USG senators say $2.25 hike would help pay for RSOs

A proposed student-fee increase is needed to combat inflation and help fund registered student organizations, some Undergraduate Student Government senators say.

The Graduate and Professional Student Council president says such an increase is not needed at this time, however.

Eric Bottom, USG Finance Committee chairman and College of Business senator, said the increase, facing a USG Senate vote Wednesday, would not be in effect

Rape victims find assistance at Women's Center

By Kendra Helmer
Daily Egyptian Reporter

At three in the morning, Carolyn Prinz is awakened by her beeper. She lies in bed, angry at the person who disrupted her sleep. She gets out of bed and rushes to the hospital.

On her way there, Prinz remembers who she is angry at. She is not angry at the frightened woman in the hospital who she now rushes to help. She is angry at the alleged rapist who put the woman there.

Prinz arrives at the hospital and steps into her role as a crisis counselor and program coordinator for the Carbondale Women's Center, 406 W. Mill St.

"The anger I have at the perpetrator gets me out of bed and to the hospital," she said. "We drink a lot of coffee around here."

Prinz said she and other Women's Center employees and volunteers receive many late-night calls from police to counsel sexual assault survivors.

"Sometimes I'm the first person they've ever talked to about being raped," Sandy Kramer, a counselor for the Women's Center, said. "I help them validate their experience and let them know I believe them."

Kramer said many sexual assault survivors turn to friends for comfort only to be victimized even further by questions that blame the victim. "We help a woman by listening to her and believing her, without asking questions that make her feel guilty," she said. "To have someone say they believe you can really help start the healing process."

Prinz and Kramer said they are amazed at the coping skills of sexual assault survivors.

Women discuss 'Brown v. Board'

First black students integrated into white school speak about case at SIUC

By Melissa Jakubowski
DE Assistant Features Editor

Behind every piece of history there are people who know what really happened, Cheryl Brown Henderson says.

Henderson and her sister, Linda Brown Thompson, spoke Thursday night in a packed University Museum Auditorium about their personal involvement and the effects of the landmark 1954 Supreme Court case Brown v. Board of Education as a part of Black History Month.

The women are the daughters of the Rev. Oliver Brown, the man who challenged the Topeka Board of Education because his daughter Linda could not attend the nearest public school because the school was segregated by race.

"My father pondered, 'Why? Why should my child walk four miles when there is a school only four blocks away?'" Thompson said. "He wondered, 'Why should I take time to explain to my daughter that she can't attend school with her neighborhood playmates because she is black?'"

Thompson said her father took the case to the state supreme court, but he lost the case. She said the case then went to the U.S. Supreme Court.

AT LEAST 12 KILLED, 51 HURT IN ISRAELI BOMBINGS — JERUSALEM, Feb. 25—A suicide bomber detonated a powerful explosive on a bus in downtown Jerusalem Sunday as rush hour began, killing at least 10 and injuring at least 30, a police spokesman said. Ninety minutes after the first bomb exploded, Israel Radio reported that a second suicide bombing attack occurred in the coastal town of Ashkelon. At least two people were killed and 21 injured when a car drove into a hitchhiking station for soldiers, according to Israel Radio. No further details were available. Surveying the charred remains of the two buses minutes after the explosion, Jerusalem Mayor Ehud Olmert made a grim assessment. "This is the hardest and most powerful explosion as yet. This is very bad," said Olmert, who is also a parliamentary candidate for the opposition Likud Party. "This is a central intersection, Jaffa Road, a few hundred meters from the convention center and the central bus station. It doesn't look good. It shows there can be a political process and not the kind of security we aspire for."

CUBAN JETS DOWN 2 PLANES OWNED BY EXILES — MIAMI—Two small aircraft belonging to a Miami-based Cuban exile group were shot down by Cuban fighter jets Saturday off the north coast of the island, U.S. officials said. A U.S. military plane sent to search the area just before sunset spotted two oil slicks in international waters 15 to 18 miles off the Cuban coast, according to Coast Guard Lt. Cmdr. Marcus Woodring in Miami. Cuban government officials had no immediate comment Saturday on the incident, which was not mentioned on the island's evening news broadcasts.

NAVY PLANE EA-6B PLUNGES INTO OCEAN; 1 DEAD — SAN DIEGO—Even as the Navy was in the midst of a three-day safety "standdown" for its fleet of F-14 fighters, a warplane of a different kind crashed Saturday into the Pacific Ocean, leaving one crewman dead, two injured and another missing, the Navy said. The crash of the EA-6B Prowler occurred at 12:05 p.m., 150 miles off the Southern California coast. The plane was part of Carrier Air Wing 11 aboard the San Diego-based carrier Kitty Hawk. The plane's squadron is based at Whidbey Island, Wash., but was at Miramar Naval Air Station in San Diego for training. Three crewmen were rescued by helicopter about 40 miles from the carrier. A fourth was still missing, according to Navy Cmdr. Gregg Hartung. There was no immediate word on the cause of the crash.

FBI QUESTIONING REVEALS MCVEIGH MINDSET — OKLAHOMA CITY—From his unique vantage point, Michael Fortier had the clearest picture of what was happening inside Timothy J. McVeigh's head. They had soldiered together and, after the Army, he watched as McVeigh drifted across the country in search of the next gun show. "If he did indeed blow up the federal building," Fortier said, "Tim would simply consider it to be a rational act on his part." Fortier's descriptions come from sealed FBI reports of interviews the agency conducted with him in the days after the bombing of the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building. These are his first explanations to law enforcement, at a time when the FBI itself was still learning how wide and how deep the bombing conspiracy had grown.

Corrections/Clarifications

In Tuesday's Daily Egyptian article "Small crowd attends local music awards show," the surprise Master of Ceremonies was incorrectly identified. His name is Martin "Big Larry" Albritton.

In Friday's article "Oversight may complicate housing suit," Sharon Shumacher said only that she could not speculate on why Lieber's daughter did not receive a Housing policy change notice.

In Friday's article "Winning, fun top priorities for seniors," the SIUC softball team was mistakenly identified as a member of the Gateway Conference. SIUC is in the Missouri Valley Conference.

Kuwaiti students to honor Gulf War vets

By Lori D. Clark
DE Assistant Politics Editor

In appreciation and in remembrance of veterans who served the United States in the Gulf War, some SIUC Kuwaiti students say they will present a plaque to University veterans Monday.

Masoud Abdul, a first year doctoral student in journalism from Kuwait, said SIUC students from Kuwait will present the plaque in celebration of the fifth anniversary of the liberation of Kuwait. The plaque will be presented at 11 a.m. in the Woody Hall Veteran's Office.

"We are presenting the plaque in appreciation for the American support and liberation of Kuwait," Abdul said. "We want to show appreciation because without the U.S., Kuwait would not have been liberated from Iraqi occupation."

Joe Gallaher, president of the SIUC Veterans Club and senior in aviation management from Quincy, said the presentation is worthwhile because many people may have forgotten about Operation Desert Storm, which took place in the early 1990s.

"It's been a long time since anyone has thought about the Gulf War," Gallaher said.

