House OKs $2.85 billion aid package

Quake, hurricane victims will benefit from bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House approved Tuesday a $2.85 billion disaster aid package for earthquake-stricken California and victims of Hurricane Hugo, with the White House signaling general support for the measure.

The relief package was adopted as part of a stop-gap spending bill to keep the federal government functioning while Congress finishes work on tardy appropriations bills.

The assistance measure makes new federal money available for emergency road and bridge repairs as well as for loans and other direct disaster aid to individuals and businesses suffering from the Oct. 17 Loma Prieta quake and Hurricane Hugo.

Most of the money is expected to go to California for earthquake recovery.

A broader $3.84 billion package offered by lawmakers from California was defeated by the House Appropriations Committee on Tuesday in favor of the $2.85 billion proposal, sponsored by the panel's chairman, Rep. Jamie Whitten, D-Miss.

The House passed Whitten's measure 321-99. The Senate was expected to take up the bill on Wednesday. The deadline for enacting the measure is midnight Wednesday, when the stop-gap spending measure currently in effect is due to expire.

At the White House, press secretary Marilyn Fitzwater said the amount contained in the House-passed relief package "is pretty close to our estimates" of what is needed."

Fitzwater said White House differences with Congress over the bill amount to technical matters, adding, "We're pretty close and it seems to be on track."

House debate on the measure centered on a provision that exempts the disaster money from adding to the federal deficit under terms of the Gramm-Rudman balanced budget law.

The House voted 401-18 to defeat an amendment by Rep. Silvio Conte, R-Mass., ranking Republican on the Appropriations Committee, to strike the Gramm-Rudman waiver. He and others argued the waiver undermines efforts to reduce the budget deficit.

The White House has taken the position that the aid package would fall outside this year's Gramm-Rudman restrictions because it would be enacted after the Oct. 15 cutoff date.

Whitten said Tuesday his measure was designed "to meet the emergency as fast as we can ... to give enough to get started." He said additional disaster relief for California could be considered in the future.

Illinois traffic fatalities decrease 28 percent

By Doug Powell
Staff Writer

While traffic fatalities on rural interstates across the United States soared for a second straight year, traffic fatalities in Illinois have taken a nose-dive.

A spokesman for the Illinois Department of Transportation said traffic deaths in Southern Illinois are indicative of statewide traffic fatalities. Illinois fatalities have decreased by 28 percent.

In the first nine months of 1988, traffic fatalities in 38 Southern Illinois counties totaled 246. During the first nine months of this year, traffic fatalities have totaled 177 in those same counties, Chris Schwarberg, a spokesman for IDOT said.

Traffic fatalities in Jackson and Union counties increased from 1988 to 1989, while traffic fatalities in Williamson, Franklin and Perry counties decreased. Traffic fatalities in Randolph County

Financial aid forms change

Students earning below $15,000 affected

By Chris Walka
Staff Writer

The federal government and the Department of Education have made changes to student financial aid forms that may confuse students about what to fill out and what not to.

Robert Clement, public information officer for the Illinois Student Assistance Commission, said the regulations will affect students with incomes under $15,000.

Clement said the regulations were an attempt to streamline the application process for students.

Clement said the revised forms have fewer financial questions for students to answer. The changes are a result of the reauthorization of financial aid by the federal government.

Reauthorization is an endeavor by the federal government to examine the federal financial aid process every five years and make changes it feels are warranted.

Bryson to help create affirmative action plan

By Tim Crosby
Staff Writer

Though a formal affirmative action policy for students who feel they have been discriminated against does not exist at SIUC, Seymour Bryson, assistant to the president for affirmative action, said he will be working with a committee to formulate one.

Bryson will be working with the Affirmative Action Advisory Committee for the Civil Service Council to formulate a policy during the next year.

"Right now students have no protection," Bryson said. "The committee decided to make it a goal to develop a policy."

Bryson said the policy will include complaint procedures dealing with the areas of financial aid, employment and graduate assistantships.

Dan Mann, associate director of financial aid office, said the office did follow guidelines in non-discriminatory practices.

"I don't think it's correct to say there is no policy," Mann said. "It says in the student employment handbook that our office doesn't discriminate on the basis of race, sex or religion. We follow that."

Mann said a problem exists in handling complaints of discrimination.

"When a student does complain of discrimination it is unclear who should handle it,"

Board considers changing bar hours

By Lisa Miller
Staff Writer

The Jackson County Board could change the closing hours in Jackson county bars because of drunk driving fatalities, making all bar closing hours consistent, a board member said.

David Conrad, a member of the board and a faculty member in history at the University, said a subcommittee of the board, the committee on justice and law enforcement, will meet Thursday to decide whether or not the county bars should have an earlier closing time.

Bars in Jackson County can stay open until 4 a.m., whereas the bars in Carbondale must close at 2 a.m.

Conrad said Robert and Dolores Ellis of Carbondale, who lost their son, Kevin, in a traffic accident after he was leaving a county bar, will be attending the committee meeting with a petition of more than 400 signatures to ask for the committee's support in changing the closing times.

Kevin Ellis and Kelly Wilcox were killed July 7 when their vehicle overturned after leaving Chautauqua Suez west of Carbondale. A coroner report stated their blood-alcohol levels were .1 percent, legally intoxicated.

The number of signatures on the petition probably will make an impact, Conrad said.

After discussion, the committee will make a recommendation to the board, who will make the final decision sometime before Jan. 1, Conrad said.

"The board talked about changing the closing times last year, but we couldn't change the closing times in the middle of the year," Conrad said.

Human rights report shows thousands unlawfully killed

LONDON (UPI) — Tens of thousands of people were unlawfully killed or executed without trial by governments in at least two dozen countries last year, Amnesty International said in its annual human rights report released Wednesday. In a 310-page report released at midnight London time and covering the year 1988, Amnesty International cited torture and ill-treatment of detainees and prisoners in every part of the world, and said that at least 80 countries had held political prisoners during the year. The London-based organization described methods of killing as diverse as they were gruesome.

Court: Colombia can extradite under treaty

BOGOTA, Colombia (UPI) — A Supreme Court judge said Tuesday President Virgilio Barco cannot order extraditions of suspected drug traffickers to the United States under an emergency order but that Colombia can extradite under a 101-year-old treaty. After a wave of assassinations, Barco established "administrative" extraditions Aug. 18 that permitted the Justice Ministry to send alleged drug kingpins to the United States without first consulting the Supreme Court. Four suspects have been extradited since Barco issued the order, and powerful cocaine cartels since have declared war on the government.

Reagan ordered to turn over documents

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A federal judge Tuesday ordered former President Ronald Reagan to turn over his diaries and his notes to former national security adviser John Poindexter but allowed President Bush to withhold documents in the Iran-Contra case. U.S. District Judge Harold Greene also ordered Poindexter's trial to begin Jan. 22, 1990. Poindexter is accused of conspiracy, destruction of documents and obstruction of a congressional investigation into the Iran-Contra scandal. Greene said that according to documents submitted by Poindexter's lawyers, "President Reagan met with Poindexter daily, frequently alone."

President considers keeping budget cuts

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Bush is considering the "very attractive possibility" of accepting the $16.1 billion in across-the-board spending cuts triggered when deficit-cutting efforts failed, his spokesman said Tuesday. Although stressing that no final decision has been made, White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater told reporters Bush was getting advice from both sides on whether to leave intact the cuts, called sequestration, that took affect Oct. 15 under the Gramm-Rudman balanced budget law. "The president is certainly open to the possibility of leaving the sequester on," Fitzwater said.

Pennsylvania to vote on anti-abortion bill

HARRISBURG, Pa. (UPI) — Pro- and anti-abortion forces held morning strategy sessions for Tuesday's debate in the Pennsylvania House on anti-abortion legislation. A vote was possible by late afternoon on the measure, which would add further restrictions to abortion in Pennsylvania. If the legislation is enacted, Pennsylvania would be the first state to tighten restrictions on abortion following a July U.S. Supreme Court ruling permitting states to do so. The Senate also is expected to approve the measure and Gov. Robert P. Casey, an abortion opponent, has promised to sign it.

Heavy rains result in trouble for California quake victims

WATSONVILLE, Calif. (UPI) — Heavy rains created new misery Tuesday for earthquake refugees in northern California, forcing hundreds from a flooded shelter near the quake's epicenter and leaving homes in the Santa Cruz Mountains threatened by landslides. "We have discovered large landslides, some as much as a quarter-mile across, with maybe 20 to 40 homes on them," said William Brown, chief of the U.S. Geological Survey's Landslide Information Center in Menlo Park. "More rain could cause new landslides and it might accelerate the movement of some existing landslides."

Man, woman and machine—Scott Jones, Jools Brandt and Mac N. Tosh. Is he a musician or a comedian? Is she a lousy cook, a game show hostess or a commando aerobics instructor? Is "it" a computer, a keyboardist or a dating service? Whoever (whatever!) they are, they're outrageously funny and probably the wildest, most original show on the road.

Jones and Jools can best be described as an entertainment extravaganza featuring stand-up comedy, strange pictures, high-tech music, ridiculous characters, rubber toys and electronic devices. Scott Jones has performed over 1,000 college concerts in 47 states and Canada. His stack of keyboards, computer and electronic instruments become an entire orchestra on stage, featuring anything from classical music to blues, jazz, rag and rock. Jools Brandt is a cast of characters all by herself. (She may be schizophrenic, but at least she has each other!) Mac N. Tosh tells jokes, plays the bass, drums and keyboards. "I can perform for days with only couple of bytes to eat," says Mac. Whether you come for the comedy, the music, the gags, or the computer, one thing's for certain: you'll leave with a great big smile!

Student Center's Paint Bar to open ready for Halloween

By Katherine Lydon
Staff Writer

Although happy hour specials in Illinois have been ruled illegal, the Craft Shop's Paint Bar in the Student Center is having Happy Hour Pre-Comedy Club Specials today to kick off its grand opening.

For $1, students, staff and community members may purchase, carve and paint a large pumpkin from noon to 3 p.m.

From 4 to 6 p.m. a Lone Ranger-type mask can be decorated with feathers, raffia (colored palm grass), paint and fashion studs for 50 cents.

These activities will be available throughout the week, but the prices will be doubled after the kick off.

From noon to 10 p.m. Friday and 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday, the Paint Bar, which will paint small designs or entire faces, will offer face painting for 50 cents using grease paint with professional costume colors, Ron Dunkel, Craft Shop coordinator, said.

Door prizes will be awarded on Friday of the grand opening. They include a leather jacket with free studs, a workshop of choice, a vintage SIU jacket, handmade pottery, passes for the splatter booth, face-painting and mask-making.

"The Paint Bar gives us a new area for the Craft Shop," Dunkel said. "It enables us to leave the equipment up at all times, not just during class."

The idea for the Paint Bar was formed during the Carnival of Crazyness, when Dunkel and John Corker, the Student Center director, found vintage food service jackets in a closet, Dunkel said.

The men's jacket looks like bell-hop uniforms and the women's jackets look like a nurse's outfits. Dunkel said he wanted to "pass along the bargain."

Parking facing Student Center restricted

A change in parking regulations across from the Student Center has resulted in an increase in student parking tickets, Marilyn Hogan, coordinator of the parking division, said.

Hogan said the first row of parking spaces facing the Student Center across from the main entrance to the building has been changed to visitor parking only from 7 a.m. to 1 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Hogan said those with blue or gold decals may park in the spaces after 1 p.m. and those with red decals may use the spaces after 4 p.m.

She said despite a sign that has been posted there, students have continued to park in the spaces and have received tickets.

The reasoning for the change was that visitors who came to campus could not find places to park because cars with decals occupied all of the spaces, Hogan said.

Preconceived notions about blacks discussed

By Sean Hannigan
Staff Writer

Some people on campus believe professors assume black students are poor; cannot read, write, or speak properly; got into school on different standards; cheat; and generally are hostile to white instructors.

These are some of the thoughts that Jim Scales, director of career development, received from the group gathered for the second colloquium sponsored by Women's Studies and Black American Studies.

Scales had asked the group to outline some of the assumptions a professor has toward black students on the first day of his class. The discussion was held on the second floor of the Wham Building Monday afternoon.

The group of about 50 faculty, staff and students discussed with Scales the problems instructors bring to their courses through assumptions made about minorities and women.

Scales said too much emphasis has been placed on the attitudes of students, instead of instructors' preconceived notions about students.

"We're making the students learn positive perspectives, but we're (professors) the ones who are mirroring the negative behavior," Scales said.

The overall topic of this month's colloquium covered teaching techniques and course ground rules that will enhance the participation and engagement of all students, according to a women's studies newsletter. The colloquium series will focus on changes that can be made in curriculum and classroom changes on campus.

