GOP leaders dismayed about defense cut balk

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican congressional leaders rebelled on Thursday at President Reagan's indication that he wants more defense spending for 1984 and 1985 than called for in the budget outline he agreed to only last month.

"I would think (he) might want to rethink that," said Rep. Delbert Latta, R-Ohio, the top Republican on the House Budget Committee. The two top GOP floor leaders in Congress also took issue with the president, something they rarely do in public.

One source said Reagan's insistence at a news conference Wednesday night on budget "flexibility" was a prelude to a request to add $23 billion to proposed defense spending over the two years. That, officials said, could wind up costing votes in Congress in the current GOP drive for tax increases and spending cuts in social programs.

"It could cause some to say they won't vote for some other deficit-reducing steps," said Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., echoing House Republican leaders.

Many Republicans feel that Reagan's acceptance earlier this year of cuts in his original defense budget was an essential part of a budget package that also includes deep cuts in social programs and an election-year tax increase.

GOP Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. of Tennessee and House GOP Leader Bob Michel of Illinois both said they would attempt to persuade Reagan to change his mind.

Baker said he and many other Republican senators were "disturbed" by Reagan's comments, made at a televised news conference.

Michel also said he would "communicate to the White House (the) displeasure" that surfaced at a closed-door caucus earlier in the day.

Reagan set off the reaction by declaring at his meeting with reporters, "I reserve the right to have the flexibility with regard to individual programs" beyond the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1.

He added that he feels "bound by the overall figures."

'Leftist threat' is target of new U.S. aid

WASHINGTON (AP) - A Defense Department official announced new plans Thursday to strengthen El Salvador's military forces and said "the Cuban-Nicaraguan coalition" was poised to turn the Salvadoran civil war into a struggle for control of Central America.

The statement by Nestor Sanchez, deputy assistant defense secretary for inter-American affairs, came as Congressional investigators disclosed evidence suggesting that U.S. advisers in El Salvador have been exposed to greater danger than the Reagan administration had said.

The General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of Congress, "issued a report saying that many U.S. non-combat advisers have routinely been receiving "hostile fire pay," which requires them to certify each month that they came under fire or were in "imminent danger" of attack.

The Pentagon had no immediate response to the report, but the administration has contended consistently that the advisers were in areas where combat was not considered likely.

Meanwhile, administration officials defended their certification this week that the Salvadoran government had made progress in human rights and land reform. That move cleared the way for continued U.S. military aid, which totaled $81 million this year.

In testimony before the House Foreign Affairs Committee, Thomas O. Enders, assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs, said progress in human rights and land reform "is marred but real."

Some Democratic congressmen challenged Enders' assessment, but questioning was less hostile than during previous administration testimony on El Salvador.

The sharpest exchange came between Rep. Gerry E. Studds, D-Mass., and Elliott Abrams, assistant secretary of state.

Studds called the certification report "fundamentally a dishonest document," and said it understated the seriousness of human rights abuses by the Salvadoran government.

Retiring Lesar gets surprise tribute

By Mike Nelson
Staff Writer

While Hiram H. Lesar was delivering his final lecture on Federal Income Tax, students, faculty and friends gathered in the main foyer of the Law Building, waiting and watching the clock.

At 11:30 a.m. sharp, carrying his usual bundle of lecture notes and textbooks, Lesar made his way toward the door, unaware of the crowd of well-wishers outside who waited anxiously for his appearance.

When he stepped out, the previously silent crowd burst into a round of applause and cheering for the man who will retire from SIU-C after 10 years of distinguished service.

Lesar, 70, former interim president of SIU-C, dean of the School of Law from 1972 to 1980, and a driving force behind construction of the Law Building which bears his name, is leaving SIU-C within the next two weeks to accept a position as visiting professor at McGeorge College of Law in Sacramento, Calif.

Looking surprised, the smiling Lesar received an ornate silver tray in appreciation of his years of service to SIU-C from Dave Waltrip, president of the Student Bar Association.

Lesar's wife of 45 years, Rosalee, stood with her husband as he received the tray, inscribed, "To Dean Lesar, with sincere appreciation for leadership and dedication — SIU School of Law 1972-1982."

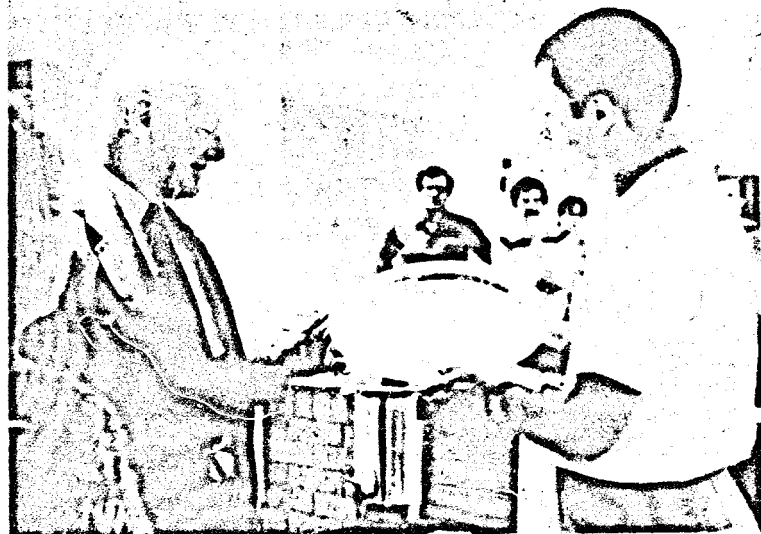

Lesar joined the faculty in 1972, when the newly-created School of Law was located in Small Group Housing. Lesar was appointed dean in 1972, a

Social Security left exposed in balanced budget proposal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate rejected 59-39 on Thursday an attempt to shield the Social Security program and its 36 million pensioners from a proposed constitutional amendment barring deficit federal spending.

Critics of the amendment, led by Sen. Daniel P. Moynihan, D-N.Y., said the first target for spending cuts is certain to be the $73 billion in annual retirement benefits.

"We would have no choice, save disbanding the armed forces," Moynihan said. "It would be the ineluctable certain result of this amendment."

S.C., chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, said the constitutional amendment is not intended to either protect or reduce the size of any specific federal spending program. "It does not include or exclude anything," said Thurmond. "That's the way it ought to be."

Only when the amendment is in place, said Thurmond, should Congress begin deciding on what taxes should be raised or which programs should be cut.

During Thursday's Senate debate, Moynihan said the amendment would pass only because it is the politically safe thing to do in an election year when the federal deficit is

If the vote were by secret ballot, he said, it would fail to get a majority, let alone the required two-thirds.

"Tampering with the Constitution for purposes of winning the mid-term election is not worthy of the world's oldest constitutional republic," he said.

One after another, the Senate has been defeating changes proposed by opponents to the amendment, which, if enacted by the Congress, and ratified by the states, would likely take hold in 1986 or 1987.

Beirut truce holds despite blockade

By The Associated Press

Despite PLO mortar fire and a reported Israeli "starve and parch" campaign against west Beirut, the U.S.-mediated truce held Thursday and presidential envoy Philip C. Habib offered "positive new points" toward getting the guerrillas to leave their encircled stronghold.

Israel said Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir will leave for Washington Sunday for possible talks with President Reagan on Habib's initiative to get the Palestine Liberation Organization out of Beirut.

The Israeli command said PLO gunners fired mortar rounds at Israeli armored positions around Beirut's paralyzed airport but the Israelis held their fire in accordance with "strict orders" to obey the cease-fire Habib worked out Wednesday.

PLO spokesman Mahmoud Labadi said there was shooting because the Israelis were trying to "advance and improve their positions." There was no comment from Israel to that charge or another that trucks carrying flour to guerrilla-held west Beirut were turned back by the invaders.

Lebanese Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan told reporters although the truce was holding on all warfronts that Israeli forces added flour to their blockade on electricity, water and fuel supplies to west Beirut's estimated 600,000 residents.

"Flour-carrying trucks of the International Red Cross committee were turned back by Israeli forces today as they are trying to remove the ban imposed four days ago on electricity and water. Another form of pressure is now on," Wazzan said. "Killing is done either by fire power or by seeking to starve and parch."

Wazzan spoke after a one-hour conference he and Lebanese President Elias Sarkis had with Habib in the shell-pocked presidential palace in suburban Baabda, five miles east of Beirut.

Wazzan said Habib brought "some positive things" from his week-long shuttle to find countries willing to give the estimated 8,000 trapped guerrillas refuge, but the prime minister refused to spell out what these positive things were.

