A 36-year-old rural Carbondale man is being held on $1 million bond after being charged with the murder of his wife.

Brain M. Gillin is charged with three counts of first-degree murder for the slaying of Janie L. James, 34, of Carbondale.

Gillin is being held in the Jackson County Jail and a preliminary hearing is scheduled for 10 a.m. Nov. 9.

Jackson County Coroner Jerry Thurman said James was found murdered in the bedroom of her mobile home at #104 Carbondale Mobile Homes Sunday.

Her hair had been cut.

James and Gillin both were employed as personal care assistants in a program administered by the Illinois Department of Rehabilitation Services.

The two lived together on and off. Jackson County Sheriff William Kilquist said.

District Judge David Walt set the $1 million bond after prosecuting attorney Mark Harrock requested the previous offenses, which include: attempted murder, aggravated battery and armed violence, all of which made Gillin "pose a grave risk to society," Harrock said.

Walt informed Gillin that a first-degree murder charge carries a minimum sentence of 20 years in prison and a maximum sentence of 60 years in prison.

During the proceedings, Walt asked Gillin if he knew the reason he was in custody and informed him of his right to legal counsel.

Gillin responded to the judge by saying he did not understand why he was being held.

The North American Free Trade Agreement has divided the opinions of the country, and Illinois lawmakers are no exception.

NAFTA, the proposed agreement between the United States, Canada, and Mexico, will eliminate trade barriers between the countries.

Simon, D-Makanda, said after he consulted his staff, he decided to support the agreement, even if the position is not popular. "I asked them where they felt the merits of this issue rest, and all three said it would be good for the nation," he said.

"But all three advised me that politically the advantage is on the side of opposition," Simon said his support of the agreement should encourage other lawmakers to do the same.

"Those of us in the Senate who believe NAFTA will be good for the United States need to provide leadership so that our colleges, and our House who are wavering know that they are not alone," he said.

"Political leadership requires a stand," Moseley-Braun, D-Chicago, said she will support the agreement because it will be good for the U.S. economy.

"My reasons are uncomplicated and straightforward," she said. "The history of opening up trade is a history of increasing economic growth. When trade barriers are removed, trade increases. When

Sen. Paul Simon, D-Makanda, supports the North American Free Trade Agreement, but some Southern Illinois labor union say they feel betrayed and angry with his position.

"I was insulted," Dolores Miller, manager of the Garment Workers Union District Council No. 2, said.

"We've supported him for years, and he had better wake up and smell the coffee, because there is always another election," she said.

Miller said the agreement will not work because the United States can not compete with the low wages and working conditions in Mexico.

"A garment worker in the U.S. makes $5-$10 an hour plus insurance, retirement, prescription drug program and other benefits such as social security and worker's compensation."

"In Mexico, a garment worker makes $6 for a 12-hour day — how can we compete?" she said.

Rick Lens, business manager for the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, District 111, said Simon's position does not reflect the position of the people he represents.

NFL still deciding on St. Louis team

The Washington Post

CHICAGO—National Football League owners were behind closed doors early Tuesday night, still trying to make up their minds on awarding the St. Louis Rams a Super Bowl host site during these league meetings by prolonged discussions of the merits of each of the five cities' cases.

Representatives of Baltimore (which has two possible ownership groups; St. Louis, Charlotte, N.C.; Memphis and Jacksonville, Fla., owners to make a decision either Tuesday night or in the next 24 hours, but that the process had been delayed as they often are during these league meetings by protracted discussions of the merits of each of the five city's cases.

Successfully of the Southern road by the University gymnastics season. Doe said: "The man that DiGiovanna saw a tremendous effort against a team which is capable of putting a few points on the board." Smith said the other obvious choice for the Salukis was Dukes. "Dukes had one of the finest games for a running back in my time here," Smith said.

"The fact that he's a true freshman makes his effort even more outstanding." The Dawgs will take what positives they can from that game and head to Indiana State (2-5, 1-3) this weekend.

The Sycamores are led by running back David Wright, second in the conference in rushing, and quarterback Kip Kennedy, who is seventh in the conference in rushing.

Indiana State has a losing record, but the Sycamores have been reasonably well considering their schedule.

The Salukis lost to big programs Air Force and Minnesota, but showed they can compete. Illini won by 10 to SW Missouri and dropped a tough 17-10 decision to Western Kentucky.

The biggest wake-up call for the Salukis should be the score of the Sycamores' last game, a 41-14 win over Western Kentucky.

