speak on creating an "Energy Independent Carbondale."

With President Reagan's proposed budget cuts of about $4 billion in the next two years, the answer to energy problems seems to lie at the local level and not with the federal government, according to Pauls.

Bill seeking deposit on bottles, cans to be introduced

CHICAGO (AP) — State Rep. Daniel M. Pierce, D-Highland Park, said Tuesday he would again introduce a bipartisan "bottle bill" in the Legislature that would require a 10-cent deposit of all soft drink and beer containers sold in Illinois.

Pierce, who sponsored similar bills in earlier legislative sessions, estimated that the bill would save $20 million a year in taxes by reducing the need for solid-waste landfills.

He also said the bill, which would apply to cans, bottles and plastic containers, would be phased in through 1984 to enable glass and can manufacturers to prepare for the change. The measure, co-sponsored by state Reps. Woods, Bowman, D-Chicago and Eroy Sandquist, R-Chicago, probably will be introduced this week, according to Pierce.

Pointing to similar bills already in force in Oregon, Maine and Vermont, Pierce said the measure would reduce roadside litter, save energy through the recycling of glass and aluminum, and preserve the natural resources used in manufacturing such containers.

Performance of classic opera set

"La Bohème," Giacomo Puccini's classic opera depicting the lives of four young artists living in Paris in the early 19th Century, will be presented at 8 p.m. Saturday at Shryock Auditorium by the Marjorie Lawrence Opera Theater.

Tickets for the performances are $6, $5 and $4 for the general public and $5, $4 and $3 for students and senior citizens and are available at the Student Center Central Ticket Office and at the door. The production is produced and directed by Teresa Stich-Randall, director of SIU-C's Marjorie Lawrence Opera Theater, and will be performed in English by students.

Presented first in 1896 in Turin, Italy, "La Bohème" tells the story of four inseparable friends who live carefree lives as Bohemians.

School of Music

to host classes
in folk instruments

Virgil Hughes, author of several books on the dulcimer and other folk instruments, will demonstrate how to play some old musical instruments at 8 p.m. Sunday in the Old Baptist Foundation Chapel.

Hughes will hold classes on the construction and playing of various instruments Monday through Friday. Interested students can register for the workshops at the music office in Altgeld Hall.

Individuals attending the classes usually start with a dulcimer but may also build harps, balalaikas, banjos, mandolins or African thumb pianos. Hughes' visit is sponsored by the School of Music.

Lessons offered in round dancing

Round dancing, a form of ballroom dancing that combines modern classics with a special choreography of standardized dance steps, will be offered for beginners starting at 5 p.m. Wednesday, in Pulliam 23. The lessons are sponsored by the Saluki Swingers, SIU-C's square dance club.

"Due to late interest expressed by students, this will be a special class for beginners that will catch them up with the other beginning class," said Russel E. Hancock Jr., president of the Saluki Swingers. "The lessons will be cued by Phil Robertson, an SIU-C instructor, and dancers will learn the basic steps of the waltz, fox trot, two-step, tango, swing, polka and disco." The first lesson is free of charge.

'Devil and Max Devlin' doomed to mediocrity

By Alan Scally
Staff Writer

Maybe "The Devil and Max Devlin" never reached its potential because it was too busy living up to the Disney tradition of simple, undemanding comedy to offer any deep look into a struggle of human character.

The movie is doomed to mediocrity by a trite and shallow script, and acting that never allows the characters to become much more than cardboard figures reciting lines.

Don't be misled by the movie's PG rating, which suggests it could be more than just another of Disney's easy to follow stories aimed largely at children. The film, like many Disney flicks, just offers simple escapism. To be sure, there is something to be said for that. That's all that some films should be. But when a film is robbed of its potential in order to keep it understandable for a young audience, maybe it's time for Disney to re-examine its range of film topics.

The recycled plot deals with Elliott Gould, a basically nice, but unempathetic apartment manager who is killed when hit by a bus. He is sent to hell where devil Bill Cosby offers to save his soul in exchange for contracts for the souls of three innocent kids.

Director Steven Hilliard Stern could have provided a nice character study as Gould could have been tortured by the trade-off of condemning to hell the souls of three kids he liked in order to save his own one.

There are several signs that Gould tried to show this in the movie as he became attached to the kids he was to deliver to hell, but the simple script constrained him from developing this angle. Instead, he was mired into trying the most tired gags, cute plays on words like "hell" and "devil," and being a simple enough character so an audience of any age could comprehend him.

