Units vote to form new communications college

By Teri Lynn Carlock
Special Assignment Writer

Five units in the College of Communications and Fine Arts voted last week to draft a proposal for a new communications college.

Benjamin A. Shepherd, vice president for academic affairs and provost, released a program proposal for SIUC in August. In his proposal, Shepherd suggested four programs and the University Museum transfer to the College of Liberal Arts.

The School of Art and Design, the School of Music, Department of Theater, the Department of Speech Communication and the museum all voted in favor of moving to COLA.

The Department of Theater and Department of Speech Communication voted Wednesday to move.

As a reaction to Shepherd's proposal and President John C. Guyon's committee report to abolish the college all together, members of the remaining units in CFA, the Department of Cinema and Photography, the School of Journalism, the Department of Radio and Television, the Broadcast Service and the Department of Communication Disorders and Sciences want to determine their future.

They are doing so by creating their own proposal for a college, said Walter Jaehnig, director of the School of Journalism and one of the initiators of the proposal.

Jaehnig said all departments will select representatives to serve on a committee that will develop a proposal for a new college. The committee's first meeting probably will be Tuesday, Jaehnig said.

"There have been a number of outlines and proposals put together for this purpose," he

Hillary Clinton asks for votes

By Christy Gutowski
Special Assignment Writer

Hillary Clinton visited campus Saturday to urge students and residents to vote and pushed the Bill Clinton-Al Gore ticket and its proposals.

Maintaining the "It's time for a change" slogan the Democrats have cried since the primary races, the wife of Democratic presidential nominee Bill Clinton explained the party's views concerning the economy, health care, ethanol use and labor.

But Clinton mainly focused on the importance of education as the answer to many of the country's problems.

"She said America needs a 'true education president for a change,' and she believes her husband has a plan that will work to reform education.

"Seventy percent of the young people in this country will never get a four-year degree from a university like this one," she said. "And what happens to them now? Not very much."

Bill Clinton vows to offer job opportunities for high school graduates by developing a national apprenticeship program that offers non-college students two years of skills training, she said.

Clinton said the Democrats want to scrap the existing student loan program but maintain the Pell Grant program to keep up with tuition increases and other costs that go along with education.

"I understand how the budget problems in Illinois have affected higher education," she said. "What my husband wants to do is make higher education affordable again for every youngster and, through the National Service Trust Fund, provide the means for young people to be able to get the money and then pay it back."

Clinton said the Democrats' proposed fund would guarantee every American who wants a college education the means to obtain one by borrowing from the fund. They would pay it back later as a small percentage of their income over time, or through community service as teachers, law enforcement officers, health care workers, or peer counselors helping kids stay off drugs.

"So it will be a revolving loan fund for everyone to take advantage of," she said.

Reform in state education systems must be targeted in quality and funding, she said.

The next president needs to take a hard look at the costs of higher education, Clinton said. It has gone up faster than most other costs in the average person's budget during the last 10 years.

"If you look at the cost side, and you do provide the resources for young people to be able to afford to go (to college), then I think we'll get this into some kind of a balance again so it won't be such a hardship either by the cutting of necessary courses or by tuition hikes that are clear out of the reach of some

First lady hopeful is advocate of children

By Christy Gutowski
Special Assignment Writer

If Hillary Rodham Clinton becomes the country's next first lady, the nation will have a children's rights advocate in the White House who is highly visible and has separate credentials than her husband.

Clinton, wife of Democratic presidential nominee Bill Clinton and mother of 12-year-old daughter Chelsea, said in an interview with the Daily Egyptian that if she becomes first lady she will continue to fight for children's rights — a fight she began more than 20 years ago.

"I want to be a voice for children in the White House and I want to be able to help bring about changes that will really improve lives of families

Federal judge denies injunction in logging case

By John Rezanka
General Assignment Writer

A motion for an injunction barring logging activities in the Shawnee National Forest was denied by a federal judge.

The motion was filed Oct. 13 by Joe Glisson, a member of Regional Association of Concerned Environmentalists. It was an effort to halt a harvest of hardwood trees north of Elizabethtown, 55 miles southeast of Carbondale.

Glisson said the Whoopie Cat hardwood sale was revised and started this year without sufficient public notification. The U.S. Forest Service argued the public had full opportunity to comment on the sale when a decision notice was issued in August 1990.

In his ruling, Judge James Foreman stated that under existing regulations, the forest service was not legally required to provide further notice of the sale when it was revised this year.

"The forest service did not violate the law by proceeding with the revised timber sale without giving additional public notice," Foreman ruled.

"The court shares the plaintiff's concerns about the environmental effects of logging in the Shawnee National Forest," he continued. "However, the facts show that the forest service sufficiently considered these effects when it issued its decision to proceed with the timber sale in 1990."