Iran launches fresh offensive in Iraq

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iran said its legions braved barbed wire and mine fields under cover of darkness in a push toward a major Iraqi highway to Baghdad, but Iraq said Thursday it counter-attacked and halted the invaders.

Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency said Iranian troops smashed three Iraqi defense lines, advanced seven miles and eliminated Iraqi resistance in 58 square miles of Iraqi territory north of the southern port of Basra. The fresh offensive launched late Wednesday night was Iran's first in two weeks.

"The defending force of the Islamic revolution succeeded in liberating 150 square kilometers of Iraqi territory and flushed the Saddamist filth from the area," said a war communique broadcast by state-run Tehran radio.

Discipline needed, state students say

CHICAGO (AP) — The most serious disciplinary problem in Illinois public high schools is class cutting, followed by absenteeism, according to a majority of students polled in an Illinois Office of Education report.

The majority also thinks the schools do only a fair to poor job of imposing discipline.

The report says 59 percent of the sophomores and 63 percent of the seniors polled gave fair or poor ratings when asked whether they considered discipline equitable.

In addition, the report said slightly more than half the sophomores and seniors said the discipline imposed is no better than fair in the area of effectiveness.

Illinois Education Superintendent Donald G. Gill gave the findings Wednesday to a committee of the state Board of Education. The statistics came from an analysis of responses by Illinois students in a national study by the National Center for Education Statistics.

Newly freed Poles tell of life in camps

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Life in Polish internment camps was severe and sometimes strained, but not without its small victories and occasional pleasures: Marriage, a homemade Polish flag, a visit from a loved one.

So say union activists who are now returning to the private lives disrupted by detention after imposition of martial law in Poland last Dec. 13.

"The conditions were severe but polite," said one scientist jailed for his Solidarity union activities. "There was no friendliness between the internees and prison officers, but there was practically no aggression from either side."

Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, the government and Communist Party leader who declared martial law last Dec. 13, ordered about 1,200 internees released last week in a general relaxation of restrictions. But about 650 leaders of Solidarity, including its head, Lech Walesa, remain in custody.

Walesa, who led the union through 18 months of strikes and demands, is isolated in a remote workers resort near Przemysl, a small city on the Soviet border.

Other top Solidarity leaders are being held in the so-called "black pavilion," a section of Bialoeka Prison located in a wooded area outside of Warsaw.

"There was some vocal aggression in the beginning," the scientist said after his release from Bialoeka. "But slowly it improved. Due to day-to-day contacts between internees and prison guards, I believe they began to see us as normal people, not dangerous people who should be put under lock.

"We could talk to them, not only about politics, but also about day-to-day problems," such as food and boredom, he said.

Prisoners tried to bolster their bland diet, which mostly consisted of milk soup and twice-weekly rations of meat. The scientist, who requested anonymity, and others said the situation was helped by food parcels brought in by families, who were allowed one visit a month.

"Individual farmers who wanted to help us brought vegetables and tomatoes to the prison for us to eat," one internee said. "Ironically, I could eat tomatoes in April when it would have been practically impossible to buy them on the open market."

Internees were forbidden to drink liquor, but some said they made moonshine in buckets in their cells.

And some produced a crude, hand-written newspaper called "On Horseback Through The World" and circulated copies within the cells.

"We had a television room with a pingpong table," one internee said. "But ... nobody wanted to watch television anyway, except for the World Cup soccer matches. It was too distressing, especially the news."

Internees married, some of them getting permission to wed outside prison, others marrying girlfriends in prison ceremonies. One internee recalled that one couple spent an hour together after the ceremony in the company of a guard. The woman then went home, and the internee returned to his cell.

"In the beginning, we were put together with criminals," one of the internees said. "We learned a lot from them, and they from us. We taught them politics and they taught us their tricks and rules of behavior."

Women were isolated from men at internment camps in Bytom in southwest Poland; Darlowek, a workers' resort on the Baltic Sea in northwest Poland; and in Goldap, a resort in northeast Poland where Anna Walentynowicz, a fiery union organizer, was held.

"The surroundings were beautiful," she said in a recent interview in her Gdansk apartment. "There were forests and pine trees, but we could only admire those beautiful trees through the windows. We were not allowed to put our feet on the ground."

The 250 women held there were limited to one-hour walks each day on porches surrounding the building, she said.

position which he held until 1980, when Dan Hopson succeeded him. Throughout his tenure at SIU-C, Lesar continued teaching classes, specializing in property and tax law.

A native of Southern Illinois, Lesar was born and raised in Thebes, in Alexander County. Lesar had been dean of the School of Law at Washington University in St. Louis for 12 years when he accepted an invitation to start up a new law school at SIU-C.

One year into his term as dean, the first students were attending classes. In February 1974, the new law school received provisional accreditation from the American Bar Association.

One month later, then-SIU-C president David Derge resigned and the Board of Trustees named Lesar to take over as interim president. During the nine months he was acting president, Lesar was credited with bringing stability to an administration troubled by controversy and ill-will following the dismissal of 104 SIU-C faculty members in 1973.

When the Board of Trustees appointed Warren Brandt president in December 1974, Lesar returned to teaching full-time and working on funding for a new law building.

In August 1978, Gov. James

R. Thompson signed a bill authorizing $7.5 million for the building project, completed in the spring of 1981.

Lesar served once more as acting president from June 1979 to August 1980, bridging the administrations of Brandt and Albert Somit.

Lesar said Thursday he will return to SIU-C in September for the official dedication of the Lesar Law Building.

He said that while he will miss teaching at SIU-C, the law school will still be "in good hands."

"I'm a realist," he said, "I can't go on forever."

Stereo equipment recovered

Carbondale Police recovered several thousand dollars worth of stereo equipment from a Lewis Park apartment Thursday, allegedly the result of two separate burglaries, according to Art Wright, police spokesman.

Five suspects were questioned and released, Wright said. He declined to release the names of the suspects but said warrants for the arrest of "at least two of the suspects" would be sought from the state's attorney Friday.

Police were called to Lewis Park apartment Thursday to investigate an alleged burglary. Testimony from witnesses led them to a second apartment where the equipment was recovered.

Wright said all the property reported stolen had been recovered.

SIU ahead of its time in education on how to drink responsibly

THERE IS AN old Japanese proverb that says, "First the man takes a drink, then the drink takes a drink, then the drink takes the man." For many college-age drinkers, this proverb becomes a reality.

According to an article in the July 21 issue of The Chronicle of Higher Education, alcoholism among college students has not increased substantially since 1975. College students are still drinking at approximately the same pace as seven years ago.

A SURVEY OF 181 randomly-selected colleges and universities from across the country showed that nationally, 16.1 percent of students drank excessively. The highest percentage of those who drank excessively came from public institutions in the Midwest, which reported that 21.3 percent drank to excess. Seventy-five percent of the students surveyed said they drank at least some of the time.

A survey conducted at SIU-C in 1980 revealed that 87 percent of SIU-C students drank, according to a Student Wellness Center source.

BUT A MAJOR change in relation to college drinking is that universities and student groups have taken notice of the drinking problem in higher education and are beginning to do something about it. Groups such as BACCHUS, a national organization that promotes responsible drinking, are becoming more prevalent and more influential.

The article states that people in general are becoming more concerned about alcohol abuse. It cites society's recognition of alcohol as a drug, medical recognition of alcoholism as a disease, a new emphasis on overall physical fitness and well-being, and increased public awareness of such alcohol-related problems as drunken driving and fetal alcohol syndrome — defects in newborn infants resulting from their mothers' drinking problems.

THE WORKERS AT SIU-C's Alcohol Education Program at the Student Wellness Center have been promoting responsible drinking habits since 1978. Grant-funded at the outset but now funded by the University, the three-person staff, along with student volunteers and practicum interns, known as peer educators, work to help students with drink problems and above all, to educate students about responsible drinking.

The Alcohol Education Program performs a vital service at SIU-C. If more students were to utilize the facilities available to them at the Wellness Center, perhaps there would be fewer problems with alcohol abuse and more students who, if they choose to drink, drink responsibly.

IF THE TREND in higher education is to promote responsible drinking, then SIU-C's Wellness Center has been ahead of the trend. According to the survey, 68.5 percent of the institutions surveyed now have special programs to educate about the effects of alcohol, and 44.2 percent have programs to treat the effects of excessive use.

Higher education has begun to take notice of alcohol abuse. And that is an encouraging development, for as the Roman Stoic philosopher Lucius Annaeus Seneca said, "Drunkenness is nothing but voluntary madness."