Scales said he hoped instructors eventually would take lessons in how to develop a classroom environment conducive to learning for all students.

He said one of the problems arising from each assumption is students begin to realize their instructors have these assumptions and react accordingly.

The first day of class is the most crucial to establishing the attitude of the class, Scales said.

Kathryn B. Ward, women's studies coordinator, passed out a booklet that included ground rules for class discussion. She said she uses it in her classes and recommends instructors establish these rules on the first day with their classes.

Some of those rules include: acknowledging that oppression exists, agreeing not to blame victims for their oppression and actively pursuing information about our own group and those of others.

Carol Felder, faculty member in the College of Education, said, "I've always believed you have to pull the student in on the first day or week of classes. Find something that will help trigger interest in that student."

She recommended teachers make a special effort to get students to actively participate in class, especially students of a different race.

Many of us come from homes where our basic needs for acceptance, worth and love were not met. This ongoing group is designed to give support, strength and hope to "adult children" who want to work on recovering from early family patterns.

Charitable act could make the difference

REMEMBERING THAT you were once given an opportunity and being thankful for it is an admirable quality in a person. Providing others with the same opportunity you once had goes beyond admirable.

A Christopher native and his wife, Eileen, have established the Donald and Eileen Bryant Student Loan Fund. The loan fund will amount to $50,000.

Bryant, a 1940 alumnus of the University, established the fund because of a loan he received when he was a student, Thomas Gutteridge, dean of the College of Business and Administration, said.

Gutteridge said the loan Bryant received made it possible for him to graduate from SIU-C.

Bryant has a strong dedication to the students of the Southern Illinois region, and thinks that the students should remain in school. Thus, a loan that is only for students who are from the Southern Illinois region.

HOPEFULLY, THE loan made by Bryant will do the same for other students at the University. It could mean the difference between a student making it through school or dropping out because of a dire financial situation.

The loan will be available to students in the College of Liberal Arts, the College of Communications and Fine Arts and the College of Business and Administration.

Students not only have to need the loan money, but they have to meet certain requirements to be eligible.

A student must have at least a 2.5 grade point average, have a part-time job, be involved in at least two extracurricular activities and be at least a three-quarter time student.

Entering students must be in the top one-third of their high school graduating class, be involved in two extracurricular activities and be a three-quarter time student.

STUDENTS WHO fulfill the requirements and are awarded a loan, can receive $2,000 per year until they graduate. Recipients will be expected to repay the loan with an interest rate that has yet to be determined.

Dan Mann, associate director of financial aid, said the loan will be available for the fall semester of 1990, and that he anticipates that students who receive a loan will have to start repaying the loan six months after graduation.

Bryant's action indicates that there are people out in the world and the community that are willing to help others — strangers. And students are an important segment of our population that often need the support of others. Students are the future for advancement and learning.

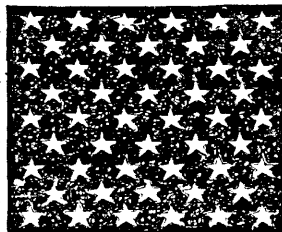

Not all of us have the means to create a loan fund for students, but there are other contributions made within the community that do, and can, make a difference.

SOME FAMILIES bring students into their homes to save the students the expense of room and board. Others provide odd jobs that put a few extra dollars into the pockets of students.

People can make many charitable gestures that may be the break that students need to stay in school — a break that could point a student in a completely different direction in life: a better life.

Give and take, or take and give in the case of Bryant, could mean a lot if we all try to remember the benefits that we have been given along the way.

In turn, could be in turn, and in turn, and in turn and in turn...

Law catches up with 5-year fugitive and a couple of elephants in Texas

By KIRI MAKIN
Toronto Globe and Mail

Five years after Arian Seidon and the elephants he calls "my girls" began a plodding, continent-wide flight from justice, the trio has been run to ground in a tiny Texas hamlet.

The quiet arrest of the 60-year-old animal trainer last week ended a remarkable odyssey of running and hiding during which Seidon had to covertly acquire 600 pounds of food daily — and dispose of 500 pounds of droppings.

The two animals are being kept on a ranch near Jefferson, Texas, while their owner faces extradition to New Jersey, where he is charged with grand larceny. Seidon, a native of Missouri, sits in a Marion County jail.

Seidon claims he conducted his late-night repossession of the animals from the men he had sold them to because the new owners fell behind in payments and were abusing the animals. Saving them became his only goal in life.

"I don't know that he is wacky — but you have to recognize that this guy is different," said his lawyer, Michael Aranson. "He is a warm, humanistic person. He may be dead wrong in his processing of legal data, but he is 100 percent right in his human feelings."

"This man was willing to give up five years of pursuing his career in order to protect these animals," Aranson said. "His desire to protect 'his girls' is absolutely overwhelming."

When Seidon's bail was set recently, his lawyer said, the animal trainer's first reaction was to say: "Shouldn't we use the money for the defense of my girls?"

Duchess is 25 years old, Torey, 27. Seidon imported the two elephants from India when they were still at the bottle-feeding stage. They became his constant companions.

"He lavished more time and attention on them than he did on his four children," said Gary Ross, a Canadian author who is writing a book about Seidon. "He always refers to them as 'my girls.'"

Seidon travelled around the country stowing the elephants at events such as carnivals and mall openings. Five years ago, he decided to try and find them a good home and live off the $80,000 profit from their sale.

"Selling them was like cutting off his own arm," said Ross. "It was a hell of a lot of money for a guy who was always scratching out a living."

It is unclear whether Seidon discovered the alleged abuse of the animals before he kidnapped them. Ross said that, at any rate, it quickly became obvious. They had lost a tremendous amount of weight and had festering sores. They flinched when approached, indicating they had been beaten.

The elephants' new owners got a judge to order them returned, but Seidon kept running. He and the fugitives spent the first four years in the northern United States — and perhaps in Canada — before moving to Texas.

Seidon took the elephants to Florida each winter. Moving the animals was very difficult, Ross said, since they tend to rock dangerously from side to side when they are confined.

"You can't just say: 'Here come the cops. Let's get out of here.'"

"He would affect disguises and he had a pseudonym," said Ross. "He travelled at times when weigh scales would not be open. He took secondary roads. He would move only when he started to feel the heat."

Ross said that Seidon's fight to protect the elephants became, in his mind, a symbolic battle against everything he found morally bankrupt in modern society.

"He feels the world is going to sink in a haw-ho-ho — that we are paving, polluting, developing, slashing and burning our way to oblivion. During his lifetime, elephants went on the endangered species list. He is trying to protect something against the incursions of money and modern life."

"His life has been a living nightmare in many ways," Ross said.

"He has exhausted the patience of his family and friends. They are long past the point of thinking of him as a lovable kook. They have had to field constant questions and forward his mail without finding out where he is."

The crucial tip on the whereabouts of Seidon and his elephants came from some circus people, a police source said. They were found among several other exotic animals on a ranch owned by a friend of Seidon.

Seidon remains in good spirits, the police source said. "He is real comical. After five years of running, he even let us shave his beard and cut his hair. He said it was nice to be back to his natural self."

Seat 24 at Candlestick Park — a ride from hell

By NORM CLARKE
Scraps Howard News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — I am sitting in the seat from hell. Top row of Candlestick Park, deep right field, section 53, seat 24.

You want a horror story from The 'Stick? This is it.

If this seat was occupied at 5:04 p.m. last Tuesday — a high probability considering it was a capacity crowd — here is what that person experienced:

- The initial jolt.
- A loud pop, like a small canon.
- An explosion of flying concrete.

— The stairway underneath separating. The seat straddling a section being torn apart.

"Somebody got one heck of a ride," said Chris Dunbar, a worker who was pouring new concrete.

Seat 24 sits on one of Candlestick's seven expansion joints. Thirty years ago, during construction of the big oval, the eight-inch wide joints were installed for the purpose of allowing movement caused by heat expansion or earthquakes.

Call it Candlestick's Last Laugh. Maligned all these years for being so inhospitable — easily the coldest and windiest park in baseball — Candlestick held up beautifully in a time of crisis.

"We found out this is one of the safest places in the Bay Area," said Lind.

Try convincing the occupant of Seat 24, who had his socks rocked.

This is my first trip back to Candlestick since the quake. I am sitting here trying to imagine the depth of terror in this section last week.

I was in the rooftop press box, down the left field line, when the shaker hit. My first reaction was to check the dugouts and see if the players were safe. For some reason, my second reaction was to look up here, the top row. What I remember is seeing this part of the stadium emptying quickly.

Now I now why.

Traffic deaths have increased

A federal report just out says that traffic deaths have gone up 21 percent on rural interstate highways in states that have increased speed limits from 55 miles per hour to 65. In states that kept the 55 mph limit, the death rate has remained constant.

a federal 55 mph mandate. The study by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration said the U.S. Transportation Department feels "the states are in the best position to make decisions on speed limits." But states should be aware, speed limits are exacting a toll in human lives.

Student who was fined should pay it like the rest of us and stop whining

This letter is in response to Martin Victor's letter, which appeared Oct. 18 detailing his incident with SIU-C police.

Mr. Victor, I sympathize with you on your tragedy. I can certainly understand how receiving an $8 ticket from a police officer with a "horrible disposition" could leave one feeling "victimized by the ordeal." And to think there are those of us who worry about things like homelessness, hunger and environmental destruction.

How selfish of us to think of those things when there are people like you in this world, who need and deserve our immediate, undivided attention.

Perhaps you have a valid reason for parking in a no parking area in front of the Student Center when there are two parking lots very close by one of which is free. I believe the other would have cost you a quarter and a walk across the street, which I'm sure you will agree is far less costly and time consuming than an $8 ticket and two days spent being given the "run-around completely" at Washington Square D.

How terrible that you were treated rudely when you did get to talk to someone about your ordeal. It does seem unfair that Lt. Smith made you feel "ignorant," simply because as a college senior you seem incapable of comprehending the meaning of a no parking sign. Or perhaps this sign did not apply to you, since you state, "I did nothing wrong."

Why do you feel that way? Is there something else we should know? Are you exempt from the laws of this state and county, and of the University? If so, perhaps you should consider carrying an ID or notary statement that will inform law enforcement officials of that fact.

I'm sure we are all saddened that you were "harassed" and "badgered" by an individual with a "personal problem" which left him unable to "distinguish between right and wrong." I do not know Officer Harrington, but it seems unfair to blame him for punishing you as he would the rest of us. Obviously, he was unaware of the fact that you are not like the rest of us, but somewhat above us and therefore above our laws. As I mentioned earlier, perhaps you should consider that special ID.

We all hope you can obtain it, and spend the rest of your academic career free of the legal entanglements which cause you such anguish. Hopefully, when you graduate, you can skip the entry level positions of those of us beneath you and start right at the top, with your very own parking space next to the front door.

If you are unable to obtain either the ID or the top position at the corporation of your choice, I hope some day you will develop the ability to carry enough change for a parking meter, and the maturity to stop whining. — Tammy L. McMenemy, B. S. business administration, Northeast Missouri State.

Don't compare Halloween to Kent State deaths

This past Monday night, Oct. 23, my wife returned to her car that had been parked behind Hangar 9 in downtown Carbondale. There she found a small photo-copied flyer under her windshield wiper that read, "Have a Kent State Halloween '4 Dead in Ohio' C.S.N.?" and this cryptic message was punctuated by the peace sign that those of us who actually lived during the days of Kent State might remember.

When I first saw the thing, it took me a while to figure out just what it meant. Then it dawned on me that some misguided party addicts might actually have the audacity to compare what they are apparently planning for the coming weekend to what happened in Kent, Ohio on May 4, 1970.

Then I got mad. To think that some spoiled brat who feels he or she is being denied some inherent right to stand in the middle of the street and get loaded is doing something that serious and that important is preposterous. The four people who died at Kent State, along with the one who was permanently disabled, were martyrs for the causes of peace and freedom. They did not die so you could party your pea-sized brains out in Carbondale all weekend long for Halloween.

I am as sorry as anyone else that the Halloween party is no longer welcome. That is not because what used to be a Halloween costume party, appropriately fun and good-natured, is no longer that at all; it has all the creative spark of urinating on a dumpster.

So for all of you Halloween "activists" out there, do a favor for those of us who have the sensitivity to remember the Kent State massacre for what it was, and find yourself a different rallying cry. To compare Kent State to Carbondale's Halloween is a deplorable insult to the memory of those four people who were murdered almost 20 years ago. And P.S.: The song "Ohio" was written by Neil Young, not Crosby, Still, or Nash. — Bryan Smith, Carbondale resident.

Gals who give to United Way could win a date

By Dale Walker
Staff Writer

Money might not buy love, but for women who are willing to donate to the United Way, it could buy a date with the bachelor of their choice.

