Carter again vows grain embargo ban

By Jim Wisuri
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

President Warren Brandt and George Mace, vice-president for university relations, escorted the Georgia Tech campus and the Democratic to the stage. Mace and Bruce Swinburne, vice-president for student affairs, joined Carter on the podium.

The Free Forum area, south of Anthony Hall, was almost full for the speech, according to Bob Harris, assistant director of campus security. Harris said if the people who were perched in trees, standing on the U.S. 51 overpass the Parking Garage, and in the bleachers of McAndrew Stadium across the street, had all squeezed into the Free Forum, the area might have been filled.

Campus security estimated that between 12,000 and 15,000 people attended. Most were students.

The crowd was generally receptive to Carter chanting. "We want Carter" as he approached the stage. After he was introduced by Gov. Walker, the chanting started again. "You got me, repiled, beaming the tooth grin which has become his trademark. Walker and Howlett were both boozed by the audience when introduced before Carter.

When Carter first greeted the crowd from the stage, he was welcomed by some flying peanuts from the audience directly in front of the podium.

Supporters of President Ford, independent candidate Eugene McCarthy, and libertarian candidate Roger MacBride demonstrated at the speech, but none had the impact of the booming voice of repentance from behind the podium.

Sources close to the Carter campaign said the incessant heckling of Max Lynch, an evangelist preacher from Terre Haute, Ind., might have been the reason Carter shortened the scheduled 30 minutes address to ten minutes.

Lynch had been thrown off the Georgia Tech campus, and that he often preaches in Terre Haute.

She said he does not belong to an organized church, but that he founded his own church in the town.

Carter finished his speech and left with his entourage of Secret Service personnel, leaving the man to find his own way down the tree, which as it turned out, was a hazardous journey.

Two unidentified individuals, a man and woman, climbed up the tree after the man, while an angry heckling crowd of several hundred waited below. The man climbed up above Lynch and attempted to loose the preacher's grasp to a limb. The woman grabbed Lynch's coat with both hands (not holding onto the tree with anything), and began to tug strenuously. The crowd below egged them on with shouts of "jump," as the press photographers tried to get a better angle to take pictures.

After about ten minutes, several police showed up and ordered the three out of the tree. The man who was whisked behind closed doors at Anthony Hall while the man and woman melted into the crowd.

Lynch said the reason he was up a tree was because it gave him a good vantage point from which to speak and to see Carter.

Student molotov cocktail to return to class

By Ann Schottman

John P. Carey, the student who set himself on fire in a speech class Monday, was discharged from the UH Health Service Tuesday and intends to return to class outpatient.

Carey, a sophomore in accounting, poured some gasoline on himself as fire for an introduction to a speech in a public speaking class in the Wright Building.

Carey said Tuesday that he "just wanted to get a reaction." He said he thought the act would be a good introduction to his speech and "what do we do when something's on fire?"

Unfazed by the activity his flaming introduction caused, the class proceeded and gave his speech, which lasted about two minutes. He then walked out of the class and went to the Health Service for treatment.

Carey said that his doctor told him his burns will take about five days to heal.

Carey started the fire in the hall outside the classroom, pouring gasoline on the floor of the hallway. He was wearing and setting a match to it. He said a woman from another class saw Carey set himself on fire.

The instructor had already started screaming "Get out and pulled the fire alarm." Carey said she was the one that "caused all the commotion." He said the fire was due to the time the alarm was answered.

Then one of the guys in the class tackled me and pulled me down to the floor and wrapped the sheet around us. That pretty well put the fire out, and then they packed the curtains around me." Carey said.

When Carey first walked into the classroom door, the fire was already out.

A friend of Carey's, Mike "Mur" Maryarski, was standing by with a wet sheet to put out the fire, "That helped some, but not much," Maryarski said.

Then Carey pulled some curtains down to wrap around himself.

"Then one of the guys in the class tackled me and pulled me down to the floor and wrapped the sheet around us. That pretty well put the fire out, and then they packed the curtains around me," Carey said. He said about two or three other members of the class helped put the fire out, he said. The other members of the class were "shocked" and were millenials, Maryarski said.

"A few people in the class got excited and a few knew what to do and didn't panic," Carey said.

When Carey first walked into the class on fire, members of the class "yelled and screamed," Maryarski said. He said the teacher, Ricardo de la Piedra, was "shaking as bad as we were." (Continued on page 2)

Voice from treetop exhorts rally: "Repent!"

By H.B. Koplowitz

Mayor Carter opened the Jimmy Carter rally at the Free Forum Tuesday were treetop hecklers were set, but it was not coming from the Democratic candidate.

Carter opened his mouth to speak, a nattily dressed man, perched in a tree behind the speakers platform. Carter railed against the evils of a Republican administration and promised, "There will never be another grain embargo while Jimmy Carter is in the White House."

Carter delivered no new statements as he had been hinted at by his advance man, Dan Lee, relying instead on his standard indictments of the last eight years of Republicans in the White House—unprecedented high numbers of unemployed, a rising national deficit, and American military and intelligence atrocities in Cambodia, Chile, and Angola, and at home.

"And all people have been excluded from the process of government by 'the wall built around Washington' by the Republicans," Carter said.

"I come to this rally because you believe in our country. Let's fight together OK!" Carter said.

As Carter was speaking, Wham Building, the Free Forum, was at Columbia, S. C, as he headed to the final-Tree. He was scheduled to appear in the Quad Cities Tuesday and the Chicago area later Tuesday.

Flaming student had been in volunteer fire department

De la Piedra did not know that the fire was by Garley and happened while he was at school. After the fire was put out, de la Piedra took a few moments to sit down and think about his speech that day. When Carey did get a copy of the tape in the hall and did not hear it because he was "trying to explain to the other child what was going on." Most of the newspaper reports were saying that the fire started when the parents heard the story 300 miles north of Los Angeles as if it had made it sound like I was some kind of radical. I knew the story would never get straight unless someone talked to me.

Carey said he was sorry the Associated Press had wrongly said that the tape was a story because "people that don't know the whole story will think I'm a sxie." Then he added ruefully, "People that do know the whole story go to I think I'm an idiot here.

Carey said he did not have any urgency to pursue the story, and neither did he have any intention to have a public hearing if he was why he got burned. He did not get any burns, and the only reason he had on a shirt which kept the flames from reaching his skin.

He turned up to the Health Service by the Carbondale fire rescue van, which had responded to the fire alarm. "The driver was pretty nice about it, considering he didn't know the story I was trying to put across. He just wanted to do the fire." Carey had jumped in the truck and said 'Get going. I just walked out and take me to the hospital. I'm burned.' He said. "From what, steam?" and I didn't understand what was going on. I just walked out and said, 'Get going. I just walked out and take me to the hospital. I'm burned.' He said. "From what, steam?" and I didn't understand what was going on. I just walked out and take me to the hospital. I'm burned."

Carey emphasized that he did act with serious intentions and did not intend as a protest or stunt.

Arabs endorse Lebanon peace plan

CAIRO (AP)--Arab leaders endorsed a peace plan for Lebanon at the end of a two-day summit conference, in the hope that this may solve the issue of whose troops should serve in a 30,000-member force. The dispute centers around Syria's demand that the 21,000 Syrian soldiers already in Lebanon be replaced by an international peacekeeping force, and Israel's demand that it withdraw its 10,000 soldiers from Lebanon. The Lebanese government, which is hostile to the idea of an international peace force, is expected to reject the Syrian plan.

Resolution approved at the summit meeting rejected the partition of Lebanon into Christian and Moslem states, vowed to respect Lebanon's sovereignty and protect the Palestinian guerrillas now based in Lebanon, and called on each Arab state to contribute to the reconstruction of Lebanon. The leaders also agreed to a 30,000-member force, that allowed the Palestinians to attack Israel from staging areas in southern Lebanon.

Ford says his White House isn't 'imperial'

CHICAGO (AP)--President Ford said Tuesday night that a fundamental difference between his presidency and that of his predecessor, Richard Nixon, is that this one does not have an "imperial" White House.

The President was asked on an Illinois statewide television show how his administration differs from Nixon's. "There is one very, very fundamental difference," Ford replied. "Under President Ford there is not an imperial White House.