Baptist Church will not sell

It was very convenient of the editor to include Donald Monty's attempt to negate the letter sent by my church to clarify our position on the "conference" center. I appreciate the quick response given to controversial issues such as this one, but to avoid confusion, I feel it necessary to restate what was apparently overlooked by either the editor or Mr. Monty, indicated by the body of his response.

I quote the letter in question — "...the church has voted not to sell and still maintains that position. The church does not want to sell under any circumstances." This was a crucial element to the clarification of our position. The remainder of that paragraph was written solely to dispel the opinion that these people opposing the conference center were to be considered "selfish" and "inconsiderate." In fact, much discussion was done over whether that particular paragraph should be included for fear it would be misconstrued to mean that we would be willing to consider an offer of more money.

I speak for myself, but I think many of my fellow members would agree. We will talk about money only when the last effort to save the church has failed. Frankly, we don't believe it will. — Pat McClanahan, Junior, Music Business, Member, Walnut Street Baptist Church.

Letters

Faculty letters helped preserve raise

Editor's Note: This letter is in response to Herbert Snyder's letter, published in the July 22 edition of the Daily Egyptian.

I am pleased to receive your response to the correspondence that Senator Buzbee and I recently mailed regarding state appropriations for SIU for fiscal year '82-'83. While I have no serious disagreement with any of your statements, I believe that in view of your comments some clarification is needed.

The general thrust of our efforts in issuing our circular letter was two-fold. First, we wanted to attempt to inform the faculty and staff of the background and status of our legislative efforts to obtain proper funding for the operations of SIU for the fiscal year 1982-1983. Second, we felt that letters from the faculty and staff at SIU to the governor urging him to sign the budget bills passed in this session, providing for a 4 percent salary increase for employees, could have an impact on his decision. I contend that input from a large constituency can make a difference. It is interesting to learn of your past experiences in trying to relate your thoughts to the governor. You state that your efforts appeared to be resented and unneeded even though you are a member of his party. I can only suggest that you join many others who have had similar experiences and try getting his attention at the polls this fall.

The governor apparently is sensitive to some lobbying. He was a supporter of efforts to raise the judges' pay and lost no time in signing the bill when it reached his desk. Incidentally, Buzbee and Richmond both voted NO on this bill. As you no doubt know, the governor has reduced the 4 percent raise (as meager as it was) to 3 percent. It's clear that, in his way of thinking, a 30 percent pay increase for the judges is more important than a meager pay raise for those people involved in educating our youth. He stated that a 30 percent increase was essential to ensure the quality of our judges, but apparently in his opinion, a 3 percent increase for university personnel is adequate to maintain quality education.

Our reference to the State Universities' Retirement System was probably misunderstood. What we are saying is that one more year of 62.5 percent level funding instead of the proposed 70 percent level will not put the system in immediate jeopardy. We hasten to add — as we have for several years — that a long-range plan for corrections in the funding of this system by the state is imperative. We will be a party to efforts to accomplish this.

Our correspondence to faculty and staff members did generate numerous letters to Governor Thompson requesting that he sign the Appropriation bills. Perhaps they were helpful in maintaining a 3 percent salary increase as opposed to no raise, which the governor seemed to favor. — Bruce Richmond, State Representative, 58th District.

No more tourists? It's no surprise

When I see news items bemoaning the sad fate of tourism in the lower tip of Illinois I don't know whether to laugh, cry, cuss or pray. These sad statistics explain why. Here is what the Presley family tried to do.

1. Offered to construct, at our own expense, a lodge on Crab Orchard Lake large enough for trainloads to be accommodated for days while we bussed them about the area. Turned down.
2. Offered to construct a great swimming pool in Grand Tower Lodge, large enough for trainloads of people. Town could have use of it when trains were not there. Turned down. Said they wanted to keep the town small.

3. Drew plans asking the state to construct small cabins in Giant City Park to where we could bring busloads and then bus them about. Turned down.

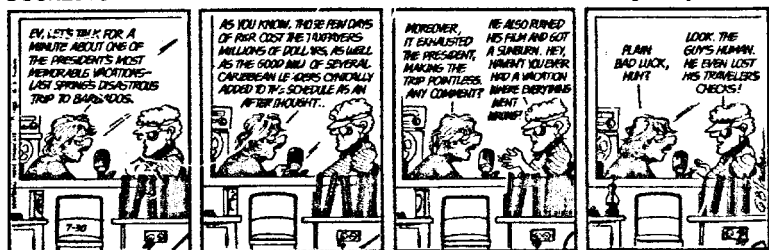

4. Drew up plans to create a large tourist attraction with buffalo, Indians, waterfalls, etc., At our expense, at Kerr Canyon east of Cobden. Local citizens ran us out.

5. Not being easily discouraged, we next planned a huge tourism center along I-57 near Lick Creek. It would have miners' baths, chuck wagons, Indians, a pioneer farm and on and on. Unemployed and welfare people from the hard-hit counties of Alexander and Pulaski would be bussed back and forth to help construct and operate it. A government loan would be requested to build it. The "Southern Five," an organization of the lower five counties, turned it down and the citizens of Johnson County ran us out. Now we concentrate in taking people OUT of this area. Boy, oh boy! — Wayman Presley, Mahanda.

WIDB loses Cablevision outlet

By Dean Kirk
Staff Writer

It may not look different, but Carbondale Cablevision's display on Channel 13 has changed.

The time, temperature, wind direction and speed are still there. It's the background music that's not the same.

WIDB is no longer broadcasting music on Channel 13. In its place is WTOA, which broadcasts on 105.6 FM.

WIDB, which broadcasts on 104 cable FM and 600 AM, was taken off Channel 13 on June 9 because the radio station did not fulfill the contract they had with Carbondale Cablevision, said Steve Latshaw, Cablevision's program director. The contract expired on May 17, he said.

Latshaw said the contract, signed on June 15, 1981, specified that WIDB was to run 21 30-second spots of advertising for Carbondale Cablevision per week.

WIDB and Cablevision, Latshaw said, had a "tradeout" agreement for WIDB to be promoted on Channel 13 in return for the weekly 21 30-second spots. The promotion read, "You're listening to the album station WIDB. Request line 536-6661."

Latshaw also said the only record Cablevision had of the 30-second spots being aired on WIDB was when they received an affidavit in August 1981 stating that 16 spots had aired that month. The affidavits are the necessary proof that the spots ran, he said.

However, according to Jim Hagarty, a senior majoring in Radio-TV and WIDB's general manager, Latshaw told him at a meeting they had June 9 that, "in effect," Tele-Communications Inc., one of the companies which owns Carbondale Cablevision, wanted to promote FM service sales and that the only way would be to put a commercial over-the-air radio station on Channel 13 in place of WIDB.

Latshaw said, however, that Tele-Communications, Inc. and Cable Information Systems, Inc., the other company that owns Carbondale Cablevision, had nothing to do with the decision to take WIDB off Channel 13.

The decision was made by himself, Cablevision system manager Craig Perica and Larry Roethe, Cablevision's chief technician, and was "solely on the basis of WIDB's past performance with Carbondale Cablevision."

He said that Carbondale Cablevision asked WIDB for proof, by means of flight sheets and program logs, that the spots had been run, but WIDB was unable to comply.

At another meeting with Hagarty held June 15, Latshaw made "a personal observation" that if cable FM was the only way Cablevision subscribers could receive WIDB, then the "possible increase in subscribership to FM service" could increase Cablevision's revenue.

Latshaw also said this observation had nothing to do with the decision made by Carbondale Cablevision to take WIDB off of Channel 13.

Also at the June 15 meeting, Hagarty said he told Latshaw that Tony Esposito, the program director at Carbondale Cablevision from June to September 1981, had told WIDB to save the 30-second spots for use at a later date. Latshaw said he had no knowledge of this agreement.

Hagarty said he had been told by station personnel that WIDB tried to find out the status of the spots Esposito told them to save and tried to see about running them again by trying to contact Linda Lumely. Lumely took over as system manager of Carbondale Cablevision after Esposito left and held this position until February 22.

When WIDB tried to call Lumely, Hagarty said, she could never be reached. She also never returned any of the calls the station left for her.

He said that after Lumely left and Larry Roethe took over as program director, with the exception of April 8, 20, 24 and 25, WIDB ran the required spots from April 7 until their contract expired May 17. Roethe was program director from Feb. 22 to May 22.

However, Latshaw said that on March 22 a WIDB salesperson tried to sell Carbondale Cablevision commercial time on WIDB.

Hagarty said the salesperson, who requested anonymity, never approached Latshaw about selling commercial time.

Latshaw also said Bob Fahner, another WIDB salesperson, tried to sell Cablevision advertising on May 4, and didn't know the station had a contract with Cablevision at the time.