Western Kentucky thoroughly pounded SIUC 51-24 just two weeks ago.

"If you analyze that game and the Sycamores' overall weakness this season, Western Kentucky actually laced them 28 points," Smith said.

"So it may not be as much of a blowout as you think."
BOSNIA MOVES AGAINST COMMANDERS — The Muslim-led Bosnian government, backed by the United Nations, is attempting to arrest two of its most powerful local commanders, accusing them of terrorizing residents and foreigners. Despite stiff resistance, state-run television announced early Tuesday night, one of the two commanders — Ramiz Delalic of the 9th Mountain Brigade — surrendered and released 25 hostages.

RUSSIA UNVEILS PILOT LAND REFORM PLAN — Russia unveiled a pilot program of land reform Tuesday as President Boris Yeltsin prepared to sign a decree liberalizing the ownership and sale of farmland. The twin steps mark Russia’s first major effort in one of the most emotional and difficult areas of reforms, undoing the bloody Bolshevik legacy of collectivization of agriculture. The two previous architects of Russian land reforms — Czar Alexander II and Prime MinisterPyotr Stolypin — were assassinated.

RUSSIANS MAY BE HELPING SHEVARNAZDE — Russian military assistance appears to be a central factor in a battlefield turnaround that Georgian leader Eduard Shevarnadze has achieved in recent days against rebels who had appeared poised to bring down his government. Georgian-based Russian forces provided sophisticated tanks and military training for a string of successful government operations that have suddenly reversed what seemed an unstoppable rebel advance from the west, according to government officials and diplomats.

FEDERAL WORKERS AWAITS PAY DECISION — If white-collar federal workers get a national pay adjustment in 1995, the increase should be 2.6 percent. But long-suffering feds know the word "if" is important. They were supposed to get a 3.2 percent national raise this coming January. They won’t get the promised increase, however, because the Clinton administration persuaded Congress to skip federal pay adjustment while it checks the method U.S. agencies use to tack on nonfederal wages. Many officials believe the pay gap between government and industry has been blown out of proportion.

PLANES, POSING AS PARENTS, LEAD GELEE — Eighteen taped and bootlegged songs, led by two ultralight aircraft they believe are their parents a Florida County, Va. parents, touched down in a Sugarloaf County, Md. Monday after a seven-day journey from Canada. The extraordinary summit landing capped what is hoped to be the first successful attempt to have birds learn their migration route from an aircraft. The experiment will be considered successful if the birds return here next fall, organizers said. The project also is expected to yield insights into goose behavior and endurance in flight, as well as communication among geese.

SPACE MISHAP FOLLOWED BY ASSURANCES — The last two months may have been the most frustrating of Norm Augustine’s career. During that time, one of his firm’s Titan rockets exploded moments after lift-off and destroyed a $1 billion satellite. One of three of his firm’s satellites worth another $1.3 billion got lost in space. By taking responsibility, Augustine is trying to patch things up with NASA, a major customer, industry officials said. Since the satellite mishaps, Augustine has been in almost continuous contact with NASA’s administrator, Daniel S. Goldin, and members of Congress to assure them a major investigation is underway and problems are being taken seriously.

SENATE TO CONTINUE LIVESTOCK DEBATE — For the second time in less than a week, the Senate has refused to shut off debate on legislation that would raise fees Western ranchers pay for grazing cattle and other stock on federal lands. The 51-to-49 vote left of the 60 votes required to quell a filibuster led by Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M. Many Western senators believe the changes in the bill, sponsored by Interior Secretary Bruce Babbit are an unfair assault on longstanding relationships between ranchers and the government. The grazing-fee increase and a host of policy changes are meant to encourage less environmentally destructive grazing practices on federal land.

State bill causes controversy

By Emily Pindyke
Politics Writer

A proposed change in the Illinois Election Code would make it much easier for a politician to mislead voters into thinking a campaign contributory has spent more money than he really has. The change was introduced by state Sen. James Miller, a Republican from Decatur, who said it was intended to make it easier for lawmakers to allocate campaign funds.

The proposal would allow candidates to allocate money to a campaign on a discretionary basis, meaning they could keep money in their campaign accounts even if they have already spent it. This would allow candidates to mislead voters into thinking they have spent more money than they actually have.

The proposal has caused a great deal of controversy among lawmakers and the public. Some argue that it would allow candidates to mislead voters and that it would be unfair to other candidates who are following the rules. Others argue that it would be a way for candidates to keep money that they have already spent, which is legal.

