ZYDECO CRAWDADDYS

STORY BY JASON ADRIAN

ILLUSTRATION BY SUSAN RICHI

TRES HOMBRES CELEBRATES
HALLOWEEN WITH SOUTHWESTERN
LOUISIANA STYLE
SOUND WITH A REPUTATION FOR LIVELY BEATS AND DANCEABLE TUNES.

THE annual Halloween celebration at Tres Hombres will be a little hotter this year, and it is not because people are encouraged to don extra layers of clothing in the form of festive costumes — that happens every year.

The heat will rise from the Zydeco Crawdaddys, who will be inviting people to dance and sweat with their zesty, unique Southern sound of zydeco music.

Mike Niesel, bar manager of Tres Hombres Mexican Restaurant and Lounge, 119 N. Washington St., said one reason the Zydeco Crawdaddys show on Thursday will be unique is because of the way the band encourages the crowd to partake in the music.

"They get the crowd really involved. They have shakers they pass out, and everyone has one and can shake it along with the band's music," he said. "(The Zydeco Crawdaddys) are a lot of fun, and so are the people they bring in. They have their own following."

Zydeco Crawdaddys accordion player Paul Jarvis said the crowd is essential to the band's ability to put on an energetic show.

"We need the crowd. We feed off the energy of the crowd," he said. "We try to get people to sing along and get on stage. We don't like to see people sitting down."

The danceable beat of zydeco music the Zydeco Crawdaddys play evolved in southwestern Louisiana and is as flavorful as the spicy foods from the region where it originated.

Jarvis said zydeco music is notorious for its vivacious tunes, usually with an accordion leading the way, and its ability to fill dance floors.

"It's not designed to be difficult music," he said. "A lot of times it's the same line repeated over and over. It's the beat that gets people going. A lot of times it's the accordion because it has a sound that makes people want to get up."

Because the sound of zydeco emerged from Louisiana, Jarvis said people sometimes assume what the Zydeco Crawdaddys play is Cajun music. Though zydeco may have slight similarities, it is a completely different style of music.

"Cajun has different instruments. It's more like a blue grass band," he said. "(Cajun players) might have a steel guitar, and the other guitar is acoustic. And almost all the songs are in French."

Jarvis said zydeco differs from Cajun because of the instruments used and the musical influences involved.

"Zydeco will have a keyboard accordion like I use, and the guitar is almost always electrified," he said. "Zydeco has a little more rhythm and blues, rock, 'n' roll and even a Caribbean-Latin influence."

Aside from Jarvis' keyboard accordion, the band utilizes another instrument directly associated with zydeco music — the rub board. Along with the accordion, the rub board and drums make up an original zydeco instrument lineup.

"It's actually an old-style washing board made out of stainless steel," he said. "In Louisiana, the rub board is very much an instrument in its own."

As part of an attempt at including the crowd in the show, the Zydeco Crawdaddys will invite members of the audience on stage to take a shot at jamming along on the rub board.

"It's not an easy instrument to play," he said. "I think a lot of people that have tried it are surprised that it's not as easy as it looks."

Jarvis said the zydeco music is not only rare in this area, but is actually almost non-existent anywhere outside of Louisiana.

"There's probably less than 500 zydeco bands in the world," he said. "None of the countries overseas have zydeco music. Anytime you get to sit and listen to a zydeco band, especially in Illinois, you get a rare treat."

But the Zydeco Crawdaddys and their bean-filled soda cans will not be the only treat shaking up Tres Hombres Thursday. There also will be the normal Halloween party festivities.

Owner Gary Robinson said Tres Hombres has been putting on a Halloween celebration every year since the bar opened.

"We've been doing this for about 15 years," he said. "It's something that is different, and we get all different kinds of people here."

Niesel said the spirit of Halloween is something patrons at the bar can spread by coming dressed in pure Halloween fashion.

"We're trying to encourage people to come dressed up," he said. "All the workers will be dressed up. We're trying to create an atmosphere for Halloween."

Coming dressed up could be well worth someone's time if the costume is creative enough. Robinson said prizes will be awarded for the best costumes.

"We have costume prizes for scariest costume, most original costume and funniest costume," he said. "We usually have a grand prize of $100 and other prizes and giveaways for the other contests."

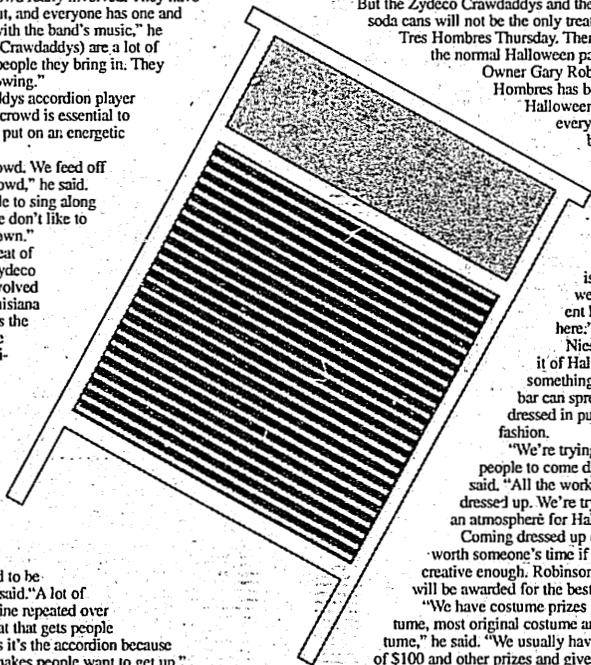

In costume or not, people in Tres Hombres will be able to absorb the Halloween atmosphere and see a style of music seldom performed in the area.

"We try to bring in bands that don't play around here much," Robinson said. "We try to mix them with the local bands."

Jarvis said he enjoys playing in Carbondale because of how well the audience responds to the music.

"I love the enthusiasm (of Carbondale crowds)," he said. "You can tell they have an appreciation for something different."

There will be no cover charge for the Zydeco Crawdaddys' show and Halloween celebration. For more information on the Halloween celebration and Zydeco Crawdaddys at Tres Hombres, call 457-3308.

PLAYING IN THE BAND
Koko Taylor
Her Blues MACHINE

STORY BY JASON ADRIAN

Even though the blues may be to Carbondale what Marilyn Manson is to gospel music, legendary blues songstress Koko Taylor will still bring the sound of pure Chicago blues to a town used to straight rock 'n' roll and cover bands.

And for the students lucky enough not to be sent home for the Halloween weekend, this is a chance to see the blues at its best when Taylor takes the stage backed by Her Blues Machine at the Copper Dragon Thursday night.

Throughout her illustrious 30 year career, Taylor has earned 15 W.C. Handy awards (the blues award equivalent to the Grammy), one Grammy award and six Grammy nominations.

Chicago's mayor Richard M. Daley went so far as to honor Taylor with a "Legend of the Year" award March 3, 1993, and declared the day "Koko Taylor Day."

Not bad for a woman who came to Chicago from Memphis more than 30 years ago at the ripe age of 18 and could only find work cleaning people's houses.

In a recent telephone interview, Taylor, who said she last visited Carbondale three years ago, revealed how her transformation from Chicago-area cleaning woman to Chicago's "Queen of the Blues" came about.