John Schultz, district ranger for the Elizabethtown Ranger District, said Foreman's decision on the injunction shows the Whoopie Cat timber sale is legal and complies with the amended forest plan.

The revised sale calls for the cutting of about 600,000 board feet

Big second quarter propels Bears to 30-10 win

Zapnews

Brad Muster scored on a one-yard run and Jim Harbaugh hit Keith Jennings with a four-yard scoring pass in a 17-point second quarter which propelled the Chicago Bears to a 30-10 triumph over the Green Bay Packers.

The Bears have won five straight and 13 of the last 15 meetings from Green Bay. The Bears are 58-21 against NFC Central opponents under coach Mike Ditka, including a 15-4 mark against the Packers.

Harbaugh completed 13 consecutive passes to tie a club-record and finished 16 of 23 for 194 yards. Kevin Butler kicked field goals of 19, 30 and 21 yards for the Bears.

Green Bay's Brett Favre completed 20 of 37 passes for 214 yards and one touchdown. Sterling Sharpe had nine receptions for 144 yards, including a nine-yard touchdown, for the Packers. Chris Jacke kicked a 51-yard field goal for Green Bay.

Muster's touchdown run and Harbaugh's scoring pass to Jennings opened a 17-3 lead for the Bears. Favre's touchdown pass to Sharpe pulled the Packers within 17-10 with 1:24 left in the first half. Butler's 30-yard field goal with three seconds remaining in the half gave Chicago a 20-10 lead.

Darren Lewis' 30-yard scoring run capped an 11-play, 74-yard drive in the fourth quarter and sealed the win for Chicago.

Green Bay linebacker Brian Noble sustained a back injury during a goal-line stand in the third quarter and was carried off the field on a stretcher.

Chicago improved to 4-3 and trails first-place Minnesota by one game in the NFC Central. The Packers suffered their third straight loss and fell to 2-5.

Redbirds clip Salukis, 35-11

Davis rushes for 248 yards against SIUC

By Jay Reed
Sports Writer

Goodbyes are not always easy. But Saluki head coach Bob Smith said he will be glad to see Illinois State's Toby Davis graduate from college football.

The Redbird running back ran for 248 yards on a conference record 47 carries with three touchdowns in Illinois State's 35-11 rout over SIUC Saturday at Hancock Stadium in Normal.

The Galesburg senior finished his career against the Salukis with 616 yards in four games.

"Other than last year (78 yards), he has been a thorn in our side all four years," Smith said. "When you can the ball behind an offensive line that is big and strong like theirs, he is going to gain his yardage, and he certainly did today."

The Salukis appeared to have a grasp on Davis and the Redbirds in the first half, trailing only 6-3 at half-time. But as the second half opened, so did the floodgates. ISU took the second half kickoff and marched 66 yards in nine plays in 3:03 and found paydirt on a 2-yard Davis touchdown. Fifty-one seconds later the Redbirds added another seven points when SIUC quarterback Scott Gabbert was intercepted at the Saluki 17 yard-line.

Two plays later ISU quarterback Danny Barnett found Brian Brown for a 14-yard touchdown giving ISU a 20-3 lead with 11:06 remaining in the third quarter.

"That first drive in the second half is the one that really hurt us," said SIUC Defensive Coordinator Tom Seward. "Our kids probably got down on themselves and lacked leadership."

Gabbert completed only 8 of 25 passes for 137 yards with one touchdown and five interceptions. The five interceptions were the most an SIUC quarterback since 1965.

Gabbert connected with receiver Justin Roebuck four times for 84 yards. Roebuck's four catches tied John Ference's school record of 108 career receptions. Last week Roebuck broke Kevin House's record for career reception yardage at SIUC.

"It feels all right to tie the record, but I wish we could have come out with Davis touchdown runs of 7 and 1 yards, increasing the lead to 35-3 with 4:56 and delighting the crowd of 10,349. Gabbert retaliated with the lone SIUC touchdown, a 29-yard strike to LaVance Banks and a two point conversion closing the scoring out at 35-11.

Smith said although ISU put 35 points on the scoreboard, he was not upset with the defense.

Lohmiller's 49-yard field goal lifts Washington to 15-13 win

Zapnews

Chip Lohmiller's fifth field goal of the game — a 49-yarder with 69 seconds remaining in the fourth quarter — lifted the Washington Redskins to a 15-13 victory over the Minnesota Vikings.

A 41-yard field goal by Fuad Reveziz with 2:28 remaining had given the Vikings a 13-12 lead.

The Redskins won their third in a row to improve to 5-2 while the loss snapped Minnesota's four-game winning streak. The first-place Vikings slipped to 5-2 and lead Chicago by one game in the NFC Central.

Lohmiller kicked field goals of 22, 52, 25 and 45 yards in the first half to help the Redskins build a 12-0 lead. Lohmiller attended the University of Minnesota and led the NFL with 149 points last season.