Hagarty said WIDB could have tried harder to fulfill its part of the contract but the fulfillment was made "that much more difficult" by the high turnover of personnel at Carbondale Cablevision.

Latshaw said that on June 11,

WCIL was offered the chance to broadcast on Channel 13 but they declined. The same day, Cablevision approached WTOA, who signed a contract with the station on June 17. The contract is on a day-by-day basis which allows either WTOA or Carbondale Cablevision to cancel at any time, Latshaw said.

Channel 13 is used by Carbondale Cablevision as a "weather station" to display pertinent weather information, Perica said.

He also said Channel 13 will become an independent station, similar to WGN and KPLR, Cablevision's Channel 10 and 11 respectively, when construction of KBSI, a station in Cape Girardeau, is completed.

Harvester to reshuffle; faces $1 billion loss

CHICAGO (AP) — International Harvester Co., anticipating losses of close to $1 billion this fiscal year, said Thursday it must close more plants, consolidate other operations and get greater concessions from lenders in paying off its $4.2 billion debt.

The giant manufacturer of farm implements, heavy equipment and trucks will propose a new restructuring plan in a closed meeting Friday with its 200 lenders and expects negotiations on changes to begin early next month, spokesman Bill Colwell said.

The proposal includes an effort to get the lenders to eliminate $300 million to $400 million of its debt in exchange for stock.

If the plan is accepted without change, the Louisville components plant and the Memphis agricultural equipment plant, with a combined workforce of 1,700, will be closed by the end of fiscal 1983.

Woody Allen's film 'impressive'

'Sex Comedy' light, lusty

By Miriam Adolphson
Staff Writer

For a lighted-hearted look into love's lies and lust's foibles, here's another Woody Allen funny that makes you laugh and lust at the same time.

"A Midsummer Night's Sex Comedy" does more on the subject of lust than seems possible in a PG movie. But the Woody Allen humor along with his sensitive, subtle approach

Heart to start fall semester at the Arena

An old rock and roll favorite, Heart, and a new arrival on the pop music scene, John Cougar, will be the featured entertainers in the first concert of the 1982-83 school year, at 8 p.m., Aug. 24 at the Arena.

This will be Heart's second appearance at the Arena, having performed there in 1979. The group of mainstream rock and rollers, fronted by the beautiful and talented Wilson sisters, Ann and Nancy, has produced several chart-topping albums, including "Dreamboat Annie" and "Dog and Butterfly." They recently released a new album, "Private Audition."

Cougar comes to SIU-C riding the popularity of his Top 10 single, "Hurts So Good," a release from his "American Fool" album.

Tickets are $8 and $10 and go on sale Aug. 4 at 8 a.m. at the Arena South Lobby Box Office.

Puzzle answer

casts a new light on an otherwise distasteful subject.

Directing, producing and starring in the movie, Allen plays a Wall Street stockbroker and weekend inventor named Andrew.

Brilliant cinematography by Gordon Willis, accompanied by enchanting classical splurges from the Philadelphia Orchestra, the New York Philharmonic Orchestra and others, sets a delightful turn-of-the-century mood.

The scene is set in a natural forest outside of New York City where Andrew and his wife Adrian (Mary Steenburgen) spend their weekends in an enormous country home.

The fun starts as guests Ariel and Leopold (Mia Farrow and Jose Ferrer) and Maxwell and Dulcy (Tony Roberts and Julie Hagerty) begin arriving for a weekend of frolicking in the spirit-filled forest, and in other guests' bedrooms.

Upon arrival, romantic complications lead everyone to a rearranging of partners. Ariel, destined to marry the older, successful, literary genius Leopold, turns out to be Andrew's old flame. Leopold in turn is after the young, modern Dulcy, Maxwell's chosen sex partner for the weekend.

But the real affair is Maxwell's melodramatic love-at-first-sight upon introduction to Ariel.

Their ultimate confrontation, forewarned by the "spirit ball," one of Andrew's inventions, is both tender and amusing and is marked by the Shakespearean cliché of an arrow through Maxwell's heart.

The film's plot is as light and enjoyable as the dialogue itself, tricking with life's truths and love's downright lies.

Perhaps not one of Woody Allen's most hilarious comedies, this one still is impressive in its assembly of characters and enlightening exploration of their deep-seated sexual frustrations.

State Fair more than glitter; it's an agriculture showcase

SPRINGFIELD (AP) — Look beyond the glitter of the midway and the glamour of big-name bands, and you'll find that the Illinois State Fair is a showcase for agriculture.

There are even a few new wrinkles this year to give consumers a better idea of what farmers do, and to give farmers a look at the latest technology. The fair opens Thursday for an 11-day run.

"The State Fair is one of the largest livestock shows in the nation," said Jeff Ideman of the Illinois Department of Agriculture. "But, we haven't done as much to showcase row crops and food production."

Visitors can take a break from the heat in an air conditioned movie theater and watch films about the farmer and food production. They will learn how crops get from the field to the table, and how corn and soybeans — the state's major commodities — become part of many processed foods.

"They also will have a chance to taste new food products before they go on the market," said Ideman.

Thirty to 40 new items produced in Illinois or containing ingredients from the state will be offered, and tasters will be asked to evaluate them.

Visitors also will see a model of a hydroponics facility that can produce fresh vegetables all year without soil, a meat analyzer that gives an instant fat reading, and computers that are helping farmers become more efficient.

The Women's Committee of the Illinois Farm Bureau is sponsoring a breakfast Aug. 10 for 75 people from all walks of life.

"We want to promote a better understanding between rural and urban people, and show them that each farmer feeds 78 people," said Hazel Ralston of Roscoe, who is coordinating the event.

The menu will include virtually everything Illinois farmers produce, from eggs to horseradishes.

Another first is a cow-milking booth sponsored by dairy science students from the University of Illinois. For 50 cents a squirt, city folks can try their hand and wear a button reading, "I Milked A Cow At The State Fair."

Farmers interested in stopping soil erosion will be able to see a demonstration of no-till planting equipment on a small grass-covered plot.

"A lot of farmers said they'd like to see these things running," said Steve Morgan of the Agriculture Department. "Conservation tillage is one of the most efficient ways to prevent soil erosion."

The system avoids the old-style deep plowing that turns under all crop residue and makes it easy for water or wind to blow away the powdery soil. New equipment allows farmers to plant seed in the old crop debris without plowing.

There also will be about 100 exhibitors showing everything from farm buildings and seed to satellite dishes. Even the major tractor and combine manufacturers, hard hit by the current farm recession, again will display their products.

"Times are tough, but they realize that if they aren't here they won't have the visibility," said Larry Aldag of the Agriculture Department. "You've got to stick your neck out and try to get the business."

Livestock producers will display thousands of head of cattle, hogs, sheep, horses and mules again this year, but there will be a new emphasis on Illinois animals, according to Jean Stubbenfeld, who handles the livestock entries.

This year, the grand champion animals, auctioned to the highest bidder, must be owned by an Illinois producer. That might increase the number of bidders and raise the price, she said.

"Some of our very best buyers are not interested in promoting out-of-state animals," she said. "They want to buy an Illinois animal."

To compensate, winners in the open division, who can be from other states, will get larger prizes. Instead of $50, the owner of the grand champion steer in the open division will get $1,000 this year, she said.

Several injured in disturbance at Pontiac prison

PONTIAC, (AP) — Several inmates were injured Thursday in a disturbance at the Pontiac Correctional Center, officials said.

Joan Von Qualen, Livingston County Coroner Keith Von Qualen's wife and secretary, said Von Qualen was called to the prison with a report that one person was dead.

Doro Thea Green, an assistant to the warden, said no employees were injured and that the prison was secured about one hour after the outbreak began at 1 p.m.

Ms. Green said several inmates were brought by ambulance to St. James Hospital in Pontiac and that several others were treated at a prison infirmary. A spokeswoman at the hospital, which was sealed off from non-employees, refused to give any details.

Four years ago, three prison guards at the prison were killed and three others seriously injured in a riot there.

States' finances in worst shape in 40 years, says new study

CHICAGO (AP) - The majority of American states are experiencing "perhaps the worst fiscal conditions in 40 years," according to results of a new survey released Thursday.

The results were released jointly by the National Conference of State Legislatures and the Urban Institute at the NCSL's annual convention here.

The study said the poor fiscal conditions in the various states were the result of "the depressed national economy compounded by decreasing federal aid."

Of the 50 states surveyed, the study showed that at least 17 ended the 1982 fiscal year with a balance equal to 1 percent or less of their annual spending.

The report said that although those states were operating in the black, the commonly accepted "safety zone" is a balance of 5 percent or above.