Ban repeal needed to end strangulation

EVERY SPRING BREAK, RICHARD COLE OF the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill takes a class of journalism students for an educational trip on Latin American journalism. The trip starts with two weeks in Mexico and then finishes with two weeks in Cuba. Students get a chance to meet with the people and the plight of the two nations, and insight into the dynamics of reporting there. Earlier this year, he also organized a scholarly trip to Cuba with 20 mass communications deans from various American universities. All of the Americans found the conditions disturbing, and in need of address by the U.S.

Two weeks ago, 175 U.S. citizens — ages four to 85, and of varying occupations — took a similar trip to Cuba, for a weekend vacation. One difference — they may face 10-year prison sentences and fines up to $250,000 upon return to the United States.

THE U.S. BAN ON TRAVEL TO CUBA APPLIES to all Americans with four exceptions: Scholars, journalists, representatives of the U.S. government and people of Cuban descent with relatives in the communist-ruled nation. Dr. Richard Cole of UNC trained his students to meet with the people of Cuba and experience the everyday life of the people. The restrictions were imposed initially after the Cuban missile crisis, and Bay of Pigs Invasion when the Kennedy Administration broke off diplomatic relations with Castro's Cuba. Jimmy Carter rightfully lifted the travel ban in 1977. It was reversed by Ronald Reagan, with his Cold War rhetoric against the "dark empire," and the threat posed by our Caribbean neighbor.

With the break up of the Soviet Union, Cuba was dealt a paralyzing blow. Over 80 percent of its oil, most of its newsprint, and majority of its economic support came from the Soviets. The effect has been devastating. Poverty, starvation, blackouts, dried-up gas stations, empty stores, and shortages are commonplace for the oncoming Cuban people. And conditions are only getting worse.

WHEN COLE AND HIS JOURNALISM CLASSES visit Cuba each spring, they see the strangeling effect of the U.S. embargos on a people fighting to survive. All unanimously agree that Fidel Castro’s human rights violations are horrible, but the ban only punishes innocent citizens for an argument between governments. The United States is considering resuming relations with North Vietnam — the country it fought in a war that nearly tore this nation apart. America also is aiding its former Russian foes with billions in "time of need," and even considering giving Most Favorated Nation status to communistic China.

The lifting of the American travel and trade embargo on Cuba needs similar consideration. These archaic measures, originally imposed in 1962, represent national security concerns that are not valid in 1993. With the fall of the Soviet Union, Cuba is not a threat to national security. American travel alone has the potential to help revitalize the staggering Cuban economy. European and Canadian travelers already represent a major source of income for the Cubans. U.S. tourism would bring an enormous boost to a nation, and relieve much of the plight of its people.

We at The Mirror encourage everyone to participate. Ultimately, the success of The Mirror will depend on the ability of students and faculty of SIU to work together. We hope to achieve a forum for a positive relationship between the students and faculty, allowing students a sense of control in determining what makes a good instructor, allowing the faculty to use the information to aid them in improving their teaching and achieving tenure.

We at USG are encouraged by the positive feedback we have received from President John C. Guyon, Dean John Jackson, Professor David Clarke, Professor Nancy Hunter Pei and many others. This cooperation and support will allow The Mirror to live again.

The Mirror staff thanks those aiding in its recreation and implementation

THANKS to everyone who has called concerning The Mirror.

This interest coincides with a nation-wide trend in higher education. According to a recent issue of The Chronicle of Higher Education (July 21), college instructors are increasingly being held accountable for their teaching effectiveness.

Peter Selkin, a professor of management at Pace University, found that in 1973 student ratings to evaluate teachers were used in 29 percent of the 600 liberal arts colleges he studied. While in 1993 the percentage had grown to 86 percent. One of the professors he interviewed said, "Without a doubt, students are the most accurate judges of teaching effectiveness."

Our goal is for The Mirror to be a true representation of what is happening in classrooms at SIU. We are making every effort to have evaluations which are reliable, valid, and unbiased. The Mirror is committed to guidelines which will obtain the most accurate results possible:

1) Administration of the ratings will be standardized. Students will be told how their rating will be used and a student administrator will read a statement of instructions to the class, after the instructor has left the room. The completed forms will be immediately taken to the Office of Instructional Evaluations.

2) The results will be provided to the Instructor before publication of The Mirror, but after the students receive their final grades.

3) A few open-ended questions will be included on the form to allow students to respond in their own words.

