EPA investigating Carbondale dump site

By Karen Guilo
Staff Writer

The Illinois Environmental Protection Agency is investigating a hazardous waste dump site in Carbondale for possible ground water contamination with chemical wastes.

The EPA named the site, located at the Koppers Co., a railroad tie facility in northeastern Carbondale, as one of 28 hazardous chemical dumps in the state that might qualify as public health threats.

Jeff Langley of the EPA's Emergency Rescue Unit said that a complaint was filed in October by a farmer whose property is adjacent to the facility. Four cows had died in September and the EPA found evidence of a heavy oil spill which had seeped into a creek that runs through the farmer's land, Langley said.

The contamination of the surface water was the result of an oil spill that occurred 40 years ago, according to Perry Mann, an environmental specialist with the Division of Land Pollution Control. The oil which had seeped into the creek contained creosote, a phenolic compound which is a hazardous waste material. In addition, it was discovered that a waste impoundment near the facility also had leaked into the creek.

Mann said the company excavated the contaminated soil and built surface dams to keep the oil from flowing into the creek.

The EPA is conducting a preliminary investigation of the spill, but has found "nothing hardcore."

"We are investigating the site and will be making soil tests and engineering studies," Langley said. "The possibility exists for a long-term problem of ground water contamination."

Langley said the investigation could take several months.

The Illinois EPA is ranking the 28 sites by the seriousness of health threats they pose. Air and water at each site are being monitored to learn whether the dumps are leaking or giving off poisonous fumes.

Eight sites are located in the Chicago area, four near St. Louis and one in Olney. A dump site in Galesburg is located at another Koppers facility.

After studies are completed in May, state officials will ask the federal government to consider granting cleanup funds under the Comprehensive Emergency Response Liability and Compensation Act of 1981, better known as "Superfund." Last year, $1.8 billion was earmarked for the fund to clean up dangerous chemical waste dumps, but so far the federal government hasn't set up guidelines for state applications for money from the fund.

The state of Illinois filed a lawsuit a week ago against the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and federal officials for failing to develop guidelines by the June 1981 deadline.

USO, GSG kick-off 'Education for Everyone Campaign'

By Lyndall Caldwell
Staff Writer

Saying proposed cuts in student financial aid will price many students out of an opportunity for college and force currently enrolled students to drop out, student government leaders Wednesday unveiled plans for the "Education for Everyone Campaign."

The campaign was presented at a press conference in the Wabash Room of the Student Center.

Todd Rogers, Undergraduate Student Organization president, said he hopes the "Education for Everyone Campaign" will "in" and mobilize the supporters of education."

"The drastic cuts proposed in several federal student loan and grant programs combined with substantial tuition and fee increases will have a real and negative impact on access to higher education," Rogers said.

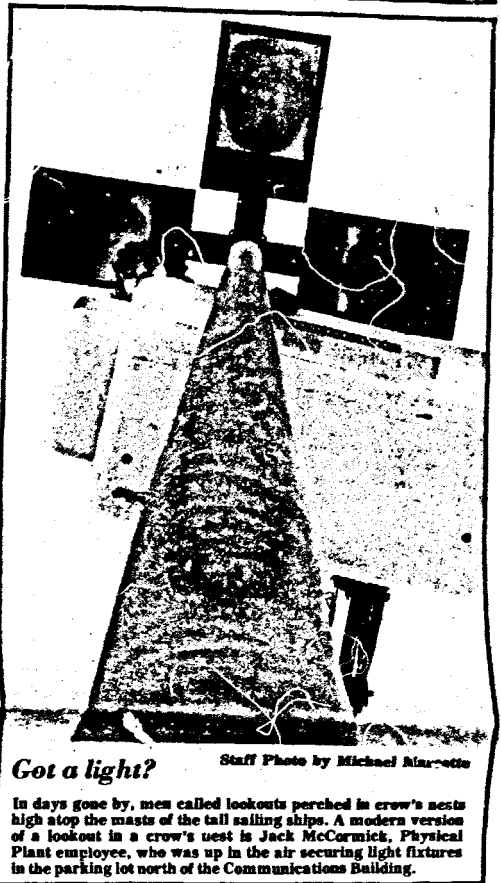

The USO and Graduate Student Council have already started a petition drive and letter-writing campaign. Upcoming events include a "teach-in," at 5 p.m. Monday at the Student Center Ballroom A, a public hearing March 8 to examine the impact of budget cuts, a three-week voter registration drive beginning March 23, and an "Education for Everyone Rally" with U.S.

Rep. Paul Simon, D-24th District, in the Free Forum Area near the Student Center March 26.

Rogers said that "with less money available to attract high quality teachers, fewer dollars awarded for research grants and general university support monies also dwindling, the quality of education as well as the opportunity for receiving it will be diminished."

The bi-partisan philosophy that once advocated educational opportunities for everyone is being challenged, Rogers said. The new philosophy is "educational

Auditors ask Watt to pay up

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interior Secretary James G. Watt improperly used government funds to throw two Christmas receptions and must reimburse the government at least $4,300, federal auditors have ruled.

The comptroller general of the United States also said "questions could be raised" about Watt's use of an additional $4,500 from his official reception fund to pay for the events.

However, the opinion said, "we will not object" to use of those funds because "agency heads have traditionally been accorded a great deal of discretion" in their use.

The opinion, dated Tuesday, was obtained Wednesday by The Associated Press.