"I was just working a normal day job like everyone else. On the weekends, my husband and I went out for a good time and the good time was always where (blues legends) Muddy Waters, Buddy Guy or Howlin' Wolf were playing," she said. "And then they started calling me up on stage to sing."

Taylor's big break came in 1962 when legendary blues composer Willie Dixon caught one of her performances.

"Willie came up to me after I was done and said, 'My God, I've never heard a woman sing the blues like you sing the blues. There are lots of men singing the blues but not enough women,'" Taylor said.

Dixon soon moved Taylor into a recording studio to record the smash-hit blues single "Wang Dang Doodle." The song has since become a blues classic and has even been covered live by such prominent bands as The Grateful Dead.

With seven solid blues albums and hundreds of performances behind her, Taylor said she can see how her style of music is no longer neglected by the mainstream.

"The blues has become popular all over the world. I know I've come a long ways because the blues has changed around from the first years of my career," she said. "First, I was singing to all black audiences in little south side (of Chicago) clubs and now I'm traveling all over the world."

And it is those fans all over the globe that will find comfort knowing Taylor's plans for the future do not include retirement, a break or even slowing down.

Taylor says her plans are basically "to keep on going and singing the blues."

Ever modest, Taylor said her main ambition lies with the people who have put her where she is today.

"To keep on making people happy is my first priority," she said. "I'm working on a new CD right now. I just hope it'll be something my fans can have fun listening to."

USG opposes bill opening records

DETRIMENTAL: Open campus crime proceedings could hurt incident reporting, official warns.

TRAVIS DE NEAL
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The SIUC Undergraduate Student Government approved a resolution at its Wednesday meeting condemning a federal bill designed to improve the accuracy of college crime reports.

Terry Huffman, Student Judicial Affairs coordinator who spoke to USG during its "Comments and Questions" session, voiced his opposition to the bill.

Huffman said he believes sexual assault incidents may not be reported at all if the Accuracy in Campus Crime Reporting Act is passed because victims might not want to risk humiliation by testifying at an open meeting. "This could have a chilling effect on sexual assault incidents," he said. The Accuracy in Campus Crime Reporting Act of 1997 is a bipartisan bill sponsored by Rep. John J. Duncan Jr., R-Tenn., and Rep. Charles E. Schumer, D-N.Y. The five parts of the bill seek to make colleges more accountable in reporting campus crime incidents in part by opening campus disciplinary proceedings and records.

Duncan became involved in sponsoring the bill after a student was murdered in 1988 at a fraternity house at the University of Tennessee in Knoxville, said Scott Fischer, Duncan's senior legislative assistant.

The fraternity house was in a high-crime area, but criminal incidents involving the house were shielded by the university as being "education

Student objects to Nation of Islam RSO

TRAVIS DE NEAL
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

A student called the Nation of Islam Student Association, a new Registered Student Organization, a racist hate group and criticized Undergraduate Student Government at Wednesday's meeting for granting RSO status to the group.

Nathan Newcomb, a senior in history from Centralia, said the Nation of Islam is considered a hate group. Because RSOs are funded by the Student Allocation Fee, Newcomb said granting RSO status to a student group associated with a hate group is improper.

"What does this say about USG?" he asked. "By recognizing this as a precedent for other hate groups, like the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan or neo-Nazi skinhead groups to apply for RSO status."

"I think this is a very slippery slope."

USG granted RSO status to the Nation of Islam Student Association last week.

To qualify for RSO status, an organization must have a faculty sponsor and an executive board.

The Senate moved to put discussion of the bill that granted RSO status to Nation of Islam Student Association at the end of new business agenda items. Discussion then was tabled until the next USG meeting Nov. 5.

Connie Howard, USG Internal Affairs Committee chairwoman, said now that the organization is an RSO, its fate likely will be an Internal Affairs Committee matter.

Howard said that if the student group is not involved in misconduct, then its status cannot be revoked.

"If we don't have a written complaint and evidence of wrongdoing, then we have nothing to pursue," she said.

No representatives of Nation of Islam Student Association could be reached for comment.

FEAR THE UNKNOWN

SCARY: Six-room complex of terror in Grinnell Hall basement promises nasty surprises for visitors.

BRIAN S. EBERS
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

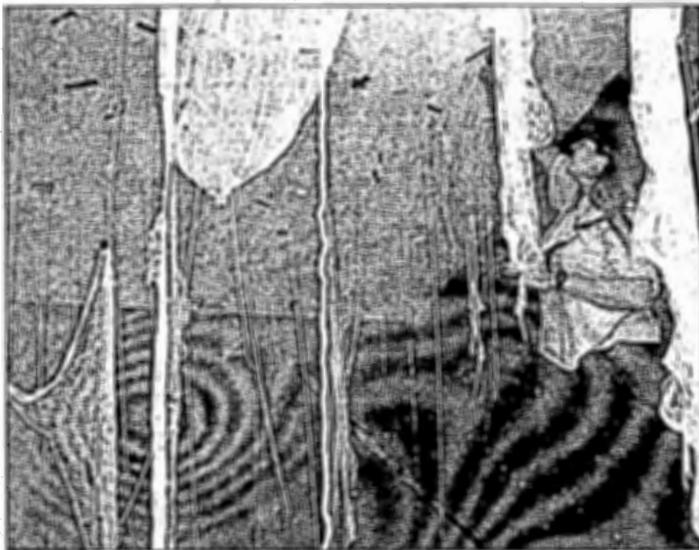

Observing the dried blood and bloody hand prints on the walls, Jennifer Waddell takes in the horrible surroundings of what will be the site of a disturbing, murderous scenario this weekend.

SPOOKY

Waddell, a junior in geography from Effingham, said the third room located within a dark maze of thick, interlocking walls in the basement of Grinnell Hall is her favorite. Simulated blood is scattered on the walls where a mad man will scare people hurrying through the haunted halls.

"I guess I like this room because I helped scatter the (red) paint on the wall," she said. "And I donated the chicken wire that will separate the man and the people."

The haunted house is open 8 to midnight (tonight and Saturday in Grinnell Hall in Brush Towers.

"This is the third year that the basement will be ornamented with demented themes. The Residence Hall Association has spent $2,600 this year preparing the haunted house.

Jeremy Hoffman, a sophomore in chemistry from Rockford and member of the RHA, was one of many residence hall students to volunteer their time in the creation of the haunted house.

"We have a cool dead end (in the maze), and rat tails will be hanging from the ceiling along with other things," Hoffman said.

One of the key features of the haunted house is the absolute darkness in many of the lengthy corridors. Illuminating red and purple lights give the maze an eerie feeling.

About 50 volunteers have been putting the haunted house together for three weeks.

Vod VanRaalte, a senior in psychology from Moline and RHA member, helped develop the six-room complex of terror. He said there will be all kinds of nasty surprises for patrons.

"Man's greatest fear is the fear of the unknown," VanRaalte said. "And there will be that element of the unknown in the absolute darkness of the mazes."

"In the (third) room we will have an absolute mad man, and I've been looking for a straight jacket for him," he said.

One of the rooms will be the site for an

Pastor appalled by commercial

HAMBURGERS:

Hardees didn't mean to offend anyone.

KAREN BLATTER
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Several times within the past two weeks, Jeffery Scott has sat down to relax with some evening television programming only to be appalled by a Hardee's commercial, which he calls blasphemous.