We have many outstanding professors at SIU who seldom get the recognition, praise, or money they deserve. For this reason, after we have compiled information from the evaluations, we are going to tabulate the 20 instructors who scored the highest.

The last issue was published in 1974 and some of the professors who made the top 20 list then were: Marcia Anderson, Glenn Gilbert, Dean John John, Richard Lawman, Judy Little, Joan O’Hleen, and Bruce Swinburne.

Many thanks to Special Co-ed editors at the library because if it wasn’t for their foresight in keeping issues of The Mirror, we would not have had the information that has helped us revive it.

We encourage everyone to participate. Ultimately, the success of The Mirror will depend on the ability of students and faculty of SIU to work together.

We at USG are encouraged by the positive feedback we have received from President John C. Guyon, Dean John Jackson, Professor David Clarke, Professor Nancy Hunter Pei and many others. This cooperation and support will allow The Mirror to live again.

SIUC remembers assistant dean

The SIUC University, SIU School of Law and surrounding community suffered a great loss with the death of Assistant Dean Scott Nichols.

Dean Nichols, a man of many interests, was universally respected and admired. As a civil rights lawyer, he worked to ensure justice for all. As a friend, Scott shared his third published play staged at Millikin University with the last year. As Dean of Admissions, he was responsible for bringing in a great many diverse and talented students to the law school year after year. As an administrator, he made himself unavailable to students, and was extraordinarily receptive to their needs.

As a friend, Scott shared with us his terrific sense of humor and brilliant insight into the world. He had a love for literature, politics, sports and travel. We are saddened and angry that Scott chose to deprive the rest of us from the special person he was and the things he had yet to teach us.

While we will never know what caused him to take the unthinkable step that he did, we will always miss him.

Gillin said attorney Rick Murray, who was present at the hearing, would define him in the case, and if the court found some of the necessary funds for his defense. 'She should have gotten $40,000 of my money," Gillin said.

Walt asked Murray if he wanted to enter his name in the case for the defense. Murray said he was trying to put out a match of powder with Gillin, but did wish to enter the case at the time.

Gillin said he did not have an attorney, Walt said he would appoint a public defender from the courthouse.

Walt said it would be the state's responsibility to provide a lawyer, and then to show that a crime was committed and Gillin was connected with that crime.

The radio and television, and cinema and photography departments, of the School of Journalism, the Broadcasting Service and the Daily Egyptian continue unchanged, which was approved by the SBU Board of Trustees July 8.

Any acting chairman of the cinema and photography departments, and the new college's departments and programs are fitting together well.

"We still have some windows to fill with implementing some chairs instead of acting chairs," he said.

Laura Cobin, SBUniversity Foundation director of annual giving, said the new college has spent $15,418, and the overall goal is $19,000.

This is the first year the college had a telephone, which started Sunday and ended Tuesday.

Students from the departments volunteered to call alumni for support and contributions.

Walter Jaehing, director of the School of Journalism, said the money raised will go to different projects.

A money we have raised as a department from the telephone will go to purchase additional software and equipment and to support student groups in the school. Jaehing said to be produced in the college is a little bit behind because of the time it took to select a new dean.

We are moving along nicely with other pieces of the puzzle fitting in," Koh said. "We have had a successful start.

Group sponsors alternative to mainstream films

By Stephanie Molette
Entertainment Writer

The group, Film Alternatives, believes in promoting films outside mainstream, commercial cinema. Members will uphold this philosophy with a free screening of films and videos by women. For more, call Habib Falafal, a member of Film Alternatives, at 908-831-4720.

The group is sponsoring "Women in Cinema's Chariot," a Chicago media arts organization. The series will feature short films and videos by women and represents a range of cultures, perspectives and moviemaking styles.

"Women in the Director's Chair" screens films directed by women and takes them to tour, exposing them to the public," Falafal said. "These films and videos address topics often not dealt with, Falafal said.

"These women have experimented with the medium and deal with ideas which industry films does not," Falafal said. "They deal with issues which ought to be talked about.

The nine films shown will be:
1. "I'm You — You're Me," directed by Debbie Levine and Catherine Saalfeld, a documentary that follows women prisoners with whom they have prison and the problems they face in making this transition.
3. "The Kith," directed by JoDee Samuels, an animated piece about an elderly woman in a boarding house, revitalized after a bath.

"Women are usually put on screen to draw the audience... but the industry does not support women making films.