Nixon tapes cleared by court for broadcasting

By Harry F. Rosenfeld

WASHINGTON (AP)--The U.S. Court of Appeals cleared the way Tuesday for broadcasting of the Nixon White House tapes played at the Watergate cover-up trial.

"The tapes played at trial are no longer confidential," the court ruled in a 5-1 decision.

The ruling also permits the sale of the tapes as phonograph records.

Included is a "rolled" tape called "smoking gun" tape of June 23, 1972, when former President Nixon, in a taped phone conversation, approved the break-in at the Democratic National Committee headquarters in the Watergate complex.

Also among the tapes played at the trial is a March 21, 1973, discussion by former Nixon counsel John Dean, that the FBI's investigation of the Watergate break-in six days earlier, he had been told, "could be in play and could be marketed and publicly distributed."

But, said Barenz, "this is essentially a total redraft. It provides a singularly weak basis for a court to interfere with the exercise of a long-established common law right."

WATERGATE: State Department's Gerold A. Gesell had ruled that could be done, provided the microfilm was not provided for the public with a view to "unlawful or unprivileged use. Later he reviewed proposals and found them unacceptable. U.S. District Judge John S. Sirica, who presided over the cover-up trial, then denied the applications, saying any such action had to wait until appeals were exhausted by the four men convicted in the case, John N. Mitchell, H. R. Haldeman, John D. Ehrlichman and Robert C. Mardian.

But the Department recently upheld the convictions of all except Mardian, but all others say they would carry the appeals process to the Supreme Court.

Involved are 30 tapes played during a three-month trial. Transcripts of the tapes were published in whole or in part in newspapers around the country.

The opinion, written by Chief Judge David L. Bazelon, said that by definition the tapes were "confidential," and that Nixon, who opposes their release, "has the right to insist that it somehow would be "unseemly" to allow tapes of White House conversations to be marketed and publicly distributed."

But, said Barenz, "this is essentially a total redraft. It provides a singularly weak basis for a court to interfere with the exercise of a long-established common law right."

Jimmy Carter rally gets mixed emotions

By Gail Wagner
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Curiosity may have killed the cat, but it didn’t hurt Jimmy Carter, Democratic presidential candidate, too much Tuesday, judging from a sampling of onlookers at the noon rally in the Free Forum Area.

Most of the spectators asked, said “curiosity” was their primary reason for attending, “I never saw anybody who was going to be President,” said Robert Wallwin, junior in industrial technology, who admitted he is still an undecided voter.

Mark Palmquist, sophomore in accounting, attended the rally because of Carter’s “notoriety,” and said he already had heard everything he had to say.

After seeing President Ford at Williamson County Airport last spring, Bob Saltzman, graduate student in accounting, said they had seen the 1972 Democratic candidate for president, George McGovern, when he brought his campaign to Southern Illinois Airport. Their only complaint about the Carter rally was “we wished they’d had it in a different place” than the Free Forum Area.

What prompted Dave Luch, senior in art, to attend the rally? Was it curiosity or political preference? “I had a break in between classes. Otherwise I don’t think I would have gone,” he said.

Economy is good if you think it is

By Arthur Hoppe
of Chronicle Features Syndicate

Like all Presidents, Mr. Ford keeps going around saying how the economy is going to get better and better. It's as though he thought saying it was so might make it so. Well, he's right.
The only thing wrong with the economy is that hardly anyone understands it.

Economists understand it least of all. That's why their predictions are usually wrong. Their trouble is that they think of the economy as a racialized beast driven by mysterious forces, sized by unfathomable moods, smashing through psychological barriers to destroy the innocent in order to fulfill its strange, secret desires.

Nonsense! The truth is the economy happens to be the most obedient, obsequious, donwrigntawnrning creature imaginable. The little-known First Law of Economics captures its personality perfectly:

The economy always does precisely what everybody thinks it will do.

At the moment, for example, we are plagued with inflation and unemployment, even though economists had long held you couldn't have both at the same time.

The reason we have both, of course, is that everybody thought we'd have both. And the economy has done precisely that, which it always does.

"Hey!" everybody said. "This inflation is awful. What is the sense of sticking my paycheck in the bank when what it would buy last week means in a couple of years? Let's live it up instead and buy a loaf of bread—before the price goes sky high. Tomorrows just taj, too!"

The price of bread went sky high. Just as everybody thought it would.

At the same time, however, everybody was worried about something else—buying a new car. So everybody avoided buying a new car. The auto industry was worried too. He may never have heard of the Ford Fallacies, but it would go confidently ahead with its bubble gum futures. And bang! The Ford Fallacies were self-fulfilling.

Ford's plea to sacrifice for military wrong

In the third debate with Jimmy Carter, President Ford was asked whether the people should be prepared to make sacrifices in the military and for holding the lid on spending.

The people are well aware that sacrificing for the military means spending more for the military. So holding the lid on spending for the Ford, military spending, but instead it means that everybody is being kept busy for the personal goods and services which are needed by the people for their own welfare.

The Ford Fallacies are self-fulfilling.

Housing cafeterias kept bug-free as possible

This letter is in reference to the insect problem that appears to be especially prevalent in the supermarket.

"Welcome!" the food salesmen at the supermarket. "We've got all the insect protection you could wish for. We have the latest fogging equipment and the latest insecticides to keep down the insect problem at the supermarket."

In reply, President Ford said the people should be prepared to make sacrifices for the military and for holding the lid on spending.

Socialist Workers Party offers alternatives

Probably the most interesting aspect of the California revolutionary campaign, and the most revealing as to what fences Ford is ready to offer, are the millions of people who replied to his call. An estimated 70 million, reflecting a profound distrust of the present course of alienation, will not cast their ballots this fall.

Carrie calls these people wards of the state and places an alarm at this "disturbing trend." But what is alarming is the decision of the majority of people, who work for a living, and who are anxious to solve the problems of racism, sexism, unemployment, war, high prices, and poverty.

While the Democratic and Republican parties are that they are parties of big business, by big business, and for big business. The subservience of these two "less successful" parties to their only great tool, the corporations, to keep their profits high, is at the heart of our political problem. The problem is that of both parties.

The profit system needs racism and sexism, and they need reactionary regimes in southern Africa, Latin America to protect U.S. overseas investments and U.S. business.

Even Eugene McCarthy's "people's presidential campaign" is really so far apart from Ford and Carter that people can see the need of a revolution of rising expectations, and of revolutionary action against the economy. In other words, learn to live with lower wages, higher prices, fewer jobs, and closed-down businesses. It's a war and "price" controls, while auto workers are laid off, heads high, to go confidently ahead with a new car. Nobody's got any money left.

Economy is good if you think it is

Like all Presidents, Mr. Ford keeps going around saying how the economy is going to get better and better. It's as though he thought saying it was so making it so. Well, he's right.

The only thing wrong with the economy is that hardly anyone understands it. Economists understand it least of all. That's why their predictions are usually wrong. Their trouble is that they think of the economy as a recalcitrant beast driven by mysterious forces, sized by unfathomable moods, smashing through psychological barriers to destroy the innocent in order to fulfill its strange, secret desires.

Nonsense! The truth is the economy happens to be the most obedient, obsequious, donwright-fawning creature imaginable. The little-known First Law of Economics captures its personality perfectly:

The economy always does exactly what everybody says it will do.

At the moment, for example, we are plagued with inflation and unemployment, even though economists had long held you couldn't have both at the same time. The reason we have both, of course, is that everybody thought we'd have both. And the economy thought it would.

When inflation was at its height, we had high interest rates. And we were right. When we had a recession, we had high unemployment. And we were right.

All we need to do is tell the economy what we want it to do, and it will do it. We don't need to think or worry about the economy. We can just say, "We want inflation," and it will have inflation. We want unemployment, and it will have unemployment. We want recession, and it will have recession.

And when we want our unemployment and recession to end, we can turn around and tell the economy to get rid of them. We can say, "We want full employment and a balanced budget," and it will do it.

The First Law of Economics is infallible. If we don't have what we want, we can just say, "We want it," and the economy will do it.

However, the First Law of Economics is only applicable to the national economy. It doesn't apply to local economies or to individual economies. But it does apply to the national economy.

The economy always does what everybody says it will do.