The Persian Gulf War began when the United Nations demanded that Iraqi President Saddam Hussein withdraw his forces from Kuwait. When Hussein did not comply with a deadline to withdraw his forces, U.S. troops were sent into Iraq on Jan. 16, 1991. U.S. troops began withdrawing on March 7, 1991.

Dana Wells, vice president of the SIUC Veterans Club who served in the Gulf War, said it was difficult to believe the war ended only five years ago.

New American Indian RSO forms

By Lisa Pangburn
Daily Egyptian Reporter

A new group offered through the SIUC Registered Student Organizations Program is designed to give support to American Indian students, the president of the group says.

Iris Creasy, president of the American Indian Association, said a support system for Native American students is necessary at SIUC.

"Retention of Native Americans at SIUC is a real problem," she said. "All of the kids I have talked to have expressed feelings of alienation or frustration."

However, Creasy said she was very impressed with the process of becoming an RSO and how easy it was to be recognized as an association to help American Indian students.

Creasy said the group's first meeting Jan. 24 had a good turnout, with people of different cultural backgrounds in attendance.

"Our main purpose is the recruitment and retention of Native Americans on this campus, but we also want to promote the culture of the Native Americans, as well as the culture in the specific tribes," she said. "If we do that, we will be able to educate people."

Kelly Davidson, a member of the group and freshman in pre-medicine from Ramsey, said the group will be able to educate students about American Indians.

"This is a very positive organization that gives us the chance to bring awareness of Native Americans to the campus," she said.

Creasy said there are about 90 American Indians on campus, including faculty, students and staff.

"We would like to build that number," she said. "I would like to see us go to other universities to recruit Native Americans and give our students cultural enrichment."

Creasy said the group also would like to work on getting scholarship resources for American Indian students through federal sources.

"There really is a lot of money out there to go for the schooling of Native Americans, and if we could get it for our students, it would be all the better," she said.

Daily Egyptian brings home 15 state awards

DE staff honored in all aspects of daily production, winning most awards in state.

By Tammy Taylor
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The Daily Egyptian staff won 15 awards at the Illinois College Press Association's annual conference in Chicago Saturday, taking home more awards overall than any other Illinois college newspaper.

DE associate editor Dave Katzman won first place for headline writing, his second ICPA award, with a headline for a movie review of "Nine Months."

"It's nice to be recognized for a job that I do day in and day out," Katzman said. "Although the award I received has my name on it, it was the result of a group effort, like everything else done here."

Adam Meier also won first place in graphic illustration for his front page design of the October issue of Oasis, the DE magazine.

The cover pictured a person being gagged by the American flag for a story about freedom of speech on college campuses.

Coverage of President Bill Clinton's visit to SIUC last September won second place in the news story category. The main story was written by DE editor-in-chief Marc Chase with sidebars written by reporters Donita Polly, Cynthia Sheets, Julie Rendleman, Lori Clark, Signe Skinion, Carey Jane Atherton, Jim Lyon, Alan Schnepf, Dave Kazak and Jeremy Griggs.

"The collaboration for Clinton's visit showed a lot of energy and dedication on the part of the entire DE staff — not just those listed with the award," Chase, who has won a total of three ICPA awards, said.

Other second place awards went to Grant Deady, Sean Walker and David Vingren in sports news reporting for the article, "Carr chooses NBA over senior season"; Lynn Lee in Sports page design for the Dec. 9, 1994 issue; Mike DeSisti, Kim Raines and Lynn Lee in the photo essay category for a spread depicting basketball tournament fans; and Mike DeSisti in sports photo for a picture of a Marcus Timmons jump shot.

Jay Fares, Dustin Coleman, Adam Meier and Mark Christian also placed second in feature page design for Oasis; Marc Chase placed second in Editorial Writing for the editorial, "Search for law dean should be national"; and Kelly Mall placed second for a "Halloween

"It's nice to see that a smaller and less accredited university like SIUC can compete with bigger schools like University of Illinois and Northwestern in the field of journalism," DE Special Projects Editor Dustin Coleman said.

DE reporter Aaron Butler won third place in for his feature article, "Whistle Blower," a profile of Jack Tursman published in the October issue of Oasis.

"I was happy to find an interesting person to write about," Butler said. "He (Tursman) did all the work, and I got to write a good story about it."

Third place also was awarded to Rob Neff, Kellie Huttes and Sean Walker in the news story category for coverage of the February Garden Park Apartments fire, and to Heather Hendricks, former DE news editor, in front page design for three February issues of the DE last year.

Honorable Mentions were awarded to Aaron Butler in a critical review for the movie, "Strange Days," and Mike DeSisti for his Feature Photo titled "Stormy Weather."

Faculty managing editor Lloyd Goodman said the winning entries came from every aspect of the newspaper's production.

"There were more awards than in past years, and the whole realm of everything that is done here was covered," he said.

Don't let spring fever ruin your life

AS FEBRUARY COMES TO A CLOSE, THE DAYS in Southern Illinois start to get longer and usually begin to feel warmer.

After several months of being shut-in because of snow and cold weather, it's not uncommon for students to react to the pleasant ambiance by forgetting why they're really at SIUC.

To remind anyone already suffering from spring fever, we're at this University to get an education.

We urge students to keep this fact in mind as the temptation to put school responsibilities on the shelf grows.

We know dropping everything on a beautiful afternoon for an impromptu barbecue with beer, frisbee and dogs can produce a wonderful feeling of freedom and contentment.

When term paper deadlines and tests are just around the corner, these actions can also result in self-loathing and fear.

RÉGRET IS NOT AN UNCOMMON REACTION when someone realizes he or she may fail a class because of choosing to have fun when the time for goofing off simply wasn't there.

It's important to remember that your friend twisting your arm to run off to Giant City may only have 12 hours of 100-level general education classes and no job to worry about while your situation may be completely different.

Have fun and enjoy the outdoors in the nice weather. The natural beauty of the area is one of Southern Illinois' most outstanding qualities. To ignore it is to miss out on something great.

Just remember why you're really here and make sure you actually have time for goofing off before spending the day in the park.

SIUC Black History Month a success

IN ADDITION TO COLD WEATHER, THE END OF February also marks the close of Black History Month.

We believe those responsible for making the month a success at SIUC deserve some gratitude.

The lectures, concerts, forums and films put on by the Black Affairs Council and the Black History Month Committee made the event a reflection on black history that people associated with SIUC should be proud of having at their University.

A lecture given by the daughters of the Rev. Oliver Brown, who initiated the landmark Brown v. Board of Education suit, is a good example of the prominence of the people Black History Month organizers attracted to SIUC.

Besides speakers like the Brown daughters, Black History Month promoters brought lecturers with diverse views to the University, such as Boston University Professor Glenn Loury. His address, "Individualism Before Multiculturalism," may not have been in alignment with many people's opinions, but it presented a viewpoint that made people think and debate.

ACTIVATING PEOPLE'S MINDS IS ONE OF THE main purposes of Black History Month. Bringing speakers such as Loury to the University accomplished this.