A 26-yard field goal by Reveziz in the third quarter and Terry Allen's one-yard scoring run five minutes into the fourth quarter pulled the Vikings within 12-10.

After the Vikings took their first lead of the game on Reveziz' second field goal, the Redskins marched from their own 35-yard line to the Minnesota 32 in eight plays. The key play in the drive was an 11-yard run by quarterback Mark Rypien to the Vikings' 34-yard line.

Rypien completed 18 of 32 passes for 148 yards and one interception and Earnest Byner gained 79 yards on 17 carries for the Redskins.

Spikers stay in MVC race

By Karyn Viverito
Sports Writer

The SIUC volleyball team revived this weekend and made a strong run at Missouri Valley Conference foe Indiana State.

With a new found offensive surge, the Salukis beat the Sycamores 11-15, 15-12, 15-5, 15-6 Friday and stayed alive in the race to the MVC conference tournament in November.

Head coach Sonya Locke said her team handled its must-win situation well.

"Tonight we were going to find out what kind of a team we were made of," she said. "We knew we had to come out strong and give it our all."

The Salukis hit for a season high 73 kills and .340 hitting percentage. It also was the first time this season that four spikers hit for double-figures in kills.

Senior middle blocker Dana Olden led the Salukis with 20 kills followed by sophomore middle blocker Deb Heyne with 15, freshman outside hitter Heather Herdes with 11 and senior middle blocker Stacy Snook with 10.

The Salukis also had an outstanding blocking match as they outblocked the Sycamores 16 to 5 and racked up 51 digs.

Olden led the Salukis with 2 block solos and eight block assists.

Sophomore setter Kim Cassidy performed well for the spikers both offensively and defensively as she racked up 32 assists and 17 digs to lead the Salukis in both categories.

ISU attempts were led by Jessica Barkman who picked up 12 kills followed by Shanda Goff and Tiffany Graham who both racked up eight kills.

The Sycamores, whose defensive game ranks them second in the MVC in digs, averaging 15.83 a game, were only able to average 13.75 a game against the Salukis.

The Salukis next match-up pits them in a non-conference match-up with Louisville at 7 p.m. Wednesday at Davies Gym.

NEO-NAZIS ATTACK IN GERMANY — Neo-Nazi youths attacked housing for foreigners in two towns in eastern Germany late Thursday, police said Friday, capping a day of protests and arrests involving rightwing extremists. Young skinheads, many said to be barely in their teens, attacked a dormitory housing foreign students in the town of Greifswald Thursday evening, but were beaten back by riot police. It was the second night of attacks on the dormitory.

MOSLEMS DETONATE BOMB IN LEBANON — At least five Israeli soldiers were killed when Moslem guerrillas detonated a bomb as the Israelis were on patrol in southern Lebanon. Another Israeli soldier died and one was injured when Palestinians armed with submachine guns opened fire at a military guard post in the occupied West Bank city of Hebron. The Islamic movement released a statement in Beirut later saying that a squad of its fighters had carried out the attack.

BUSH, CLINTON TRY TO COPE WITH PEROT — The presidential campaign took on a new urgency Sunday as President Bush and Democratic challenger Bill Clinton tried to cope with the resurgence of independent Ross Perot. "For nine days, you'll see a battle for the spirit of America," a pumped-up Clinton told supporters here. "We have 20,000 volunteers listed here in Michigan for Election Day, but we could use a few more."

SHOPLIFTING JUDGE MAKES APPEAL — An appeal judge facing possible removal from the bench because of a shoplifting arrest has asked members of a state disciplinary panel for mercy, saying the arrest happened during the only five minutes of his life when he ever did anything wrong. Judge Eugene Garrett told the Judicial Qualifications Committee that family problems and job stress led him to steal a $50 remote control from a Delray Beach department store.

NUCLEAR PLANT PROTEST CONTINUES — The battle over the re-start of the Turkey Point nuclear plant continues. A coalition of environmental groups has filed an emergency petition in Washington to block Florida Power and Light from bringing the plant back on-line. The action came just a few hours before the Nuclear Regulatory Commission gave the utility the okay to restart the facility, which has been shut down since Hurricane Andrew moved across South Dade County August 24.

FLORIDA DEDICATES VIETNAM MEMORIAL — Following weekend dedication ceremonies, the city of Pensacola has its own Vietnam Memorial. Thousands of area residents, many wearing Vietnam memorabilia, attended solemn dedication ceremonies for the "Wall South," a half-sized replica of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial in Washington, D.C. The memorial, which overlooks Pensacola Bay, was built mainly with a $1.1 million grant from the state.