After his television experience, Scott, pastor of the University Baptist Church, 700 S. Oakland Ave., changed the lettering on the marquee on the front lawn of his church to state, "Hardee's commercial disrespects God: Call to object."

"The commercial is offensive to the people of faith to treat God so lightly," Scott said.

The advertisement depicts a monk eating a Hardee's Monster Burger. A beam of light, representing God, tries to take the burger away from the monk.

Sharron Hamilton, director of Public Affairs, spoke on behalf of Hardee's Corp. and said the company had received other complaints.

"We certainly respect their opinion and right to have an opinion about the advertisement," she said. "When we did the commercial, we did it to show how big the burger was. We didn't mean to offend anyone. If we did, we are sorry."

The monk pushes the burger away from the light to keep it for himself. The voice of the light, or God, scolds the monk for trying to keep the burger for himself. Then the monk pushes the plate with the Monster Burger back to the light.

The Monster Burger disappears into the light and then reappears with a big bite missing from the burger on the monk's plate. Then God speaks again, and says the burger was too big for him to eat.

The commercial is no longer being aired because it was only intended to run for four weeks.

"A person who is familiar with the Bible would realize that the commercial does not present Christianity in the proper manner," he said. "Because of this,

SIUC worried UIS may hurt enrollment

PROPOSAL: U of I Springfield up for vote to become four-year.

WILLIAM HATFIELD
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

A proposal before the Illinois Board of Higher Education to make the two-year University of Illinois in Springfield a four-year institution has some SIUC administrators concerned that it may affect SIUC enrollment and that other two-year schools may want to follow suit.

U of I in Springfield is an upper-division campus, which offers only junior and senior courses plus a few graduate programs.

On Nov. 11, IBHE is scheduled to vote on a proposal that would allow U of I to implement a capital scholars program at its UIS campus.

The capital scholars program would allow a maximum of 550 students in a four-year program, which would provide a general education curriculum with a focus on leadership and public affairs.

John Jackson, vice chancellor for Academic Affairs and provost, has concerns about the proposal.

"If they are able to get freshmen and sophomores, it is my concern that they will be recruiting, to some extent, from the same pool we do," he said. "We get some good students from that area, and we don't want to lose them."

Kathleen Kelly, IBHE deputy director of Academic Affairs, said it is difficult to determine how an additional four-year university could affect area schools.

"I think some institutions might see that as a problem, but I don't know," she said. "Will it make a big impact statewide?

Probably not. Will it affect central Illinois? It probably will. I just don't know the effect yet."

John Haller, vice president of Academic Services and SIUC's IBHE liaison, said Harry Crisp, an IBHE member, expressed concern about whether a four-year UIS would cause a slippery slope in which other schools would follow.

"As discussions developed in October and earlier in September, it was evident that any decision on Springfield could, I won't say will, but it could affect the status of Governor's State, the only other upper-division institution in the state," Haller said.

"Crisp remarked that there are perhaps some community colleges in the state, like the College of Dupage, that are potentially large enough to become four-year institutions."

Kelly said the board has been considering these potential effects.

First year medical student relays moving woes

DECISIONS: School of Medicine requires 3 years in Springfield.

J. MICHAEL RODRIGUEZ
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

SIUC School of Medicine student Matt McKay has more than luggage to take to Springfield in June after his first year of medical school in Carbondale.

He has a family.

McKay, 30, of Moline, has been married since June 1996 and has a 7-month-old daughter.

"I moved a lot when I was young, and I really don't want that for her (his daughter)," McKay said. "I don't dread moving. It's good in a way that you're seeing different parts of the state and the country."

The School of Medicine requires students to attend classes their first year in Carbondale, while the last three years are spent in Springfield.

The first year of the program is for students to take advantage of the basic science faculty and facilities. The next three years are for students to use the resources of the full-time and community faculty and two large community hospitals: Memorial Medical Center and St. John's Hospital in Springfield.

"I chose SIUC because I liked that it was clinically oriented—a lot of clinical work that requires us to follow around doctors," McKay said.

ward to staying in the same spot for three years."

McKay says that this is not their only move in the near future.

"We're in a process where we have to move all of the time," he said.

When McKay finishes medical school, he will serve a four-year residency, which may cause

I don't dread moving. It's good in a way that you're seeing different parts of the state and the country.

MATT MCKAY
SIUC SCHOOL OF MEDICINE STUDENT

McKay received his emergency medical technician certificate in 1991. He became a paramedic in 1993, the same year he began his undergraduate work at SIUC.

McKay and his wife, Megan, moved from Moline to Carbondale in August.

"I didn't mind coming down here with him," Megan McKay said. "I'm looking forward to moving to Springfield because it is closer to home, and I look for-him to move away from Springfield. McKay also applied for a scholarship through the Air Force and will serve in the military for four years after his residency is complete.

Like McKay, third-year medical student Elaine Fisher had to move her children when she began her second year of medical school in Springfield.

Fisher, 37, has two daughters, ages 13 and 15, who moved with her.

"If it were a family decision, I wouldn't be here," Fisher said. "My daughters were supportive that I wanted to be a doctor, but they didn't like the fact that they had to leave their friends and their small school."

"Yet, I did bring them down during spring break of last year, to show them the schools and how some aspects were very similar."

Holly Fisher, Elaine's 15-year-old daughter, said the transition was difficult at first but was eventually an easy one.

"At first it was very hard leaving all of my friends here," she said. "I consider myself a very friendly person, so once I went to school, it was very easy."

Fisher began medical school in 1995 after receiving her bachelor's degree from McKendree College in Lebanon.

"Initially I was interested in (the SIUC School of Medicine) because my family is from Southern Illinois," she said. "I then learned that the school is very student-oriented."

Fisher said a positive to the Clinton proposes treaty to fight Global Warming

President Clinton says his proposal for a treaty to fight global warming would use free market principles to reduce emissions of gases thought to cause climate change.

The proposal outlined Wednesday calls on industrial nations to initially stabilize their emissions of greenhouse gases at 1990 levels and reduce them after that.

Clinton says the plan would create new opportunities for entrepreneurs, uphold U.S. leadership abroad and harness the power of free markets to rid the planet from unacceptable risk.

Air Force training jet crashes, crew's fate unknown

The Air Force says a training jet crashed Wednesday after colliding in mid-air with an F-16 Falcon fighter over Edwards Air Force Base in California.

The fate of the crew aboard the two-seat T-38 Talon jet is not yet known.

The incident occurred during a training exercise. It comes just weeks after Secretary of Defense William Cohen ordered the services to review their training procedures after a series of air crashes.

Mercedes-Benz unveils new, expensive car

Mercedes-Benz today unveiled its vision of the world's finest car a sumptuous, Rolls-Royce competitor.

The Maybach has a built-in bar that can cool or heat drinks, a built-in cigar humidor and a champagne cooler. It also has three telephone systems and a 20-inch liquid crystal video screen.

Mercedes-Benz says it could have the concept car in production within three years if it decides to go ahead with the hand-built, 12-cylinder model.

The car will cost considerably more than its top-of-the-line S-Class series. But it declines to estimate a price.

Million Woman March needed to change lives

Dear Editor,
I am disheartened by the "March Home" editorial in Thursday's Daily Egyptian. Before we begin attacking the efforts of thousands of African-American women who want to see change and are willing to set the wheels in motion to achieve it, let's consider the facts.