SIUC also gained nationwide recognition during Black History Month with the national debut of "Mississippi America." The program was produced by SIUC radio-television professor Judith McCray. It was the first full-length documentary produced by an Illinois university that PBS saw fit for broadcast.

All of this and more led to an impressive and effective Black History Month at SIUC.

Good job.

Letters to the Editors

Ruling starts new era for Shawnee

I am responding to Dr. Ashby's letter in Wednesday's Daily Egyptian about the Shawnee National Forest ruling.

First of all, I become greatly concerned when anyone who has earned the right to call themselves a scientist uses biblical analogies while attempting to prove their point. In my opinion, this is bad science and bad religion.

I would think, Dr. Ashby, that you have noticed that the Shawnee is little more than a handful of green shadings that's been inundated with highways, cities and farms — it astorishes me that it's still considered a national forest. These environmental groups would probably like the Shawnee to at least look like a national forest before it's further fragmented.

Of course the forest plan was developed over years of open meetings and public input, but did you ever think this was the problem? It was developed in the past, just like DDT was, and the people in those times thought DDT was a good idea too. The few concerned environmentalists from that era had no political power and their voices had no volume. Like them or not, they're being heard now and they will not be ignored.

Also, the fact that you have a greater knowledge of forest ecology than most people does not your opinion more significant than any other on this issue. The biomes of the world had an "ecology" a long time before man stopped flaking flint for a living and decided to give it a name. Some of us would like to be able to visit places where man has left ecology to work its magic undisturbed. Personally, I would rather see the Shawnee burn to the ground than see fields of stumps leftover from the production of palates and oak com-mode seats.

To me, J. Phil Gilbert's robe is of the most elegant variety and he is a federal judge that simply saw there was a legal problem with the U.S. Forest Service's management of the Shawnee. This ruling is fair and legal. I commend the members of R.A.C.E. and the Sierra Club for their efforts. I suggest that you start getting used to legal decisions like this or try to find people who share your opinion and form your own professional organization.

Ensor's article good material for stories

A few of my friends keep saying I'm obsessed with Andrew Ensor. It seems he's always turning up in one of my stories or plays. Or I'm always talking about Andrew's latest adventure. So I decided to stop talking about him and I haven't said his name all year. Now these same friends come up to me to point out what Andy's done next.

Every time Andrew shows up, I find myself chuckling. Why? When you open up a Daily Egyptian and see that smug, politician-esque mugshot you almost have to expect a long-winded half-page worth of words that only make sense to him. For example, his "Perspective" in Tuesday's DE.

Let's talk about this article, Andy. You are making no sense at all. You start your paragraphs out with half-of-a-point and I expect elaboration. Instead, you seem to break off on other tangents like you're writing them down, patting yourself on the back and saying, "oh yeah, that's good Andy — that'll show them." Throughout the WHOLE article you're jumping around from topic to topic without elaborating. It's kind of like a Tarantino movie but you lack the finesse, wit and class.

I think you should apologize for your lack of better writing skills. But when you do it, submit it to the DE so we can see your improvements. And so I'll have more material for my novel because it's so hard to get in your head.

You make a good senator, Andy. You blame everyone other than yourself, you're contradicting and you make absolutely no sense. Quit school and go to Washington. Try running for president, surely you can get more than 48 votes this time.

Servers deserve credit — not criticism

I was just finishing up my lunch time with a reading of the Daily Egyptian, somewhat of a daily ritual, when I perused the editorial page. What I found there bothered me. Again, we find someone taking exception to a story and belittling the subject matter.

I really feel that anyone who serves their country, state, county, city, Girl Scouts, Boy Scouts, Rotary, Kiwanis, school or church deserves our credit, not our wrath. The particular time frame that these individuals served was not under their control. They have, however, still served. Let's give them credit. Let's accentuate the positive.

Letters for which verification of authorship cannot be made will not be published.

Purest flat-tax proposal go too far, but right direction

The Washington Post

The part of the flat tax that has the most to recommend it is also the part that is generating the fiercest opposition. Though not all flat-tax proposals are the same, the purest would eliminate the mortgage interest deduction. That goes too far, but it's the right direction. The deduction in its present form is bad tax policy that at the very least should be cut back. But, of course, the provision is valued by homeowners and stoutly defended by the housing and lending industries.

Industry groups went so far as to buy ads in advance of the Iowa caucuses and New Hampshire primary, warning that the flat tax as advocated by Republican presidential hopeful Steve Forbes posed a threat to the deduction. The groups were warned in turn by such flat-taxers as House Majority Leader Richard Armey to cut it out or risk loss of support in Congress. Our own sense is that the flat tax is an improbable idea. You can't do the several contradictory things the advocates want without sharply increasing either the taxes of the middle class or the budget deficit. But what an irony, if the tax were to end up being killed not because of its defects but because of one of its virtues.

The flat-taxers begin by saying that no income below a certain threshold should be taxed at all. That protects lower-income people.

... What an irony if the tax were to end up being killed not because of its defects but because of one of its virtues.

They then say that all or most or much other income should be taxed at the same flat rate. That would mainly benefit upper-income people, who are now taxed at graduated rates. The flat-taxers defend the step on grounds that these are the people who do most of the saving and investing in the society. Cut their tax, and you will stimulate investment and economic growth; that's the theory. Some flat-taxers — Mr. Forbes, for example — would go even further and exempt investment income from tax entirely.

But if lower-income people pay nothing, and upper-income people pay less, where do you get the money to run the government? The math gets all the tighter when you come to the mortgage interest deduction. In its present form, it is a regressive provision. The higher your income and tax bracket and the larger your house and mortgage, the greater your tax break. Nearly half the benefit from the deduction goes to the top five percent of all taxpayers, and two-thirds to the upper 10 percent, even as Congress for lack of funds is sharply cutting the subsidized housing programs for the poor.

The purest flat-taxers would abolish the mortgage interest deduction along with most others in order to keep the tax simple and because they need the revenue to keep the flat rate relatively low. But the possible loss of the interest deduction only compounds the political problems the proposal faces. Our view is that they ought to put a much tighter cap than now on the deduction and perhaps restructure it. You could do that in such a way as still to support homeownership and without undercutting the value of most people's homes. The budget deficit would be lower and the tax code fairer.

But the flat tax is the wrong way to go about it. Its supporters say the flat tax will pay for itself — that the lower rates at the top will generate enough additional economic growth that no one will have to pay more and the deficit won't increase either. It's a siren song that you've heard before; the main effect, unfortunately, would be to weaken the national government and add to the debt.

until 1997, and if passed, would serve RSOs.

"Basically, the student fee increase is $2.25 (per student) over two years," Bottom said. "It would equal $1.25 in fall 1997 and $1 in fall 1998. The reason the Finance Committee is proposing this is to increase USG revenue to support the RSOs."

RSOs are campus groups that offer extra-curricular activities and special interest forums.

Currently, each student is paying $18.75 a year for student activity fees. Bottom said with this resolution, by fall 1998, students would pay $21 in activity fees.