Review

The Devil and Max Devlin, directed by Steven Hilliard Stern, starring Elliott Gould and Bill Cosby, University 4. Reviewer's Rating: 1½ stars (4 stars tops).

shortcoming worse is that the movie could have kept the word plays and the gags, and Gould could have remained basically good-hearted while making the battle with himself more complicated and into a central conflict in the movie.

It seemed, however, that those involved with the film felt this would be too sophisticated a subject, and too complicated a character for Disney's usually young audience to understand.

While Gould showed occasional flashes of a more developed character, the talents of Cosby were totally wasted. As the devil, Cosby popped in for quick scenes from time to time, but was never allowed on screen long enough to do anything but remind Gould of his deadline for delivering the souls.

Occasionally Cosby would appear at an inopportune time to talk to Gould, and since only Gould could see him, it would appear like Gould was talking to himself. This should sound like a familiar situation. George Burns and John Denver played it expertly in "Oh God." But as God, Burns' character was involved enough to become three-dimensional and he was able to add some fine humor to the film. Cosby tries to be a heavy, but his shallow character doesn't allow that to be believable.

Cosby is limited to frequent cameo appearances and given bland lines to recite. He adds so little to the film that he could have just phoned in his lines.

Another cardboard character is Susan Anspach, who plays the widowed mother of one of the kids. Occasionally she wants to seem like a woman hurt by the death of her husband and wary of entering a relationship with Gould.

Despite these major flaws, there is still a simple good-humored feel to "The Devil and Max Devlin" (kind of like the wishy-washy family humor of an "Eight Is Enough"-type television show). It leaves the viewer with a pleasant feeling.

But it also left me disappointed with a movie whose script and acting were so shallow that the film was never allowed to match its potential.

Engineers will demonstrate 'eggs-pertise' in pentathlon

By John Schrag
Staff Writer

An estimated 40 to 50 people will climb to the third-floor south balcony of Technology Building A Friday afternoon and drop little boxes down to the courtyard below. Inside each box will be a raw egg.

This spectacle is not a new religious sacrifice or fraternity initiation. It is one of five engineering-related events in the second-annual SIUC Engineering Pentathlon, part of this week's College of Engineering and Technology's observance of National Engineers Week.

The object of the egg-dropping contest — officially called the engineering packaging and shipment contest — is to design a container no larger than a six-inch cube to safely carry an egg down the three-floor drop onto a target below, Kenneth Tempelmeyer, dean of the College of Engineering and Technology, said. The winner will be the contestant whose unbroken egg lands nearest to the center of the target, he said.

This year's participants in the contest can expect tough competition from last year's winner, Tom Fardee, a junior in systems engineering.

Last year's champ said that while many contestants last year successfully protected their eggs, many found it difficult to hit the target.

Fardee suggests adhering to a sticky substance to the bottom of the package to absorb the shock of impact and keep the package where it lands. He said his winning design last year was a styrofoam cup and modeling clay.

The other events, as described by Tempelmeyer, are: a paper airplane design contest judged on distance and accuracy, a compressive design contest involving the building of a structure out of 10 computer cards without the use of any fastening materials, a computer game called "Engineering Economics" and the can-roll, a new event, judged on the distance a modified aluminum can rolls down an incline.

Tempelmeyer said a technical principle is involved in each contest. All are open to the public and awards will be given to all winners.

"We'd really be delighted for anyone to come," Tempelmeyer said. "Last year some of our best contestants in the airplane contest were from one of the local high schools."

Rules for the contests are available in any of the College of Engineering and Technology departmental offices, Tempelmeyer said.

In addition to the pentathlon, the college will be featuring guided tours of the engineering facilities throughout the week, and demonstrations of technological equipment, such as a wind tunnel, a modulating water jet and a strength machine.

Body of former SEMO teacher found

CAPE GIRARDEAU, Mo. (AP) — The body of a retired Southeast Missouri State University professor who had been missing for seven months was found in a wooded area Monday, authorities said.

Police said the decomposed remains of Dr. Margaret Smith, 75, was found several yards from Missouri Highway 177 about three miles north of Cape Girardeau.

Miss Smith, who retired from the university's earth sciences department in 1974, was last seen alive July 10.