Housing cafeterias kept bug-free as possible

This letter is in reference to the insect problem the housing areas at SIU (Truthful Housing Hall, Greenbell is a problem). It should be made clear to the occupants of the housing areas that the pest control operation on this campus is directed to the food service areas only. The pests are sprayed on a scheduled basis, which includes spraying food service areas at least once a week. Also food service areas include rooms and snack bars. However, with the amount of traffic coming in and out of the buildings and students populating these areas, Welcome sign is left for flies. As for the reaches, the problem lies in the fact that the students destroy the deliveries are made. The insects have been found in the stores, the store rooms, the roaches are free to roam. We are trying to ignore this by polluting all the food service buildings and cleaning premises to keep the reach problem under control.

The food service areas that are sprayed with chemicals are kept in a sanitary condition for the people of the health and wellness. The new EPA law requires that all sprays of pesticides be done under direct supervision of a state licensed applicator. If the question arises in the minds of students, "Why don't we see these pests every day?" This is because in this office, as are many University offices, we are trying to keep them out. Thus, much of the spraying is done at night when food service areas are closed.

It is the hope of the people of this department that this letter has shed some light on this pest problem. This office is doing everything possible to keep this problem out of the future. Further questions should be directed to Housing Safety Office.

Socialist Workers Party offers alternatives

Probably the most interesting aspect of the Ford presidential campaign, and the most revealing as far as what Ford stands for, is the whole question of what he is willing to offer, is the millions of people who will do what Ford says. The estimated 79 million, reflecting a profound distrust of Ford and his ideas, will cast their ballots this year.

Carl calls these people cowards and stupid and warns of a "disturbing trend." But Mr. Ford's own rules of survival and the colleagues he has at stake in the "two-party system" is the growing recognition that the Democrats and Republicans offer no solutions to the problems facing the majority of people, who work for a living, and who want the same solution to the problems of racism, sexism, unemployment, war, high prices, and poverty.

What is wrong with the Democratic and Republican parties is that they are parties of big business, by big business, and for big business. The subversion of these parties is to see them instituting laws, regulations, and corporation's, to keep their profits high, is the best that they can do. If both parties. The profit system needs racism and sexism and militarism and war against women. They need cutbacks in public schools and libraries and other social services. They need unemployment and poverty and disease and death. They need repressive laws in southern states and long prison terms for dissenters. They need to keep America to keep U.S. oversea imperialists and hiring people to keep us down.

Even Eugene McCarthy's "peaceful, prudent" campaign was really so far apart from Ford and Carter. McCarthy certainly saw a problem in the Vietnam war, and he needed a revolution of raising expectations of people, and data on traditional and new social policies and ideas to get the economy. "In other words, learn to live with lower wages, higher prices, fewer jobs, and closed-down hospitals. The price is wage and "price" controls, while taking away the basic freedom of the people far beyond living costs. Past controls are strictly enforced, while prices are allowed to rise without any restraint. The independence of his campaign became impossible when, as a cabinet member, two current Ford appointees and the police commissioner opposed his policy to prevent the professional behavior of the police from repressing people. For a first-time attorney general, whose job would include enforcing pertaining to altered school desegregation which, in Boston, he has attempted to undo.

The only real alternative is the Socialist Workers Party, which is led by Peter Camejo and Willie Mae Reid.

Priorities questioned at CCHS

A big crowd hardly knew the small size of the Illinois Board of Education for Carbondale Community High School. The students were. Students were, for the most part, adjusting to the presence of the car that which justified salaries increase ranging from $2 per hour to $10 per hour. Many of the students, who were "just" teachers, received a weekly average of $1400, about $3000 a year, 1976-77. Additionally, a per capita levy is due on our Board for their valuable services. This Board is empowered by the construction of an administrative structure which will be utilized at least fifteen or twenty times in its course of service. There is only a little matter of a school librarian. Carter came, saw and conquered. . . nothing

By James Santori and Robert Wren

It was billed as an "old time rally" for Jimmy Carter. Several thousand persons, Jackson County residents as well as SIU students, gathered on the campus Free Forum to hear what was supposed to be the official campaign launch. In contrast to the Democratic presidential candidate had alluded to a major statement that was to be included in the speech.

But nothing happened. The speech was closer to 10 minutes than the planned 30 minutes. His penchant for talking in generalities shined through. It was a lukewarm, uninspiring speech. Perhaps the Carter campaign speech merely regurgitated the pap he's been giving for years.

The creation of an impression with zealots Carter supporters. The majority were either curiosity seekers or people hoping the candidate would say something about themselves. Nothing of that sort appeared, however.

By Don McLeod

The industrial heartland, where President Ford is supposed to have his greatest strength and where the presidential nominating convention will be held, is too close to call as the race enters the stretch drive.

"It's pretty much a toss-up all across this city," said one Slim Hope supporter. "It's probably going to be decided in the last two days of the campaign." If Carter left SIU with more votes than he came here with, it should be considered a political miracle, given the fact that the dairy state almost never votes Democratic in a presidential election.

Ford has admitted he made a mistake and that he was "left speechless" by the Iowa results, according to one SIU editorial. The reception for the Democratic presidential candidate has been lukewarm.

The Carter campaign claims spot in the race to win the state. But with the Democratic nomination all the more incredible, No wonder people were asking "Jimmy who?"

Analysis shows Midwest crucial to presidential race

In Illinois you can find polls going either way, but Carter probably has the edge. His best showing is the Chicago Sun-Times straw poll which gives him a 35 to 45 lead over Ford.

In Ohio, Ford took an early lead, Carter's strategic choices have been broader, but his managers know they still must beat Ford somewhere in the Midwest if they are to clinch the presidency.

State-by-state here's how the Midwestern battlegrounds are decided:

ILLINOIS: Chicago has more citizens of Polish descent than any other city in the world except Chicago itself. The ethnic issue may pinch Ford here, too, Senate Majority Leader Hubert Humphrey did his campaigning with pride.

CHICAGO: The ethnic issue may pinch Ford here, too, Senate Majority Leader Hubert Humphrey did his campaigning with pride. Ford won here narrowly by 54 percent to 46 in a 1964 election.

DETROIT: There are more blacks in Detroit than in any other city in the world except New York City, and Detroit has the largest concentration of African-Americans. If the Eastern European thing is going to hurt Ford anywhere, it should be in the Chicago industrial Midwest.

MICHIGAN: Ford's biggest problem has been a lack of visibility in his homeland, where Ford is clearly understood to be his own man.

OHIO: No Republican has ever been elected without carrying Ohio and its 25 electoral votes. Ordinarily this would be a safe Republican state, but Carter has built up strength in the industrialized Cleveland and Toledo areas and parlayed it with support in the Appalachian southeast.

The ethnic issue may pinch Ford here, too, Sen. Bob Taft Jr., himself in a tight re-election race, was so concerned about the Eastern European gaffe that he called on Ford to come to Cleveland and clarify it. There are 440,000 Eastern Europeans in Ohio, with 11 electoral votes, has a liberal tradition, but has gone against an incumbent Republican president only twice, and is looking at the same state, Lincoln, with 10 electoral votes.

MICHIGAN: This is Ford's hometown, which he represented as a congressman from Grand Rapids for years. It is a primary state that Ford has to favor a native son and 21 electoral votes for Ford.

But Detroit has one of the largest concentrations of urban workers and is an unemployment rate hovering around 10 per cent. The union, splintered in 1972, are now solidly behind Ford, who also enjoys the support of a good state party organization.

Ford's biggest problem has been a lack of visibility in his homeland, where he probably opened himself to a disadvantage. His campaign organization is beginning to come around and put a dozen caravans on the road last week.

WISCONSIN: The Ford organization is sending a million pieces of mail into the dairy state in the closing days of the campaign, and Carter is matching it. Both sides see this as a critical state.

Wisconsin, with 11 electoral votes, has a liberal tradition, but has gone against an incumbent Republican president only once in this century, in Herbert Hoover in 1928.

But Republicans are worrying over a disaffection among the state's farmers which they find hard to explain. Without a good farm vote it would be difficult for Ford to overcome Carter's expected strength in Madison, seat of the state university, and in the industrialized Milwaukee area, and in the Green Bay and including the metropolitan Milwaukee area.