The highest bidder at Bid-a-Bachelor will "win" a date with one of about 20 bachelors who have volunteered their services, Deborah Walton, assistant director of Student Development, said.

Bid-a-Bachelor, which will begin at 5 p.m. Sunday in the Student Center Ballrooms, has a $1 admission.

Proceeds from the evening, which is co-sponsored by the Student Programming Council and The Leadership Center, will go toward the student drive for United Way.

Mobilization of Volunteer Effort, and Leadership, Education and Development also are coordinating a campus-wide student fund-raiser for United Way. A sexy legs contest Oct. 19 at Checker's Lounge also raised funds for United Way, Walton said.

Solicitation tables will be set up at Fanner Hall and the Communications Building from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Wednesday and Friday and at the Agriculture Building Wednesday from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Funds raised by student organizations will be combined with the campus fund drive, which will be combined with the fund drive by Carbondale in conjunction with United Way month, Judith Harwood, 1989 Carbondale United Way Campaign chairwoman, said. The goal for the 1989 United Way campaign is $145,000, Harwood said.

A Combined Health Appeal fund-raiser will be held in conjunction with the United Way fund-raiser, Terry Mathias, campus coordinator for joint United Way and Combined Health Appeal campaigns, said.

The campus and the city are raising funds for both organizations, but the student fund-raiser is only for the United Way, Walton said. The campaigns will end Oct. 31, Mathias said.

"There is excellent grass-roots support for the 19 local agencies that are part of the United Way, and the 17 health care agencies, which are supported through Combined Health Appeal," Mathias said.

United Way's campaign has accumulated $27,769 as of Sept. 20, Mathias said and Combined Health Appeal's campaign has gathered $8,275.

Persons interested in competing or bidding in the Bid-a-Bachelor night can call Deborah Walton at 453-5714 for more information.

remained the same.

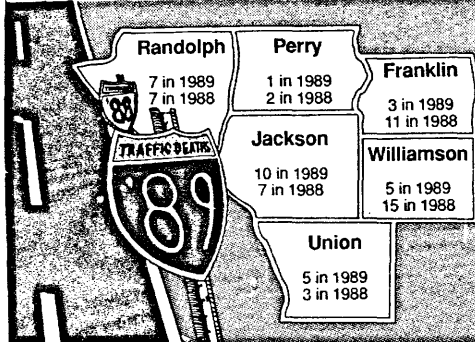

"Including deaths involving motorcycles, pedestrians, bicycles, railroad crossings, etc., the fatality rate so far this year has decreased by 28 percent," Schwarberg said. "Those deaths occurred on all types of roadways."

According to the federal government, at least 900 extra deaths during a two-year period have occurred on rural interstates after states were allowed to raise the speed limit to 65 mph.

"In the first one and one-half years, we (Illinois) were slightly up 1 or 2 percent after the speed limit increased to 65 mph. But this year traffic fatalities are down 28 percent," Schwarberg said.

To conserve energy in the late 1970s, the speed limit on interstate highways was lowered to 55 mph. However, in April 1987, states were allowed to raise the speed limit to 65 mph on stretches of interstate in areas with fewer than 50,000 people.

But Schwarberg said Illinois has not experienced an increase in traffic fatalities because of the increased speed limit.

BARS, from Page 1

The liquor licensing year begins Jan. 1, and Conrad said the liquor licenses, which mandates the bar closing times, could not be changed mid-year, but the closing time could be changed and added on the license for the next licensing year.

Conrad said he thinks there's a better chance the board will change the closing times because three drunk driving fatalities occurring late at night have happened since the board last discussed the time change.

Jackson County Sheriff William Kilquist said statistics show most drunk driving accidents increase between 1:30 a.m. and 2:30 a.m.

Pamela Britton, director of financial aid, said.

While the student may have fewer questions to fill out on the form, Clement said there could be confusion over what the student is required to complete.

"The students will have to read the forms very carefully," Clement said. He also said the new regulations were first proposed in 1988-89.

Britton said the Financial Aid

Office advised students to fill out the applications entirely, because this was necessary for the student to be considered for all federal, state and University aid available.

Britton said there are five different multiple-data entry agencies: American College Testing, College Scholarship Service, CSX Tech., the Pennsylvania Higher Education Assistance Authority and the United Student Aid Funds.

he said.

Jean Paratore, associate vice president for student affairs, said if students feel they have been treated unfairly, there are procedures available to them.

"If the student doesn't feel they have received a fair shake on any of those levels, they can appeal to the next," Paratore said. "They can go right up to the chancellor."

Paratore said she was not aware of many discriminatory problems.

HOUSE, from Page 1

His package calls for a $1.1 billion increase for the disaster aid budget of the Federal Emergency Management Agency; $500,000 more for the disaster loan program managed by the Small Business Administration; and $250 million in new discretionary spending by the president to help other agencies cope with the twin disasters.

In addition, a $1 billion increase is earmarked for a federal fund dedicated to the repair and reconstruction of federal and state highways and bridges damaged by natural disasters.

Another key provision of the bill waives a statutory spending cap of $100 million per disaster from that fund, aides said. A number of California lawmakers initially said they believed no such waiver was included.

FEMA has authority to spend additional money on repairs for local roads and bridges.

However, the bill fails to include language to waive a statutory prohibition on the use of the emergency repair fund to fix toll roads and bridges, including the damaged San Francisco Bay Bridge.

An alternative $3.84 billion disaster aid package backed by the entire California congressional delegation but rejected by the Appropriations Committee, would have made an exception for the Bay Bridge.

Rep. Vic Fazio, D-Calif., the primary sponsor of additional disaster aid to California, has estimated that overall damage in his state would run at least $7 billion, with highways and bridges accounting for at least $1 billion of the total.

Fazio said Tuesday he would seek additional legislation to remove the toll road prohibition for the Bay Bridge and other spending restrictions contained in current law.

But he added, "certainly a $1 billion (highway) fund will be sufficient" to meet California's transportation repair needs.

The Whitten package does not state specifically how the aid is to be divided geographically, but Fazio has estimated that 90 percent would go to help his state.

The remainder will be spent in areas of the Carolinas and Caribbean wracked by Hugo, bolstering the $1.1 billion in emergency relief quickly approved by Congress last month in the wake of that disaster.

Only about $300 million from that package is left over from Hugo for assistance to California.

Fazio's proposal would have allocated the same amounts for FEMA and the highway repair fund, but would have provided $700 million more to the SBA, $150 million more in discretionary spending, plus $100 million in loan guarantees for the Economic Development Agency.

Sen. Steve Symms, R-Idaho, has introduced a bill that would give California a virtual blank check for repairs of quake-damaged roads and bridges, providing "such sums as may be necessary" for that purpose.

Medical care cost topic of discussion

By Diana Mivelli
Staff Writer

The president of the Illinois State Medical Society spoke to the Jackson County Medical Society Tuesday evening as part of his state tour meeting with physicians to discuss the rising cost of health care.

Dr. Eugene P. Johnson, said health care costs are one of the main concerns of physicians today.

"Another great concern of ours is the fact that we are afraid the emphasis on cost only in Medicare is putting the whole program for our elderly in jeopardy from the viewpoint of quality and availability of care," Johnson said.

Johnson said these are some of the discussions he wants to start among physicians. He said the way to solve things in a country like the United States is from the bottom up.

"Physicians need to talk to their patients and to community groups. Health care is expensive and there are some things we can do to help and there are some costs you can get around," he said.

Johnson said technological advances allow physicians to do so much more than previously possible, but the irony of this being "we've found as we go along, these advances have added much to the cost and it has brought some accessory problems."

He said he believes there are many problems in medicine that physicians need to discuss so everyone can get together and get a consensus and maybe go out and solve them.

Johnson said he has worked with the Department of Public Aid and it is going to increase their payments to hospitals, physicians and health care providers.

"They did this first in the field of (obstetrics) because the very low pay that people in OB were getting was not enough to cover the cost of doing business. This was done in target areas where the percentage of Medicaid public aid patients were the highest."

This was done in the Southern Illinois area, East St. Louis area and in inner city areas of Chicago, making it easier for pregnant women to get care, he said.

He said many specialists trained in obstetrics and gynecology find they can stop practicing obstetrics and still do gynecology and keep busy, still have work to do and their malpractice premium goes way down.

"This is wrong," Johnson said. "There shouldn't be this much risk for the good doctors. There ought to be damages available for real harm."

He said one way to control the obstetrics premium the best is to get a top limit on non-economic damages which can amount to many millions of dollars. One reason the obstetrics premium is so high, is the extent of time an obstetrician may be sued. Babies may sue when they are 18 years old for something that happened at the time of their delivery, he said.

Questions need to be discussed so straight answers can be found, although the answers are not easy, Johnson said.

"This is a concern of everybody in the country. A good place to start is at the people level not only by government or legislation. The best decisions will be made by an informed public who knows what it wants and if they know how to communicate it," he said.

He said he has to be optimistic that they can come up with answers.

"It's like our environment," Johnson said. "We won't have satisfactory environmental control until we get more involvement."

University ranked 38th in country for Peace Corps volunteer recruits

By Diana Mivelli
Staff Writer

About 20 and 25 individuals picked up applications for the Peace Corps Tuesday at the Student Center, Steve Rypkema, area recruiter said.

"We were very glad to see interest in many areas of need like zoology, forestry, fisheries and construction, as well as many from people from liberal arts," he said.

Rypkema will be at the Student Center today from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. talking to interested students and distributing applications. The Peace Corps film, "Let It Begin Here," will be shown at noon and 7 p.m. today at the Student Center Ohio Room.

Students must fill out applications and make interview appointments for Oct. 31 and

Nov. 1 at the University Placement Center in Woody Hall.

Rypkema said the University ranked 38th on a list of the top 50 schools for volunteer recruits from 1961 through 1985. The number of volunteers for that time from SIU-C is 386.

Since the start of the Peace Corps program in 1961, he said, 5,965 volunteers have been from Illinois. As of February 1989, 297 volunteers from Illinois are overseas.

He said in recent years, there has been an increase in retired persons and senior citizen volunteers.

"There is a large amount of retirees that want to do something useful with their experience. They can provide a lot of professional and life experience."

He said in order to help Third World countries effectively, a good representation of people from the United States is needed, such as senior citizens and minorities.

He said about 10 percent of Peace Corps volunteers choose to extend their stay. This must be approved by the host country agency the volunteer is working with and the country director of the Peace Corps, he said.

People can apply for a year at a time or a few months, depending on what they wish to accomplish during the extension.

At the end of their service, Peace Corps volunteers receive a re-adjustment allowance of $200 for every month of training and service, he said.

He said many universities offer financial assistance or academic credit to former Peace Corps volunteers.

Dieting is unhealthy and the correct way to lose weight is by eating healthy and exercising, Ellen Atienza, health advocate said.

This is the message of Eating Disorder Awareness Week, which began Monday and will continue through Thursday in the Student Center.

"College freshman girls are the poorest dieters. They are so afraid of the freshman 15, (gaining 15 pounds), they starve themselves and won't eat in the cafeterias," Atienza said. "They starve themselves but eat Snickers all day."

So far those diets have worked, so they think it helps, she said. But in the long run, whether they lose weight or not, they will have problems with their weight.

She said the problems with dieting are more psychological than physical.

"It is a problem you have to work out yourself, but in extreme cases, some people may need to see a doctor," Atienza said. "The majority have to realize not everyone is going to be thin and not everyone can be thin."

She said dieting is unhealthy. People can eat anything they want in moderation.

"Eat when you are hungry, stop when you are full," she said.

Bulimia and anorexia nervosa are the most common eating disorders.

Bulimia is a cycle of starvation, binge eating and vomiting. Anorexics are characterized by self-starvation. If they do eat they will throw up, but normally they eat very little or don't eat at all.

According to Thinness Mania, a handbook available at a table in the Student Center promoting Eating Disorder Awareness Week, the vast majority of bulimics are women. About a third of women ages 19 to 39 diet at least once a month.

According to the article, "Women learn early to fear fat: 59 percent of teen-age girls would like to lose weight, while 52 percent of teen-age boys think their weight is fine and 28 percent of teen-age boys would like to gain weight."

The Wellness Center will sponsor "Images of Women: The Impact of Advertising" from 7 to 9 p.m. today at the Student Center Saline Room.

For further information call the Wellness Center at 536-4441.

Seminar focuses on issue of cocaine-addicted mothers

Lawyer advocates law to protect babies

By Tony Mancuso
Staff Writer

Cocaine use during pregnancy, its effect on babies and the law's response have been major topics of discussion for Paul Logli ever since his precedent-setting attempt to criminally prosecute a cocaine-addicted woman this spring.