Change begins with one small deed to make the world a better place. True, there are many ills within the black community that seem insurmountable. But we cannot be content to just talk. Talk is cheap, we must take action.

Some say a march is a waste of time and energy and will have no impact. I disagree. The fact is, you have to start somewhere. And the sad part is that no matter what you do, there will be someone; somewhere, ready to say that it is not enough. If you don't believe me, then take a look at history and the civil rights movement. There was march, after march, after march, until finally society began to listen. Repeated marching doesn't decrease effectiveness. It offers hope and inspiration and promotes unity. I'd like to know where we would be if Martin had said, "This is a waste of time."

We have an opportunity to show the world we do care about what goes on in our own communities — we are ready to take account for our situation in society and the things we do that further cause self-defeat.

Some say a march is a waste of time and energy and will have no impact. I disagree.

Saturday, I will be "wasting my time" in Philly marching alongside countless mothers, sisters, daughters and wives who are willing to dedicate just a little time and effort to figuring out what needs to be done and how we can go about doing it. For all those who can't see the meaning and hope behind the Million Woman March, remember if you're not part of the solution, then you're part of the problem.

Sure, we have a long road ahead, but at least we are ready to get on that road and start marching toward a new and better tomorrow, instead of sitting around with pen in hand further hindering the cause.

Letter writer's paganism refreshes views for reader

Dear Editor,
My hat is off to Tara Nelsen, whose (Oct. 20 letter to the editor) speaks volumes in several ways.

Despite the first amendment of our Constitution and our separation of church and state, it takes courage to acknowledge that one is not a Christian in a nation which too many believe must be, and should be a "Christian" nation. Our forefathers were wise in conceiving a government that guaranteed religious freedom. They obviously believed that persons of any religious belief — or no belief — could still be good, law-abiding citizens. Our forefathers had learned well from the bloody history of centuries of religion-dominated governments in Europe and elsewhere — a folly we see repeated even now in Afghanistan, Iran and elsewhere.

I also thank Tara for sharing her beliefs about the end-of-the-harvest Halloween celebration season, with all of its symbolism for the beginning of a new year. Who says such a celebration has to start on Jan.

1 or at Easter? Whether one drums around a sacred fire, sings "Auld Lang Syne," puts ashes on one's forehead or lights candles and waves palm fronds, it all is in celebration of a new beginning, and a hope and challenge for each individual to do better next year — whenever it begins.

And thanks to Tara, we all should be reminded that there are millions of "pagans" among us, and more "pagans" around the world than non-pagans — whether they be Hindus, Buddhists, humanists, animists, atheists, Confucianists or even some Unitarians. There are many paths by which we can learn to be responsible, law-abiding and caring adults, which is (or should be) a goal of all religious denominations.

Keep in mind that the primary meaning of the word "pagan" is simply one who is not a Christian, Jew or Moslem. Happy Halloween.

Planned panel discussion could have aided SIUC

ONE OF THE MOST RATIONAL AND EDUCATIONAL ideas offered since Select 2000 arrived on campus recently was stymied by two SIUC administrators.

In conjunction with the SIU School of Law, law professor Leonard Gross, the chairman for the Southern Illinois chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union, scheduled a panel discussion that would have allowed student leaders, lawyers and administrators to discuss civil liberties issues within the nine-part Select 2000 initiative.

Select 2000 seeks to make chapter houses alcohol and substance-free, and requires greeks to maintain higher grades and perform community service. Its implementation on campus has been denounced by SIUC greek leaders and student governments.

The National Interfraternity Council — the body that designed Select 2000 — was contacted for the discussion, but a representative was not made available to serve on the panel. Invited administrators Nancy Hunter Pei, director of Student Development; and Katie Sermersheim, assistant director of Student Development; flat-out refused to take part in the effort, claiming a NIC representative should be on the panel. Pei further begged off participation by saying, "I'm not trained to debate legal issues."

AS A RESULT, THE DISCUSSION WAS CANCELED. The panel discussion, scheduled for this week, would have been a healthy way for administrators and students to debate Select 2000 in an open and controlled forum. Administrators should have realized by now that the best way that Select 2000 can benefit this campus is through full education. It is a shame that such a valuable opportunity did not materialize.

Amtrak's reservation policy works for student travelers

THE NEW AMTRAK RESERVATION POLICY for the Carbondale-to-Chicago train shows Amtrak officials are concerned about students — and not just students' money. What a relief.

Most student Amtrak riders were worried last year when Amtrak officials considered moving the departure time of the Illini route from Carbondale to Chicago to a student-unfriendly time. Students worried about missed classes and shortened trips home because of the proposed 6 a.m. departure time. We wondered whether Amtrak officials realized the amount of money that student riders pumped into Amtrak. When local grassroots efforts convinced Amtrak officials not to change the Illini route's departure time, students wondered about the possibility of the idea returning in the near future. SIUC students still were unsure that Amtrak appreciated their concerns.

And when Amtrak announced Oct. 14 that the Illini route from Carbondale-to-Chicago would become all-reserved seating Sunday, our immediate reaction was to wonder if students would be inconvenienced by the switch. Our concerns have since been allayed.

AMTRAK'S NEW PLAN ALLOWS STUDENTS to reserve seats on the train in as many days in advance as they wish — provided they pay for tickets within a week of reservations. Last-minute student travelers still can purchase tickets on the day of departure if seats are available.

This means that students may have seen the end of the days when buying an Amtrak ticket in advance still could have meant standing during the duration of a long trip home. Traditionally overcrowded Illini routes may be a thing of the past, thanks to a little empathy from Amtrak.

records," which let the university report a low-crime incident rate for the fraternity house's location.

"The family of the student (Thomas Baer) contacted Congressman Duncan, who felt it was a worthwhile cause," Fischer said.

The bill would expand the duty of reporting student complaints to include deans and other administrators, athletic department officials, housing officials, counselors or any other campus official to whom a possible crime incident is reported.

The bill further states the following:

- Each college receiving federal funding will be required to maintain a public crime log detailing the "nature, date, time and general location," of each crime incident. The inclusion of names and addresses of people cited or charged would be required.

- Campus disciplinary proceedings that involve criminal allegations would be required to be open.
- The Family Education Rights and Privacy Act, or Buckley amendment, will be tightened so that incidents of misconduct cannot be closed records protected under the name "educational records."

- Non-compliance will result in a minimum fine of 1 percent of a college's federal funding.

The bill, which is in a House of Representatives subcommittee, will go into effect between Jan. 1 and Sept. 1, 1998, if it is passed. It is designed to prevent universities from not reporting criminal acts by shielding such acts under the protective label of an "education record."

Huffman also said that because a criminal allegation against a student, whether the student was formally charged or not, would remain open on a student's record, potential employers might not hire a student.

Huffman said that while student judicial records are not open to the public, SIUC reports proven incients of criminal misconduct.

"Recording statistics is a very good idea," Huffman said. "We report arrests for alcohol, drugs and weapons."

After debate, USG passed the resolution, which criticizes the bill for its "blatant disregard for students" (both the accused and the victims) personal privacy."

Connie Howard, USG's Internal Affairs chairwoman and author of the resolution, said she thinks USG may be the first representative group of a student body to oppose ACCRA.