The 5th District Court of Appeals in Mount Vernon is expected to rule in the near future on whether the University can make salary deductions from faculty and staff paychecks to collect delinquent parking fines.

According to Warren Buffum, vice president for financial affairs, 853 past and present University employees owed SIU-C $20,818 for past due parking fines as of Feb. 15.

Some of the fines "are several years old" and the amounts of the fines range from more than $250 to $5, Buffum said.

The appellate court decision could put an end to an almost 12-year battle by the University to retrieve faculty and staff parking fines by garnisheeing salaries.

The battle began in 1970 when the University began withholding money from the paychecks of faculty and staff. A 1974 ruling by the 5th District Court of Appeals in the case of Herbert Donow vs. the SIU Board of Trustees ended the practice until 1980.

The appellate court ruled in the Donow case that the University could not make deductions from employees' paychecks and declared SIU-C's Motor Vehicle and Bicycle Regulations governing the payment of parking fines illegal.

The Board of Trustees then approved new motor vehicle regulations that went into effect Aug. 1, 1974, in an attempt to correct those declared illegal.

In the spring of 1980, the University again attempted to withhold salaries to collect parking fines from faculty and staff, but the plan was dropped when the state comptroller's office, which allocates funds to pay state employees, refused to cooperate.

In September, another University plan to retrieve

Citing 'crisis in Caribbean,' Reagan wants new aid program

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan unveiled a program of trade, investment assistance and direct financial aid for the troubled countries of Central America and the Caribbean Wednesday, and declared he "will do whatever is prudent and necessary" to ensure peace and security there.

Reagan said he will ask for $50 million in additional funds for the region this year and warned in his speech to the Organization of American States: "If we do not act promptly and decisively in defense of freedom, new Cubas will arise from the ruins of today's conflicts."

He branded it a "crisis in the Caribbean."

The president, delivering his long-awaited plan to aid the nation's neighbors to the south, mixed details of proposed assistance for nations seeking help, based on "the magic of the market of the Americas," with angry words aimed at Cuban and other leftist influence in the region, and an offer of increased military aid.

"The positive opportunity is illustrated by the two-thirds of the nations in the area which have democratic governments," Reagan said. "The dark future is foreshadowed by the poverty and repression of Castro's Cuba, the tightening grip of the totalitarian left in Grenada and Nicaragua, and the expansion of Soviet-backed, Cuban-managed support for violent revolution in Central America."

Reagan didn't say in his speech what he would consider "prudent and necessary" U.S. action. Nor did the president, applauded at the start and finish of the approximately 30-minute address, discuss the use of U.S. troops in El Salvador. Asked if his speech was a warning to Cuba or Nicaragua, Reagan said: "I think it was an invitation. If they'd like to rejoin the Americas and our common heritage, we'd welcome them back."

The president said his Caribbean Basin Initiative includes:

—A program of 12 years of free trade for products made in the region — although some 87 percent of the area's exports already enter the United States duty free. Textiles and apparel, covered by international trade agreements, would be exempted from this provision.

—Tax incentives to be sought from Congress to encourage investment in the area.

—Unspecified help for Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands.

GAO: Feds bad at collecting bills

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government's collection systems are so inadequate that the total amount of money owed the nation by contractors, state and local governments can't even be determined, a congressional report said Wednesday.

And the small portion that can be identified, $374 million, remains uncollected, says the report by the General Accounting Office, the congressional auditing arm.

"Federal agencies are doing a poor job of managing and collecting audit-related debts owed by contractors and grantees such as state and local governments," said the report to the House Government Operations subcommittee on legislation and national security. "Most agencies do not know the total amount owed to them, nor do they collect debts promptly or charge the required interest when payments are late."

"When they are paid, agencies usually do not know whether the amounts received have been taken from their own or other federal programs. Also, some federal agencies avoid collecting some of their debts altogether," the GAO said.

The report is the third done over the past four years for the subcommittee, which held a hearing Wednesday on the failure of federal agencies to collect millions of dollars in misspent funds that are owed to the government.

In the current report to the committee, the GAO said even after management agrees with the auditors' findings and it is determined money is owed, the agencies are not collecting it.

Williams calls prosecutor 'fool'

ATLANTA (AP) — Wayne B. Williams' lawyers rested their case Wednesday after the defendant, showing the strain of three days on the stand, attacked his prosecutor as "a fool" and ridiculed the murder case against him as "a bunch of hearsay mess."

Williams, a 23-year-old black free-lance photographer and self-styled talent promoter, appeared on the verge of tears and acknowledged he had been "through a lot" as he engaged in a series of angry exchanges with Assistant District Attorney Jack Mallard.

Budget plan interests Reagan's men

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, in the most conciliatory stance to date over the embattled 1983 budget, pronounced as "very interesting" Wednesday a Senate Republican's alternative that would trim the president's big deficits.

But the president's men offered no specific indication that Reagan would accept Budget Chairman Pete V. Domenici's call for a scaled-down in the proposed Pentagon buildup, a boost in some taxes and a possible postponement of the basic, three-year cut in income taxes.

Hijackers free most of captives

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A dozen Shiite Moslem gunmen who held 105 persons hostage on a hijacked Kuwaiti Air ways jetliner for more than nine hours, freed most of their captives and left the plane early Thursday morning, control tower officials said.

It remained unclear whether the hijackers kept some of the hostages. One airport source, who declined to be identified, said the hijackers took six Libyans from the plane to a shantytown on the fringes of the airport.