The state also has a high ethnic quotient which may be sensitive to the Eastern European issue.

The difference could lie in a Democratic strategy, aided by power of labor allies, which is concentrating on turning out Democratic voters. Republicans are trying the same tactic, although with not quite the organization Carter has.

Carter's best state in Illinois is Chicago, with 13 electoral votes, is the home of Earl Butz, the agriculture secretary who resigned after being caught in some of the farm bloc. Carter's Illinois victory here adored Butz, especially the large grain vote there, and also a dominant under Ford administration.

But Butz's departure is likely to hurt Ford. Even if his farm bloc doesn't switch to Carter, they may just stay in the fields on election day. The black vote, already in Carter's corner, may be more highly motivated now.

Halloween party scheduled

By Melissa Malikovich
Halloween is being celebrated this year as "all souls" can join in the festivities. The celebration begins Wednesday evening with a hypnotism demonstration and performance by Larry Garrett, curator of the Student Center Programming Committee, said he will "display feats of hypnotism" from 8 p.m. to 10 p.m. in Student Center Ballroom B. The show will be free.

A mime performance by Tim Settles starts at 8 p.m. on Thursday night. Settles specializes in comic pantomime and will perform his free show in Ballrooms A and B.

Radio show talks about dark horse
If you can't decide whom to vote for in this year's presidential election, WIDB's "Contact" program at 7 p.m. Wednesday may give you a few more insights. WIDB's Joe Paschen will talk to representatives of Eugene McCurdy's campaign, an Independent candidate for president and members of the Center-Monada Democratic campaign for president.

Paschen will guide the questioning of the representatives on difficulties faced by third party candidates in going against the "big parties."
The results of the study were presented at the recent clinical congress of the American College of Surgeons, by Dr. James M. Larkin, professor of surgery at the University of New Mexico school of medicine and the Veterans Administration Hospital, Albuquerque.

Larkin and his colleagues, Drs. W. Sterling Edwards and Daniel E. Smith, anesthetized the patients, then heated these bodies to about 100 degrees with tubes of heated gas to the lungs and a heated water blanket wrapped around them. Larkin told a news conference that 14 of the patients had shrinkage or disappearance of the tumors. In addition, he said, the quality of remaining life for many was improved because they had less pain, regained their appetites and gained weight following the treatment.

“...we are very excited with the results of treating cancer patients with heat therapy,” he said. Similar results were reported earlier this year in another 21 patients treated at the VA Hospital in Brooklyn, N.Y., by Dr. Harry Levene, who used radio-frequency radiation to heat tumors. Heat also is being studied as a possible cancer treatment in Edinburgh, Scotland, and Newcastle, England.

Larkin said researchers do not yet know the mechanism by which heat works to help treat cancer. It is possible, he said, that the heat makes it easier for drugs to penetrate cancer cells or that it may stimulate the body’s immune response to fight cancer. However, he said, it is not yet known which cancers are most amenable to heat treatment. Lung cancer, melanoma and cancers of the stomach, breast and kidney were included in the study.

So far, he said, it cannot be claimed that the treatment cured any of the patients, although six are still alive 11 to 22 months following the treatment. All of the patients were in poor condition when treatment was begun.

Playboy: Ford did not reject offer of interview

By William C. Wertz
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) - President Ford never refused an in-depth interview with Playboy as he contended and the White House twice offered to set up shorter ones, the magazine said Tuesday.

The interviews were never held because of deadlines and scheduling problems, but the White House was "cordial and cooperative," said Playboy, whose interview with Jimmy Carter caused a major campaign controversy.

At a news conference Oct. 20, Ford said, "I reiterate what I said once before. I turned down an invitation by Playboy magazine to have an interview such as Carter did. There are all factual statements."

But a Playboy spokesman said that, in fact, Ford was never offered an "interview such as Carter did," and that the White House cooperated in efforts to set up shorter interviews for articles the magazine was preparing.

Ford said Oct. 20 he refused to be interviewed by Playboy "with an emphatic no" because "I don't think the President of the United States ought to have an interview in a magazine featuring photographs of unclothed women."

Hugh M. Hefner, editor and publisher of the magazine, accused Ford of "an improper and reprehensible attempt to damage the Democratic candidate through guilt by association," as thought granting an interview to Playboy was equivalent to posing naked in the center of the magazine.

"What is most improper in all this," Hefner said, "is the insinuated implication that Republicans in general, and the Ford administration in particular, is above such Playboy association."

The magazine's assistant managing editor, Barry Golson, said Ford never was asked to do a "Playboy interview," a special feature of the magazine which based on a series of long, tape-recorded interviews.

However, Golson said, in September 1974, following the Playboy's publication of a satirical article entitled "I Am Jerry's Brain," the White House called and offered the magazine an opportunity to interview the president.

"The White House press office called Playboy and said that the President had read the article and invited the writer to spend a few days at the White House to see how the real Jerry Ford's brain works," Golson said.

He said the writer had other assignments and did not accept the invitation.

In July of 1975, Golson said, Playboy assigned a novellist to write a profile of the President and wrote Ron Nessen, the White House press secretary, to request access to the White House staff and, if possible, a 30-minute meeting with the President.

"Nessen replied in writing that he would cooperate in the preparation of the article, which would be a presidential interview, but that President Ford's travel plans would make it impossible that month," Golson said.

He said Nessen suggested that Playboy contact him again in the future.

"We clearly did not request the extensive and well-known Playboy interview, and as for the short span we did request, our own deadlines intervened," Golson said.

However, he said, "Our contacts with the White House were cordial and cooperative the very opposite of what President Ford has suggested occurred out of his personal conviction."

Hefner said he had received a telephone call Oct. 19 from President Ford's legal counsel, Benton Becker, seeking confirmation of what Becker said was a "solid rumor" that Carter was paid for his Playboy interview.

"Carter wasn't paid a penny," Hefner said. "This telephone call was quite obviously made with the hope that the Democratic campaign wouldn't be embarrassed by his association with Playboy," Hefner said.

PRESSING PROBLEMS

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Wanted: A computer-programmer to solve a problem, said an emergency announcement issued by a Los Angeles firm. The firm's air-conditioning unit broke down recently, pouring out gallons of water and drenching the floor.

The names of the students participating in the survey will be kept strictly confidential," Spalt said, and they will not be obliged to fill out the questionnaire. The students will be asked to sign a consent form, but the questionnaire will be sent to the Health Service in a separate envelope.

It will be important to have all of the questionnaires returned to the Health Service to make the survey valid," Spalt said. "For example, if only 50 per cent of the questionnaires are returned it is very unlikely that the sample will be truly representative of the entire student population."

After 45 years, man fully pardoned in controversial Scottsboro case

By Rex Thomas
Associated Press Writer

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Forty-five years after it began, "Scottsboro Boy" Clarence Norris won a full pardon from the State of Alabama on Monday and the right to live at last in full freedom.

He had spent five years on death row, years more behind bars and decided living as a fugitive, all for a crime he always insisted he did not commit.

"It's great to be free," Norris said in New York, where he now lives.

First the Alabama Pardon Parole Board and then Gov. George C. Wallace signed a pardon for the 64-year-old laborer who, with eight other young black men, was accused of raping two white women aboard a freight train in Alabama in 1901.

The case became one of the most controversial in the South. Because the alleged rape occurred near Scottsboro in north Alabama and the trial was held there, the defendants became known throughout the world as the "Scottsboro Boys.

Norris, the last of the nine defendants known to be still alive, is working now as a laborer for the City of New York.

He left Alabama after being pardoned in 1946, and the state continued to list him as a parole violator.

The Pardon Parole Board not only pardoned Norris, but in effect also recognized his innocence. By law, the board could pardon him only if it felt there was proof of his innocence.

Now that he is free to do so, Norris said he would go back to Alabama. "I'll go to any state because I'm free," he said. "I wish I had been born and raised in the South. It's one of the most beautiful places in the world."

At a news conference at the New York headquarters of the NAACP, which represented him in pursuing the pardon, Norris said there was a lesson for black people in his pardon.