The resolution has not been signed yet by the USG executive officers, but Howard said she hopes it will not be vetoed.

"I feel like this is one of the single most important things I have done as a (student) senator," she said.

Chet Lunsford, a student senator and outspoken critic of USG's bill, said the organization should have researched the implications of the ACCRA proposal further before condemning the entire bill.

"It was rushed through the Senate," he said. "I'm disturbed anytime I find out about pending legislation through the newspaper."

Lunsford said a more moderate stance on the bill would be wiser.

"I think we could afford better legislation," he said. "Instead of taking an absolute position on the (ACCRA) bill, we could send some legislation to the House committee telling it what we like and don't like."

In the roll call vote, 25 senators voted to pass the resolution. Dan Sherman, a Thompson Point senator, voted against the resolution, and Lunsford abstained.

Sherman said more time should have been spent researching the bill.

In July, SIU President Ted Sanders sent a letter to the Illinois Congressional Delegation stating the administration's opposition to ACCRA (also known as HR 715).

The letter said that requiring all educators and counselors to report allegations of misconduct was inappropriate because they are not trained to handle such matters.

Howard said SIUC and USG will be able to better fight ACCRA together now that the two groups appear to be on the same side of the issue. She also said she hopes other colleges will fight ACCRA.

"Now we can say, 'This is what we did,' and let other universities follow suit," she said.

but it is not as high as some of the other areas."

Haller said it is difficult to gauge how SIU will be effected by a four-year UIU.

much like an honors program would."

"We are going to have a smoke machine in one of the rooms," VanRaalte said. "And a strobe light should make for a nice effect."

One of the last rooms is a simulation of an RHA office located on campus, which Hoffman and VanRaalte said was haunted.

There will be a person hanging in the corner of the room. An ancient typewriter with cobwebs sits on an old, tired desk, with big rubber, dangling spiders.

The first room in the maze has mesh dangling from the ceiling with a red and blue light on the far wall. Leaves lie scattered under the red and blue lights where VanRaalte said a zombie may likely be hanging out.

"Everyone should come out and see our haunted house," he said. "There will be lots of ghouls and goblins."

This haunted house is one of the biggest in Carbondale this year, and people can expect to enjoy the house for 15 minutes, Hoffman said.

Fisher plans to return to Southern Illinois because of scholarship regulations by the Illinois Department of Public Health, which states she must work in an under-served area in Illinois.

Both McKay and Fisher agree that classes being all at one place would be more convenient for their families.

"I would rather they all be in Springfield because that makes it closer to my family as well as my wife's," McKay said. "It would have been easier to stay in one spot. You kind of have to play by the rules."

And while McKay prefers Springfield, Fisher would opt for Carbondale.

"Carbondale would be a nice place to stay in for my daughters," Fisher said. "But I had to make this move now."

McKay said that despite having a family, he accepts the move to Springfield.

"It's a big mess logistically," he said. "But it's built in that I have to move. It's expected."

Area Code 618

When you think of Area Code 618, you think of music with a complex simplicity and clarifying innuendo. You think of a group that is inseparably individualistic. With 618, words like comparable, inspired and inflatable must come to mind. But this one group is more than the sum of it's whole. Paul Hardcastle plays drums with an intense malaise that well compliments the unique semblance of T. Thomas on bass. Bill Carter on lead and Steve Danley on fiddle share vocals in a style of intersecting parallelism that defies comparison. And Andy Compton plays with everything else to fill in the gaps. Reeves finally shows ability in 'Advocate'

JASON ADRIAN
DE MOVIE CRITIC

Lead character lawyers in movies so often are portrayed as do-gooder crusaders for society that we tend to forget how manipulative their jobs often are. With the new supernatural thriller "Devil's Advocate," audiences finally get a lead character who shows exactly the true somber color that lawyers' souls can be.

The trailer for this movie makes it look like "The Firm Part II," and it stars Keanu Reeves. So as I was watching it, I kept waiting for it to turn bad or for Reeves to demonstrate his usual droll performance.

Reeves is the successful Florida defense attorney Kevin Lomax. His string of consecutive "cases won" gains the attention of John Milton (Al Pacino), the head of a massive law firm based in New York City.

Milton entices Lomax with a home, a large salary and a terrific position at his firm. Soon after, Lomax is headed to the Big Apple with his beautiful wife, Mary Ann (Charlize Theron), despite the objections of his mother, who feels New York City is the center of all sin.

In New York, winning becomes an obsession for Lomax so much that he refuses to acknowledge Mary Ann's claims that their new life is not as good as it seems because the people they know from the firm are not what they claim to be.

Pacino finds his greatest role in years. He is always at his best when playing the head of sinister organizations ("Godfather Part II" and "Scarface"), but in this role he demonstrates his versatility.

And Reeves may have been born to play a defense attorney. He finally shows some acting ability giving a convincing performance as the attorney who grows a conscience.

There is so much more to the "Devil's Advocate" plot that really made it work for me, but it would be a sin to reveal exactly what it is.

Lili Haydn
LILI
Atlantic — 1997

Starting out with classical studies during her youth, violin virtuoso Lili Haydn has become one of the most sought-after live and session violinists on the pop music scene.

Haydn has appeared on the stage or in the studio with top mainstream artists like No Doubt, Tom Petty, Jewel, Pomo for Pyros, Tony! Toni! Toné! and the late Nusrat Fateh Ali Khan.

After a two-year stint as a featured act at the popular Los Angeles nightclub the Viper Room, Haydn has decided to try her hand in the limelight as a solo pop act. And for a debut, the result is impressive.

"Lili" is an incredibly bewitching collection of songs displaying Haydn's capacity for radio-friendly material and catchy choruses.

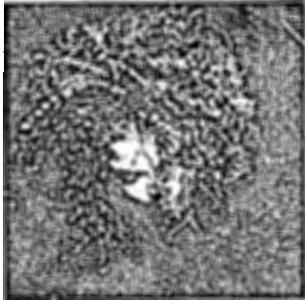

The seductive "Stranger" shows Haydn has found a niche in her song-writing approach. The song has the ability to turn out a funky verse while adding a whirling, string-driven chorus without sounding out of place.

On "Somebody," Haydn gives alternative rock a try, and her fearlessness diving into a dilapidated genre could have proved fatal for her budding career. But the distorted guitar goes over surprisingly well with her light, tender voice and shadowy chorus ("Will we ever understand the reasons we were chosen/Obligations for the seventh day of our creation").

Haydn deserves credit for her intrepidity. There is not a style of music she is not afraid to try. And debut albums are the perfect foundation for building a musical career and discovering inspiration.

Though not perfect (as if any debuts are), "Lili" still shows tremendous promise for an extremely talented young pop performer.

Janet Jackson
THE VELVET ROPE
Virgin — 1997

Funky, wild, loose, happy, depressing and Michael Jackson's baby sister all describe Janet Jackson's latest release, "The Velvet Rope." This is definitely not what anyone would expect from the woman we have all grown to love over the years.

With an overload of 15 tracks and seven interludes on this album, Miss Janet could have done a lot better — especially considering the success of past albums.

Sounding like Michael Jackson on several songs, including "You," "What About" and "Tonight's the Night," Jackson has paved a promising route to falling off (in the music industry).

Following a string of hot and sultry sex-related tracks, Jackson makes the attempt to tell the world about how special everyone is with the song, "Special." And it is, coincidentally, the last track on the album.