Morris Library to transfer 60,000 books into storage

By Jill Skradski
Staff Writer

Preparations are being made by Morris Library and University officials to transfer about 60,000 of the library's volumes for storage at the Bracy Building in Marion.

Kenneth G. Peterson, dean of library affairs, said each floor's librarians and the Special Collections Department have identified the materials, mostly books and periodicals, which are candidates for storage.

Peterson said that while the final selection decision, students, faculty and staff are invited to review the selections and give comments to the appropriate subject division or Special Collections. The review period starts Monday and runs until March 12.

Darrell L. Jenkins, librarian for administrative services, said the list of volumes to be moved to Marion is "too long and detailed to be published. Faculty, students and staff may consult lists of these materials at the appropriate subject division reference desks and Special Collections."

The division reference desks are on the second through fifth floors and the Special Collections desk is on the second floor.

Peterson said Physical Plant workers have moved library shelves from the old law school library into the Bracy Building, which is located on North 4th Street. The volumes are scheduled to be moved by June 30.

Cost to move the 60,000 volumes is estimated to be between $23,000 and $24,000, according to John Baker, special assistant to the president.

Eventually, the Bracy Building is expected to store between 200,000 and 300,000 of Morris Library's more than 1.5 million volumes, Peterson said. Baker said the final number will depend on how much money is available to transfer volumes.

"We're not going to be able to use a lot of space because of the cost to move. The library will take over more space as time and money allows," he said.

Library books won't fill the Bracy Building's entire 60,000 square footage, however. Baker said the University is examining proposals to locate other programs in the building.

As of yet, no "suitable companion" to library storage has been found, Baker said. A Comprehensive Employment and Training Act automotive program was considered, and while it would have fit well into the building, he said it might have endangered the books.

"The librarians and others had serious concerns with whether they wanted the books anywhere near the dirt and hazards the automotive program presented," Baker said.

Groups want ICC officials elected

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — With $1.4 billion in proposed higher gas and electric rates before the Illinois Commerce Commission, it's time commissioners were elected instead of appointed, a state senator and two consumer groups said Wednesday.

"The ICC has failed to regulate the energy industry and control utility rates," Sen. Vince Demuzio, D-Carlinville, a long-time advocate of an elected commission, said.

Demuzio, flanked by members of the Herrin-based Southern Counties Action Movement and the Central Illinois Consumer Energy Council, said natural gas and electric rate boosts have outstripped inflation in the last five years.

He said the commerce commission — its members appointed by the governor — has rewarded utility mismanagement and inefficiency in Illinois by granting huge rate increases.

"Inefficiency has not meant lower profits to a utility. It only means higher rates for consumers," said Demuzio.

Demuzio said he intends to push legislation this spring on the Senate floor — after a two-year hiatus in such a drive — that would call for election of a seven-member commission.

Demuzio sponsored such legislation last year but it was torpedoed by the powerful Senate Executive Committee.

Secret jury selection hurts judicial credibility

THE PROSPECT of secret trials has always been repugnant to Americans. After the bitter experience of a repressive and often secretive British judicial system, the framers of our constitution made certain to state explicitly that all trials should be public.

That principle has never been seriously questioned. But public access to the pre-trial process has sometimes been restricted. Most recently, the Supreme Court rejected a challenge to California state court policy which allows the closing to the press and public of the selection of jurors in cases which might involve the death penalty.

This is a dangerous development which is liable to raise suspicion and fear of the judicial system. As the lawyers for one of the three California newspapers involved in the case argued, the courts will be subject to severe doubts by the public if those who will try the accused are chosen in secret.

SELECTION of jurors is a vital part of the public process of the trial. The questions asked potential jurors by attorneys and the kinds of jurors chosen are often vital to the outcome of a case. This information is pertinent to the public's understanding of the trial.

Benefits — such as shielding jurors from publicity — to be gained from this action are minimal. It will not keep the names of jurors secret, for they become part of the public record.

The public and the press, in its function as the representative of the public, have a right to a judiciary system that is as open as possible in all its functions. Closing of jury selection is a dangerous precedent, which should be reversed as soon as possible.

New response to issues needed in community

An article in the Feb. 15 Daily Egyptian, although generally a good description of the motivation behind formation of a new student-faculty-citizen group calling itself Coalition for Change, unfortunately may leave a bad taste with some of your readers. Specifically, I was quoted as commenting that the Carbondale community lacked groups that "were actually doing something."

As a paid-up member of Amnesty International and the Coalition of Progressive Social Scientists myself, and as an admirer of the good work of a number of other groups, I am quite aware that others have long been laboring in good cause. However, some of us do believe that none of the groups or efforts produced up until now actually constitute a sufficient response to the current attacks upon students, the elderly, the poor, racial minorities and the impoverished masses of Third World countries. Especially, we need really dedicated and selfless individuals, who will leave ego-tripping and con-vulsed dogma to one side, and who will work hard to fight for human rights and dignity — and we need to do it by concentrating on practical projects that will show real results.

It is too early to know if we will be successful in finding enough such persons to build an effective core for fighting back against the present war on the poor, or, indeed, if the few of us who have come together will even prove up to the task. It is always easier to talk about what you are going to do than to do it. But if also, as we are to be successful in defending our rights and the rights of those unable to defend themselves, we will need to work together.