Special envoy chosen to help in Somalia effort

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Clinton administration's policy toward Somalia took its first diplomatic casualty Tuesday. The State Department named a special envoy to replace Robert Gorgias, who strongly identified with the discarded policy of backing militia leader Mohamed Farah Aidid from talks on the country's political future.

The new envoy, Richard Stengel, will express U.S. efforts to broker peace talks among Somali factions that would replace the United States to withdraw its troops from the country. President Clinton has pledged withdrawal by March 31, 1994.

Addis or his representatives are to be taken out in a future Somali talks, in line with U.S. policies announced after a U.S. military fleet of 15 vessels were killed in Oct. 3 but Gen. Gorgias explained to the American commitment to armed pursuit of Alid, who is suspected of ordering attacks on U.N., peacekeepers; Clinton administration officials have tried to stifle sole responsibly for the peacekeeping to the United Nations and Secretary General Boutros-Ghali.

"I never desired the way girls were supposed to," directed by Dawn Suggs, an exploration into the lives of black lesbians. "No Justice, No Peace: Young Black Lesbians," directed by Portia Cobb, an experimental look at the Rodney King verdict, and its effect on young black men.

Justi ce, No Go (such as Big Muddy Film Festival and Women in the Director's Chair)," Falafal said. "These are the kinds of things that put SIU on the map. It's a way to publicize ourselves."

Falafal encourages students interested in Film Alternatives to join. "If you don't have any money, we can certainly use the manpower," Falafal said.

The films will be shown at 7 p.m. in the Student Center Auditorium.

Official date efforts for return of Aristide

The Washington Post

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — Once again efforts to bring back exiled President Jean-Bertrand Aristide were called Tuesday. But this time, the delays were caused by those who would take him home.

The nation's Parliament vowed to vote on two laws as part of a compromise between this country's facto military government and Aristide, the nation's first democratically elected leader who was ousted in a violent coup two years ago.

A law, demanded by the military, would offer amnesty for officers convicted since the coup. The other law, called for by Aristide, would separate the powers of the police from the military.

"If the evidence is that I want to vote on the law to separate the police from the army," he said. "I want to know that this law is very important if we are ever going to have real democracy in this country."

"Because of the concerns about security, many nations and friends said to leave their homes to vote, no matter how committed they are to (Aristide)."

Psychic predicts massacre at Salisbury State University

The Baltimore Sun

SALISBURY, Md. — What began as a bizarre rumor about a psychic’s prediction has taken on a sinister twist at Salisbury State University, where at least five black students have reported they were threatened by anonymous telephone callers.

University officials said Monday that campus security will be tightened Tuesday, the day students said callers warned, “We are coming to get you.”

A rumor began circulating on campus in mid-October that a psychic guest on a recent Oprah Winfrey talk show had predicted a “massacre” would take place at Salisbury State on Oct. 30, the day before Halloween.

Many students disregarded the rumor at first, but reports of the threatening phone calls sent a second wave of alarm through the campus and prompted student leaders to call for an end to racial insensitivity.

Members of the Student Government Association and the Union of African-American Students have scheduled a campus rally for Wednesday evening and a forum in Holloway Hall on Thursday.

Both events are designed to spur discussion of racial relations at the university, where 56 of the school’s nearly 6,000 students are black.

“We want to get some things out in the open and let people know we’re a little sick of this,” said Craig Heilman, a Student Government Association officer and a junior.

Lisa Smith, a senior and president of the 50-member Union of African-American Students, said she will attend the meetings but plans to return to her home in Baltimore for the weekend.

“I think a lot of students are going to be leaving the campus that weekend,” she said. “On the one hand, you don’t want to show fear, but these phone calls have people upset.”

Smith said she was awakened in her room at 1 a.m. Oct. 14 by a caller who told her to “beware, October 30 is coming.” She said the caller used a racial epithet.

“I was scared,” she said.

Four other students who were threatened over the telephone reported the calls to school authorities, Smith said, but she added that she thinks twice that number actually received similar anonymous warnings.

Clinton proposes changes, cuts in purchasing system

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—President Clinton Tuesday proposed substantial changes in the way the government buys goods and services and sent Congress a new package of spending cuts, projected to save about $10 billion, that were targeted last month by the administration’s “reinventing government” task force.

Under the proposed changes, the Defense Department and other federal agencies would buy computers and other products off-the-shelf rather than order custom-built products that meet government specifications, some tens of thousands of pages long.