Like usual, Jackson has a few up-tempo tracks for the dance floor, including the wild and wacky track, "Free Xone." This track is definitely for a new audience.

The objective to be free is obvious, but a bit too much. After listening to this collaboration of every instrument known to man, your head is liable to be screaming for Excedrin.

The song starts off mellow with the lines "He was on the airplane/sittin' next to this guy/said he wasn't too shy/and he seemed real nice/until he found out he was gay/that's so not mellow." Then the explosion occurs.

But, every song on the album is not a bummer. Reminding us of the Janet we all know and love are the tracks "Go Deep" and "I Get Lonely." Jackson may have done a better job if she would have stuck to the structure of these well-produced tracks.

Well, the fat lady may be getting ready to sing because Jackson's singing career may be over after this one.

Various Artists
LOUNGEAPALOOZA
Hollywood — 1997

Perhaps inspired by the popularity of martinis, lounge music and the late-night party essence of swinging, a barrage of talented musical acts have converged to make an impressive and often funny collection of lounge tunes.

Whatever the inspiration for the artists involved with "Lounge-a-palooza," it provided some of the most creative takes on lounge songs and even some songs not always associated with lounge-style music.

Ben Folds Five utilizes all the instruments associated with lounge music for their witty version of the Flaming Lips' campy tune "She Don't Use Jelly." A snail string arrangement, maracas and a horn section accompany the schmoozy lounge vocals Ben Folds applies with credible success.

Other featured songs include Pizzicato Five's energetic version of the lounge classic "The Girl From Ipanema," and Fun Lovin' Criminals take on the sappy '70s hit "I'm Not in Love."

Poe's version of "A Rose is a Rose" highlights the album with its jazzy bass and her smooth and cool vocals. The song epitomizes the atmosphere of smoke-filled bars, cocktail napkins and small talk between strangers with slow and easy verses and a complex, built-up chorus.

The only track not quite fitting in with the rest of the material is Steve & Eydie's orchestrated version of Soundgarden's "Black Hole Sun." The song comes off with too much crooning and sounds like a bad Christmas song.

What makes lounge music work for the individuals who love the style is that the upbeat songs make them want to dance, while the slower numbers give them the self-deprecating it's-late-and-I'm-alone-again feeling. "Lounge-a-palooza" offers plenty of both.

Portishead
PORTISHEAD
Go! Beat/London — 1997

It must take great skill to use technologically advanced instruments and produce music that sounds like it was made before the dawn of the four-track recording device. Either that, or the sound is just rare because bands are afraid to take that risk.

One band not afraid to make truly "undated" modern music is the English electronica act Portishead. With their new self-titled album, Portishead catapults past any doubt of sophomoric slumping by carrying on where its dark debut album "Dummy" left off.

The quartet consists primarily of singer Beth Gibbons and studio technician Geoff Barrow, but also contains guitarist Adrian Utley and musician/engineer Dave McDonald.

With jazzy horn samples mixed with synthesized reverb effects, Barrow is able to give the songs a fresh canvas for their '40s noir sound on such tunes as "All Mine." The crackling record player in "Undenied" brings back flavors of early blues singers or rock musicians.

But no matter what studio trickery Portishead may pull, the powerful impressions are never felt until Gibbons adds her haunting vocals. With the band's single "Sour Times," it was clear that Gibbons had potential to make a name for herself. Upon the first listen to "Humming" or "Half Day Closing," it becomes clear that her name is made, or in the process thereof.

The band never changes gears throughout the album, and there is really no need to. An upbeat, modernistic number to offer variety would only take away from the album's gloomy unity. Basically, because it would cheat listeners out of the sad and dark noir worlds created so well through the music.

Willamette University student bridges football gender gap

EXTRA POINTS:

Twenty-year-old place kicker is first woman to play college football.

COLLEGE PRESS SERVICE

SALEM, Ore. — Liz Heaston's kick on Saturday was one for the record books.

It wasn't that Heaston's kick broke any conference records for distance or for points scored. But with it, she did become the first woman to play college football.

It's a day the 20-year-old Willamette University student says she'll never forget.

"I knew it was a big deal when I was out there but after the fact, it really started to sink in more and more," Heaston said. "I think about all those people who've wanted to do this, and to be the first, well, that's really special. I'm really proud I could be a part of it."

Heaston says she figured she'd get noticed after kicking a couple of extra points Saturday during Willamette University's 27-0 win over Linfield College. Yet she says nothing prepared her for the media attention she's received since the game.

"I knew there would be some people calling, asking questions, stuff like that," Heaston said. "I just had no idea it would be like this — no idea at all."

Despite Heaston's moment of glory, she still has more important things on her mind.

"I've got to get back to soccer," she said. "This was fun but I've got a job to do on the soccer field. I think I'm a lot more needed over there."

The day after her first taste of gridiron glory, Heaston was on the soccer field, playing a defensive role in Willamette's 3-2 victory over Pacific Lutheran.

"I knew it was a big deal when I was out there but after the fact, it really started to sink in more and more.

LIZ HEASTON
WILLAMETTE UNIVERSITY FOOTBALL PLAYER

Heaston played a soccer game on Saturday, too. She arrived at the football game only after her soccer game, a 2-0 victory over Puget Sound, was finished.

"I just rushed over to the stadium, changed uniforms in my parents' van along the way, and ran out on the sidelines," Heaston said.

She waited only 30 minutes before being put in the game to kick the extra point after Willamette's second touchdown.

"The crowd was going pretty crazy," Heaston said. "It was exciting."

Willamette coach Dan Hawkins sought out Heaston before the season began after his starting kicker was injured. Heaston had been practicing with the team for three weeks before her debut.

"I was just looking for the best person to help the team," Hawkins said. "This had nothing to do with politics or publicity. This was about putting the best people on the field, and Liz helped us do that."

Still, Hawkins knows he participated in making a little bit of history.

"Sure, it was a big deal," he said. "But if you think about it, a person that kicks like Liz does belongs on a football field. The fact that she's a woman has nothing to do with it."

Gordon Thomson, the injured kicker Hawkins sought to replace when he recruited Heaston, played in Saturday's game as well. He stood beside Heaston on the sidelines through most of the game, ready to offer help or advice if she needed it.

"But I never had to say anything," Thomson said. "After she nailed that first extra point, what could I say? It was a perfect kick."

Heaston, who earned a varsity letter for her performance, says she's ready to go back to soccer now that Thomson is fully recovered. But she'd love to come back if given the opportunity.

"It was a great experience," she said. "If they needed me, I'd be there again in a heartbeat."

zone. I think you can slow it down, but again they've been putting a lot of points on the board with it."

But even though the positives may be stacked in Western Kentucky's favor, the Salukis have a solid offense of their own to draw upon. The Salukis have scored 54 points in their last two ball games behind a solid balance of rushing and passing.

Quarterback Kent Skornia has played well since rejoining the starting lineup three weeks ago, and the Salukis have a solid one-two combination of Karlon Carpenter and Bryan Nolibertowicz in the backfield.

The Salukis, who will try to extend their winning streak to three games for the first time since five straight wins in 1991, also controlled the time of possession for only the second time this year in a 23-10 win over the University of South Florida Saturday.