Hence, I regret being quoted as impugning the efforts of others, when I actually said, or at least meant to say, that none of us (myself included) are doing enough at present to meet the threats we face. We all need to work together and get moving in a broad coalition for change. — Paul Diener, Assistant Professor, Anthropology

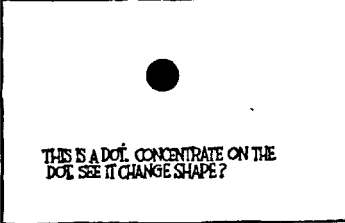

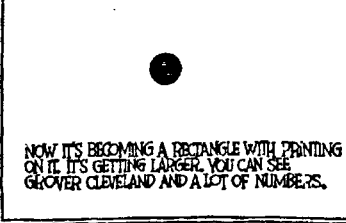

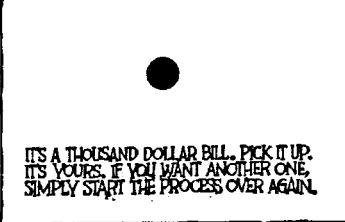

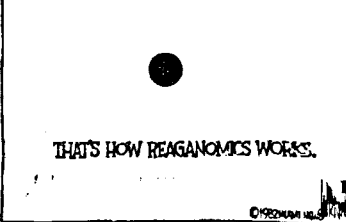

Southern Illinois likes WCIL

Now that several people have voiced their opinions about the Daily Egyptian's Jan. 20 feature on WTOA, I'd like to express mine, which just happens to be in defense of WCIL.

Yes, WCIL is a Top 40 station. Yes, they basically play the same songs over and over. And, yes, they broadcast high school sports. But wait just a minute. WCIL also happens to be the number one radio station in Southern Illinois. Doesn't that tell you something about what this area wants to hear?

Don't get me wrong. I'm not knocking the new WTOA. As a matter of fact, I kind of like it. But as a lifelong resident of Southern Illinois and a listener of WCIL since their first day on the air, I feel compelled to defend them. After all, WCIL does cater to the people of Southern Illinois, not just to the SIUC students. — Donna David, Sophomore, Accounting

Reaganville depicts fix of homeless

FOR A NUMBER of winters, the closest neighbor to the President of the United States was a homeless man who slept on a sidewalk heat grate not far from the southwest corner of the White House lawn. Now there are some new neighbors — about a dozen of the homeless poor who spend the night in campsite tents in Lafayette Park, the beautiful acreage of lawns and gardens facing the north front of the White House.

By yardage, the new neighbors are closer to the world's most powerful political leader. By symbolism, the gathering of the poor and their tents — called Reaganville — is a public protest against political decisions whose end effect is to push more and more citizens into street poverty. For many, it is worse. Not far from the tents is a symbolic cemetery of 539 white crosses imbedded in the lawn to memorialize the nameless poor known to have died of freezing in 11 cities in the past five years.

REAGANVILLE is not a pretty scene, as the Hoovervilles of 50 years ago were not either. Lafayette Park being federal Interior Department property and the neighbors across Pennsylvania Avenue known to be connoisseurs of the good life, this encampment of street life was not an occasion for the welcome wagons. The legal background of how Reaganville came to be is as compelling as the stories of the poor themselves. It is a heartening story, one of the few the homeless can take comfort in these days.

It began last Sept. 30. An official from the National Park Service of the Interior Department denied application of a local community group and 10 poor people to use Lafayette Park for a four-month demonstration on behalf of the homeless. The park, the government argued, is regulated by a no-sleeping ban.

The group — the Community for Creative Non-Violence, a Catholic Worker type organization with a 10-year record of feeding and caring for the poor of the nation's capital — filed suit in U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia. On Nov. 25, the judge upheld Interior's denial to camp.

FIVE DAYS later, the community group won the government's permission for a seven-day demonstration in the park, including the erection of nine tents in a "symbolic campsite." But the sleeping ban continued.

On Dec. 18, the community group's lawyers returned to district court. The judge was Charles J. Richey, Jr., an Ohio Republican appointed to the bench by Richard Nixon. The lawyers argued that the poor had a constitutional right to sleep in the tents. The demonstration, they said, "is a powerful exercise of free speech. The homeless have chosen a dramatic mode of expressive conduct in the conviction that nothing short of their ongoing presence in Lafayette Park, not just empty tents, is an effective statement. That choice falls within the broad ambit of the First Amendment."

Ruling in the case, called Community for Creative Non-Violence v. James G. Watt, Secretary of Interior, Judge Richey decided on Dec. 23rd for the poor and against the government: Sleeping in the tents "is a means of symbolic expression of their First Amendment rights."

THE RICHEY decision, which said in essence that a citizen's right to demonstrate shouldn't be denied because he must sleep, was appealed by the government.

On Jan. 22, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia upheld the Richey decision. "We believe," the three appeals court judges wrote, that "the Park Service regulations plainly allow the poor to sleep in the tents as an intrinsic part of their protest against governmental policies which they allege contribute to their lack of shelter.... Moreover, as the District Court found, in this case sleeping itself may express the message that these persons are homeless and so have nowhere else to go."

The defeat of the Interior Department is nothing to cheer about. The case has meaning only if "the message" referred to by the court of appeals is heeded by the President across the street, Congress across town, and public officials across the country.

opportunity — the very foundation of our nation's technological, medical and humanistic advances — is no longer paramount to the goals of this state or this nation," he said.

He said new proposals eliminating graduate students from the Guaranteed Student Loan program would place "impractical, if not impossible, repayment conditions" on them.