Authorities said positive identification of the body was made through dental records. The cause of death was not immediately determined.

GSC to hear athletics funding ideas

By Carol Knowles
Staff Writer

The future of SIU-C athletics will be the major issue discussed at the Graduate Student Council meeting at 7:25 p.m. Wednesday in the Old Main Room of the Student Center.

SIU-C President Albert Somit is expected to explain some of his recommendations about athletics that he will present to the Board of Trustees at its meeting March 12.

The council is expected to vote on two resolutions about athletics, one opposing the proposed merger of the men's and women's athletics program and the other on the proposed retention of the $10 temporary athletic fee. The board must vote to retain the fee by June or the fee will be eliminated.

A resolution supporting a salary increase for University faculty members is also expected to come to a vote. Gov. James Thompson has recommended an 8 percent salary increase with a 2 percent catch-up plan. Both the Legislature and the Illinois Board of Higher Education must vote on Thompson's recommendation.

The council also plans to consider the allocation of $900 to the School of Law for moot court on March 13 at the Jackson County courthouse. Moot court is held every year to give students a chance to argue hypothetical cases before a judge. Any recommendation for more than $250 by the fee allocation board must be approved by the full council.

Calipre Stage to present 'Birdy'

"Birdy" a 1978 best-selling novel, will be presented on the Calipre Stage at 8 p.m. Thursday through Saturday. Tickets, priced at $2, are available at the Calipre Box Office in the Communications Building from 1 to 4 p.m. and at the door.

The story, directed by Bill Bowlus, centers around the different passions of two friends, Al and Birdy. Al's spirit is kindled by girls, bodybuilding, and becoming his 'town man' while Birdy is infatuated with birds. A pigeon and canary breeder, Birdy is obsessed and lives only to dream about flying, singing, mating and living as a canary.

This adaptation opens with Birdy in a catatonic state at an army hospital. He doesn't respond to treatment so the army psychiatrist brings in Al in hopes of some response.

The stage production uses humorous and sometimes horrifying flashbacks of the friends' childhood and war experiences to display their character.

The play is sponsored by the Calipre Stage and the Department of Speech Communications.

Charges won't be filed in hit-and-run accident

By Andrew Strang
Staff Writer

No charges will be placed against a Carbondale woman who told police she may have been driving the car in a hit-and-run accident Feb. 19 involving an SIU-C student, Carbondale police said Tuesday.

Nedean Sparks, of Rural Route 6, told police Friday that she may have been driving the car that struck Scott Balk, 72, sophomore in geology, as Balk was walking along Wall Street, near the entrance to Southern Hills, at about 1 a.m., Lt. Terry Murphy said.

Sparks told police she heard a noise that resembled the sound of a car "striking a cardboard box" as she drove slowly through a dense fog near the scene of the accident. She said she stopped her car a few feet down the road and saw nothing when she looked through her inside rear-view mirror.

Sparks told police that she then drove home, and her husband discovered the outside right rear-view mirror missing from the car the next afternoon. The couple assumed that vandals had taken the mirror, Sparks told police. Police discovered the outside right rear-view mirror of the car that hit Balk at the scene of the accident.

Balk was released Sunday from Firmin Desloge Hospital in St. Louis after being listed in critical condition immediately after the accident.

Murphy said "under the circumstances," no charges would be filed.

Somit expected to advise USO on athletics program funding

By Dave Murphy
Staff Writer

President Albert Somit is expected to address the Undergraduate Student Organization Student Senate concerning his plans for funding the embattled SIU-C intercollegiate athletics program at Wednesday's senate meeting at 6:30 p.m. in Student Center Ballroom A.

Somit is expected to advise the senate on the recommendations that he will make about athletics when the Board of Trustees meets March 12, according to USO President Paul Matalonis. Following Somit's address, the senate will decide whether to give its formal support to Matalonis' call for a boycott of the men's athletics program.

"The senate has already given tentative approval to the boycott," Matalonis said. "Whether or not they maintain their support for the idea will depend on what President Somit says."

Matalonis called for a student boycott of men's athletics events at the board's Feb. 12 meeting, to protest what he called "the lack of true fiscal restraint of the dominating Men's Athletics Department."

The boycott also was called in response to a delay in submission of a report on SIU-C intercollegiate athletics at the last two board meetings. The report will be submitted at the March meeting.