"Really, we're doing this increase so we can keep up with the rate of inflation," Bottom said. "We're also doing this in small increments, so in two years there won't be as big an impact on the students at one time."

David Vingren, Finance Committee member and Thompson Point senator, said the rate of inflation keeps increasing, but student activity fees for USG have been the same for a few years.

"The last increase in student activity fees was in 1993," Vingren said. "That was a long time ago. Basically, this is to keep us up with inflation."

Bottom said if the fee increase is passed, it would help RSOs that claim they need more money.

"There have been a number of new RSOs over the past few years," Bottom said. "There have been 15 or 20 in just the last year. With this increase, there will be more money for them because they come to us asking for $1,000 or so, and they're only given $500 or $600 — or 10 to 20 percent of what they needed."

Bottom said if the increase is passed Wednesday, it will go to GPSC and the SIU Board of Trustees for a vote before the end of the semester.

GPSC President Bill Karrow said he does not see a need for a student activity fee increase.

"I don't think there is a need to raise student fees by this much ($2.25)," Karrow said. "I'm hopeful GPSC will not pass such a resolution."

Karrow said such an increase needs to be understood by everyone before it is passed.

"I think it's important for students to realize that we (GPSC) are students," Karrow said. "When we complain about increasing fees, we have to be careful because we're the ones voting on these increases."

USG President Kim Clemens said she supports the Finance Committee's decision on the matter.

"Whatever the Finance Committee thinks is needed is fine," Clemens said. "The cost of inflation keeps increasing, and we're not able to keep up with it. The Finance Committee has worked hard on this, but they will still have to sell it to the senate."

The USG meeting is scheduled for 7 p.m. Wednesday in the Student Center Ballroom B.

Forbes wins in Delaware, beats Dole by 4 percent

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON—Publishing magnate Steve Forbes won tiny Delaware's Republican presidential primary Saturday, tightening the squeeze on the beleaguered candidacy of Bob Dole, who finished second.

Complete returns showed Forbes with 33 percent of the vote while Dole, who just Tuesday lost the New Hampshire primary to Patrick J. Buchanan, trailed with 27 percent. He was followed by Buchanan with 19 percent and Lamar Alexander with 13 percent.

Forbes clearly benefited from being the only major candidate among those still running to personally campaign in Delaware. The other candidates stayed away in deference to New Hampshire GOP leaders, who vigorously objected that the Delaware primary was less than a week after the Granite State's first-in-the-nation contest.

But for both Forbes and those who ignored it, the Delaware vote should help shape the rest of the Republican campaign.

Forbes' victory in the winner-take-all contest not only gave him all 12 of Delaware's convention delegates, it provided a much-needed psychological boost to his self-financed candidacy. Forbes had thrust himself into prominence with a massive ad campaign promoting his flat tax proposal and attacking his rivals, only to stall during the past month amid charges that his negative tactics had poisoned the campaign environment.

"You can't tell by looking at them that they have gone through such a traumatic experience," Prinz said.

Between July 1994 and June 1995, 217 women came to the Women's Center to say they had been sexually assaulted, Kramer said. She said approximately 25 percent of the women who received counseling were college students from SIUC and John A. Logan College.

"In 1983, SIU was in a second-year tie for the most reported rapes at a university," SIU Police Sgt. Nelson Ferry said. "Those numbers have decreased through education, increased student patrols, increased lighting and an increase in the number of crime-prevention officers."

Ferry said although many students sought counseling at the Women's Center, only three women reported sexual assaults to the SIU Police in 1995. Two sexual assaults have been reported since January.

"Only one in 10 sexual assaults are reported to police," Ferry said. "Women often don't report a rape because they are afraid to be victimized further. But our officers go through training to learn how to handle sexual assault cases."

"We don't make a woman prosecute her attacker. We let the victim make decisions, such as whether or not to gather samples at the hospital. We help the woman regain a sense of control by making these decisions."

Ferry said that while officers do not pressure women to file a report, it is important for victims to come forward so police can apprehend the perpetrator and keep someone else from becoming a victim.

Police statistics show that one perpetrator will rape 25 times before being caught by police, Kramer said. She said it is usually impossible to tell if someone is a rapist.

"People tend to think of a rapist as a stranger in the night," she said. "But 75 percent of sexual assaults are committed by a friend or acquaintance."

While there is no exact profile a rapist fits, Prinz said there are some warning signs women should look for in strangers and acquaintances.

"It's important to look at how the man treats other women," Prinz said. "Rape is about power and control. Rapists see women as objects, not as equals. Rapists have complete disrespect for women and are often jealousy freaks."

Rapists often try to get their victims drunk, and alcohol is a major factor in 80 percent of rapes, Ferry said.

"Be wary of anyone who pressures you to drink," he said. "They may have ulterior motives."

While an attack cannot always be prevented, Ferry said it is important to prepare for a sexual assault.

"Always be alert and aware of your surroundings," he said. "Trust your instincts. If you feel threatened, you probably are. Be assertive. Look people in the eye and don't be afraid to challenge them."

"Because 90 percent of sexual assaults are planned, it's important to change that plan. When you challenge them, it changes their plan. If you think someone is following you, you can turn around and holler at them to surprise them."

Bizarre behavior can frighten an attacker away, Ferry said.

"I know of a case where a woman got down on all fours and started barking and eating grass," he said. "Knowledge of self-defense can also prevent a rape. Practice defense techniques on a boyfriend. Find out what it feels like to be restrained, and plan ways of getting away."

Kramer said assaults cannot always be prevented, no matter how much preparation is made.

"Fight and flee if you can," she said. "But don't try to beat them up and be Supergirl."

"But if you survived the assault, you did the right thing. We encourage sexual assault survivors to come in and talk to us. We don't judge them or make them file a police report. We are just here to help."

Self-defense classes are taught at the SIUC Student Recreation Center, and the Carbondale Police Department offers a women's safety program.

The Women's Center offers free and confidential services. The 24-hour hotline is 1-800-334-2094.

Feds disarm Buchanan supporter

Man carrying concealed weapon turns gun over to Secret Service

Washington Post

WASHINGTON—Secret Service agents, in their first day on the job with Republican presidential candidate Patrick J. Buchanan, disarmed a gun-toting supporter waiting for him at Mount Rushmore National Memorial in South Dakota last Wednesday.

Interior Department and Treasury officials identified the supporter as Art Oakes, a South Dakota rancher who recently became western South Dakota coordinator for the Buchanan campaign and who introduced Buchanan at the rally when he finally arrived more than two hours late. According to the Rapid City Journal, Oakes had been a Phil Gramm supporter until the Texas senator dropped out of the race for the GOP nomination.

Mount Rushmore Superintendent Dan Wenk would not confirm that the gun-toter was Oakes but said that "as a part of normal security, they (Secret Service agents) discovered he had a sidearm. It was a concealed, loaded weapon. He surrendered it to them." Wenk said the weapon was returned to the owner, unloaded, after the rally was over.

Two sources said they understood Oakes said something about fears that Buchanan might be assassinated or that he mentioned the KGB or both, but Wenk said he had "no knowledge of that." Oakes declined to say whether it was he who had the weapon or why.