Western Kentucky is coming off of a disappointing showing in a 24-21 win against the University of New Haven. Murray State University, who lost to the Salukis 24-20 in Carbondale Sept. 13, showed that the Hilltopper defense has its weaknesses in a 52-50 loss in three overtimes Sept. 6.

Quarless will revise his offensive game plan based on Western Kentucky's success early in the game.

"If we find out we can move the football on the ground, then we'll continue to do that," Quarless said. "Let us control the clock. On the other hand, if they're going to get out of the blocks and put some points on the board early, then we have to open it up. But I would still prefer to play our game."

Defense ready for running attack

DEVYN MULLEN/Daily Egyptian

TUCKING IT AWAY: Walk-on defensive back Mike Williams, a sophomore in special education from Evanston, intercepts a pass during practice Thursday afternoon.

TRENCH WARFARE: Western Kentucky brings its ground game to McAndrew.

RYAN KEITH
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The SIUC football team is prepared for a taste of smash-mouth football against one of the nation's top offensive teams Saturday.

Beginning at 1:30 p.m. with McAndrew Stadium as the battlefield, Western Kentucky University (6-1) brings its high-powered offense, and its No. 7 ranking in Division I-AA to Carbondale with hopes of ending the Salukis' two-game winning streak.

The Hilltoppers average 430.6 yards per game in total offense, compared to the Salukis' 307.6. But Western Kentucky leads the nation in rushing with 330.6 yards per game on the ground, while SIUC averages 131.4 rushing yards.

SIUC football coach Jan Quarless sees Western Kentucky as an opportunity for his defense to prove themselves in a big way.

"Obviously, they can move the football offensively," Quarless said. "I think the I-bone (an offensive formation with two running backs lined up in the backfield) leads itself to being a tough offense to defend, particularly because we don't see it very often."

Defensively, the Salukis are prepared for a war on the line of scrimmage. The Hilltoppers will not be concerned with establishing a balanced passing and rushing attack, so Quarless has prepared his team to meet the running game head-on.

The Hilltoppers are led by Willie Taggart, who has rushed for 733 yards on 102 carries and 10 touchdowns this season. Taggart calls the plays under center for Western Kentucky, and he has passed for 700 yards on 49 completions and eight touchdowns.

The offense does not end with Taggart, as running backs Rod Smart and LaTravis Powell and wide receiver Joey Stockton give the Hilltoppers a multi-dimensional offense. Smart has rushed for 390 yards this season, while Powell is right behind him with 275 yards. Stockton has caught 28 passes for 462 yards and gives Western Kentucky another option to set up the running game.

"I think if it's really clicking, it's tough to stop," Quarless said. "We keep telling our football team that you've got to treat it like the long pass play.

"They're going to get some big plays on that offense, and they're going to get into the end

Injuries stretch volleyball team depth

REMATCHES: Coach hopes bench enough to offset rivals, Wichita State and Southwest Missouri State University.

SHANDEL RICHARDSON
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Even though the SIUC volleyball team defeated its two weekend opponents earlier this season, the Salukis face a new challenge as they will be without two of their top players for the road rematches.

SIUC travels to Wichita, Kan., to face Wichita State University Friday and to Southwest Missouri State University Saturday in Springfield, Mo.

Junior middle blocker Monique Galvin and senior outside hitter Traci Eggers will not be in the Saluki lineup for the second consecutive match.

While Galvin is nursing a sprained left knee suffered against Indiana State University last week, Eggers has been sidelined with a stomach ailment.

Galvin, who leads the Missouri Valley Conference in blocks with 1.36 per game, had an MRI Wednesday to see if there were torn ligaments involved. She will be evaluated on a day-to-day basis.

Galvin said team depth will play an important role in the absence of her and Eggers.

"We won't be shorthanded because we have 17 people on the team," she said. "Our team has a lot of depth, and that should overcome the injuries and enable us to win the games we need to win."

Our team has a lot of depth and that should overcome the injuries and enable us to win the games we need to win

MONIQUE GALVIN
SENIOR MIDDLE BLOCKER

Earlier in the season, the Salukis defeated both Wichita State and Southwest Missouri

State Sept. 26 and 27 respectively. But SIUC coach Sonya Locke says her team cannot go into weekend matches overconfident.

At 9-10 overall and 6-5 in the MVC, every match is important for the Salukis.

The Shockers own a record of 9-14, 5-5, while the Bears, losers of four in a row, have fallen to 12-11, 3-7.

"I don't have to tell them anything, to keep them being overconfident," Locke said. "They know what to expect of the team, and it's going to be tougher because we're on the road."

Against SMSU, the Salukis will face the No. 1 and No. 2 kill leaders in the conference.

The Bears' combo of Michelle Witzke (5.56 per game) and Joleen Meservy (4.54) account for 10 kills per game.

Setters Audra Akin and Jessica Brester been instrumental in the success of Witzke and Meservy by handing out an average of 11 assists per game apiece.

Without Galvin's presence in the middle, Locke said her players are going to have play as a team to battle Witzke and Meservy.

"We have to defend against them," she said. "We're just going to have to play hard and do our best on stopping them."

Men's swim, dive team to open season

REBOUNDING: After loss to Notre Dame, women's team hopes for turnaround against tough Division II Drury.

COREY CUSICK
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The SIUC men's swimming and diving team opens its season against Drury College Saturday at the Recreation Center, and coach Rick Walker knows the Salukis can't take size for granted.

The women's team will try to rebound from a 167.5 to 126.5 loss to the University of Notre Dame Oct. 11.

Walker said Drury is one of the toughest teams in Division II and will give the Salukis a competitive contest.

"While Drury is Division II, they finished second (in their division) last year and are likely to win this year," Walker said.

Walker said the meet should be highly competitive for the start of the season.

"We definitely will have to go in and compete well, or we will find ourselves on the wrong end of the scoreboard," Walker said.

Men's top individuals will feature two seniors — sprinter Jeff Boark and Steve Muntz who will swim the backstroke.

The women's team features 14 freshmen in their second competitive meet of the year.

Women's coach Mark Klumper said he is awaiting Saturday's meet to see how much his freshmen have improved since the Notre Dame defeat.

"We have been practicing hard and have looked much better in practice the last couple of weeks, so I'm looking forward to Saturday," Klumper stated in a press release.

"Drury has a good program, and they have improved a great deal in the last of years, so it should be an exciting meet."

The men's and women's swimming and diving meet begins at 4 p.m. Saturday at the Recreation Center against Drury College.

'Susannah' shows how hate can destroy

STORY BY TAMEKA L. HICKS

Having sung and acted for nine years does not prevent Bethany Surridge from experiencing stage fright before each performance.

Now, as the main character in the opera, "Susannah," she said she is experiencing one of the most difficult roles she has ever played.

"It's kind of scary because the opera is named after my character," said Surridge, a second-year graduate student in opera and theater performance from Fayette, N.C. "My first opera was 'Juliet,' and this is an even bigger part than that. It's a lot of work."

For six weeks, 18 SIUC music and theater students have rehearsed for the opera.

"Susannah" will be performed at 8 p.m. tonight and Saturday, and at 2 p.m. Sunday in Shryock Auditorium. "Susannah" is a 1950s opera that takes place in Tennessee's Smoky Mountains.

To capture this setting, real pine branches will be suspended over the audience in Shryock as well as risers placed on the stage for audience seating.