Debbie Brown, GSC president, said "elimination of graduate and professional students from this program would be devastating. The effects would be far-reaching and negative, impacting on the productivity and growth of research in this country, and encouraging only the wealthy to pursue professional careers in medicine, dentistry, and law."

Nationally, about half of all graduate students finance their educations through the Guaranteed Student Loan program, Brown said. At SIU-C, "741 graduate, medical, and law students needed to borrow over $2 million in order to get through this academic year. These loans are not a free ride. They are an investment in the nation's future," she said.

Students aren't opposed to attempts to restore the economy through balancing the budget, cutting federal spending, and lowering interest rates, Brown said. But the federal government's proposal calls for the poor and middle class to "absorb more than our fair share of cutbacks," she said.

"If passed, the budget would mandate the death of something that has been hard fought for during the last half-century in this country — opportunities for all citizens of the United States, and with those opportunities, the possibility for mobility and advancement in our society."

Brown also called for close scrutiny of the proposed federal defense budget.

"Defense spending in this country can no longer be immune from the budget-cutting knife," she said. "We cannot afford to end up with battleships and fighter airplanes and be defenseless here at home, fighting the enemies of ignorance, disease and poverty."

Rogers and Brown said that similar protests and rallies are being organized across the nation.

'Subliminal Seduction' subject of talk by author

Wilson Bryan Key, author of the book "Subliminal Seduction," will give a multi-media presentation on how the media manipulates consumers at 7:30 p.m. Monday in Ballroom B. of the Student Center.

Tickets to the lecture are $2 and are available at the Student Center Ticket Office.

Key, president of Mediaprobe Inc., has researched advertisements which he claims contain subliminal seduction, secretly arousing the reader's sexuality. According to Key, many products contain this sneaking method. "Products such as Ritz crackers, Crest toothpaste and even the American $5 bill use unconscious advertising. Ritz crackers embeds the word 'sex' in its dough before baking. Crest toothpaste has an ad with the word 'sex' hidden in the arm of an infant. Even ol' Honest Abe Lincoln has the word 'sex' in his beard and face on the $5 bill.

"Fortunately for advertisers, many people are not well-informed and do not know they are being seduced by this type of advertising. But if consumers get concerned and try to overcome their unconscious buying, the only seducing they'll get is the type they ask for."

Prayer breakfast with Laury Boone set for Ramada

Laury Boone and her husband, Harry Browning, will be the speakers at a family prayer breakfast at 8 a.m. Saturday at the Ramada Inn 2400 W. Main.

Ms. Boone has recorded albums with her sisters, Debby, Cherry and Lindy, as "The Boones."

The breakfast is sponsored by the Southern Illinois Chapter of the Full Gospel Business Men's Fellowship International.

Reservations must be made by Feb. 25 for the breakfast, and can be made by calling 457-5829, 568-1200 or 942-2396. Admission is $4.

Oriental art exhibit and sale planned in Student Center

Original Oriental art will be exhibited and offered for sale Thursday through Sunday in the south escalator area of the Student Center.

The exhibit will run from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. Thursday and from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Friday through Sunday.

Marson Ltd. of Baltimore, Md. will exhibit about 500 items from Japan, China, India, Tibet, Nepal and Thailand. The oldest prints date back to the 18th and 19th century and include Chinese woodcuts, Indian miniature paintings and manuscripts and works by such artists as Hiroshige, Kuniyoshi and Kunisada.

Modern pieces include original woodcuts, etchings, lithographs, serigraphs and mezzotints created by such contemporaries as Saito Azechi, Mori, Katsuda and Maki.

The exhibit is sponsored by SPC Center Programming and the Student Center Craft Shop.

past due parking fines was nixed by the comptroller's office.

In November, letters were sent to faculty and staff members who owed more than $100 in fines saying that if the fines were not paid, they would be deducted from salaries.

That month, Joel Feldman, a faculty member in art, and three other faculty members filed a lawsuit in the Jackson County Circuit Court challenging the University's right to make such deductions.

On Dec. 1, 1980, the University deducted pay from 14 faculty members and on Jan. 1, 1981, additional deductions were made. The University's plan bypassed the comptroller's office and made use of locally held SIU-C funds. The University paid the faculty members out of the locally held funds, and after making deductions for the fines, SIU-C was reimbursed by the comptroller's office.

Shari Rhode, SIU-C's chief trial attorney, said the plan "was suggested by the comptroller's office."

However, after Jan. 1, SIU-C stopped making paycheck deductions "because the University agreed to take it through the courts and see what they had to say," Rhode said.

Feldman's suit against the University charged that SIU-C violated the State Salary and Annuity Withholding Act because the deductions were made without the employees' specific written consent. Also, Feldman contended that the University's policy was illegal because of the 1974 ruling in the Donow case.

The University contended that the motor vehicle regulations had been rewritten after the Donow case and were legal.

Also, SIU-C contended that because University employees are required to sign a contract at the onset of their employment stating they will obey all University regulations, the fines could be deducted under Section 8-105 of the motor vehicle regulations.

That section states that "any employee who fails to pay a fine resulting from a motor vehicle or bicycle violation is subject to having the fine deducted from his pay." The University said the section did not violate the State Salary and Annuity Withholding Act.

Circuit Judge William Green ruled on April 20, 1981, that employees' contracts did not constitute specific written consent and that the University's paycheck deductions were illegal. He permanently enjoined SIU-C from making further deductions without employees' written authorization or an order of the circuit court.