"I will have no comment on that," he said Saturday when contacted by phone. "I will not be part of the lynch mentality that is out to get Pat Buchanan."

A Treasury source said Oakes had a South Dakota permit for the gun and "was forthcoming and cooperative with Secret Service agents." The source said agents are entitled under federal law to make any area they are securing "a gun-free area." Federal regulations also prohibit carrying concealed weapons in national parks. Wenk said.

Oakes recently won prominence as the man who paid the light bill to keep the faces on Mount Rushmore illuminated at night. It costs about $20 a night. Oakes contributed almost $300 after the federal shutdown started in late December and news stories led to additional contributions. He said he did not want one of the nation's premier monuments "taken hostage by the government shutdown."

Wenk said the contributions totaled about $2,000 and are still being used to keep the floodlights shining.

flies," Wells, a sophomore in speech communications from Hillsboro, said. "I'm glad they really appreciated it. I think we did a good thing by being there."

Gallagher said he thought that veterans will appreciate recognition for their service in the Gulf War.

"Most of them think it's pretty cool because it's something different," Gallagher said.

Abdul said along with the plaque presentation, the Kuwaiti students will also give books about Kuwait to Morris Library in appreciation of all Americans, whether they served in Desert Storm or not.

Brown

"When my father stepped off the witness stand, I wonder if he knew he did the whole world a favor," Thompson said.

Henderson said she and her sister began publicly speaking about the event so people could learn every detail behind the landmark case and how the case has played a continuous part in history. She said the only way to learn the truth about history is to talk to the people involved.

"As far as I'm concerned, history books should be empty because they do not tell everything that is going on," she said.

"My father did not just wake up one morning and decide to challenge the world. He was part of a movement that was coming for a long time."

Henderson said the case was the basis for all other civil rights movements, but it was not the first black power movement.

"If you knew your history, you would know the first black movement was in the 1850s with the Fugitive Law Act," she said. "The movement was on its way, but

Brown created a place for referral."

Henderson said the case had a profound influence on the application of the 14th Amendment.

"The 13th Amendment made it illegal to enslave people, but the 14th Amendment extended citizenship," she said. "It grants all of us equal protection under the law, and it was not applied until Brown v. Board."

Thompson said that even though the Supreme Court made the correct decision, the ruling has not been completely fulfilled. She said segregation problems still lie in urban housing areas. She said because inner-city schools are in low-income communities they receive less financial support, resulting in weaker facilities and out dated supplies.

"Nine out of 10 children in urban schools are minorities," she said. "We have to be concerned with the quality of these schools and their educators. We need to put children first."

Denise White, a sophomore in elementary education from Dolton, said the presentation made her feel slightly uneducated.

"These women spoke so elegantly," she said. "They made me realize that I've been very complacent about history. I understand that I need to learn my history so I can apply it to my future."

Michael Robbins, a junior in business administration from Springfield, said the speech was one of the best events he has attended since Black History Month began.

"These women represented the history of America and the history of my past as a black person," he said. "That's the whole purpose of this month."

Davidson said the group is very helpful to her in a lot of different ways.

"The people in this organization are very helpful with everything," she said. "They are helpful when it comes to things like homework or classes, all the way to things like scholarship information."

The group also is planning on selling beadwork for fund raising, Creasy said.

"I would like to see our group learn the work that Native Americans did," she said. "It will not only give a chance for education, but we will be able to raise funds to attend other things that will further education."

The group will work to raise funds to attend a pow-wow at Aurora University in May, Creasy said.

She said the pow-wow will include different tribal dances, displays of beadwork and information on different American Indian tribes.

SHIRLEY GIOIA — The Daily Egyptian

Alan Jackson performs Saturday night at the SIU Arena. He sang his hit song, "Chattahoochee", to the pleasure of the crowd. Jackson played an hour-long set. He was the winner of the 1995 TNN "Country Music Album of the Year."

Jackson plays Arena

Country singer gives lethargic performance

By Erik Bush
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Excitement was the missing factor on Saturday as a concert featuring some of country's most popular talents visited the SIUC Arena.

Alan Jackson, Wade Hayes and Emilio two-stepped their way into Carbondale, missing a beat and tripping on their boots the entire way. Jackson, the 1995 TNN "Country Music Album of the Year" winner brought a few bright spots to an otherwise lackluster show.

The highlight of the evening surfaced as a blue-jeaned, denim-clad Jackson took the stage in an explosion of video and flash. Using his hit song "Chattahoochee" and a wall of video images cycling from a water-skiing Jackson to the Arena crowd as his background, Jackson was finally able to bring an otherwise dull crowd momentarily to its feet.

Looking as if he were either a little road-worn or bored himself, Jackson waded through the opening numbers, relying heavily on the videos to keep the crowd distracted from his tired playing. He settled in halfway through his hour-long set, giving the crowd a taste for what it had been missing with an entertaining unplugged bluegrass number, highlighting both the band's talent and his own singing.

By sprinkling a dash of unreleased material here and popular favorites there, Jackson provided meager spice to an otherwise bland evening.

After the first of two lengthy intermissions, Wade Hayes took the stage and continued in the lackadaisical manner the evening's performers seemed to be stuck in.

As the evening wore on, the crowd and the performers both appeared uninspired as they struggled to get their collective engines going.

More often than not, instrumental solos are guaranteed to generate a little pep to even the most sedate crowds. Unfortunately, Hayes failed to let his band have some of the spotlight, focusing instead on his singing for the entire set.

After introducing a new song, "It's Over My Head and I'm Six Feet Tall," it became obvious that the repetitive nature of Hayes' music would prevail as it was difficult to distinguish fresh, new material from stale performing.

Setting a tone for the show with his special mutation of country music, tejano singer Emilio struggled to excite a concert crowd already struggling to get excited. His covers of Van Morrison's "Have I Told You Lately" and the Eagles' "Hotel California" did little to save a set that had difficulty generating a big concert feel.

SHIRLEY GIOIA — The Daily Egyptian

Emilio performs a Tex-Mex number Saturday evening.

Dancing his way through the eight-song set, Emilio's Spanish rendition of the hit "Life is Good" was a high he unfortunately left unchallenged.

While Emilio's vocals were strong and emotional, the group as a whole lacked the certain energy that opening bands need to set the tone for an evening of fun and music.

Due to the sometimes bored, bland performances from its stars, the show ultimately fell short in fulfilling its potential.

A show with this much promise should be able to provide more than a few memorable songs from three obviously talented artists.

NAACP announces networks nominated for Image Awards

The Washington Post

Fox Broadcasting and NBC dominated the television nominations for the 27th annual NAACP Image Awards announced in Los Angeles last week.

TV programs and performers from Fox, with 12 nominations overall, and NBC, with 10, far outstripped the competition.

CBS had five, ABC, WB and the syndicated show "Star Trek: Deep Space Nine" all one.

Fox's "Living Single," for instance, received four nominations in the lead actress, sitcom, category-Erika Alexander, Kim Coles, Kim Fields Freeman and Queen Latifah.