BUSH CONTINUES TO LOSE SOUTH — This used to be Bush country. Fairburn is a stable, settled town where the barber has been in business for 49 years and the mechanic for 32. Fairburn, about 20 miles southeast of Atlanta, has fewer than 4,000 residents. But here, as in other small towns across the South, some say they regret voting for Bush four years ago. Polls show the Republicans, who have won most of the Deep South for three presidential elections in a row, no longer have a lock on the region.

Republican won't take PAC money

By Vincent S. Boyd
Special Assignment Writer

For voters looking for a candidate with their best interests in mind, Republican Mike Bost said he is the man for the job.

Bost, 31, of Murphysboro is running for the 115th Illinois House seat, which represents Jackson, Perry and Union counties.

He said he has taken the initiative to become a politician who understands the needs of his constituents. He has refused to take campaign donations from political action committees.

"I chose not to take PAC money so that the majority groups will have a hand up," he said. "I will only owe the people of Southern Illinois, not special interest groups."

Bost, who is Murphysboro city treasurer, said his main priority as representative would be education.

"I believe the education of our children should be our first priority," Bost said.

He said the proposed education amendment is a major issue. If the amendment passes, it would call for the state to fund 50 percent of all schools.

Bost said he fears that such an amendment would devastate Southern Illinois school systems.

"Murphysboro would be especially hit hard because they now receive 62 percent funding," Bost said. "Such a decrease would call for severe cuts in educational programs."

Another concern of Bost is the situation at SIUC.

He said the restructuring of the University should be of vital interest to everyone because it is the largest industry in the area. He said the changes may have a major effect on the local economy.

"Jackson County has a low employment rate because of the University," Bost said.

Bost pointed out that a majority of the graduates of the College of Technical Careers work in Southern Illinois.

He said it would be political suicide for any politician to disregard SIUC.

Another priority of Bost is to create a more business-friendly environment in Southern Illinois.

He said the cost of worker's compensation makes many business owners shy away from opening plants in the area.

Bost, whose family owns a trucking company, said the cost of worker's compensation for truck drivers is $22.50 per $100 of salary. In Missouri, the cost is $7 per $100.

He said he aims to lower the rate to entice companies to move to Southern Illinois.

Bost said another goal of his is to promote tourism, which will in turn mean more money into the area's economy.

"Southern Illinois must sell itself like Missouri," he said. "We have just as many beautiful and historical sites; we just have to sell it."

Bost has taken the initiative to serve the public. He served as a member of the Jackson County Board from 1984 to 1988.

During that time he served on numerous committees including the Ambulance Committee, the Insurance Committee, the Judicial and Law Committee, and the Nursing Home Committee. He is a part-time firefighter and youth minister.

Democrat wants to get things done

By Vincent S. Boyd
Special Assignment Writer

For voters looking for an aggressive, experienced candidate with a reputation for getting things done, Democrat Jerry Hawkins said he is the man for the job.

Hawkins, 49, of DuQuoin is running for the 115th Illinois House seat, which represents Jackson, Perry and Union counties.

He said he has been a fighter his entire life and now wants the chance to fight for Southern Illinois.

"I believe in Southern Illinois and our future," Hawkins said. "I will fight to make sure we're not forgotten."

Hawkins said his main priority is education. He said he supports the proposed education amendment that requires 50 percent state funding for schools.

"Schools in the wealthy suburbs of Chicago are spending $12,000 per child, while Southern Illinois schools can only afford $2,000," Hawkins said. "Our children deserve a good education."

He said people must fight for quality education for their children in Southern Illinois.

"We have to fight for our share of school dollars so our children get the education they deserve," Hawkins said.

He said the situation at SIUC is also of major concern to the region.

"We face a major challenge at SIUC to insure that it continues to be a major educational institution," Hawkins said.

Another priority is economic development for Southern Illinois, Hawkins said.

He said the centerpiece of his plan to revitalize the economy is an economic development council. The council will combine the efforts of business, labor and government to develop an economic plan for Southern Illinois.

Hawkins

"All entities involved will work together to identify the assets and qualities of the region," Hawkins said. "We will forge a new partnership to create jobs and protect the ones we have."

Hawkins said the extension of Interstate 24 to St. Louis would be a major factor in the economic development of area. He said the extension is likely to bring industry to Southern Illinois.

"Businesses are more likely to come to an area with close proximity to an interstate," he said.

Hawkins said the issue of healthcare is also a high priority.

"Illinois residents deserve access to quality health care," Hawkins said. "We need a health care plan that guarantees care for people regardless of their ability to pay."

He said he prefers the "pay or play plan" of healthcare. Under this plan, employers are required to provide health insurance or pay a tax to cover government-sponsored health insurance.

Hawkins said the pay or play plan would not be such a radical change from the nation's current healthcare system.

Hawkins said he can solve the problems facing Southern Illinois because he has lived, worked and struggled with the people his entire life.