"I would look for almost anything to happen," Matalonis said about Somit's address. "We could go from opposing the President to supporting his proposals. I've advised the senators to be open in consideration of his remarks."

Somit's address will be followed by a short question and answer session for senators.

Squids headed to national tourney

By Keith Bennett
Student Writer

The SIU-C Squids will participate in the 5th annual National Wheelchair Basketball Intercollegiate Tournament, Feb. 27-28, at Southwest State University in Marshall, Minn. The Squids are part of the Midwest Conference of the National Wheelchair Basketball Association, and have just completed a 4-3 season in conference play and a 9-8 overall record. The Squids placed first in the SIU-C tournament held in October. They currently hold many of the records for the national tournament and placed first in the nation in 1977.

The Squids will not field their entire team, due to an NCAA regulation which requires each player to be a full-time, four-year, degree-seeking student. Those players making the trip will be Dave Hastings, a senior in cinema-photography; Mike Mager, a sophomore in industrial technology; Jim McElroy, a sophomore in general studies; John Montague, a junior in pre-law; Doug Plasters, a senior in recreation; Doug Schultz, a senior in agribusiness; Noreen Vollbach, a sophomore in general studies; Keith Wubbena, a sophomore in aviation technology; and Head Coach Rich DeAngelis.

complete a degree in four years.

Klimstra added that having a "normal progress" rule is a good idea. He said he personally favors also having a grade-point average structured into it.

Besides the minimum requirement rule, the NCAA adopted measures that would: —Require colleges and universities to publish their standards for measuring students' academic progress.

—Hold presidents and chancellors responsible for certifying that their athletes are academically eligible.

—Prohibit the use by athletes of extension and credit-by-examination courses from other institutions.

—Require athletes to get approval of "appropriate academic officials" before they take summer courses at other colleges.

—Require junior college students who had a grade-point average of less than 2.0 in high school to graduate from the junior college before they would be eligible for varsity sports in a four-year institution.

The current requirements for athletes entering or transferring to SIU-C are the same for all students wishing to enroll in the undergraduate program.

According to the SIU-C Undergraduate Catalog, all transfer students who have a C average, (2.0 on a 4.0 scale), are eligible for admittance.

Jerry Lacey, associate vice-president of university relations, said however, that SIU-C has different methods of averaging the GPA for transfer students.

"In some junior colleges, a student will get a 'D' in a course, and take it over and get an 'A,'" Lacey said. "His school may only count that 'A' in his overall average. Here, they would average both. You have to meet SIU standards."

Lacey said that the NCAA standards are a minimum requirement for all of its participating members. Other colleges, like SIU-C, can adopt their own policies.

Isaac Brigham, who handles all of the eligibility forms for men's athletics, said that it is rare when a student-athlete doesn't pass twelve hours in a term. He said they are encouraged to take more.

"We like to see them take 15 hours so as to maintain their status with their class," Brigham said.

The NCAA also voted to restrict football and basketball coaches to visiting prospective athletes only at certain times of the year. However, the number of visits coaches are allowed to make to an individual athlete was increased.

Lacey said he believed this rule will be beneficial because it frees athletes considering scholarships from being approached by recruiters week after week during the season.

Quincy ranked No. 1 in state

B- The Associated Press

It looks as if the only thing that's going to keep Quincy's undefeated Blue Devils from being the unanimous No. 1 choice in the Associated Press Class AA Illinois high school basketball is a defeat. So far this season no team has come close. The Blue Devils, 22-0, were the unanimous choice for the third successive week as they breezed past Galesburg 81-53 and Kankakee Eastridge 67-46.

They were named No. 1 on all 15 ballots cast by a panel of sportswriters and sportscasters.

Swimmers set to face rival SEMO

By Michelle Schwest
Staff Writer

The women's swimming meet scheduled for 2:45 p.m. Wednesday at the Recreation Building pool will pit SIU-C, the Illinois AIAW state Division I-II champions, against Southeast Missouri State University, the Missouri AIAW Division II champions.

The Salukis won their state championship Saturday, as did the Otahkians. The two teams have more in common than being champions of their respective states. Both teams won their state crowns by fairly wide margins. SIU-C won by 61 points but set 13 state records, while the Otahkians won by a 277-point margin. SEMO has only 11 swimmers and two divers, while SIU-C has 10 swimmers and five divers.

Both coaches are approaching the meet in the same manner.