Tisha Campbell of "Martin" got the fifth nomination.

Best drama series nominees were NBC's "ER" and "Homicide: Life on the Street"; CBS's "Chicago Hope" and

"Under One Roof"; and Fox's "New York Undercover."

Comedy series: NBC's "In the House" and "Fresh Prince of Bel-Air";

Fox's "Living Single" and "Martin"; and WB's "Sister, Sister."

The awards, which were not held last year while the NAACP sorted out its leadership problems, will be taped on April 6 in Pasadena for airing later that month on Fox, at a date still to be determined.

Which reminds us that the WB Network has given "Sister, Sister" a two-year, 44-episode pickup.

The series leads off WB's Wednesday lineup and is repeated on Sunday.

WB also has reported a pickup for next season on the new Aaron Spelling prime-time soap, "Savannah," and the animated series "Pinky & the Brain."

NBC veep considers move

ABC may offer her more power as division head

The Washington Post

Sources at NBC are now saying it's virtually certain that Jamie McDermott, senior vice president, prime-time programs, is headed for ABC Entertainment, where she will probably be named president of the division.

Officially, she's been granted a four-month leave of absence from NBC, after which the network said in a statement last week, "she will either return to NBC or pursue other opportunities."

The leave was seen as a last-ditch effort by NBC to maybe hang onto her, while still guaranteeing she won't join ABC in time to reveal NBC's programming plans for next fall.

The same statement quotes McDermott as saying, "I've come to the point in my career where I want to think about my plans for the future."

McDermott, 31, the daughter of TV producer Jay Tarses ("The Days and Nights of Molly Dodd"), is credited with helping develop some of the No. 1 network's current hits, including "Friends," which anchors the dynamite Thursday night lineup. Her contract runs through May 1997.

She reportedly has left on a three-week European vacation.

If she were named to the top job at ABC Entertainment, she'd be the first woman to head a network entertainment division and would become the youngest current division president.

Taking it on the chin in all this speculation has been current ABC Entertainment president Ted Harbert.

He didn't get a lot of encouragement last Thursday when ABC president Bob Iger, whom Harbert replaced in the programming job, admitted during the Federal Communications Bar Association lunch in Washington, in a Q&A following a speech, that "prime time could use some improvement."

He also told a questioner that "it is not our intention to fire Ted Harbert. He will have a job in the company. It is not clear that Jamie McDermott is the direction we are headed."

Defector killed after return

Iraq's chief of secret weapons gunned down by family

The Washington Post

AMMAN, Jordan—Seven months ago, Hussein Kamel Hassan Majid, a brutal lieutenant of Saddam Hussein and the chief of Iraq's secret weapons program, was a potential superstar among international defectors. Friday, in one of the Middle East's remarkable twists of fortune, he was gunned down days after returning to Baghdad, by assailants Iraq described as angry relatives.

Hussein Kamel fled the Iraq of Saddam, his father-in-law, in August with his brother, Saddam Kamel Hassan Majid, and their wives, both daughters of the Iraqi president. Their exit was regarded as a sure sign of rot in Baghdad. American intelligence agents rushed to harvest secrets he brought. Presenting himself as savior of his nation, Hussein Kamel called for Iraqis to revolt.

Three days ago, he re-defected and returned home embittered. His Jordanian hosts had shunned him. The Americans, finding his information unremarkable, dropped him. Iraqi exiles rejected him as a Saddam clone—just as cruel and untrustworthy—and refused to follow his lead.

Hussein Kamel should have known the risk he was taking. Before his defection, he himself was regarded as one of Saddam's cruelest enforcers, overseeing the bloody repression of government opponents.

Iraq said that Saddam had pardoned the returning defectors. But late Friday evening, the Iraqi Interior Ministry announced that Hussein Kamel and his brother and fellow defector were killed by relatives who attacked the family home in Baghdad. Hussein Kamel's father and another brother were also killed, along with two of the attackers, the ministry said.

The report was broadcast just hours after the government news agency issued an ominous announcement: Saddam's daughters had both divorced the "failed traitors." The Iraqi Embassy in Amman confirmed both accounts.

Hussein Kamel's adventure is an abject tale of how things can go wrong for a defector who is neither valuable enough nor virtuous enough for his new friends to even lead on with promises. Best known for cruelly squashing a Shiite Muslim revolt in southern Iraq, Hussein Kamel was regarded as too onerous a killer to consider salvaging. "Hussein Kamel was always just another killer in a designer suit," a Western diplomat who followed his case said coldly.

Jordanian and U.S. officials say Hussein Kamel was not as useful a defector as they had hoped. He produced only limited information on Iraq's secret program to build nuclear, chemical and biological weapons or its clandestine foreign network to procure materials for them, officials from both countries said.

"He was supposed to be a source of intelligence, but he contributed remarkably little," said Anthony H. Cordesman, a specialist in Iraqi military affairs at the Center for Strategic and International Studies in Washington.

FBI unravels spy mystery

Charges of espionage brought against former intelligence analyst for leaking to KGB.

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—The FBI unraveled a major Cold War spy mystery Friday when it arrested a former Army intelligence analyst on charges of committing espionage for Moscow while serving as a communications clerk at the National Security Agency in the mid-1960s and early 1970s.

Robert Stephan Lipka, 50, was taken into custody in Millersville, Pa., without incident by more than a dozen FBI agents who surrounded his home. According to federal officials, Lipka is believed to have passed secrets of "highest priority" to the KGB, causing extensive damage to U.S. intelligence-gathering efforts.

Existence of a former KGB agent with the NSA long has been suspected and was even described in a 1994 book by a former KGB officer, Oleg D. Kalugin. But Lipka did not become a prime suspect until 1993, when the FBI found what court papers filed Friday described as a "cooperating witness." In interviews officials identified that witness as Lipka's ex-wife.

According to a tale first told to the FBI by the witness, and allegedly confirmed by Lipka in meetings with an FBI agent who posed as a KGB officer, Lipka supplied the KGB with a steady stream of classified reports from the central communications room at NSA where he worked from 1964 to 1967.

Lipka's assignment was "to remove classified NSA national defense documents from teleprinters and distribute them to appropriate departments" inside the agency. An FBI affidavit filed in federal court states Lipka, an accomplished chess player, communicated with the KGB using the codename "Rook."

Two cops fired for Washington party incident

Newsday

NEW YORK—Police Commissioner William Bratton has closed the book on the New York Police Department's Washington, D.C., bacchanal last year by firing two cops and calling the incident "overblown."

The two — Wayne Hagmaier and James Morrow, who gained fame when he was identified as the "naked man" who slid down a beer-soaked hotel bannister — were dismissed late Thursday.

They are the only cops to have been dismissed in the incident, which involved drunken behavior in a number of Washington hotels by hundreds of cops from all over the country who attended an annual Law Enforcement Officers Memorial Day from May 13-15.

The two were charged with "misconduct" and "inappropriate behavior."

Women's track runs way to second place

By Jared Driskill
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The 1996 Missouri Valley Conference track and field pre-Championship poll for the SIUC women's team did not come true over the weekend at the University of Northern Iowa.