He has worked in the Illinois coal mines and more recently as an advocate and leader for the United Mine Workers of America.

Candidates forget environment issue

WHILE THE PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATES were busy dragging themselves through the mud in the debates of the past month, one important issue was forgotten — the environment.

The debates quickly turned ugly — transforming from an issues-orientated discussion into a free-for-all character assassination.

Even in the presidential campaign of the past year, the environment was brought up sparingly, and then only when it applied to jobs and the economy.

George Bush, Bill Clinton and Ross Perot have not effectively made the environment a key issue this year, perhaps because all three are soft on environmental issues.

BUSH HAS BECOME INFAMOUS among environmentalists for his lackadaisical approach to the ongoing environmental problem. Ever since Bush declared himself the environmental president, the public has been trying to read his lips for even a syllable that proves his claims are true.

Bush's now-classic stalling of environmental agreements at the Earth Summit in Rio De Janeiro continued a theme of his four years of presidency — putting jobs and the economy over environmental concerns.

His environmental plan calls for accelerated oil production, opposes raising the fuel-economy rating of new automobiles and permits logging on 1,700 acres of federal land in Oregon that are home to the threatened northern spotted owl.

Bush's administration addresses ecological concerns by industry standards only, and refuses to comply with environmental regulations because they claim the cost is too high and fails to protect jobs.

CLINTON'S ENVIRONMENTAL RECORD as governor of Arkansas is not exactly spotless either.

In Boone county, Ark., manure applied as fertilizer to croplands and pastures steadily drains into the White River.

Animal wastes wash off the land as natural springs in the area become contaminated with more fecal bacteria than the New York harbor. Today, not a single spring is safe to drink.

While Gov. Clinton has been in office, the water quality in the White River and its tributaries has grown worse. Residents say the deteriorating water quality is a result of Clinton's reluctance to challenge Arkansas' powerful poultry industry

PEROT'S PROPOSAL OF A PROGRESSIVE tax on gasoline of 50 cents may indirectly solve the air pollution problem, by making alternative fuels such as methanol more attractive, and less expensive, than gasoline.

Perot has offered no specific proposals for any other environmental issue. But his policies as a businessman speak for themselves, even if Perot will not — such as the time a corporation he owned bulldozed bird nests on land it planned to develop, just before the bird was listed as a threatened species.

EACH OF THE CANDIDATES have avoided the environmental issue, just as each of the candidates are guilty of abusing the environment.

The candidates should have realized the importance of a pollution-free environment, and the strength of the environmental vote, because many will vote solely based on this issue.

Ecological disaster could be a reality in the not-too-distant future. This country needs a president who will concentrate on developing solutions to this crisis, rather than flounder about in the mud.

Letters to the Editor

Afternoon under Bigtop

Monday afternoon, Oct. 12, I attended the circus sponsored by Pres. John C. Guyon and Vice President for Academic Affairs and Provost, Benjamin A. Shepherd, Inc. in the Student Center Auditorium.

I felt compelled after my previous "letter" of 26 Aug. was followed by a spectacular profusion of pompous verbiage from the ringmaster himself—the entire "Letters" column—that totally lacked any rational explanation for the irresponsible mismanagement of a sum in excess of one million dollars.

There has never been any response concerning the various suggestions I offered, either.

Indeed, Guyon's letter of 27 Aug. and virtually the entire performance I witness Oct. 12 went to extreme measures to avoid any.

Because such evasive tactics serve to highlight the compounded nature of such irresponsible fiscal mismanagement and are suggestive of arrogant disregard for the present scythe-swinging ogre in our midst today, the student body must endure the dismemberment of academic courses has endured tuition increase and must further endure the uncertainty of an uncertain future from a faculty uncertain of what uncertain verbiage by the ringmaster and his cohort, Dr. Shepherd in his "Bledsoe" role.

The true wonder of the whole show Oct. 12, was the ringing finale delivered to the vastly reduced remaining audience.

In effect, Guyon assured the faculty that a pay raise would be under definite consideration from any savings.

I mean, the whole show amounted to, "Hurrurrury, hurrurrury, hurrurrury. See the apathetic, transient SIU students clear three hoops blindfolded. Watch the SIU faculty stand on their heads while the Board of Trustees place 50-cent pieces between their toes ... Step right up taxpayers, view the mysterious bureaucratic House of Mirrors. Hurrurrury, hurrurrury ..." —H. Charf Slolgenhop, junior, english

Pointing, bashing, one-liners lead to entertaining year

The past year, and the last two weeks in particular, have brought three people into the forefront of public attention. All three, at one time or another, have been in the minds of people across the United States, but recently they have been seen and heard more than ever.

One of these people has flat hair, draped over his head. Another has fluffy hair curling about his skull. The third is showing increasing signs of baldness. So much for their physical attributes.