"Don't ever give up hope," he explained. "Always fight for your rights." Norris said he believed in E'en if I kills you, stand up for your rights"

Norris said he knew something was going to happen Monday and took the day off from work. He said he got the news of his pardon in a Harlem bar when he telephoned the NAACP.

When Norris first inquired about a pardon last summer, he encountered stern resistance from the Pardon Parole Board. The chairman of the board, Norman Usery, said Norris was still a fugitive and would have to return to prison in Alabama before the request could be considered.

Norris said repeatedly he did not want to go back to Alabama.

Usery ultimately changed his mind and in a statement Monday he explained why.

At first, he said, "we did not have any information as to where he was living, where he worked, or what his behavior had been since he left Alabama.

But the official application gave the board the necessary information to investigate this case," the chairman said, "and after verifying this information, I no longer felt that he was a fugitive from justice.

Norris said in a recent interview that if freeing Alabama he lived in Cleveland until 1953, when he went to New York. He is married now, and has two daughters, 20 and 16 years old.

Black voter interest declines steadily over past 10 years

By Dubose Barclay
Associated Press Writer

Black voter participation in national elections has been declining steadily over the past decade, even as the number of black elected officials on the state and local level has soared.

Black registered voters numbered about 52 percent of black population. This may be bad news for Democrats who are hoping for a black voter turnout.

A majority of the decline is in the South, where the number of black officials on the local level, the inroads at the national level have been limited.

Declining voter interest in national elections is characteristic of blacks as well as whites in the degree of non-participation by blacks in elections, according to John Britton of the Joint Center for Political Studies.

The majority of black office holders are in county and municipal posts, such as constable, probate judge, sheriff, coroner and school board member. Many face re-election each year.

Like other business efforts, campaign work is seasonal

By Elizabeth Boudis
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Like pumpkins and Christmas trees, election time is a seasonal business, but with what little time they have, Democratic and Republican headquarters in Carbondale seek maximum production.

Democratic headquarters for state and local candidates is located on South Illinois Avenue directly opposite the train station. Carter-Mondale volunteers retain an office around the corner on Main Street.

Joe Dunn, Democratic volunteer coordinator for Jackson, Franklin and Saline counties, said the locations of both headquarters were chosen for their proximity to the mainstream of Carbondale traffic.

Republican volunteers are less concerned with their locale. Although their headquarters is on Main Street at the West Side Shopping Center, their storefront does not catch the passerby's view. But despite geographic and political differences, the purpose of both headquarters is the same—to encourage voter participation for the party they represent.

Marty Larsen, Republican volunteer and SIU student, said his organization's turned for volunteer work has been good during this election year.

Republican headquarters opened on July 1 and will remain operational until election day, Nov. 2. It is directing its work for local and state candidates and the Ford-Dole ticket.

Dunn said the Democratic headquarters is coordinating its efforts for local and state candidates, with the exception of U.S. Rep. Paul Simon, who has his headquarters stationed in his Carbondale office.

Dunn emphasized, however, that volunteers at the state Democratic headquarters are with the Simon workers "100 per cent.

Stuffy envelopes with campaign material, distributing literature, knocking on doors and making phone calls are chores characteristic of both headquarters.

Both sides agree that voter apathy does not seem as widespread as it had been indicated in elections during the past few years.

Dunn said his Democratic volunteers have found that people are still undecided about certain issues, as is their hope that circulating literature will help enable voters to make more intelligent choices.

Another shared condition of both Republican and Democratic headquarters is the lack of, and large requests for, campaign buttons. Local and state candidate buttons are more abundant, but presidential buttons have become collectors items.

Larsen said campaign buttons were in immediate demand as soon as the Republican headquarters opened in September. He attributed the small amounts of available buttons to more emphasis being placed on media campaigning and said the same is true of bumper stickers.

Both Democratic and Republican volunteers view the SIU campus as an important campaigning area. Students are eligible to vote here after 30 days residency and providing they register.

Dunn said SIU represents four electoral precincts so his volunteers will make a concerted effort to encourage the student vote.

Students comprise a large part of the volunteer campaign forces for both the SIU Democrats and the SIU Republican Club are working with the respective party headquarters.

As short-lived as a campaign headquarters existence is, both groups of volunteers feel a strong sense of friendship and accomplishment from campaigning.

Election day is the grand finale, but win or lose, both headquarters view the day as one to reward their long weeks of hard work.

Gamble student says office needs ‘better definition’

By Bonnie Gamble

Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Student representatives are the only elected members of the SIU Board of Trustees but they are not allowed to vote.

Rob Seely, a graduate student in public relations, communications, represents students on the Carbondale campus to the Board of Trustees. A student trustee is also elected for the Edwardsville campus.

Elected in last spring’s general elections, Seely feels his office needs to be better defined. He says that is what is attracting him to the position.

Through Seely’s efforts an office has been established for the student trustee in the Student Life offices. Before his term ends in May, Seely wants to “solidify the staff and get an advisory board going.”

Why does Seely bother with a job that is not only nonpaid but also non-defined? “I’ve always been fascinated with the concept of the office,” he said. “I knew there were things I could do with it.”

Seely sees his role as an advisory one. He wants to create an executive board with representatives from student government and the Graduate Student Council to “give me a little guidance and start two way communications between myself and the student.”

Seely is the third student trustee since it became state law that university boards of trustees must have student representatives. Matthew Rich was the first student trustee but “Runky” Lightle preceded Seely.

“I believe there are some serious problems with the student trustee having a vote. It might be a conflict of interest,” Seely said.

Trustees are not supposed to be involved in internal university matters Seely said. However, Seely alluded to but would not discuss new developments which might make him change his mind and support a student vote.

Two problems Seely encountered after he was elected were the lack of orientation for the job and not having enough time to get used to the office.

“It takes at least a year for anyone to get used to this office,” Seely said.

Even though Seely will be familiar with the office at the end of his term, he says he will not run for the position again. He will be leaving SIU but even if he were to stay, he wouldn’t run again. “I think it’s the type of office that needs to be filled by many people in it if possible,” Seely said.

He said the last two student trustees were criticized for doing nothing while in office. Seely said this was unfair. “There is much to do, he said, but most of it is not easily visible.”

Thompson politics in Peoria

Anthony told patrons as he served Thompson, who dropped in during a hectic day of campaigning that included speeches in Peoria and a round of campaigning with President Ford.

In Peoria, Thompson hammered his Democratic opponent, Michael Howlett, for being dominated by Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley and for avoiding issues in the campaign.

Garbologist believes wasteful lifestyles reflected in trash can

By Rebecca Barron
News Editor

Eleven to twelve million dollars worth of food is thrown out each year in Tucson, Arizona alone. According to anthropologist and archaeologist from the University of Arizona, Rathje said garbology, the study of garbage, began in 1971 in Tucson and has provided researchers with information about the life styles and consumption of American people today.

"We are what we throw away," said a crowd of about 100 in the Room Center Monday night. He said studying garbage is a much more effective way to learn about the consumer habits than interviewing because of the direct evidence—the garbage can.

The University's findings show that experimenting with foods cause more waste, he said. He added that knowledge of food safety could cut down food waste by as much as 50 per cent. He said, for example, that a lot of people throw away a whole wheel of cheese away rather than cut off a piece of mold thus creating a food hazard.

Rathje said Mexican-Americans show less food waste than Anglo-Americans and attributed it to the redundancy of their meals. He said they were more efficient in incorporating leftovers into their meals than Anglos-Allen. Anglo experiment more with new food. Therefore, they have more waste, Rathje said. He said the study also found that lower income people bought just as much beef as the middle class but used more cleaners.

People tend not to admit all the products they use in interviews. He said 93 per cent of the people interviewed said they never buy beer. However, the "raw data" (garbage) showed that 50 per cent had more than eight cans of beer per week and that some even used as much as a case and a half per week, he said.

He also said food waste increases during food shortages. During the beef shortage in 1975, an incredible increase in beef waste occurred according to the study. Then in 1974, during the vegetable crisis, prices went up and so did the waste of vegetables. He said the same thing happened in 1973 with sugar.

Tucson has chosen as the excavation site, he said, because it is a heterogeneous community. The area was divided into 16 urban census tracts. The sanitation department picks up the garbage and brings it to the students to study. Some patterns in waste were apparent, Rathje pointed out. Caused fruits and vegetables were wasted at one third the rate of frozen fruits and vegetables. Yet industries pour more money and time into the more complicated and expensive process of freezing, he said.