The SIUC women's team finished a rung above their pre-Championship pick, as they took second place, while the men slid into sixth.

On the women's side, the continued efforts of the Salukis brought them success, but not first place. Despite valiant performances by seniors Katrina Daniels, Joy Williamson, and Stephanie Smith, the score of 108 points was not enough to pull them past Illinois State, who won the women's competition with a total of 131 points.

SIUC gathered 108 points and Southwest Missouri State caught third place with 81 points.

Indiana State, Northern Iowa, Drake, Wichita State, and Tulsa rounded out the competition at the MVC Championships in Cedar Falls, Iowa.

The women's team was led by the talent of several seniors.

Katrina Daniels set a MVC record and a personal record in the 400-meter dash with a time of 55.91.

Senior Joy Williamson leaped to second place in the long jump with a distance of 19-01 1/2, and the triple jump, with a stretch of 39-10, while senior high jumper Stephanie Smith, took first place with a jump of 5-08 1/2.

Women's assistant track and field coach, Tina Debro said Daniels' record in the 400-meter dash was a shock to Daniels.

"I think she wants to believe it (the record), but it's hard to believe," she said.

Sophomore Amy Stearns provisionally qualified for the NCAA Championships by tossing the 20-pound weight throw a distance of 50-06 3/4 and junior hurdler Donna Wechet, won the 55-meter high hurdles with a time of 8.14.

Debro said finishing second in the MVC Championships was a pleasant result of the meet.

"I think both coach DeNoon and myself thought that we did really well," Debro said. "We were excited about getting second and we had a feeling Illinois State was going to win the meet."

UNI reigned as champion once again in the men's competition, as they tallied 131 points. ISU rolled into second place scoring 88 points. Indiana State and Wichita State both followed suit, capturing third with 73 points each.

On the men's side, 7-1 3/4 may not have been his best performance of the year, but it was enough to land senior high jumper Cameron Wright first place in the event.

Other key performances for the Salukis were turned in by fellow senior Jerome Kiaku, who leaped 50-1 3/4 in the triple jump to finish second. Junior Stelios Marmaros placed third in the 3000-meter run with a time of 8:31.35, while the freshmen duo of Jeremy Parks and Andrew Fooks took fourth and fifth places respectively.

Men's track and field coach, Bill Cornell said his team just did not have a good meet and that they will have to concentrate on the outdoor season now.

"I'm obviously disappointed," Cornell said. "You always hope for more, and especially don't like being out of the upper bracket, but we finished sixth before and then bounced back the next year."

"We've got to get it together, regroup, and shoot for a good outdoor season," Cornell said.

the Salukis' inside game.

While penetrating ISU's defense, McClendon contributed as well adding a quiet 14 points of her own.

Scott said it is extremely important to know that the team can win without having to rely on its outside game all of the time.

"I think it's crucial for us to know that we can win without Kasia (McClendon) scoring 20 and without Nikki (Gilmore) scoring 20," Scott said.

"Kasia played a beautiful game for us tonight, not because she scored 14 points for us, but because she ran the offense and got the ball inside.

"She did everything we asked her to do."

With the Missouri Valley Conference tournament fast approaching, Scott said it is paramount the team performs as well as it did against Indiana State in order to continue to win.

Scott said when the team plays a well-balanced game, as it did against the Sycamores, the Salukis are a team to be reckoned with.

"When we're on and playing defensively with the intensity that we can play it, and we're out rebounding and being smart with the basketball on offense, I think we're tough to beat," she said.

"That doesn't mean we have to shoot 55 percent or 58 percent, we just have to be smart with the ball and take good shots."

The Salukis return to Carbondale to host its last two regular-season games against Wichita State Thursday and reigning conference champion Southwest Missouri State (14-1) Saturday.

Scott said she is looking forward to the remainder of the season and hosting both Wichita State and SMSU.

"We are excited about having the opportunity to play Wichita and Southwest," she said.

"It's unfortunate that it might not be as important a game next Saturday against Southwest as we had wished, but anytime you play Southwest and Wichita State it's an important game.

"If we can finish 17-9 after the regular season with the start that we had, I think it's a great tribute to these young ladies and what they have accomplished."

SIUC's victory pushes its overall record to 15-9, and 13-3 in the Missouri Valley Conference standings.

University.

"The training that goes into playing in the Missouri Valley Conference makes the athletes a lot more refined and we have a stronger support system," she said.

She said it is a benefit that the team has access to personal strength coach, Doug Salmon.

"Doug takes into consideration all the muscles we use on the court and he helps us develop the muscles to make us a more powerful player," McNeil said.

"At Western we trained on our own without proper lifting instructions."

McNeil said she still has some areas to improve in from her performance in the fall.

"I want to become more aggressive in my strategic playing and have a large arsenal of shot selections," she said.

She said she hopes to see everyone raise their game to another level and raise the winning percentage for all shots.

"It's up to everyone to pump themselves up as well as others but, tennis is more of an individual game," she said. "If you're not prepared mentally it doesn't matter if someone talks to you until they are blue in the face."

minutes of the game.

SIUC coach Rich Herrin said the Salukis' defense, along with Evansville's phenomenal shooting performance, dashed all hopes of a victory in the second half.

"You can tell we didn't guard anybody," Herrin said.

"We got by with it in the first half a little bit because we had some offense to cover up for it. They only missed five shots in the first half and when a team shoots the ball as good as they shot the basketball, your defense wasn't out there doing the job.

"Anytime that you don't guard anybody, you don't have much effort."

Edging close to a school record, the Aces ended the evening shooting 72 percent from the field.

The last time the Salukis were handed such a lopsided loss was against Duke University in the opening round of the 1992-93 NCAA tournament, where the Blue Devils handed the Salukis a 35 point loss at Rosemont Horizon.

Led by freshman guard Marcus Wilson, Evansville's patience paid off from all over the court — inside and out.

Wilson took advantage of SIUC's lackadaisical defense, scoring 19

"We were very content to let them take the shot and run their pattern. They gave us a good kicking."

'Big Three' look to make a little Magic

Newsday

Anyone like Magic tricks? The Big Three NBA cardmakers do. They're tripping over each other to be the first to pull a 1996 Earvin Johnson card out of the proverbial hat.

"Upper Deck Series II Basketball is the first trading-card set to bring Magic Johnson back in the spotlight," Upper Deck's president, Brian Burr, announced Feb. 12.

A week later, SkyBox decided to use the new math to squeeze a Magic card, No. 301, into its 300-card set. And Topps announced that a foil Johnson card, No. 361, would be inserted in every 16 packs of Stadium Club Series II.

Upper Deck's card is due out the first week of March; the target date for SkyBox Series II is March 6. Stadium Club hits the shelves March 11, followed by Topps Series II, also featuring Johnson, in April.

Magic's Rookies was one of the most successful chase-card programs over three seasons and SkyBox also honored him with More Magic, a three-card insert set, when he made his ill-fated comeback.

points on the night.