The topics were discussed at the SIU-C Law and Medicine Society meeting Oct. 19 when Logli, Winnebago County state's attorney, gave a one-hour lecture followed by a question-and-answer session in the Lesar Law Building moot courtroom.

Gene Basanta, SIU-C law professor and one of the lecture's organizers, said Logli has been involved in criminal actions against women who abuse drugs during pregnancy.

"He is a leading advocate for increased legal measures against these women," Basanta said, adding that Logli has appeared on ABC's "Prime Time Live" and has been interviewed and published in national publications such as Time and ABA Journal.

Logli said drug abuse, especially cocaine abuse, has the same detrimental effect on babies as fetal alcohol syndrome. Children may suffer brain damage, physical impairments or even Sudden Infant Death Syndrome, he said.

As many as 375,000 newborns may be affected by substance abuse in the United States.

"I have worked closely with Dr. Ira Chasnoff from Northwestern University and his observations conclude cocaine constricts blood vessels in the placenta, which cuts off the flow of oxygen and nutrients to the child. He says cocaine also may create a premature separation of the placenta, which causes deformation as: growth, impairment," Logli said.

"According to Dr. Chasnoff (president of the National Association for Perinatal Action Research and Education Foundation), 375,000 newborn babies a year may be affected by substance abuse in the United States," Logli said. "He believes one in 10 babies born in urban areas are exposed to cocaine in the womb."

In some inner city cases, women use the drug to induce labor, he said.

Logli said he has become increasingly involved in the "cocaine baby" issue, especially after he gained national attention in the spring of 1989 for an attempted prosecution.

He said he charged Melanie Green, 24, of Rockford, with involuntary manslaughter and with supplying drugs to a minor when her daughter Bianca died two days after birth. However, a grand jury refused to indict Green.

"Traces of cocaine were found in the mother's blood and the child's urine, leading doctors from two different hospitals to scientifically prove cocaine was ingested by the mother within 48 hours of the delivery," Logli said.

He said he prosecuted on criminal charges because the child was alive for two days.

"The involuntary manslaughter charge was brought on by my feeling the mother's ingestion of cocaine brought about the eventual death of her daughter. My job is to prosecute on behalf of all citizens, including those who are only two days old," Logli said.

Logli said a grand jury refused to bring an indictment against Green partly because of the national attention the case brought before it went to the jury and partly because the members of the jury thought he was using statutes not intended for drug abuse during pregnancy.

"It was a major disappointment, but maybe a blessing in disguise," Logli said.

He said even though his initial attempt at criminal prosecution failed, it caused a great deal of attention on cocaine and more people became aware of the problem's extent.

Since the charges against Green were annulled last spring, Logli said he has realized he must attempt to deal with the problem in other ways.

"It's clear to me the womb has become a battlefield in the war on drugs, and it is my job to react to illegal acts in my community. The problem goes beyond the child substance addiction and even death," Logli said. "The cost involved to get the surviving children through the two- to three-week high risk period after birth is phenomenal."

Logli said the parents usually cannot afford the payments and they generally are paid by either the state or a hospital write-off. The price placed on the child's life may vary from $7,500 to $150,000, he said.

Logli said his concern for the health of the babies and the loss of state funding to these situations, which he said should not have happened, has caused him to consider alternative ways to prevent the plight of cocaine babies.

"I refuse to believe prosecution will increase the problem," Logli said. "I hope the rights of a newborn to be born whole and functional will become a primary concern for the state and country, and state and federal agencies will fund more programs for pregnant drug abusers."

He said his own initiative has been twofold: introducing legislation and taking children away from parents who are addicts.

"I have, with the help of a state representative, introduced legislation to the Illinois House of Representatives. It states that any pregnant woman who intentionally uses a dangerous or narcotic drug after a certain period in her pregnancy, and then gives birth, shall be indicted for a lower-grade felony. If the child dies, the woman shall be indicted for a higher-grade felony," Logli said.

He said the proposal is not as stringent as he would prefer, but that he wanted to make it a passable bill "just to get the ball rolling."

Logli said taking babies away from their mothers, until the mothers have successfully rehabilitated from the drug and have displayed good parenting qualities, is "another alternative to combating the growing problem."

Bakker sentenced to 45 years in prison, fined

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI) — Television evangelist Jim Bakker, a Bible school dropout who built the world's best-known television ministry, was sentenced Tuesday to 45 years in prison and fined $500,000 for fleecing his PTL flock of millions of dollars in a fund-raising fraud.

U.S. District Judge Robert Potter followed a Justice Department recommendation that the preacher, convicted Oct. 5 on 24 counts of fraud and conspiracy, spend at least the next 40 years behind bars. Bakker had faced maximum penalties of 120 years in prison terms and $5 million in fines.

Potter rejected defense motions that Bakker be freed on bond while his convictions are appealed, and ordered U.S. marshals to transport the evangelist directly to a federal holding facility in Talladega, Ala.

From there, the U.S. Bureau of Prisons will decide where Bakker will serve his term. He is expected to be sentenced to a minimum-security facility.

Bakker, in a brief statement before the sentence was imposed, apologized for any actions that may have hurt his followers.

"I am deeply sorry for people who have been hurt, the partners (PTL contributors) and people who worked at Heritage USA (the ministry's resort)," he said. "I've sinned. I've made mistakes, but never in my life have I intended to defraud anyone, and I plead for your mercy."

At the center of the government's case was the sale of PTL partnerships, typically promising three nights' lodging a year for life at the ministry's Heritage USA retreat in Fort Mill, S.C., to anyone giving PTL $1,000.

The fund-raising campaign raised $158 million, but most of the money was diverted to the PTL general fund, from which Bakker, his wife, Tammy Faye, and the ministry's top executives were paid generous salaries and bonuses.

Potter rejected alternative sentencing proposed by defense lawyer Harold Bender, who suggested the preacher be allowed to return to PTL to complete the "vision" his supporters believed they were financing.

"Order him to go back down there and complete the dream," Bender said. "Let the money that comes in not go through his hands. Let it go through the IRS. Let them keep every penny of it. Let the attorney general serve on the board of directors."

"My experience has taught me if it sounds logical, it ain't gonna happen," the lawyer said, "but

Gabor sentenced, fined $10,000

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (UPI) — Saying he was treating her as an "average, ordinary person," a judge Tuesday sentenced Zsa Zsa Gabor to 72 hours in jail, 120 hours of community service and ordered her to pay $10,000 for slapping a police officer.

Gabor is to serve her sentence by Dec. 29 in a county jail of her choice at her own expense and to complete her community service at the Lieu Cap woman's shelter by March 30, 1990.

Municipal Court Judge Charles Rubin also ordered the faded glamour queen to pay $10,000 in "extraordinary costs" associated with her case. "I'm sentencing you in line with ... the average, ordinary person in this case," Rubin said. "I'm not sentencing you on the basis of any emotion in this case."

Rubin earlier denied Gabor's request for a new trial on grounds she had been inadequately defended, clearing the way for her sentencing.

The faded glamour queen had been scheduled for sentencing Oct. 17, but her new lawyer, Harrison Bull, won a postponement until Tuesday while he prepared motions for a new trial — arguing that Gabor's defense was incompetent. Bull maintained that Gabor's previous lawyer, William Graysen, took the case for free in order to promote his career and then inadequately defended her.

"It's clear to the court that Miss Gabor ... could have chosen any attorney she desired," Rubin said. "It appears to me that Mr. Graysen was retained because of Ms. Gabor's desire to pursue the publicity line — she as the principle, he as her accomplice."

On the witness stand Tuesday, Graysen admitted that publicity was one of several reasons he contacted Gabor's agent Cal Ross.

I've kicked this around in my mind many times. What is the harm in it?"

Bender, describing Bakker as "a man of love, compassion and charity," asked in vain that the judge to consider the good the evangelist has done, and said a long prison term would serve no purpose other than to punish Bakker.

"Sentencing under the (Justice Department) guidelines would provide things like vocational training and education," Bender said. "This man's 49 years old. He has a vocation. He has training."

Bakker became the fourth person sentenced in the PTL scandal. PTL deputy Richard Dortch cut a plea-bargain with prosecutors and was sentenced to eight years in prison, former aide David Taggart got 18 years 5 months and Taggart's interior decorator brother, James Taggart, got 17 1/2 years.

In recommending a sentence of at least 40 years, the Justice Department said in a 16-page brief filed Monday with Potter's court, "Bakker lived like a sultan. The PTL ministry was a victim of Bakker's fraud and conspiracy."

Bakker appeared for sentencing without his other lawyer, George Davis.

Studies show blacks get fewer home loans

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Federal regulators said Tuesday reports indicate that blacks are granted fewer home purchase loans and are rejected for mortgages twice as often as white applicants.

A study by the Office of Thrift Supervision shows disparities in mortgage loan rejection rates between black and white applicants from 1978.

"On a nationwide basis, the rejection ratio indicates that blacks are rejected for mortgage loans approximately twice as often as whites," said Jonathan Fiechter, OTS senior deputy director for supervision policy.

The report was submitted to a Senate Banking Committee subcommittee on consumer and regulatory affairs that is investigating possible discriminatory mortgage lending practices among banks and thrifts.

Studies conducted by the Federal Reserve System found that areas of predominantly black populations receive fewer home purchase loans, but more home improvement loans from banks and savings and loan associations, said John LeWare, a member of the Fed's board of governors.

Still, LeWare said, "We do not find policies or practices that suggest that individual state member banks take the race of an applicant into account when making a credit decision."

Robert Herrmann, senior deputy comptroller for bank supervision policy with the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency, said discrimination in home finance is often hard to detect because it can occur at any number of steps — from early meetings with brokers through the loan application process.

He said 16 racial discrimination complaints were filed with the comptroller's office between January 1987 and August 1989. Each case was investigated and no violations of law were found.

John Bovenzi, deputy to the chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., said five FDIC-supervised financial institutions have been cited for discriminatory practices in the past three years.

The perception exists among banker, however, that lending in the inner-city is too risky, said C. Austin Fitts, assistant secretary for housing, with the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Study: Adults know, ignore healthy diets

EMMAUS, Pa. (UPI) — More than one-third of all Americans know how to get the most out of physical exercise but at the same time they pay little attention to eating healthy diets a survey showed Tuesday.

A Louis Harris survey of 1,250 adults, published in the Emmaus-based Prevention magazine, reported that 68 million Americans, or 38 percent of the U.S. population, are "young and reckless" adults.

According to the survey, young and reckless adults drink less and exercise more than most people but most fail to adopt good eating patterns. That group "still consumes vast quantities of fat."

Senior citizens wait for OK from House to restore funds

By Jackie Spinner
Staff Writer

Home-bound senior citizens need the Illinois House of Representatives' approval to restore more than $1 million cut by the governor from programs for home-delivered meals.

The Senate voted unanimously last week to override Gov. James R. Thompson's veto of funding for home-delivered meals, which reduced the amount from $1.5 million to $338,000. The House is expected to vote on the measure early next week.

"If the House overrides the veto, the governor would have to find the money to fund (the programs)," Department of Aging Legislative Liaison Steve Buecker said.

Buecker said the governor vetoed the legislation because he did not have the funding available for the programs.

"If the cigarette tax had passed, he most likely would have funded the programs," Buecker said.

May Knussmann, field service coordinator for the Egyptian Area Agency on Aging, said the agency has a problem with an increasing demand for the meals.

"Our providers move heaven and earth to get those meals out," she said.

The Jackson County provider of the home-delivered meals is the Senior Citizen Services of Jackson County in Carbondale.

Carolyn Harrison, spokeswoman for the program, said volunteers deliver a hot meal at noon to senior citizens in Carbondale, Murphysboro, Vergennes, Elkhart and DeSoto.

Hot meals are delivered to seniors over 60 who cannot prepare their own meals, she explained.

The program averages 115 delivered meals daily to the five towns, and Harrison said lack of publicity makes the number of meals low.

"We delivered 46 meals (Tuesday) to Carbondale seniors. That's low for a city the size of Carbondale," she said.

Harrison said the meals cost about $3 each to make. Seniors who receive the meals pay for them by donation. The rest of the meal is paid for by funding through the area aging agencies.

Former senator claims USG needs to take stand on Halloween issue

By Jeanne Bickler
Staff Writer

The Undergraduate Student Government needs to take a definite stand on Halloween, a former USG senator claims.

John Steinbeck, an east campus senator from 1987 to spring 1989, said he is upset that USG not taking a strong stand on Halloween.

Steinbeck said he is concerned that the USG will not vote on a resolution supporting the end of the Halloween celebration that is on Wednesday night's USG agenda.

Steinbeck said he has heard that senators have been calling Tim Hildebrand, USG president, asking for this resolution to be pulled from the agenda so they won't have to vote on it.