These people have a lot in common, but yet they have nothing in common. Each one has something they consider intelligent to say, but in reality their jargon is meaningless and for purposes of entertainment only.

Their personalities are strikingly different. The flat-topped man is firm, strong and domineering. The one with curls is somewhat more passive, although when it's his turn for attention he can strike out with an unexpected remark. The third man, in case you forgot, he's the one that's balding, is the comedy relief with always a quick one-liner at the ready.

They also have three replacements waiting in the wings, but most people know they can't match the originals' well timed and choreographed maneuverings.

It is often humorous to watch the original three in action. When they're together there is finger pointing, bashing, poking and slapping aplenty. Yep, sparks certainly fly. These items are all used to great effect.

And this great effect is what makes them so funny. And it's because of this hilarity that has created a resurgence in public attention to these stars of yore.

Yes, the Three Stooges are enjoying quite a renewed popularity in the '90s. I wonder in Curly is still everyone's favorite. — Rich Silverman, freshman, film/creative writing

Beware groups holding total, world power; name leaders

A couple of recent letters to the DE convince me that what America really needs is a poll to determine our favorite conspiracy theory. Just check the group you believe is really in Absolute, Total Control of the Entire World, Utterly Responsible for Everything That Happens, and, above all, Out to Get You In Particular. Please check only one. Multiple choices, in a poll of this type, may indicate even more than usual paranoia. Besides, no more than one group can possess absolute power definition. Come to think of it, this stuff isn't rational anyway. Check them all if you want. Here is a list said. "But now we're going to have a committee of department chairs, faculty, staff and student representatives try to make a more concrete proposal."

Shepherd requested the committee's plan reach his office by Dec. 1. Meanwhile, the theater department voted 9-1 to switch colleges.

Christian Moe, chairman of the department, said faculty felt they did not have much of an option.

"The reason we said 'Yes' is because all our colleagues elected to go before us," he said. "We want to be with them because of ties; there wouldn't be enough if we stayed."

Moe said he is upset to see the college being transformed.

"I think it's a shame the college is being dismantled because of the connection between the units," he said. "Students profit from taking different classes in different units within this college."

Moe said he feels the department will be comfortable in COLA.

"I've attended meetings and we know a lot of people over there. We'll fit in O.K.," he said. "I think we'll be able to educate the college on understanding creative activities."

The only aspect of moving that worries Moe is COLA's finances.

"I'm concerned that COLA, like other colleges, is not broke, but short on funds," he said. "But we'll make sure commitments are made so we don't lose funding."

Jan Hiatt, associate professor of theater, said keeping the fine arts together is important.

"I don't feel we'll be lost in COLA," she said. "We have basically been assured that we will retain what we have now as far as faculty, staff and budget wise, unless another University-wide cut comes along. The only minus of moving is we'll have to walk all the way across campus to talk to our dean."

Alex Chrestopoulos, assistant professor of theater, said he does not see theater losing rank in the move.

"We're all programs, so it's not a matter of being swallowed up by a large college," he said.

Fest offers free food, coupons to visitors

By Dave Kazak
Entertainment Writer

Food samples, racing babies, and a wienermobile filled the SIUC Arena Sunday at the third annual Food Fest.

People of all ages filled the Arena to take advantage of the food samples and coupon deals offered by various vendors.

"I don't think I'm going to be able to eat dinner," said Food Fest visitor Susan Murphy. "I'm getting too full."

Food Fest workers offered samples of pizza, soft drinks, potato chips, and muffins that smelled as if they just were pulled out of the oven.

Festivities also included a "Diaper Derby." Two categories of competition, crawlers and walkers, were set up for the children.

Babies and toddlers were lined up on one side of a carpeted race course. When the announcer said "Go," parents and older siblings called each child's name and held out incentives, such as bottles and bananas to get the children to crawl or walk to the other side of the course.

Julie Moore said it was the third children's race she and her husband Tim have entered their daughter Emily in.

"She lost the other races," Moore said. "We brought her dad though this time to coax her to the finish line."

Moore said she and her husband trained Emily the famous words: On your marks. Get set. Go!

"She had her Wheaties for breakfast," Moore said. "This is big stuff. This is cut-throat."

In one race, Erika Masuda crawled across the finish line into the arms of Kirsten Masuda, her mother, before any of the others left the gate.

"She just likes bananas," and Masuda said and the proffered banana is what made Erika scurry to the finish line.

Food Fest Coordinator Don Maas said the turnout to the food fest topped last year's attendance.

More than 45 booths were set up for people to stop and sample different selections of grocery items. Coupons also were available.

"This event is really a golden opportunity for vendors to showcase new products as well as promote their other products," Maas said.

and children," she said.

She serves on 17 civic and corporate boards nationwide, including the Children's Defense Fund, Children's Television Workshop, The National Center on Education and the Economy and the Child Action Campaign.