In the opera, Susannah is shunned by the community once the church elders find her bathing in a creek used for baptism. Susannah attempts to disprove the community's notion of her as a sinner throughout the show.

"She makes a definite change in the opera from the beginning to the end," Surridge said. "First she's happy and light-hearted, and toward the end everything is shattered. She turns into this bitter, half-crazed girl."

Comparing the opera to the "Scarlet Letter," director Timothy Fink describes "Susannah" as a symbol of the love of life, optimism and youth that eventually is destroyed by the community.

"It's a story about hate and how it can destroy individuals," Fink, an assistant professor in the School of Music, said. "It's how one person's hate gets others involved."

Fink said the elements included in "Susannah" were perfect for his directing talents. He has also directed "Romeo and Juliet," "The Merry Widow" and the "Magic Flute."

"Last spring I thought if I matched up the talent pool that I have here, it would be an opportunity to show them off," he said. "It's a good drama."

Fink said Surridge's talent contributes to making "Susannah" a good drama. As difficult as it is, Surridge makes her character believable.

"Realism. She's a very good actress, and she sings very well," he said. "She looks the part and sounds the part."

Surridge said she enjoys musical theater. Because the music is an important part of the opera, she is more involved with her part. She said the music is written as if the characters are speaking instead of singing.

"Because the music is there, I get more emotional with it," Surridge said. "A lot of times the music reflects what the character is feeling. It makes it easy for me to feel. Music adds twice as much to it."

Fink agrees that the integration of music and theater adds emotion to drama and creates realism in the opera.

"It's realistic as opposed to something that's a fantasy or a period piece," he said. "Sometimes an opera can be good with bad music, and an opera can be bad with good music."

Surridge said the opera is filled with good acting and singing and gives her the chance to display her talents.

"I actually get to sing," Surridge said. "I think I'm better at singing than acting. As an actress and a singer I'm learning how to work with character and showing the change and making it believable."

Other than the believability catching the audience's attention, Fink wants the audience to understand the message offered up in the opera.

"The audience should appreciate the art form itself — fine acting, fine singing and the commitment to the principles of beauty," Fink said. "I love it. It's a beautiful and powerful piece."

Veteran singer/songwriter to perform at coffee house

Nashville's Dana Cooper will bring more than two decades worth of original songwriting to Cousin Andy's Coffee House, 402 W. Mill St., for a performance of pop-folk music tonight.

Cooper's latest album, "Miracle Mile," has been praised in Playboy and Entertainment Weekly magazines. The former referred to Cooper as "a singer and songwriter with a superb sense of melody," while the latter called the album "an undeniable power-pop gem."

"Miracle Mile," which contains 11 Cooper originals, includes guest appearances by Lyle Lovett and Maura O'Connell. Cooper recently won "Best Songwriter in Houston" and was nominated "Best Male Vocalist" by the Kerrville Music Foundation and was also nominated for its Hall of Fame.

The local a capella group For Healing Purposes Only will begin warming up the crowd around 7:30 p.m. Doors open at 7 p.m.

Admission for the Dana Cooper/For Healing Purposes Only show is $5 for adults and $3 for students and low-income individuals.

SIUC professor to give Civil War presentation

Historian John Y. Simon, a history professor at SIUC, will discuss the role of Southern Illinois in the Civil War at 2 p.m. Sunday at Barnes and Noble Booksellers, 1300 W. Main St.

Four recent publications will be featured in Simon's presentation: "Reminiscences of a Soldier's Wife: An Autobiography," by Mrs. John A. Logan; "Black Jack": John A. Logan and Southern Illinois in the Civil War," by James Pickett Jones; "A History of the Ninth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, with the Regimental Roster," by Marion Morrison; and "Army Life of an Illinois Soldier: Including a Day-by-Day Record of Sherman's March to the Sea," by Charles W. Willis.

Simon provided a new foreword for each of the books he will discuss. Each book is a publication of the Southern Illinois "iversity Press.

Paducah Film Society screens award-winning film

The winner of the Palme d'Or at the Cannes Film Festival, "Underground," will be shown by the Paducah Film Society at 7 p.m. Sunday at the Market House Theatre, 141 Kentucky Ave. in Paducah, Ky. The film serves as a telling reminder to Western cultures that, beneath the bloodshed in the former Yugoslavia, is a people's proud and defiant spirit.

The screenings are open to the public. Tickets are $5, $3 for students, and may be purchased at the door.

SALTPETRE PARK PROVIDES 53 ACRES OF NATURAL BEAUTY

Gib Todd, owner of Saltpetre Park, looks out at the beautiful scenery and the work he has put in to it for 30 years.

When park owner Gib Todd feeds the dozens of carp and catfish residing in the half mile of waterway at Saltpetre Park, it is not the food that immediately sends the 2- to 3-foot long fish to the surface, but his voice.

"I've been feeding them for 20 years so they know my voice," he said. "I call them my pet fish."

In seconds, the massive freshwater beasts collide and ram into each other in competition to consume the kernels of dog food floating on the water's surface. But Todd's pet fish are just a portion of the vast amount of wildlife and nature to which visitors to Saltpetre Park are exposed.

Located six miles south of Murphysboro on Highway 127, Saltpetre Park is 53 acres of trees, large rocky bluffs, winding waterways and wildlife that offer visitors a taste of Southern Illinois' beautiful landscape at its best.

The park is only yards off the highway and is a perfect stop for hikers and nature lovers on their way to Bald Knob Cross or other sections of the Shawnee National Forest.

But to reach the heart of the park, one must first descend a winding road to the foot of the large cliff where the cave is positioned. Once there, visitors can take in the sights from above by climbing the rocks or can commander paddle boats or canoes to scope out the grounds from the waterway.

There is a $2.50 viewing charge for Saltpetre Park, which includes the price of paddle boats or canoes. For more information about Saltpetre Park call (618) 684-2839.

"I've worked on it for 30 years, and it just developed. I went as far as I could see, and then I'd see something different," he said. "I try to do something different every year. I build another road or another pathway every year."

People who make the trek to Saltpetre Park can utilize the park's main attraction for picnicking or other recreational activities. The Saltpetre Park Cave is a perfect setting to take in the view the park offers, especially during autumn when the leaves take on numerous brilliant colors.

The open-mouth cave is 215 feet wide at the mouth and is Southern Illinois' largest bluff shelter. The cave, which took 1 million years of flowing water to create, is located at the base of one of Saltpetre Park's large rock bluffs.

Todd said the cave provides a great outdoor atmosphere whatever the season may be.

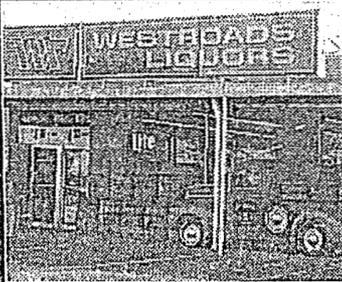

"In the summer, it's 15 degrees cooler down here. It's like air conditioning," he said. "There's also no mosquitoes because the cliff swallows come in here by the hundreds and eat them. "In the middle of winter, it will be 55 degrees in here."

Todd said he encourages people to make the trip out to Saltpetre Park because it is a great chance to encounter Mother Nature and to take in the beautiful Shawnee National Forest.

"It's something the good Lord gave us, and it's something we should enjoy," he said.