"The senate doesn't want to take a stand," Steinbeck said. "They are all afraid of voting on this because it may affect their chances of re-election if they run for office again next year."

East side senator Rod Hughes, who submitted the resolution, said if two-thirds of the senators vote against considering the resolution, the item will be off the agenda.

Hildebrand said there is a possibility that the resolution will not be voted on, but Steinbeck and Hughes do not have the correct reasons.

"Many senators are in their senior year. That's not why they don't want to vote," Hildebrand said. "They just don't want to vote until they know how students feel about Halloween. The students haven't taken a stance yet."

Lisa Sproule, USG vice president, said she doesn't feel the USG can do anything about Halloween at this point, even if it does vote.

"We're down to the wire here," she said. "It doesn't matter what we say now. It's a city council issue."

Sproule also said the issue of whether or not USG will vote on the resolution is not up to the officers.

"If the senators want to vote, we'll vote," she said.

"Students need to know how their elected representatives feel about issues that affect them," Steinbeck said. "The USG reacts instead of acting."

No formal surveys have been conducted to gauge student opinion on the Halloween celebration except for the referendum that was in the USG ballot last year. The referendum asked students to choose between two types of fall breaks, both falling over Halloween weekend, Steinbeck said.

"Both of these breaks were defeated by students," Steinbeck said.

Hildebrand said the referendum vote does not really reflect how students feel about Halloween.

"The rejection of a fall break indirectly indicates that students want Halloween," he said.

Steinbeck said another issue the USG didn't vote on was supplying its name to the end of Halloween flyers that were sent around the state.

"Tim (Hildebrand) just said let's put our name on it and it was done," Steinbeck said.

Hildebrand said this issue was a last minute idea and there was not enough time to put it on the agenda as a regular resolution.

Group member to present talk about area hate groups

Anti-Defamation League warns against extremists

By Irene Oplow
Staff Writer

The Christian Identity faction, a pseudo-theological hate movement that involves many groups across the nation, has reached Southern Illinois. Faye Dresner, assistant regional director of the St. Louis Anti-Defamation League, said.

Dresner will discuss right-wing extremism and bias-related crimes of groups such as the Neo-Nazis and skinheads at 7:30 tonight in the Interfaith Center. The lecture is sponsored by the Hillel Foundation.

The ideology of the movement is based on the theory that white Anglo-Saxons descended from 10 lost tribes and are the biblical "chosen" people, Dresner said. The Christian Patriots Defense League, based in Flora, is part of the nationwide movement, Dresner said. Started in 1977, the Christian Patriots Defense League is an extremist survivalist group, she said. "Members believe that society will collapse because communism brings great racial conflict. They believe that white Americans have to prepare for this," Dresner said.

Although the group has not been as active as in previous years, it holds an annual freedom festival in which participants are trained for combat, Dresner said.

Legislation has not been passed in Illinois against such activity, but legislation against paramilitary training in Missouri has affected the group.

The Anti-Defamation League is a non-profit human relations agency which promotes awareness of other cultures in a fight against all forms of discrimination.

Harvard prof gives lecture on business buy out plans

Expert predicts recession could create difficulty by reducing company's cash flow

By Brian Gross
Staff Writer

A Harvard professor, introduced as one of the nation's most prominent industrial organization experts, presented views on hostile mergers and leveraged buy outs Monday in Lawson Hall.

The special lecture, titled "American Industrial Structure: Take-Overs and Leveraged Buy Outs," was presented by Harvard University professor Frederic Scherer.

Scherer focused on the evolution of leveraged buy outs and their current status in the economy.

A leveraged buy out starts as a small, profitable business merging with a large conglomerate.

If the small business loses money after the take-over, the conglomerate will sell it. In a leveraged buy out, the typical buyer will be the small business' former manager.

Scherer said the good news of this trend is leveraged buy outs increase a company's efficiency because the managers, as major share-holders, are more interested in running a tight ship by cutting down on expenses, than before the buy out, when managers were on a salary.

"Simple structure replaces high organization," Scherer said. "This creates incentives. There are behavior changes, all to enhance profits. The company is focused on the most profitable items."

"There is a flip side of the effects of leveraged buy outs.

To fund the purchase of the company, the new owners borrowed heavily. This is the bad news, Scherer said, because overall capital investment goes down to service the heavy debt.

"There's a lot of debt, which could lead to default and bankruptcy," Scherer said. "It's high-risk. If things go badly they lose it all. You can make a fortune or lose everything. They are sacrificing long-run benefits for short-term benefits."

A recession would create difficulty for leveraged buy outs because cash flow will be reduced and interest rates will go up. The owners would be squeezed from two sides, Scherer said.

"There has been a very good period," Scherer said of the economy, "but sooner or later there's going to be a crunch. We're going to have recessions in the future. The recession will be worse than it would have been without leveraged buy-outs."

The question then is how to get the benefits of leveraged buy outs without the costs, Carl Sawyer, faculty member in economics who introduced Scherer, said.

Scherer's solution, Sawyer said, is to cut down on the number of leveraged buy outs and try to change the main structures of the firms.

Sawyer said Scherer's visit to SIUC also included a meeting with professor Keun Huh, with whom Scherer is conducting research.

Scherer's lecture was sponsored by the Department of Economics, School of Business, College of Liberal Arts, and the Graduate School.

Second body found in plant explosion wreckage

PASADENA, Texas (UPI) — A second body was found Tuesday in the wreckage of a Phillips Petroleum plastics plant hit by a series of explosions and fires and company officials said it was time to "face reality" about the fate of 22 employees missing in the twisted, blackened rubble.

Company officials confirmed two deaths in the explosion, which Rice University seismologists said packed a blast equal to an earthquake measuring 3.5 to 4.0 on the Richter scale. The officials said a team from the Harris County medical examiner's office was called to the plant.

"We have to, at some point in time, face reality (about the missing workers)," said plant spokesman Jerry Smith. "We're just awaiting the word at this point in time."

The plant manufactures 17 percent of the nation's production of high-density polyethylene for milk containers, industrial pipe and other products.

The search was hampered by the unexpectedly heavy damage to the plant, parts of which were reduced to little more than blackened, twisted metal. The force of the blast blew open car doors and trucks in an employee parking lot and flattened some vehicles.

Harris County Sheriff Johnny Klevenhagen, who walked through part of the plant with emergency workers, called the scene "total devastation."

"There is major, major damage," Klevenhagen said. "Some of the buildings are totally gone. They're not there. Some of the other areas where the plant had offices are crushed in — there's just nothing left."

Klevenhagen said rescuers found one body buried in debris, with only the legs visible. The rest, he said "is covered by huge mounds of concrete and steel debris."

The cause of the blast is under investigation.

"The first team to enter this morning from Phillips found extensive damage, much more damage than they had anticipated," Smith said. "Some of the buildings we're not able to enter at this time. We still have spots that are very hot. The metal is hot and they can't get into it because of that."

tics division at the Phillips 66 Co. Houston Chemical Complex, said a small area of finished plastics continued to burn in a tank and spot fires were reported in several other areas.

Pasadena Fire Chief Jay Goyer said while the fires were under control, he could not predict when the flames would be doused. "I've my 30 years as a fireman, this is probably one of the worst, damage-wise, that I have seen," Goyer said. "There is a lot of blast damage and a lot of fire damage. I cannot predict which is worse."

Benz said damage was limited to the polyethylene plant, one of three in the 800-acre complex, but that more than half of that area was damaged. The entire complex was closed Tuesday morning and Phillips employees were asked not to report to work.

Thirty-five of 124 plant workers and area residents who went to hospitals after the blast, which sent debris flying six miles into the air, were admitted for treatment, said Dr. Paul Pepe, emergency medical services director for the city of Houston. Five to six of those were in serious to critical condition.

The raw materials used for making plastics were believed to have caused the explosions.

Illinois to sue federal government over plan to close military bases

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — A lawsuit filed by the state of Illinois to block the planned closing of two military bases in the state could lead to a torrent of similar suits if it is allowed to continue, a federal attorney argued Tuesday.

A federal judge heard arguments but did not issue a ruling on whether the state has grounds to sue the federal government over the way a federal commission chose Rantoul's Chanute Air Force Base and Fort Sheridan in Highwood for closure.

The air base and army post are among 86 military facilities across the country targeted for closure last December as part of a federal cost-cutting effort.

The lawsuit filed against Defense Secretary Richard Cheney by state Attorney General Neil Hartigan alleged the base closure commission used obsolete and erroneous data, created fictional land values, and used inconsistent criteria to justify closing the bases.

The commission also failed to consider the costs of environmental cleanup and higher federal social spending the closings would cause, the suit charged.

Justice Department attorney Jeffrey Gutman told U.S. District Judge Richard Mills the state's suit could set a legal precedent with wide-ranging implications for federal facilities nationwide.

Gutman said the suit "would open up a floodgate of litigation involving post offices, IRS offices" and other federal operations that could interfere with the federal government's decisions on how it does business.

The state lacks legal standing to file suit because it has not proven the proposed base closings pose a "real and immediate danger" to Illinois, and because the state has only does not have a direct relationship with the case, Gutman said.

Attorney general's office files suit against Borden factory

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — The state attorney general's office Tuesday filed suit against Borden Chemicals and Plastics, alleging the company failed to control hazardous air emissions at its factory in Illinois.

Attorney General Neil Hartigan said the plant east of Springfield had 14 separate releases of vinyl chloride over a four-year period. Vinyl chloride, a chemical compound used to make plastics, can cause paralysis or even death to those exposed. The release, violated the state Environmental Protection Act and the federal Clean Air Act, he said.

In each of the instances, mechanical failure or operator error allowed a buildup of excessive pressure that caused a chemical release, the suit said. According to the suit, the releases took place between May 1985 and this July.

The suit, filed in Sangamon County Circuit Court, asks a judge to order Borden to conduct a study on how to control the emissions and then comply with the study's results in 30 days.

Woman killed, spouse shot after gunman hijacks auto

Baby delivered before woman succumbs

BOSTON (UPI) — A gunman abducted a couple leaving a downtown hospital after attending birthing classes and took them to a housing project, where he robbed them before fatally shooting the woman and critically wounding her husband, police said Tuesday.

The husband managed to guide police to his car with the use of a cellular telephone before passing out, allowing doctors to deliver his wife's 7-month-old fetus by Caesarean section Monday evening, officials said.

The woman, Carol Stewart, 33, of Reading, who was pregnant in the left side of the head, survived the birth but died at Brigham and Women's Hospital about 2:50 a.m. Tuesday, police said.

The baby, a boy, was being kept in an incubator, said hospital officials, who would not comment further on the infant's condition. Local media reports said the child was in critical condition.

The woman's husband, Charles Stewart, 30, was taken to Boston City Hospital with a bullet wound in his back. He underwent surgery and was in critical condition Tuesday morning.

Mrs. Stewart was an attorney at Canners Publishing Co. in Boston and her husband is general manager of Kakas furs on fashionable Newbury Street in Boston. They had been married about four years and the child was their first.

Mayor Raymond Flynn arrived at Brigham and Women's and ordered every detective on the city police force to hunt the assailant, who was described as black, 6 feet tall and about 30 years old.

Charles Stewart, after being shot along with his wife, used a telephone in his car to call a special state police cellular line about 8:40

The gunman took about $100 in cash and watches before shooting the couple

p.m. Monday, police said.

The state police then contacted Boston police, and with the help of Stewart's "nebulous" descriptions of his location, began mapping his location, state police spokeswoman Trooper Barbara Bennett said.

Stewart passed out from his gunshot wound within several minutes but left the phone line open, allowing police to pinpoint his location by monitoring the noise level of police sirens wailing in the distance, Bennett said.

"He did everybody a favor by passing out and leaving the phone open," which allowed the police to find their car near a housing project in the city's Roxbury section at around 8:50 p.m., Bennett said.

The Stewarts were returning home after attending a birthing class at Brigham and Women's when the gunman hijacked their car near Brigham Circle, Boston police said.

"They were in traffic when the assailant jumped into the car," Deputy Superintendent Joseph Dunford said. "He ordered them to drive off."

Stewart told police he drove about a quarter of a mile before the gunman ordered him to stop near the corner of Terrace and Gurney streets, where he robbed them of about $100 worth of cash and watches.

He then ordered Stewart to drive about another quarter mile to a housing project, where he shot the couple and fled, Dunford said.

Police said the gunman apparently thought Stewart was a police officer because of the cellular phone.

"Just before he shot them, he said something like, 'You're five-oh.' That's street jargon for police," Dunford said.

After the shooting, Dunford said Stewart drove a short distance looking for help, but apparently became too weak and pulled over and called for help.