Fourteen of the states surveyed had a balance of only 3 percent or less of their annual appropriations and just 12 states reported balances of more than 5 percent. Seven states reported deficits.

The 12 states identified as being within the 5 percent safety zone were: Delaware, Florida, Hawaii, Kansas, Louisiana, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Texas and Wyoming.

All states other than Vermont are required by law to maintain or adopt a balanced state budget, but the survey revealed that seven states ended the 1982 fiscal year with deficits. Those states were Connecticut, Minnesota, New Hampshire, Ohio, Oregon, Washington and West Virginia.

However, the study noted that five of those states enact biennial budgets and have one year to correct the deficit.

The major cause of the states' financial problems was revenue shortfalls caused by the recession, the survey showed. To deal with revenue shortfalls, many states adopted a variety of measures, including tax increases and spending cutbacks.

"State officials reacted during budget deliberations by raising taxes and cutting back government spending," said outgoing NCSL president, Sen. Ross Doyen, R-Kan. "While not the easiest political decisions, state legislators had to cope with the national economy."

The survey showed that 22 states raised at least one tax for the upcoming fiscal year while four states raised income taxes and five states raised their sales tax.

In addition, 17 states raised at least one major excise tax on cigarettes, alcohol or motor fuel while 23 of the 44 states with corporation income taxes either decoupled their tax systems from federal depreciation provisions or raised their corporate tax rate.

The survey also showed that at least 26 states made budget cutbacks in program areas while 18 states instituted hiring freezes and 20 states laid off government workers.

During Thursday's conference luncheon, a videotaped message from President Reagan was viewed by the conferees.

In the tape, Reagan said many provisions of his "New Federalism" had been revised according to recommendations from numerous states. The president also urged lawmakers to support a balanced budget amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

U.S. cultural emissary pays $3.25 million for Morse art

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Reagan's ambassador-at-large for cultural affairs, Daniel J. Terra, recently bought a painting by Samuel F.B. Morse for $3.25 million, a sum he contends is the highest ever paid for an American painting.

The 19th century painting, entitled "Gallery of the Louvre," was bought from Syracuse University for the Terra Museum of American Art in Evanston, Ill., which the wealthy industrialist and philanthropist established in 1978.

Several art experts said it would be difficult to substantiate Terra's assertion that the $3.25 million purchase price is a record, because many private art purchases are never publicized.

The Sotheby Parke Bernet auction house in New York says the record for an American painting sold at auction was recorded in October 1979, when Frederick Edwin Church's painting, "Icebergs," fetched $2.5 million at Sotheby. Sotheby had no listing of record sums for private sale of American paintings.

Morse, a renowned American artist perhaps better known as inventor of the telegraph and the Morse Code, painted "Gallery of the Louvre" in 1832 based on an idea he conceived along with author James Fenimore Cooper.

The painting, which is 6 feet by 9 feet, is a premier example of a "gallery picture" or a painting of a painting. The canvas depicts several Americans, including Cooper and his family, viewing 38 master paintings - all painstakingly reproduced by Morse - in a salon of the Louvre gallery in Paris.

Syracuse University has owned the painting since 1884.

Much of that time, it has been kept in storage because of its size and value. An aide to the Terra Museum said the university agreed to sell the painting on the condition that it be made more accessible to the public.

Unloved White House aide loves job

By Maureen Santini
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — John F.W. Rogers is baffled. Why are so many people at the White House saying such nasty things about him?

No one speaks for the record, of course. But rumors planted by frustrated White House aides abound.

They say the director of administration, keeper of the White House budget and coveted perquisites, throws his weight around, hates the press and spent hours redecorating.

Rogers' uninhibited passion for his job has made him as unpopular with some colleagues as his predecessor in the Carter administration, Hugh Carter, whose efforts to eliminate waste by removing television sets and canceling magazine subscriptions earned him the nickname "Cousin Cheap."

Aides also whisper that Rogers engineered the retirement last week of Bob Manning, the well-liked, unflappable transportation director who spent 22 years making plane, hotel, bus, baggage and party arrangements for the press corps that travels with the president.

In short, they contend Rogers is taken with himself and his powers in the manner of many idealistic 26-year-olds whose authority and zeal exceed their experience.

In a recent interview, Rogers, who first worked in the White House as an 18-year-old volunteer, acknowledged he was in an awkward position because of his youth and his authority to dispense money and status symbols. But he was puzzled by suggestions that his motives were anything but well-intentioned.

"I by no means have these grand dictatorial powers," he said. "I implement the policy decisions of the chief of staff. I'm not some 26-year-old kid they stuck in an office and said, 'Here, you're now the czar.'"

Rogers, who administers a $19 million budget compared with Hugh Carter's $22 million, said his goal was simply to bring modern, professional management to an institution that was almost shamefully inefficient and outdated. When he arrived, he insisted, expenditures were being entered in a ledger by hand. Soon, they will be computerized.

Yet Rogers' approach is the opposite of Carter's insistence on playing down the trappings of the presidency by carrying his own bags and cutting back on chauffeured limousines for aides.

Rogers, who graduated from George Washington University in 1978, installed a $225 presidential seal above the diplomatic entrance to the White House and replaced the awning there at a cost of $2,478.88. He spent about $60,000 reconfiguring office space for presidential aides in the West Wing, including $18,000 on his complex of working space for eight people. A visitors' lobby was redecorated for $5,245, but he said the last item was paid for out of Nancy Reagan's redecoration fund.

Rogers accepted responsibility for implementing these actions, although some of the decisions were made by his superiors. Yet he insisted the status symbols so many White House aides yearn for mean nothing to him at all.

In his quest to introduce formality, strict rules and no-nonsense accountability where none had existed before, Rogers has poked his nose into various nooks where operations have gone for years without supervision.

"It was sort of a country club atmosphere in each operating unit," said Rogers, who took it upon himself to learn how the White House operated when he was an intern in Gerald Ford's White House. "Without a doubt that's something I have tried to change."

He said individual offices "have had their doors closed for so long. As long as they functioned...no one got involved in it." Systematically, he aims to change that.

Rogers discovered the transportation office was sending out non-itemized bills to reporters for trips and then not accounting for the money except by "having a trip file and throwing a bunch of receipts into it." It had been done that way for years.

"It's just too many loose dollars," said Rogers, who taught himself accounting in high school. He was surprised government officials were handling so much money from private news organizations without counter-signatures, bonding or any adherence to general rules of accounting.

All that will change now that Manning, 50, has departed. There's no doubt Manning's low-key, casual attitude was the antithesis of Rogers' intensity, but both men insist Rogers had nothing to do with the retirement.

And while Rogers criticized the looseness of the operation, he stressed he was not alleging any impropriety.

"I play everything by the book all the time," said Rogers, who now wants to negotiate an agreement with the White House Correspondents' Association about exactly what services the White House will provide the press corps.

As an intern in the Ford administration, Rogers said he went from having a swelled head to being kicked out on the street after Ford's defeat. He went to work for the District of Columbia Police Department and the American Enterprise Institute, a conservative think tank.

"I got a perspective," he said. "I mean, I could leave tomorrow and I don't have to go through eight months of depression. I already went through that."

He said the swelled head returned for awhile this time around, what with the social whirl open to new White House aides. "And then I said to myself, 'Wait a minute. This is ridiculous. This isn't for you — all this status sort of stuff.' And it's not. And I turned inward in my own organization."

Obleski II staff officers chosen

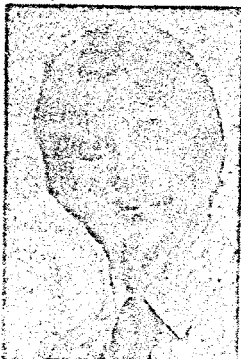

Three students have been named to SIU-C's 1982-83 Obleski II student yearbook staff.

Douglas Janvrin, of Decatur, will be the editor-in-chief of the yearbook for the 1982-83 academic year. A 21-year-old senior in photojournalism, he worked as a photographer and in sales promotion for the 1982 Obleski II staff.

He is a staff photographer for the Daily Egyptian and formerly worked as a studio cameraman for WAND-TV in Decatur.

David F. Jolly, 20, of Harrisburg, will serve as business manager. He is sophomore in business administration and was a campaign coordinator for John Anderson in the 1980 presidential race.

He also served as a U.S. House of Representatives staff member.

John C. Small, known as Jay, has been named associate editor.

Program lends pregnancy a hand

Nutrition is important

By Amy Troester
Student Writer

While several federal government programs are highly publicized, there is one which has received little attention.

The Special Supplemental Food Program for Women, Infants and Children was granted a $950 million budget for 1982 by Congress. WIC's objective is to improve the health of pregnant and nursing women, infants and preschool children.