"Clinton said she became an advocate for children's rights after hearing a speech by Marian Wright Edelman, founder of the Children's Defense Fund, while attending Yale Law School.

"I was very moved by how committed she was to trying to help children, especially children who are left out of the system mostly because they don't have families who are able to really take care of their needs," she said.

Clinton said millions of children have fallen into poverty in the last 10 years, which makes every condition more difficult.

She recalled a mother she had met in the crowd after her speech Saturday in Carbondale who was on welfare because she was unable to pay for cancer treatment for her son.

"If she got off welfare and took the kind of job she was able to take, she would get no medical help for her child," Clinton said. "So, she had to stay on welfare, which made her very unhappy because she didn't want to be on welfare. She didn't know what to do.

"Why do we put families in those kind of situations? I told her she shouldn't have to make that choice. You should be able to work with dignity and be independent and not have to worry about your child's medical coverage. I want the kind of country where that's possible again."

She said improving the quality of a child's life begins with a government that provides good prenatal care for mothers through a better health care system, then offers good child and health care and eventually provides schools that work to educate the country's youth.

"If we can provide all of this," she said, "then we can expect families to be responsible by providing support for them so they can take better care of their own children."

Clinton said present-day programs provide social services that some times divide people up instead of keeping them as a family unit.

"You've got somebody who is a worker for a house and medical services body who is a worker for Medicaid, somebody who is a worker for food stamps, somebody who is a worker for this, that and the other," she said. "Usually they don't intervene until the family is already in trouble. We ought to have an approach that says 'our goal is to keep families strong — now let's start off when children are born.'"

"We ought to have an approach that says 'our goal is to keep families strong.'"

—Hillary Clinton

She said if a family has problems it often can be detected from the very beginning of a child's life and there should be more programs that help new mothers, especially teenage mothers.

"(This is much smarter) than letting them just basically struggle alone, maybe engage in abuse and neglect, maybe have terrible poverty problems which then result in a child being taken away, which then costs us all a lot of money in foster care," she said. "There should be a primary emphasis on keeping families together and our whole system should work that way."

The children's rights movement was more active in the 1970s. At that time Clinton wrote a series of law articles arguing courts should stop assuming children are incompetent until ages 18 or 21. She said courts should decide case-by-case whether children are competent enough to make major decisions.

Clinton said children's rights are part of the same hope that people have to keep families together and strong, especially now, when so many marriages end in divorce.

"Families are the most secure base for securing the needs that children have," she said. "My argument has always been that we don't do enough to keep families together to solve their problem and we therefore pay a high price."

Clinton graduated from Wellesley College, where she was president of the college government. She earned a law degree from Yale and was voted one of the nation's most influential lawyers in the National Law Journal.

young people," she said.

Clinton's state, Arkansas, is the only one to have a two-year increase in funding for higher education above 20 percent. It was at 25 percent this year.

She said her husband has been able to increase the amount of tax dollars that go into education from preschool to university years while still maintaining the second lowest tax burden in America because he runs a more efficient government.

Clinton said her husband plans to do the same for the country.

"He's cut out departments and programs that he thought were wasteful and ineffective because he thinks at the state level, education should be the primary obligation of the state, and that includes higher education," she said. "What he's been able to do is to continually increase funding for education by being a tough manager for state government."

SIUC graduate student Susan Irwin, who attended the rally, said she hopes Hillary Clinton will speak for people not as financially secure as most if she becomes first lady.

"There hasn't been a whole lot of talk in the last few weeks about the homeless, simply because they probably don't vote and (candidates) are concentrating on the voters right now," Irwin said. "But they cannot be forgotten in the whole picture of improving the economic situation."

Clinton said she believes education is the answer to poverty.

"You have to be prepared in today's tough economic competition to be ready and education is the key to that," she said. "My husband often says 'what you can earn will depend upon what you can learn,' so if we don't invest in education, require high standards, hold both our students and our educators accountable, we're not going to have the kind of education system that will prepare our young people for the future they face."

Peggy Wilken, a graduate student in health education, said she believes in the Democrats' educational plan.

"I think there will be more money available so all people can at least have the opportunity to go to college," Wilken said. "And if they choose not to go to college they'll at least have some type of training."

Allan Ernst, a graduate student in health education, said if he had the opportunity to talk to Clinton, he would not look for answers but instead ask how he could help in the process of rebuilding America.

"I believe we're the next generation of change," he said, "and I'd like to be a part of it."

Innocent woman arrested, jailed after file mix-up

Zapnews

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. - Ada Rivera was working at the Hampton Inn West when two sheriff's officers came to arrest her.

The officers told her that she was being arrested on charges of selling cocaine. They told her she had already been arrested on the drug charges last year.

Rivera, who does not speak English, was handcuffed and taken to jail. She stayed for three days. Finally, officials realized they had made a big mistake.