Green also ordered the four faculty members to pay the fines they owed, plus court costs.

In his decision, Green said that a parking fine is a predetermined penalty assessed by the University and "does not become a debt until a court determines it to be a debt or plaintiffs waive the court determination by a signed authorization."

The University filed an appeal on July 31, 1981, and Feldman's lawyer, Gilbert Feldman, filed a cross-appeal on Aug. 10, 1981.

Arguments in the appeals were heard last week before a panel of Judges Charles Jones, George Kasserman and Moses Harrison II. "We're awaiting a decision," Rhode said, "but there's no way of knowing when it will be handed down."

About the pending case, Feldman's attorney said, "We're taking the position that the University hasn't complied with the salary act, and they have no right, absent a specific written authorization, to withhold money from employees' paychecks. That's why the withholding act was established — to prevent this sort of thing."

He added, "By saying the motor vehicle regulations constitute part of an employee's contract, the University is attempting to enforce sanctions that the trial court said constitute a penalty clause which can only be enforced by a court. We're saying the Donow case is still applicable and what the University is trying to do is establish their own judicial system."

Rhode said, "The University is claiming the deductions were legal because the contract employees sign is specific. The parking regulations have been rewritten and the deficiencies that were pointed out in the Donow case have been corrected."

Feldman's lawyer is contending that the only way the University can deduct the fines from paychecks is through the State Salary and Annuity Withholding Act. Rhode said,

"Feldman is saying that's the exclusive way it can be done," Rhode said. "We're saying that's one way, but it's not the only way because if Feldman is right, the regulations can never be corrected."

Wills' book shows Kennedy as prisoner of family legacy

By Christopher Kade
Staff Writer

The Kennedy Imprisonment: A Meditation on Power, by Garry Wills. An Atlantic Monthly Press Book; Little, Brown and Company, Boston: 1982. 310pp.

The sad spectacle of Edward Kennedy's doomed run for the presidency in 1980 conjures up images difficult to erase from the mind. How seemingly incongruous for a Kennedy to be soundly beaten week after week where once his brothers triumphed.

In this book, journalist-historian Garry Wills asks the question, "Where did it all go wrong?" How could a campaign which began so promisingly end so ignominiously?

Kennedy lost, Wills argues, not solely because of Chappaquiddick and the "character issue." He also lost because he has survived two brothers whose legacies shadow his every move.

"Edward has no one but ghosts at his side, and they count more against than for him. Where they were praised too fulsomely, he is bound to be judged too harshly. He inherits the illusions of his brothers' followers with the accumulated venoms of their foes..."

"Edward has managed to outlast three brothers without ever catching up to one of them.

them, their glory either recedes from him, or fades in the public's eyes. It was pretty evanescent stuff to begin with, the glory; but one can hardly look to him for that perception. To show ingratitude toward the ghosts would just make them harder to shake off."

If it is impolitic for Edward to deflate the glory of his brothers, it is certainly not so for Wills. In countering the claims of the Kennedy image-makers, he has performed an invaluable service to a country too long infatuated with Kennedy "charisma."

Wills offers nothing new to the historical record, but, as in the prescient "Nixon Agonistes," his analysis of myth and his view of men and events through the prism of both history and literature brings to this topic a startling variety of insights.

We come to understand how not only Edward, but all the presidents who came after John, have been chasing the ghosts of "charisma," of sexuality, of power.

The Kennedy legacy is not only unrealistic in a world changed by the sexual revolution and the awareness of power's limits. It is, at least in Edward's case, also self-defeating.

Prairie Farms Dairy, Inc. will crack down on those stealing and unlawfully using milk cases, and may seek prosecution in the near future for unlawful use of milk cases, according to its Carbondale office.

The company is asking persons possessing cases to return them to supermarkets, dairies or convenience stores with no questions asked within 60 days.

Prairie Farm's main distribution area, including Indiana, Illinois, Missouri and Iowa, loses millions in stolen cases. St. Louis area dairies alone report losing over $1 million worth of cases each year. Officials of the company plan to contact wholesale customers as well as schools and colleges to inform them of the seriousness of the problem. Many states have enacted laws spelling out action to be taken against illegal use of milk cases.

Prairie Farms is committed to the campaign in an effort to reduce milk case loss and to hold milk prices down.

The Carbondale office asks that anyone having information or comments contact either Dave Lattan or Russel Crain at 457-4191.

Truck crash injures policeman

A Carbondale police officer was injured in a one-vehicle accident east of DeSoto Wednesday morning.

John Sytsma, 27, Route 3, Carbondale, suffered a concussion, facial abrasions, and a fractured leg in the accident. Sytsma was driving his truck at the time of the crash.

Sytsma was listed in stable condition at Memorial Hospital Wednesday afternoon.

The Jackson County Sheriff's Office hadn't completed a report on the accident Wednesday afternoon, but an SIU-C officer who was sent to the scene said Sytsma's truck was wedged in the southwest corner of the Big Muddy bridge, on Route 149, when he arrived.

The officer said that a roadblock was set up, and that Sytsma had been taken away by the Jackson County ambulance when the officer arrived, at about 5 a.m.

"Pilot pens! You have to hold onto them with two hands!"