He said fresh fruits and vegetables are the biggest loss. He estimated the waste at $328,000 per year.

He said the average family in Tucson wastes the equivalent of $85 a week which could be saved if people were more knowledgeable about food.

Crowd overflow prompts query on site

CHICAGO (AP) — With Sen. Charles H. Percy leading the way, President Ford made a pair of campaign stops in southern Illinois on Tuesday, and a question about the congressional districts where Republicans are trying to win back House seats from Democrats.

But Ford hit hard on the issue of jobs, saying little about the congressional hopefuls.

"Too many people are out of work," Ford said at Ford City shopping center on the South Side. "We're not satisfied with the progress we've made."

Ford said, though, that "this country has made a tremendous comeback from where we were 18 months ago."

The shopping center is in the main shopping area when Republican Ronald Bushman, Singapore village attorney, is trying to unseat Democratic Rep. Martin Ruizo, who won the traditional Republican seat two years ago.

The crowd, heavily loaded with children and teenagers, guessed Ford would spend several days of his week in votable districts.

Ford was met at O'Hare International Airport by former Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie, his Illinois campaign chairman. At one stop, Percy said, "Dick Ogilvie and I want to make sure this is a great president."

At Ford City, former baseball catcher Joe Gargiulo, now a television announcer, introduced Ford.

"I don't know anything about these things," Gargiulo said. "I don't know anything about nuclear power. I know one thing. I'm a Jerry Ford man."

SPECIAL BRIDGE

NICHOLSON, Pa. (AP) — The TunkhaMock Viaduct, more commonly known as the Nicholson Bridge, has been designated a National Historic Civil Engineering Landmark by the American Society of Civil Engineers.

"We've come to honor the service this bridge has given to the community," said Mayor William H. South, the 4th District Representative for the Nicholson Bridge. "This bridge has been a mainstay of the town for many years, and we're proud to see it honored by the ASCE."
Supporters at airport sound convinced

By John O'Briea

Any voter support problems Jimmy Carter may have in Southern Illinois were not evident Tuesday afternoon as he began his campaign to the Williamson County Airport.

A crowd of about 600 persons lined the ropes near the same spot where Carter's plane — the Peanut One — set down about 11:38, 38 minutes late.

If Carter did not stir mass hysteria, the welcome was considerably warmer than the brisk 53 degree air outside.

After greeting his fellow Democratic politicians, who had kept the crowd warmed up with handshakes before Carter arrived, the presidential hopeful was engulfed by reporters, none of whom had flooded from Peanut Two about five minutes before Carter arrived in the first Peanut.

Carter then briefly addressed the crowd, promising that he would "help them on Jan. 20, inauguration day, in exchange for their help at the polls on Nov. 2. He encouraged the prospective voters to make a "sacrificial effort" to vote to the polls at a time when the temperatures are at stake.

Those among the voters who had hoped to shake Carter's hand were disappointed, however, as he waved good-bye to the crowd and broke into a run to the appearance of Carboudale for the viewing of Carter displayed throughout his appearance. As one woman put it, "No I'm not disappointed, he's already late."

Lloyd Dean of Carbondale said he supported Carter because Carter is a Democrat. Dean said he himself is a Democrat because he "doesn't do anything" and "how you could be anything else.

Dean said he remembers when Carbondale was "two-to-one Republican." But its Democratic now, he said, "because now people have learned to read, and they have newscasts to tell them how to vote."

Most of those interviewed before Carter's arrival indicated strong support for him, and they have newscasts to tell them how to vote.

If Carter support in Southern Illinois is not showing in the polls, Dean said, it is because the pollsters don't call the right people. "The workers are the backbone of the Democratic party, but when they take the polls they don't call the workers, because they are at work."

The debate, Dean said, further confirmed it for him that "Ford isn't for the workers."

He said Ford told what he's for, then Ford told what he's for, and it seems like he's for Ford in all the three.

At least Carter knows what he wants to do. "Omer Yeten of Goreville, who said he has "been in the mines for 53 years," described himself as a laborer and union man. Carter said, "talks to parts of the common man, Ford talks to parts of the uncommon man. Carter is superior in everything he says."

"Any labor man who votes for Ford, Yeten said, "is like a rooster who votes for Colonel Sanders—puttin' his head out to be chopped off.

Arma Lea Merriman, another supporter, said she was glad to see Carter come to Southern Illinois because "it shows he's concerned about us."

She said the charge that Carter is "twioxidized" is not true. "Ford's the one who's twoxidized, " Merriman said. "He didn't do anything till the convention. Now it seems like he'd give you his socks if you asked him for them. I'd tell him so if he was here, too," she said. Carter's "Playboy" interview, she said, showed he's just an ordinary person. That sort of thing happens to every man if they'd just be honest about it."

If Ford is elected, she said, "things will be the same way they have been in the past—no rise in anything. We're in a downtown. Carter will try, he's for the working man. Any working man who votes for Ford won't get anything, and that's just what they deserve."

Jimmy Carter greeted about 600 persons at "Peanut One" at the Williamson County Airport Tuesday at 11:38 a.m. After a brief speech to the crowd, Carter made his first appearance at SIU, where he delivered a campaign speech in the Free Forum Area. Carter's plane was nearly 40 minutes behind schedule. (Staf photo by Peter Zimmerman)
College of Human Resources:

Dean says reorganization would minimize waste

Editor's note: This is the third in a series of articles examining the 11 colleges at the University. The articles take a look at where the colleges are today and at the problems they are facing.

By Steve Bauman
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

In an attempt to strengthen the College of Human Resources, Dean Stanley Smith has submitted to the Board of Trustees a proposal for reorganization of the College.

The reorganization plan would minimize waste and duplication of courses that now exists within the College, Smith said. He added that the realignment would increase the efficiency of the more than 66 faculty members within the College.

Under the plan, the 11 departments making up the college would be combined into five divisions. Each division would be headed by a director and the departments within the division would be headed by a coordinator.

The departments would be divided into divisions according to their compatibility with other departments in the division, said Smith, who has been dean of the College since its formation in 1973.

Other factors in the grouping of departments include the number of undergraduate and graduate majors in each department, the number of full-time employees in the departments and the moneys the departments generate compared to their expenditures.

Under the plan, Rehabilitation Institute, Center for the Study of Crime, Delinquency and Corrections, would become divisions.

The departments of clothing and textiles, design and interior design would stay in the Division of Comprehensive Planning and Design.

The child and family, the family recreation and the management and the food and nutrition departments would form the Human Development Division.

A fifth division would include the departments of social work, community development and ethnic studies. (Economics Department represents Black American studies, but courses will be expanded to include other ethnic groups, thus the name change, Smith said.

If the plan is approved, Smith said, it will strengthen the existing graduate and undergraduate programs and possibly lead to the development of other graduate programs.

Drawing from the faculty and resources of the departments of community development and ethnic studies, the social welfare department may be able to develop a master of social welfare (MSW) degree, Smith said.

Paul Demos, chairperson of the community development department, said the realignment would strengthen the proposed MSW program without taking anything away from the community development graduate program.

Smith said that the department heads of the proposed Comprehensive Planning and Design and Human Development divisions would develop proposals for divisional graduate programs.

Smith pointed out that the Comprehensive Planning and Design division graduate program will be easier to establish because the design department previously had a graduate program.

Davis Pratt, acting chairperson of the Design Department, predicted the graduate program would be reactivated by the end of the school year.

Pratt said the Design Department stopped offering the graduate courses two years ago, because the program was to undergo reorganization.

A committee set up by the department chairpersons of the proposed Human Development Division is reviewing the Home Economics graduate program and will suggest modifications so that the program can be adapted by the division.

Irene Payne, professor of food and nutrition and a member of the committee, said the new divisional graduate program will offer specializations in each of the existing departments.

Payne added the new program would "probably increase the number of graduate students in the program." She estimated 26 students are presently enrolled as the Home Economics graduate program.

The Rehabilitation Institute offers master's degrees in three specializations. Specializations within the department are rehabilitation and administration, rehabilitation counseling and behavior modification.