Officials said the problem started when the wrong Ada Rivera's fingerprints, Social Security number and mug shot got switched with those of the right Ada Rivera, who had indeed been arrested on drug charges in October 1991.

SCEA to provide students with dose of credit reality

By Angela L. Hyland
General Assignment Writer

As students pass through the Student Center Hall of Fame this week, wallets bulging with newly acquired credit cards, the Student Consumer Economics Association will try to reach them with a dose of economic reality.

Through events planned for National Economics Week, SCEA hopes to help students become more informed and better educated consumers, said Joyce Craven, faculty advisor for SCEA.

By stopping by the SCEA table today, students can learn how to obtain free and low-cost government documents such as buyer's guides or informational packets on topics like exercise and job trends, Craven said.

She said members can answer a variety of questions and can provide advice and brochures on choosing and using credit cards.

"Often, students aren't aware of the various types of charges credit card companies have," Craven said. "Credit comes too easily and students don't realize the hidden costs."

"As people come through the Student Center, we'll be asking them simple questions. If they answer both correctly, they'll receive two free consumer handbooks," SCEA President Natasha Walker said.

The table will be in the lower level of the Student Center from 11:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. today and Thursday.

Amendment would give victims same rights as accused—Burriss

By Joe Littrell
Police Writer

The current judicial system does not work for crime victims in Illinois, Attorney General Roland Burriss said.

Burriss described an "epidemic of crime" at a rally for the proposed crime victim's rights amendment to the state constitution. The list of victims is growing longer, he said, calling the amendment a way to give victims the same rights the accused get.

The rally, sixth in a statewide campaign for the amendment, was

Friday afternoon in Carbondale's Turley Park.

"This amendment sends a strong message to victims that their voices indeed will be heard in a court of law," Burriss said. "They will be more cooperative, more willing to participate, and justice will more readily be served."

Burriss said the amendment is crucial to crime victims, and he denied any political motivation behind his push for it.

"In the beginning, when the victim's groups came to me, I backed off from (the amendment)," Burriss said. "They opened my eyes.

I'm a convert."

The amendment, proposed by Burriss in April and passed through the General Assembly, would add a section to the Illinois constitution granting certain rights to crime victims, including:

- the right to be kept informed of the status of the case and of the defendant,
- the right to reasonable protection from the accused,
- the right to speak at sentencing,
- and the right to restitution.

Carbondale Mayor Neil Dillard declared Friday Crime Victims Day in the city.

The original sale allowed the contractor to cut areas up to two acres in size, he said. The revised sale states the contractor can harvest areas up to three-fifths of an acre.

"The amended plan establishes a new focus for the management of the Shawnee National Forest," Schultz said. "It provides direction for the management of all the resources of the forest in an environmentally sensitive manner."

environmentally sensitive manner."

Glisson, the plaintiff, said he was disappointed with the judge's decision on the timber sale.

"The judge said it was an old sale which doesn't fall under the new plan," Glisson said. "I don't agree with him, and I intend to appeal the decision. I am disappointed, but (RACE and the Shawnee Defense Fund) will continue to fight the forest service."

MR. PRESIDENT, THE NEW YORKER IS REPORTING TODAY THAT DESPITE YOUR DENIALS, YOU WERE VERY MUCH "IN THE LOOP" IN THE IRAN-CONTRA SCANDAL...

THE REPORT SAYS YOU SECRETLY ASKED KIMS HUSEIN TO URGE SADDAM HUSEIN TO BOMB IRAN. THE PLAN WAS TO FORCE TEHRAN TO SEEK U.S. AIR DEFENSE WEAPONS IN EXCHANGE FOR HOSTAGES. ANY COMMENT?

UH... SIR?
LOOK, THE REAL QUESTION IS, "HEY, WHO DO YOU TRUST?"
OOFS... WURONG LOOP.

SURE GLAD WE GOT A WEEK THIS YEAR BETWEEN THE END OF PAYLIGHT TIME AND ELECTION DAY.

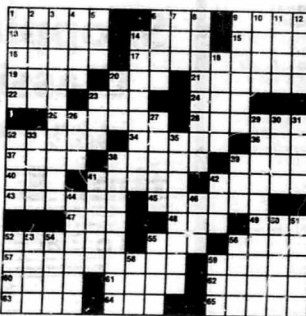

WHY?

WHEN WE TURN THE CLOCKS BACK, I FEEL LIKE THE WHOLE WORLD'S GONE DARK. AND I CAN'T SEE THE USE OF VOTIN'.

MAYBE WE SHOULD HOLD ELECTIONS ON JULY 4TH?

IF WE'RE GOING TO CELEBRATE WITH FIREWORKS ON ELECTION DAY, SHOULDN'T WE HAVE BETTER CANDIDATES?