Stewart, who lived in a suburb about 10 miles north of Boston, was unfamiliar with the area and was giving police "very nebulous street locations," Bennett said.

Flynn said he was outraged by the attack and promised to "use every lawful means to support our police officers in cracking down on gun-wielding criminals."

Report says 1 in 10 child deaths caused by guns in United States

WASHINGTON (UPI) — More than one of every 10 childhood deaths in America during 1987 was caused by a gun, a government report said Tuesday.

The National Center for Health Statistics said firearms killed 3,392 people ages 1 through 19 in 1987 — the last year for which complete statistics are available — accounting for 11 percent of what are defined as childhood deaths.

The center's report, based on death certificates provided by the states and the District of Columbia as well as World Health Organization statistics, included firearm deaths from homicide, suicide and unintentional injuries.

The proportion of deaths caused by firearms rose with age — from 1 percent at ages 1 to 4 to 17 percent among teenagers. Black male teenagers were at the highest risk, with more than 40 percent of all deaths caused by guns.

Between 1968 and 1987, overall firearm-related deaths remained steady in the United States — except among teenagers, for whom the death rate rose from 10.1 per 100,000 in 1968 to 14.7 in 1987, the center said.

The report also said America "is unique" among industrialized nations in the number of young people killed by guns.

In 1986, when there were 1,043 firearm-related homicides among U.S. males ages 15 to 19, there were six in Canada and two in Japan. In 1985, there were no firearm-related homicides among teenage males in England, Wales or Sweden.

The report said 40 percent of deaths among black male teen-agers was caused by guns.

"We are losing our youth — not only to disease — but increasingly to injury and violence," Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan said in releasing the report.

"Just as we have controlled so many childhood diseases, we must now mount an equally aggressive campaign to rid our children's lives of the causes and tools of injury and violence," he said.

As part of such a campaign, Sullivan was to host the premiere Tuesday night of a PBS-produced documentary titled "Youth Homicide: A Public Health Issue," which will be made available to television stations nationwide.

Among children 1 to 9, homicide and unintentional injury each accounted for about half of firearm deaths. At ages 10 to 14, firearm deaths were about equally divided among suicide, homicide and accidents.

For teenagers, homicide accounts for 48 percent of firearm deaths, suicide for 42 percent and accidents for 8 percent. Firearm deaths are six times as likely among teenage boys as teenage girls.

Among white males 15 to 19, motor vehicle injuries have been the leading cause of death for several decades, followed by suicide and then homicide. The report found that firearms have caused about 65 percent of the suicide deaths between 1968 and 1987 and 70 percent of the homicides.

For black males 15 to 19, guns have caused 80 percent of all homicides since 1968, when homicide became the leading cause of death for that group. Between 1984 and 1987, the firearm-related homicide rate for black teenagers rose 66 percent, compared with a 13 percent rise for non-firearm homicides.

He speculated the snake got in the room through an air conditioning unit.

"You talk about something that will scare the tar out of you, I didn't know what to do," he said. Bull snakes are not poisonous, a fact Gauthreaux did not learn until later.

"I didn't know what kind it was. I'm just glad (Brandon's) all right."

Father discovers, kills snake in baby's room

WALKER, La. (UPI) — A father alerted by his 1-year-old son killed a 5-foot bull snake curled up in the room near the toddler.

Richard Gauthreaux was sitting down to watch television Monday night when his son Brandon started calling "Da-Da, Da-Da" from the youngster's bedroom.

When Gauthreaux entered his son's room, he found the snake curled up on the windowsill — a few feet from where his son lay in bed. "It was huge, all curled up and hissing," Gauthreaux said. "It looked like it was going to strike."

He reached for an object, which he hurled at the snake. In the process, he broke the window and the reptile slithered out of the house.

"I hit him, window and all," he said.

Outside, Gauthreaux whacked the snake with a sling blade and killed it.

Atlantis returns to Earth in 'amazingly clean' condition

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — The shuttle Atlantis sailed through its five-day mission in "amazingly clean" condition, clearing the way for NASA to close out 1989 with two flights in eight weeks, including a 10-day Christmas voyage.

Commander Donald Williams guided Atlantis to a flawless touchdown Monday at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., to close out the sixth post-Challenger mission, a successful five-day flight highlighted by the launch Oct. 18 of the $1.4 billion Galileo probe to Jupiter.

"I wish you all could have the opportunity to experience what we've experienced for the last several days, to see the world from that vantage point and to see what American know-how and engineering and technology can do," Williams, 47, said at a post-landing ceremony.

He and co-pilot Michael McCulley, 46, Franklin Chang-Diaz, 39, Shannon Lucid, 46, and Ellen Baker, 36, flew back to their homes in Houston late Monday.

Atlantis sailed through its 79-orbit, 2 million-mile mission with no major problems and officials said Tuesday the orbiter came through launch and re-entry in good condition.

"It's looking pretty clean," NASA spokeswoman Lisa Malone said by telephone from Edwards. "They don't have any problems at all that they're tracking. They've been really happy with the way the work's been going."

Shuttle program chief William Lenoir was elated with the shuttle's performance and the appearance of the ship's fragile heat-shield tile system.

"We have Atlantis sitting on the lakebed after a very successful, excellent flight," he said at a news conference. "The vehicle looks amazingly clean. We did not see any significant tile damage."

Left behind in space was the $1.4 billion Galileo probe, successfully launched by Atlantis's crew on a six-year voyage to Jupiter that will carry it once past Venus and twice past Earth before arrival at the giant planet Dec. 7, 1995.

"For me, this whole thing means a very important coming together of two programs... the manned and unmanned space programs," Chang said. "This is a great beginning for the study of Jupiter.

Shuttle Discovery readied for trip to launch pad

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — The shuttle Discovery was readied Tuesday for a midnight trip to the launch pad, with Atlantis back on the ground in California in near perfect shape after its five-day space odyssey, officials said.

"It seems like to me that we're finally back on track," Conrad Nagel, Atlantis's processing director, said by telephone from Edwards Air Force Base, Calif. "We've had a minimum amount of problems."

Back at the Kennedy Space Center, Discovery, bolted to a giant mobile launch platform, was scheduled to be hauled from NASA's rocket assembly building to launch pad 39B — the same pad used for Atlantis's blastoff last Wednesday — starting at 11:01 p.m. CDT Wednesday.

If all goes well, the shuttle's four-man, one-woman crew will blast off on a secret military mission around Nov. 20.

After Discovery is mounted on the pad Wednesday, technicians will hook up fuel lines, electrical cables and hydraulic systems to ready it for a two-day dress-rehearsal countdown scheduled for Sunday and Monday that will set the stage for take off.

Jupiter last Wednesday.

"We had a real (good) landing," Nagel said. "Some people say it's one of the best we've had."

the Mojave Desert, technicians Tuesday continued readying Atlantis for a cross-country trip back to Florida on Saturday or Sunday for work to ready it for its next flight in February.

Commander Donald Williams and co-pilot Michael McCulley guided Atlantis to a flawless touchdown Monday on a dry lakebed runway at Edwards to close out the sixth post-Challenger mission, a successful five-day flight highlighted by the launch of the $1.4 billion Galileo spaceship sailed through its 79-orbit, 2-million-mile mission in remarkably good condition with no apparent brake damage or other problems and that overall, the ship came through launch and landing in better shape than any previous post-Challenger flight.

Cindy Lodge, who oversees work on the shuttle's fragile heat-shield tile system, said less than 25 "dings" were noticed after landing and that only a half-dozen tiles will have to be replaced — the best record yet in the post-Challenger era.

Discovery's crew, meanwhile — commander Frederick Gregory, 48, and co-pilot John Blaha, 47, both Air Force colonels, Navy Capt. Manley Carter, 42, and civilians Kathryn Thornton, 37, and Story Musgrave, 54 — plan to climb aboard their ship Monday to participate in the final hours of the dress-rehearsal countdown.

Details about the mission are secret, including the identity of Discovery's payload, the launch time and the mission duration. But sources have said liftoff is planned for between 7:45 p.m. and 8:45 p.m. Nov. 20, setting the stage for NASA's first post-Challenger night launch.

The space agency plans to close out 1989 with the launch of the shuttle Columbia around Dec. 18 on a 10-day Christmas flight to dispatch a military communications satellite and retrieve a science package left in orbit in 1984.

Galileo is on its way."

NASA technicians plan to bolt on a satellite launching mission.

Columbia commander Daniel Brandenstein, co-pilot James Wetherbee, Bonnie Dunbar, David Low and Marsha Ivins plan to spend 10 days in orbit for the upcoming mission to deploy a military communications satellite and to retrieve the Long Duration Exposure Facility, or LDEF.

The size of a school bus, LDEF was dropped in orbit in April 1984 to find out how a variety of materials are changed after long-term exposure to the harsh environment of space. NASA originally planned to retrieve the satellite after one year, but slips in the shuttle schedule, and ultimately the Challenger disaster, put the mission on hold.

Atlantis to the back of a 747 jumbo jet later this week for a cross-country trip back to the Kennedy Space Center in Florida where the orbiter will be readied for launch in February on a secret military mission.

With Atlantis back on the ground, NASA plans to close out 1989 with two flights over the Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays.

Technicians plan to haul the shuttle Discovery to launch pad 39B starting at 12:01 a.m. Wednesday for takeoff around Nov. 20 — four weeks to the day after Atlantis's touchdown — on a blacked-out mission to launch a military payload.

If all goes well, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration will close out the year by launching the shuttle Columbia on a 10-day mission over Christmas to dispatch a military communications satellite and retrieve a science package left in orbit in 1984.

Columbia's flight will be the sixth of 1989, a record exceeded only once — in 1985 — since the shuttle program began in 1981.

"The next two launches look like they're pretty much on schedule," Lenoir said.

Phillips plant damaged by blast is major world plastics producer

PASADENA, Texas (UPI) — The sprawling Phillips Petroleum Co. facility wracked by explosions Monday is a major manufacturer of polyethylene, producing up to 18 percent of total U.S. production of the plastic.

The 800-acre plant also is part of the largest complex of petrochemical plants in the United States and the second-largest in the world, said Lee Vela, spokesman for the Port of Houston.

Vela said 150 industries line the upper half of the Ship Channel and about 130 of them are involved in petroleum or chemical work.

Three types of plastic are manufactured at the Phillips 66 Co. Houston Chemical Complex. The plant produces 1.5 billion pounds a year of polyethylene, a plastic used to make milk and detergent containers and pipe used by cities and in oil fields.

The plant also produces 500 million pounds a year of polypropylene, used in fibers, packaging and blow molding, and 180 million pounds a year of K-Resin, a clear plastic used to make drinking cups, said Phillips spokeswoman Patricia Marshall at the company's headquarters in Bartlesville, Okla.

Although Phillips has other plants that make small amounts of plastics, it depends on the Houston site for most of the production.

"We don't have anything else like the Houston Chemical Complex," Marshall said.

Phillips workers who entered the plant Tuesday reported damage was much more extensive than they had expected, with at least 50 percent of the polyethylene facility destroyed.

The impact of the damage will determine whether the price of polyethylene rises, industry experts said.

"If the whole thing goes down, there's going to be shortages all over the place," said Bill Kuhlke of DeWitt & Co., a Houston chemical consulting firm.

But others said polyethylene is in plentiful supply and that the damage at the Phillips facility will have little impact on the industry.

"Economically, I think it will have relatively little impact," said Patrick Arthur of Patrick W. Arthur Co. "I think its effect on Phillips, in a broad sense, will be very minor."

The explosion took place as contract workers were laying the foundation for another $100 million polyethylene manufacturing unit. Phillips also had planned a 50 percent increase in K-Resin production in 1990 and a 15 percent increase in polyethylene production, Marshall said.

At its Sweeny plant, which makes ethylene gas used as a feedstock at the Pasadena complex, Phillips is spending $300 million to add production capacity for 1.5 billion pounds a year of ethylene.

High-density polyethylene comes out of the complex in the form of milky pellets.

by Gary Trudeau

OKAY, EVERYBODY, BEFORE WE READ THROUGH THE NEXT FEW SCENES, LET ME GIVE YOU A QUICK SYNOPSIS.

THE RAID HAS TAKEN A SERIOUS TOLL ON BUSH'S SQUAD. TWO AVENGERS ARE RIDDLED BY FLAK, WOUNDING THE TAIL-GUNNER IN ONE OF THEM.

WHEN THE BOYS GET BACK TO THE CARRIER, THEY'RE TIRED AND EMOTIONALLY SPENT. THEY HEAD FOR THE OFFICERS' MESS, WHERE THEY LOSE THEMSELVES IN A NIGHT OF SERIOUS DRINK!

DO I GO?