I make a deposit... this guy's making a withdrawal—including my Pilot pen.
It's almost criminal how people go for my Pilot fountain. Why? Its fine point writes through carbon. And Pilot charges only 79¢ for it. People get their hands on it and forget it's my pen. I got no pen. And no respect.
People go nuts over my Pilot Razor Point too. It writes with an extra fine line. Its metal collar helps keep the point from going squishy.
For only 89¢ they should buy their own pen—and show some respect for my property.

Indoor fielders advance to regional

By Keith Mascitti
Staff Writer

The field hockey team is gearing up for the fall season by competing in indoor tournaments and practicing three times a week.

The fielders finished second out of 11 teams in a tournament held at Eastern Illinois. The win qualified them for the Midwest Regional Tournament at Iowa on April 10.

Coach Julee Illner said she was happy with the team's performance considering the amount of pre-tournament practice the team had.

"We had very little indoor practice due to Davies Gym being closed," Illner said. "We only practiced four times before the tournament. I feel we did very well."

"I'm pleased with the way we were able to come back," she said. "We were down in two games and we came from behind to win both. We also got some revenge by beating Eastern Kentucky and Indiana State, who both beat us in the fall season. It was a nice thing to happen."

SIU-C's only loss came in the championship game when to the Central Illinois Club, 3-2.

According to Illner, indoor field hockey is basically the same as indoor soccer. She said the game's pace is faster than outdoor field hockey because of the boards surrounding the field. The ball quickly bounces off the boards which means players' reactions have to be quick.

Illner said the indoor game has improved the Salukis' passing game since the ball moves quicker on the indoor surface, forcing players to react quicker when executing or receiving a pass.

The purpose for the winter practices is to improve individual skills, thus allowing the Salukis to concentrate on team skills in the fall. Illner said the tournaments give her a chance to experiment with offensive and defensive line combinations and also gives junior varsity and varsity substitutes playing time.

Due to the Davies Gym renovation, the fielders will not host any indoor tournaments. They won't compete in another tournament until the Midwest Regional.

this year, and that's why I've competed well."

Geary, with 36-inch legs, broad shoulders and the stamina of a middle-distance runner, is looking forward to the outdoor season, where he can be utilized even more. But until then, he has to endure the indoor season.

He says the 60-yard dash is too quick for him; the 300 doesn't give him a chance to relax; and he doesn't like fighting the banks in the 440. But he competes in all three, anyway.

Geary, like most track and field athletes, would love to secure a spot on the 1984 Olympic team. But putting those thoughts aside, utility man Geary is concentrating on "helping out the guys" at the Missouri Valley Conference and NCAA Indoor Championship track and field meets.

'White Sox' Luzinski injures left ankle

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — White Sox slugger Greg Luzinski could miss up to a week of spring training because of a turned left ankle, it was learned Wednesday.

Luzinski stumbled while shagging fly balls in the outfield near the end of Tuesday's workout and the ankle swelled up overnight. X-rays proved negative, but trainer Herman Schneider said Luzinski would miss "at least four or five days."

The designated hitter had come to camp weighing 237 pounds and "in the best shape I've been in a long time."

To avoid undue strain on his surgically repaired right knee, Luzinski had not been jogging with the rest of the players "because of the constant pounding on your knee when you jog," he said.

"I'm not going to have to do that in a game," he said.

Tracksters aim for third place

By Paul Lorenz
Associate Sports Editor

Two of the probable opponents for the women's track team at the Eastern Illinois Invitational this weekend competed against the Salukis at Illinois State last Saturday.

One of those teams, Illinois State, scored 90 points at the meet. The other, SIU-Edwardsville, did not score. The Salukis ended up closer to points than to 90.

But women's track Coach Claudia Blackman predicts a better showing for SIU-C Saturday at Charleston than its four-point, 10th-place finish of last weekend. The field, the smallest the indoor team will compete in to date, includes Loyola, Chicago and Eastern Illinois.

While not having first-place aspirations, Blackman thinks SIU-C can pull up in third place behind Eastern and Illinois State. ISU's Redbirds are a "probable" opponent because, as of Monday, they had not turned in their entries to Eastern. Entries are usually submitted to a school hosting a meet about 10 days prior to the meet.

Blackman said the Salukis should be able to "eat away" at the 86-point margin the Redbirds had over them last weekend at Normal.

"Some of the other teams aren't as strong, so they won't be taking points away from us," the Saluki coach said. "And each team will be allowed three entries per event this weekend, rather than two, which should help us. For example, in the two-mile run, which we feel is one of our stronger events, at least two, if not all three of our entries, should score."

Senior Patty Plymire-Houseworth, who scored the only four points for the Salukis at Illinois State, will run the two-mile event with freshmen Laura Falci and Odette James.

One change Blackman will make in the lineup involves sprinter Debra Davis, who set a school record in the 300-meter dash at Normal. She will run the 440-yard dash at Charleston. The coach said the 440 is "unquestionably" Davis' strongest outdoor event, adding that the sophomore should be able to place at the indoor meet.

Blackman thinks Rosa Mitchell should place at the meet, but added that the junior distance runner has been ill the past week. The coach said several Salukis have been suffering from colds recently, making it difficult to say who will be at full strength Saturday.

Lovin said. And add another defensive back to the roster. Adrian White, 6-1, 188-pound Jacksonville, Fla., native will bring "outstanding speed" to SIU-C next season, according to Dempsey.

"While runs a 21.8 in the 220, so we're happy with the outstanding speed he has," Dempsey said.