"We were very content to let them take the shot and run their pattern," Herrin said.

"They gave us a good kicking." Not one to make excuses, Herrin said the fact that SIUC cannot make the MVC tournament played a role in Saturday's game.

"I guess this is what it's about when you don't have much to play for," Herrin said.

"That's not an excuse, but none of our young men have been in this position before."

SIUC will play its last regular-season game against Bradley tonight at SIU Arena.

Bradley is currently in first place in the Valley.

Tip-off is scheduled for 7:05 p.m.

PAIN KILLER.

For fast relief from the nagging ache of taxes, we recommend TIAA-CREF SRAs. SRAs are tax-deferred annuities designed to help build additional assets—money that can help make the difference between living and living well after your working years are over.

Contributions to your SRAs are deducted from your salary on a pretax basis. That lowers your current taxable income, so you start saving on federal and, in most cases, state and local income taxes right away. What's more, any earnings on your SRAs are also tax-deferred until you receive them as income. That can make a big difference in how painful your tax bill is every year.

As the nation's largest retirement system, based on assets under management, we offer a wide range of allocation choices — from the TIAA Traditional Annuity, which guarantees principal and interest (backed by the company's claims-paying ability), to TIAA-CREF's diversified variable annuity accounts. And our expenses are very low,* which means more of your money goes toward improving your future financial health.

To find out more, call 1-800-842-2888. We'll send you a complete SRA information kit, plus a free slide calculator that shows you how much SRAs can lower your taxes. Call today—it couldn't hurt.

Saluki Basketball

Women rebound way to 77-60 win

46-31 edge on boards helps SIUC to victory

By Michael DeFord
DE Assistant Sports Editor

Perhaps a bit upset over last week's loss in Normal, the SIUC women's basketball team took its frustrations out on the Sycamores of Indiana State University Saturday.

Rebounding from its loss to Illinois State University Thursday, SIUC rolled over the Sycamores in easy fashion 77-60 Saturday in Terre Haute, Ind.

Unlike Thursday's loss to the Redbirds, where the Salukis shot a dismal 31 percent from the field, SIUC shot a positive 49 percent in Saturday's game against the Sycamores.

SIUC coach Cindy Scott said her main concern prior to heading into Terre Haute was how well her team would respond following Thursday night's loss.

"I was very concerned how we would respond emotionally coming into this game," Scott said. "I think our kids showed that they are going to fight as hard as they can throughout the end of this season and try to get done what we want to get done."

Paced by sophomore forward Theia Hudson, the Salukis responded well on both ends of the court, finishing with four players in double figures and beating ISU on the boards 46-31.

Hudson led all Salukis with 16 points and 12 boards on the afternoon.

Up by only two at the break, the Salukis reestablished its offensive attack in the second half by outscoring the Sycamores 38-22 behind an 18-5 scoring run.

Surprisingly, it wasn't SIUC's familiar attack from the perimeter which dismantled the Sycamores, but a well balanced inside attack by Hudson and fellow forwards Heather Slater and Christel Jefferson, who each added 15 points.

Saluki guards Nikki Gilmore and Kasia McClendon, who normally lead SIUC in scoring, took on the role of penetrating the Sycamores' defense, which served to uplift

Aces deal Dawgs unlucky 13, cruise to 95-64 rout

A first half of good fortune quickly turned into a second half tragedy for the SIUC men's basketball team Saturday night.

Paced by a 77 percent shooting performance from the field in the first half, the University of Evansville (8-9) dealt the Salukis its 13th Missouri Valley Conference loss of the season in a 95-64 rout at Roberts Stadium.

Heading for a Missouri Valley Conference tournament berth, the Aces improved to 7-9 in league action, while SIUC falls to 4-13 on the season.

SIUC and Evansville see-sawed back and forth in the first half of action as both teams demonstrated offensive patience. Saluki guard Troy Hudson led SIUC in scoring with 10 points in the first half — all from in front of the three-point arc.

With six Salukis on the scoreboard, SIUC seemed content with a rare, but positive 50 percent first half shooting and trailed by only eight at the break, 44-36.

However, all hopes of overcoming the meager eight point advantage quickly diminished when SIUC's defense waned and its offense sputtered at the start of the second half.

The only bright spot for the Salukis was Troy Hudson's 18 points.

Evansville's offensive attack was unstoppable as it put six players in double figures and outscored the Salukis 52-28 the last 20

Netter steps in for teammate, serves two victories

A common bond between coach and players is the key to the SIUC women's tennis team's success, according to one Saluki netter.

Melva McNeil, a senior in advertising from Carbondale, said the relationship among the players and the coach has a great affect on the team.

"Judy has the ability to remove herself from being a coach," McNeil said.

"Most coaches don't realize the importance of being a coach as well as a friend to their players."

She said Auld's coaching style is a prime example of experience and helps ease the tension.

"It makes the players want to give the coach 100 percent in every measure," she said.

McNeil said the bond among the players has been strengthened because of the example set by the coach.

"There is no dissension between the number one player and number six player," she said.

"We help each other mentally, physically and emotionally." She said Auld's coaching styles demonstrate experience and it helps ease the tension.

"It makes the players want to give the coach 100 percent in every measure," she said.

During last weekend's conference matchup at Eastern Kentucky,

McNeil had to step up and play the number five position because Molly Card, who usually plays at that position, was out with an ankle injury. McNeil won her last single match along with winning a double flight.

McNeil said the hardest thing about stepping into the number five position was keeping calm.

"The toughest thing about playing at that position is that I had to get mentally prepared for it," she said.

"I get anxious and I don't think about strategy — I just hit the ball. In between change overs I would listen to my walkman and that allowed me to stay calm and focused."

Tennis is a mental game and a person can psyche themselves up to lose or win McNeil said.

"Tennis is 80 percent mental and 20 percent physical," she said.

"I found a niche that calms me down and helps me to remain focused. I'm going to continue to listen to my Walkman during changeovers."

McNeil said the tennis program at SIUC is much stronger than the one she played under at Western Illinois

Between the Lines

The SIUC men and women's swimming and diving teams came up with dominating victories at the National Independent Championships in Little Rock, Ark., over the weekend.

The women blasted their nearest opponent, the University of Cincinnati, by a score of 820-693.

Senior swimmer, Ila Barlean had a season best performance in the 50-yard freestyle race, winning with a time of 23.98.

For the men, SIUC grabbed first place, scoring 602 points, while Cincinnati took second place with 524 points.

The SIUC men's baseball team garnered its first win of the season against Stetson University 7-6 Sunday afternoon.

Infielder Jay Mansavage collected three hits and drove in two runs while David Piazza pitched four shutout relief innings, allowing only two hits in the final four innings to earn his first save.

Jumping out to an early 7-1 lead, SIUC produced eight hits and scored seven runs in the game, knocking out Stetson starter Chuck Beale in just 1.2 innings of work.

Along with Mansavage, Saluki first baseman Mike Russell drove in two runs with a pair of hits.

Sunday's win was the first of the season for SIUC.

The Salukis' next stop is at Southeast Missouri State Friday.