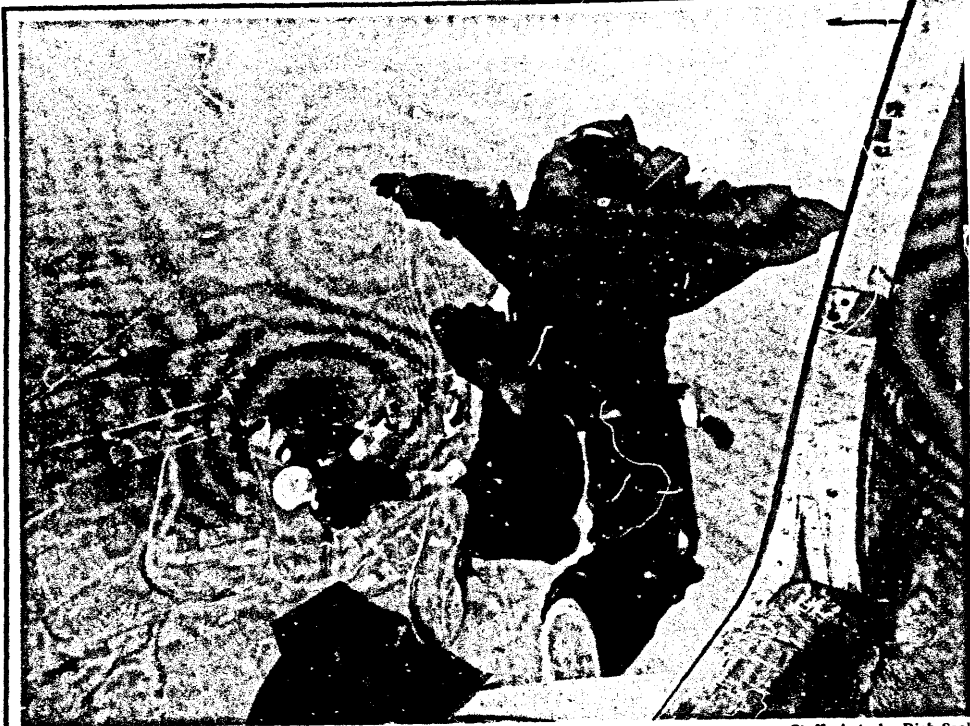

"I'm approaching this meet sort of casually," Saluki Coach Tim Hill said. "The meet will give some of the girls a chance to swim an event they enjoy. Some of the girls will be trying to make national cuts. Some of the girls are pretty tired from the state meet."

"We worked very hard going into the state meet, so we'll use this meet more or less to make some cuts for the nationals that we haven't made yet," said Burt Peake, SEMO coach. "In terms of trying to win the meet, we have the meet in perspective because SIU has a much stronger program than we do now. It won't be a very emotional meet."

The Otahkians feature senior captain Kay Douglas, a butterfly and individual medley specialist. She has qualified for the 50- and 100-yard butterfly national events. Senior Barb Wood holds every SEMO freestyle record except the 50-yard freestyle. She has qualified for nationals in the 200-yard freestyle. The SEMO 400-yard medley relay team of Wendy Hanson, Donna Vorbeck, Douglas and Wood also has qualified for nationals.

The diving squad may consist of only two people, but Peake feels both are All-America caliber. Freshman Sherri Hodges has qualified for nationals in Division II. Junior Cathy Rosa holds the SEMO one- and three-meter diving records.

Hill is hoping to have freshman Debbie Riker qualify for nationals in the 200-yard backstroke. She qualified for the AAU Junior Nationals in the 100 and 200-yard backstroke last year. He said also that the team is working hard training and trying to sharpen their speed for the national tournament which will be held March 18-20 at Columbia, S.C.

SIU-C Sky Divers jumping to success

By Keith Mascitti
Student Writer

Three members of the SIU-C sky diving team board a small jump plane at Hunter Fields Air Center in Sparta. Some 20 minutes later, the plane is hovering at 9,500 feet above the ground.

The door opens and the three jump out and start to fall at a speed of 120 mph. About a minute later, they pull the rip cords of their parachutes and rainbow-colored canopies fill the air. All that is left is a three-minute float back to the ground.

Mark Murphy is a 22-year-old junior in finance. He's also the commissioner for tuition and housing fees for the Undergraduate Student Organization.