Dave Book, 6-1, 248-pound offensive guard from Palatine will be the kind of player the Salukis will be "looking at down the line," Dempsey said.

'Utility man's' priority is injury-free season

By Ken Perkins
Staff Writer

If Randy Geary stays injury-free for the remainder of the year, he will be a factor in the NCAA Outdoor Championships in June.

Who says so? No one else but Randy Geary.

"I feel that if I can avoid injuries, I could be a world-class athlete in due time," Geary says. "I'm sure if that happens, I'll end my career on a high note and make it better for my teammates."

Geary is the "utility man" for the Saluki tracksters, and lately he has been doing his bit to "make it better."

Last weekend he took the pressure off an ailing Tony Adams, the Salukis' top quarter-miler, by running a fast 48.0 in that event, qualifying for the NCAA Indoor Championships. But wait, it gets better.

Next, the senior from Rantoul teamed up with Gary Munson, Tom Ross and Karsten Schulz to help qualify the distance medley team for the nationals. Moments later, he substituted for Adams on the mile relay and ran a good third leg. "I'm just here for the ride, to help out the team," says Geary, a fine 200-meter man in his own right. "It's a joy running with these guys. We all help each other."

"It's great when you have six to eight guys capable of running the relays at any time. Teamwork and togetherness, that's what it's all about."

What pleases Geary about the teamwork at SIU-C is the fact that he toiled without it for three seasons at Western Illinois.

After four years as a high school workhorse — he competed in the 100-, 200-, and 400-meter dashes and the triple and long jumps — Geary strutted into Macomb with big plans and high hopes. All he left with was an abundance of injuries and a confused state of mind.

"My coach never believed in my ability as a sprinter," Geary says of Jim Sackett, who is no longer at WIU. "If he would have given me a chance to do what I wanted, I probably would have had a pretty good career at Western."

During his three-year stint at Western, Geary had a fine day at the Texas Relays, completing a 400-meter split in the distance medley in 46.8. He also had a not-so-fine stint in the WIU training room, day in and day out.

Despite his injuries, Geary qualified for the Division II nationals each of his three years with the Leathernecks. But bad luck seemed to follow him like a shadow.

In his first year, Geary fouled out of the triple jump at the national meet. His sophomore campaign found Geary on the bench more than on the track because of a pulled hamstring.

It looked like Geary had finally beaten his "jinx" when he entered a national meet at full strength his junior year. But the trackster's bad luck continued; he dropped the baton in a relay event.

"I've been through it all," he says.

After Coach Sackett packed his bags and headed for the West Coast, Geary, who had been in touch with Saluki Coach Lew Hartrog, decided to finish out his collegiate career at SIU-C.

Geary thought his troubles were over. But his old "buddy" — bad luck — rejoined him in Carbondale.

Before this school year began, Geary was bitten by a dog, which resulted in 35 stitches. He was out for two months after an appendectomy, and an additional month after he stepped in a hole and turned his ankle.

"Right now, I'm pretty much injury-free. I'm a little tight, but that's to be expected because of the indoor tracks," Geary says. "If I stay healthy, there's no telling what I can do."

The ankle injury still haunts Geary, though. Psychologically, he just can't seem to practice at 100 percent. He said Hartrog understands, and knows that the trackster will continue to work hard and try to improve.

But Geary doesn't want to wait to improve. He wants to become a world-class athlete as soon as possible.

"The key to my success is simple: staying injury-free. I know I keep saying it, but it's true. I haven't been bothered

"It's a joy working with these guys," says trackster Randy Geary. "Teamwork and togetherness that's what it's all about."

Lucy Poprawski takes careful aim at the hoop at the IM free throw contest. The senior in recreation took third place.

Free throw champs hit nothing but net

By Linda Stackman
Staff Writer

Don Ritter, who claimed he was just "lucky," sank 25 consecutive free throws to win the men's intramural free throw shooting contest at the Recreation Center Tuesday night.

Kim Thompson won the women's competition. The interior design major from Paxton completed 76 of 100 attempts to claim the title. Thompson called her first-place finish a "personal accomplishment."

"I wasn't a good free throw shooter in high school, but I've changed my shot since then," she said.

Ritter entered the final round of 25 free throws trailing Cameron Trail by two hoops. Trail had completed 69 of 75, while Ritter had sunk 67.

"I was lucky this year," said Ritter, who won the coin toss to open the final round. "When I got all 25 free throws, I put the pressure I wanted to on Cameron."

Trail decided not to complete his final round after missing his first toss.

Ritter, a senior in recreation, said he finished sixth two years ago and didn't get past the first qualifying round last year. The Glenview native's final tally was 92 free throws out of 100 attempts.

Theresa Everingham and Lucy Poprawski had a fierce battle for second place in the women's division. The two were tied after three rounds

3 football recruits sign

By Bob Moran
Staff Writer

Head football Coach Rey Dempsey announced the signing of three more recruits Wednesday, including another prospect from Carbondale Community High School.

Darrell Frazier, 5-10, 175-pound quarterback from CCHS will join the Saluki squad next season, and will be converted to the defensive back and/or wide receiver positions, according to Dempsey.

"He's quick and although he played quarterback in high school, we'll be looking at him mainly in a defensive back role," Dempsey said. Frazier's older brother, Jim, is a defensive back at Iowa.

Terrier Coach Jim Lovin said it was expected that Darrell would play defensive back at the college level.

"We knew he'd play defensive back in college. I'm sure he'll be a real asset for Southern."