Guy Renzaglia, director of the Rehabilitation Institute, said the institute which enrolls nearly 200 of the more than 300 graduate students within the college has submitted a tentative proposal to the Graduate School. He hopes it will be approved by Fall Semester, 1977.

Renzaglia said his department has been operating under a system similar to the proposed divisional realignment for a number of years.

He suggested the success of the institute is one of the reasons the College is adapting a similar organizational set up.

Renzaglia cited the national recognition high placement of graduates (95 per cent of the graduates find suitable jobs within six months after graduation) and the large amount of outside money the institute attracts as barometers of success.

Smith pointed out the institute was not combined with other departments in the reorganization because of the specialization already offered by the department and the number of faculty members (25.70).

Similar reasons were given by Smith for allowing the Center for the Study of Crime, Delinquency and Corrections to remain intact and form its own division.

Smith said he is pleased to be a dean and the institute have multi-disciplinary faculties.

E.H. Johnson, acting director of the Center from June 15 until Oct. 1, said plans are underway within the Center for the addition of new undergraduate courses and changes in the graduate program.

Lawrence A. Bennett, became the new director of the Center effective Oct. 1. Bennett formerly was chief of the research division of the California Department of Corrections.

If realignment becomes a reality, Smith said, the College "will be able to more efficiently utilize the positions within the College and at the same time be conducive to quality education."

"One of the rationale for the reorganization is that the College will be able to operate within its present budget," the dean said. The College operates under a budget of approximately $2.5 million.

Another advantage cited by Smith was the increased opportunity for expanded laboratory and field work for the more than 1,700 students enrolled in the College.

Professor: ‘botched hangings’ led to the use of electric chair

WASHINGTON (AP) — Privacy safeguards should be strengthened before banks begin widespread use of computerized payment systems replacing cash and checks, witnesses told a new government commission today.

Alan F. Westmo of Columbia University said the electronic systems will require laws forbidding use of financial records except for purposes authorized by the subject. Use of the computerized systems, now in effect in some areas, is expected to become widespread within a few years. An expert on privacy, told the opening hearing of the National Commission on Electronic Funds Transfers that the systems could allow "unprotected and untended facts of surveillance" over citizens.

The commission was established to make recommendations on new laws that may be needed to adjust to electronic financial systems. Experts predict that payment networks will largely replace the present paper-based system of cash and checks in coming years.

FORD'S first Eastern European remark was right, Polish SIU student says

By Ken Offerman

President Ford was correct in his statement that there is no Soviet domination of Eastern Europe, according to Elzbieta Iwiczka, a graduate student from Poland and a community member in that country.

During the second debate with Jimmy Carter, Gerald Ford declared: "There is no Soviet domination of Eastern Europe, and there will never be under a Ford Administration."

In the weeks since, Ford has been hard pressed to attempting to defend, clarify and redefine his controversial remarks.

Iwiczka, 25, a doctoral candidate in chemistry who has lived in the United States for the past year, has stated that the Soviet Union dominates Poland and Eastern Europe today even more than the United States dominates West Germany and Western Europe.

The ties are more economic and cultural in nature, she said, "I would agree with Ford's statement," said Iwiczka, who believes the President was forced to redefine his remarks for fear of losing popularity in an election year.

Iwiczka said the other seven students from Poland at SIU would be of the same general opinion as herself. She believes that most Americans and citizens of Eastern European extraction have many misconceptions of what is going on in that part of the world today.

"Some European Communists to America have lost track of reality," she said. The era of Soviet domination characterized 30 years ago under Stalin's rule which she referred to as "iron hand and disaster," is in longer relevant.

The Stalinit period is a thing of the past," she added.

What happened in Hungary in 1956 and Czechoslovakia in 1968 could never happen in Poland today according to Iwiczka. The civil disturbances in Poland several years ago which led to a change in government and more economic rather than political decisions, she said.

"In 1968, Dubcek was too idealistic and not very practical," she said, referring to the Czech leader who was ousted after Russian tanks were used to restore a more compatible government in Prague. Iwiczka has traveled throughout Eastern Europe and Russia as well as Western Europe and the United States.

She will return to Poland to teach English at the Technical University of Wrocław. She had studied music before entering college and has a B.S. in biology and B.A. in French and chemistry.

She said the United States is different from European countries because of the emphasis Americans put on materialism at the expense of intellectual relationships. "I will never accept the American way of life. I can see a continuous run for money, which only dehumanizes people," she said.

The Eastern European countries have fewer consumer goods and may be a little backward by Western standards, but they do not have the same problems and exploitation of the West, said Iwiczka.

She added that her American experience has been valuable, because of the importance of having a free exchange of people and ideas between nations. She expressed the hope that her generation will be able to reduce the barriers and to promote better understanding in the world.

New ordinance bars dealers from Liquor Advisory Board

By Steve Hahn

Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

With a divided vote, the Council passed an ordinance barring liquor dealers from the Liquor Advisory Board.

Council members Andy Dukin and Archie Jones voted with Mayor Neal Eckert to abolish the position while Common Council Head Members and Councilman Hans Fischer voted to retain it. The council action came Monday after the Liquor Advisory Board recommended retention of the liquor dealer membership on the basis of a one-year term. The term had been for three years.

Although the council did not specify that the ordinance was intended to remove W. Stephen Kilberg, an alumnus found on the board, it had that effect. The ordinance states that it "shall in full force and effect and after its passage, approval, recording and publication in accordance with law." Ordinances are usually published several days after the mayor signs them following council approval.

Kremlin leaders retain their Politburo positions

MOSCOW (AP) — The likelihood of a Kremlin shakeup faded Tuesday as a two-day meeting of the Communist party's Central Committee ended with the nation's aging leaders all retaining their powerful Politburo posts.

Before the meeting, rumors had circulated that Premier Alexei N. Kosygin, 72, might be nearing the end of his career. Kosygin has been reported to be ill and dropped from public view for three weeks until reappearing earlier this month.

A Moscow radio communiqué at the end of the year's second session announced no changes in the Politburo, whose members, averaging close to 66 years in age, control party and state policy.

Only second-level personnel changes were announced. The election of a new Central Committee secretary, raising the number to 11, and the elevation of three candidate members to full membership in the 29-member Central Committee.

The committee meeting is to be followed on Wednesday by the 13th session of the Soviet parliament, known as the Supreme Soviet, which technically could bring changes in Soviet government positions. But no major changes in the leadership were expected to come following the lack of a party announcement on Tuesday. And no visible steps were expected to be taken toward solving succession problems as Soviet leaders grow older.

"Nothing has changed," one Western diplomat commented at the conclusion of Tuesday's closed session. "As for succession, they're no closer than they were before." Communist party general secretary Leonid I. Brezhnev, who will be 78 in December, made a 10,000-word speech to the Central Committee on Monday and appears to be in robust political health.

The new Central Committee secretary announced in the communiqué in Yakov P. Rybakov, 41, first secretary of the Communist party organization in the Sverdlovsk district.

NEW NAME

CHICAGO (AP) — There's a new name for Northeast College. It's now known as Harry S. Truman College in honor of the 33rd president of the United States. Truman College is one of the City Colleges of Chicago.

At a previous council meeting, Dukin said keeping a liquor dealer on the board gives that member access to information other members of the liquor business do not have. Fischer responded Monday saying the problem could be solved by not allowing the ex-office members (liquor dealers) to have access to confidential information. Hoffmann said after the council meeting that he would not resign because it is "not necessary." He said instead, he would not attend any future board meeting as a board member.

The ordinance states, "The City Council of the City of Carbondale finds and determines that the best interests of the people of the City of Carbondale would be served if the Liquor Advisory Board of the City of Carbondale contained no ex-office members, and no members who are involved in the liquor business." Hoffmann is co-owner of Eastgate Liquor Mart. Members of the local liquor industry had been given a seat on the board to provide the other members with expert advice. Ex-office members have no voting power.

City Atty. John Wornick said the ordinance was drafted at the request of the Carbondale Liquor Commission. The commission made the request in August after suspending the liquor licenses of Stephen, Thomas and Philip Hoffmann and a group of Palmers for mishandling their liquor licenses. Wornick said the ordinance would be difficult to enforce.