There are two WIC agencies in Southern Illinois. One operates through the Jackson County Health Department and the other, the Southern Seven Health Department, covers the Southern Illinois counties of Alexander, Hardin, Pulaski, Union, Massac, Johnson and Pope.

The programs serve women who meet established low-income criteria or are considered at high risk during pregnancy.

However, "high risk does not mean sick," said Patsy Jensen, coordinator of the Southern Seven. It includes those who are anemic, have a history of low birthweight babies, and pregnant teenagers, she said. The services offered by each agency vary somewhat. Southern Seven offers nutrition education through one-to-one and group counseling, Jensen said.

A "preventive viewpoint" in teaching nutrition is taken, she said. For example, if a woman comes to WIC early in her pregnancy, she said, the dieticians can concentrate on changing bad dietary habits.

There are two nutritionists and six aides employed by Southern Seven, Jensen said, and they teach basic, child and prenatal nutrition. In addition, she said, each woman is given an individualized care plan.

"Nutrition is one of the most important things during pregnancy," she said. "It is one controllable factor."

The Southern Seven program began in 1975, Jensen said, and serves about 2,800 clients monthly.

The Jackson County WIC program has a "diversity" of nutrition education programs, said Lou Bigler, coordinator. It offers counseling on topics such as breast-feeding and nutrition for infants, toddlers, preschoolers and pregnant women, he said.

The Jackson County program also includes programs on environmental health, maternal nutrition, family planning, screening for diabetes, hypertension and tuberculosis, he said.

Women in the WIC program are given coupons for food items such as milk, eggs, fruit juice, cereal, cheese and iron-fortified infant milk. However, only certain foods, such as fruit juice with a certain level of vitamin C and no sugar, can be bought with the coupons.

The Jackson County program began in 1976 and, with offices in Murphysboro and Carbondale, serves about 900 clients monthly, Bigler said.

Jensen said the WIC program has been "very effective" in dealing with three main problems: teenage pregnancies, obesity and iron-deficiency anemia.

Neither Jensen nor Bigler believe budget cuts will have much of an effect on the programs.

"It hasn't affected us yet," Bigler said.

Jensen added, "We're unique in that we are able to serve as many people as possible."

75 traffic tickets a month here; clerk says, 'no checks, please'

By Tim Enright
Student Writer

It's a beautiful summer day in Carbondale, you're cruising with the windows open and the tunes cranked, and all of a sudden flashing lights are in the rear view mirror. They got ya! A traffic ticket is issued from the Carbondale Police Department.

Don't feel bad. Seventy-five others have been ticketed this month in Carbondale, according to Jean Smith, circuit clerk.

"There are, on the average, 75 speeding and traffic violations issued each month in Carbondale," Mrs. Smith said.

The fine for a speeding violation is $50. This means that the city of Carbondale collects about $3,750 a month from traffic ticket revenues.

Mrs. Smith is sent to Carbondale from Murphysboro to act as circuit clerk.

"I come to Carbondale to make it easier for people to pay their violations. This way the people do not have to take the ride out to Murphysboro City Hall," Mrs. Smith said.

The circuit clerk office is in the basement of Carbondale City Hall, 609 E. College. Mrs. Smith is there from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., Monday through Thursday. Friday hours are 8:30 a.m. until noon.

"No one else in Carbondale City Hall will accept payment for violations," said Mrs. Smith.

"Most people come in and pay their violations before the appointed court date," she said. "They usually do not try to fight them."

If a person wishes to plead not guilty, she said, he should fill out the back of the ticket and mail it to the circuit clerk's office in Carbondale. When Mrs. Smith receives the plea a court date is set and notice sent through the mail.

If a person wishes to plead guilty, she said, he should fill out the back of the fine and mail it to Mrs. Smith at Carbondale City Hall.

She said that personal checks are not accepted.

When Mrs. Smith receives payment, the driver's license is sent back through the mail along with a receipt of payment.

In case of any problems, such as not knowing how much a fine is, Mrs. Smith said she can be reached at 549-5302, extension 214 during regular business hours.

Mexicans worry that highway terrorism will hurt tourism

By Richard Boudreaux
Associated Press Writer

ALONG HIGHWAY 15, Mexico (AP) — This Pacific coastal route is rich in scenic variety and the loss of drug smugglers and highway bandits. But life, like Mexico's Pemex gasoline, is cheap on Highway 15.

Murder has been part of its legend since 16th century Spanish conquistador Nino de Guzman plundered the Patzcuaro region, through which the road now passes, and burned alive the Tarascan chief who refused to tell where his tribe's gold was buried.

Today, what happened to three American travelers — two died violently and one vanished — is worrying Mexicans who want to keep tourist dollars rolling in.

The U.S. Embassy is considering asking the State Department to renew the advisory issued against travel on Highway 15 in 1976, when at least 13 Americans and other foreigners were slain along its 1,432-mile stretch from Nogales on the Arizona border to Mexico City.

Boosters of Mexican tourism, seeking to defend the country's second largest exchange-earner behind oil, insist the latest incidents are isolated and that armed assaults on travelers are far less frequent now.

"A tourist boycott was justified in '76 but not now," said Jose H. Rico, the mayor of Mazatlan, a Pacific resort on the highway that drew 1.4 million visitors last year, more than a third of them from the United States.

Although Federal Highway Police insist their patrols are adequate, Mazatlan's hotel owners, mindful that 1976 and 1977 were their worst seasons of the decade, have started a letter-writing campaign to get the patrols increased.

Many Americans who take to the sun, surf, game hunting and fishing of Mexico's Pacific coast arrive on wheels, taking advantage of low gasoline prices — the equivalent of 46 U.S. cents a gallon for regular. U.S. officials say an average of 82 vehicles cross the Arizona border into Mexico each day on Highway 15.

From the naked desert hills around Hermosillo, Ciudad Obregon and Culiacan, the road winds across the Tropic of Cancer just north of Mazatlan and Tepic. From there it turns east to Guadaluajara and across the Sierra Madres to Morelia, Toluca and Mexico City.

Most of Highway 15 is a two-lane blacktop road — undivided, unlighted, full of potholes, crammed with trucks, often lacking shoulders or a center line and occasionally blocked by cattle. A hard day's drive may be 400 miles; night driving is not advised.

"After getting used to the California freeways, you lose the skill of judging when to pass on a road like this," said Alberto Carrillo, who drove his family to Mazatlan from their home in Whittier, Calif.

The highway takes tourist traffic both ways. "Fayuca" — consumer goods smuggled through customs — moves mostly southbound. Heroin and marijuana flow the other way, as do the "alambristas," or fence cutters, who slip through the chain link barrier at Nogales to work illegally in the United States.

Notable highway points like Tequila, home of Mexico's best-known brew, and Guayamas, a seaport seized by both American and French invaders in the 19th century, long have been publicized in tour books.

More obscure places are gaining infamy as scenes of recent crime and coverup:

Las Bateas is a curve in the highway where Nicholas Schrock's van was forced off and plundered June 2.

Shrock, 42, a University of Colorado professor bound for a teaching job in Guadaluajara, has not been seen since. The police chief and six deputies from nearby San Ignacio are suspected of killing Shrock and hiding his body. They are in jail.

Officials are looking for Shrock in the roadside tangle of mesquite and cactus, but say the suspects may be reluctant to point out the burial site because it could contain other bodies.

San Blas, just off the highway, is a little-known tropical seaside village where Longfellow wrote his last poem, "The Bells of San Blas," in 1832.

It is also where Randall Scott Ebert, 30, of Santa Monica, Calif., was shot to death June 9 and John Mills, 34, of Phoenix, Ariz., drowned June 11. Local police ordered them buried without informing U.S. officials. After their deaths came to light last week, state police opened an inquiry, saying both may have been murdered in a single drug case.

Drug-related violence flourished along Highway 15 in the early 1970s after Turkey restricted opium poppy cultivation and the valleys around Culiacan filled the gap in production for the U.S. heroin market.

'Missing' governor located on trip

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — Gov. John Spellman is missing in Inception.

The freshman Republican has not been on public view since he left his office last Friday. Reporters who cover the capital noticed with curiosity that he did not show up for work this week, nor did he appear at the governor's mansion in Olympia.

Spellman's press aide, Kate Heimbach, said the governor had left strict instructions for the staff not to discuss the plans. Earlier in the week, she and the staff would not even say flat out that he was on vacation.

But Thursday, Ms. Heimbach told a relieved press corps that Spellman had telephoned and authorized her to divulge that he was "on vacation at an undisclosed area of the state."