To demonstrate how procurement rules can work against the government, Clinton disclosed that the Air Force had to turn to the Japanese government to buy 6,000 two-way, portable radios for its troops during the military buildup for the Persian Gulf War.

The Air Force had offered Motorola Inc. a contract worth more than $10 million to supply the radios, but the company could not comply with federal cost-accounting rules on short notice.

Rather than spend additional time to seek a waiver for Motorola, the Air Force turned to Japan, which had announced its willingness to buy equipment for allied forces in Operation Desert Shield.

Clintons FY91 spending proposal

The money is needed to fund the pace of Congress approved for the fiscal 1991 defense budget, which was increased from $269 billion to $292 billion.

The proposal, which is expected to be sent to Congress this week, would cut the military request by $2 billion and boost spending for non-defense programs by $2 billion.

The White House also is seeking greater flexibility in the use of surplus funds that would allow the Pentagon to shift money between programs even if Congress has already withheld the cash.

POWER & CHOICE

You have the POWER to maintain a healthy relationship with alcohol. Most college students make HEALTHY CHOICES when drinking. The more of these healthy behaviors you CHOOSE, the greater your POWER over your health.

33% of SIUC students surveyed report they would prefer not to have alcohol available at parties they attend. (Up 10% from 1991) (Cor-1991, 1992)

Any positive effects of alcohol work only at low dose levels. (1-2 drinks)

Drug use by college students nationwide has dropped by over 50% in the last 10 years. (NIDA, 1999)

A 1989 survey of SIUC student attitudes toward drinking reports that 35% surveyed believe “you should never get drunk” and 95% believe drinking should not interfere with school.

Drinking party "punches" when you do not know the amount of alcohol present, increases your risk of over-intoxication, illness or injury.
Over-training can cause flu to infect body

To Your Health

By David Barger

Student Health Programs

Chris has been working out regularly, bordering on obsessive-compulsive behavior, and she finally feels like she’s really whipped herself into shape. However, her body is retaliating to the excess stress with a runny nose, a nasty cough and other cold-like symptoms. What is going on?

Sound familiar? Changes are an upper respiratory infection is to blame.

Colds, as well as the flu, are caused by viral infections and no medication is totally effective in curing one.

Although exercise in moderation is good for the body’s immune system, over-training may actually suppress the system and thereby increase one’s susceptibility to infection.

In addition, studies have also associated psychological stress with increased rates of respiratory infection.

Cold weather, in and of itself doesn’t cause the infection, if yet another factor which increases one’s vulnerability.

Cooler air stimulates nasal secretions which, in turn, provide an excellent vehicle for viruses to gain entry.

Over-the-counter (OTC) medications may be helpful in alleviating some of the symptoms to a certain degree.

Decongestants help to open up and drain a stuffy nose. Cough medicines help control symptoms and bring relief, while decongestant and antihistamines help to relieve aches and pains.

In addition, inhaling hot steam as well as drinking plenty of clear fluids helps to loosen nasal secretions.

So, how do you know whether or not to work out?

Experts recommend that if your symptoms are above the neck, such as a runny nose, sneezing, or scratchy throat, it’s all right to work out.

However, if you have a fever present, or if your symptoms are below the neck, such as muscle aches, a hacking cough or loss of appetite, it is better to not.

Prevention is the key when it comes to upper respiratory infections.

Do not over train, try to control your stress level, be wary of spending too much time out in cold weather and stay away from other people with a cold or flu.

Other suggestions include using a towel when working out on exercise equipment and washing your hands often throughout the day to prevent the spread of germs.

If you just can’t decide whether or not to work out, give yourself a 10-minute “test run.”

If your head pounds with every step or repetition, listen to your body, stop, and get some rest. Remember, intense exercise during the incubation phase of an infection may increase the severity of illness.

Couple allegedly buried newborn daughter alive

Hempstead, N.Y.—Urbelina Emiliano and her husband had not picked out a name for Urbelina’s newborn daughter when they took the healthy infant from the hospital on June 7, police say, but they had prepared some hinging ceremony permanent: a freshly dug grave.

Police charged Tuesday that, in a bloodied story of love and murder, Emiliano and husband Fortino Perez took the unwanted, 2-day-old baby straight from Nassau County Medical Center and buried her alive in a waiting hole in their Hempstead back yard.

The baby — believed to be 18 inches long of soil, clad in the pink breast, yet being when leaving the hospital and tying next to a pink picture — was killed because she had been battered by another man shortly before the couple was