'Bad Boys' of Detroit expect to win championship again

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. (UPI) — The Detroit Pistons, who rode their 'Bad Boy' image to the NBA championship last season, expect to repeat this year with experience and their trademark suffocating defense.

Last season Detroit won a team-record 63 games and its second straight Central Division title. They raced through the playoffs and dethroned the Lakers in four games to claim their first NBA title.

"This is going to be a very tough year to repeat," said Detroit Coach Chuck Daly. "I feel we have an excellent team back, but whether we have the chemistry and whether things work out like last season remains to be seen."

The most notable change for the Pistons will be the absence of starting power forward Rick Mahorn, who was taken by the Minnesota Timberwolves in the expansion draft. Mahorn — who typified the team's elbow-flying, stare-down style — was Detroit's key intimidator and enforcer.

"You don't replace a Rick Mahorn," said All-Star guard Isiah Thomas, who led the team in scoring last season with an 14.2 average. "On and off the court he was what being a Detroit Piston was all about."

To replace Mahorn, the Pistons signed free agent forwards Scott Hastings from Atlanta and David Greenwood from Denver. They will share Mahorn's spot with veteran center-forward John Salley.

Aside from replacing Mahorn, the nucleus of last year's team remains. Bill Laimbeer is back at center, a leaner Mark Aguirre returns at forward and Thomas and Joe Dumars — the Most Valuable Player in the NBA Finals — make up the backcourt.

Coming off the bench will be forward Dennis Rodman, guard Vinnie Johnson and centers

"You don't replace a Rick Mahorn. On and off the court he was what being a Detroit Piston was all about."

—Isiah Thomas

William Bedford and James Edwards. Bedford will be playing for the first time since undergoing his second bout with drug abuse rehabilitation.

Daly said experience and defense will be the Pistons' key attributes this season. Last year, Detroit held its opponents to an average of 100.8 points per game — second only to Utah. In the playoffs, they gave up 100 points or more in two of 15 games.

Ewing is key to Knicks' success, fastbreak, press will be featured

NEW YORK (UPI) — The New York Knicks come off their most successful season in 16 years with a new coach making new plans for Patrick Ewing.

With Rick Pitino having taken over the scandalized Kentucky basketball program, Stu Jackson moves up from Knicks assistant to his first head coaching job at any level of organized basketball.

Jackson, at 33 the NBA's youngest head coach, inherits a team that went 52-30 last year and won the Atlantic Division. The last time the Knicks enjoyed such a season was 1972-73 when they were 57-25 and won the NBA title.

Under Pitino last season, the Knicks swept Philadelphia in the first round of the playoffs. But the team's shortcomings became evident in the second round when Michael Jordan and the Chicago Bulls eliminated the Knicks.

Chief among New York's ills was the inability of Ewing to take control under the basket. He was played even by former teammate Bill Cartwright and the Bulls were able to render ineffective both the Knicks' trapping defense and their three-point shooting.

Thus Jackson has decided his team will turn to Ewing early and often this season. He has placed his young team's fortunes on the shoulders of his All-Star center, who averaged 22.7 points, 9.3 rebounds and 3.5 blocked shots last season.

"Patrick Ewing has been the foundation of our success," Jackson said. "He enjoyed his best NBA season last year. But as great a season as Patrick had, I truly believe his best basketball is still ahead of him."

Other than making Ewing the first option on offense, Jackson says there will be few other significant changes on a team that is returning all its major contributors from last season.

"We will continue to play an tempo, fastbreak style to take advantage of our athletic ability," he said. "We will continue to press, but more selectively."

Returning also are All-Star guard Mark Jackson (16.9 points and 9.6 assists) who will be backed up by Rod Strickland (8.9 points), coming off a fine rookie season. Shooting guard features Gerald Wilkins (14.3 points) and Trent Tucker (8.5 points), who will continue to provide the three-point option.

76ers look to regain prominence

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Never reluctant to take a risk, the Philadelphia 76ers are looking to the future at the possible expense of the present.

Concerned about Maurice Cheeks' age and the minor injuries that slowed the 33-year-old guard during the 1988-89 season, the 76ers shipped Cheeks and two other players to the San Antonio Spurs in late August for Johnny Dawkins and Jay Vincent.

In the 26-year-old Dawkins, the 76ers hope they have a point guard for the future and, in Vincent, a valuable scorer off the bench.

Nothing comes easily, however, for the franchise that in 1986 sent Moses Malone to the Washington Bullets in exchange for Jeff Ruland, who played five games as a 76er then retired because of chronic knee problems.

Dawkins missed 50 games last season because of a mysterious nerve problem that left him unable to control his left foot. He also had some problems playing the point in his three years with the Spurs.

The 76ers point out that Dawkins averaged 17.7 points and 7.6 assists in his first 23 games last season. In his career, Dawkins has averaged 13 points and 5.5 assists per game. In contrast, Cheeks has averages of 12.2 points and 7.2 assists in his 11 NBA seasons.

Hersey Hawkins, the 76ers' No. 1 draft choice last year, averaged 15.1 points per game but must improve on his 45 percent shooting accuracy.

Kenny Payne, this year's top draft pick, could start opposite Barkley at forward but is only likely to remain in the game until Anderson comes off the bench.

Celtics' Bird foresees 'great team' this year

BOSTON (UPI) — With the return of Larry Bird and the remodeling of the Boston Celtics, the NBA's most successful franchise expects to rejoin the league's elite.

The 16-time champions were a mediocre 42-40 last year, Bird missing all but the first six games due to bone spurs. He did not play another game after the Nov. 19 surgery on both heels and since then half the team has changed.

Gone are Danny Ainge, Brad Lohaus, Brian Shaw, Ronnie Grandison, Ramon Rivas and Mark Acres. Replacing them are John Bagley, Joe Kleine, Ed Pinckney, Kevin Gamble, Kelvin Upshaw and rookie Michael Smith.

How good will the Celtics be? Bird has no doubt.

"We're going to have a great team," he said.

The blending of talent is proceeding smoothly, Boston winning its first five exhibition games with smooth performances. Bird, also recovering from the fractures of two vertebrae in a fall this summer, is regaining his form after nearly a year away from his sport. During the preseason, his passing and shooting have shown flashes of their old excellence.

Boston has three All-Stars in the frontcourt: Bird, center Robert Parish and forward Kevin McHale. Coach Jimmy Rodgers is considering a return of McHale to the sixth-man role he played during his first five years.

Pinckney, a banging rebounder with good speed, would start at power forward but McHale will be on the court in the final minutes of close games. By lessening McHale's minutes, Rodgers anticipates the 6-foot-10 five-time All-Star being fresh at the end of games.

Eoston's best players are old. Parish is 36 and in December Bird turns 33 and McHale 32. Rodgers plans a rotation involving 10 or 11 players and because the young reserves have plenty of talent, the strategy seems sound.

MOTHER, from Page 28

on my game," she said. "If I could improve my mental game, that would make me happy."

Johnson said one thing she does to get going when things get tough is to dig deep inside and try to convince herself she can keep going. "I tell myself 'I want to start, I want to do this right.' I keep talking to myself the whole time," she said.

"I dig deep down inside and convince myself I can do it. It helps me through the rough times," she said. "(Hagemeyer) has planted the seed in me."

Traveling with the team is more like being with a family, she said. "We are a lot of fun on the road. We joke a lot with each other. Everyone on the team is pretty close. I've played on some teams where people did not get along and that's not good," Johnson said.

Johnson said the team's closeness runs over from last year. "A lot of people are back from last year and the new people just fit right in."

"Like last weekend — we went to a recording studio and sang 'New York, New York' and 'Twist and Shout'. It was pretty bad," she said. "We do little things like that. That helps keep the team together."

Being part of the team means living with the other players during road trips, she said. "During away games I bring a pillow and blanket. Martha (Finnhaber) brings a teddy bear," Johnson said.

Johnson said part of the reason she chose Southern over other schools was because the players on the volleyball team made her feel welcome. "The players I met were just great. They made me feel right at home," she said. "I also liked the campus. I thought it was pretty here, it reminds me a lot of home."

Mickey Mouse has been Johnson's good luck charm since high school, she said. "I had this Mickey Mouse sweatshirt that I wore to all of my track meets. I was known as Mickey Mouse Woman," she said. "I guess now my Mickey Mouse watch is my good luck charm."

Being in close proximity with the team means spending a good deal of time with the coach too, Johnson said. "(Hagemeyer) jokes around with us. She's fun. She has games for us to play and prizes and things. She is really unpredictable sometimes."

"But if we play badly, she will get on us and rip us to shreds. She gets right to the point and lets you know what she is feeling. That is good," Johnson said.

Living, eating and sleeping volleyball may be exciting Johnson said, but it can be frustrating also. "Sometimes I just get sick of it. I feel like just forgetting it all but if I wasn't playing volleyball, I would be so lost," she said.

Johnson said she would like to continue her volleyball career and coach some day. "There is not a lot out there in volleyball right now. I want to coach, it would be nice," she said.

"Volleyball has got me to school, it has taught me a lot about how to live. You learn little lessons about what it takes to make it. When the going gets tough, you have to dig in and work harder. It's taught me to be tough," Johnson said.

Missouri's basketball coach returns after chemotherapy

COLUMBIA, Mo. (UPI) — Missouri basketball coach Norm Stewart, stating that he is again free of cancer and ulcers, promised Tuesday that his recent illness cancer will not change him nor his demeanor.

Stewart missed the final third of last season after collapsing on the team plane while en route to a game at Oklahoma. He was diagnosed as having seven ulcers and subsequent examinations disclosed colon cancer and a bad gall bladder.

He underwent surgery to remove the tumors and gall bladder and has since undergone what he termed an "emotional six-month treatment" including chemotherapy.

The season was a checkered one for the Tigers. Just before Stewart's illness, assistant coach Bob Sundvold was suspended for NCAA rules violations, which ignited a continuing investigation. With assistant coach Rich Daly taking over, Missouri won the Big Eight Tournament and advanced to the third round of the NCAA Tournament before losing to Syracuse. Missouri was 29-8 last season, setting a school record for victories, and 9-5 after Stewart was forced from the bench.

The coach, in his 23rd season at Missouri, Tuesday staged his first news conference since becoming ill Feb. 9. He said he had been silent since February because he was "concentrating on getting better."

Stewart, 54, said he was given a "clean bill of health" and a recent examination showed that the cancer had not recurred. The illness and treatments caused him to lose 30 pounds at one point — "Ten of which I need to lose," he said. — and cost him much of his hair.

Rain, Rolling Stones threaten Series plans

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — First an earthquake jelayed the World Series.

Now rain is forecast for Game 3 Friday night, and a different problem — a Rolling Stones concert — threatens Game 7.

The National Weather Service predicts showers and temperatures in the 40s to mid-60s for Friday. However, skies were expected to clear Saturday when Game 4 was scheduled.

The Oakland Athletics lead the San Francisco Giants 2-0. If necessary, Game 5 is scheduled for Sunday at Candlestick Park and Games 6 and 7 in Oakland on Tuesday and Wednesday.

If Game 7 is played Wednesday in Oakland, a conflict arises with the Rolling Stones. The Stones are scheduled to perform Nov. 4 and 5 in the Coliseum.

Rock promoter Bill Graham, whose company is bringing the Stones to Oakland, said Tuesday the band needs five days to build a massive set for the concert.

"Our contract clearly states that we have the right to use the stage for five days prior," Graham said. "I was not aware until the weekend that there was a conflict."

Graham complained that Baseball Commissioner Fay Vincent's office did not check with him or with Coliseum officials before moving Game 3 of the World Series from Tuesday to Friday. He also criticized the decision not to hold a game on Monday, thereby extending the Series one more day into the Stones' preparation time.

"This schedule fits in very well with our traditional World Series games and also fits in very well with the network," said Jim Small, a spokesman for Major League Baseball.

The ABC-TV network has exclusive television rights to the World Series. "The network has previous obligations to Monday Night Football," Small added.

Small said the baseball commissioner's office and the Oakland A's "have been in contact with the Coliseum people" to discuss the Stones contract. "We hope we can work something out," he said.

Graham called the choice to defer to Monday Night Football selfish.

He said he would have abided by a decision to stop all entertainment events in San Francisco, "but when one sector of our community is being moved around at the will of another sector, that is not kosher," he said.

The promoter termed the Stones' five-story-high oversize stage "the most elaborate in the history of traveling rock 'n' roll shows." He said it could conceivably be set up in 3 1/2 days, but not in 2 1/2. "You can't just send men up those ropes 15 hours a day," he said.

Bennett Kleinberg, a publicist for the Stones, said earlier that the band's preparation time has varied, but he said it has rarely if ever gone below three days.

"Right now the contract is standing," said Kleinberg.