"If he'd simply say, 'I'm going on vacation for two weeks and this is where I'm going,' nobody would care and that would be the end of it," said one aide, who asked not to be identified. "I guess he feels it's bad for his image for anyone to know he actually spends time away from the job."

Had Spellman ventured beyond the borders of Washington state, he would have been legally required to notify Lt. Gov. John Cherberg to take over the government. The Legislature is on vacation and there is normally little state business during July and August.

"I think it's a game he plays with the press," the staffer said. "He thinks it's nobody's business."

Western peace group leaves Soviet Union

MOSCOW (AP) — Declaring "together we shall overcome," 300 Scandinavians on Thursday completed the first officially sanctioned anti-nuclear march by Westerners in the Soviet Union.

Their 13-day tour, closely supervised by local authorities, took them to Moscow, Leningrad, Vyborg, Kalinin, Smolensk and Minsk.

The predominantly women marchers traveled by overnight train Thursday back to the northern city of Leningrad. They planned to continue to their home countries of Finland, Sweden, Denmark and Norway on Friday.

Before leaving Minsk, the last stop of the march, the group was reported by the state-run news agency Tass to have issued a statement urging worldwide disarmament and saying their march proved people in East and West could work together for peace.

"We call on the United Nations and all governments, parliaments and peoples of the world to act together as we have done during 'Peace March-82' to reach an agreement," Tass quoted the statement as saying.

General tries in vain to have name cleared

WASHINGTON (AP) — Retired Brig. Gen. Samuel W. Koster, whose military career was shattered by the coverup of the My Lai massacre 14 years ago, has lost yet another fight in a long effort to clear his name.

The general, who retired in 1973, had been commander of the Americal Division in Vietnam at the time a platoon led by Lt. William L. Calley slaughtered hundreds of unresisting civilians in the village of My Lai. Americal was the name of the 23rd Infantry Division.

Court-martial charges of dereliction of duty and failure to obey orders and regulations were lodged against Koster, then were dismissed in favor of administrative punishments.

After appealing through military courts, Koster turned to the U.S. Court of Claims which rejected his complaints Wednesday.

To punish Koster for not properly following up the reports that came to him, the Army took away his temporary rank of major general, placed a letter of censure in his file, and withdrew a Distinguished Service Medal awarded to him for his service at the time the massacre took place.

Koster complained to the court that he was passed over for promotion four times

"The time has come for governments and parliaments to proceed from words to deeds in the field of disarmament."

It concluded: "Together, we shall overcome!"

The protesters' statement also reportedly called on all nations to promote a freeze on nuclear arsenals, declare nuclear-free zones in Europe and elsewhere and renounce first use of nuclear weapons.

The Soviet Union has already promised not to use nuclear weapons first and has asked the United States to pledge likewise. Washington has refused, claiming the step would undermine the West's ability to deter aggression by what it claims are numerically superior Soviet ground forces in Europe.

At every stop, the Scandinavians were joined by representatives of government-sponsored Soviet peace groups for rallies and marches.

Synthetic interferon might stop all common cold viruses

NEW YORK (AP) — Interferon produced by genetic engineering can prevent colds and block the growth of cold viruses without harmful side effects, researchers said Thursday.

In a preliminary report in the current issue of The Lancet, a British medical journal, the scientists reported that a nasal spray containing the synthetic interferon prevented the development of colds in all 19 volunteers who were given potent cold viruses.

In contrast, eight of 22 volunteers not given interferon developed colds.

No harmful side effects were seen, the scientists said.

Interferon is produced naturally by the body in very small amounts to fight infections. It is being studied intensively as a possible cancer weapon and for its effectiveness against influenza and other viruses.

The National Center for Health Statistics in Washington says Americans got more than 93 million colds in 1980 that required them to seek care or restrict activity. Thirty-one million work days were lost that year because of colds.

The researchers demonstrated that interferon was effective against a type of rhinovirus, an infectious agent that causes 25 percent to 30 percent of all colds in adults, according to the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases in Bethesda, Md.

They are now testing interferon against other cold viruses and are optimistic it will be effective against them as well, said Dr. Geoffrey Scott of the Medical Research Council Common Cold Unit in Salisbury, England, where the research was done.

"We don't know the answers for other viruses yet, but we've got very hopeful results," Scott, principal author of the report in The Lancet, said in a telephone interview.

Dr. Thomas Merigan, head of the infectious disease division at Stanford University Medical Center and an expert on interferon, said the work was "very exciting."

"I think we can anticipate that if interferon can be shown to be therapeutic — that it will work after the first symptoms have appeared — we might see it eventually as an over-the-counter drug," Merigan said.

In 1972, Merigan and Dr. David Tyrrell, the principal investigator for the new study, determined that natural interferon obtained from human white blood cells was effective against colds. But at that time it cost tens of thousands of dollars for enough interferon to protect one person against colds, Merigan said.

Until now, doctors did not know whether interferon produced by genetic engineering, or recombinant DNA, would be as effective as the natural product.

Frustrated? No recognition may be reason

CHICAGO (AP) — Most U.S. workers say the biggest frustrations in their jobs are: A. I get no recognition, and B. Why doesn't this equipment work?

That's what a recent survey of some of the nation's workers shows.

"An emotional need — recognition — and a more physical problem — equipment failure — share nearly equal concern among American workers," commented Donald G. Dowd, vice president for corporate communications at A.B. Dick, a worldwide manufacturer of office and printing systems.

In the survey conducted last June for Dick by the New York research firm of Research & Forecasts Inc., 1,010 adults 18 and older from around the nation were interviewed by telephone. They were asked multiple choice questions about the major frustrations in their jobs.

Thirty percent replied that lack of recognition of their work was the most frustrating, while 29 percent listed equipment breakdowns and malfunctions.

Another 22 percent said personality conflicts were among their biggest frustrations, while boredom was tabbed by 17 percent, lack of training by 17 percent and inability to get repair service by 10 percent.

The percentages do not total 100 because multiple responses were allowed.

To counteract the frustrations, Dowd suggested that "work supervisors should recognize the efforts of their staff members more effectively and purchase reputable, low-maintenance equipment for employee use."

"Employers, after learning the causes of job frustrations, can take appropriate action and, hopefully, improve productivity," Dowd said.

Woman says sex abuse led her to cut up spouse

URBANA (AP) — A Rantoul woman, who admits dismembering her late husband, says he beat her regularly when she could not find other women to have sexual relations with him.

"I approached the women. When they said no, he would beat me because he said I didn't try hard enough," Jeannette Minnis, 26, told the jury Thursday.

She is on trial in Champaign County in connection with the death of Movina "Mo" Minnis, 26, last October. Parts of his body were found in five Decatur trash dumpsters.

Mrs. Minnis completed her testimony Thursday, and the case will resume Monday with rebuttal witnesses and closing arguments.

Mrs. Minnis said Minnis brought a male prostitute home the night before his death, had sexual relations with the man, then had the man rape her as he watched.

Afterwards, he beat her, tied her up and threatened to kill her, the woman testified.

They struggled in their bedroom, and Mrs. Minnis said she kicked her husband off her body, then realized he was dead. She said he had been drinking and taking drugs.

She got hacksaws and plastic bags, and began with his hands, Mrs. Minnis testified.

"When I cut off any part of his body, I put it in a bag. I don't know how long it took. I tried to make it as neat as humanly possible."

New assistant hired for Intramurals

by Gene Stahman
Staff Writer

The Office of Intramural and Recreational Sports recently hired a new assistant coordinator.

The new assistant, Bill McMinn, will be in charge of all officials for team sports for intramurals and care of the outdoor intramural fields. McMinn took over his new post on July 15. He replaced Joel Barry, who resigned the office earlier this summer.

McMinn has spent the last three years at the University of Indiana in Bloomington, where he was in charge of officials, as well as doing some work in athletics and some club work.

The Elgin native is a graduate of SIU-C and has done some work toward his master's degree here. McMinn said he had worked in the football program at SIU-C in the early 70s. He has also coordinated recreational programs for local communities.

McMinn recently held a meeting for all the officials for summer intramural sports.

McMinn said there were about 35 officials for the summer intramurals, including five supervisors. The supervisors are the final judges in any arguments and help take care of the outdoor facilities.

"Most of them seem to be doing a pretty good job. They have a good, sound knowledge of the rules and mechanics," McMinn said. The reason for that is that most of them had done some officiating before, he said.

McMinn said most of this summer's officials would be coming back this fall, creating a nucleus for the approximately 150 officials needed in the fall.

McMinn said the officials have a really busy week coming up with finals in all of the softball divisions and both divisions of three-on-three basketball.