But on the weekends he becomes the leader of the skydiving team. He currently ranks eighth in the nation for jumping accuracy.

The club is the largest in the nation with 240 members. The best 15 jumpers are chosen to represent SIU-C in both regional and national competition.

In its history, the team has produced four national team championships and set a world record in 1965 for the largest formation at the highest altitude (59 people at 15,500 feet).

Former SIU-C diver Debbie Schmidt became a world champion for accuracy in 1977, and another former diver, Tom Schapanski, became a national champion in style and accuracy last year.

This year's team finished fourth out of 45 teams in the nation in the national meet held last December in Marana, Ariz.

"I'm really proud of the guys," said Murphy. "We came close to both the Army and Air Force academies. Those guys are critiqued on every jump they make. Their instructors are world champions, they have the best equipment, and are allocated a lot of money."

"We don't have any instructors or coaches, and don't get the same amount of practice time they do. All the money for jumping comes out of our pockets. We almost beat them at their own game."

Traveling at the speed of 120 mph from 10,000-plus feet may seem crazy to some, but to Murphy, it's ecstasy. "Skydiving is an ego trip," said Murphy. "It's an undecipherable experience, your conquering a fear. Instead of being a nightmare you're enjoying it."

Teammate Jay Edmiston, a 22-year-old junior computer science major, said becoming a sky diver was the last thing he ever thought he would do. That was before he started jumping three years ago. Now, he jumps every chance he gets.

"Diving clears my head of problems," said Edmiston. "The minute I get out into the air, that's all I think about. Being above the clouds, the air is fresh. I love it."

Skeptics of the sport claim it to be "dangerous" and jumpers are considered to be "insane thrill-seekers." Murphy strongly disagrees.

"Skydiving is safe," said Murphy. "It's how you handle it. We're rational human beings. We want to live."

Murphy explained the policies of the Federal Aviation Administration make sure skydiving remains a safe sport. All jumpers are required to wear jump suits, helmets and goggles, and both a regular and reserve parachute.

The reserve chutes are worn on the stomach and are packed by a FAA-licensed rigger who can be legally prosecuted if a reserve chute fails to open.

The reserve chute is used only when the regular chute malfunctions. If for some reason the regular chute isn't open at 1,000 feet, an automatic opening device pulls the pins and the reserve chute opens immediately.

Last year some 50 divers were killed in jumping-related accidents. Murphy explained that these accidents were a very small percentage of jump made last year.

During a practice jump last Saturday, SIU-C diver Kirk Shepard's main parachute malfunctioned and did not open properly. He pulled the rip cord of his reserve chute at 2,500 feet and it promptly opened. He made a hard but safe landing in the mud several hundred yards from his target.

Skydiving is by no means a poor man's sport. Parachute costs range from $400 to $1,100. The cost of the first lesson is $75 (this includes six hours of ground training and equipment rental), and each additional jump costs $9.

New eligibility rules won't affect SIU

By Joseph Agnew
Student Writer

Although the National Collegiate Athletic Association recently voted to toughen its eligibility rules by requiring athletes to complete at least 12 credit hours each term, students currently participating in athletics at SIU-C will not be affected.

Until recently, the NCAA required only that its member colleges certify that an athlete was making "satisfactory progress" toward a degree. According to William Klimstra, SIU-C's faculty representative to the NCAA, the SIU-C athletic program, under Missouri Valley Conference rules, has been in line with the recent NCAA ruling for several years.

"The normal progress rule recently implemented by the NCAA requiring athletes to complete at least 12 hours a semester has been in use here for three or four years," said Klimstra.

According to MVC rules, at the beginning of the student athlete's third semester, he must have earned 24 semester hours to be eligible for further competition. He must have completed 48 hours by his fifth, and 72 by his seventh. At the beginning of the student-athlete's ninth semester, he must have earned 96 hours to be eligible for further competition.

Women's athletics are not affected by the NCAA ruling because they fall under the Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women, although women athletes are required to make the same credit quota each year. Athletes in both programs may take summer school classes to acquire the necessary credits to compete the following year.

Klimstra said SIU-C has followed the MVC requirements for male athletes because it did not feel the NCAA's former rule that colleges certify that an athlete was making satisfactory progress was sufficient.

"We did not feel it proper for a student-athlete to be making only satisfactory progress toward a degree," said Klimstra. "Students operating on the absolute minimum cannot