Hoffmann was appointed to the board by Eckert in 1969. His current term runs to May 3, 1972.

In other actions, the council terminated a contract with SIU which allowed the University to provide the city with ambulance service.

The termination will take effect Oct. 1. Jackson County will take over the service Nov. 1.

Eckert said the county's service will be cheaper than SIU's.

Teamster pension trustees resigning amid investigation

By Cheryl Deben

Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — The Teamsters Union's largest pension fund announced mass resignations of trustees after the union learned federal inquiries into alleged corruption and ties to organized crime.

A fund spokesman said 11 of the 15 trustees resigned Tuesday in the Central States, Southeast and Southwest Areas Pension Fund, would leave their posts. Another trustee stepped down earlier.

The spokesman attributed the resignations to the fund's "plan to streamline the board to meet rapidly changing economic forces and to respond to them more effectively." The new board members will be appointed Friday.

Attorney: police spying papers were destroyed

CHICAGO (AP) — Intelligence officials on Tuesday charged that 100,000 individuals were destroyed by the Chicago Police Department after it learned a suit was planned for alleged spying.

A lawyer said Tuesday.

A Chicago police spokesman said the city council for An Alliance to End Repression, a group which charged police also destroyed all records revealing the identities of at least 228 persons.

The Alliance and other organizations set in November 1974 that Gutmann said the police department destroyed the records.

Gutmann was appointed to the board on Nov. 30, 1973. He said records at 40 informers were destroyed that month the lawsuit was filed.

Gutmann said the police department report indicated the alliance was planned to file suit and it noted, "It seems this time they were obstructed in proceeding with the lawsuit." It would only seem reasonable that any steps that can be taken to prepare for the possible problems ahead should be taken as soon as possible. It may be too late if postponed."

SIU gymnastics teams to meet in the ‘Battle of the Sexes’

By Dave Hess
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

The SIU women’s gymnastics team annually marks the opening of the season with the Kennedy Memorial Meet, usually an intragrade affair. Saturday, while SIU won 34-0, to improve both their rankings among Valley statistic leaders.

Andre Herrera ran around Northwestern’s defense for 218 rushing yards, his second best effort this season, as the Salukis moved up to 5-1 in the Valley, while the Wildcats dropped to 4-2.

In this season’s meet, however, the women’s team of the Kennedy Memorial Meet, remembering in action first in the opening of the Valley, SIU’s fielded its first women’s team, coached by Herb F. Joe Meade. In his freshman year at SIU, John F. Kennedy was assassinated.

SIU fielded its first women’s team against the “Chambana team” already on its way to Carbondale when the tragedy was announced to the world, the competition was allowed to take place. The entire University, as well as the nation was in mourning.

Herrera is the big name SIU football needs

Andre Herrera did it all last week. He set five SIU records, tied one and set one NCAA record.

And the best achievement that he got came recently.

First, he was named to the UPI Backfield of the Week. Next, he was named the Valley Player of the Week (for the third time this year). And last Monday evening, the Associated Press named Herrera the Back of the Week in the nation.

Those honors place him in a category with such collegiate greats as O.J. Simpson, Jim Plunkett and Archie Griffin.

The only difference this time is that Herrera is from SIU.

One can only imagine what Herrera's performance means for the SIU football program. What it probably means is that it will help bolster SIU's reputation and recruit another great in the 61-year history of SIU football.

Herrera sat out the last nine minutes of the game which could have been enough time for him to break the NCAA record for most yards in one game (350).

Most of the few hundred people who stuck out the rain-drenched game were disappointed in Coach Roy Dempsey's decision to remove Herrera. Some of them still can't figure out his reasoning.

“I promised myself a long time ago that I wouldn't do that type of thing—leave a player in a game just to get a record,” Dempsey said.

He added that he didn't know how close his star running back was to the record.

Griffith also pointed out that Herrera is the first Valley player to achieve the Player of the Week award three times in one year.

Herrera still reaping honors

The recognition continues to pour in for Saluki tailback Andre Herrera.

By Tuesday afternoon, he had already been named the Valley Press Back of the Week part of United Press International's Backfield of the Week.

Herrera's current statistics show him with 1,035 yards on 182 carries for an impressive 5.7 average per carry. He also has 10 touchdowns, and a two-point extra for 62 total points.

After Saturday's performance, he is listed in the SIU record book in six categories, and is within close range of six others.

Of his records, two are in the most—yards and touchdowns—would qualify as records in the Valley, but since SIU is not competing for the conference championship this year in football, the records will go into the book with an asterisk, according to Valley Public Relations Director Gary Griffith.

The Associated Press named Herrera the Associated Press Back of the Week in the nation.

Herrera is the first SIU football player to be so honored.

runner was to the record, but that he might have kept him in the game had Herrera been "only five or 10 yards off the record." Dempsey added that he also wanted to get other players into the game. "We're trying to build a football program," he said.

But the main reason was that Herrera was hurting with a few minor injuries, some that he had going into the game.

"He could have got really busted up if I had left him," Dempsey said. "It's too bad that he didn't get it. Maybe I made a mistake.

No coach, you didn't make a mistake. It's easy to say it was a mistake, but what if Herrera had been injured? What then?"

Also, it would be hard to cut down anything that Dempsey has done this year. He has already turned around the football program more in half a season than he was expected to do in two seasons. (And believe it or not, among the five Division I schools in the state, SIU now has the best record of them all.)

For Herrera, a game like Saturday's should assure him of getting drafted high in the NFL college player draft next February (if there is one). He may not go in the first round or two, but should be a cinch to be picked by the end of the third.

"I'd love to play pro football," Herrera said before practice Tuesday. "It's something that anybody would like to get into."

Since the season is still going on, he is trying to put any thoughts of being drafted out of his mind, but still admits, "I think about it because the scouts have been coming here since practice started.

"But I can't think about it too much or it'll affect my performance."

Everyone thought it would take a long time, and a lot of help to get the football team so much recognition, but little did everyone know that there were SIU players in the state who would do it too fast.

His name is Andre Herrera.

Cagers Ranked

In the first college basketball poll to come out this year, the Saluki basketball team is ranked 19th in the nation. The toll is by Popular Sports magazine.

The team will get an early test when it opens the season against 17th ranked Missouri on Nov. 28 in St. Louis.

Cagers open pre season with intrasquad game

SIU's basketball preseason starts at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday with an intrasquad game at McLeansboro High School.

All the players on the team will play in the game, all but two of them, senior forward Corky Abrams and freshman center Al Grant, have missed practice lately and may not play much.

Grant was hit by a virus last week, and most of the practice since then, while Abrams had a tooth pulled Monday and didn't resume practice until Tuesday.

"Practice has been going well, I'm disappointed that Al has missed the practice," Coach Paul Lambert said. "As a freshman, he has the most to learn." Lambert didn't know the exact reason for his absence, but the team would have to adjust to his absence.

The games consist of 30-minute halves. The team has worked on 20-minute halves.

The game is the first of three intrasquad games to be played at Southern Illinois High School.

Three years ago, West Frankfort High School invited the team to play there, and Lambert has continued playing at high schools when invited.

In a time trial held by the women's cross country team Monday at McAndrew Stadium, three runners qualified for the national meet to be held at the University of Wisconsin in Madison on Nov. 13.

Need to run the three-mile course in less than nineteen minutes, Peggy Evans (18:37), Linda Snavok (18:50), and Cathy Chiarello (18:53) made it, with Cindy Reuster (19:30) and Tracy Grandis (19:05) just off the mark.

Reuster and Grandis will get another chance to qualify Wednesday afternoon, Nov. 13, for the NCAA meet in submitting national times.

Coach Claudia Blackman was pleased with her team's effort, but was worried before the race.

"I thought they all had an outside chance, but you can't tell," said Blackman, "because sometimes the runners get cramps or get stiff."

Carol Anderson didn't finish the race because of a leg cramp, but Blackman is optimistic about her chances of making the cutoff, and has high hopes for Reuster and Grandis.

"I can't really tell it. The girls all said they would be happy," Reuster and Grandis will get another chance to qualify Wednesday afternoon, Nov. 13, for the NCAA meet in submitting national times.

"I can't really tell it. We can't get the cutoff," Reuster said. "It's too bad that they didn't qualify."