Ranger manager Don Zimmer fired

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — The majority owner of the Texas Rangers says it's nobody's business why he fired manager Don Zimmer and replaced him with coach Darrell Johnson, who becomes the 11th manager for the American League franchise since it was moved from Washington in 1972.

"It's a private problem. You are not entitled to know everything we do. This is not a publicly owned company. This is not the United States government," owner Eddie Chiles said at a heated news conference Wednesday night in which Zimmer's demise was formally announced.

Chiles lashed out at the news media for spreading the news of Zimmer's firing before the club was ready to publicly announce it. Texas, whose record is 38-58, in 18 1/2 games out of the lead in the American League West.

He blamed a "Watergate syndrome" in the news media for breaking the news of Zimmer's firing, which Chiles said caused a circus-like atmosphere that was uncalled for.

Chiles refused on Tuesday to confirm or deny reports that Zimmer would be fired. By gametime Wednesday, the managerial change still hadn't been officially announced, but fans gave Zimmer a standing ovation when he took the starting lineup to the plate umpire before that night's game with Milwaukee.

Zimmer was hired by Chiles to succeed Pat Corrales, who was fired after the 1980 season. Zimmer had a two-year record of 95-105, bringing his career managerial record to 621-603. He came to Texas after being fired at Boston.

Chiles gave Zimmer the ax Monday morning, but asked him to manage until the end of the team's three-game series with the Brewers.

"The man says, 'You're fired, but you're going to manage Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.' People in the baseball world are laughing about it right now," Zimmer said.

"You don't fire a man and then tell him to go to work. That's a very strange thing in baseball."

Chiles had given Zimmer public votes of confidence more than once this season. The latest was Sunday, although Chiles admitted after the news conference Wednesday night that the decision to fire Zimmer was made last week.

In other baseball news Thursday, storm clouds gathered over Commissioner Bowie Kuhn after National League owners called a special meeting to consider his re-election.

Kuhn's status was among the topics to be discussed Aug. 18-19 in San Diego at baseball's regular summer meetings. But the NL will convene a day earlier to consider the commissioner's situation.

The special meeting was requested by the New York Mets, St. Louis Cardinals and Houston Astros, all reported to be against Kuhn's re-election to a third term. If those teams get a fourth NL club to join them, they could force Kuhn's resignation or firing.

If the Americans qualify for the Olympics, the top 26 players — three goalkeepers, 15 forwards and eight defensemen — will form the U.S. Olympic squad, selected from the 1983 Festival in Colorado Springs, Colo.

The 1984 Olympians will embark on a 55-to 60-match exhibition tour. They will play teams from the National Hockey League, the Central Hockey League and the American Hockey League plus the Canadian and Soviet national squads.

"That's the way we did it in 1980 and I thought it was done very well," said Vairo.

Pat Day wins at Arlington

CHICAGO (AP) - Pat Day bagged his fourth win of the day when he rode Dazzling Discovery to a come-from-behind victory Thursday in the $10,000 Dahlia Purse at Arlington Park.

Lady Munnings finished second, two lengths back in the one and one sixteenth mile turf race for fillies and mares. Golden Highlights got third before a crowd of 8,856.

Dazzling Discovery returned $4.40, $3.20 and $2.40 and was timed in 1:46 4-5. Lady Munnings paid $12.50 and $4.00. Golden Highlights show price was $2.40.

Day has 97 winners for the first 63 days of the meeting, seven less than leader Randy Romero, who was blanked Thursday.

Sports Festival becomes 'Salukinized'

Double gold week for VonJouanne

By Jackie Rodgers
Staff Writer

Roger VonJouanne won his second gold medal and set another Festival record in as many days Wednesday at the National Sports Festival.

VonJouanne finished in a dead heat with Dennis Baker of Portland, Ore., in the 200-meter butterfly at the Indiana University Natatorium in Indianapolis. The two swimmers had a time of 2:01.48 to break the previous record of 2:04.37, set at last year's Festival by John Denney. Each received a gold medal.

"I thought I came on really strong at the end," said VonJouanne, a three-time All-American. "I'd rather put in the effort for the time than win the gold."

VonJouanne had also set a Festival record and won the gold in the 400-meter individual medley on Tuesday.

What a career the former Saluki is having. He holds eight SIU-C swim records. Last year during his junior season, he broke the U.S. record in the 200-meter

He topped those achievements a few weeks later at the U.S. Swimming Championships when he scored a first place finish in the 200 butterfly, a third in the 200 individual medley and sixth in the 100 backstroke.

And this summer, the All-American athlete, along with 25 other outstanding student athletes, received a post-graduate scholarship from the National Collegiate Athletic Association. The $2,000 scholarships will be used by VonJouanne for his graduate studies in thermal and environmental engineering at SIU-C.

Beside VonJouanne, other Salukis who have won medals at the Sports Festival include Robert Jones and Mike Gellinger, incoming freshmen, who were part of the gold medal winning baseball team, former Saluki David Lee, a silver for the intermediate hurdles, John Sayre, a bronze for the decathlon, and SIU-C student Dan Casebeer, a silver in cycling.

SIU-C recruit is game saver

By Jackie Rodgers
Staff Writer

"It was great. Yeah, it was really great."

That's the description Robert Jones gives of his experience at the National Sports Festival. The Maywood native will be entering SIU-C in the fall on a baseball scholarship.

If he performs the way he did at the Festival, Coach Itchy Jones will have an All-American candidate who plays tough defense, has good speed and can hit any pitch anywhere.

The North team might not have won the gold medal without Jones. It was his solo homerun in the seventh inning of the championship game against the East team that broke a 4-4 tie and proved to be the game winning blow. Jones also smacked a grand slam and had five RBI in an earlier Festival game.

It was the consensus of the media covering the Festival that if a most valuable player award was given, Jones would have been the recipient.

"Yeah, that's what they say," Jones said. "I guess I did so well because I was representing so many people; not just Northern America, but my family and friends, as well as SIU. I just did the best I could."

Jones said participating in the Festival was the best experience he has ever had. He said he has played in quite a few all-star games and tournaments, but nothing was ever run so smoothly. The thing that struck him most was the camaraderie that developed between the players.

"I didn't want to leave the guys. We all came so close. That was a great experience, too. I really got to know a guy on the team, Mike Gellinger, who's also going to SIU on a baseball scholarship. We're going to try to room together at school now."

Jones said that he believes the close-knit relationships on the North team were the reason they won the gold medal.

Jones paused and sighed when he was asked about his game winning homerun in the championship game.

"Oh man, that was the best," he said. "I was just flying after that one. I knew I had hit it hard, but I didn't think it was going over the wall, so I was running my hardest. When I got to second base, I saw the umpire give the homerun signal. Oh, man, it was great."

Jones said he would try to make the Olympic team in 1964. Baseball is not usually Olympic sport, but the host country of the Olympics, in this case the United States can add an exhibition sport. Baseball will be the exhibition sport in Los Angeles in 1964.

A first-round pick of the Cincinnati Reds in the June draft, Jones elected to attend SIU-C instead. He cites Itchy Jones and a college education as his reasons.

"I think Itchy Jones is one of the best baseball coaches around," he said. "I trust him and like him, and I know he'll make me a better player."

"I also wanted to get a college education. You can't play ball forever. I like the environment and area around SIU."

Jones said he would major in communications and minor in business. He said he is looking forward to his first year in college.

But until he comes down to Carbondale, he can spend the rest of the summer savoring the memories of the Sports Festival.

U.S. hockey team fighting to survive

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Lou Vairo says he feels no pressure as the United States Olympic ice hockey coach, two years after America's dramatic, unexpected gold medal in the Lake Placid Winter Games.

The most heat, he said, will come from coaching the 1963 national squad.

"It's simple. If we don't do well in the World Championships, there won't be any U.S. Olympic team in 1964," the 37-year-old Brooklyn native said Thursday during a news conference at the National Sports Festival.

The American sport has tumbled since the undefeated march through the 1960 Olympics, which included a stunning victory over the Soviets.

Now it has tumbled so far that the U.S. team finished eighth and last in last year's World Championships in Finland, dropping them into the "B" pool for the 1963 world playoffs in Tokyo.

Therefore, to qualify for the 1964 Olympics, the Americans must finish in the top four in the "B" pool at Tokyo next March.

Vairo, a roller hockey player as a New York kid, concedes his first task of qualifying the Americans for the 1964 Olympics will be difficult.

"We won't have the professional players or the college talent we've had previously because of the time of the year in 1963. We'll have to scramble to pick up players — players who are out of work," he said.

The coaches will pick the top 22 players from the festival and train them several months in Bloomington, Minn., beginning in August.