The Giants offered to refund tickets for those who did not want to attend the games after the earthquake last Tuesday. But the reported that, "Due to the very limited response to the World Series refund offer, there is no public sale of World Series tickets at this time. An announcement will be made concerning any future sales of World Series tickets."

Bears now playing catch-up

LAKE FOREST, Ill. (UPI) — The Chicago Bears, NFC Central Division champions five straight years, find themselves looking up for the first time since 1983.

With their third straight loss, a 27-7 thumping to the Browns at Cleveland Monday night, the Bears, 4-3, fell a game behind the Minnesota Vikings. They had not lost three in a row since 1981, under Coach Neill Armstrong, and had been in first place for an 85-game span.

But Coach Mike Ditka, who lauded his team as one in disarray after their second straight loss, was much more subdued Tuesday.

"There's not one answer. I think it's a matter of playing consistently confident football," Ditka said. "If we do what we're supposed to do, everything will work out."

The coach, however, for the second straight week declined to name his starting quarterback for the upcoming game. The Bears host the Los Angeles Rams Sunday at Soldier Field.

Mike Tomczak, the starter since the season began, was pulled for the second game in a row, and backup Jim Harbaugh led the team to its only score. Tomczak, in his fifth year out of Ohio State, completed 4 of 14 passes for 76 yards and threw an interception that led to a Cleveland touchdown.

"When you're grasping for straws, sometimes you hope you can ignite a spark by doing one thing, and sometimes it doesn't work, anyway," Ditka said. "We'll do what we have to do to win on Sunday. And I think we can win on Sunday if that's what you're asking me. I think we can win on a lot of Sundays."

He added later: "If I did decide to start Jim, I'm starting Jim because I need a change to get the club back on track. It's like if a guy's in a slump — and I'm not even sure you can say that Mike's in a slump — but if I make a change it'll be to do what I feel can most help the football team right now."

Ditka said he would take full blame for the three-game losing streak, the first since he was hired to coach the Bears in 1982.

"It's simple in life. Don't make it harder than it is," he said. "We're in this game to win. When we cease to win, we cease to be. When you lose enough, you're gone, as a player, as a coach."

"So it's my fault. I can't blame anybody else. I take full blame for it. When you take enough blame and get enough blame, binnnnng, like Ricochet Rabbit, you're gone."

Fuller may have played last game

By John Crumpacker

STANFORD, Calif. — For Jeff Fuller, the day after was substantially better than the day before.

When he was brought to Stanford Hospital on Sunday, the San Francisco 49ers free safety was incoherent and suffering from a concussion and a serious neck injury. He had numbness in his left leg and lack of movement and feeling in his right arm.

A day later he was fully conscious and had regained some movement in his arm after his frightening collision Sunday with John Stephens of the New England Patriots.

"It's interesting his first comment was I was happy we won the ballgame," coach George Seifert said of his Monday morning visit to Fuller. "Obviously, he's not in a very positive state, with the way they've got him with oxygen and IVs and all that sort of thing. His head is in some kind of brace."

Dr. Michael Dillingham, another 49ers' team physician, said Fuller inquired about the possibility of playing again.

"I told him it was something we had to wait and see," Dillingham said. "None of us is 100 percent sure. You've got to be honest with people."

Invitational Oct. 7, Owen paced the field with a time of 31:22 in the 10,000-meter race.

In the Ole Miss Invitational Friday, Owen tied sophomore Mark Stuart for the top spot with a time of 25:10. Performances like these had Cornell excited about Owen.

"I'm excited about his potential," Cornell said. "He is an 18-year old and has ran a 4:08 mile. He might not have quite the potential of Jon Dennis, but he's not far behind him. I think Gerall could be an eventual NCAA qualifier."

Dennis was the Missouri Valley

Conference cross country champion as a freshman on the Salukis last season. He has the fourth best time on the SIU-C cross country course with a mark of 24:19. Dennis finished 55th overall at the NCAA championships. He has since left the Salukis and returned home for family reasons.

Dennis also had an influence on Owen.

"I talked to Jon Dennis at the beginning of January when we were running together in Portugal," Owen said. "I was already interested in coming to the United States. Jon told me about the program here and how much he liked it."

Owen came here with fine credentials. He was Welsh junior 1500-meter, 3000-meter, cross country and road racing champion last year. He ran a 30:11.0 in the 10,000-meter race last season, one minute faster than the 31:05.5 winning time in the 1988 MVC Outdoor Championship.

Although Owen is a freshman, Cornell felt he could have an immediate impact for the Salukis. Owen has been one of the Salukis' most consistent runners this season. Owen, along with Stuart and sophomore Vaughan Harry, have

Holtz says he'll leave unless Irish quit fighting

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (UPI) — Lou Holtz repeated Tuesday his vow to resign as Notre Dame's football coach if the top-ranked Fighting Irish are involved in another pre-game brawl.

Holtz vowed to quit in the wake of a fight between the Irish and Southern California players Saturday before Notre Dame's 28-24 triumph over the Trojans. Notre Dame officials have sent Southern Cal a letter of apology for the incident.

"I'm embarrassed by it," Holtz said Tuesday. "We should have avoided it at all costs, even if it meant retreating. We will avoid it or I'll not coach again."

Notre Dame's seventh straight victory over the arch-rival Trojans was diminished by a pre-game brawl between players, Holtz said.

"I don't have much enthusiasm right now," Holtz said. "There is probably something wrong with the atmosphere of our football team. There's nothing I can do to repair the damage this has done, no matter what happens."

About 30 players were involved in the pre-game fight, which began as Southern Cal players tried to leave the field after practice. USC players filed past the Irish in the north end zone toward the only exit from the field when the fight began. Security guards joined assistant coaches in separating players apart, allowing the Trojans to reach their locker room.

"This has happened two or three times in big games and it always seems to be here," USC Coach Larry Smith said after the game. "It's unfortunate. The people here should look at their security and how they bring teams in or out of the field. It was a real mess."

Holtz blamed himself for not altering his team's warmup pattern in the wake of a pre-game fight last year when Miami (Fla.) visited Notre Dame Stadium.

"I should have been wiser and smarter," Holtz said. "I should have moved our players out and not practiced in the stadium. I'm at fault because of the logistics of how we conduct our pre-game workout."

"I don't offer this as an explanation. There is no explanation. Rather than do the pre-game warmup like we've been doing it for 20 years, I should have changed it. Winning the football game is not worth the embarrassment to the university," Holtz said.

Holtz said he did not believe his players started the fight.

Herrin counting on aggressive play

By Kevin Simpson
Staff Writer

Coach foresees physical team, quicker tempo

An aggressive style of play will be the trademark for the upcoming men's basketball season, according to head coach Rich Herrin.

The Salukis have been practicing since the season opened Oct. 15, anticipating a run at the Missouri Valley Conference title.

Herrin said he likes to see a team that hustles and puts bodies on the floor going for loose balls and rebounds.

"An aggressive style of play will be the trademark of this ball club," Herrin said. "They're going to be physical and very aggressive."

In practices so far this season, the coaching staff has been stressing fundamentals of the game.

"The players have been doing a lot of shooting, a lot of defensive work and a lot of work on rebounding," Herrin said. We're going to go inside more this season. But as a whole, we're shooting the ball better than I thought we would."

"I'm a strong believer in varying what you do on the practice floor," Herrin said. "We try to accomplish the same things, but with as much variation as possible. That's the important thing."

The coach said the Salukis will push the ball down the court faster in trying to improve on last season's 78.5 points-per game average during their 20-14 season.

"We're going to take the initial break any time we can. Take the good, quick shots," Herrin said. "We'll put it up quick, but we're also going to be able to come down and set it up in a half-court offense. We've put a lot of new things in offensively. They have adjusted and done a good job of picking up the offense."

The quicker tempo will require more of an effort from the bench. Herrin insists finding help from the bench will not be a problem.

"We're a little deeper than anyone thinks we are. Our younger players are going to have to mature quickly."

"We've made great progress in our offense," Herrin said. "They've made big strides. Their effort is better than any we've had in the past years."

Based on statistics from last season, defense is something Herrin and his coaching staff will need to improve on before the regular season starts.

In 14 Valley games last season, the Salukis finished seventh in scoring defense, allowing 79.4 points per game. SIU-C finished sixth in field goal defense, with opposing teams shooting .486 against the Salukis.

Herrin said it is difficult to judge a team defensively by the number of points it allows per game, mainly because of the tempo a team uses.

"It isn't necessarily points allowed, but the point spread," Herrin said. "We're not going to control the tempo of the game. We're going to take it down and try to score quick points. That gives our opponents a lot more ball possessions."

"Defense is going to win ball games. We'll put more pressure on the ball, try to deny the entry pass whenever possible," Herrin said. "We will be a better defensive team than last year."

Freshman crosses Atlantic, runs his way to No. 1 spot

By Greg Scott

Gerall Owen, a freshman on the men's cross country team, didn't want to pass up an opportunity.

Owen, from Aberystwyth, Wales, said he doesn't regret his decision to further his cross country career at an American school.

"I had offers in Great Britain as well," Owen said. "But I like a challenge and this is a new experience for me. I wanted to do something different and I have no second thoughts about coming here."

Owen said his decision to move here was influenced by Saluki coach Bill Cornell.

"Coach Cornell and his wife have been very good to me," Owen said. "He visited me in the summer and helped me a lot. He's made me feel right at home."

One of the things Owen had to adjust was the warm temperatures at the beginning of the semester.

"Coach Cornell told me about the temperatures here and I just looked at it in a positive way," Owen said. "We had a hot summer in Great Britain and I ran during the hottest part of the day to get used to it."

Cornell said Owen also had to adjust to the academic requirements here.

"It's a different system over here and he has had to adjust to what the professors expect out of him," Cornell said. "It's tough for anyone coming that far, but I think he's adjusting to it."

Spiker credits mother for where she is today

If Amy Johnson's mother hadn't forced her to play basketball in the eighth grade, she probably wouldn't be playing volleyball for the Salukis right now.

Johnson, a part-time starter and junior from St. Paul, Minn., said after her family moved into a new school system her mother forced her to play basketball in order to help her meet new friends.

"She said, 'You are going to play, that's all there is to it.' I hated her at first for making me play, but look what it's led to," Johnson said.

Johnson said she wasn't forced to try volleyball, but instead picked it up to stay in shape for basketball. "It turned out that I was better at volleyball," she said.

Volleyball is the sport Johnson eventually chose to concentrate her energies toward. She said it has made her a better person. "It has made me stronger and more confident. It is so easy to be lazy when it comes to homework and other things. Volleyball keeps me active."

Johnson, majoring in history, said the discipline learned from playing with a team also directly applies to her studies. "Volleyball has helped in history because I know that I have volleyball at this time, school at this time, and that I only have this much time for studying," she said. "It has helped me budget my time. If I wasn't playing volleyball, I would think I had plenty of time to get things done and probably not do them at all."

Johnson said the game of volleyball means a lot to her. "Besides winning I like to be on the court, it is so much fun to play."

"When I step out on the court, my heart starts racing. The adrenalin starts pumping and it's a real high," Johnson said. "It takes me a long time to come down from that feeling after a game. In fact it takes a couple of hours before I can fall asleep."

Johnson said she has made it to the point this season where she feels she is playing at a better level of volleyball. "It feels good. I have had a problem with being consistent in the past," she said. "I think I had a confidence problem. Patti (Hagemeyer, Saluki volleyball coach) has really helped me to gain confidence in myself. I think it is certainly showing now."

If Johnson could change one element of her game she said it would be a mental change. "Keeping my head in the game is what I need work on. Physically I think I am there — mentally I have to work

Owners fail in attempt to elect commissioner

CLEVELAND (UPI) — A meeting of NFL owners extended past six hours Tuesday with no end in sight to a power struggle centering around the election of a new NFL commissioner.

Owners, locked in the dispute since July, began the session optimistic that a decision could be made between Jim Finks, general manager of the New Orleans Saints, and Paul Tagliabue, a Washington attorney who has represented the league since 1969.

But the fourth meeting to break the standoff between feuding NFL factions has shown no signs of ending with a successor to 29-year commissioner Pete Rozelle.

"I'm not anywhere as optimic as I was when we started this morning," said Dallas owner Jerry Jones, a Tagliabue supporter.

Ed McCaskey, chairman of the board of the Chicago Bears, said the two sides remain apart, hinting that one side continues to abstain when voting on the candidate backed by the other. He also said long-time loyalties and friendships are being tested.

"The only thing that grew was the pass vote," McCaskey said. "I told them the Bears are going to count friends. I made that clear. We've done some favors in the past."

Buffalo owner Ralph Wilson also said he was pessimistic that a decision would be made Tuesday.
